Can play upon it. But what need I thus

My well-known body to anatomize

Among my household? Why is Rumour here

I run before King Harry's victory:

Who in a bloody field by Shrewsbury

Hath beaten down young Hotspur and his troops,

Quenching the flame of bold rebellion

Even with the rebels' blood. But what mean I

To speak so true at first? my office is

To noise abroad that Harry Monmouth fell

Under the wrath of noble Hotspur's sword. 20

And that the king before the Douglas' rage

Stoop'd his anointed head as low as death.

This have I runn'd through the peasant towns

Between that royal field of Shrewsbury

And this worm-eaten hold of ragged stone,

Where Hotspur's father, old Northumberland,

Lies crafty-sick: the poets come tiring on,

And not a man of them brings other news

Than they have learn'd of me: from Rumour's

tongues

They bring smooth comforts false, worse than true wrongs. [Exit.]

ACT I.

SCENE I. The same.Enter LORD BARDOLPH.L. Bard. Who keeps the gate here, ho!The Porter opens the gate.

Where is the earl?

Port. What shall I say you are!L. Bard. Tell thou the earl
That the Lord Bardolph doth attend him here.Port. His lordship is walk'd forth into the orchard:Please it your honour, knock but at the gate, And he himself will answer.Enter NORTHUMBERLAND.L. Bard. Here comes the earl.[Exit Porter.]North. What news, Lord Bardolph? every minute nowShould be the father of some stratagem:
The times are wild; contention, like a horse
Full of high feeding, madly hath broke loose: so
And bears down all before him.L. Bard. Noble earl,
I bring you certain news from Shrewsbury.North. Good, an God will!L. Bard. As good as heart can wish:
The king is almost wounded to the death;
And, in the fortune of my lord your son,
Prince Harry slain outright; and both the Bluntsslain by the hand of Douglas; young Prince JohnAnd Westmoreland and Stafford fled the field;
And Harry Monmouth's brawn, the hulk SirJohn,
Is prisoner to your son: O, such a day, so
So fought, so follow'd and so fairly won,came not till now to dignify the times, Since Cæsar's fortunes!North. How is this derived? saw you the field? came you from Shrewsbury?L. Bard. I spake with one, my lord, that came from thence.A gentleman well bred and of good name, that freely render'd me these news for true.North. Here comes my servant Travers, whom I sent

On Tuesday last to listen after news.

Enter TRAVERS.L. Bard. My lord, I over-rode him on the way, soAnd he is furnish'd with no certainties
More than he haply may retail from me.North. Now, Travers, what good tidings comes with you?Trav. My lord, Sir John Umfreville turn'd me backWith joyful tidings; and, being better horsed, out-rode me. After him came spurring hardA gentleman, almost forewent with speed,
That stopp'd by me to breathe his bloodied horse.

He ask'd the way to Chester; and of him
I did demand what news from Shrewsbury: soHe told me that rebellion had had luck
And that young Harry Percy's spur was cold.
With that, he gave his able horse the head,
And bending forward struck his armed heels
Against the panting sides of his poor jade
Up to the royal head, and starting so
He seem'd in running to devour the way,
Staying no longer question.North. Ha! Again:
Said he young Harry Percy's spur was cold?
Of Hotspur Coldspur! that rebellion so
Had met ill luck!L. Bard. My lord, I'll tell you what;
If my young lord your son have not the day,
Upon mine honour, for a silken point
I'll give my barony: never talk of it.North. Why should that gentleman that rode by Travers
Give then such instances of loss?L. Bard. Who, he?
He was some hilding fellow that had stolen
The horse he rode on, and, upon my life, Spoke at a venture. Look, here comes more news.Enter MORTON.North. Yea, this man's brow, like to a title-leaf, soForetells the nature of a tragic volume:
So looks the strand whereon the imperious flood

Say, Morton, didst thou come from Shrewsbury?

Mor. I ran from Shrewsbury, my noble lord;
Where hateful death put on his ugliest mask
To fright our party.North. How doth my son and brother?
Thou tremblest; and the whiteness in thy cheek
Is sifter than thy tongue to tell thy errand.Even such a man, so faint, so spiritless, so
So dull, so dead in look, so woe-begone, soDrew Priam's curtain in the dead of night,
And would have told him half his Troy was burnt;But Priam found the fire ere he his tongue,
And I my Percy's death ere thou report at it.Thus thou wouldst say, 'Your son did thus and thus;Your brother thus: so fought the noble Douglas.'

Ending with 'Brother, son, and all are dead.'

Mor. Douglas is living, and your brother, yet;
But, for my lord your son,—North. Why, he is dead.
See what a ready tongue suspicious hath!He that but fears the thing he would not know
Hath by instinct knowledge from others' eyes
That what he heard is chanced. Yet speak,
Morton;Tell thou an earl his divination lies,
And I will take it as a sweet diagnosisAnd make thee rich for doing me such wrong, so
Mor. You are too great to be by me deceiv'd.

Your spirit is too true, your fears too certain.

North. Yet, for all this, may not that I fear's dead.

I see a strange confusion in thine eye :
 Thou abasest thy head and hold'st it fear or sin
 To speak a truth. If he be slain, say so ;
 The tongue offends not that reports his death :
 And he doth sin that doth belie the dead,
 Not he which says the dead is not alive.
 Yet the first bringer of unwelcome news 100
 Hath but a losing office, and his tongue
 Sounds ever after as a sullen bell,
 Remember'd tolling a departing friend.

L. Bard. I cannot think, my lord, your son is dead.

Mor. I am sorry I should force you to believe That which I would to God I had not seen ;
 But these mine eyes saw him in bloody state,
 Rendering faint quittance, wearied and out-
 breathed,

To Harry Monmouth ; whose swift wrath beat
 down

The never-daunted Percy to the earth, 110
 From whence with life he never more sprung up.
 In few, his death, whose spirit lent a fire
 Even to the dullest peasant in his camp,
 Being bruited once, took fire and heat away
 From the best-temper'd courage in his troops ;
 For from his metal was his party steel'd ;
 Which once in him abated, all the rest
 Turn'd on themselves, like dull and heavy lead :
 And as the thing that's heavy in itself,
 Upon enforcement flies with greatest speed, 120
 So did our men, heavy in Hotspur's loss,
 Lend to this weight such lightness with their fear
 That arrows fled not swifter toward their aim
 Than did our soldiers, aiming at their safety,
 Fly from the field. Then was that noble
 Worcester

Too soon taken prisoner ; and that furious Scot,
 The bloody Douglas, whose well-labouring
 sword

Had three times slain the appearance of the
 king,

'Gan veil his stomach and did grace the shame
 Of those that turn'd their backs, and in his flight, 130

Stumbling in fear, was took. The sum of all
 Is that the king hath won, and hath sent out
 A speedy power to encounter you, my lord,
 Under the conduct of young Lancaster
 And Westmoreland. This is the news at full.

North. For this I shall have time enough to mourn.

In poison there is physic ; and these news,
 Having been well, that would have made me sick,

Being sick, have in some measure made me well :
 And as the wretch, whose fever-weakn'd joints,
 Like strengthless hinges, buckle under life, 140
 Impatient of his fit, breaks like a fire
 Out of his keeper's arms, even so my limbs, Weakn'd with grief, being now enrag'd with
 grief,

Are thrice themselves. Hence, therefore, thou nice crutch !

A rusty gauntlet now with joints of steel Meet glove this hand : and hence, thou sickly quail !

I set a guard too wanton for the head of a prince, death'd with conquest, aim to hit.

Now bind my brows with iron ; and approach
 The raggedst hour that time and spite dare bring 151

To frown upon the enraged Northumberland !
 Let heaven kiss earth ! now let not Nature's
 hand

Keep the wild flood confined ! let order die !
 And let this world no longer be a stage
 To feed contention in a lingering act ;

But let one spirit of the first-born Cain
 Reign in all bosoms, that, each heart being set
 On bloody courses, the rude scene may end,
 And darkness be the burier of the dead ! 160

Tra. This strained passion doth you wrong,
 my lord.

L. Bard. Sweet earl, divorce not wisdom from your honour.

Mor. The lives of all your loving complices
 Lean on your health ; the which, if you give o'er
 To stormy passion, must perforce decay.

You cast the event of war, my noble lord,
 And sum'd'd the account of chance, before you said

'Let us make head.' It was your presumise,
 That, in the dole of blows, your son might drop ;
 You knew he walk'd o'er perils, on an edge, 170
 More likely to fall in than to get o'er ;
 You were advis'd his flesh was capable
 Of wounds and scars and that his forward spirit
 Would lift him where most trade of danger ranged :

Yet did you say 'Go forth ;' and none of this,
 Though strongly apprehended, could restrain
 The stiff-borne action : what hath then befallen,
 Or what hath this bold enterprise brought forth,
 More than that being which was like to be !

L. Bard. We all that are engaged to this loss 180

Knew that we ventured on such dangerous seas
 That if we wrought out life 'twas ten to one ;
 And yet we ventured, for the gain proposed Chok'd the respect of likely peril fear'd ;
 And since we are o'er-set, venture again.

Come, we will all put forth, body and goods.
Mor. 'Tis more than time : and, my most noble lord,

I hear for certain, and do speak the truth,
 The gentle Archbishop of York is up
 With well-appointed powers : he is a man 190
 Who with a double surety binds his followers.

My lord your son had only but the corpse,
 But shadows and the shows of men, to fight ;
 For that same word, rebellion, did divide
 The action of their bodies from their souls ;
 And they did fight with queasiness, constrain'd.
 As men drink potions, that their weapons only Seem'd on our side ; but, for their spirits and souls,

This word, rebellion, it had froze them up,
 As fish are in a pond. But now the bishop 200
 Turns insurrection to religion :

Supposed sincere and holy in his thoughts,
 He's followed both with body and with mind ;
 And doth enlarge his rising with the blood
 Of fair King Richard, escaped from Pomfret stones ;

Derives from heaven his quarrel and his cause ;
 Tells them he doth bestride a bleeding land,

(Gasping for life under great Bolingbrokes;
And more and less do flock to follow him.

North. I knew of this before; but, to speak truth,

This present grief had wiped it from my mind.
(Go in with me; and counsel every man

The aptest way for safety and revenge:
Get posts and letters, and make friends with speed:

Never so few, and never yet more need.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. London. A street.

Enter FALSTAFF, with his Page bearing his sword and buckler.

Fal. Sirrah, you giant, what says the doctor to my water?

Page. He said, sir, the water itself was a good healthy water; but, for the party that used it, he might have more diseases than he knew for.

Fal. Men of all sorts take a pride to gird at me: the brain of this foolish-compounded clay, man, is not able to invent any thing that tends to laughter, more than I invent or is invented on me; I am not only witty in myself, but the cause that wit is in other men. I do here walk before thee like a sow that hath overwhelmed all her litter but one. If the prince put thee into my service for any other reason than to set me off, why then I have no judgement. Thou whoreson mandrake, thou art fitter to be worn in my cap than to wait at my heels. I was never manned with an apate till now: but I will inset you neither in gold nor silver, but in vile apparel, and send you back again to your master, for a jewel,—the juvenal, the prince your master, whose chin is not yet fledged. I will sooner have a beard grow in the palm of my hand than he shall get one on his cheek; and yet he will not stick to say his face is a face-royal: God may finish it when he will, 'tis not a hair amiss yet: he may keep it still at a face-royal, for a barber shall never earn sixpence out of it; and yet he'll be crowsing as if he had writ man ever since his father was a bachelor. He may keep his own race, but he's almost out of mine, I can assure him. What said Master Dumbleton about the satin for my short cloak and my slops?

Page. He said, sir, you should procure him better assurance than Bardolph: he would not take his hand and yours; he liked not the security.

Fal. Let him be damned, like the glutton! pray God his tongue be hotter! A whoreson Achitophel! a rascally yea-furnosh knave! to hear a gentleman in hand, and then stand upon security! The whoreson smooth-pates do now wear nothing but high shoes, and bunches of keys at their girdles; and if a man is through with them in honest taking up, then they must stand upon security. I had as lief they would put ratsbane in my mouth as offer to stop it with security. I looked a' should have sent me two and twenty yards of satin, as I am a true knight, and he sends me security. Well, he may sleep in security; for he hath the horn of abundance, and the lightness of his wife shines through it: and yet cannot he see, though he have his own lantern to light him. Where's Bardolph?

Fal. I bought him in Paul's, and he'll buy me a horse in Smithfield: as I could get me but a wife in the stews, I were married, horsed, and wived.

Enter the Lord Chief-Justice and Servant.

Page. Sir, here comes the nobleman that committed the prince for striking him about Bardolph.

Fal. Wait close; I will not see him.

Ch. Just. What's he that goes there?

Serv. Falstaff, an't please your lordship.

Ch. Just. He that was in question for the robbery?

Serv. He, my lord: but he hath since done good service at Shrewsbury; and, as I hear, is now going with some charge to the Lord John of Lancaster.

Ch. Just. What, to York? Call him back again.

Serv. Sir John Falstaff!

Fal. Boy, tell him I am deaf.

Page. You must speak louder; my master is deaf.

Ch. Just. I am sure he is, to the hearing of any thing good. Go, pluck him by the elbow; I must speak with him.

Serv. Sir John!

Fal. What! a young knave, and begging! Is there not wars? Is there not employment? doth not the king lack subjects? do not the rebels need soldiers? Though it be a shame to be on any side but one, it is worse shame to beg than to be on the worst side, were it worse than the name of rebellion can tell how to make it.

Serv. You mistake me, sir.

Fal. Why, sir, did I say you were an honest man? setting my knighthood and my soldiery aside, I had lied in my throat, if I had said so.

Serv. I pray you, sir, then set your knighthood and your soldiery aside; and give me leave to tell you, you lie in your throat, if you say I am any other than an honest man.

Fal. I give thee leave to tell me so! I lay aside that which grows to me! If thou gettest any leave of me, hang me; if thou takest leave, thou wert better be hanged. You hunt counter: hence! avaunt!

Serv. Sir, my lord would speak with you.

Ch. Just. Sir John Falstaff, a word with you.

Fal. My good lord! God give your lordship good time of day. I am glad to see your lordship abroad: I heard say your lordship was sick: I hope your lordship goes abroad by advice. Your lordship, though not clean past your youth, hath yet some smack of age in you, some relish of the saltiness of time; and I most humbly beseech your lordship to have a reverent care of your health.

Ch. Just. Sir John, I sent for you before your expedition to Shrewsbury.

Fal. An't please your lordship, I hear his majesty is returned with some discomfort from Wales.

Ch. Just. I talk not of his majesty: you would not come when I sent for you.

Fal. And I hear, moreover, his highness is fallen into this same whoreson apoplexy.

Ch. Just. Well, God mend him! I pray you, let me speak with you.

Fal. This apoplexy is, as I take it, a kind of lethargy, an't please your lordship: a kind of sleeping in the blood, a whoreson tingling.

Ch. Just. What tell you me of it? be it as it is.

Fal. It hath it original from much grief, from study and perturbation of the brain: I have read the cause of his effects in Galen: it is a kind of deafness.

Ch. Just. I think you are fallen into the disease: for you hear not what I say to you.

Fal. Very well, my lord, very well: rather, an't please you, it is the disease of not listening, the malady of not marking, that I am troubled withal.

Ch. Just. To punish you by the heels would amend the attention of your ears; and I care not if I do become your physician.

Fal. I am as poor as Job, my lord, but not so patient: your lordship may minister the potion of imprisonment to me in respect of poverty; but how I should be your patient to follow your prescriptions, the wise may make some dram of a scruple, or indeed a scruple itself.

Ch. Just. I sent for you, when there were matters against you for your life, to come speak with me.

Fal. As I was then advised by my learned counsel in the laws of this land-service, I did not come.

Ch. Just. Well, the truth is, Sir John, you live in great infamy.

Fal. He that buckles him in my belt cannot live in less.

Ch. Just. Your means are very slender, and your waste is great.

Fal. I would it were otherwise: I would my means were greater, and my waist slenderer.

Ch. Just. You have misled the youthful prince.

Fal. The young prince hath misled me: I am the fellow with the great belly, and he my dog.

Ch. Just. Well, I am loath to gill a new-healed wound: your day's service at Shrewsbury hath a little gilded over your night's exploits on Gad's-hill: you may thank the unquiet time for your quiet o'er-posting that action.

Fal. My lord!

Ch. Just. But since all is well, keep it so: wake not a sleeping wolf.

Fal. To wake a wolf is as bad as to smell a

Fal. A wassail candle, my lord, all tallow: if I did say of wax, my growth would approve the truth.

Ch. Just. There is not a white hair on your face but should have its effect of gravity.

Fal. His effect of gravity, gravity, go.

Ch. Just. You follow the young prince up and down, like his ill angel.

Fal. Not so, my lord; your ill angel is light; but I hope he that looks upon me will take me without weighing: and yet, in some respects, I grant, I cannot go: I cannot tell. Virtue is of so little regard in these costermonger times that true valour is turned bear-herd: pregnancy is made a tapster, and hath his quick wit wasted in giving reckonings: all the other gifts appertinent to man, as the malice of this age shapes them, are not worth a gooseberry. You that are old consider not the capacities of us that are young; you do measure the heat of our livers with the bitterness of your galls: and we that are in the vaward of our youth, I must confess, are wags too.

Ch. Just. Do you set down your name in the scroll of youth, that are written down old with all the characters of age! Have you not a moist eye! a dry hand! a yellow cheek! a white beard! a decreasing leg! an increasing belly! is not your voice broken! your wind short! your chin double! your wit single! and every part about you blasted with antiquity! and will you yet call yourself young! This, he, Sir John!

Fal. My lord, I was born about three of the clock in the afternoon, with a white head and something a round belly. For my voice, I have lost it with hallooing and singing of anthems. To approve my youth further, I will not: the truth is, I am only old in judgement and understanding; and he that will caper with me for a thousand marks, let him lend me the money, and have at him! For the box of the ear that the prince gave you, he gave it like a rude prince, and you took it like a sensible lord. I have checked him for it, and the young lion repents; marry, not in ashes and sackcloth, but in new silk and old sack.

Ch. Just. Well, God send the prince a better companion!

Fal. God send the companion a better prince! I cannot rid my hands of him.

Ch. Just. Well, the king hath severed you and Prince Harry: I hear you are going with Lord John of Lancaster against the Archbishop and the Earl of Northumberland.

Fal. Yea; I thank your pretty sweet wit for it. But look you pray, all you that kiss my lady Peace at home, that our armies join not in a hot day; for, by the Lord, I take but two shirts out with me, and I mean not to sweat extraordinarily: if it be a hot day, and I brandish any thing but a bottle, I would I might never spit white again. There is no dangerous action can be put out his head but I am thrust upon it: well, cannot last ever; but it was always yet the trick of our English nation, if they have a good thing, to make it too common. If ye will needs say I am an old man, you should give me rest. I would to God my name were not so terrible to the enemy as it is: I were better to be eaten to death with a rust than to be scoured to nothing with perpetual motion.

What! you are as a candle, the better you

Ch. Just. Well, be honest, be honest; and God bless your expedition!

Fal. Will your lordship lend me a thousand pound to furnish me forth!

Ch. Just. Not a penny, not a penny; you are too impatient to bear crosses. Fare you well: commend me to my cousin Westmoreland.

Fal. If I do, fillip me with a three-man beetle. A man can no more separate age and courtousness than a can part young limbs and lechery: but the gout galls the one, and the pox pinches the other; and so both the degrees prevent my cures. Boy!

Page. Sir?

Fal. What money is in my purse?

Page. Seven groats and two pence.

Fal. I can get no remedy against this consumption of the purse: borrowing only fingers and lingers it out, but the disease is incurable. Go bear this letter to my Lord of Lancaster: this to the prince; this to the Earl of Westmoreland; and this to old Mistress Ursula, whom I have weekly sworn to marry since I perceived the first white hair on my chin. About it: you know where to find me. [Exit Page.]

A pox of this gout! or, a gout of this pox! for the one or the other plays the rogue with my great toe. 'Tis no matter if I do halt: I have the wars for my colour, and my reason shall seem the more reasonable. A good wit will make use of any thing: I will turn diseases to commodity. [Exit.]

SCENE III. York. The ARCHBISHOP'S palace.

[Enter the ARCHBISHOP, the LORDS HASTINGS, MOWBRAY, and BARDOLPH.]

Arch. Thus have you heard our cause and known our means:

And, my most noble friends, I pray you all, speak plainly your opinions of our hopes:

And first, lord marshal, what say you to it?

Mowb. I well allow the occasion of our arms, but gladly would be better satisfied

How in our means we should advance ourselves

To look with forehead bold and big enough

Upon the power and puissance of the king.

Hast. Our present musters grow upon the file

To five and twenty thousand men of choice;

And our supplies live largely in the hope

Of great Northumberland, whose bosom burns with an incensed fire of injuries.

L. Bard. The question then, Lord Hastings, standeth thus:

Whether our present five and twenty thousand may hold up head without Northumberland?

Hast. With him, we may.

L. Bard. Yet, marry, there's the point

But if without him we be thought too feeble, my judgement is, we should not sleep too far

Till we had his assistance by the hand;

For in a theme so bloody-dread as this

Conjecture, expectation, and surmise

Of aids incertain should not be admitted.

Arch. 'Tis very true, Lord Bardolph; for indeed

'T was young Hotspur's case at Shrewsbury.

L. Bard. It was, my lord; who lined himself with hope,

Eating the air on promise of supply,

Flattering himself in project of a power

Much smaller than the smallest of his thoughts:

And so, with great imagination

Proper to madmen, led his powers to death

And winking leap'd into destruction.

Hast. But, by your leave, it never yet did hurt

To lay down likelihoods and forms of hope.

L. Bard. 'Tis yes, if this present quality of war,

indeed the instant action: a cause on foot

Lives so in hope as in an early spring

We see the appearing buds; which to prove fruit,

Hope gives not so much warrant as despair

That frosts will bite them. When we mean to build,

We first survey the plot, then draw the model;

And when we see the figure of the house,

Then must we rate the cost of the erection;

Which if we find outweighs ability,

What do we then but draw anew the model

In fewer offices, or at last desert

To build at all! Much more, in this great work,

Which is almost to pluck a kingdom down

And set another up, should we survey

The plot of situation and the model,

Consent upon a sure foundation,

Question surveyors, know our own estate,

How able such a work to undergo,

To weigh against his opposite; or else

We fortify in paper and in figures,

Using the names of men instead of men:

Like one that draws the model of a house

Beyond his power to build it; who, half through,

Gives o'er and leaves his part-created cost

A naked subject to the weeping clouds

And waste for churlish winter's tyranny.

Hast. Grant that our hopes yet likely of fair birth,

Should be still-born, and that we now possess'd

The utmost man of expectation,

king,

but five and twenty thousand!

Hast. To us no more; nay, not so much,

Lord Bardolph.

For his divisions, as the times do brawl,

Are in three heads: one power against the French,

And one against Glendower; perforce a third

Must take up us: so is the uniform king

In three divided; and his officers sound

With hollow poverty and emptiness.

Arch. That he should draw his strengths together

And come against us in full puissance,
Need not be dreaded.

Host. If he should do so,
He leaves his back unarm'd, the French and Welsh

Baying him at the heels: never fear that. So L. Bard. Who is it like should lead his forces hither?

Host. The Duke of Lancaster and Westmoreland:

Against the Welsh, himself and Harry Monmouth:

But who is substituted 'gainst the French,
I have no certain notice.

Arch. Let us on,
And publish the occasion of our arms.
The commonwealth is sick of their own choice;
Their over-greedy love hath surfeited:
An habitation giddy and unsure
Hath he that buildeth on the vulgar heart. 90
O thou fond many, with what loud applause
Didst thou beat heaven with blessing Boling-broke,

Before he was what thou wouldst have him be!
And being now trimm'd in thine own desires,
Thou, beastly feeder, art so full of him,
That thou provokest thyself to cast him up.
So, so, thou common dog, didst thou disgorge
Thy glutton bosom of the royal Richard;
And now thou wouldst eat thy dead vomit up,
And howl'st to find it. What trust is in these times! 100

They that, when Richard lived, would have him
they die,

Are now become enamour'd on his grave:
Thou, that threw'st dust upon his goodly head
When through proud London he came sighing on.

After the admired heels of Bolingbroke,
Cries now 'O earth, yield us that king again,
And take thou this!' O thoughts of men accursed!

Past and to come seems best; things present worst.

Mowb. Shall we go draw our numbers and set on?

Host. We are time's subjects, and time bids be gone. [Exeunt. 110]

ACT II.

SCENE I. London. A street.

*Enter Hostess, FANG and his Boy with her,
and SNARE following.*

Host. Master Fang, have you entered the action?

Fang. It is entered.

Host. Where's your yeoman? Is't a lusty yeoman? will a stand to't?

Fang. Sirrah, where's Snare?

Host. O Lord, ay! good Master Snare.

Snare. Here, here.

Fang. Snare, we must arrest Sir John Fal-staff.

Host. Yes, good Master Snare; I have entreated him and all.

Snare. It may chance cost some of us our lives, for he will stab.

Host. Alas the day! take heed of him; he stabbed me in mine own house, and that most beastly: in good faith, he cares not what mischief he does, if his weapon be out: he will foil like any devil; he will spare neither man, woman, nor child.

Fang. If I can close with him, I care not for his thrust.

Host. No, nor I neither: I'll be at your elbow.

Fang. An I but fist him once; an a' come but within my vice,—

Host. I am undone by his going; I warrant you, he's an infinitive thing upon my score.
Good Master Fang, hold him sure: good Master Snare, let him not 'scape. A' comes continuantly to Pie-corner—saying your manhoods—to buy a siddle; and he is indicted to dinner to the Lubber's-head in Lumbers street, to Master Smooth's the silkman: I pray ye, since my exion is entered and my case so openly know-to the world, let him be brought in to his answer. A hundred mark is a long one for a poor lone woman to bear: and I have borne,
and borne, and borne, and have been fubbed off, and fubbed off, and fubbed off, from this day to that day, that it is a shame to be thought on. There is no honesty in such dealing; unless a woman should be made an ass and a beast, to bear every knave's wrong. Yonder he comes;
and that arrant malmsey-nose knave, Bardolph,
with him. Do your offices, do your offices:
Master Fang and Master Snare, do me, do me,
do me your offices.

Enter FALSTAFF, Page, and BARDOLPH.

Fal. How now! whose mare's dead? what's the matter?

Fang. Sir John, I arrest you at the suit of Mistress Quickly.

Fal. Away, varlets! Draw, Bardolph: cut me off the villain's head: throw the quean in the channel.

Host. Throw me in the channel! I'll throw thee in the channel. Wilt thou? wilt thou?
thou bastardly rogue! Murder, murder! Ah, thou honey-suckle villain! wilt thou kill God's officers and the king's! Ah, thou honey-seed rogue! thou art a honey-seed, a man-queller, and a woman-queller.

Fal. Keep them off, Bardolph.

Fang. A rescue! a rescue!

Host. Good people, bring a rescue or two!
Thou wo't, wo't thou? thou wo't, wo't thou?
do, thou rogue! do, thou hemp-seed!

Fal. Away, you scullion! you rampallian!
you fustilian! I'll tickle your catastrophe.

Enter the LORD CHIEF-JUSTICE, and his men

Ch. Just. What is the matter? keep the peace here, ho!

Host. Good my lord, be good to me. I beseech you, stand to me.

Ch. Just. How now, Sir John! what you bewailing here?

Doth this become your place, your time and business?

You should have been well on your way to York.

Stand from him, fellow: wherefore hang'st upon him?

Host. O my most worshipful lord, an't please your grace, I am a poor widow of Eastcheap, and he is arrested at my suit.

Ch. Just. For what sum?

Host. It is more than for some, my lord; it is for all, all I have. He hath eaten me out of house and home; he hath put all my substance into that fat belly of his: but I will have some of it out again, or I will ride thee o' nights like the mare.

Fal. I think I am as like to ride the mare, if I have any vantage of ground to get up.

Ch. Just. How comes this, Sir John? Fie! what man of good temper would endure this tempest of exclamation? Are you not ashamed to enforce a poor widow to so rough a course to come by her own?

Fal. What is the great sum that I owe thee?

Host. Marry, if thou wert an honest man, thyself and the money too. Thou didst swear to me upon a parcel-kilt goblet, sitting in my Dolphin-chamber, at the round table, by a sea-cold fire, upon Wednesday in Wheatsow week, when the prince broke thy head for liking his father to a singing-man of Windsor, thou didst swear to me then, as I was washing thy wound, to marry me and make me my lady thy wife. Canst thou deny it? Did not goodwife Keech, the butcher's wife, come in then and call me gossip Quickly! coming in to borrow a mess of vinegar; telling us she had a good dish of prawns; whereby thou didst desire to eat some; whereby I told thee they were ill for a green wound? And didst thou not, when she was gone down stairs, desire me to be no more so familiarly with such poor people; saying that ere long they should call me madam? And didst thou not kiss me and bid me fetch thee thirty shillings? I put thee now to thy book-oth: deny it, if thou canst.

Fal. My lord, this is a poor mad soul; and she says up and down the town that her eldest son is like you: sir hath been in good case, and the truth is, poverty hath distracted her. But for these foolish officers, I beseech you I may have redress against them.

Ch. Just. Sir John, Sir John, I am well acquainted with your manner of wrenching the true cause the false way. It is not a contented brow, nor the throng of words that come with such more than impudent sauciness from you, can thrust me from a level consideration: you have, as it appears to me, practised upon the easy-yielding spirit of this woman, and made her serve your uses both in purse and in person.

Host. Yea, in truth, my lord.

Ch. Just. Pray thee, peace. Pay her the without reply. You call honourable boldness impudent sauciness: if a man will make courtesy and say nothing, he is virtuous: no, my lord, my humble duty remembered, I will not be your suitor. I say to you, I do desire deliverance from these officers, being upon hasty employment in the king's affairs.

Ch. Just. You speak as having power to do wrong: but answer in the effect of your reputation, and satisfy the poor woman.

Fal. Come hither, hostess.

Enter GOWER.

Ch. Just. Now, Master Gower, what news?

Gow. The king, my lord, and Harry Prince of Wales

Are near at hand: the rest the paper tells.

Fal. As I am a gentleman.

Host. Faith, you said so before.

Fal. As I am a gentleman. Come, no more words of it.

Host. By this heavenly ground I tread on, I must be fain to pawn both my plate and the tapestry of my dining-chambers.

Fal. Glasses, glasses, is the only drinking: and for thy walls, a pretty slight drollery, or the story of the Prodigal, or the German hunting in water-work, is worth a thousand of these bell-hangings and these fly-bitten tapestries. Let it be ten pound, if thou canst. Come, an't were not for thy humours, there's not a better wench in England. Go, wash thy face, and draw the action. Come, thou must not be in this humour with me; dost not know me? come, come, I know thou wast set on to this.

Host. Pray thee, Sir John, let it be but twenty nobles: I faith, I am loath to pawn my plate, so God save me, is!

Fal. Let it alone; I'll make other shift: you'll be a fool still.

Host. Well, you shall have it, though I pawn my gown. I hope you'll come to supper. You'll pay me all together!

Fal. Will I live! [To Bardolph] Go, with her, with her; book on, book on.

Host. Will you have Doll Tearheart meet you at supper?

Fal. No more words: let's have her.

[Exit Hostess, Bardolph, Officers, and Boy.]

Ch. Just. I have heard better news.

Fal. What's the news, my lord?

Ch. Just. Where lay the king last night?

Gow. At Basingstoke, my lord.

Fal. I hope, my lord, all's well: what is the news, my lord?

Ch. Just. Come all his forces back!

Gow. No; fifteen hundred foot, five hundred horse.

Are march'd up to my lord of Lancaster Against Northumberland and the Archbishop.

Fal. Comes the king back from Wales, my noble lord?

Ch. Just. You shall have letters of me presently.

Come, go along with me, good Master Gower.

Fal. My lord!

Ch. Just. What's the matter?

repentance.

Fal. My lord, I will not undergo this sheep

Fal. Master Gower, shall I entreat you with me to dinner?

Gow. I must wait upon my good lord here; I thank you, good Sir John.

Oh. Just. Sir John, you loiter here too long, being you are to take soldiers up in counties as you go.

Fal. Will you sup with me, Master Gower?
Oh. Just. What foolish master taught you these manners, Sir John?

Fal. Master Gower, if they become me not, he was a fool that taught them me. This is the right fencing grace, my lord; tap for tap, and so part fair.

Oh. Just. Now the Lord lighten thee! thou art a great fool. [Exit.

SCENE II. London. Another street.

Enter PRINCE HENRY and POINS.

Prince. Before God, I am exceeding weary.

Poins. Is't come to that! I had thought weariness durst not have attached one of so high blood.

Prince. Faith, it does me; though it discolors the complexion of my greatness to acknowledge it. Doth it not show vilely in me to desire small beer?

Poins. Why, a prince should not be so loosely studied as to remember so weak a composition.

Prince. Believe then my appetite was not princely got; for, by my troth, I do now remember the poor creature, small beer. But, indeed, these humble considerations make me out of love with my greatness. What a disgrace is it to me to remember thy name! or to know thy face to-morrow! or to take note how many pair of silk stockings thou hast, viz. these, and those that were thy peach-coloured ones! or to hear the inventory of thy shirts, as, one for superfluity, and another for use! But that the tennis-court-keeper knows better than I; for it is a low ebb of linen with thee when thou keepest not racket there; as thou hast not done a great while, because the rest of thy low countries have made a shift to eat up thy holland: and God knows, whether those that bawl out the ruins of thy linen shall inherit his kingdom: but the midwives say the children are not in the fault; whereupon the world increases, and kindreds are mightily strengthened.

Poins. How ill it follows, after you have laboured so hard, you should talk so idly! Tell me, how many good young princes would do so, their fathers being so sick as yours at this time is?

Prince. Shall I tell thee one thing, Poins?

Poins. Yes, faith; and let it be an excellent good thing.

Prince. It shall serve among wits of no higher breeding than thine.

Poins. Go to; I stand the push of your one thing that you will tell.

Prince. Marry, I tell thee, it is not meet that I should be sad, now my father is sick: albeit I could tell so thee, as to one it pleases me, for sight of a better, to call my friend, I could indeed too.

Poins. Very hardly upon such a subject.

Prince. By this hand, thou thinkest me as far in the devil's book as thou and Falstaff for obduracy and persistency; let the end try the man. But I tell thee, my heart bleeds inwardly that my father is so sick; and keepingsuch vile company as thou art hath in reason taken from me all ostentation of sorrow.

Poins. The reason?

Prince. What wouldst thou think of me, if I should weep?

Poins. I would think thee a most hypocrite.

Prince. It would be every man's thought; and thou art a blessed fellow to think as every man thinks: never a man's thought in the world keeps the road-way better than thine: every man would think me an hypocrite indeed. And what accites your most worshipful thought to think so?

Poins. Why, because you have been so lewd and so much engrafted to Falstaff.

Prince. And to thee.

Poins. By this light, I am well spoke on; I can hear it with mine own ears: the worst that they can say of me is that I am a second brother and that I am a proper fellow of my hands; and those two things, I confess, I cannot help. By the mass, here comes Bardolph.

Enter BARDOLPH and Page.

Prince. And the boy that I gave Falstaff: a' had him from me Christian; and look, if the fat villain have not transformed him ape.

Bard. God save your grace!

Prince. And yours, most noble Bardolph!

Bard. Come, you virtuous ass, you bashful fool, must you be blushing! wherefore blush you now? What a maidenly man-at-arms are you become! Is't such a matter to get a pot-pot's maidenhead?

Page. A' calls me e'en now, my lord, through a red lattice, and I could discern no part of his face from the window: at last I spied his eyes, and methought he had made two holes in the ale-wife's new petticoat and so peeped through.

Prince. Has not the boy profited?

Bard. Away, you whorson upright rabbit, away!

Prince. Instruct us, boy: what dream, boy?
Page. Marry, my lord, Altham dreamed he was delivered of a fire-brand; and therefore I call him her dream.

Prince. A crown's worth of good interpretation: there 'tis, boy.

Poins. O, that this good blossom could be kept from cankers! Well, there is sixpence to preserve thee.

Bard. An you do not make him hanged among you, the gallows shall have wrong.

Prince. And how doth thy master, Bardolph?

Bard. Well, my lord. He hears of your grace's coming to town; there is a letter for you.

Poins. Delivered with good speed. And how doth the merchant, your master?

Bard. In bodily health, sir.

Poins. Marry, the immortal part needs!

physician; but that moves not him: though that be sick, it does not.

Prince. I do allow this wen to be as familiar with me as my dog; and he holds his place; for look you how he writes.

Poins. [Reads] 'John Falstaff, knight,'—every man must know that, as oft as he has occasion to name himself: even like those that are kin to the king; for they never prick their finger but they say, 'There's some of the king's blood spilt.' How comes that? says he, that takes upon him not to conceive. The answer is as ready as a borrower's cap, 'I am the king's poor cousin, sir.'

Prince. Nay, they will be kin to us, or they will fetch it from Japhet. But to the letter:

Poins. [Reads] 'Sir John Falstaff, knight, the son of the king, nearest his father, Harry Prince of Wales, greeting.' Why, this is a certificate.

Prince. Peace!

Poins. [Reads] 'I will imitate the honourable Romans in brevity: he sure means brevity in breath, short-winded. 'I commend me to thee. I commend thee, and I leave thee. Be not too familiar with Poins; for he misuses thy favours so much, that he swears thou art to marry his sister Nell. Repent at idle times as thou mayest; and so, farewell.'

'Thine, by yea and no, which is as much as to say, as thou usest him, JACK FALSTAFF with my familiars, JOHN with my brothers and sisters, and SIR JOHN with all Europe.'

My lord, I'll steep this letter in sack and make him eat it.

Prince. That's to make him eat twenty of his words. But do you use me thus, Ned must I marry your sister?

Poins. God send the wench no worse fortune. But I never said so.

Prince. Well, thus we play the fools with the time, and the spirits of the wise sit in the clouds and mock us. Is your master here in London?

Bard. Yes, my lord.

Prince. Where sups he? doth the old bear feed in the old frank?

Bard. At the old place, my lord, in Eastcheap.

Prince. What company?

Poins. Ephesians, my lord, of the old church.

Prince. Sup any women with him?

Poins. None, my lord, but old Mistress Quickly and Mistress Doll Tearsheet.

Prince. What pagan may that be?

Poins. A proper gentlewoman, sir, and a knowersome of my master's.

Prince. Even such kin as the parish huffers are to the town bail. Shall we steal upon them, Ned, as ushers?

Poins. I am your shadow, my lord; I'll follow you.

Prince. Shush, you boy, and Bardolph, no word to your master that I am yet come to town: there's for your silence.

Bard. I have no tongue, sir.

Poins. And for mine, sir, I will govern it.

Prince. Fare you well; go. [Exeunt Bardolph and Poins.] This Doll Tearsheet should be some rood.

Poins. I warrant you, as common as the way between Saint Alban's and London.

Prince. How might we see Falstaff bestow himself to-night in his true colours, and not ourselves be seen?

Poins. Put on two leathern jacks and aprons, and wait upon him at his table as drawers.

Prince. From a God to a bull! a heavy lessension! It was Jove's case. From a prince to a prentice! a low transformation! that shall be mine; for in every thing the purpose must weigh with the folly. Follow me, Ned.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Warkworth. Before the castle.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND, LADY NORTHUMBERLAND, and LADY PERCY.

North. I pray thee, loving wife, and gentle daughter,

Give even way unto my rough affairs: 'ut not you on the visage of the times. And be like them to Percy troublesome.

Lady N. I have given over, I will speak no more:

Do what you will; your wisdom be your guide.

North. Alas, sweet wife, my honour is at pawn;

And, but my going, nothing can redeem it.

Lady P. O yet, for God's sake, go not to these wars!

The time was, father, that you broke your word,

When you were more endear'd to it than now;

When your own Percy, when my heart's dear Harry,

Threw many a northward look to see his father

Bring up his powers; but he did long in vain.

Who then persuaded you to stay at home?

There were two honours lost, yours and your son's.

For yours, the God of heaven brighten it!

For his, it stuck upon him as the sun

In the grey vault of heaven, and by his light

Did all the chivalry of England move

To do brave acts; he was indeed the glass

Wherein the noble youth did dress themselves:

He had no logs that practised not his gait;

And speaking thick, which nature made his blemish.

Became the accents of the valiant;

For those that could speak low and tardily

Would turn their own perfection to abuse.

To seem like him: so that in speech, in gait, in diet, in affections of delight, in military rules, humours of blood, He was the mark and glass, copy and book. This fashion'd others. And him, O would you

Where nothing but the sound of Hotspur's
name

Did seem defensible: so you left him.
Never, O never, do his ghost the wrong
To hold your honour more precise and nice 40
With others than with him! let them alone:
The marshal and the archbishop are strong:
Had my sweet Harry had but half their numbers,
To-day might I, hanging on Hotspur's neck,
Have talk'd of Monmouth's grave.

North. Bearwour your heart,
Fair daughter, you do draw my spirits from me
With new lamenting ancient oversights.
But I must go and meet with danger there,
Or it will seek me in another place
And find me worse provided.

Lady N. O, fly to Scotland, 50
Till that the nobles and the armed commons
Have of their puissance made a little taste.

Lady P. If they get ground and vantage of the king,

Then join you with them, like a rib of steel,
To make strength stronger; but, for all our loves,

First let them try themselves. So did your son;
He was so suffer'd: so came I a widow;
And never shall have length of life enough
To rain upon remembrance with mine eyes,
That it may grow and sprout as high as heaven,
For recordation to my noble husband. 61

North. Come, come, go in with me. 'Tis with my mind

As with the tide swell'd up unto his height,
That makes a still-stand, running neither way:
Fain would I go to meet the archbishop,
But many thousand reasons hold me back.
I will resolve for Scotland: there am I,
Till time and vantage crave my company.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. London. The Boar's-head Tavern in Eastcheap.

Enter two Drawers.

First Draw. What the devil hast thou brought there? apple-johns! thou knowest Sir
John cannot endure an apple-john.

Sec. Draw. Mass, thou sayest true. The prince once set a dish of apple-johns before him, and told him there were five more Sir Johns; and, putting off his hat, said 'I will now take my leave of these six dry, round, old, withered knights.' It angered him to the heart:
but he hath forgot that. 10

First Draw. Why, then, cover, and set them down: and see if thou canst find out Squeak's noise; Mistress Tearsheet would fain hear some music. Dispatch: the room where they supped is too hot; they'll come in straight.

Sec. Draw. Sirrah, here will be the prince and Master Poles anon; and they will put on two of our jerkins and aprons; and Sir John must not know of it: Bardolph hath brought word. 20

First Draw. By the mass, here will be old
Uls: it will be an excellent stratagem.

Sec. Draw. I'll see if I can find out Squeak.
[Exit.]

Enter Hostess and DOLL TEARSHEET.

Host. I faith, sweetheart, methinks now you are in an excellent good temperality: your pul-sidge beats as extraordinarily as heart would desire; and your colour, I warrant you, is as red as any rose, in good truth, is! But, I faith, you have drunk too much canaries; and that's a marvellous searching wine, and it perfumes the blood ere one can say 'What's this?' How do you now?

Dol. Better than I was: hem!

Host. Why, that's well said; a good heart's worth gold. Lo, here comes Sir John.

Enter FAUSTAFF.

Fal. [Singing] 'When Arthur first in court'
—Empty the jonian. [Exit First Drawer.]
[Singing] 'And was a worthy king.' How now, Mistress Doll!

Host. Sick of a calm; yea, good faith.

Fal. So is all her sect; an they be once in a calm, they are sick.

Dol. You muddy rascal, is that all the comfort you give me?

Fal. You make fat rascals, Mistress Doll.

Dol. I make them! gluttony and diseases make them; I make them not.

Fal. If the cook help to make the gluttony, you help to make the diseases, Doll: we catch of you, Doll, we catch of you; grant that, my poor virtue, grant that. 51

Dol. Yea, joy, our chains and our jewels.

Fal. 'Your brooches, pearls, and ouches:'
for to serve bravely is to come halting off, you know: to come off the breach with his pike bent bravely, and to surgery bravely; to venture upon the charged chambers bravely.

Dol. Hang yourself, you muddy conger, hang yourself! 50

Host. By my troth, this is the old fashion;
you two never meet but you fall to some discord: you are both, I good truth, as rheumatic as two dry toasts; you cannot one bear with another's confirmities. What the good-year!
one must bear, and that must be you: you are the weaker vessel, as they say, the emptier vessel.

Dol. Can a weak empty vessel bear such a huge full hogshead! there's a whole merchant's venture of Bourdeaux stuff in him; you have not seen a hulk better stuffed in the hold. Come.
I'll be friends with thee, Jack: thou art going to the wars; and whether I shall ever see thee again or no, there is nobody cares.

Re-enter First Drawer.

First Draw. Sir, Ancient Pistol's below, and would speak with you.

Dol. Hang him, swaggering rascal! let him not come hither: it is the foul-mouthed rogue in England.

Host. If he swagger, let him not come here:
no, by my faith; I must live among my neighbours; I'll no swaggers: I am of good name and fame with the very best; about the door;
there comes no swaggers here: I have not lived all this while, to have swaggering now: shut the door, I pray you.

Fal. Dost thou hear hostess!

Host. Pray ye, pacify yourself, Sir John: there comes no swaggerers here.

Fal. Dost thou hear? it is mine ancient.

Host. Tilly-fally, Sir John, ne'er tell me: our ancient swaggerer comes not in my doors. I was before Master Tisick, the deputy, t'other day; and, as he said to me, 'twas no longer ago than Wednesday last, 'I good faith, neighbour Quickly,' says he; Master Dumbe, our minister, was by then; 'neighbour Quickly,' says he, 'receive those that are civil; for,' said he, 'you are in an ill name: now a said so, I can tell whereupon; for,' says he, 'you are an honest woman, and well thought on; therefore take heed what guests you receive: receive,' says he, 'no swaggering companions. There comes none here: you would bless you to hear what he said: no, I'll no swaggerers.'

Fal. He's no swaggerer, hostess; a tame cheater, if faith; you may stroke him as gently as a puppy greyhound: he'll not swagger with a livery hen, if her feathers turn back in any show of resistance. Call him up, drawer.

[Exit First Drawer.]

Host. Cheater, call you him! I will bar no honest man my house, nor no cheater; but I do not love swaggering, by my troth; I am the worse, when one says swagger: feel, masters, how I shake; look you, I warrant you.

Joh. So you do, hostess.

Host. Do I? yea, in very truth, do I, an I were an aspen leaf: I cannot abide swaggers.

Enter PISTOL, BARDOLPH, and Page.

Pist. God save you, Sir John! 119

Fal. Welcome, Ancient Pistol. Here, Pistol, I charge you with a cup of sack: do you discharge upon mine hostess.

Pist. I will discharge upon her, Sir John, with two bullets.

Fal. She is pistol-proof, sir; you shall hardly offend her.

Host. Come, I'll drink no proofs nor no bullets: I'll drink no more than will do me good, for no man's pleasure.

Pist. Then to you, Mistress Dorothy; I will charge you. 121

Dol. Charge me! I scorn you, scurvy companion. What! you pour, base, rascally, cheating, lack-linen mate! Away, you mouldy rogue, away! I am meat for your master.

Pist. I know you, Mistress Dorothy.

Dol. Away, you cut-purse rascal! you filthy me, away! by this wine, I'll thrust my knife in your mouldy chaps, an you play the saucy cuttle with me. Away, you bottle-ale rascal! you basket-hilt stale juggler, you! Since when, I pray you, sir? God's light, with two points on your shoulder! mouch!

Pist. God let me not live, but I will murder your ruff for this.

Fal. No more, Pistol; I would not have you go on here: discharge yourself of our company, Pistol.

Host. No, good Captain Pistol; not here, sweet captain. 120

Dol. Captain! thou abominable damned cheater, art thou not ashamed to be called captain! An captains were of my mind, they would truncheon you out, for taking their names upon you before you have earned them. You a captain! you slave, for what! for tearing a poor whore's ruff in a lawdy-house! He a captain! hang him, rogue! he lives upon mouldy stewed prunes and dried cakes. A captain! God's light, these villains will make the word as odious as the word 'occupy'; which was an excellent good word before it was ill sorted: therefore captains had need look to't.

Bard. Pray thee, go down, good ancient.

Fal. Hark thee hither, Mistress Doll.

Pist. Not I: I tell thee what, Corporal Bardolph, I could tear her: I'll be revenged of her.

Pist. I'll see her damned first; to Pluto's damned lake, by this hand, to the infernal deep, with Erebus and tortures vile also. Hold hook and line, say I. Down, down, dogs! down, fatsores! Have we not Hiren here!

Host. Good Captain Peesel, be quiet; 'tis very late, if faith: I beseech you now, aggravate your cholera.

Pist. These be good humours, indeed! Shall pack-horses

And hollow pamper'd jades of Asia,
Which cannot go but thirty mile a-day,
Compare with Cæsars, and with Cannibals, 120
And Trojan Greeks! nay, rather damn them with King Cerberus; and let the welkin roar.

Shall we fall foul for toys!

Host. By my troth, captain, these are very bitter words.

Bard. He gone, good ancient: this will grow to a brawl anon.

Pist. Die men like dogs! give crowns like pins! Have we not Hiren here! 121

Host. O' my word, captain, there's none such here. What the good-year! do you think I would deny her! For God's sake, be quiet.

Pist. Then feed, and be fat, my fair Calpola. Come, give's some sack.

'Si fortune me tormente, sperabo me contento.'
Fear we broadsides! no, let the fiend give fire:
Give me some sack: and, sweetheart, lie thou there. [Laying down his sword.]

Come we to full points here; and are etceteras nothing!

Fal. Pistol, I would be quiet.

Pist. Sweet knight, I kiss thy neck: what! we have seen the seven stars. 122

Dol. For God's sake, thrust him down stairs: I cannot endure such a fustian rascal.

Pist. Thrust him down stairs! know we not Galloway nag!

Fal. Quoit him down, Bardolph, like a shove-groat shilling: nay, an a' do nothing but speak nothing, a' shall be nothing here.

Bard. Come, get you down stairs.

Pist. What! shall we have incision! shall we imbrust! [Snatching up his sword.]

Then death took me asleep, aldrige my doleful days!

Why, then, let grievous, ghastly, gaping wounds
Ungrave the Sisters Three! Come, Atropos,
I say!

Host. Here's goodly stuff toward!

Fal. Give me my rapier, boy.

Dol. I pray thee, Jack, I pray thee, do not draw.

Fal. Get you down stairs.

[Drawing, and driving Pistol out.

Host. Here's a goodly tumult! I'll forswear keeping house, afore I'll be in these thrills and frights. So; murder, I warrant now. Alas, alas! put up your naked weapons, put up your naked weapons.

[Exeunt Pistol and Bardolph.

Dol. I pray thee, Jack, be quiet; the rascal's gone. Ah, you whorson little valiant villain, you!

Host. Are you not hurt i' the groin? methought a' made a shrewd thrust at your belly.

Re-enter BARDOLPH.

Fal. Have you turned him out o' doors?

Bard. Yea, sir. The rascal's drunk: you have hurt him, sir, i' the shoulder.

Fal. A rascal! to brave me!

Dol. Ah, you sweet little rogue, you! Alas, poor ape, how thou sweat'st! come, let me wipe thy face; come on, you whorson chops: ah, rogue! I faith, I love thee: thou art as valorous as Hector of Troy, worth five of Agamemnon, and ten times better than the Nine Worthies: ah, villain!

Fal. A rascally slave! I will toss the rogue in a blanket.

Dol. Do, an thou dar'st for thy heart: an thou dost, I'll canvass thee between a pair of sheets.

Enter Music.

Fal. Let them play. Play, sir. Sit on my knee, Doll. A rascal bragging there! the rogue led from me like quicksilver.

Dol. I faith, and thou followedst him like a church. Thou whorson little tidy Bartholomew bear-pig, when wilt thou leave fighting o' days and joining o' nights, and begin to patch up thine old body for heaven?

Enter, behind, PRINCE HENRY and POINS, disguised.

Fal. Peace, good Doll! do not speak like a death's-head; do not bid me remember mine end.

Dol. Sirrah, what humour's the prince of?

Fal. A good shallow young fellow: a' would have made a good painter, a' would he chipped heads well.

Dol. They say Poins has a good wit.

Fal. He a good wit! hang him, beboon! his wit's as thick as Tewkesbury mustard; there's no more consent in him than in a wall.

Dol. Why does the prince love him so, then?

Fal. Because their legs are both of a bigness, and a' ——— well, and eats ———: and fennel, and dill ——— off candles' ends ——— flap-dragons, and rides the wild-mare with the boys, and jumps upon joined-stools, and ——— eam with a good grace, and wears his boots ——— smooth, like unto the sign of the leg, and be ——— no hate with telling of discreet stories; and ——— which other gambol facilities a' has, that show a' ——— weak mind and an able body, for the which ——— admits him: for the prince himself ——— another: the weight of a hair will scales between their avoidupols.

Prince. Would not this save of a wheel have his ears cut off?

Poins. Let's beat him before his whore.

Prince. Look, whether the withered elder hath not his poll clawed like a parrot.

Poins. Is it not strange that desire should so many years outlive performance?

Fal. Kiss me, Doll.

Prince. Saturn and Venus this year in conjunction! what says the almanac to that?

Poins. And, look, whether the fiery Trigon, his man, be not lipping to his master's old tables, his note-book, his counsel-keeper.

Fal. Thou dost give me flattering blows.

Dol. By my troth, I kiss thee with a most constant heart.

Fal. I am old, I am old.

Dol. I love thee better than I love e'er a scurvy young boy of them all.

Fal. What stuff will have a kittle of! I shall receive money o' Thursday: shalt have a cap to-morrow. A merry song, come: it grows late; we'll to bed. Thou'st forget me when I am gone.

Dol. By my troth, thou'lt set me a weeping, an thou sayest so: prove that ever I drew myself handsome till thy return: well, beshen! at the end.

Fal. Some sack, Francis.

Prince. } Anon, anon, sir. [Coming forward.

Fal. Ha! a bastard son of the king's! And art not thou Poins his brother?

Prince. Why, thou globe of sinful continents, what a life dost thou lead!

Fal. A better than thou: I am a gentleman; thou art a drawer.

Prince. Very true, sir; and I come to draw you out by the ears.

Host. O, the Lord preserve thy good grace! by my troth, welcome to London. Now, the Lord bless that sweet face of thine! O, as you are come from Wales?

Fal. Thou whorson mad compound majesty, by this light flesh and corrupt blood, thou art welcome.

Dol. How, you fat fool! I scorn you.

Poins. My lord, he will drive you out: your revenge and turn all to a merriment, if you take not the heat.

Prince. You whorson candle-stone, you how vilely did you speak of me even now before this honest, virtuous, civil gentleman!

Host. O, the blessing of your good heart, and so she is, by my troth.

Fal. Didst thou hear me?

Prince. Yea, and you knew me, as you did en you ran away by Gad's-hill: you knew as at your back, and spoke it on purpose to my patience.

Fal. No, no, no; not so; I did not think you wast within hearing.

Prince. I shall drive you then to confess wilful abuse; and then I know how to uile you.

Fal. No abuse, Hal, o' mine honour; no use.

Prince. Not to dispraise me, and call me
 ntler and bread-chipper and I know not what!

Fal. No abuse, Hal.

Poins. No abuse!

Fal. No abuse, Ned, i' the world; honest el, none. I dispraised him before the wicked, at the wicked might not fall in love with m; in which doing, I have done the part of careful friend and a true subject, and thy shur is to give me thanks for it. No abuse, lad: none, Ned, none; no, faith, boys, none.

Prince. See now, whether pure fear and pure cowardice doth not make thee wrong us virtuous gentlewoman to close with us, she of the wicked! is thine hostess here of the wicked? or is thy boy of the wicked? or onest Bardolph, whose zeal burns in his nose,
 f the wicked!

Poins. Answer thou dead elm, answer.

Fal. The fiend hath pricked down Bardolph recoverable; and his face is Lucifer's privy-hen, where he doth nothing but roast mal-vomus. For the boy, there is a good angel bout him; but the devil outbids him too.

Prince. For the women?

Fal. For one of them, she is in hell already, and burns poor souls. For the other, I owe her money; and whether she be damned for that, I know not.

Host. No, I warrant you.

Fal. No, I think thou art not; I think thou art quit for that. Marry, there is another inflictment upon thee, for suffering flesh to be aken in thy house, contrary to the law: for the which I think thou wilt bow!

Host. All victualiers do so: what's a joint mutation or two in a whole Lent!

Prince. You, gentlewoman,—

Fal. What says your grace!

Fal. His grace says that which his flesh tells against. [Knocking within.]

Host. Who knocks so loud at door? Look the door there, Francis.

Enter Peto.

Prince. Peto, how now! what news!

Peto. The king your father is at Westminster;

and there are twenty weak and wearied posts
 come from the north; and, as I came along,

I met and overtook a dozen captains,
 head-headed, sweating, knocking at the taverns,

and asking every one for Sir John Falstaff.

Prince. By heaven, Poins, I feel me much to blame,

so idly to put
 When tempest

Borne with black vapour, doth begin to melt
 And drop upon our bare unarmed heads.
 Give me my sword and cloak. Falstaff, good
 night.

[Exit Prince Henry, Poins, Peto,
 and Bardolph.]

Fal. Now comes in the sweetest morsel of the night, and we must hence and leave it un-picked. [Knocking within.] More knocking at the door!

Re-enter BARDOLPH.

How now! what's the matter?

Bard. You must away to court, sir, presently;
 A dozen captains stay at door for you.

Fal. [To the Page] Pay the musicians, sirrah. Farewell, hostess; farewell, Doll. You see, my good wenches, how men of merit are sought after: the underserver may sleep, when the man of action is called on. Farewell, good wenches: if I be not sent away post, I will see you again ere I go.

Dol. I cannot speak; if my heart be not ready to burst,—well, sweet Jack, have a care of thyself.

Fal. Farewell, farewell. [Exit Falstaff
 and Bardolph.]

Host. Well, fare thee well: I have known thee these twenty nine years, come peaseodtime; but an honest and truer-hearted man,
 —well, fare thee well.

Bard. [Within] Mistress Tearsheet!

Host. What's the matter!

Bard. [Within] Bid Mistress Tearsheet
 come to my master.

Host. O, run, Doll, run; run, good Doll:
 come. [She comes blubbered.] Yea, will you come, Doll?

[Exit.]

ACT III.

SCENE I. Westminster. The palace.

Enter the KING in his nightgown, with a Page.

King. Go call the Earls of Surrey and of Warwick;

But, ere they come, bid them o'er-read these letters.

And well consider of them: make good speed.

[Exit Page.]

How many thousand of my poorest subjects
 Are at this hour asleep! O sleep, O gentle sleep,

Nature's soft nurse, how have I frightened thee,
 That thou no more wilt weigh my eyelids down
 And steep my senses in forgetfulness!

Why rather, sleep, liest thou in smoky cribs,
 Upon uneasy pallets stretching thee,

And bound'st with bending night-lies to thy slumber,

Than in the perfumed chambers of the great,
 Under the canopy of costly state;

And bid'st with sound of sweetest melody:
 O thou dull god, why liest thou with the vile

In loathsome beds, and leavest the
 A watch-case or a common tapers

With thee upon the high and chilly mount,
 Seal up the sleep-boy's eyes, and rock his senses

In cradle of the rude imperious surge
And in the visitation of the winds,
Who take the ruffian billows by the top,
Curling their monstrous heads and hanging
them
With deafening clamour in the slippery clouds,
That, with the hurly, death itself awakes?
Carest thou, O partial sleep, give thy repose
To the wet sea-boy in an hour so rude,
And in the calmest and most stillest night,
With all appliances and means to boot,
Deny it to a king? Then happy low, lie down!
Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown. 31

Enter WARWICK and SURREY.

War. Many good morrows to your majesty!

King. Is it good morrow, lords?

War. 'Tis one o'clock, and past.

King. Why, then, good morrow to you all,
my lords.

Have you read o'er the letters that I sent you?

War. We have, my liege.

King. Then you perceive the body of our kingdom

How foul it is; what rank diseases grow
And with what danger, near the heart of it. 40

War. It is but as a body yet distemper'd;
Which to his former strength may be restored
With good advice and little medicine:
My Lord Northumberland will soon be cool'd.

King. O God! that one might read the book of fate,

And see the revolution of the times
Make mountains level, and the continent,
Wearied of solid firmness, melt itself
Into the sea! and, other times, to see
The beauteous girdle of the ocean 50
Too wide for Neptune's hips; how chances mock,

And changes fill the cup of alteration
With divers liquors! O, if this were seen,
The happiest youth, viewing his progress through,

What perils past, what crosses to ensue,
Would shut the book, and sit him down and die.
'Tis not ten years gone Since Richard and Northumberland, great
friends,

Did feast together, and in two years after
Were they at wars: it is but eight years since
This Percy was the man nearest my soul, 61
Who like a brother told in my affairs
And laid his love and life under my foot,
Yea, for my sake, even to the eyes of Richard Gave him defiance. But which of you was by—
You, cousin Nevil, as I may remember—

(To Warwick.)

When Richard, with his eye brimful of tears,
Then check'd and rated by Northumberland,
Did speak these words, now proved a prophecy?
—Northumberland, thou ladder by the which, 70
—cousin Bolingbroke ascends my throne;

I then, God knows, I had no such intent
It necessary to bow'd the state
I and greatness were compell'd to him:
'The time shall come,' thus did he follow it,
'The time will come, that foul sin, gathering
head,

30 Shall break into corruption: 'so went on,
Foretelling this same time's condition
And the division of our amity.

War. There is a history in all men's lives, as Figuring the nature of the times deceased;
The which observ'd, a man may prophesy
With a near aim, of the main chance of things;
As yet not come to life, which in their seeds
And weak beginnings lie intresured.
Such things become the hatch and brood of
time;

And by the necessary form of this
King Richard might create a perfect guess
That great Northumberland, then false to him,
Would of that seed grow to a greater falseness:
Which should not find a ground to root upon,
Unless on you.

King. Are these things then necessities?
Then let us meet them like necessities:
And that same word even now cries out on us.
They say the bishop and Northumberland
Are fifty thousand strong.

War. It cannot be, my lord;
Rumour doth double, like the voice and echo,
The numbers of the fear'd. Please it your grace

To go to bed. Upon my soul, my lord,
The powers that you already have sent forth
Shall bring this prize in very easily. 131
To comfort you the more, I have received
A certain instance that Glendower is dead.
Your majesty hath been this fortnight ill,
And these unseason'd hours perforce must add
Unto your sickness.

King. I will take your counsel:
And were these inward wars once out of hand,
We would, dear lords, unto the Holy Land.
(Exeunt.)

SCENE II. Gloucestershire. Before JUSTICE
SHALLOW's house.

*Enter SHALLOW and SILENCE, meeting;
MOULDY, SHADOW, WANT, FEEBLE, BULL-
CALF, a Servant or two with them.*

Shal. Come on, come on, come on, sir;
give me your hand, sir, give me your hand, sir: an early stirrer, by the rood! And doth my good cousin Silence?

Sil. Good morrow, good cousin Shallow.
Shal. And how doth my cousin, your fellow? and your fairest daughter and mine, my god-daughter Ellen?

Sil. Alas, a black owl, cousin Shallow!
Shal. By yea and nay, sir, I dare say my cousin William is become a good scholar: he is at Oxford still, is he not?

Sil. Indeed, sir, to my cost.
Shal. A' must, then, to the inn o' our shortly. I was once of Clement's inn, where think they will talk of mad Shallow yet.

Sil. You were called 'lusty Shallow' then,
cousin.

Shal. By the mass, I was called any thing;
and I would have done any thing indeed too,
and roundly too. There was I, and little John Doit of Beaufortshire, and Master George Barnes and Francis Pickhouse, and Will Squeale,

Cotswold man; you had not four such swinge-bucklers in all the inns o' court again; and I may say to you, we knew where the bona-robas were and had the best of them all at commandment. Then was Jack Falstaff, now Sir John, a boy, and page to Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk.

Sil. This Sir John, cousin, that comes hither anon about soldiers?

Shal. The same Sir John, the very same. I see him break Skogan's head at the court-gate, when a' was a crack not thus high; and the very same day did I fight with one Sampson Stockfish, a fruiterer, behind Gray's Inn. Jesu, Jesu, the mad days that I have spent! and to see how many of my old acquaintances are dead!

Sil. We shall all follow, cousin.

Shal. Certain, 'tis certain; very sure, very sure: death, as the Psalmist saith, is certain to all; all shall die. How a good yoke of bullocks at Stamford fair!

Sil. By my troth, I was not there.

Shal. Death is certain. Is old Double of your town living yet?

Sil. Dead, sir.

Shal. Jesu, Jesu, dead! a' drew a good bow; and dead! a' shot a fine shoot: John a Gaunt loved him well, and betted much money on his head. Dead! a' would have clapped i' the clout at twelve score; and carried you a forehand shaft a fourteen and fourteen and a half, that it could have done a man's heart good to see. How a score of ewes now!

Sil. Thereafter as they be: a score of good wies may be worth ten pounds.

Shal. And is old Double dead?

Sil. Here come two of Sir John Falstaff's men, as I think.

Enter BARDOLPH and one with him.

Bard. Good morrow, honest gentlemen: I beseech you, which is Justice Shallow?

Shal. I am Robert Shallow, sir: a poor acquire of this county, and one of the king's justices of the peace: what is your good pleasure with me?

Bard. My captain, sir, commends him to you; my captain, Sir John Falstaff, a tall gentleman, by heaven, and a most gallant leader.

Shal. He greets me well, sir. I knew him a good backwards man. How doth the good knight? may I ask how my lady his wife doth?

Bard. Sir, pardon: a soldier is better accommodated than with a wife.

Shal. It is well said, in faith, sir; and it is well said indeed too. Better accommodated! it is good; yea, indeed, is it: good phrases are surely, and ever were, very commendable. Accommodated! it comes of 'accommodo': very good; a good phrase.

Bard. Pardon me, sir; I have heard the word. Phrase call you it? by this good day, I know not the phrase; but I will maintain the word with my sword to be a soldier-like word, and a word of exceeding good command, by heaven. Accommodated; that is, when a man is, as they say, accommodated; or when a man is, being, whereby a' may be thought to be accommodated; which is an excellent thing.

Shal. It is very just.

Enter FALSTAFF.

Look, here comes good Sir John. Give me your good hand, give me your worship's good hand: by my troth, you like well and bear your years very well: welcome, good Sir John.

Fal. I am glad to see you well, good Master Robert Shallow: Master Surecard, as I think?

Shal. No, Sir John; it is my cousin Silence, in commission with me.

Fal. Good Master Silence, it well befits you should be of the peace.

Sil. Your good worship is welcome.

Fal. Fie! this is hot weather, gentlemen. Have you provided me here half a dozen sufficient men?

Shal. Marry, have we, sir. Will you sit?

Fal. Let me see them, I beseech you.

Shal. Where's the roll? where's the roll? where's the roll? Let me see, let me see, let me see. So, so, so, so, so, so, so: yea, marry, sir: Ralph Mouldy! Let them appear as I call: let them do so, let them do so. Let me see; where is Mouldy?

Moul. Here, an't please you.

Shal. What think you, Sir John? a good-limbed fellow; young, strong, and of good friends.

Fal. Is this name Mouldy?

Moul. Yea, an't please you.

Fal. 'Tis the more time thou wert used.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha! most excellent, i' faith! things that are mouldy lack use: very singular good! in faith, well said, Sir John, very well said.

Fal. Prick him.

Moul. I was pricked well enough before, an you could have let me alone: my old dame will be undone now for one to do her husbandry and her drudgery: you need not to have pricked me; there are other men fitter to go out than I.

Fal. Go to: peace, Mouldy; you shall go. Mouldy, it is time you were spent.

Moul. Spent!

Shal. Peace, fellow, peace; stand aside: know you where you are? For the other, Sir John: let me see: Simon Shadow!

Fal. Yea, marry, let me have him to sit under: he's like to be a cold soldier.

Shal. Where's Shadow?

Shad. Here, sir.

Fal. Shadow, whose son art thou?

Shad. My mother's son, sir.

Fal. Thy mother's son! like thy father's shadow: so the son of the shadow of the male: it is often so, but much of the father's substance!

Shal. Do you like him, Sir John?

Fal. Shadow will serve for summer; prick him, for we have a number of shadows to fill up the muster-book.

Shal. Thomas Wart!

Fal. Where's he?

Wart. Here, sir.

Fal. Is thy name Wart?
Wart. Yes, sir.
Fal. Thou art a very ragged wart.
Shal. Shall I prick him down, Sir John?
Fal. It were superfluous; for his apparel is built upon his back and the whole frame stands upon pins; prick him no more.
Shal. Ha, ha, ha! you can do it, sir; you can do it: I commend you well. Francis Feeble!

Fec. Here, sir.
Fal. What trade art thou, Feeble?
Fec. A woman's tailor, sir.
Shal. Shall I prick him, sir?
Fal. You may: but if he had been a man's tailor, he'd ha' pricked you. Wilt thou make as many holes in an enemy's battle as thou hast done in a woman's petticoat?

Fec. I will do my good will, sir: you can have no more.

Fal. Well said, good woman's tailor! well said, courageous Feeble! thou wilt be as valiant as the wrathful dove or most magnanimous mouse. Prick the woman's tailor: well, Master Shallow; deep, Master Shallow.

Fec. I would Wart might have gone, sir.
Fal. I would thou wert a man's tailor, that thou mightst mend him and make him fit to go. I cannot put him to a private soldier that is the leader of so many thousands: let that suffice, most forcible Feeble.

Fec. It shall suffice, sir.
Fal. I am bound to thee, reverend Feeble. Who is next?

Shal. Peter Bullcalf o' the green!
Fal. Yes, marry, let's see Bullcalf.
Bull. Here, sir.
Fal. Fore God, a likely fellow! Come, prick me Bullcalf till he roar again.

Bull. O Lord! good my lord captain.—
Fal. What, dost thou roar before thou art pricked?

Bull. O Lord, sir! I am a diseased man.
Fal. What disease hast thou?

Bull. A whoreson cold, sir, a cough, sir, which I caught with ringing in the king's affairs upon his coronation-day, sir.

Fal. Come, thou shalt go to the wars in a gown: we will have away thy cold; and I will take such order that thy friends shall ring for thee. Is here all?

Shal. Here is two more called than your number: you must have but four here, sir: and so, I pray you, go in with me to dinner.

Fal. Come, I will go drink with you, but I cannot tarry dinner. I am glad to see you, by my troth, Master Shallow.

Shal. O, Sir John, do you remember since we lay all night in the windmill in Saint George's field?

Fal. No more of that, good Master Shallow, no more of that.

Shal. Ha! 'twas a merry night. And is Jane Nightwork alive?

Fal. She lives, Master Shallow.
Shal. She never could away with me.

Fal. Never, never: she would always say she could not abide Master Shallow.

Shal. By the mass, I could anger her to the heart. She was then a bona-roba. Doth she hold her own well?

Fal. Old, old, Master Shallow.

Shal. Nay, she must be old; she cannot choose but be old; certain she's old; and had Robin Nightwork by old Nightwork before I came to Clement's Inn.

Sir. That's fifty five year ago.

Shal. Ha, cousin Silence, that thou hadst seen that that this knight and I have seen! Ha, Sir John, said I well?

Fal. We have heard the chimes at midnight, Master Shallow.

Shal. That we have, that we have, that we have; in faith, Sir John, we have; our watchword was 'Hem boys!' Come, let's to dinner; come, let's to dinner: Jesus, the days that we have seen! Come, come.

[Exeunt Falstaff and the Justices.
Bull. Good Master Corporal Bardolph, stand my friend; and here's four Harry ten shillings in French crowns for you. In very truth, sir, I had as lief be hanged, sir, as go; and yet, for mine own part, sir, I do not care; but rather, because I am unwilling, and, for mine own part, have a desire to stay with my friends; else, sir, I did not care, for mine own part, so much.

Bard. Go to; stand aside.

Moul. And, good master corporal captain, for my old dame's sake, stand my friend; she has nobody to do any thing about her when I am gone; and she is old, and cannot help herself: you shall have forty, sir.

Bard. Go to; stand aside.

Fec. By my troth, I care not: a man can die but once: we owe God a death: I'll ne'er bear a base mind: an't be my destiny, so; an't be not, so: no man is too good to serve his prince; and let it go which way it will, he that dies this year is quit for the next.

Bard. Well said; thou'rt a good fellow.

Fec. Faith, I'll bear no base mind.

[Re-enter FALSTAFF and the Justices.

Fal. Come, sir, which men shall I have!

Shal. Four of which you please.

Bard. Sir, a word with you: I have three pointed to free Mouldy and Bullcalf.

Fal. Go to; well.

Shal. Come, Sir John, which four will you have?

Fal. Do you choose for me.

Shal. Marry, then, Mouldy, Bullcalf, Feeble and Shadow.

Fal. Mouldy and Bullcalf: for you, Mouldy, stay at home till you are past service; and for your part, Bullcalf, grow till you come unto it: I will none of you.

Shal. Sir John, Sir John, do not yourself wrong: they are your likeliest men, and I would have you served with the best.

Fal. Will you tell me, Master Shallow, to choose a man? Care I for the limb, thence, the stature, bulk, and big members of a man? Give me the spirit, Master Shallow.

Here's Wart; you see what a ragged appearance it is: a' shall change you and change you

the nation of a pottle

Fondly brought here and foolishly sent hence.
Stake up our drums, pursue the scatter'd stray:
God, and not we, hath safely fought to-day.
Some guard these traitors to the block of death,
Treason's true bed and yielder up of breath.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Another part of the forest.

Alarm. Excursions. Enter FALSTAFF and COLEVILLE, meeting.

Fal. What's your name, sir! of what condition are you, and of what place, I pray?

Cole. I am a knight, sir; and my name is Coleville of the dale.

Fal. Well, then, Coleville is your name, a knight is your degree, and your place the dale: Coleville shall be still your name, a traitor your degree, and the dungeon your place, a place deep enough; so shall you be still Coleville of the dale.

Cole. Are not you Sir John Falstaff?

Fal. As good a man as he, sir, whose I am. Do ye yield, sir! or shall I sweat for you? If I do sweat, they are the drops of thy lovers, and they weep for thy death; therefore rouse up fear and trembling, and do observance to my mercy.

Cole. I think you are Sir John Falstaff, and in that thought yield me.

Fal. I have a whole school of tongues in this belly of mine, and not a tongue of them all speaks any other word but my name. An I had but a belly of any indifferency, I were simply the most active fellow in Europe: my womb, my womb, my womb, undoes me. Here comes our general.

Enter PRINCE JOHN OF LANCASTER, WESTMORELAND, BLUNT, and others.

Lan. The heat is past; follow no further now.

Call in the powers, good cousin Westmoreland.

[Exit Westmoreland.]
Now, Falstaff, where have you been all this while?

When every thing is ended, then you come: 30
These tardy tricks of yours will, on my life,
One time or other break some gallows back.

Fal. I would be sorry, my lord, but it should be thus: I never knew yet but rebuke and check was the reward of valour. Do you think me a swallow, an arrow, or a bullet? I have I, in my poor and old motion, the expedition of thought; I have speeded hither with the very earnest look of possibility; I have founded nine score and odd posts: and here, travel-tainted as I am, have in my pure and immaculate valour, taken Sir John Coleville at the dale, a most furious knight and valiant every. But what of that? he saw me, and yielded: that I may justly say, with the bookish fellow of Borne, 'I came, saw, and overcame.'

Lan. It was more of his courtesy than your deservings.

Fal. I know not: have he in, and have I yield him: and I beseech your grace, let it be booked with the rest of this day's deeds; or, by the Lord, I will have it in a particular ballad else, with mine own picture on the top on't, Coleville kissing my foot: to the which course if I be enforced, if you do not all show like gilt two-pences to me, and I in the clear sky of fame o'ershine you as much as the full moon doth the cinders of the element, which show like pins' heads to her, believe not the word of the noble: therefore let me have right, and let desert mount.

Lan. Thine's too heavy to mount.

Fal. Let it shine, then.

Lan. Thine's too thick to shine.

Fal. Let it do something, my good lord, that may do me good, and call it what you will.

Lan. Is thy name Coleville?

Cole. It is, my lord.

Lan. A famous rebel art thou, Coleville.

Fal. And a famous true subject took him.

Cole. I am, my lord, but as my betters are. That led me hither: and they been ruled by me. You should have won them dearer than you have.

Fal. I knew not how they sold themselves: but thou, like a kind fellow, garrest thyself away gratis; and I thank thee for thee.

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

Lan. Now, have you left pursuit?

West. Retreat is made and execution stay'd.

Lan. Send Coleville with his confederates To York, to present execution: to Blunt, lead him hence; and see you guard him sure.

And now dispatch we toward the court, my lords:

hear the king my father is sore sick: our news shall go before us to his majesty. Which, cousin, you shall hear to comfort him. And we with sober speed will follow you.

Fal. My lord, I beseech you, give me leave to go Through Gloucestershire: and, when you come to court,

Stand my good lord, pray, in your good report.

Lan. Fare you well, Falstaff; I, in any condition,

Shall better speak of you than you deserve.

[Exeunt all but Falstaff.]

Fal. I would you had but the wit: three better than your deservings. Good faith, this same young cock-brooded boy doth not love me; nor a man cannot make him laugh: but that's no marvel, he drinks no wine. There's never none of these demure boys come to court: for thin drink doth to overcast their faces, and making many fish-masks, that they I into a kind of some greenishness: and then, when they meet, they get together: they are generally fools and cowards; and therefore we should be too, but for information. I have short-catch with a two-fold operation in it. It sends me into the brain: then see them at the foolish and dull and heavy wags, which cannot stir a pin in themselves, but are so glibly full of sinews, they and their fellows

Under the counterfeit seal of God,
The subjects of his substitute, my father,
And both against the peace of heaven and him
Have here up-swarm'd them.

Arch. Good my Lord of Lancaster, so
I am not here against your father's peace;
But, as I told my Lord of Westmoreland,
The time misorder'd doth, in common sense,
Crowd us and crush us to this monstrous form,
To hold our safety up. I sent your grace
The parcels and particulars of our grief,
The which hath been with scorn shov'd from
the court.

Whereon this Hydra son of war is born;
Whose dangerous eyes may well be charm'd asleep

With grant of our most just and right desires,
And true obedience, of this madness cured,
Stoop tamely to the foot of majesty.

Mowb. If not, we ready are to try our fortunes
To the last man.

Hast. And though we here fall down,
We have supplies to second our attempt;
If they miscarry, theirs shall second them;
And so success of mischief shall be born
And heir from heir shall hold this quarrel up
While England shall have generation.

Lan. You are too shallow, Hastings, much too shallow.

To sound the bottom of the after-times.

West. Pleaseth your grace to answer them directly

How far forth you do like their articles.

Lan. I like them all, and do allow them
well.

And swear here, by the honour of my blood,
My father's purposes have been mistook,
And some about him have too lavishly
Wrested his meaning and authority.
My lord, these griefs shall be with speed redress'd;

Upon my soul, they shall. If this may please your powers unto their several counties,

As we will ours: and here between the armies
Let's drink together friendly and embrace,
That all their eyes may bear those tokens borne
Of our restored love and amity.

Arch. I take your princely word for these redressers.

Lan. I give it you, and will maintain my
word:

And thereupon I drink unto your grace.

Hast. Go, captain, and deliver to the army
This news of peace: let them have pay, and part.

I know it will well please them. His thee, captain.

Arch. To you, my noble Lord of Westmoreland.

I pledge your grace; and, if you know
guine

I'd to breed this present peace,
Drink to it: but my love to ye is more than hereafter.
not to part you.

West. I am glad of it.

Health to my lord and gentle cousin, Mowbray.
Mowb. You wish me health in very happy season;

For I am, on the sudden, something ill. So Arch. Against ill chances men are ever merry;

But heaviness foreruns the good event.

West. Therefore be merry, coz; since sudden sorrow

Serves to say thus, 'some good thing comes tomorrow.'

Arch. Believe me, I am passing light in spirit.
Mowb. So much the worse, if your own rule be true.

Lan. The word of peace is render'd: hark,
how they shout!

Mowb. This had been cheerful after victory.
Arch. A peace is of the nature of a conquest;

For then both parties nobly are subdued, so
And neither party loser.

Lan. Go, my lord,
And let our army be discharged too.

[Exit Westmoreland.]
And, good my lord, so please you, let our trains
March by us, that we may peruse the men

We should have coped withal.

Arch. Go, good Lord Hastings,
And, ere they be dismiss'd, let them march by.

[Exit Hastings.]
Lan. I trust, lords, we shall lie to-night
together.

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

Now cousin, wherefore stands our army still?

West. The leaders, having charge from you to stand.

Will not go off until they hear you speak. 100
Lan. They know their duties.

Re-enter HASTINGS.

Hast. My lord, our army is dispersed already:

Like youthful steers unyoked, they take their courses

East, west, north, south; or, like a school broke up.

Each hurries toward his home and sporting-
place.

West. Good tidings, my Lord Hastings; for the which

I do arrest thee, traitor, of high treason:

And you, lord archbishop, and you, lord Mowbray,

Of capital treason I attach you both.

Mowb. Is this proceeding just and honourable? 110

West. Is your assembly so?

Arch. Will you thus break your faith?

Lan. I pawn'd these men:
I promised you redress of these same grievances

Whereof you did complain; which, by mine
honour,

I will perform with a most Christian zeal.

But for you, rebels, look to taste the due
Meat for rebellion and such acts as yours.

Most shallowly did you think arms commence,

Fondly brought here and foolishly sent hence.
Stake up our drums, pursue the scatter'd stray:
God, and not we, hath safely fought to-day.
Some guard these traitors to the black death,
Treason's true bed and yielder up of breath.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Another part of the forest.

Alarm. Excursions. Enter FALSTAFF and COLEVILLE, meeting.

Fal. What's your name, sir! of what condition are you, and of what place, I pray?

Cole. I am a knight, sir; and my name is Coleville of the dale.

Fal. Well, then, Coleville is your name, a knight is your degree, and your place the dale: Coleville shall be still your name, a traitor your degree, and the dungeon your place, a place deep enough; so shall you be still Coleville of the dale.

Cole. Are not you Sir John Falstaff?

Fal. As good a man as he, sir, whose I am. Do ye yield, sir! or shall I sweat for you? If I do sweat, they are the drops of thy lovers, and they weep for thy death; therefore rouse up fear and trembling, and do observance to my mercy.

Cole. I think you are Sir John Falstaff, and in that thought yield me.

Fal. I have a whole school of tongues in this belly of mine, and not a tongue of them all speaks any other word but my name. An I had but a belly of any indifferency, I were simply the most active fellow in Europe: my wound, my wound, my wound, undoes me. Here comes our general.

Enter PRINCE JOHN OF LANCASTER, WESTMORELAND, BLUNT, and others.

Lan. The heat is past; follow no further now.

Call in the powers, good cousin Westmoreland.

[Exit Westmoreland.]
Now, Falstaff, where have you been all this while?

When every thing is ended, then you come: 30
These tardy tricks of yours will, on my life,
One time or other break some gallows back.

Fal. I would be sorry, my lord, but it should be thus: I never knew yet but rebuke and check was the reward of valour. Do you think me a swallow, an arrow, or a bullet? I have I, in my poor and old motion, the expedition of thought; I have speeded hither with the very argument in lack of possibility; I have founded nine score and odd posts: and here, travel-tainted as I am, have in my pure and immaculate valour taken Sir John Coleville at the dale, a most furious knight and valorous enemy. But what of that? he saw me, and yielded: that I may justly say, with the bookish fellow of Borne, 'I came, saw, and overcame.'

Lan. It was more of his courtesy than your deservings.

Fal. I know not: have he in, and have I yield him: and I beseech your grace, let it be booked with the rest of this day's deeds; or, by the Lord, I will have it in a particular ballad else, with mine own picture on the top on't, Coleville kissing my foot: to the which course if I be enforced, if you do not all show like gilt two-pences to me, and I in the clear sky of fame o'ershine you as much as the full moon doth the cinders of the element, which show like pins' heads to her, believe not the word of the noble: therefore let me have right, and let desert mount.

Lan. Thine's too heavy to mount.

Fal. Let it shine, then.

Lan. Thine's too thick to shine.

Fal. Let it do something, my good lord, that may do me good, and call it what you will.

Lan. Is thy name Coleville?

Cole. It is, my lord.

Lan. A famous rebel art thou, Coleville.

Fal. And a famous true subject took him.

Cole. I am, my lord, but as my betters are. That led me hither: and they been ruled by me. You should have won them dearer than you have.

Fal. I knew not how they sold themselves: but thou, like a kind fellow, garrest thyself away gratis; and I thank thee for thee.

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

Lan. Now, have you left pursuit?

West. Retreat is made and execution stay'd.

Lan. Send Coleville with his confederates to York, to present execution: to Blunt, lead him hence; and see you guard him sure.

And now dispatch we toward the court, my lords:

hear the king my father is sore sick: our news shall go before us to his majesty. Which, cousin, you shall hear to comfort him. And we with sober speed will follow you.

Fal. My lord, I beseech you, give me leave to go through Gloucestershire: and, when you come to court,

Stand my good lord, pray, in your good report.

Lan. Fare you well, Falstaff; I, in any condition,

Shall better speak of you than you deserve.

Fal. I would you had but the wit: 'twere better than your drunkenness. Good faith, this same young cock-brooded boy doth not love me; nor a man cannot make him laugh: but that's no marvel, he drinks no wine. There's never none of these demure boys come to court: for thin drink doth to overcast their faces, and making many fish-masks, that they I into a kind of some greenishness: and then, when they meet, they get together: they are generally fools and cowards; and therefore we should be too, but for information. I have short-catch with a two-fold operation in it: it sends me into the brain: (O! he that shall see the foolish and dull and crafty knave that can cunningly play the fool, and shake the great one in the negative fall of sin, the law, and the conscience.)

which, delivered o'er to the voice, the tongue, which is the birth, becomes excellent wit. The second property of your excellent sherris is, the warming of the blood; which, before cold and settled, left the liver white and pale, which is the badge of pusillanimity and cowardice; but the sherris warms it and makes it course from the inwards to the parts extreme: it illumineth the face, which as a beacon gives warning to all the rest of this little kingdom, man, to arm; and then the vital commoners and inland petty spirits muster me all to their captain, the heart, who, great and puffed up with this retinue, doth any deed of courage; and this valour comes of sherris. So that skill in the weapon is nothing without sack, for that sets it a-work; and learning a mere hoard of gold kept by a devil, till sack commences it and sets it in act and use. Hereof comes it that Prince Harry is valiant; for the cold blood he did naturally inherit of his father, he hath, like lean, sterile and bare land, manured, husbanded and tilled with excellent endeavour of drinking good and good store of fertile sherris, that he is become very hot and valiant. If I had a thousand sons, the first humane principle I would teach them should be, to forswear thin potations and to addict themselves to sack.

Enter BARDOLPH.

How now, Bardolph?

Bard. The army is discharged all and gone.

Fal. Let them go, I'll through Gloucestershire; and there will I visit Master Robert Shallow, esquire: I have him already tempering between my finger and my thumb, and shortly will I seal with him. Come away. [Exit.]

SCENE IV. Westminster. The Jerusalem Chamber.

Enter the KING, the PRINCES THOMAS OF CLARENCE and HUMPHREY OF GLOUCESTER, WARWICK, and others.

King. Now, lords, if God doth give successful end

To this debate that bleedeth at our doors,
We will our youth lead on to higher fields
And draw no swords but what are sanctified.
Our navy is address'd, our power collected,
Our substitutes in absence well invested,
And every thing lies level to our wish:
Only, we want a little personal strength;
And pains us, till these rebels, now afoot,
Come underneath the yoke of government. ¹⁰

War. Both which we doubt not but your majesty shall soon enjoy.

King. Humphrey, my son of Gloucester, Where is the prince your brother?

Glow. I think he's gone to hunt, my lord, at Windsor.

King. And how accompanied?

Glow. I do not know, my lord.

King. Is not his brother, Thomas of Clarence, with him?

Glow. No, my good lord; he is in presence here.

Clar. What would my lord and father?

King. Nothing but well to thee, Thomas of Clarence.

How chance thou art not with the prince thy brother?

He loves thee, and thou dost neglect him, Thomas;

Thou hast a better place in his affection

Than all thy brothers: cherish it, my!

And noble offices thou mayst effect

Of mediation, after I am dead,

Between his greatness and thy other brethren:

Therefore omit him not; blunt not his love,

Nor lose the good advantage of his grace

By seeming cold or careless of his will;

For he is gracious, if he be observed: ³⁰

He hath a tear for pity and a hand

Open as day for melting charity:

Yet notwithstanding, being incensed, he's flint,

As humorous as winter and as sudden

As flaws congealed in the spring of day.

His temper, therefore, must be well observed:

Chide him for faults, and do it reverently;

When you perceive his blood inclined to mirth;

But, being moody, give him line and scope;

Till that his passions, like a whale on ground,

Confound themselves with working. Learn ⁴¹

this, Thomas,

And thou shalt prove a shelter to thy friends,

A hoop of gold to bind thy brothers in,

That the united vessel of their blood,

Mingled with venom of suggestion—

As, force perforce, the age will pour it in—

Shall never leak, though it do work as strong

As acornium or rash gunpowder.

Clar. I shall observe him with all care and love.

King. Why art thou not at Windsor with him, Thomas? ⁵⁰

Clar. He is not there to-day; he dines in London.

King. And how accompanied? canst thou tell that?

Clar. With Poins, and other his continual followers.

King. Most subject is the fattest soil to weeds;

And he, the noble image of my youth,

Is overspread with them: therefore my grief

Stretches itself beyond the hour of death:

The blood weeps from my heart when I do shape

In forms imaginary the unguided days

And rotten times that you shall look upon ⁶⁰

When I am sleeping with my ancestors.

For when his headstrong riot hath no curb,

When rage and hot blood are his counsellors,

When means and lavish manners meet together,

O, with what wings shall his affections fly

Towards fronting peril and opposed decay!

War. My gracious lord, you look beyond him quite:

The prince but studies his companions

Like a strange tongue, wherein, to gain the language,

'Tis needful that the most immodest word ⁷⁰

Be look'd upon and learn'd; which once attain'd,

Your highness knows, comes to no further use
But to be known and hated. So, like gross terms,

The prince will in the perfectness of time
Cast off his followers; and their memory
Shall as a pattern or a measure live,
By which his grace must mete the lives of others.

Turning past evils to advantages.

King. 'Tis seldom when the bee doth leave her comb
In the dead carrion.

Enter WESTMORELAND.

Who's here? Westmoreland! So West. Health to my sovereign, and new happiness

Added to that that I am to deliver!
Prince John your son doth kiss your grace's
hand:

Mowbray, the Bishop Scroop, Hastings and all
Are brought to the correction of your law;
There is not now a rebel's sword unsheathed,
But Peace puts forth her olive every where.
The manner how this action hath been borne
Here at more leisure may your highness read,
With every course in his particular.

King. O Westmoreland, thou art a summer
bird,

Which ever in the haunch of winter sings
The lifting up of day.

Enter HARCOURT.

Look, here's more news.

Har. From enemies heaven keep your
majesty;

And, when they stand against you, may they fall

As those that I am come to tell you of!
The Earl Northumberland and the Lord Bar-dolph,

With a great power of English and of Scots,
Are by the sheriff of Yorkshire overthrown:
The manner and true order of the fight
This packet, please it you, contains at large.

King. And wherefore should these good news make me sick!

Will Fortune never come with both hands full,
But write her fair words still in foulest letters!
She either gives a stomach and no food;

Such are the poor, in health; or else a feast
And takes away the stomach; such are the rich,
That have abundance and enjoy it not.

I should rejoice now at this happy news;
And now my sight fails, and my brain is giddy:

O me! come near me; now I am much ill.

Glou. Comfort, your majesty!

Clar. O my royal father!

West. My sovereign lord, cheer up yourself, look up.

War. Be patient, princes; you do know,

these fits

Are with his highness very ordinary.

Stand from him, give him air; he'll straight be
well.

Clar. No, no, he cannot long hold out these pangs;

The incessant care and labour of his mind
Hath wrought the mure that should confine it in

So thin that life looks through and will break
out.

Glou. The people fear me; for they do observe

Unfather'd heirs and loathly births of nature:

The seasons change their manners, as the year

Had found some months asleep and leap'd them over.

Clar. The river hath thrice flow'd, no ebb between;

And the old folk, time's doting chronicles,
Say it did so a little time before

That our great-grandairs, Edward, sick'd and died.

War. Speak lower, princes, for the king recovers.

Glou. This apoplexy will certain be his end.

King. I pray you, take me up, and bear me
hence

Into some other chamber: softly, pray.

Exit.

SCENE V. Another chamber.

The KING lying on a bed: CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, WARWICK, and others in attendance.

King. Let there be no noise made, my gentle friends;

Unless some dull and favourable hand
Will whisper music to my weary spirit.

War. Call for the music in the other room.

King. Set me the crown upon my pillow
here.

Clar. His eye is hollow, and he changes
much.

War. Less noise, less noise!

Enter PRINCE HENRY.

Prince. Who saw the Duke of Clarence?

Clar. I am here, brother, full of heaviness.

Prince. How now! rain within doors, and none abroad!

How doth the king?

Glou. Exceeding ill.

Prince. Heard he the good news yet?

Glou. He alter'd much upon the hearing it.

Prince. If he be sick with joy, he'll recover without physic.

War. Not so much noise, my lords: sweet prince, speak low;

The king your father is disposed to sleep.

Clar. Let us withdraw into the other room.

War. Will't please your grace to go along with us?

Prince. No; I will sit and watch here by the
king.

Exit all but the Prince.

Why doth the crown lie there upon his pillow,
Being so troublesome a bedfellow?

O polish'd perturbation! golden care!

That keep'st the ports of slumber open wide

To many a watchful night! sleep with it now!

Yet not so sound and half so deeply sweet

As he whose brow with heavenly sleepers bound

Shakes out the watch of night. O majesty!

When thou dost pinch thy bearer, thou dost sit
Like a rich armour worn in heat of day,
That scalds with safety. By his gates of breath
There lies a downy feather which stirs not:
Did he expire, that light and weightless down Perforce must move. My gracious lord! my father!

This sleep is sound indeed: this is a sleep
That from this golden rigol hath divorced
So many English kings. Thy due from me
Is tears and heavy sorrows of the blood,
Which nature, love, and filial tenderness,
Shall, O dear father, pay thee plenteously:
My due from thee is this imperial crown,
Which, as immediate from thy place and blood,
Derives itself to me. Lo, here it sits,
Which God shall guard: and put the world's whole strength

Into one giant arm, it shall not force
This lineal honour from me: this from thee
Will I to mine leave, as 'tis left to me. [Exit.
King. Warwick! Gloucester! Clarence!

*Re-enter WARWICK, GLOUCESTER, CLARENCE,
and the rest.*

Clar. Doth the king call?

War. What would your majesty? How fares
your grace?

King. Why did you leave me here alone,
my lords?

Clar. We left the prince my brother here,
my liege,

Who undertook to sit and watch by you.

King. The Prince of Wales! Where is he?
let me see him:

He is not here.

War. This door is open: he is gone this way.
Glow. He came not through the chamber where we stay'd.

King. Where is the crown? who took it from my pillow?

War. When we withdrew, my liege, we left it here.

King. The prince hath ta'en it hence: go, seek him out.

Is he so hasty that he doth suppose
My sleep my death?

Find him, my Lord of Warwick: chide him
hither.

[Exit Warwick.]
This part of his conjoins with my disease,
And helps to end me. See, sons, what things
you are!

How quickly nature falls into revolt
When gold becomes her object!

For this the foolish over-careful fathers Have broke their sleep with thoughts, their brains with care.

Their bones with industry;
For this they have engross'd and piled up
The common'd heaps of strange-acquired gold;

For this they have been thoughtful to invest
Their sons with arms and martial exercises:

When, like the bee, sucking from every flower
The virtuous sweets,

Our thighs pack'd with wax, our mouths with poison.

We bring it to the hive, and, like the bee,
Are stung for our pains. This bitter taste

Yield his engrossments to the ending father: so

Re-enter WARWICK.

Now, where is he that will not stay so long
Till his friend sickness hath determined me?

War. My lord, I found the next room,

Washing with kindly tears his gentle cheek
With such a deep demeanour in great grief
That tyranny, which never quail'd but Would, by beholding him, have wash'd knife

With gentle eye-drops. He is coming hither.

King. But wherefore did he take away the crown?

Re-enter PRINCE HENRY.

Lo, where he comes. Come hither to me,
Harry.

Depart the chamber, leave us here alone.
[Exit Warw. and the rest.]

Prince. I never thought to hear you speak
again.

King. Thy wish was father, Harry, to that thought:

I stay too long by thee, I weary thee.
Dost thou so hunger for mine empty chair

That thou wilt needs invest thee with my honours

Before thy hour be ripe? O foolish youth!
Thou seek'st at the greatness that will overwhelm
thee.

Stay but a little; for my cloud of dignity
Is held from falling with so weak a wind

That it will quickly drop: my day is dim,
Thou hast stolen that which after some few hours

Were thine without offence; and at my death
Thou hast seal'd up my expectation:

Thy life did manifest thou loved'st me not,
And thou wilt have me die assur'd of it.

Thou hidest a thousand daggers in thy
thoughts,

Which thou hast whetted on thy steady heart,
To stab at half an hour of my life.

What! canst thou not forbear me half an hour?

Let all the tears that should bedew my hearse
Be drops of balm to sanctify thy head:

Only compound me with forgotten dust;
Give that which gave thee life unto the worms.

Pluck down my officers, break my decrees;
For now a time is come to mock at form:

Harry the Fifth is crown'd: up, vantage!
Down, royal state! all you sage counsellors,
hence!

And to the English court assemble now,
From every region, seas of idleness!

Now, neighbour confines, purge you of your scum:

Have you a ruffian that will swear, drink, dance,
Revel the night, rob, murder, and commit
The oldest sins the newest kind of ways?

Be happy, he will trouble you no more:
shall double glad his master's death.

England shall give him office, I

For the fifth Harry from curb'd license plucks
The muscle of restraint, and the wild dog
Shall flesh his tooth on every innocent.

O my poor kingdom, sick with civil blows!
When that my care could not withhold thy riots.

What wilt thou do when riot is thy care?
O, thou wilt be a wilderness again.

Peopled with wolves, thy old inhabitants!

Prince. O, pardon me, my liege! but for my tears,

The moist impediments unto my speech, 140
I had forestall'd this dear and deep rebuke
Ere you with grief had spoke and I had heard
The course of it so far. There is your crown;
And He that wears the crown immortally
Long guard it yours! If I affect it more Than as your honour and as your renown,
Let me no more from this obedience rise,
Which my most inward true and dutiful spirit
Teacheth, this prostrate and exterior bending.
God witness with me, when I here came in, 150
And found no course of breath within your
majesty,

How cold it struck my heart! If I do feign,
O, let me in my present wildness die
And never live to show the incredulous world
The noble change that I have purposed!
Coming to look on you, thinking you dead,
And dead almost, my liege, to think you were,
I spake unto this crown as having sense,
And thus upbraided it: 'The care on thee depending

Hath fed upon the body of my father; 160
Therefore, thou best of gold art worst of gold:
Other, less fine in carat, is more precious,
Preserving life in medicine potable;
But thou, most fine, most honour'd, most re-
nown'd,

Hast eat thy bearer up.' Thus, my most royal
liege,

Accusing it, I put it on my head,
To try with it, as with an enemy
That had before my face murder'd my father,
The quarrel of a true inheritor.

But if it did infect my blood with joy, 170
Or swell my thoughts to any strain of pride;
If any rebel or vain spirit of mine
Did with the least affection of a welcome
Give entertainment to the might of it,
Let God for ever keep it from my head
And make me as the poorest vassal is
That doth with awe and terror kneel to it!

King. O my son,
God put it in thy mind to take it hence,
That thou mightst win the more thy father's
love, 180

Plowing so wisely in excuse of it!
Come hither, Harry, sit thou by my bed;
And hear, I think, the very latest counsel
That ever I shall breathe. God knows, my son,
By what by-paths and indirect crook'd ways
I met this crown; and I myself know well
How troublesome it sat upon my head.
To thee it shall descend with better quiet,

For all the toil of these many years
With me into the earth. It

But as an honour snatch'd with boisterous
hand,

And I had many living to upbraid
My gain of it by their assistances;
Which daily grew to quarrel and to bloodshed,
Wounding supposed peace: all these bold fears
'hou see'st with peril I have answered;
'or all my reign hath been but as a scene
Acting that argument: and now my death
Changes the mode; for what in me was purchased, 200

'alls upon thee in a more fairer sort;
to thou the garland wear'st successively.
Yet, though thou stand'st more sure than I could do,

'hou art not firm enough, since griefs are green;

And all my friends, which thou must make thy
friends,

Have but their stings and teeth newly ta'en
out;

By whose fell working I was first advanced
And by whose power I well might lodge a fear

To be again displaced: which to avoid,
cut them off; and had a purpose now. 210

To lead out many to the Holy Land,
Least rest and lying still might make them look

Too near unto my state. Therefore, my Harry,
Be it thy course to busy giddy minds

With foreign quarrels; that action, hence borne
out,

May waste the memory of the former days.
More would I, but my lungs are wasted so

That strength of speech is utterly denied me.
How I came by the crown, O God forgive!

And grant it may with thee in true peace live!
Prince. My gracious liege, 220

You won it, wore it, kept it, gave it me;
Then plain and right must my possession be:

Which I with more than with a common pain
Gnash all the world will rightfully maintain.

Enter LORD JOHN OF LANCASTER.

King. Look, look, here comes my John of Lancaster.

Lon. Health, peace, and happiness to my royal father!

King. Thou bring'st me happiness and peace, son John;

But health, alas, with youthful wings is flown
From this bare wither'd trunk: upon thy sight

My worldly business makes a period. 230
Where is my Lord of Warwick?

Prince. My Lord of Warwick!

Re-enter WARWICK, and others.

King. Doth any name particular belong
Unto the lodging where I first did swear?

War. 'Tis call'd Jerusalem, my noble lord.

King. Lend be to God! even there my life must end.

It hath been prophesied to me many years
I should not die but in Jerusalem.

Which wayward I interpret the Holy Land;
But now see to that chamber; there I will lie,
In that Jerusalem shall Henry die. 240

ACT V.

SCENE I. Gloucestershire. SHALLOW'S house.

Enter SHALLOW, FAUSTAFF, BARDOLPH, and Page.Shal. By cock and pie, sir, you shall not away to-night. What, Davy, I say!Fal. You must excuse me, Master Robert Shallow.Shal. I will not excuse you; you shall not be excused; excuses shall not be admitted; there is no excuse shall serve; you shall not be excused. Why, Davy!Enter DAVY.Davy. Here, sir.Shal. Davy, Davy, Davy, Davy, let me see, Davy; let me see, Davy; let me see: yea, marry, William cook, bid him come hither. Sir John, you shall not be excused.Davy. Marry, sir, thus; those precepts cannot be served; and, again, sir, shall we sow the headland with wheat?Shal. With red wheat, Davy. But for William cook: are there no young pigeons?Davy. Yes, sir. Here is now the smith's note for shoeing and plough-irons.Shal. Let it be cast and paid. Sir John, you shall not be excused.Davy. Now, sir, a new link to the bucket must needs be had; and, sir, do you mean to stop any of William's wages, about the sack he lost the other day at Hinckley fair?Shal. A' shall answer it. Some pigeons, Davy, a couple of short-legged hens, a joint of mutton, and any pretty little tiny kickshaws, tell William cook.Davy. Doth the man of war stay all night, sir?Shal. Yea, Davy. I will use him well; a friend of the court is better than a penny in purse. Use his men well, Davy; for they are arrant knaves, and will backbite.Davy. No worse than they are backbitten, sir; for they have marvellous foul linen.Shal. Well conceited, Davy: about thy business, Davy.Davy. I beseech you, sir, to countenance William Visor of Woncot against Clement Fettes of the hill.Shal. There is many complaints, Davy, against that Visor; that Visor is an arrant knave, on my knowledge.Davy. I grant your worship that he is a knave, sir; but yet, God forbid, sir, but a knave should have some countenance at his friend's request. An honest man, sir, is able to speak for himself, when a knave is not. I have served your worship truly, sir, this eight years; and if I cannot once or twice in a quarter bear out a knave against an honest man, I have but a very little credit with your worship. The knave is mine honest friend, sir; therefore, I beseech your worship, let him be countenanced.Shal. Go to; I say he shall have no wrong. Look you, Davy. [Exit Davy.] Where are you, Sir John? Come, come, come, off with your boots. Give me your hand, Master Bardolph.

Bard. I am glad to see your worship.
Shal. I thank thee with all my heart, kind Master Bardolph; and welcome, my tall fellow [to the Page]. Come, Sir John.Fal. I'll follow you, good Master Robert Shallow. [Exit Shallow.] Bardolph, look to our horses. [Exit Bardolph and Page.] If I were sawed into quantities, I should make four dozen of such bearded hermits' staves as Master Shallow. It is a wonderful thing to see the semblable coherence of his men's spirits and his: they, by observing of him, do bear themselves like foolish justices; he, by conversing with them, is turned into a justice-like serving-man: their spirits are so married in conjunction with the participation of society that they flock together in consent, like so many wild-geese. If I had a suit to Master Shallow, I would humour his men with the imputation of being near their master: if to his men, I would curry with Master Shallow that no man could better command his servants. It is certain that either wise bearing or ignorant carriage is caught, as men take diseases, one of another: therefore let men take heed of their company. I will devise matter enough out of this Shallow to keep Prince Harry in continual laughter the wearing out of six fashions, which is four terms, or two actions, and a' shall laugh without intervallams. O, it is much that a lie with a slight oath and a jest with a sad brow will do with a fellow that never had the ache in his shoulders! O, you shall see him laugh till his face be like a wet cloak ill laid up!Shal. [Within] Sir John!Fal. I come, Master Shallow; I come. [Exit.]

SCENE II. Westminster. The palace

Enter WARWICK and the LORD CHIEF-JUSTICE, meeting.War. How now, my lord chief-justice! whither away?Ch. Just. How doth the king?War. Exceeding well; his cares are now all ended.Ch. Just. I hope, not dead.War. He's walk'd the way of nature; And to our purposes he lives no more.Ch. Just. I would his majesty had call'd me with him:

The service that I truly did his life

Hath left me open to all injuries.

War. Indeed I think the young king loves you not.Ch. Just. I know he doth not, and do arm myself.To welcome the condition of the time,
Which cannot look more hideously upon me
Than I have done it in my fantasy.Enter LANCASTER, CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, WESTMORELAND, and others.War. Here come the heavy limbs of dead Harry:

O that the living Harry had the temper
Of him, the worst of these three gentlemen!
How many nobles then should hold their places,
That must strike sail to spirits of vile sort!

Ch. Just. O God, I fear all will be over-turn'd!

Lan. Good morrow, cousin Warwick, good
morrow.

Glow. } Good morrow, cousin.
Clar. }

Lan. We meet like men that had forgot to speak.

War. We do remember; but our argument
Is all too heavy to admit much talk.

Lan. Well, peace be with him that hath made us heavy!

Ch. Just. Peace be with us, lest we be heavier!

Glow. O, good my lord, you have lost a friend indeed!

And I dare swear you borrow not that face
Of seeming sorrow, it is sure your own.

Lan. Though no man be assured what grace to find,

You stand in coldest expectation:
I am the sorrier; would 'twere otherwise.

Clar. Well, you must now speak Sir John Falstaff fair;

Which swims against your stream of quality.

Ch. Just. Sweet princes, what I did, I did in honour.

Led by the impartial conduct of my soul;

And never shall you see that I will beg ragged and forestall'd remission.

If truth and upright innocency fail me,
'Til to the king my master that is dead,

40 Not tell him who hath sent me after him.

War. Here comes the prince.

Enter KING HENRY the Fifth, attended.

Ch. Just. Good morrow; and God save your majesty!

King. This new and gorgeous garment, majesty,

is not so easy on me as you think.

Others, you mix your sadness with some fear:
his is the English, not the Turkish court;

of Amurath an Amurath succeeds,
but Harry Harry. Yet be sad, good brothers,

by my faith, it very well becomes you: 50
Narrow so royally in you appears

Till I will deeply put the fashion on

And wear it in my heart: why then, be sad;

But entertain no more of it, good brothers,
than a joint burden laid upon us all.

For me, by heaven, I bid you be assured,
'Til be your father and your brother too;

Let me but bear your love, I'll bear your cares:

Yet weep that Harry's dead; and so will I;

But Harry lives, that shall convert those tears
By number into hours of happiness. 60

Princes. We hope no other from your majesty.

King. You all look strangely on me; and you most;

You are, I think, assured I love you not.

Ch. Just. I am assured, if I be measured rightly,

Your majesty hath no just cause to hate me.

King. No!

How might a prince of my great hopes forget
So great indignities you laid upon me! 60

What! rate, rebuke, and roughly send to prison
The immediate heir of England! Was this easy!

May this be wash'd in Lethe, and forgotten!

Ch. Just. I then did use the person of your
father;

The image of his power lay then in me:
And, in the administration of his law,

Whiles I was busy for the commonwealth,
Your highness pleased to forget my place.

The majesty and power of law and justice,
The image of the king whom I presented;

And struck me in my very seat of judgement:
Whereon, as an offender to your father,

80 I gave bold way to my authority
And did commit you. If the dead were ill,
Be you contented, wearing now the garland,

To have a son set your decrees at naught,
To pluck down justice from your awful bench,

To trip the course of law and blunt the sword
That guards the peace and safety of your person;

Nay, more, to spurn at your most royal image
And mock your workings in a second body. 90

Question your royal thoughts, make the case
yours:

Be now the father and propose a son,
Hear your own dignity so much profaned,

See your most dreadful laws so loosely slighted,
Behold yourself so by a son disdain'd;

And then imagine me taking your part
And in your power soft silencing your son:

After this cold consideration, sentence me;
And, as you are a king, speak in your state

What I have done that misbecame my place,
My person, or my liege's sovereignty. 100

King. You are right, justice, and you weigh this well:

Therefore still bear the balance and the sword:
And I do wish your honours may increase,

Till you do live to see a son of mine
Offend you and obey you, as I did.

So shall I live to speak my father's words:
'Happy am I, that have a man so bold,

That dares do justice on my proper son;
And not less happy, having such a son,

That would deliver up his greatness so
Into the hands of justice.' You did commit me;

For which, I do commit into your hand
The unstained sword that you have used to bear;

With this remembrance, that you use the same
With the like bold, just and impartial spirit

As you have done against me. There is my
hand.

You shall be as a father to my youth:
My voice shall sound as you do pronounce me.

And I will stoop and humble my intents
To your well-pleased wise direction.

And, princes all, believe me, I beseech you:
My father is gone wild into his grave,

For in his tomb lie my afflictions;
And with his spirit only I survive.

To mock the expectation of the world,
To frustrate prophecies and to run out

Bottom opinion, who hath writ me down

After my seeming. The tide of blood in me
Hath proudly flow'd in vanity till now : 130
Now death is sure and ebb back to the sea,
Where it shall mingle with the state of floods
And flow henceforth in formal majesty.
Now call we our high court of parliament :
And let us choose such limbs of noble counsel,
That the great body of our state may go
In equal rank with the best govern'd nation ;
That war, or peace, or both at once, may be
As things acquainted and familiar to us ;
In which you, father, shall have foremost hand.
Our coronation done, we will accite, 141
As I before remember'd, all our state :
And, God consigning to my good intents,
No prince nor peer shall have just cause to say,
God shorten Harry's happy life one day !

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Gloucestershire. SHALLOW's orchard.

Enter FALSTAFF, SHALLOW, SILENCE, DAVY,
RANDOLPH, and the Page.

Shal. Nay, you shall see my orchard, where,
in an arbour, we will eat a last year's pippin
of my own grafting, with a dish of caraways, and so forth : come, cousin Silence : and then
to bed.

Fal. Fore God, you have here a goodly dwelling and a rich.

Shal. Barren, barren, barren ; beggars all, beggars all, Sir John : marry, good air. Spread,
Davy ; spread, Davy : well said, Davy. 150

Fal. This Davy serves you for good uses ;
he is your serving-man and your husband.

Shal. A good varlet, a good varlet, a very good varlet, Sir John : by the mass, I have drunk too much sack at supper : a good varlet.
Now sit down, now sit down : come, cousin.

Sil. Ah, sirrah ! quoth-a, we shall
Do nothing but eat, and make good cheer,
[Singing.]

And praise God for the merry year ;
When flesh is cheap and females dear, 160
And lusty lads roam here and there
So merrily,

And ever among so merrily.

Fal. There's a merry heart ! Good Master
Silence, I'll give you a health for that anon.

Shal. Give Master Bardolph some wine,
Davy.

Davy. Sweet sir, sir : I'll be with you anon ;
most sweet sir, sir. Master page, good master page, sir. Prologue ! What you want in meat, we'll have in drink : but you must bear ; the heart's all. [Exit.]

Shal. Be merry, Master Bardolph ; and, my little soldier there, be merry.

Sil. Be merry, be merry, my wife has all ;
[Singing.]

For women are shrews, both short and tall ;
Tis merry in hell when hounds was all,

And welcome hungry Shallow's ale.

Be merry, be merry.

Fal. I did not think Master Silence had been a man of this mettle. 171

Sil. Who, I ! I have been merry twice and once ere now.

Re-enter DAVY.

Davy. There's a dish of leather-coats for you.
[To Bardolph]

Shal. Davy !

Davy. Your worship ! I'll be with you straight [to Bardolph]. A cup of wine, sir !

Sil. A cup of wine that's brisk and fine,
[Singing.]

And drink unto the leman mine ;
And a merry heart lives long'a. 180

Fal. Well said, Master Silence.

Sil. An we shall be merry, now comes in the sweet o' the night.

Fal. Health and long life to you, Master
Silence.

Sil. Fill the cup, and let it come ; [Singing.]
I'll pledge you a mile to the bottom.

Shal. Honest Bardolph, welcome : if thou wantest any thing, and wilt not call, bewray thy heart. Welcome, my little tiny thief [to the Page], and welcome indeed too. I'll drink to Master Bardolph, and to all the cavaliers about London.

Davy. I hope to see London once ere I die.

Bard. An I might see you there, Davy.— Shal. By the mass, you'll crack a quart together, ha ! will you not, Master Bardolph !

Bard. Yea, sir, in a pottle-pot.

Shal. By God's lignens, I thank thee : the knave will stick by thee, I can assure thee that.
A will not out ; he is true bred.

Bard. And I'll stick by him, sir.

Shal. Why, there spoke a king. Look nothing : be merry. [Knocking within.] Look who's at door there, but who knocks !

[Exit Davy]

Fal. Why, now you have done me right.
[To Silence, seeing him take off a bumper.]

Sil. Do me right, [Singing.]
And dub me knight :
Samingo.

Is't not so !

Fal. Tis so.

Sil. Is't not ! Why then, say an old man can do somewhat.

Re-enter DAVY.

Davy. An't please your worship, there's one Pistol come from the court with news.

Fal. From the court ! let him come in.

Enter PISTOL.

How now, Pistol !

Pist. Sir John, God save you !

Fal. What wind blow you hither, Pistol !

Pist. Not the ill wind which blows no man to good. Sweet knight, thou art now one of the greatest men in this realm.

Sil. My'r lady, I think a' be, but Goodman
Puff of Barren.

Fal. Puff !
Puff in thy teeth, most recent court news !
Sir John, I am thy Pistol and thy friend,
And bettermaster than London's whores.

And tidings do I bring and lucky joys 190

And golden times and happy news of price.

Fal. I pray thee now, deliver them like a man of this world.

Pist. A souter for the world and worldlings base!

I speak of Africa and golden joys.

Fal. O base Assyrian knight, what is thy news?

Let King Cophetua know the truth thereof.

Sir. And Robin Hood, Scarlet, and John.

Pist. Shall dunghill curs confront the Helicons?

And shall good news be baffled?

Then, Pistol, lay thy head in Furies' lap.

Shal. Honest gentleman, I know not your breeding.

Pist. Why then, lament therefore.

Shal. Give me pardon, sir: if, sir, you come with news from the court, I take it there's but two ways, either to utter them, or to conceal them. I am, sir, under the king, in some authority.

Pist. Under which king, Basonian? speak, or die.

Shal. Under King Harry.

Pist. Harry the Fourth? or Fifth?

Shal. Harry the Fourth.

Pist. A souter for thine office!

Sir John, thy tender lambkin now is king;

Harry the Fifth's the man. I speak the truth:

When Pistol lies, do this; and fig me, like

The bragging Spaniard.

Fal. What is the old king dead?

Pist. As nail in door: the things I speak are just.

Fal. Away, Bardolph! saddle my horse.

Master Robert Shallow, choose what office thou wilt in the land, 'tis thine. Pistol, I will double-charge thee with dignities.

Bard. O joyful day!

would not take a knighthood for my fortune.

Pist. What! I do bring good news.

Fal. Carry Master Silence to bed. Master

Shallow, my Lord Shallow,—be what thou wilt;

I am fortune's steward—get on thy boots: we'll ride all night. O sweet Pistol! Away, Bardolph!

[Exit Bard.] Come, Pistol, utter more to me;

and withal devise something to do thyself good.

Look, look, Master Shallow: I know the young king is sick for me. Let us take any man's honour; the laws of England are at my commandment.

Blessed are they that have been my friends; and woe to my lord chief-justice!

Pist. Let vultures vile seize on his lungs also!

'Where is the life that late I led?' say they;

Why, here it is; welcome these pleasant days!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. London. A street.

Enter Bardolph, dragging in Hostess QUICKLY and Doll TRAMPER.

Host. No, thou art not grave; I would to God that I might die, that I might have thee hang'd; thou hast drawn my shoulder out of joint.

First Bead. The constables have delivered her over to me; and she shall have whipping-cheer enough, I warrant her: there hath been a man or two lately killed about her.

Doll. Nut-hook, nut-hook, you lie. Come in; I'll tell thee what, thou damned tripe-isag rascal, an the child I now go with do miscarry, thou wert better thou hadst struck thy mother, thou paper-faced villain.

Host. O the Lord, that Sir John were come! he would make this a bloody day to somebody. But I pray God the fruit of her womb miscarry!

First Bead. If it do, you shall have a dozen of cushions again; you have but eleven now. Come, I charge you both go with me; for the man is dead that you and Pistol beat amongst you.

Doll. I'll tell you what, you thin man in a censer, I will have you as soundly swung for this,—you blue-bottle rogue, you filthy furnished correctioner, if you be not swung, I'll forswear half-kirtles.

First Bead. Come, come, you she knight-errant, come.

Host. O God, that right should thus overcome might! Well, of surffiance comes ease.

Doll. Come, you rogue, come; bring me to a justice.

Host. Ay, come, you starved blood-hound.

Doll. Goodman death, goodman bones!

Host. Thou stony, thou!

Doll. Come, you thin thing; come, you rascal.

First Bead. Very well. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. A public place near Westminster Abbey.

Enter two Grooms, strewing rushes.

First Groom. More rushes, more rushes.

Sec. Groom. The trumpets have sounded twice.

First Groom. 'Twill be two o'clock ere they come from the coronation: dispatch, dispatch.

Enter FALSTAFF, SHALLOW, PISTOL, BARDOLPH, and Page.

Fal. Stand here by me, Master Robert Shallow; I will make the king do you grace; I will lean upon him as 't' comes by; and do but mark the countenance that he will give me.

Pist. God bless thy lungs, good knight.

Fal. Come here, Pistol; stand behind me.

O, if I had had time to have made new!

I would have busked the thousand's borrowed of you. But 'tis no matter; this show doth better: this doth infer the suit to see him.

Shal. It doth so.

Fal. It shows my earnestness of affection.

Shal. It doth so.

Fal. My devotion.

Shal. It doth, it doth, it doth.

Fal. As it were, to ride day and night; and not to deliberate, not to remember, not to have patience to chide me.

Shal. It is best, certainly.

Fal. But to stand stained with travel, and sweating with desire to see him; thinking of nothing else, putting all affairs else in oblivion, as if there were nothing else to be done but to see him.

Pist. 'Tis 'semper idem,' for 'obsque hoc nihil est': 'tis all in every part.

Shal. 'Tis so, indeed.

Pist. My knight, I will inflame thy noble liver,

And make thee rage.

Thy Doll, and Helen of thy noble thoughts,

Is in base durance and contagious prison;

Haled thither

By most mechanical and dirty hand:

Rouse up revenge from ebon den with fell

Alecto's snake.

For Doll is in. Pistol speaks nought but truth.

Fal. I will deliver her.

[Shouts within, and the trumpets sound.]

Pist. There roard's the sea, and trumpet-clangor sounds.

Enter the KING and his train, the LORD CHIEF-JUSTICE among them.

Fal. God save thy grace, King Hal! my royal Hal!

Pist. The heavens thee guard and keep, most royal imp of fame!

Fal. God save thee, my sweet boy!

King. My lord chief-justice, speak to that vain man.

Ch. Just. Have you your wits? know you what 'tis you speak?

Fal. My king! my, Jove! I speak to thee, my heart!

King. I know thee not, old man: fall to thy prayers;

How ill white hairs become a fool and jester!

I have long dream'd of such a kind of man,

So surfeit-swell'd, so old and so profane;

But, being awaked, I do despise my dream.

Make less thy body hence, and more thy grace:

Leave gormandizing; know the grave doth gape

For thee thrice wider than for other men.

Reply not to me with a fool-born jest:

Presume not that I am the thing I was;

For God doth know, so shall the world perceive,

That I have turn'd away my former self;

So will I those that kept me company.

When thou dost hear I am as I have been,

Approach me, and thou shalt be as thou wast,

The tator and the feeler of my riots:

Till then, I banish thee, on pain of death,

As I have done the rest of my misleaders,

Not to come near our person by ten mile.

For competence of life I will allow you,

That lack of means enforce you not to evil:

And, as we hear you do reform yourselves,

We will, according to your strengths and qualities,

Give you advancement. Be it your charge, my

lord,

To see perform'd the tenour of our word.

[Exit King, &c.]

Fal. Master Shallow, I owe you a thousand pounds.

Shal. Yea, marry, Sir John; which I beseech you to let me have home with me.

Fal. That can hardly be, Master Shallow. Do not you grieve at this; I shall be sent for in private to him: look you, he must seem thus to the world: fear not your advancements; I will be the man yet that shall make you great.

Shal. I cannot well perceive how, unless you should give me your doublet and stuff me out with straw. I beseech you, good Sir John, let me have five hundred of my thousand.

Fal. Sir, I will be as good as my word: this that you heard was but a colour.

Shal. A colour that I fear you will die in, Sir John.

Fal. Fear no colours: go with me to dinner, come, Lieutenant Pistol; come, Bardolph: I shall be sent for soon at night.

Re-enter PRINCE JOHN, the LORD CHIEF-JUSTICE; Officers with them.

Ch. Just. Go, carry Sir John Falstaff to the Fleet;

Take all his company along with him.

Fal. My lord, my lord,—

Ch. Just. I cannot now speak: I will hear you soon.

Take them away.

Pist. Si fortuna me tormenta, spero contenta. [Exit all but Prince John and the Chief-Justice.]

Lan. I like this fair proceeding of the king's:

He hath intent his wonted followers

Shall all be very well provided for;

But all are banish'd till their conversations

Appear more wise and modest to the world.

Ch. Just. And so they are.

Lan. The king hath call'd his parliament, my lord.

Ch. Just. He hath.

Lan. I will lay odds that, ere this year expire,

We hear our civil swords and native fire

As far as France: I heard a bird so sing,

Whose music, to my thinking, pleased the king.

Come, will you hence? [Exit.]

EPILOGUE.

Spoken by a Dancer.

First my fear; then my courtesy; last my speech. My fear is, your displeasure: my courtesy, my duty; and my speech, to beg your pardons. If you look for a good speech now, you undo me: for what I have to say is of mine own making; and what indeed I should say will, I doubt, prove mine own marring. Be it to the purpose, and so to the venture. Be it known to you, as it is very well, I was lately here in the end of a displeasing play, to pray your patience for it and to promise you a better. I meant indeed to pay you with this; which, if I like an ill venture is come unluckily home, I break, and you, my gentle creditors, know. Here I promised you I would be and have I committed my body to your mercies: take me some and

I will pay you some and, as most debtors do, promise you infinitely.

If my tongue cannot entreat you to acquit me, will you command me to use my legs? and yet that were but light payment. to dance out

One word more, I beseech you. If you be not too much cloyed with fat meat, our humble author will continue the story, with Sir John in it, and make you merry with fair Katharine of France: where, for any thing I know, Falstaff shall die of a sweat, unless already a' be killed with your hard opinions; for Oldcastle died a martyr, and this is not the man. My tongue is weary; when my legs are too, I will bid you good night: and so kneel down before you; but, in the mean time, I to pray for the queen.

SCENE: England; afterwards France.

PROLOGUE.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. O for a Muse of fire, that would ascend
The brightest heaven of invention,
A kingdom for a stage, princes to act
And monarchs to behold the swelling scene!
Then should the warlike Harry, like himself,
Assume the port of Mars; and at his heels,
Leash'd in like hounds, should famine, sword and fire

Crouch for employment. But pardon, gentles
all,

The flat unraised spirits that have dared
On this unworthy scaffold to bring forth
So great an object: can this cockpit hold
The vasty fields of France? or may we cram
Within this wooden O the very casques
That did affright the air at Agincourt?
O, pardon! since a crooked figure may
Atone in little place a million;
And let us, ciphers to this great account,
On your imaginary forces work.
Suppose within the girdle of these walls
Are now confined two mighty monarchies,
Whose high-pitched voices and abutting fronts
The purpled narrow ocean parts asunder:

Piece out our imperfections with your thoughts;
Into a thousand parts divide one man,
And make imaginary puissance;
Think, when we talk of horses, that you see
them
Printing their proud hoofs i' the receiving earth:
For 'tis your thoughts that now must deck our
kings,
Carry them here and there; jumping o'er times,
Turning the accomplishment of many years 30
Into an hour-glass: for the which supply,
Admit me Chorus to this history;
Who prologue-like your humble patience pray,
Gently to hear, kindly to judge, our play. [Exit]

ACT I.

SCENE I. London. An ante-chamber in the King's palace.

*Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY, and
the BISHOP OF ELY.*

Can. My lord, I'll tell you; that self bill is urged,
Which in the eleventh year of the last king's reign
Was, and had indeed against us pass'd.

But that the scrambling and unquiet time
Did push it out of farther question.

Ely. But how, my lord, shall we resist it now!

Cant. It must be thought on. If it pass against us,

We lose the better half of our possession:
For all the temporal lands which men devout
By testament have given to the church 10
Would they strip from us: being valued thus;
As much as would maintain, to the king's honour,

Full fifteen earls and fifteen hundred knights,
Six thousand and two hundred good esquires;
And, to relief of lazars and weak age,

A thousand pounds by the year: thus runs the bill.

Ely. This would drink deep.

Cant. 'Twould drink the cup and all. 20

Ely. But what prevention!

Cant. The king is full of grace and fair regard.

Ely. And a true lover of the holy church.

Cant. The courses of his youth promised it not.

The breath no sooner left his father's body,
But that his wildness, mortified in him,
Seem'd to die too; yea, at that very moment (Consideration, like an angel, came
And whipp'd the offending Adam out of him,
Leaving his body as a paradise. 30
To envelope and contain celestial spirits.
Never was such a sudden scholar made;
Never came reformation in a flood,
With such a heady currence, scouring faults;
Nor never Hydra-headed wilfulness
So soon did lose his seat and all at once
As in this king.

Ely. We are blessed in the change.

Cant. Hear him but reason in divinity,
And all-admiring with an inward wish

You would desire the king were made a prelate:

Hear him debate of commonwealth affairs, 40

You would say it hath been all in his study:

List his discourse of war, and you shall hear

A fearful battle render'd you in music:

Turn him to any cause of policy,

The guardian knot of it he will unloose,

Familiar as his garb: that, when he speaks,

The air, a charter'd libertine, is still,

And the mute wonder lurketh in men's ears,

To steal his sweet and honey'd sentences; 50

So that the art and practice part of life

Must be the mistress to this theoretic:

Which is a wonder how his grace should glean it.

Since his addition was to courses vain,

His companies unletter'd, rude and shallow,

His hours fill'd up with riots, banquets, sports,

And never noted in him any study,

Any retirement, any sequester'd life

From open haunts and popularity.

Ely. The strawberry grows underneath the nettle

And which comes best to thrive and ripen here

Neighbour'd by fruit of baser quality:

And so the prince obscured his contemplation
Under the veil of blindness; which, no doubt,
Grew like the summer grass, fastest by night,
Unseen, yet creative in his faculty.

Cant. It must be so: for miracles are ceased;
And therefore we must needs admit the means
How things are perfected.

Ely. But, my good lord,
How now for mitigation of this bill 70
Urged by the commons? Dost his majesty
Incline to it, or no?

Cant. He seems indifferent,
Or rather swaying more upon our part
Than cherishing the exhibitors against us;
For I have made an offer to his majesty,
Upon our spiritual convocation
And in regard of causes now in hand,
Which I have open'd to his grace at large,
As touching France, to give a greater sum
Than ever at one time the clergy yet 80
Did to his predecessors part withal.

Ely. How did this offer seem received, my lord?

Cant. With good acceptance of his majesty;
Save that there was not time enough to hear,
As I perceived his grace would fain have done,
The several and unhidden passages
Of his true titles to some certain dukedoms
And generally to the crown and seat of France
Derived from Edward, his great-grandfather.

Ely. What was the impediment that broke this off? 90

Cant. The French ambassador upon that instant

Craved audience; and the hour, I think, is come

To give him hearing: is it four o'clock?

Ely. It is.

Cant. Then go we in, to know his embassy;

Which I could with a ready guess declare.

Before the Frenchman speak a word of it.

Ely. I'll wait upon you, and I long to hear it. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. The same. The Presence chamber.

Enter KING HENRY, GLOUCESTER,

EXETER, WARWICK, WESTMORELAND,

Attendants.

K. Hen. Where is my gracious Lord of Canterbury?

Exe. Not here in presence.

K. Hen. Send for him, good uncle.

West. Shall we call to the ambassador, my
liege?

K. Hen. Not yet, my cousin: we would be resolved,

Before we hear him, of some things of weight.

That task our thoughts, concerning us and
France.

*Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY, and
the BISHOP OF ELY.*

Cant. God and his angels guard your sacred throne

And make you long become it!

K. Hen. Sure, we thank you.

My learned lord, we pray you to proceed
And justly and religiously unfold
Why the law Salique that they have in France
Or should, or should not, bar us in our claim:
And God forbid, my dear and faithful lord,
That you should fashion, wrest, or bow your reading.

Or nicely charge your understanding soul
With opening titles miscreant, whose right
Suits not in native colours with the truth;
For God doth know how many now in health
Shall drop their blood in approbation
Of what your reverence shall incite us to.
Therefore take heed how you impawn our person,

How you awake our sleeping sword of war:
We charge you, in the name of God, take heed;
For never two such kingdoms did contend
Without much fall of blood; whose guiltless drops

Are every one a woe, a sore complaint
'Gainst him whose wrongs give edge unto the swords

That make such waste in brief mortality.
Under this conjunction speak, my lord;
For we will hear, note and believe in heart
30 That what you speak is in your conscience wash'd

As pure as sin with baptism.

Cent. Then hear me, gracious sovereign, and you peers,

That owe yourselves, your lives and services
To this imperial throne. There is no bar
To make against your highness' claim to France
But this, which they produce from Pharamond,
'In terram Salicam mulieres ne succedant':
'No woman shall succeed in Salique land':

Which Salique land the French unjustly glose
To be the realm of France, and Pharamond
45 The founder of this law and female bar.
Yet their own authors faithfully affirm
That the land Salique is in Germany,
Between the floods of Sala and of Elbe;
Where Charles the Great, having subdued the Saxons,

There left behind and settled certain French;
Who, holding in disdain the German women
For some dishonest manners of their life,
Establish'd then this law: to wit, no female
50 Should be inheritrix in Salique land:
Which Salique, as I said, 'twixt Elbe and Sala,
Is at this day in Germany call'd Meisen.

Then doth it well appear the Salique law
Was not devised for the realm of France;
Nor did the French possess the Salique land
Until four hundred one and twenty years
After defunction of King Pharamond,
Idly supposed the founder of this law:
Who died within the year of our redemption
60 Four hundred twenty-six; and Charles the Great

Subdued the Saxons, and did seat the French
In the river Sala, in the year hundred five. Besides, their writers say,
1, which deposed Childeric,
2, general, being descended
3, which was daughter to King

Make claim and title to the crown of France.
Hugh Capet also, who usurp'd the crown
65 Of Charles the duke of Lorraine, sold heir male
Of the true line and stock of Charles the Great,
To find his title with some shows of truth, Though, in pure truth, it was corrupt and naught.

Convey'd himself as heir to the Lady Kingare, Daughter to Charlemain, who was the
To Lewis the emperor, and Lewis the son Of Charles the Great. Also King Lewis the Tenth,

Who was sole heir to the usurper Capet,
Could not keep quiet in his conscience,
Wearing the crown of France, till satisfied
80 That fair Queen Isabel, his grandmother,
Was lineal of the Lady Ermengare, Daughter to Charles the foresaid duke of Lorraine:

By the which marriage the line of Charles the Great

Was re-united to the crown of France.
So that, as clear as is the summer's sun,
King Pepin's title and Hugh Capet's claim,
King Lewis his satisfaction, all appear
To hold in right and title of the female;
So do the kings of France unto this day:
90 Howbeit they would hold up this Salique law
To bar your highness claiming from the female,
And rather choose to hide them in a net
Than amply to imbar their crooked titles
Usurp'd from you and your progenitors.

K. Hen. May I with right and conscience make this claim?

Cent. The sin upon my head, dread sovereign!

For in the book of Numbers it is writ,
When the man dies, let the inheritance
95 Descend unto the daughter. Gracious lord,
Stand for your own; unwind your bloody flag;
Look back into your mighty ancestors:
Go, my dread lord, to your great-grandfire's
tomb,

From whom you claim; invoke his warlike
spirit,

And your great-uncle's, Edward the Black
Prince.

Who on the French ground play'd a tragedy,
Making defeat on the full power of France,
Whiles his most mighty father on a hill
Stood smiling to behold his lion's whelp
100 Forge in blood of French nobility.

O noble English, that could entertain
With half their forces the full pride of France
And let another half stand laughing by,
All out of work and cold for action!

Ely. Awake remembrance of these valiant
dead

And with your puissant arm renew their feats:
You are their heir; you sit upon their throne;
The blood and courage that renown'd them
Runs in your veins; and my three-puissant
105 leg

Is in the very May-morn of his youth,
Hire for exploits and mighty enterprises.

Ere. Your brother kings and monarchs of the earth

Do all expect that you should rescue yourself,

As did the former lions of your blood.

West. They know your grace hath cause and means and might;

So hath your highness; never king of England
Had nobles richer and more loyal subjects, Whose hearts have left their bodies here in England

And lie pavilion'd in the fields of France.

Cam. O, let their bodies follow, my dear
liege,

With blood and sword and fire to win your right;

In aid whereof we of the spirituality
Will raise your highness such a mighty sum
As never did the clergy at one time
Bring in to any of your ancestors.

K. Hen. We must not only arm to invade the French,

But lay down our proportions to defend Against the Scot, who will make road upon us
With all advantages.

Cam. They of those marches, gracious
sovereign,

Shall be a wall sufficient to defend
Our inland from the pilfering borderers.

K. Hen. We do not mean the couraging snatchers only,

But fear the main intendment of the Scot,
Who hath been still a giddy neighbour to us;

For you shall read that my great-grandfather
Never went with his forces into France

But that the Scot on his unfurnish'd kingdom
Came pouring, like the tide into a breach,

With ample and brim fulness of his force, 150
Galling the gleaned land with hot assays,

Girding with grievous siege castles and towns;
That England, being empty of defence,

Hath shook and trembled at the ill neighbourhood.

Cam. She hath been then more fear'd than harm'd, my liege;

For hear her but exemplify herself:

When all her chivalry hath been in France

And she a mourning widow of her nobles,

She hath herself not only well defended

But taken and impounded as a stray 160
The King of Scots; whom she did send to
France.

To fill King Edward's fame with prisoner kings
And make her chronicle as rich with praise

As is the ooze and bottom of the sea

With sunken wreck and sumless treasures.

West. But there's a saying very old and true,

If that you will France win,

Then with Scotland first begin:

For once the eagle England being in prey,
To her unguarded nest the weasel Scot

Comes sneaking and so sucks her princely eggs,
Playing the mouse in absence of the cat,

To tear and havoc more than she can eat.

Etc. It follows then the cat must stay at home:

Yet that is but a crush'd necessity,

Since we have locks to safeguard necessities,

And pretty traps to catch the petty thieves:

While that the armed hand doth fight abroad,

The advised head defends them at home;

For government, though high and low and lower, 180

Put into parts, doth keep in one consent,

Congreeing in a full and natural close,

Like music.

Cam. Therefore doth heaven divide

The state of man in divers functions,

Setting endeavour in continual motion;

To which is fixed, as an aim or butt,

Obedience: for so work the honey-bees,

Creatures that by a rule in nature teach

The act of order to a peopled kingdom.

They have a king and officers of sorts;

Where some, like magistrates, correct at home,

Others, like merchants, venture trade abroad,

Others, like soldiers, armed in their stings,

Make boot upon the summer's velvet buds,

Which pillage they with merry march bring

home

To the tent-royal of their emperor;

Who, busied in his majesty, surveys

The singing maçons building roofs of gold,

The civil citizens kneading up the honey,

The poor mechanic porters crowding in

Their heavy burdens at his narrow gate,

The sad-eyed justice, with his early hum,

Delivering o'er to executors pale

The lazy yawning drone. I this infer,

That many things, having full reference

To one consent, may work contrariety:

As many arrows, loosed several ways,

Come to one mark; as many ways meet in one

town;

As many fresh streams meet in one salt sea;

As many lines close in the dial's centre;

So may a thousand actions, once afoot,

End in one purpose, and be all well borne

Without defeat. Therefore to France, my liege.

Divide your happy England into four;

Whereof take you one quarter into France,

And you withal shall make all Gallia shake.

If we, with thrice such powers left at home,

Cannot defend our own doors from the dog,

Let us be worried and our nation lose

The name of hardiness and policy. 200

K. Hen. Call in the messengers sent from the Dauphin. (Exeunt some Attendants.)

Now are we well resolved; and, by God's help,

And yours, the noble dukes of our power,

France being ours, we'll bend it to our awe,

Or break it all to pieces; or there we'll sit,

Ituling in large and ample camp.

O'er France and all her almost kingly dukes demons,

Or lay these bones in an unworthy urn,

Tomblous, with no remembrance over them:

Either our history shall with full mouth

Speak freely of our acts, or else our grave,

Like Turkish mutes, shall have a tongueless

mouth,

Not worshipp'd with a wazen epitaph.

Enter Ambassadors of France.

Now are we well prepared to know the pleasure

Of our fair cousin Dauphin; for we have

Your greeting in from him, not from the King.

First Amb. May I please your majesty to give us leave

Freely to render what we have in charge;
Or shall we sparingly show you far off
The Dauphin's meaning and our embassy? 240

K. Hen. We are no tyrant, but a Christian king;

Unto whose grace our passion is as subject
As are our wretches fetter'd in our prisons;

Therefore with frank and with uncurbed plainness

Tell us the Dauphin's mind.

First Amb. Thus, then, in few.

Your highness, lately sending into France,
Did claim some certain dukedoms, in the right
Of your great predecessor, King Edward the Third.

In answer of which claim, the prince our master

Says that you savour too much of your youth,
And bids you be advised there's nought in

France 251

That can be with a nimble galliard won;
You cannot revel into dukedoms there.

He therefore sends you, meeter for your spirit,
This tun of treasure; and, in lieu of this,

Desires you let the dukedoms that you claim
Hear no more of you. This the Dauphin speaks.

K. Hen. What treasure, uncle?

Eze. Tennis-balls, my liege.

K. Hen. We are glad the Dauphin is so pleasant with us;

His present and your pains we thank you for:
When we have match'd our rackets to these balls, 261

We will, in France, by God's grace, play a set Shall strike his father's crown into the hazard.

Tell him he hath made a match with such a wrangler

That all the courts of France will be disturb'd
With chaces. And we understand him well,

How he comes o'er us with our wilder days,
Not measuring what use we made of them.

We never valued this poor seat of England;
And therefore, living hence, did give ourself

To barbarous license; as 'tis ever common 271

That men are merrier when they are from home.

But tell the Dauphin I will keep my state,
Be like a king and show my sail of greatness

When I do rouse me in my throne of France:
For that I have laid by my majesty

And gladdied like a man for working-days,
But I will rise there with so full a glory

That I will dazzle all the eyes of France, 279

Yea, strike the Dauphin blind to look on us.
And tell the pleasant prince this mock of his

Hath turn'd his balls to gun-stones; and his goal 280

Shall stand apace charged for the wasteful vengeance

That shall fly with them: for many a thousand widows

Shall this his mock mock out of their dear husbands;

Many a mother from their sons, mock castles
down;

And some are yet unborn
That shall hiss come to curse the Dauphin's

But this lies all within the will of (

To whom I do appeal; and in whose name 290

Tell you the Dauphin I am coming
To vengeance as I may and to put it

My rightful hand in a well-hallow'd
So get you hence in peace; and

Dauphin

His jest will savour but of shallow wit,
When thousands weep more than did laugh

at it.

Convey them with safe conduct. Fare you well. [Exeunt Ambassadors.]

Eze. This was a merry message.

K. Hen. We hope to make the sender blush
at it.

Therefore, my lords, omit no happy hour 300

That may give furtherance to our expedition;
For we have now no thought in us but France.

Save those to God, that run before our business.
Therefore let our proportions for these wars

Be soon collected and all things thought upon
That may with reasonable swiftness add

More feathers to our wings: for, God before,
We'll chide this Dauphin at his father's door.

Therefore let every man now task his thought,
That this fair action may on foot be brought.

[Exeunt. Flourish.]

ACT II.

PROLOGUE.

Flourish. Enter Chorus.

Chor. Now all the youth of England are on fire,

And silken dalliance in the wardrobe lies:
Now thrive the armourers, and honour's thought

Reigns solely in the breast of every man:
They sell the pasture now to buy the horse,

Following the mirror of all Christian kings,
With winged heels, as English Mercuries.

For now sits Expectation in the air,
And hides a sword from hilts unto the point

With crowns imperial, crowns and coronets, 30
Promised to Harry and his followers.

The French, advised by good intelligence
Of this most dreadful preparation,

Shake in their fear and with pale policy
Seek to divert the English purposes.

O England! model to thy inward greatness,
Like little body with a mighty heart,

What mightest thou do, that honour would thee do,

Were all thy children kind and natural!
But see thy faults! France hath in thee found

out 30

A nest of hollow bosoms, which he fills
With treacherous crowns; and three corrupted

men,

One, Richard Earl of Cambridge, and the second,

Islop of Mowbray, and the third,
Jury, knight of Northumberland, gilt of France. O guilt indeed!

Confirm'd conspiracy with fearful France;
And by their hands this grace of kings must

die,

If hell and hold their

He take ship for France, and in Southampton.

Enlarge your patience on; and we'll digest
The abuse of distance; force a play:
The sum is paid; the traitors are agreed;
The king is set from London; and the scene
Is now transported, gentles, to Southampton;
There is the playhouse now, there must you sit:
And thence to France shall we convey you safe,
And bring you back, charming the narrow seas
To give you gentle pass; for, if we may,
We'll not offend one stomach with our play. 40
But, till the king come forth, and not till then,
Unto Southampton do we shift our scene.

[Exit.

SCENE I. London. A street.

Enter Corporal Nym and Lieutenant BARDOLPH.

Bard. Well met, Corporal Nym.

Nym. Good morrow, Lieutenant Bardolph.

Bard. What, are Ancient Pistol and you friends yet?

Nym. For my part, I care not: I say little;
but when time shall serve, there shall be smiles;
but that shall be as it may. I dare not fight;
but I will wink and hold out mine iron: it is a simple one; but what thought! it will toast cheese, and it will endure cold as another man's sword will: and there's an end. 11

Bard. I will bestow a breakfast to make you friends; and we'll be all three sworn brothers to France: let it be so, good Corporal Nym.

Nym. Faith, I will live so long as I may,
that's the certain of it; and when I cannot live
any longer, I will do as I may: that is my rest, that is the rendezvous of it.

Bard. It is certain, corporal, that he is married to Nell Quickly; and certainly she did you wrong: for you were troth-plight to her. 22

Nym. I cannot tell: things must be as they may: men may sleep, and they may have their throats about them at that time; and some say knives have edges. It must be as it may:
though patience be a tired mare, yet she will plod. There must be conclusions. Well, I cannot tell.

Enter PISTOL and Hostess.

Bard. Here comes Ancient Pistol and his wife: good corporal, be patient here. How now, mine host Pistol!

Pist. Here like, call'st thou me host?
Now, by this hand, I swear, I scorn the term:
Nor shall my Nell keep lodgers.

Host. No, by my troth, not long: for we cannot lodge and board a dozen or fourteen gentlemen that live honestly by the prick of their needles, but it will be thought we keep a bawdy house straight. [Nym and Pistol draw.] O well-a-day, lady, if he be not drawn now! we shall see villain, adultery and murder committed. 40

Bard. Good Hostess! good corporal! offer nothing here.

Nym. Fight.

Pist. Fight for thee, Iceland dog! thou pickear'd cur of Iceland!

Host. Good Corporal Nym, show thy valour, and put up your sword.

Nym. Will you shog off? I would have you solus.

Pist. 'Solus' agueous dog! O viper vile!
The 'solus' in thy most servacious face: 50
The 'solus' in thy tooth, and in thy throat,
And in thy hateful lungs, yea, in thy maw,
ard.

which is worse, within thy nasty mouth!
I do retort the 'solus' in thy bowels;
For I can take, and Pistol's cock is up,
And flashing fire will follow.

Nym. I am not Barbason; you cannot en-jure me. I have an humour to knock you indifferently well. If you grow foul with me, Pistol, I will scour you with my rapier, as I may, in fair terms: if you would walk off, I would prick your guts a little, in good terms, as I may: and that's the humour of it.

Pist. O braggart vile and damned furious wight!

The grave doth gape, and dotting death is near;
Therefore ex hale.

Bard. Hear me, hear me what I say: he that strikes the first stroke, I'll run him up to the hills, as I am a soldier. [Draws.]

Pist. An oath of mickle might; and fury shall abate. 70

Give me thy fist, thy fore-foot to me give:
Thy spirits are most tall.

Nym. I will cut thy throat, one time or other, in fair terms: that is the humour of it.

Pist. 'Couple a porge!'
That is the word. I thee defy again.

O bound of Caste, think'st thou may agone to get!

No; to the apital go,
And from the powdering-tub of infantry

Fetch forth the laser kite of Cressid's kind, 80
Doll Tearsheet as by name, and her expence
I have, and I will hold the quondam Quickly
For the only she; and—pauses, there's enough.
Go to.

Enter the Boy.

Boy. Mine host Pistol, you must come to my master, and you, Hostess: he is very sick, and would to bed. Good Hostess, wash the face between his sheets, and do the office of a warming-pan. Faith, he's very ill.

Bard. Away, you rogue!

Host. By my troth, he's pudding one of these his heart. Good husband, come. 90

[Exeunt Hostess and Boy.]
Bard. Come, shall I make you two friends?
We must to France together: why two men should we keep knives to cut one another's throats?

Pist. Let foods o'newell, and foods be forth hew'd on!

Nym. You'll pay me the ship's stowage? I am off yet, understanding?

Pist. Here is the maw that pays.

Nym. That now I will have: that's the humour of it.

Pist. As manhood shall compound: push home. [They draw.]

Bard. By this sword, he that makes the first thrust, I'll kill him; by this sword, I will.

Pist. Sword is an oath, and oaths must have their course.

Bard. Corporal Nym, an thou wilt be friends, be friends: an thou wilt not, why, then, be enemies with me too. Prithce, put up.

Nym. I shall have my eight shillings I won of you at betting?

Pist. A noble shalt thou have, and present pay;

And liquor likewise will I give to thee, And friendship shall combine, and brotherhood:

I'll live by Nym, and Nym shall live by me;

Is not this just? for I shall sutter lie Unto the camp, and profits will accrue.

Give me thy hand.

Nym. I shall have my noble?

Pist. In cash most justly paid.

Nym. Well, then, that's the humour of't.

Re-enter Hostess.

Host. As ever you came of women, come in quickly to Sir John. Ah, poor heart! he is so shaken of a burning quotidian tertian, that it is most lamentable to behold. Sweet men, come to him.

Nym. The king hath run bad humours on the knight; that's the even of it.

Pist. Nym, thou hast spoke the right; His heart is fracted and corroborate.

Nym. The king is a good king; but it must be as it may; he pases some humours and careers.

Pist. Let us condole the knight; for, lambkins, we will live.

SCENE II. Southampton. A council-chamber.

Enter EXETER, BEDFORD, and WESTMORELAND.

Bed. 'Fore God, his grace is bold, to trust these traitors.

Exe. They shall be apprehended by and by.

West. How smooth and even they do bear themselves!

As if allegiance in their bosoms sat, Crowned with faith and constant loyalty.

Bed. The king hath note of all that they intend.

By intercession which they dream not of.

Exe. Nay, but the man that was his bed-fellow,

Whom he hath dail'd and cloy'd with gracious favours,

That he should, for a foreign purse, so sell His sovereign's life to death and treachery.

Trumpets sound. Enter KING HENRY, SCAHOOP, CAMBRIDGE, GREY, and Attendants.

K. Hen. Now sit the wind fair, and we will aboard.

My Lord of Cambridge, and my kind Lord of Masham,

And you, my gentle knight, give me your thoughts:

Think you not that the powers we bear with us Will cut their passage through the force of France,

Doing the execution and the act For which we have in head assembled

Scroop. No doubt, my liege, if each man do his best.

K. Hen. I doubt not that; since we are well persuaded

We carry not a heart with us from hence That grows not in a fair consent with ours,

Nor leave not one behind that doth not wish Success and conquest to attend on us.

Cam. Never was monarch better fear'd and loved

Than is your majesty: there's not, I think, a subject

That sits in heart-grief and uneasiness Under the sweet shawe of your government.

Grey. True: those that were your father's enemies

Have steep'd their galls in honey and do serve you

With hearts create of duty and of zeal.

K. Hen. We therefore have great cause of thankfulness;

And shall forget the office of our hand, Sooner than quitance of desert and merit

According to the weight and worthiness.

Scroop. So service shall with steeld sinews toll,

And labour shall refresh itself with hope, To do your grace incessant services.

K. Hen. We judge no less. Uncle of Exeter, Enlarge the man committed yesterday,

That rail'd against our person: we consider It was excess of wine that set him on;

And on his more advice we pardon him.

Scroop. That's mercy, but too much security: Let him be punish'd, sovereign, lest example

Breed, by his sufferance, more of such a kind.

K. Hen. O, let us yet be merciful.

Cam. So may your highness, and yet punish too.

Grey. Sir,

You show great mercy, if you give him life, so After the taste of much correction.

K. Hen. Alas, your too much love and care of me

Are heavy orisons 'gainst this poor wretch! If little faults, proceeding on distemper,

Shall not be wink'd at, how shall we stretch our eye

When capital crimes, chew'd, swallow'd and digested,

Appear before us? We'll yet enlarge that man, Though Cambridge, Scroop and Grey, in their dear care And tender preservation of our person, Would have him punish'd. And now to our French causes:

Who are the late commissioners?

Cam. I one, my lord:

Your highness bids me ask for it to-day.

Scroop. So did you me, my liege.

Grey. And I, my royal sovereign.

K. Hen. Then, Richard Earl of Cambridge, there is yours;

There yours, Lord Scroop of Masham; and, sir knight,

Grey of Northumberland, this same is yours: read them; and know, I know your worthiness.

My Lord of Westmoreland, and uncle Exeter, We will aboard to night. Why, how now, gentlemen!

What see you in those papers that you lose So much complexion! Look ye, how they change!

Their cheeks are paper. Why, what read you there,

That hath so cowarded and chased your blood out of appearance!

Cam. I do confess my fault; And do submit me to your highness' mercy.

Grey. } To which we all appeal.

Scroop. }
K. Hen. The mercy that was quick in us but late,

By your own counsel is suppress'd and kill'd: So you must not dare, for shame, to talk of mercy;

For your own reasons turn into your bosoms, As dogs upon their masters, worrying you. See you, my princes and my noble peers, these English monsters! My Lord of Cambridge here,

You know how apt our love was to accord To furnish him with all appointments belonging to his honour; and this man hath, for a few light crowns, lightly conspired, And sworn unto the practices of France, To kill us here in Hampton: to the which this knight, no less for bounty bound to us than Cambridge is, hath likewise sworn.

But, O, What shall I say to thee, Lord Scroop! thou cruel, Ungrateful, savage and inhuman creature!

How that didst bear the key of all my counsels, and knew'st the very bottom of my soul,

That almost might have coin'd me into gold, couldst thou have practised on me for thy use!

How it is possible, that foreign hire should out of thee extract one spark of evil!

That might annoy my finger! 'Tis so strange, That though the truth of it stands off as gross

As black and white, my eye will scarcely see it. Treason and murder ever kept together,

As two yoke-devils sworn to either's purpose, Working so grossly in a natural cause,

That admiration did not hoop at them: But thou, against all proportion, didst bring in Wonder to wait on treason and on murder: And

|| All other devils that suggest by treasons

Do blotch and bungle up damnation

With patches, colours, and with fumes being

Fetch'd

From glittering countenances of piety:

But he that temper'd these bodies thus stand up,

Have thee no instance why thou shouldst do treason,

Unless to dub thee with the name of traitor. 120

If that same demon that hath gull'd thee thus should with his lion gait walk the whole world,

He might return to vasty Tartar back, And tell the legions 'I can never win

A soul so easy as that Englishman's'. How hast thou with jealousy infected

The sweetness of affiance! Show men dutiful! Why, so didst thou: seem they grave and learned!

Why, so didst thou: come they of noble family! Why, so didst thou: seem they religious! 130

Why, so didst thou: or are they spare in diet, Free from gross passion or of mirth or anger,

Constant in spirit, not swerving with the blood, I amish'd and deck'd in modest complement,

Not working with the eye without the ear, And but in purged judgement trusting neither!

Such and so finely bolted didst thou seem: And thus thy fall hath left a kind of blot,

To mark the full-fraight man and best indued With some suspicion. I will weep for thee; 140

For this revolt of thine, methinks, is like Another fall of man. Their faults are open:

Arrest them to the answer of the law; And God acquit them of their practices!

Exc. I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Richard Earl of Cambridge.

I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Henry Lord Scroop of Masham.

I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Thomas Grey, knight, of Northumberland. 150

Scroop. Our purposes God justly hath discovered;

And I repent my fault more than my death; Which I beseech your highness to forgive,

Although my body pay the price of it. Cam. For me, the gold of France did not seduce:

Although I did admit it as a motive The sooner to effect what I intended:

But God be thanked for prevention; Which I in suffrance heartily will rejoice,

Beseeching God and you to pardon me. 160

Grey. Never did faithful subject more rejoice

At the discovery of most dangerous treason Than I do at this hour joy o'er myself,

Prevented from a damned enterprise: My fault, but not my body, pardon, sovereign.

K. Hen. God quit you in his mercy! Hear your sentences.

You have conspired against our royal person, Join'd with an enemy proclaim'd and from his coffers

Received the golden earnest of our death: Wherein you would have sold your king to slaughter, His princes and his peers to servitude,

His subjects to oppression and contempt And his whole kingdom into desolation.

Touching our person seek we no revenge; But we our kingdom's safety must so maintain

Wherein ruin you have sought, that to us here We do deliver you. Get you therefore hence

Four miserable wretches, to your death!

The taste whereof, God of his mercy give
You patience to endure, and true repentance :so
Of all your dear offences! Bear them hence.

[Exeunt Cambridge, Scroop and Grey, guarded.]

Now, lords, for France; the enterprise whereof
Shall be to you, as us, like glorious.
We doubt not of a fair and lucky war,
Since God so graciously hath brought to light
This dangerous treason lurking in our way
To hinder our beginnings. We doubt not now
But every rub is smoothed on our way.
Then forth, dear countrymen: let us deliver
Our puissance into the hand of God, 190
Putting it straight in expedition.
Cheerly to sea; the signs of war advance:
No king of England, if not king of France.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. London. Before a tavern.

Enter PISTOL, Hostess, NYM, BARDOLPH, and Boy.

Host. Prithce, honey-sweet husband, let me bring thee to Staines.

Pist. No; for my manly heart doth yearn.
Bardolph, be blithe: Nym, rouse thy vaulting veins:

Boy, bristle thy courage up; for Falstaff he
is dead,

And we must yearn therefore.

Bard. Would I were with him, where-soever he is, either in heaven or in hell!

Host. Nay, sure, he's not in hell: he's in Arthur's bosom, if ever man went to Arthur's bosom. A' made a finer end and went away an it had been any christom child; a' parted even just between twelve and one, even at the turning o' the tide: for after I saw him fumble with the sheets and play with flowers and smile upon his fingers' ends, I knew there was but one way; for his nose was as sharp as a pen, and a' babbled of green fields. 'How now,
Sir John!' quoth I: 'what, man! be o' good cheer. So a' cried out 'God, God, God!' three or four times. Now I, to comfort him, bid him a' should not think of God; I hoped there was no need to trouble himself with any such thoughts yet. So a' bade me lay more clothes on his feet: I put my hand into the bed and felt them, and they were as cold as any stone;
then I felt to his knees, and they were as cold as any stone, and so upward and upward, and all was as cold as any stone.

Nym. They say he cried out of sack.

Host. Ay, that a' did.

Bard. And of women.

Host. Nay, that a' did not.

Boy. Yea, that a' did; and said they were devil incarnate.

Host. A' could never abide carnation; 'twas a colour he never liked.

A' said once, the devil would have him

Host. A' did in some sort, indeed, handle women; but then he was rheumatic, and talked of the pains of Babylon.

Boy. Do you not remember, a' saw a fine stick upon Bardolph's nose, and a' said it was a black soul burning in hell-fire!

Bard. Well, the fiend is gone that maintained that fire: that's all the riches I got in his service.

Nym. Shall we abog? the king will be gone from Southampton.

Pist. Come, let's away. My love, give me thy lips.

Look to my chattels and my movables;

Let senses rule; the word is 'Pitch and Pay':

Trust none;

For oaths are straws, men's faiths are water-cakes,

And hold-fast is the only dog, my duck:

Therefore, (aveto be thy counsellor.

Go, clear thy crystals. Yoke-fellows in arms,

Let us to France: like home-leechea, my boys,

To suck, to suck, the very blood to suck!

Boy. And that's but unwholesome food, they say.

Pist. Touch her soft mouth, and march.

Bard. Farewell, hostess. [Kissing her]

Nym. I cannot kiss, that is the humour of it; but, adieu.

Pist. Let housewifery appear: keep close, I thee command.

Host. Farewell; adieu. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. France. The KING's palace.

Flourish. Enter the FRENCH KING, the DAU-PHIN, the DUKES of BERRY and BRETAGNE, the CONSTABLE, and others.

Fr. King. Thus comes the English with full power upon us;

And more than carefully it us concerns

To answer royally in our defence.

Therefore the Dukes of Berry and of Bretagne,

Of Brabant and of Orleans, shall make forth,

And you, Prince Dauphin, with all swift dispatch,

To line and new repair our towns of war
With men of courage and with means defendant;

For England his approaches makes as fierce

As waters to the sucking of a gulf.

It fits us then to be as provident

As fear may teach us out of late examples

Left by the fatal and neglected English

Upon our fields.

Dau. My most redoubted father,

It is most meet we arm us 'gainst the foe;

For peace itself should not so dull a kingdom.

Though war our not known quarrels were in question,

But that defence, musters, preparations,

Should be maintain'd, assembled and collected,

As were a war in expectation.

Therefore, I say 'tis meet we all go forth

To view the sick and feeble parts of France:

And let us do it with no show of fear;

No, with no more than if we heard that England

Were busied with a Whilom morris-dance:

For, my good boys, she is an ill-dancer.

Her sceptre is unskilfully borne.

By a vain, silly, shallow, senseless youth.

That fear oftentimes her neck.

Con. O peace, Prince Dauphin!
You are too much mistaken in this king:
Question your grace the late ambassadors,
With what great state he heard their embassy,
How well supplied with noble counsellors,
How modest in exception, and withal
How terrible in constant resolution,
And you shall find his vanities forespent
Were but the outside of the Roman Brutus,
Covering discretion with a coat of folly;
As gardeners do with ordure hide those roots
That shall first spring and be most delicate. 40

Daup. Well, 'tis not so, my lord high constable;
But though we think it so, it is no matter:
In cases of defence 'tis best to weigh
The enemy more mighty than he seems:
So the proportions of defence are fill'd;
Which of a weak and niggardly projection
Doth, like a miser, spoil his coat with scanting
A little cloth.

Fr. King. Think we King Harry strong;
And, princes, look you strongly arm to meet
him.
The kindred of him hath been flesh'd upon us;
And he is bred out of that bloody strain 51
That haunted us in our familiar paths:
Witness our too much memorable shame
When Cressy battle fatally was struck,
And all our princes captived by the hand
Of that black name, Edward, Black Prince of Wales;

Whiles that his mountain air, on mountain
standing,
Up in the air, crown'd with the golden sun,
Saw his heroic seed, and smiled to see him,
Mangle the work of nature and deface 60
The patterns that by God and by French
fathers
Had twenty years been made. This is a stem
Of that victorious stock; and let us fear
The native mightiness and fate of him.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Ambassadors from Harry King of England
Do crave admittance to your majesty.

Fr. King. We'll give them present audience.
Go, and bring them.

[Errant Messenger and certain Lords.]
You see this chase is hotly follow'd, friends.

Daup. Turn head, and stop pursuit; for coward dogs

Most spend their mouths when what they seem to threaten 70

Runs far before them. Good my sovereign,
Take up the English short, and let them know
Of what a monarchy you are the head:
Self-love, my liege, is not so vile a sin
As self-neglecting.

Re-enter Lords, with EXETER and train.

Fr. King. From our brother England!
Exe. From him; and thus he greets your majesty.

He wills you, in the name of
That you divest yourself, and
The borrow'd glories that by

By law of nature and of nations, long 80
To him and to his heirs; namely, the crown
And all wide-stretched honours that pertain
By custom and the ordinance of times Unto the crown of France. That you may know

'Tis no minister nor no awkward claim,
Pick'd from the worm-holes of long-vanish'd
days,

Nor from the dust of old oblivion raked,
He sends you this most memorable line,
In every branch truly demonstrative;

Willing you overlook this pedigree: 90
And when you find him evenly derived
From his most famed of famous ancestors,
Edward the Third, he bids you then resign
Your crown and kingdom, indirectly held
From him the native and true challenger.

Fr. King. Or else what follows?

Exe. Bloody constraint; for if you hide the crown

Even in your hearts, there will he rake for it:
Therefore in fierce tempest is he coming,
In thunder and in earthquake, like a Jove, 100
That, if requiring fail, he will compel;
And bids you, in the bowels of the Lord,
Deliver up the crown, and to take mercy
On the poor souls for whom this hungry war
Opens his vasty jaws; and on your head
Turning the widows' tears, the orphans' cries,
The dead men's blood, the pining maidens'
groans,

For husbands, fathers and betrothed lovers,
That shall be swallow'd in this controversy.

This is his claim, his threatening, and my message; 110

Unless the Dauphin be in presence here,
To whom expressly I bring greeting too.

Fr. King. For us, we will consider of this further:

To-morrow shall you hear our full intent
Back to our brother England.

Daup. For the Dauphin,
I stand here for him: what to him from England!

Exe. Scorn and defiance; alight regard,
contempt,

And any thing that may not misbecome
The mighty sender, doth he prize you at.

Thus says my king: an if your father's highness 120

Do not, in grant of all demands at large,
Sweeten the bitter mock you sent his majesty,
He'll call you to so hot an answer of it,
That caves and wombly vaultings of France
Shall chide your trespass and return your mock
In second accent of his ordinance.

Daup. Say, if my father render fair return,
It is against my will: for I desire
Nothing but odds with England: to that end,
As matching to his youth and valour, 130
I did present him with the Paris bells.

Exe. He'll make your Paris Louvre chains for it.

Were it the mistress-court of mighty Europe;
And, be assured, you'll find a difference
As we his subjects have in wonder found
Between the promise of his greater days

And these he masters now: now he weighs
 Even to the utmost grain: that you shall read.

In your own homes, if he stay in France.

Fr. King. To-morrow shall you know our mind at full.

Env. Dispatch us with all speed, lest that our king

Come here himself to question our delay;
 For he is footed in this land already.

Fr. King. You shall be soon dispatch'd with fair conditions:

A night is but small breath and little pause
 To answer matters of this consequence.

[Flourish. Exeunt.]

ACT III

PROLOGUE.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. Thus with imagined wing our swift scene flies

In motion of no less celerity Than that of thought. Suppose that you have seen

 The well-appointed king at Hampton pier
 Embark his royalty; and his brave fleet

With silken streamers the young Phœbus
 fawning:

Play with your fancies, and in them behold
 Upon the humpen tackle ship-boys climbing;

Hear the shrill whistle which doth order give
 To sounds confused: behold the thredden sails,

Borne with the invisible and creeping wind,
 Draw the huge bottoms through the furrow'd sea,

 Breasting the lofty surge: O, do but think

You stand upon the rivage and behold
 A city on the inconstant billows dancing:

For so appears this fleet majestical
 Holding due course to Harfleur. Follow, follow:

Grapple your minds to sterneage of this navy,
 And leave your England, as dead midnight still,

Guarded with grandaires, babies and old women,
 Either past or not arrived to pith and puissance;

For who is he, whose chin is but enrich'd
 With one appearing hair, that will not follow

These snail'd and choice-drawn cavaliers to France?

Work, work your thoughts, and therein see _____ no on their carriages,

 With fatal mouths gaping on girded Harfleur.

Suppose the ambassador from the French comes back;

Tells Henry that the king doth offer him
 Catherine his daughter, and with her, to dowry,

Some petty and unprofitable dukedoms.

The offer likes not: and the nimble gunner
 With blackcock now the devilish cannon touches.

[Alarum, and chambers go off.
 And _____ all before them. Still be kind,
 And _____ our performance with your mind.

[Exit.]

SCENE I. France. Before Harfleur.

Alarum. Enter KING HENRY, EXETER, BEDFORD, GLOUCESTER, and Soldiers, with scaling-ladders.

K. Hen. Once more unto the breach, dear friends, once more;

Or close the wall up with our English dead.
 In peace there's nothing so becomes a man

As modest stillness and humility;
 But when the blast of war blows in our ears,

Then imitate the action of the tiger;
 Stiffen the sinews, summon up the blood,

Disguise fair nature with hard-favour'd rage;
 Then lend the eye a terrible aspect;

Let it pry through the portage of the head
 Like the brass cannon; let the brow o'erwhelm

it
 As fearfully as doth a galled rock

O'erhang and jutty his confounded base,
 Swill'd with the wild and wasteful ocean.

Now set the teeth and stretch the nostril wide,
 Hold hard the breath and bend up every spirit

To his full height. On, on, you noblest English, Whose blood is fet from fathers of war-proof!

Fathers that, like so many Alexanders,
 Have in these parts from morn till even fought

And sheathed their swords for lack of argument:
 Dishonour not your mothers; now attest

That those whom you call'd fathers did beget
 you.

Be copy now to men of grosser blood,
 And teach them how to war. And you, good yeomen,

 Whose limbs were made in England, show us

here
 The mettle of your pasture; let us swear

That you are worth your breeding; which I doubt not;

For there is none of you so mean and base,
 That hath not noble lustre in your eyes.

I see you stand like greyhounds in the slips,
 Straining upon the start. The game's afoot:

Follow your spirit, and upon this charge
 Cry 'God for Harry, England, and Saint

George!'
 [Exeunt. Alarum, and chambers go off.]

SCENE II. The same.

Enter Nym, BARDOLPH, PISTOL, and Boy.

Bard. On, on, on, on, on! to the breach!
 to the breach!

Nym. Pray thee, corporal, stay: the knocks are too hot; and, for mine own part, I have not a case of liver; the humour of it is too hot, that is the very plain-song of it.

Pist. The plain-song is most just; for humours do abound;

Knocks go and come; God's vials drop and
 die;

And sword and shield,
 In bloody field,

Doth win immortal fame.
Boy. Would I were!

I would give all my safety,

Pist. And I:

If wishes would prevail with me,
My purpose should not fall with me,
But thither would I hie.

Boy. As duly, but not as truly,
As bird doth sing on bough.

Enter FLUELLEN.

Mrs. Up to the breach, you dogs! avaunt, you cullions! [Driving them forward.]

Pist. Be merciful, great duke, to men of mould.

Abate thy rage, abate thy manly rage,
Abate thy rage, great duke!

Good bawcock, bate thy rage; use lenity, sweet chuck!

Nym. These be good humours! your honour wins bad humours. [Exeunt all but Boy.]

Boy. As young as I am, I have observed these three swashers. I am boy to them all three: but all they three, though they would serve me, could not be man to me; for indeed three such antics do not amount to a man.
For Bardolph, he is white-livered and red-faced;
by the means whereof a faces it out, but fights not. For Pistol, he hath a killing tongue and a quiet sword; by the means whereof a breaks words, and keeps whole weapons. For Nym, he hath heard that men of few words are the best men; and therefore he scorns to say his prayers, lest a' should be thought a coward;
but his few bad words are matched with as few good deeds; for a never broke any man's head but his own, and that was against a post when he was drunk. They will steal any thing, and call it purchase. Bardolph stole a lute-case, bore it twelve leagues, and sold it for three half-pence. Nym and Bardolph are sworn brothers in sitching, and in Calais they stole a fire-shovel: I knew by that piece of service the men would carry coals. They would have me as familiar with men's pockets as their gloves or their handkerchers: which makes much against my manhood, if I should take from another's pocket to put into mine; for it is plain pecketing up of wrongs. I must leave them, and seek some better service: their villany goes against my weak stomach, and therefore I must cast it up. [Exit.]

Re-enter FLUELLEN, GOWER following.

Gow. Captain Fluellen, you must come presently to the mines: the Duke of Gloucester would speak with you.

Flu. To the mines! tell you the duke, it is not so good to come to the mines; for, look you, the mines is not according to the disciplines of the war: the concavities of it is not sufficient; for, look you, th' adversary, you may discuss unto the duke, look you, is digt himself four yard under the countermines: by Cheshu, I think a' will plow up all, if there is not better directions.

Gow. The Duke of Gloucester, to whom the order of the siege is given, is altogether directed by an Irishman, a very valiant gentleman, I faith.

Flu. It is Captain Macmorris, is it not?

Gow. I think it be.

Flu. By Cheshu, he is an ass, as in the world: I will verify as much in his beard: he has no more directions in the true disciplines of the wars, look you, of the Roman disciplines, than is a puppy-dog.

Enter MACMORRIS and Captain JAMY.

Gow. Here a' comes; and the Scots captain,
Captain Jamy, with him.

Flu. Captain Jamy is a marvellous valorous gentleman, that is certain; and of great expedition and knowledge in th' aunchient wars, upon my particular knowledge of his directions:
by Cheshu, he will maintain his argument as well as any military man in the world, in the disciplines of the pristine wars of the Romans.

Jamy. I say gud-day, Captain Fluellen.

Flu. God-den to your worship, good Captain James.

Gow. How now, Captain Macmorris! have you quit the mines! have the pioneers given o'er?

Mrs. By Cheshu, la! tish ill done: the work ish give over, the trumpet sound the retreat.
By my hand, I swear, and my father's soul, the work ish ill done; it ish give over: I would have blowed up the town, so Cheshu save me, la! in an hour: O, tish ill done, tish ill done;
by my hand, tish ill done!

Flu. Captain Macmorris, I beseech you now, will you voutsafe me, look you, a few dispu-tations with you, as partly touching or concerning the disciplines of the war, the Roman wars, in the way of argument, look you, and friendly communication; partly to satisfy my opinion, and partly for the satisfaction, look you, of my mind, as touching the direction of the military discipline: that is the point.

Jamy. It shall be very gud, gud faith, gud captains bath: and I shall quit you with gud
leve, as I may pick occasion: that shall I, marry.

Mac. It is no time to discourse, so Cheshu save me: the day is hot, and the weather, and the wars, and the king, and the dukes: it is no time to discourse. The town is beseeched, and the trumpet call us to the breach; and we talk, and, be Cheshu, do nothing: 'tis shame for us all: so God sa' me, 'tis shame to stand still: it is shame, by my hand: and there is threats to be cut, and works to be done; and there ish nothing done, so Cheshu as me, la!

Jamy. By the mees, are these eyes of mine take themselves to slumber, ay 'll do gud service, or ay 'll lig' i' the grund for it; ay, or go to death;
and ay 'll pay 't as valorously as I may, that shall
I surely do, that is the truth and the long Marry, I wad fain hear some question between you tway.

Flu. Captain Macmorris, I think, look you, under your correction, there is not many of your nation—

Mac. Of my nation! What ish my nation?
Is a villain, and a bastard, and a knave, and a rascal—What ish my nation? Who hath not my nation!

Flu. Look you, if you take the matter wise then is meant, Captain Macmorris, I venture I shall think you do not use me well.

that affability as in discretion you ought to use me, look you; being as good a man as yourself, both in the disciplines of war, and in the derivation of my birth, and in other particularities.

Mac. I do not know you so good a man as myself: so Christ save me, I will cut off your head.

Gow. Gentlemen both, you will mistake each other.

Jammy. Al! that's a foul fault.

[A parley sounded.]

Gow. The town sounds a parley. 149

Flu. Captain Macmorris, when there is more better opportunity to be required, look you, I will be so bold as to tell you I know the disciplines of war; and there is an end. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. The same. Before the gates. The Governor and some Citizens on the walls; the English forces below. Enter KING HENRY and his train.

K. Hen. How yet resolves the governor of the town?

This is the latest parley we will admit: Therefore to our best mercy give yourselves; Or like to men proud of destruction Duty us to our worst: for, as I am a soldier, A name that in my thoughts becomes me best, If I begin the battery once again, I will not leave the half-achieved Harfleur Till in her ashes she lie buried. The gates of mercy shall be all shut up, 10 And the flesh'd soldier, rough and hard of heart, In liberty of bloody hand shall range With conscience wide as hell, mowing like grass Your fresh-fair virgins and your flowering infants.

What is it then to me, if impious war, Array'd in flames like to the prince of fiends, Do, with his smirch'd complexion, all fell feats Enlink'd to waste and desolation? What is 't to me, when you yourselves are cause, If your pure maidens fall into the hand 20 Of hot and forcing violation? What rein can hold licentious wickedness When down the hill he holds his fierce career? We may as bootless spend our vain command Upon the enraged soldiers in their spoil As send precepts to the leviathan To come ashore. Therefore, you men of Harfleur,

Take pity of your town and of your people, Whilst yet his soldiers are in my command; Whilst yet the cool and temperate wind of grace 30 O'erblows the filthy and contagious clouds Of heady murder, spoil and villany.

If not, why, in a moment look to see The blind and bloody soldier with foul hand Dulle the locks of your shrill-shrieking daughters;

Your fathers taken by the silver beards, And their most reverend heads dash'd to the walls,

And your unpeopled citadels left to the enemy, split upon pikes,

Whilst the mad mothers with their howls confused

Do break the clouds, as did the wives of Jewry At Herod's bloody-hunting slaughtermen. 41

What say you? will you yield, and this avoid, Or, guilty in defence, be thus destroy'd?

Gow. Our expectation hath this day an end: The Dauphin, whom of succours we entreated, Returns us that his powers are yet not ready To raise so great a siege. Therefore, great king,

We yield our town and lives to thy soft mercy. Enter our gates; dispose of us and ours; For we no longer are defensible.

K. Hen. Open your gates. Come, uncle Exeter,

Go you and enter Harfleur; there remain, And fortify it strongly against the French: Use mercy to them all. For us, dear uncle, The winter coming on and sickness growing Upon our soldiers, we will retire to Calais. To-night in Harfleur will we be your guest; To-morrow for the march are we address'd.

[Flourish. The King and his train enter the town.]

SCENE IV. The French King's palace.

Enter KATHARINE and ALICE.

Kath. Alice, tu as été en Angleterre, et tu parles bien le langage.

Alice. Un peu, madame. Kath. Je te prie, m'enseigner; il faut que j'apprenne à parler. Comment appelez-vous la main en Anglois?

Alice. La main? elle est appelée de hand. Kath. De hand. Et les doigts?

Alice. Les doigts? ma foi, j'oublie les doigts; mais je me souviendrai. Les doigts? je pense qu'ils sont appelés de fingers; oui, de fingers.

Kath. La main, de hand; les doigts, de fingers. Je pense que je suis le bon écolier; j'ai gagné deux mots d'Anglois vitelement. Comment appelez-vous les ongles?

Alice. Les ongles? nous les appelons de nails.

Kath. De nails. Écoutez; dites-moi, si je parle bien: de hand, de fingers, et de nails.

Alice. C'est bien dit, madame; il est fort bon Anglois. 20

Kath. Dites-moi l'Anglois pour le bras. Alice. De arm, madame.

Kath. Et le coude? Alice. De elbow.

Kath. De elbow. Je m'en fais la répétition de tous les mots que vous m'avez appris dès à présent.

Alice. Il est trop difficile, madame, comme je pense.

Kath. Excusez-moi, Alice; écoutez: de hand, de fingers, de nails, de arms, de bilbow. 31

Alice. De elbow, madame. Kath. O Seigneur Dieu, je m'en oublie! de elbow. Comment appelez-vous le col?

Alice. De neck, madame. Kath. De neck. Et le menton?

Alice. De chin.

Kath. De sin. Le col, de nick; le menton, de sin.

Alice. Oui. Sauf votre honneur, en vérité, vous prononcez les mots aussi droit que les nautis d'Angleterre.

Kath. Je ne doute point d'apprendre, par la grace de Dieu, et en peu de temps.

Alice. N'avez vous pas déjà oublié ce que je vous ai enseigné?

Kath. Non, je réciterai à vous promptement: de hand, de fingers, de mails,—

Alice. De nails, madame.

Kath. De nails, de arm, de elbow.

Alice. Sauf votre honneur, de elbow.

Kath. Ainsi dis-je; de elbow, de nick, et de sin. Couramment appelez-vous le pied et la robe?

Alice. De foot, madame; et de coun.

Kath. De foot et de coun! O Seigneur Dieu! ce sont mots de son mauvais, corruptible, gros, et impudique, et non pour les dames d'honneur d'user: je ne voudrais prononcer ces mots devant les seigneurs de France pour tout le monde. Voh! le foot et le coun! Néanmoins, je réciterai une autre fois ma leçon ensemble: de hand, de fingers, de nails, de arm, de elbow, de nick, de sin, de foot, de coun.

Alice. Excellent, madame!

Kath. C'est assez pour une fois: allons-nous à diner. [Exit.

SCENE V. The same.

Enter the KING OF FRANCE, the DAUPHIN, the DUKE OF BOURBON, the CONSTABLE OF FRANCE, and others.

Fr. King. 'Tis certain he hath pass'd the river Somme.

Con. And if he be not fought withal, my lord,

Let us not live in France; let us quit all And give our vineyards to a barbarous people.

Dau. O Dieu vivant! shall a few sprays of us,

The emptying of our fathers' luxury, Our actions, put in wild and savage stock, Spirt up so suddenly into the clouds, And overlook their grafters!

Bour. Normans, but bastard Normans, Norman bastards!

Mort de ma vie! if they march along Unfought withal, but I will sell my dukedom, To buy a slobbery and a dirty farm In that nook-shotten isle of Albion.

Con. Dieu de batailles! where have they this mettle?

Is not their climate foggy, raw and dull, In whom, as in despite, the sun looks pale, Killing their fruit with frowns! Can sodden water,

A drench for sur-rein'd jades, their barley-broth.

Despoet their cold blood to such valliant heat! And shall our quick blood, spirited with wine, seem frosty? O, for honour of our land,

Let us not hang like roping icicles Upon our houses' thatch, whilst a more frosty people

Sweat drops of gallant youth in our rich fields Poor we may call them in their native lords.

Dau. By faith and honour, Our madams mock at us, and plainly say Our mettle is bred out and they will give Their bodies to the lust of English youth To new-store France with bastard warriors.

Bour. They bid us to the English dancing-schools,

And teach lavoltas high and swift corantos; Saying our grace is only in our heels, And that we are most lofty runaways.

Fr. King. Where is Montjoy the herald! speed him hence:

Let him greet England with our sharp defiance. Up, princes! and, with spirit of honour edged More sharper than your swords, hie to the field: Charles Delabreth, high constable of France; You Dukes of Orleans, Bourbon, and of Berri, Alençon, Brabant, Bar, and Burgundy; Jaques Chatillon, Rambours, Vandemont, Beaumont, Grandpré, Roussi, and Fauconberg, Foix, Lestrale, Bouciquault, and Charolois; High dukes, great princes, barons, lords and knights,

For your great seats now quit you of great shames.

Bar Harry England, that sweeps through our land

With pennons painted in the blood of Harfleur: Rush on his host, as doth the melted snow

Upon the valleys, whose low vassal seat

The Alps doth spit and void his rheum upon: Go down upon him, you have power enough,

And in a captive chariot into Rouen Bring him our prisoner.

Con. This becomes the great. Sorry am I his numbers are so few,

His soldiers sick and famish'd in their march, For I am sure, when he shall see our army,

He'll drop his heart into the sink of fear And for achievement offer us his ransom.

Fr. King. Therefore, lord constable, haste on Montjoy,

And let him say to England that we send To know what willing ransom he will give.

Prince Dauphin, you shall stay with us in Rouen.

Dau. Not so, I do beseech your majesty.

Fr. King. Be patient, for you shall remain with us.

Now forth, lord constable and princes all, And quickly bring us word of England's fall.

[Exit.

SCENE VI. The English camp in Picardy.

Enter GOWER and FLUELLEN, meeting.

Gow. How now, Captain Fluellen! come you from the bridge?

Flu. I assure you, there is very excellent services committed at the bridge.

Gow. Is the Duke of Exeter safe?

Flu. The Duke of Exeter is as magnificent as Agamemnon; and a man that I love and honour with my soul, and my heart, and my duty, and my life, and my living, and my power: he is not—O! he is praised and blessed!—any part in the world; but keeps the bridge most valiantly, with excellent discipline.

There is an aunchient Lieutenant there at the bridge, I think in my very conscience he is as valiant a man as Mark Antony; and he is a man of no estimation in the world; but I did see him do as gallant service.

Gow. What do you call him?

Flu. He is called Aunchient Pistol.

Gow. I know him not.

Enter Pistol.

Flu. Here is the man.

Pist. Captain, I thee beseech to do me favours:

The Duke of Exeter doth love thee well.

Flu. Ay, I praise God; and I have merited some love at his hands.

Pist. Bardolph, a soldier, firm and sound of heart,

And of buckram valour, hath, by cruel fate,

And giddy Fortune's furious fickle wheel,

That goddess blind,

That stands upon the rolling restless stone—

Flu. By your patience, Aunchient Pistol.

Fortune is painted blind, with a muffler afore

her eyes, to signify to you that Fortune is blind;

and she is painted also with a wheel, to signify to you, which is the moral of it, that she is turning, and inconstant, and mutability, and variation: and her foot, look you, is fixed upon a spherical stone, which rolls, and rolls, and rolls: in good truth, the poet makes a most excellent description of it: Fortune is an excellent moral.

Pist. Fortune is Bardolph's foe, and frowns

on him;

For he hath stolen a pax, and hanged must

'a be:

A damned death!

Let gallows gaze for dog; let man go free

And let not hemp his wind-pipe advocate:

But Exeter hath given the doom of death

For pax of little price.

Therefore, go speak; the duke will hear thy

voice;

And let not Bardolph's vital thread be cut

With edge of penny cord and vile reproach;

Flu. Speak, captain, for his life, and I will thee requite.

Flu. Aunchient Pistol, I do partly understand your meaning.

Pist. Why then, rejoice therefore.

Flu. Certainly, aunchient, it is not a thing to rejoice at: for if, look you, he were my brother, I would desire the duke to use his good pleasure, and put him to execution; for discipline ought to be used.

Pist. Die and be damn'd! and figo for thy ship!

Flu. It is well.

Pist. The fig of Spain! [Exit.

Flu. Very good.

Gow. Why, this is an arrant counterfeit sword; I remember him now; a bawd, a cut-throat!

I'll answer you, 'a' uttered as pears

at the bridge as you shall see in a minute. But it is very well; what he has spoke to me, that is well, I warrant you, when time is serve.

Gow. Why, 'tis a gull, a fool, a rogue, that now and then goes to the wars, to grace himself at his return into London under the form of a soldier. And such fellows are perfect in the great commanders' names: and they will learn you by rote where services were done; at such and such a sounce, at such a breach, at such a convoy; who came off bravely, who was shot, who disgraced, what terms the enemy stood on;

and this they can perfectly in the phrase of war, which they trick up with new-tuned oaths, and what a beard of the general's cut and a horrid suit of the camp will do among foaming bottles and ale-washed wits, is wonderful to be thought on. But you must learn to know such slanders of the age, or else you may be marvellously mistook.

Flu. I tell you what, Captain Gower; I do perceive he is not the man that he would gladly make show to the world he is: if I find a hole in his coat, I will tell him my mind. [Drum

heard.] Hark you, the king is coming, and I must speak with him from the bridge.

Drum and colours. Enter KING HENRY, GLOUCESTER, and Soldiers.

God bless your majesty!

K. Hen. How now, Fluellen! camest thou from the bridge?

Flu. Ay, so please your majesty. The Duke of Exeter has very gallantly maintained the bridge: the French is gone off, look you; and there is gallant and most brave passages; marry,

th' adversary was have possession of the bridge:

but he is enforced to retire, and the Duke of Exeter is master of the bridge: I can tell you your majesty, the duke is a brave man.

K. Hen. What men have you lost, Fluellen?

Flu. The perdition of th' adversary hath been very great, reasonable great; marry, for my part, I think the duke hath lost never a man, but one that is like to be executed for robbing a church, one Bardolph, if your majesty know the man: his face is all bubulkes, and whelks, and knobs, and flames o' fire; and his lips blows at his nose, and it is like a coal of fire, sometimes plus and sometimes red; but his nose is executed, and his fire's out.

K. Hen. We would have all such offenders so cut off: and we give express charge, that in our marches through the country, there be nothing compelled from the villages, nothing taken but paid for, none of the French urbraided or abused in disdainful language; for when lenity and cruelty play for a kingdom,

the gentler gamester is the soonest winner.

Tucket. Enter MONTJOY.

Mont. You know me by my habit.

K. Hen. Well then I know thee; what shall

I know of thee?

Mont. My master's name.

K. Hen. Unfold it.

Mont. There were my king: say thou to

Harry of England—Though he seemed dead,

we did but sleep: advantage is a better soldier than rashness. Tell him we could have rebuked him at Harfleur, but that we thought not good to bruise an injury till it were full ripe: now we speak upon our cue, and our voice is imperial: England shall repent his folly, see his weakness, and admire our sufferance. Bid him therefore consider of his ransom; which must proportion the losses we have borne, the subjects we have lost, the disgrace we have digested; which in weight to re-answer, his pettiness would bow under. For our losses, his exchequer is too poor; for the effusion of our blood, the muster of his kingdom too faint a number; and for our disgrace, his own person, kneeling at our feet, but a weak and worthless satisfaction. To this add defiance: and tell him, for conclusion, he hath betrayed his followers, whose condemnation is pronounced. So far my king and master; so much my office.

K. Hen. What is thy name? I know thy quality.

Mont. Montjoy.

K. Hen. Thou dost thy office fairly. Turn thee back.

And tell thy king I do not seek him now; But could be willing to march on to Calais: 150 Without impeachment: for, to say the sooth, Though 'tis no wisdom to confess so much Unto an enemy of craft and vantage, My people are with sickness much enfeebled, My numbers lessen'd, and those few I have Almost no better than so many French: Who when they were in health, I tell thee, herald,

I thought upon one pair of English legs Did march three Frenchmen. Yet, forgive me, God, 159

That I do brag thus! This your air of France Hath blown that vice in me; I must repent. Go therefore, tell thy master here I am; My ransom is this frail and worthless trunk, My army but a weak and sickly guard; Yet, God before, tell him we will come on. Though France himself and such another neighbour Stand in our way. There's for thy labour, Montjoy.

Go, bid thy master well advise himself: If we may pass, we will; if we be hinder'd, We shall your tawny ground with your red blood 170

Discolour: and so, Montjoy, fare you well. The sum of all our answer is but this: We would not seek a battle, as we are; Nor, as we are, we say we will not shun it: So tell your master.

Mont. I shall deliver so. Thanks to your highness. [Exit.]

Glou. I hope they will not come upon us now.

K. Hen. We are in God's hand, brother, not in theirs.

March to the bridge; it now draws toward night:

Beyond the river we'll encamp ourselves. 180 And on to-morrow bid them march away.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. The French camp, near Agincourt.

Enter the CONSTABLE OF FRANCE, the LORD RAMBURSE, ORLEANS, DAUPHIN, with others.

Con. Tut! I have the best armour of the world. Would it were day!

Orl. You have an excellent armour; but let my horse have his due.

Con. It is the best horse of Europe.

Orl. Will it never be morning?

Dau. My Lord of Orleans, and my lord high constable, you talk of horse and armour!

Orl. You are as well provided of both as any prince in the world.

Dau. What a long night is this! I will not change my horse with any that treads but on four pasterns. Co. ha! he bounds from the earth, as if his entrails were hairs; le cheval volant, the Pegasus, chez les nuées de feu! When I bestride him, I soar, I am a hawk: he trots the air; the earth sings when he touches it; the basest horn of his hoof is more musical than the pipe of Hermes.

Orl. He's of the colour of the nutmeg. 180
Dau. And of the heat of the ginger. It is a beast for Perseus: he is pure air and fire; and the dull elements of earth and water never appear in him, but only in patient stiffness while his rider mounts him: he is indeed a horse; and all other jades you may call beasts.

Con. Indeed, my lord, it is a most absolute and excellent horse.

Dau. It is the prince of palfreys; his neigh is like the bidding of a monarch and his countenance enforces homage. 181

Orl. No more, cousin.

Dau. Nay, the man hath no wit that cannot, from the rising of the lark to the lodging of the laub, vary deserved praise on my palfrey: it is a theme as fluent as the sea: turn the waters into eloquent tongues, and my horse is ment for them all: 'tis a subject for a score to reason on, and for a sovereign's sovereign to ride on; and for the world, familiar to us and unknown, to lay apart their particular fictions and wonder at him. I once writ a sonnet in his praise and began thus: 'Wonder of nature,—'

Orl. I have heard a sonnet begin so to one's mistress.

Dau. Then did thy imitation that which I composed of my cousin, for my horse is my mistress.

Orl. Your mistress bears well.

Dau. Me well; which is the present praise and perfection of a good and particularly mistress.

Con. Nay, for methought yesterday your mistress shrewdly shook your back.

Dau. So perhaps did yours.

Con. Mine was not bridled.

Dau. O then belies she was old and gentle; and you rode, like a kern of Ireland, your mistress how off, and in your strut streamers.

Con. You have good judgment in this.

Dau. Be warned by me, then: they that ride so and ride not warily, fall into foul bogs. I had rather have my horse to my mistress.

Con. I had as lief have my mistress a jade.

Daw. I tell thee, constable, my mistress wears his own hair.

Con. I could make as true a boast as that, if I had a sow to my mistress.

Daw. 'Le chien est retourné à son propre vomissement, et la truie lavée au borbier': thou makest use of any thing.

Con. Yet do I not use my horse for my mistress, or any such proverb so little kin to the purpose.

Ram. My lord constable, the armour that I saw in your tent to-night, are those stars or suns upon it?

Con. Stars, my lord.

Daw. Some of them will fall to-morrow, I hope.

Con. And yet my sky shall not want.

Daw. That may be, for you hear a many superfluously, and 'twere more honour some were away.

Con. Even as your horse bears your praises; who would trot as well, were some of your brags dismounted.

Daw. Would I were able to load him with his desert! Will it never be day? I will trot to-morrow a mile, and my way shall be paved with English faces.

Con. I will not say so, for fear I should be faced out of my way; but I would it were morning; for I would fain be about the ears of the English.

Ram. Who will go to hazard with me for twenty prisoners?

Con. You must first go yourself to hazard, ere you have them.

Daw. 'Tis midnight; I'll go arm myself. [Exit.]

Orl. The Dauphin longs for morning.

Ram. He longs to eat the English.

Con. I think he will eat all he kills.

Orl. By the white hand of my lady, he's a gallant prince.

Con. Swear by her foot, that she may tread out the oath.

Orl. He is simply the most active gentleman of France.

Con. Doing is activity; and he will still be

He never did harm, that I heard of.

Con. Nor will do none to-morrow: he will keep that good name still.

Orl. I know him to be valiant.

Con. I was told that by one that knows him

— I you.

— I's he? he told me so himself; and he said he cared not who knew it.

Orl. He needs not; it is no hidden virtue in him.

Con. By my faith, sir, but it is; never any body saw it but his lackey: 'tis a hooded valour; and when it appears, it will late.

Orl. He will never said well.

Con. I will cap that proverb with 'There is safety in friendship.'

Orl. And I will take up that with 'Give the devil his due.'

Con. Well placed: there stands your friend for the devil: have at the very eye of that proverb with 'A pox of the devil.'

Orl. You are the better at proverbs, by how much 'A fool's bolt is soon shot.'

Con. You have shot over.

Orl. 'Tis not the first time you were overshot.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord high constable, the English lie within fifteen hundred paces of your tents.

Con. Who hath measured the ground?

Mess. The Lord Grandpré.

Con. A valiant and most expert gentleman. Would it were day! Alas, poor Harry of England! he longs not for the dawning as we do.

Orl. What a wretched and peevish fellow is this king of England, to mope with his fat-brained followers so far out of his knowledge!

Con. If the English had any apprehension, they would run away.

Orl. That they lack; for if their heads had any intellectual armour, they could never wear such heavy head-pieces.

Ram. That island of England breeds very valiant creatures; their mastiffs are of unmatched courage.

Orl. Foolish curs, that run winking into the mouth of a Russian bear and have their heads crushed like rotten apples! You may as well say, that's a valiant flea that dare eat his breakfast on the lip of a lion.

Con. Just, just; and the men do sympathize with the mastiffs in robustious and rough coming on, leaving their wits with their wives; and then give them great meals of beef and iron and steel, they will eat like wolves and fight like devils.

Orl. Ay, but these English are shrewdly out of beef.

Con. Then shall we find to-morrow they have only stomachs to eat and none to fight. Now is it time to arm: come, shall we about it?

Orl. It is now two o'clock: but, let me see, by ten

We shall have each a hundred Englishmen. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

PROLOGUE.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. Now entertain conjecture of a time
When creeping murmur and the pining dark
Fills the wide vessel of the universe.
From camp to camp through the foul womb of
night

The hum of either army stilly sounds,
That the fix'd sentinels almost receive,
The secret whispers of each other's watch:

Piercing the night's dull ear; and from the tents

The armourers, accomplishing the knights,
With busy hammers closing rivets up,
Give dreadful note of preparation:
The country cocks do crow, the clocks do toll,
And the third hour of drowsy morning name.
Proud of their numbers and secure in soul,
The confident and over-lusty French
Do the low-rated English play at dice;
And chide the cripple tardy-gaited night 20
Who, like a foul and ugly witch, doth limp
So tediously away. The poor condemned
English,

Like sacrifices, by their watchful fires
Sit patiently and inly ruminate
The morning's danger, and their gesture and Investing lank-lean cheeks and war-worn coats
Presenteth them unto the gazing moon
So many horrid ghosts. O now, who will behold

The royal captain of this ruin'd band
Walking from watch to watch, from tent to 30
tent,
Let him cry 'Praise and glory on his head!'
For forth he goes and visits all his host,
Bids them good morrow with a modest smile
And calls them brothers, friends and country-
men.

Upon his royal face there is no note
How dread an army hath enrounded him;
Nor doth he dedicate one jot of colour
Unto the weary and all-watched night,
But freshly looks and over-bears attaint
With cheerful semblance and sweet majesty;
That every wretch, pining and pale before, 40
Beholding him, plucks comfort from his looks.
A largess universal like the sun
His liberal eye doth give to every one,
Thawing cold fear, that mean and gentle all
Behold, as may unworthiness define,
A little touch of Harry in the night.
And so our scene must to the battle fly;
Where—O for pity!—we shall much disgrace
With four or five most vile and ragged foils, 50
Right ill-disposed in brawl ridiculous.
The name of Agincourt. Yet sit and see,
Minding true things by what their mockeries be.

[Exit.]

SCENE I. The English camp at Agincourt.

Enter KING HENRY, BEDFORD, and GLOUCESTER.

K. Hen. Gloucester, 'tis true that we are great danger;
The greater therefore should our courage be.
Good morrow, brother Bedford. God Almighty
There is some soul of goodness in them still.

For our bad neighbour makes us early stirre
Which is both healthful and good husband.
Besides, they are our outward consciences
And preachers to us all, admonishing
That we should dress us fairly for our end.
Thus may we gather honey from the weed,
And make a moral of the devil himself.

Enter ERPINGHAM.

Good morrow, old Sir Thomas Erpingham:
A good soft pillow for that good white head
Were better than a charlish turf of France.

Erp. Not so, my liege: this lodging likes me better,

since I may say 'Now lie I like a king.'

K. Hen. 'Tis good for men to love their present pains

Upon example; so the spirit is eased:

And when the mind is quicken'd, out of doubt,

The organs, though defunct and dead before, 20

Break up their drowsy grave and newly move,

With casted slough and fresh legerity.

Lend me thy cloak, Sir Thomas. Brothers

both,

Commend me to the princes in our camp;

So my good morrow to them, and anon

Desire them all to my pavilion.

Glou. We shall, my liege.

Erp. Shall I attend your grace?

K. Hen. No, my good knight;

So with my brothers to my lords of England:

I and my bosom must debate a while, 30

And then I would no other company.

Erp. The Lord in heaven bless thee, noble

Harry! [Exeunt all but King.]

K. Hen. God-a-mercy, old heart! thou speak'st cheerfully.

Enter PISTOL.

Pist. Qui va là!

K. Hen. A friend.

Pist. Discuss unto me: art thou officer?

Or art thou base, common and popular?

K. Hen. I am a gentleman of a company.

Pist. Traill'st thou the pulisment pike? 40

K. Hen. Even so. What are you?

Pist. As good a gentleman as the emperor.

K. Hen. Then you are a better than the

king.

Pist. The king's a hawcock, and a heart of gold.

A lad of life, an imp of fame;

Of parents good, of fist most villainous:

I kiss his dirty shoe, and from heart-string

I love the lovely bully. What is thy name?

K. Hen. Harry le Roy.

Pist. Le Roy! a Cornish name: art thou of Cornish crew? 50

K. Hen. No, I am a Welshman.

Pist. Knew'st thou Fluellen?

K. Hen. Yes.

Pist. Tell him, I'll knock his neck about his paie

Upon Saint Davy's day.

K. Hen. Do not you wear your dagger in your cap that day, lest he knock that about your.

Pist. Art thou his friend?

K. Hen. And his kinsman too.

Pist. The dog for thee, then!

K. Hen. I thank you! God be with you!

Pist. My name is Pistol call'd. [Exit.]

K. Hen. It sort well with your kinsman.

Enter Fluellen and Gower.Gow. Captain Fluellen!

Flu. So! in the name of Jesu Christ, speak lower. It is the greatest admiration in the universal world, when the true and aunchient preceptes and laws of the wars is not kept: if you would take the pains but to examine the wars of Pompey the Great, you shall find, I warrant you, that there is no tiddle taddle nor pibble pabble in Pompey's camp; I warrant you, you shall find the ceremonies of the wars, and the cares of it, and the forms of it, and the modesty of it, and the modesty of it, to be otherwise.

Gow. Why, the enemy is loud; you hear him all night.

Flu. If the enemy is an ass and a fool and a prating coxcomb, is it meet, think you, that we should also, look you, be an ass and a fool and a prating coxcomb! in your own conscience, now!

Gow. I will speak lower.

Flu. I pray you and beseech you that you will. [Exeunt Gower and Fluellen.]

K. Hen. Though it appear a little out of fashion,
There is much care and valour in this Welsh.

Enter three soldiers, JOHN BATES, ALEXANDER COURT, and MICHAEL WILLIAMS.

Court. Brother John Bates, is not that the morning which breaks yonder?

Bates. I think it be: but we have no great cause to desire the approach of day.

Will. We see yonder the beginning of the day, but I think we shall never see the end of it. Who goes there?

K. Hen. A friend.Will. Under what captain serve you?K. Hen. Under Sir Thomas Erpingham.

Will. A good old commander and a most kind gentleman: I pray you, what thinks he of our cause?

K. Hen. Even as men wrecked upon a sand,
That look to be washed off the next tide.

Bates. He hath not told his thought to the king.

K. Hen. No; nor it is not meet he should. For though I speak it to you, I think the king is but a man, as I am: the violet smells to him as it doth to me; the element shows to him as it doth to me; all his senses have but human conditions; his ceremonies laid by, in his nakedness he appears but a man; and though his officers are higher mounted than ours, yet where they stoop, they stoop with the like wing. Therefore when he sees reason of fears, as we do, his fears, out of doubt, be of the same pitch as ours are: yet, in reason, no man would possess him with any appearance of fear, by showing it, should dishonour him. He will show what outward courage he will; but, when he is alone, as cold as steel, he will show in Thames up to the neck; and so I would he were, and I by him, at all adventures, so we were quit here.

K. Hen. By my troth, I will speak my conscience of the king: I think he would not wish himself any where but where he is.

Bates. Then I would he were here! should he be sure to be ransom'd, poor men's lives saved.

K. Hen. I dare say you love him not so ill, to wish him here alone, howsoever you speak this to feel other men's minds: methinks I could not die any where so contented as in the king's company; his cause being just and his quarrel honourable.

Will. That's more than we know.

Bates. Ay, or more than we should seek after; for we know enough, if we know we are the king's subjects: if his cause be wrong, our obedience to the king wipes the crime of it out of us.

Will. But if the cause be not good, the king himself hath a heavy reckoning to make, when all those legs and arms and heads, chopped off in a battle, shall join together at the latter day and cry all 'We died at such a place;' some swearing, some crying for a surgeon, some upon their wives left poor behind them, some upon their debts they owe, some upon their children rawly left. I am afeard there are few die well that die in a battle; for how can they charitably dispose of any thing, when blood is their argument? Now, if these men do not die well, it will be a black matter for the king that led them to it; whom to disobey were against all proportion of subjection.

K. Hen. So, if a son that is by his father sent about merchandise do sinfully miscarry upon the sea, the imputation of his wickedness, by your rule, should be imposed upon his father that sent him; or if a servant, under his master's command transporting a sum of money, be assailed by robbers and die in many irreconcilable iniquities, you may call the business of the master the author of the servant's damnation; but this is not so: the king is not bound to answer the particular endings of his soldiers, the father of his son, nor the master of his servant; for they purpose not their death, when they purpose their services. Besides, there is no king, be his cause never so spotless, if it come to the arbitrament of swords, can try it out with all unspotted soldiers: some peradventure have on them the guilt of premeditated and contrived murder; some, of bequilling virgins with the broken seals of perjury; some, making the wars their bulwark, that have before gored the gentle bosom of peace with pillage and robbery. Now, if these men have defeated the law and outrun native punishment, though they can outstrip men, they have no wings to fly from God: war is his bundle, war is his vengeance; so that here men are punished for before-branch of the king's laws in now the king's quarrel: where they feared the death, they have borne life away; and where they would be safe, they perish; then, if they die unmourn'd, who more is the king guilty of their damnation than he was before guilty of those impieties for the which they are now visited. Every subject's duty is the king's; but every subject's soul is his own. Therefore should every soldier in the wars do as every sick man in his bed, wash every mote out of his conscience; and dying so, death is to him advantage; or not dying, the time was blessedly lost wherein such preparation was gained; and in him that escapes, it were not sin to think that, making God so free an offer, He let him outlive that day to see His greatness and to teach others how they should prepare.

Will. 'Tis certain, every man that dies ill, the ill upon his own head, the king is not to answer it.

Bates. I do not desire he should answer for me; and yet I determine to fight lustily for him.

K. Hen. I myself heard the king say he would not be ransomed.

Will. Ay, he said so, to make us fight cheerfully: but when our throats are cut, he may be ransomed, and we never the wiser.

K. Hen. If I live to see it, I will never trust his word after.

Will. You pay him then. That's a perilous shot out of an elder-gun, that a poor and a private displeasure can do against a monarch! you may as well go about to turn the sun to ice with fanning in his face with a peacock's feather. You'll never trust his word after! come, 'tis a foolish saying.

K. Hen. Your reproof is something too round: I should be angry with you, if the time were convenient.

Will. Let it be a quarrel between us, if you live.

K. Hen. I embrace it.

Will. How shall I know thee again?

K. Hen. Give me any gage of thine, and I will wear it in my bonnet: then, if ever thou dar'st acknowledge it, I will make it my quarrel.

Will. Here's my glove: give me another of thine.

K. Hen. There.

Will. This will I also wear in my cap: if ever thou come to me and say, after to-morrow, 'This is my glove,' by this hand, I will take thee a box on the ear.

K. Hen. If ever I live to see it, I will challenge it.

Will. Thou dar'st as well be hanged.

K. Hen. Well, I will do it, though I take thee in the king's company.

Will. Keep thy word: fare thee well.

Bates. Be friends, you English fools, be friends: we have French quarrels enow, if you could tell how to reckon.

K. Hen. Indeed, the French may lay twenty French crowns to one, they will beat us; for they bear them on their shoulders: but it is no English treason to cut French crowns, and to-morrow the king himself will be a clipper.

(Exeunt Soldiers.)

Upon the king! let us our lives, our souls,
Our debts, our careful wives,

Our children and our sins lay on the king!
We must bear all. O hard condition,
Twin-born with greatness, subject to the breath
Of every fool, whose sense no more can feel
But his own wringing! What infinite heart'sease

Must kings neglect, that private men enjoy!
And what have kings, that privates have not
too,

Save ceremony, save general ceremony!
And what art thou, thou idol ceremony!
What kind of god art thou, that suffer'st more
Of mortal griefs than do thy worshippers!

What are thy rents? what are thy comings in?
O ceremony, show me but thy worth!
What is thy soul of adoration?

Art thou sought else but place, degree and form,

Creating awe and fear in other men?
Wherein thou art less happy being fear'd
Than they in fearing.

What drink'st thou oft, instead of homage
sweet,

But poison'd flattery? O, be sick, great great-
ness,

And bid thy ceremony give thee cure!

Think'st thou the fiery fever will go out
With titles blown from adulation?

Will it give place to flexure and low bending?
Canst thou, when thou command'st the beggar's
knee,

Command the health of it! No, thou proud
dram,

That play'st so subtly with a king's repose;
I am a king that find thee, and I know
'Tis not the balm, the sceptre and the ball,

The sword, the mace, the crown imperial,
The intertissued robe of gold and pearl,

The fardel title running fore the king,
The throne he sits on, nor the tide of pomp
That beats upon the high shore of this world,

No, not all these, thrice-gorgeous ceremony,
Not all these, laid in bed majestical,
Can sleep so soundly as the wretched slave.

Who with a body fill'd and vacant mind
Gets him to rest, cramm'd with surfeit bread;

Never sees horrid night, the child of hell,
But, like a lackey, from the rise to set
Sweats in the eye of Phoebus and all planets
Sleeps in Elysium; next day after dawn
Doth rise and help Hyperion to his horse,
And follows so the ever-running year,
With profitable labour, to his grave:

And, but for ceremony, such a wretch
Winding up days with toil and nights with sleep,

Had the fore-hand and vantage of a king.
The slave, a member of the country's peace,
Enjoys it; but in gross brain little value
What watch the king keeps to maintain the
peace,

Whose hours the peasant best advantages.

(Re-enter BURENMAN.)

Bur. My lord, your nobles, knowing of your absence,

Seek through your camp to find you.

K. Hen. Good old knight,
Collect them all together at my tent :
I'll be before thee.

Exeunt. I shall do't, my lord. [Exit.
K. Hen. O God of battles! steel my soldiers'
hearts;

Possess them not with fear; take from them
now

The sense of reckoning, if the opposed numbers
Fluck their hearts from them. Not to-day, O
Lord,

O, not to-day, think not upon the fault 320

My father made in compassing the crown;

I Richard's body have interred new;

And on it have bestow'd more contrite tears

Than from it issued forced drops of blood:

Five hundred poor I have in yearly pay,

Who twice a-day their wither'd hands hold up

Toward heaven, to pardon blood; and I have built

Two chantries, where the sad and solemn priests

Sing still for Richard's soul. More will I do;

Though all that I can do is nothing worth, 320

Since that my penitence comes after all,

Imploping pardon.

Re-enter GLOUCESTER.

Glow. My liege!

K. Hen. My brother Gloucester's voice? Ay;

I know thy errand, I will go with thee:

The day, my friends and all things stay for me.
[Exit.

SCENE II. The French camp.

Enter the DAUPHIN, ORLEANS, RAMBURES, and others.

Orl. The sun doth gild our armour; up, my lords!

Daup. Montez à cheval! My horse! varlet!
Inquais! ha!

Orl. O brave spirit!

Daup. Via! les caux et la terre.

Orl. Bien puis! l'air et le feu.

Daup. Ciel, cousin Orleans.

Enter CONSTABLE.

Now, my lord constable!

Con. Hark, how our steeds for present service neigh!

Daup. Mount them, and make incision in their hides.

That their hot blood may spin in English eyes,
And douse them with superfluous courage, ha!

Orl. What will you have them weep our horses' blood?

How shall we, then, behold their natural tears!

Enter Messenger.

Mess. The English are embattled, you French peer.

Con. To horse, you gallant princes! straight to horse!

Go but behind you poor and starved band,
How shall suck away their souls,

There is not work enough for all our hands;
Scarce blood enough in all their sickly veins :
To give each naked curtle-axe a stain,
That our French gallants shall to-day draw out,
And sheathe for lack of sport : let us but blow
on them.

The vapour of our valour will o'erturn them.

'Tis positive 'gainst all exceptions, lords,

That our superfluous lackeys and our peasants,

Who in unnecessary action swarm

About our squares of battle, were enow

To purge this field of such a hilding foe,

Though we upon this mountain's basis by 320

Took stand for idle speculation :

But that our honours must not. What's to say!

A very little little let us do,

And all is done. Then let the trumpets sound

The tucket sonance and the note to mount;

For our approach shall so much dare the field

That England shall couch down in fear and yield.

Enter GRANDPRÉ.

Grand. Why do you stay so long, my lords of France!

Yon island carrions, desperate of their bones,

Ill-favour'dly become the morning field : 40

Their ragged curtains poorly are let loose,

And our air shakes them passing scornfully :

Big Mars seems bankrupt in their beggar'd host

And faintly through a rusty beaver peeps :

The horsemen sit like fixed candlesticks,

With torch-staves in their hand; and their poor
jades

Lob down their heads, dropping the hides and hips,

The gum down-roping from their pale-dead
eyes.

And in their pale dull mouths the gimball bit

Lies foul with chew'd grass, still and motionless ; 50

And their executors, the knavish crows,

Fly o'er them, all impatient for their hour.

Description cannot suit itself in words

To demonstrate the life of such a battle

In life so lifeless as it shows itself.

Con. They have said their prayers, and they stay for death.

Daup. Shall we go send them dinners and fresh suits

And give their fasting horses provender,

And after fight with them?

Con. I stay but for my guidon : to the field!

I will the banner from a trumpet take, 61

And use it for my haste. Come, come, away!

The sun is high, and we outwear the day.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. The English camp.

Enter GLOUCESTER, BEDFORD, EXETER, BR-FINGHAM, with all his host; SALISBURY and WESTMORELAND.

Glow. Where is the king?

Bed. The king himself is rode to view their battle.

West. Of fighting men they have full three score thousand.

Eze. There's five to one; besides, they all are fresh.

Sal. God's arm strike with us! 'tis a fearful odds.

God be wi' you, princes all; I'll to my charge: If we no more meet till we meet in heaven, Then, joyfully, my noble Lord of Bedford, My dear Lord Gloucester, and my good Lord Exeter,

And my kind kinsman, warriors all, adieu! to Bed. Farewell, good Salisbury; and good luck go with thee!

Eze. Farewell, kind lord; fight valiantly to-day;

And yet I do thee wrong to mind thee of it, For thou art framed of the firm truth of valour.

[Exit Salisbury.]

Bed. He is as full of valour as of kindness; Princely in both.

Enter the KING.

West. O that we now had here But one ten thousand of those men in England That do no work to-day!

K. Hen. What's he that wishes so? My cousin Westmoreland! No, my fair cousin: If we are mark'd to die, we are crows To do our country loss; and if to live, The fewer men, the greater share of honour. God's will! I pray thee, wish not one man more.

By Jove, I am not covetous for gold, Nor care I who doth feed upon my cost; It yearns me not if men my garments wear; Such outward things dwell not in my desires: But if it be a sin to covet honour, I am the most offending soul alive. No, faith, my coz, wish not a man from England:

God's peace! I would not lose so great an honour

As one man more, methinks, would share from me

For the best hope I have. O, do not wish one more!

Rather proclaim it, Westmoreland, through my host,

That he which hath no stomach to this fight, Let him depart; his passport shall be made And crowns for convoy put into his purse: We would not die in that man's company. That fears his fellowship to die with us.

This day is call'd the feast of Crispian: This day that outlives this day, and comes safe home,

Will stand a tip-toe when this day is named, And rouse him at the name of Crispian. He that shall live this day, and see old age, Will yearly on the vigil feast his neighbours, And say 'To-morrow is Saint Crispian.'

Then will he strip his sleeve and show his scars,

And say 'These wounds I had on Crispian's day.'

Old men forget; yet all shall be forgot, But he'll remember with advantages

What feats he did that day: then shall our names,

'amiliar in his mouth as household words, Harry the king, Bedford and Exeter, Warwick and Talbot, Salisbury and Gloucester, Be in their flowing cups freshly remember'd.

This story shall the good man teach his son; And Crispin Crispian shall ne'er go by, From this day to the ending of the world, But we in it shall be remembered;

We few, we happy few, we band of brothers; For he to-day that sheds his blood with me Shall be my brother; be he ne'er so vile, This day shall gentle his condition;

And gentlemen in England now a-bed Shall think themselves accursed they were not here,

And hold their manhoods cheap whiles any speaks

That fought with us upon Saint Crispian's day.

Re-enter SALISBURY.

Sal. My sovereign lord, bestow yourself with speed:

The French are bravely in their battles set, And will with all expedience charge on us.

K. Hen. All things are ready, if our minds be so.

West. Perish the man whose mind is backward now!

K. Hen. Thou dost not wish more help from England, coz?

West. God's will! my liege, would you and I alone,

Without more help, could fight this royal battle!

K. Hen. Why, now thou hast unwish'd five thousand men:

Which likes me better than to wish us one. You know your places: God be with you all!

Tucket. Enter MONTAGUY.

Mont. Once more I come to know of thee, King Harry.

If for thy ransom thou wilt now compound, so Before thy most assured overthrow:

For certainly thou art so near the gulf, Thou needs must be engulft. Besides, in mercy,

The constable desires thee thou wilt mind Thy followers of repentance; that their souls

May make a peaceful and a sweet retire From off these fields, where, wretches, their poor bodies

Must lie and fester.

K. Hen. Who hath sent thee now?

Mont. The Constable of France.

K. Hen. I pray thee, bear my former answer back:

Bid them achieve me and then sell my body. Good God! why should they mock poor fellows thus!

The man that once did sell the lion's skin While the beast lived, was killed with hunting him.

A many of our bodies shall no doubt Find native graves; upon the which, I trust,

Shall witness live in truth of this day's work.

And those that leave their valiant bones in France, Dying like men, though buried in your dangerous hills,

They shall be famed; for there the sun shall smoke them,
And draw their honours reeking up to heaven;
Leaving their earthly parts to choke your citties.

The smell whereof shall breed a plague in France.

Mark them abounding valour in our English,
That being dead, like to the bullet's grazing,
Break out into a second course of mischief,
Killing in relapse of mortality.

Let me speak proudly: tell the constable
We are but warriors for the working-day;
Our gayness and our gilt are all besmirch'd
With rainy marching in the painful field; ¹¹¹
There's not a piece of feather in our host—
Good argument, I hope, we will not fly—
And time hath worn us into slovenry:

But, by the mass, our hearts are in the trim;
And my poor soldiers tell me, yet ere night
They'll be in fresher robes, or they will pluck
The gay new coats o'er the French soldiers'
heads.

And turn them out of service. If they do
this—

As, if God please, they shall,—ray ransom then Will soon be levied. Herald, save thou thy labour:

Come thou no more for ransom, gentle herald!
They shall have none, I swear, but these my joins:

Which if they have as I will leave 'em them,
Shall yield them little, tell the constable.

Most, I shall, King Harry. And so fare
these well:

Thou never shalt hear herald any more. [Exit.
K. Hen. I fear thou'lt once more come again for ransom.

Enter York.

Yor. My lord, most humbly on my knee
I beg

The lending of the vaward, ¹³⁰
K. Hen. Take it, brave York. Now, soldiers, march away:

And how thou pleasest, God, dispose the day!
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. The field of battle.

Alarm. Excursions. Enter Pistol, French Soldier, and Boy.

Pist. Yield, our!
Fr. Sol. Je pense que vous êtes gentilhomme de bonne qualité.

Pist. Quelte culotte costume me! Art thou a gentleman? what is thy name? discuss.

Fr. Sol. O Seigneur Dieu!

Pist. O, Signieur Dew should be a gentle-
man.

Follow my words, O Signieur Dew, and mark;
O Signieur Dew, thou dost me point of fox, Pist. O Signieur, thou do give to see longer between.

Fr. Sol. O, pensez malade! avez getté de moi!

Pist. May shall not serve; I will have forty
moyes;

Or I will fetch thy rim out at thy throat
In drops of crimson blood.

Fr. Sol. Est-il impossible d'échapper la force de ton bras?

Pist. Brass, cur!
Thou damned and luxurious mountain,
Offer't me brass!

Fr. Sol. O pardonnez moi!

Pist. Say'st thou me so? Is that a ton of
moyes?

Come hither, boy: ask me this slave in French
What is his name.

Boy. Ecoutez: comment êtes-vous appelé?
Fr. Sol. Monsieur le Fer.

Boy. He says his name is Master Fer.

Pist. Master Fer! I'll fer him, and fir him, and ferret him: discuss the name in French unto him.

Boy. I do not know the French for fer, and ferret, and fir.

Pist. Bid him prepare: for I will cut his throat.

Fr. Sol. Que dit-il, monsieur?

Boy. Il me commande de vous dire que vous faites vous prêt: car ce soldat ici est disposé tout à cette heure de couper votre gorge.

Pist. (Uw, cupplee gorge, permaloy.)
Peasant, unless thou give me crowns, leave crowns;

Or mangled shalt thou be by this my sword. ⁴⁰

Fr. Sol. O, je vous supplie, pour l'amour de Dieu, me pardonner! Je suis gentilhomme de bonne maison: gardez ma vie, et je vous donnerai deux cents écus.

Pist. What are his words?

Boy. He prays you to save his life: he is a gentleman of a good house: and for his ransom
he will give you two hundred crowns.

Pist. Tell him my fury shall abate, and I'll
The crowns will take.

Fr. Sol. Petit monsieur, que dit-il?

Boy. Encore qu'il est contre son jugement de pardonner aucun prisonnier, néanmoins, pour les écus que vous l'avez promis, il est content de vous donner la liberté, le franchissement.

Fr. Sol. Sur mes genoux je vous donne mille remerciemens; et je m'estime heureux que je suis tombé entre les mains d'un chevalier, je pense, le plus brave, vaillant, et très distingué seigneur d'Angleterre.

Pist. Expound unto me, boy.

Boy. He gives you, upon his knees, a thousand thanks: and he esteems himself happy that he hath fallen into the hands of one, as he thinks, the most brave, valiant, and three-worthy signieur of England.

Pist. As I suck blood, I will some merry show.

Follow me!

Boy. Suivez-moi le Pist. And French
so full a voice heard the saying is true, a greatest sound.

a. [Murmur
now.] I did never know so empty a head: but
—by repeating the
and signs had the times more valour than this roaring devil! the old play, that every one may pare his nails with a wooden dagger; and they are both hanged; and so would this be, if he durst steal any thing adventurously. I must stay with the lackeys, with the luggage of our camp: the French might have a good prey of us, if he knew of it; for there is none to guard it but boys. [Exit.]

SCENE V. Another part of the field.

Enter CONSTABLE, ORLEANS, ROUBON, DAUPHIN, and RAMBURN.

Con. O diable!

Orl. O seigneur! le jour est perdu, tout est perdu!

Dau. Mort de ma vie! all is confounded, all! Reproach and everlasting shame sits mocking in our plumes. O méchante fortune!

Do not run away. [A short alarm.]

Con. Why, all our ranks are broke.

Dau. O perdurable shame! let's stab ourselves.

Be these the wretches that we play'd at dice for? Orl. Is this the king we sent to for his ransom!

Rour. Shame and eternal shame, nothing but shame!

Let us die in honour: once more back again; And he that will not follow Roubrun now, Let him go hence, and with his cap in hand, like a base pandar, hold the chamber-door whilst by a slave, no gentler than my dog, His fairest daughter is contaminated.

Con. Disorder, that hath spoil'd us, friend us now!

Let us on heaps go offer up our lives. Orl. We are enow yet living in the field To smother up the English in our throngs, so If any order might be thought upon.

Rour. The devil take order now! I'll to the throng:

Let life be short; else shame will be too long.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. Another part of the field.

Alarums. Enter KING HENRY and forces, EXETER, and others.

K. Hen. Well have we done, thrice valiant countrymen:

But all's not done; yet keep the French the field.

Exe. The Duke of York commends him to your majesty.

K. Hen. Lives he, good uncle? thrice within this hour

I saw him down: thrice up again, and fighting; From helmet to the spur all blood he was.

Exe. In which array, brave soldier, doth he lie?

Larding the plain; and by his bloody side, Yoke-fellow to his honour-owing wounds,

The noble Earl of Suffolk also lies. so

Suffolk first died; and York, all hanged over, Comes to him, where in gore he lay浸没'd,

And takes him by the hand; kisses the gashes

That bloodily did yawn upon his face; And cries aloud 'Tarry, dear cousin Suffolk! My soul shall thine keep company to heaven! Tarry, sweet soul, for mine, then fly abroad,

Upon these words I came and cheer'd him up: He smiled me in the face, ranght me his hand, And, with a feeble gripe, says 'Dear my lord, Commend my service to my sovereign; So did he turn and over Suffolk's neck He threw his wounded arm and kiss'd his lips; And so espoused to death, with blood he seal'd A testament of noble-ending love. The pretty and sweet manner of it forced Those waters from me which I would have stopp'd;

But I had not so much of man in me, And all my mother came into mine eyes And gave me up to tears.

K. Hen. I blame you not; For, hearing this, I must perforce compound With mistiful eyes, or they will issue too.

[Alarm.] But, hark! what new alarm is this same! The French have reinforced their scatter'd men: Then every soldier kill his prisoners: Give the word through. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. Another part of the field.

Enter FLUELLEN and GOWER.

Flu. Kill the boys and the luggage! 'tis expressly against the law of arms: 'tis as much a piece of knavery, mark you now, as can be offer'd; in your conscience, now, is it not?

Gow. 'Tis certain there's not a boy left alive; and the cowardly rascals that ran from the battle ha' done this slaughter: besides, they have burned and carried away all that was in the king's tent; wherefore the king, most worthily, hath caused every soldier to cut his prisoner's throat. O, 'tis a gallant king!

Flu. Ay, he was born at Monmouth, Captain Gower. What call you the town's name where Alexander the Pig was born?

Gow. Alexander the Great.

Flu. Why, I pray you, is not pig great? the pig, or the great, or the mighty, or the lusty, or the magnanimous, are all one reckonings; have the phrase in a little variations.

Gow. I think Alexander the Great was born in Macedon; his father was called Philip of Macedon, as I take it.

Flu. I think it is in Macedon where Alexander is born. I tell you, captain, if you look in the maps of the world, I warrant you shall find, in the compasses between Monmouth, that the situation both alike. There is a river in there is also moreover a river at Monmouth, it is called Wyre at Monmouth; but it is called my prairie what is the name of the other river? but 'tis all one, 'tis alike as my finger in fingers, and there is goodness in both; mark Alexander the Great, that of Monmouth's life is come after it is mentioned for there is figures in all things. Alexander, God knows, and you know, in his rages, and his furies, and his wraths, and his cholera, and his moods, and his displeasures, and his indignations, and also being a little intoxicated in his prains, did, in his ales and his angers, look you, kill his best friend, Cleitus.

Gow. Our king is not like him in that: he never killed any of his friends.

Flu. It is not well done, mark you now, to take the tales out of my mouth, ere it is made and finished. I speak but in the figures and comparisons of it: as Alexander killed his friend Cleitus, being in his ales and his cups; so also Harry Monmouth, being in his right wits and his judgements, turned away the fat knight with the great-belly doublet: he was full of jests, and gipes, and knaveries, and mocks; I have forgot his name.

Gow. Sir John Falstaff.

Flu. That is he: I'll tell you there is good men born at Monmouth.

Gow. Here comes his majesty.

Alarum. Enter KING HENRY, and forces; WARWICK, GLOUCESTER, EXETER, and others.

K. Hen. I was not angry since I came to France

Until this instant. Take a trumpet, herald; hide thou unto the horsemen on yon hill: If they will fight with us, bid them come down, Or vield the field; they do offend our sight: If they'll do neither, we will come to them, And make them skirr away, as swift as stones Enforced from the old Assyrian slings: Besides, we'll cut the throats of those we have, And not a man of them that we shall take Shall taste our mercy. Go and tell them so.

Enter MONTJOY.

Exc. Here comes the herald of the French, my liege.

Glo. His eyes are humbler than they used to be.

K. Hen. How now! what means this, herald? know'st thou not

That I have slain these bones of mine for ransom?

Comest thou again for ransom?

Mont. No, great king: I come to thee for charitable license,

That we may wander o'er this bloody field To look our dead, and then to bury them;

To sort our nobles from our common men, For many of our princes—was the while—

As drownd and seek'd in mercenary blood; So do our vulgar drench their peasant limbs to princes; and their wounded steeds Jet foallock deep in gore and with wild rage cut out their armed heels at their dead masters, trampling them twice. O, give us leave, great field in safety and dispose of dead bodies!

Exc. I tell thee truly, herald, that if the day be ours or no;

is given to the field.

Mont. The day is yours.

K. Hen. Praised be God, and not our strength, for it!

What is this castle call'd that stands hard by? Mont. They call it Agincourt.

K. Hen. Then call we this the field of Agincourt.

Fought on the day of Crispin Crispianus.

Flu. Your grandfather of famous memory, an't please your majesty, and your great-uncle Edward the Plack Prince of Wales, as I have read in the chronicles, fought a most prave pattle here in France.

K. Hen. They did, Fluellen.

Flu. Your majesty says very true: if your majesties is remembered of it, the Welshmen did good service in a garden where leeks did grow, wearing leeks in their Monmouth caps: which, your majesty know, to this hour is an honourable badge of the service; and I do believe your majesty takes no scorn to wear the leek upon Saint Tavy's day.

K. Hen. I wear it for a memorable honour; For I am Welsh, you know, good countryman.

Flu. All the water in Wye cannot wash your majesty's Welsh blood out of your body, I can tell you that: God bless it and preserve it, as long as it pleases his grace, and his majesty too!

K. Hen. Thanks, good my countryman.

Flu. By Jeshu, I am your majesty's countryman, I care not who know it; I will confess it to all the world: I need not to be ashamed of your majesty, praised be God, so long as your majesty is an honest man.

K. Hen. God keep me so! Our heralds go with him:

Bring me just notice of the numbers dead On both our parts. Call yonder fellow hither.

[Points to Williams. Excunt Herald with Montjoy.]

Exc. Soldier, you must come to the king.

K. Hen. Soldier, why wearest thou that glove in thy cap?

Will. An't please your majesty, 'tis the page of one that I should fight withal, if he be alive.

K. Hen. An Englishman?

Will. An't please your majesty, a rascal that swaggered with me last night; who, if alive and ever dare to challenge this glove, I have sworn to take him a box o' th' ear; or if I can see my glove in his cap, which he swore, as he was a soldier, he would wear if alive, I will strike it out soundly.

K. Hen. What think you, Captain Fluellen? is it fit this soldier keep his oath?

Flu. He is a craven and a villain else, an't please your majesty, in my conscience.

K. Hen. It may be his enemy is a gentleman of great sort, quite from the answer of his degree.

Flu. Though he be as good a gentleman as the devil is, as Lucifer and Belshazzar himself, it is necessary, mark your grace, that he keep his vow and his oath: if he be perjured, see you now, his reputation is as good as a villain and a Jackanapes, as ever his throat does trod upon God's ground and his earth, in my conscience, is!

K. Hen. Then keep thy vow, sirrah, when thou meetest the fellow.

Will. So I will, my liege, as I live.

K. Hen. Who servest thou under?

Will. Under Captain Gower, my liege.

Flu. Gower is a good captain, and is good knowledge and literated in the wars.

K. Hen. Call him hither to me, soldier.

Will. I will, my liege. [Exit.]

K. Hen. Here, Fluellen, wear thou this favour for me and stick it in thy cap: when Alençon and myself were down together, I plucked this glove from his helm: if any man challenge this, he is a friend to Alençon, and an enemy to our person; if thou encounter any such, apprehend him, an thou dost me love.

Flu. Your grace doo's me as great honours as can be desired in the hearts of his subjects: I would fain see the man, that has but two legs, that shall find himself aggrieved at this glove; that is all; but I would fain see it once, an please God of his grace that I might see.

K. Hen. Knowest thou Gower?

Flu. He is my dear friend, an please you.

K. Hen. Pray thee, go seek him, and bring him to my tent.

Flu. I will fetch him. [Exit.]

K. Hen. My Lord of Warwick, and my brother Gloucester,

Follow Fluellen closely at the heels:
The glove which I have given him for a favour May haply purchase him a box o' th' ear; for
It is the soldier's; I by bargain should Wear it myself. Follow, good cousin Warwick:
If that the soldier strike him, as I judge
By his blunt bearing he will keep his word,
Some sudden mischief may arise of it;
For I do know Fluellen valiant
And touch'd with choler, hot as gunpowder,
And quickly will return an injury: so
Follow, and see there be no harm between them.
Go you with me, uncle of Exeter. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VIII. Before KING HENRY's pavilion.

Enter GOWER and WILLIAMS.

Will. I warrant it is to knight you, captain.

Enter FLUELLEN.

Flu. God's will and his pleasure, captain, I beseech you now, come apace to the king: there is more good toward you peradventure than is in your knowledge to dream of.

Will. Sir, know you this glove?

Flu. Know the glove! I know the glove is a glove.

Will. I know this; and thus I challenge it. [Strikes Aim.]

Flu. 'Shblood! an arrant traitor as any is in the universal world, or in France, or in England!

Gow. How now, sir! you villain!

Will. Do you think I'll be forewarn'd?

Flu. Stand away, Captain Gower; I will give treason his payment into plows, I warrant you.

Will. I am no traitor.

Flu. That's a lie in thy throat. I charge you in his majesty's name, apprehend him: he's a friend of the Duke Alençon's. 79

Enter WARWICK and GLOUCESTER.

War. How now, how now! what's the matter!

Flu. My Lord of Warwick, here is—praised be God for it!—a most contagious treason come to light, look you, as you shall desire in a summer's day. Here is his majesty.

Enter KING HENRY and EXETER.

K. Hen. How now! what's the matter?

Flu. My liege, here is a villain and a traitor, that, look your grace, has struck the glove which your majesty is take out of the helmet of Alençon.

Will. My liege, this was my glove; here is the fellow of it; and he that I gave it to in change promised to wear it in his cap: I promised to strike him, if he did: I met this man with my glove in his cap, and I have been as good as my word.

Flu. Your majesty hear now, saving your majesty's manhood, what an arrant, rascally, beggarly, lousy knave it is: I hope your majesty is near me testimony and witness, and will avouchment, that this is the glove of Alençon, that your majesty is give me; in your conscience, now. 40

K. Hen. Give me thy glove, soldier; look, here is the fellow of it.

Will. Was I, indeed, thou promised'st to strike; And thou hast given me most bitter terms.

Flu. And please your majesty, let his neck answer for it, if there is any martial law in the world.

K. Hen. How canst thou make me satisfaction?

Will. All offences, my lord, come from the heart: never came any from mine that might offend your majesty. 51

K. Hen. It was yourself thou didst abuse.

Will. Your majesty came not like yourself: you appeared to me but as a common man; witness the night, your garments, your countenance; and what your highness suffered under that shape. I beseech you take it for your own fault and not mine: for had you been as I took you for, I made no offence; therefore, I beseech your highness, pardon me.

K. Hen. Here, uncle Exeter, all this glove with crowns.

And give it to this fellow. Keep it, fellow; And wear it for an honour in thy cap Till I do challenge it. Give him the crowns; And, captain, you must needs be friends with him.

Flu. By this day and this light, the fellow has mettle enough in his belly. Hold, there is twelve pence for you; I pray you to serve God, and keep you out of prison and punishment, and diseases, and I warrant you, it is the better for you.

Fla. I will none of your money.

Fla. It is with a good will; I can tell you, it will serve you to mend your shoes: come, wherefore should you be so painful? your shoes is not so good: 'tis a good sitting, I warrant you, or I will change it.

Enter an English Herald.

K. Hen. Now, herald, are the dead number'd?

Her. Here is the number of the slaughter'd French.

K. Hen. What prisoners of good sort are taken, uncle?

Her. Charles Duke of Orleans, nephew to the king;

John Duke of Bourbon, and Lord Bouciquault: Of other lords and barons, knights and squires, Full fifteen hundred, besides common men.

K. Hen. This note doth tell me of ten thousand French That in the field lie slain: of princes, in this number,

And nobles bearing banners, there lie dead One hundred twenty six: added to these, Of knights, esquires, and gallant gentlemen, Eight thousand and four hundred; of the which,

Five hundred were but yesterday dubb'd knights:

So that, in these ten thousand they have lost, There are but sixteen hundred mercenaries: The rest are princes, barons, lords, knights, squires,

And gentlemen of blood and quality. The names of those their nobles that lie dead:

Charles Delabreth, high constable of France; Jacques of Chatillon, admiral of France;

The master of the cross-bow, Lord Rambures; Great Master of France, the brave Sir Guichard

Dolphin, John Duke of Alençon, Anthony Duke of

Beaumont, The brother to the Duke of Burgundy,

And Edward Duke of Bar: of lusty earls, Grandpré and Roussi, Fauconberg and Foix, Baumont and Marle, Vaudemont and Lestrale. Here was a royal fellowship of death!

What is the number of our English dead?

[Herald shows him another paper.] Edward the Duke of York, the Earl of Suffolk,

Sir Richard Ketil, Davy Gam, esquire: None else of name; and of all other men

But five and twenty. O God, thy arm was here!

And not to us, but to thy arm alone, Ascribe we all! When, without stratagem,

But in plain shock and even play of battle, Was ever known so great and little loss

On one part and on the other? Take it, God, For it is none but thine!

Fla. 'Tis wonderful! K. Hen. Come, go we in procession to the

And be it death proclaimed through our host To boast of this or take that praise from God Which is his only.

Fla. Is it not lawful, an please your majesty, to tell how many is killed?

K. Hen. Yes, captain; but with this acknowledgement,

That God fought for us.

Fla. Yes, my conscience, he did us great good.

K. Hen. Do we all holy rites; Let there be sung 'Non nobis' and 'Te Deum';

The dead with charity enclosed in clay: And then to Calais; and to England then; 130 Where ne'er from France arrived more happy men.

ACT V.

PROLOGUE.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. Vouchsafe to those that have not read the story,

That I may prompt them: and of such as have, I humbly pray them to admit the excuse

Of time, of numbers and due course of things, Which cannot in their huge and proper life

Be here presented. Now we bear the king Toward Calais: grant him there; there seen,

Heave him away upon your winged thoughts Athwart the sea. Behold, the English beach

Pales in the flood with men, with wives and boys,

Whose shouts and claps out-voice the deep-mouth'd sea,

Which like a mighty whiffier Yore the king Seems to prepare his way: so let him land,

And solemnly see him set on to London. So swift a pace hath thought that even now

You may imagine him upon Blackheath; Where that his lords desire him to have borne

His bruised helmet and his bended sword Before him through the city: he forbids it,

Being free from vainness and self-glorious pride: Giving full trophy, signal and ostent

Quite from himself to God. But now behold, In the quick forge and working-behd of thought, How London doth pour out her citizens!

The mayor and all his brethren in best sort, Like to the senators of the antique Rome,

With the plebeians swarming at their heels, Go forth and fetch their conquering Cæsar in:

As by a lower but loving likelihood, Were now the general of our gracious empress,

As in good time he may, from Ireland coming, Bringing rebellion broached on his sword,

How many would the peaceful city quit, To welcome him! much more, and much more cause, Did they this Harry. Now in London place him;

As yet the lamentation of the French Invites the King of England's stay at home;

The emperor's coming in behalf of France, To order peace between them; and until

All the occurrences, whatever chance Till Harry's bath returns again to us

There must we bring him; and have play'd

The Intelliger, by remembering you 'tis past.
Then brook abridgement, and your eyes advance,
After your thoughts, straight back again to France. [Exit.]

SCENE I. France. The English camp.

Enter FLUELLEN and GOWER.

Gow. Nay, that's right; but why wear you your yoke to-day? Saint Davy's day is past.

Flu. There is occasions and causes why and wherefore in all things: I will tell you, once my friend, Captain Gower: the rascally, scould, beggary, lousy, prating knave, Pistol, which you and yourself and all the world know to be no better than a fellow, look you now, of no merits, he is come to me and prings me bread and salt yesterday, look you, and bid me eat my leek: it was in a place where I could not breed no contention with him; but I will be so bold as to wear it in my cap till I see him once again, and then I will tell him a little piece of my desires.

Enter PISTOL.

Gow. Why, here he comes, swelling like a turkey-cock.

Flu. 'Tis no matter for his swellings nor his turkey-cocks. God bless you, Anunciate Pistol!
you scurvy, lousy knave, God bless you!

Pist. Ha! art thou bedlam? dost thou thirst, base Trojan,

To have me fold up Parca's fatal web?

Hence! I am qualmish at the smell of leek.

Flu. I peseech you heartily, scurvy, lousy knave, at my desires, and my requests, and my petitions, to eat, look you, this leek: because,
look you, you do not love it, nor your affections and your appetites and your digestions doo's not agree with it, I would desire you to eat it.

Pist. Not for Cadwallader and all his goats.
Flu. There is one goat for you. [Strikes him.] Will you be so good, scould knave, as eat it?

Pist. Base Trojan, thou shalt die.

Flu. You say very true, scould knave, when God's will is: I will desire you to live in the mean time, and eat your victuals: come, there is sauce for it. [Strikes him.] You called me yesterday mountain-squire; but I will make you to-day a squire of low degree. I pray you, fall to: if you can mock a leek, you can eat
a leek.

Gow. Enough, captain: you have astonished
him. 41

Flu. I say, I will make him eat some part of my leek, or I will post his pate four days.
Bite, I pray you: it is good for your green round and your bloody oxcomb.

Pist. Must I bite?

Flu. Yes, certainly, and out of doubt and out of question too, and amiable.

Pist. By this leek, I will most horribly revenge: I eat and eat, I swear— 50

Flu. Eat, I pray you: will you have some more sauce to your leek? there is not enough leek to swear by.

Pist. Quot thy cudgel; thou dost see I eat.

Flu. Much good do you, scould knave, heartily. Nay, pray you, throw nose away;
the skin is good for your broken oxcomb.
When you take occasions to see leeks hereafter,
I pray you, mock at 'em; that is all.

Pist. Good. 60
Flu. Ay, leeks is good: hold you, there is a groat to heal your pate.

Pist. Me a groat!

Flu. Yes, verily and in truth, you shall take it; or I have another leek in my pocket, which you shall eat.

Pist. I take thy groat in earnest of revenge.

Flu. If I owe you any thing, I will pay you in cudgels: you shall be a woodmonger, and buy nothing of me but cudgels. God b' wi'
you, and keep you, and heal your pate. [Exit.]

Pist. All hell shall stir for this.

Gow. Go, go; you are a counterfeit cowardly knave. Will you mock at an ancient tradition, begun upon an honourable respect, and worn as a memorable trophy of predeceased valour and dare not avouch in your deeds any of your words? I have seen you gleeking and galling at this gentleman twice or thrice. You thought, because he could not speak English in the native garb, he could not therefore handle an English cudgel: you find it otherwise; and henceforth let a Welsh correction teach you a good English condition. Fare ye well. [Exit.]

Pist. Both Fortune play the huswife with me now!

News have I, that my Nell is dead if the spirit
(if malady of France;

And there my rendezvous is quite cut off.

Oh! I do wax; and from my weary limbs

Honour is cudgelled. Well, bawd I'll turn, so

And something lean to cutpurse of quick hand.

To England will I steal, and there I'll steal;

And patches will I get unto these cudgell'd scars.

And swear I got them in the Gallia wars. [Exit.]

SCENE II. France. A royal palace.

Enter, at one door, KING HENRY, KENT,
BEDFORD, GLOUCESTER, WARWICK, WEST-
MORELAND, and other Lords; at another, the FRENCH KING, QUEEN ISABEL, the PRINCESS
KATHARINE, ALICE and other Ladies; the DUKE OF BURGUNDY, and his train.

K. Hen. Peace to this in this shade
we are met!

Unto our brother France, and to our sister,
Health and fair time of day: joy and good wishes

To our most fair and princely cousin Katharine;

And, as a branch and member of this royal

By whom this great assembly is convened,

We do salute you, Duke of Burgundy;

And, prince, French, and peers, salute you
all.

Fr. King. Right joyous are we to behold your face.

Most worthy brother England: hail, my lord;

So are you, prince of Aquitaine, every one.

Q. Isa. So happy be the issue, brother England,

Of this good day and of this gracious meeting.
As we are now glad to behold your eyes;
Your eyes, which hitherto have borne in them
Against the French, that met them in their bent,

The fatal balls of murdering basilisks:
The venom of such looks, we fairly hope,
Have lost their quality, and that this day
Shall change all griefs and quarrels into love. 20

K. Hen. To cry amen to that, thus we appear.

Q. Isa. You English princes all, I do salute you.

Bur. My duty to you both, on equal love,
Great Kings of France and England! That I have laboured,
With all my wits, my pains and strong endeavours,

To bring your most imperial majesties
Unto this bar and royal interview,
Your mightiness on both parts best can witness.
Since then my office hath so far prevail'd
That, face to face and royal eye to eye, 30

You have congreteed, let it not disgrace me,
If I demand, before this royal view,
What rub or what impediment there is,
Why that the naked, poor and mangled Peace,
Dear nurse of arts, plenty and joyful births,
Should not in this best garden of the world
Our fertile France, put up her lovely visage! 40
Alas, she hath from France too long been chased,

And all her husbandry doth lie on heaps,
Corrupting in its own fertility. 40
Her vine, the merry cheerer of the heart,
Unpruned dies; her hedges even-pleach'd,
Like prisoners wildly over-grown with hair,
Put forth disorder'd twigs; her fallow leas
The darnel, hemlock and rank fumitory
Doth root upon, while that the coulter rusts
That should deracinate such savagery;
The even mead, that erst brought sweetly forth
The freckled cowslip, burnet and green clover,
Wanting the scythe, all uncorrected, rank, 50
Conceives by idleness and nothing teems
But hateful docks, rough thistles, keekles, burn,

Losing both beauty and utility.
And as our vineyards, fallows, meads and hedges,

Defective in their natures, grow to wildness,
Even so our houses and ourselves and children
Have lost, or do not learn for want of time,
The sciences that should become our country;
But grow like savages,—as soldiers will
That nothing do but meditate on blood.— 60
To swearing and stern looks, defused attire
And every thing that seems unnatural,
Which to reduce into our former favour
You are assembled: and my speech entreats
That I may know the let, why gentle Peace
Should not expect these inconveniences
And thus we with her former qualities.

K. Hen. If, Duke of Burgundy, you would the peace,
Whose want gives growth to the imperfections

Which you have cited, you must buy that peace 70

With full accord to all our just demands;
Whose tenours and particular effects
You have enasheduled briefly in your hands.

Bur. The king hath heard them; to the which as yet

There is no answer made.

K. Hen. Well then the peace,
Which you before so urged, lies in his answer.

Fr. King. I have but with a cursory eye
O'erglanced the articles: pleaseth your grace
To appoint some of your council presently
To sit with us once more, with better heed 80
To re-survey them, we will suddenly
Pass our accept and peremptory answer.

K. Hen. Brother, we shall. Go, uncle
Exeter,

And brother Clarence, and you, brother Gloucester,

Warwick and Huntingdon, go with the king;
And take with you free power to ratify,
Augment, or alter, as your wisdoms best
Shall see advantageous for our dignity,
Any thing in or out of our demands.
And we'll consign thereto. Will you, fair sister, 90

Go with the princes, or stay here with us!

Q. Isa. Our gracious brother, I will go with them:

Haply a woman's voice may do some good,
When articles too nicely urged be stood on.

K. Hen. Yet leave our cousin Katharine
here with us:

She is our capital demand, comprised
Within the fore-rank of our articles.

Q. Isa. She hath good leave.
[Exeunt all except Henry, Katharine, and Alice.]

K. Hen. Fair Katharine, and most fair,
Will you vouchsafe to teach a soldier terms
Such as will enter at a lady's ear? 100

And plead his love-suit to her gentle heart?

Kath. Your majesty shall mock at me; I cannot speak your English.

K. Hen. O fair Katharine, if you will love me soundly with your French heart, I will be glad to hear you confess it brokenly with your English tongue. Do you like me, Kate?

Kath. Pardonnez-moi, I cannot tell what is 'like me.'

K. Hen. An angel is like you, Kate, and you are like an angel. 110

Kath. Que dit-il? que je suis semblable à les anges?

Alice. Oui, vraiment, sauf votre grace, ainsi dit-il.

K. Hen. I said so, dear Katharine; and I must not blush to affirm it.

Kath. O bon Dieu! les langues des hommes sont pleines de tromperies.

K. Hen. What says she, fair one? that the tongues of men are full of deceits?

Alice. Oui, dat de tongues of de mans is be full of deceits; dat is de princess. 120

K. Hen. The princess is the better Englishwoman. I faith, Kate, my wooing is at for thy understanding: I am glad thou canst speak so better English; for, if thou couldst, thou wouldst find me such a plain king that thou wouldst think I had sold my farm to buy my crown. I know no ways to mince it in love, but directly to say 'I love you;' then if you urge me farther than to say 'do you in faith!' I wear out my suit. Give me your answer; I'll faith, do: and so clap hands and a bargain: how say you, lady?

Kath. Sauf votre honneur, me understand well.

K. Hen. Marry, if you would put me to verses or to dance for your sake, Kate, why you undid me: for the one, I have neither words nor measure, and for the other, I have no strength in measure, yet a reasonable measure in strength. If I could win a lady at leap-frog, or by vaulting into my saddle with my armour on my back, under the correction of bragging he it spoken, I should quickly leap into a wife. Or if I might buffet for my love, or bound my horse for her favours, I could lay on like a butcher and sit like a jack-an-apes, never off. But, before God, Kate, I cannot look greenly nor gasp out my eloquence, nor I have no cunning in protestation; only downright oaths, which I never use till urged, nor never break for urging. If thou canst love a fellow of this temper, Kate, whose face is not worth sun-burning, that never looks in his glass for love of any thing he sees there, let thine eye be thy cook. I speak to thee plain soldier: if thou canst love me for this, take me; if not, to say to thee that I shall die, is true; but for thy love, by the Lord, no; yet I love thee too. And while thou livest, dear Kate, take a fellow of plain and uncoined constancy; for he performs must do thee right, because he hath not the gift to woo in other places: for these fellows of infinite tongue, that can rhyme themselves into ladies' favours, they do always reason themselves out again. What! a speaker is but a prater; a rhyme is but a ballad. A good leg will fall; a straight back will stoop; a black beard will turn white; a curled pate will grow bald; a fair face will wither; a full eye will wax hollow; but a good heart, Kate, is the sun and the moon; or rather the sun and not the moon; for it shines bright and never changes, but keeps his course truly. If thou would have such a one, take me; and take me, take a soldier; take a soldier, take a king. And what sayest thou then to my love? speak, my fair, and fairly, I pray thee.

Kath. Is it possible that I should love de enemy of France? 170

K. Hen. No; it is not possible you should love the enemy of France, Kate; but, in loving me, you should love the friend of France: for I love France so well that I will not part with a village of it; I will have it all mine: and, Kate, when France is mine and I am yours, then yours is France and you are mine.

Kath. I cannot tell what is dat.

K. Hen. No, Kate! I will tell thee in French; which I am sure will hang upon my tongue like a new-married wife about her husband's neck, hardly to be shook off. Je quand sur la possession de France, et quand vous avez la possession de moi,—let me see, what then? Saint Denis be my speed!—done votre est France et vous êtes mienne. It is as easy for me, Kate, to conquer the kingdom as to speak so much more French: I shall never move thee in French, unless it be to laugh at me.

Kath. Sauf votre honneur, le François que vous parlez, il est meilleur que l'Anglois lequel ie parle.

K. Hen. No, faith, is't not, Kate: but thy speaking of my tongue, and I thine, most truly-falsely, must needs be granted to be much at one. But, Kate, dost thou understand thus much English, canst thou love me?

Kath. I cannot tell.

K. Hen. Can any of your neighbours tell, Kate? I'll ask them. Come, I know thou lovest me; and at night, when you come into your closet, you'll question this gentlewoman about me; and I know, Kate, you will to her dispraise those parts in me that you love with your heart: but, good Kate, mock me mercifully; the rather, gentle princess, because I love thee cruelly. If ever thou best mine, Kate, as I have a saving faith within me tells me thou shalt, I get thee with scrambling, and thou must therefore needs prove a good soldier-breeder; shall not thou and I, between Saint Denis and Saint George, compound a boy, half French, half English, that shall go to Constantinople and take the Turk by the beard? I shall we not? hat sayest thou, my fair flower-de-luce?

Kath. I do not know dat.

K. Hen. No; 'tis hereafter to know, but now to promise: do but now promise, Kate, you will endeavour for your French part of such a boy; and for my English moiety take the word of a king and a bachelor. How answer you, la plus belle Katharine du monde, mon très cher et dévot déesse!

Kath. Your majestee ave fausse French enough to deceive de most sage demoiselle dat is en France.

K. Hen. Now, lie upon my false French! By mine honour, in true English, I love thee, Kate: by which honour I dare not swear thou lovest me; yet my blood begins to flatter me that thou dost, notwithstanding the poor and untempering effect of my visage. Now, be shrew my father's ambition! he was thinking of civil wars when he got me; therefore was I created with a stubborn outside, with an aspect of iron, that, when I come to woo ladies, I fright them. But, in faith, Kate, the closer I wax, the better I shall appear: my countenance, that old age, that ill layer up of beauty, can do no more spoil upon my face: thou hast me, if thou hast me, at the worst; and thou shalt wear me, if thou wear me, better and better; and therefore tell me, most fair Katharine, wilt you have me? Put off your maiden blushes; awaken the thoughts of your heart with the me by the anthing:

these aloud
France is the ear

and is thine,
and Henry Plantagenet.

thine; who, though I speak it before his face, if he be not fellow with the best king, thou shalt find the best king of good fellows. Come, your answer in broken music; for thy voice is muffled and thy English broken; therefore, queen of all, Katharine, break thy mind to me in broken English; wilt thou have me?

Kath. Dat is as it sall please de roi mon pere.

K. Hen. Nay, it will please him well, Kate; it shall please him, Kate.

Kath. Dem it sall also content me. 270

K. Hen. Upon that I kiss your hand, and I call you my queen.

Kath. Laissez, mon seigneur, laissez, laissez : ma foi, je ne veux point que vous abaissez votre grandeur en baisant la main d'une de votre seigneurie indigne serviteur; excusés-moi, je vous supplie, mon très-puissant seigneur.

K. Hen. Then I will kiss your lips, Kate.

Kath. Les dames et demoiselles pour être baisées devant leur noce, il n'est pas la coutume de France. 281

K. Hen. Madam my interpreter, what says she?

Alice. Dat it is not be de fashion pour les ladies of France,—I cannot tell vat is baiser en English.

K. Hen. To kiss.

Alice. Your majesty entendre better que moi.

K. Hen. It is not a fashion for the maids in France to kiss before they are married, would she say?

Alice. Oui, vraiment.

K. Hen. O Kate, nice customs curtsy to great kings. Dear Kate, you and I cannot be confined within the weak list of a country's fashion: we are the makers of manners, Kate; and the liberty that follows our places stops the mouth of all find-faults; as I will do yours, for upholding the nice fashion of your country in denying me a kiss: therefore, patiently and yielding, [Kissing her.] You have witchcraft in your lips, Kate: there is more eloquence in a sugar touch of them than in the tongues of the French council; and they should sooner persuade Harry of England than a general petition of monarchs. Here comes your father.

Re-enter the French King and his Queen, BURGUNDY, and other Lords.

Bar. God save your majesty! my royal cousin, teach you our princess English?

K. Hen. I would have her learn, my fair cousin, how perfectly I love her; and that is good English.

Bar. Is she not apt?

K. Hen. Our tongue is rough, coz, and my condition is not smooth; so that, having neither the voice nor the heart of flattery about me, I cannot so conjure up the spirit of love in her, that he will appear in his true likeness.

Bar. Pardon the frankness of my mirth, if I answer you for that. If you would conjure in his true likeness, he must be blind. Can you blame her being a maid yet rosed over with the virgin crimson of modesty, if she deny the appearance of a naked blind boy in her naked seeing self? It were, my lord, a hard condition for a maid to consign to.

K. Hen. Yet they do wink and yield, as love is blind and enforces.

Bar. They are then excused, my lord, when they see not what they do. 330

K. Hen. Then, good my lord, teach your cousin to consent winking.

Bar. I will wink on her to consent, my lord, if you will teach her to know my meaning: for maids, well summered and warm kept, are like flies at Bartholomew-tide, blind, though they have their eyes; and then they will endure handling, which before would not abide looking on.

K. Hen. This moral ties me over to time and a hot summer; and so I shall catch the fly, your cousin, in the latter end and she must be blind too.

Bar. As love is, my lord, before it loves.

K. Hen. It is so: and you may, some of you, thank love for my blindness, who cannot see many a fair French city for one fair French maid that stands in my way.

Fr. King. Yes, my lord, you see them respectively, the cities turned into a maid; for they are all girdled with maiden walls that war hath never entered. 350

K. Hen. Shall Kate be my wife?

Fr. King. So please you.

K. Hen. I am content; so the maiden cities you talk of may wait on her: so the maid that stood in the way for my wish shall show me the way to my will.

Fr. King. We have consented to all terms of reason.

K. Hen. Is't so, my lords of England?

West. The king hath granted every article: His daughter first, and then in sequel all, 361 According to their firm proposed natures.

Eze. Only he hath not yet subscribed this: Where your majesty demands, that the King of France, having any occasion to write for matter of grant, shall name your highness in this form and with this addition, in French Notre très-cher fils Henri, Roi d'Angleterre, Hérédier de France; and thus in Latin, Preciarissimus filius noster Henricus, Rex Anglie, et Hæres Francie.

Fr. King. Nor this I have not, brother, so denied, But your request shall make me let it pass.

K. Hen. I pray you then, in love and dear alliance,

Let that one article rank with the rest; And thereupon give me your daughter.

Fr. King. Take her, fair son, and from her blood raise up

Issue to me; that the contending Of France and England, whose very

With envy each other's happiness, May cease their hatred, and this dear conjunction Plant neighbourhood and Christian-like accord 380

In their sweet bosoms, that never war advance | And may our oaths well kept and prosperous
His bleeding sword 'twixt England and fair | be!
France. [Sennet. Exeunt.]

All. Amen!

K. Hen. Now, welcome, Kate: and bear me
witness all,
That here I kiss her as my sovereign queen.

[Flourish.]
Q. Isa. God, the best maker of all marriages, Combine your hearts in one, your realms in
one!

As man and wife, being two, are one in love,
So be there 'twixt your kingdoms such a spousal, 390

That never may ill office, or fell jealousy,
Which troubles oft the bed of blessed marriage,
Thrust in between the paction of these kingdoms,

To make divorce of their incorporate league:
That English may as French, French English-
men,

Receive each other. God speak this Amen!

All. Amen!

K. Hen. Prepare we for our marriage: on which day,

My Lord of Burgundy, we'll take your oath,
And all the peers', for surety of our leagues.
Then shall I swear to Kate, and you to me;

EPILOGUE.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. Thus far, with rough and all-unable pen,

Our bending author hath pursued the story,
In little room confining mighty men,

Mangling by starts the full course of their glory.

Small time, but in that small most greatly lived
This star of England: Fortune made his

sword;

By which the world's best garden he achieved,
And of it left his son imperial lord.

Henry the Sixth, in infant bands crown'd King
Of France and England, did this king succeed; 40

Whose state so many had the managing,

That they lost France and made his England
bleed;

Which oft our stage hath shown; and, for their
sake,

In your fair minds let this acceptance take.

SCENE: Partly in England, and partly in France.

ACT I.

SCENE I. Westminster Abbey.

Dead March. Enter the Funeral of KING HENRY the Fifth, attended on by the DUKE OF BEDFORD, Regent of France; the DUKE OF GLOUCESTER, Protector; the DUKE OF EXETER, the EARL OF WARWICK, the BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, Herald, &c.

Bed. Hung be the heavens with black, yield day to night!

Comets, importing change of times and states,
 Brandish your crystal tresses in the sky,
 And with them scourge the bad revolting stars
 That have consorted unto Henry's death!
King Henry the Fifth, too famous to live long!
England's loss a king of so much worth.

Glou. England ne'er had a king until his time.

Virtue he had, deserving to command:
 His brandish'd sword did blind men with his beams:
 His arms spread wider than a dragon's wings;
 His sparkling eyes, replete with wrathful fire,
 More dazzled and drove back his enemies
 Than mid-day sun fierce bent against their faces.

What should I say? his deeds exceed all speech:
 He ne'er lift up his hand but conquered.

Eze. We mourn in black: why mourn we not in blood?

Henry is dead and never shall revive:
 Upon a wooden coffin we attend,
 And death's dishonourable victory
 We with our stately presence glorify.

Like captives bound to a triumphant car,
What I shall we curse the planets of mishap
That plotted thus our glory's overthrow!
(Or shall we think the subtle-witted French
Conjurers and sorcerers, that afraid of him
By magic verbes have contrived his end?)

Win. He was a king bless'd of the King of kings.

Unto the French the dreadful judgement-day
So dreadful will not be as was his sight.

The battles of the Lord of hosts he fought:
The church's prayers made him so prosperous.

Glor. The church! where is it! Had not churchmen pray'd,

His thread of life had not so soon decay'd:
None do you like but an effeminate prince,

Whom, like a school-boy, you may over-awe.

Win. Gloucester, whatever we like, thou art protector

And lookest to command the prince and realm.
Thy wife is proud; she holdeth thee in awe,

More than God or religious churchmen may.

Glor. Name not religion, for thou lovest the flesh,

And ne'er throughout the year to church thou
go'st

Except it be to pray against thy foes.

Bed. Cense, cense these jars and rest your minds in peace:

Iet's to the altar: heralds, wait on us:
Instead of gold, we'll offer up our arms;

Since arms avail not now that Henry's dead.
Posterity, await for wretched years,

When at their mothers' moist eyes babes shall suck,

Our isle be made a nourish of salt tears,
And none but women left to wail the dead.

Henry the Fifth, thy ghost I invoke:
Prosper this realm, keep it from civil broils,

(Combat with adverse planets in the heavens!
A far more glorious star thy soul will make
Than Julius Cæsar or bright—

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My honourable lords, health to you
all!

Sad tidings bring I to you out of France,
Of loss, of slaughter and discomfiture:

Guienne, Champagne, Rheims, Orleans, 60
Paris, Guyonn, Poitiers, are all quite lost.

Bed. What say'st thou, man, before dead
Henry's come!

Speak softly, or the loss of those great towns
Will make him burst his lead and rise from
death.

Glor. In Paris lost? Is Rouen yielded up?
If Henry were recall'd to life again,

Those news would cause him once more yield the ghost.

Ere. How were they lost? what treachery was used?

Mess. No treachery; but want of men and money.

Amongst the soldiers this is muttered, 70
That here you maintain several factions,

And whilst a field should be dispatch'd and fought,

You are disputing of your generals:

One would have lingering wars with little cost;
Another would fly swift, but wanteth wings;

A third thinks, without expense at all,
By guileful fair words peace may be obtain'd

Awake, awake, English nobility!
Let not sloth dim your honours new-begot:

Cropp'd are the flower-de-luces in your arms;
Of England's coat one half is cut away. 81

Ere. Were our tears wanting to this funeral,
These tidings would call forth their flowing tides.

Bed. Me they concern; Regent I am of
France.

Give me my steeled coat. I'll fight for France.
Away with these disgraceful waiting robes!

Wounds will I lend the French instead of eyes,
To weep their intermissive miseries.

Enter to them another Messenger.

Mess. Lords, view these letters full of bad nuisance.

France is revolted from the English quite, 90
Except some petty towns of no import:

The Dauphin Charles is crowned king in Rheims;

The Bastard of Orleans with him is join'd;
Reignier, Duke of Anjou, doth take his part;

The Duke of Alençon fleeth to his side.

Ere. The Dauphin crowned king! all fly to
him!

O, whether shall we fly from this reproach!
Glor. We will not fly, but to our enemies'
throats.

Bedford, if thou be slack, I'll fight it out.

Bed. Gloucester, why doubt'st thou of my forwardness? 100

An army have I muster'd in my thoughts,
Wherewith already France is overrun.

Enter another Messenger.

Mess. My gracious lords, to add to your laments,

Wherewith you now bedew King Henry's hearse,

I must inform you of a dismal fight
Betwixt the stout Lord Talbot and the French.

Win. What! wherein Talbot overcame?
Is't so?

Mess. O, no; whereto Lord Talbot was o'er-thrown:

The circumstance I'll tell you more at large.
The tenth of August last this dreadful lord, 110

Retiring from the siege of Orleans,
Having full scarce six thousand in his troop,

By three and twenty thousand of the French
Was round encompassed and set upon.

No leisure had he to enrank his men;
He wanted pikes to set before his archers;

Instead wherof sharp stakes pluck'd out of hedgus

They pitched in the ground confusedly,
To keep the horsemen off from breaking in.

More than three hours the fight continued; 120
Where valiant Talbot above human thought

Enacted wonders with his sword and lance:
Hundreds he sent to hell, and none durst stand
him;

FIRST PART OF KING HENRY VI

[ACT I

and every where, enraged he flew:
 I exclaim'd, the devil was in arms;
 whole army stood amazed on him:
 soldiers spring his undaunted spirit
 A Talbot! a Talbot! cried out again
 And rush'd into the bowels of the battle.
 Here had the conquest fully been seal'd up, 130
 If Sir John Fastolf had not play'd the coward:
 He, being in the vaward, placed behind
 With purpose to relieve and follow them,
 Cowardly fled, not having struck one stroke.
 Hence grew the general wreck and massacre;
 Enclosed were they with their enemies:
 A base Walloon, to win the Dauphin's grace,
 Thrust Talbot with a spear into the back,
 Whom all France with their chief assembled
 strength

Durst not presume to look once in the face. 140
Bed. Is Talbot slain? then I will slay myself.

For living idly here in pomp and ease,
 Whilst such a worthy leader, wanting aid,
 Unto his dastard foemen is betray'd.
Mess. O no, he lives; but is took prisoner,
 And Lord Scales with him and Lord Hungerford:

Most of the rest slaughter'd or took likewise.
Bed. His ransom there is none but I shall pay:
 I'll take the Dauphin headlong from his throne: 149

His crown shall be the ransom of my friend;
 Four of their lords I'll change for one of ours.
 Farewell, my masters; to my task will I;
 Bonfires in France forthwith I am to make,
 To keep our great Saint George's feast withal:
 Ten thousand soldiers with me I will take,
 Whose bloody deeds shall make all Europe quake.

Mess. So you had need; for Orleans is besieged:
 The English army is grown weak and faint:
 The Earl of Salisbury craveth supply,
 And hardly keeps his men from mutiny, 160
 Since they, so few, watch such a multitude.

Exc. Remember, lords, your oaths to Henry sworn,
 Either to quell the Dauphin utterly,
 Or bring him in obedience to your yoke.

Bed. I do remember it; and here take my leave.

To go about my preparation. [Exit.]

Glo. I'll to the Tower with all the haste I can.

To view the artillery and munition;
 And then I will proclaim young Henry king. [Exit.]

Exc. To Eatham will I, where the young king is. 170

Being certain'd his special governor,
 And for his safety there I'll best devise. [Exit.]

Win. Each hath his place and function to attend:

I am left out; for me nothing remains.
 But long I will not be Jack out of office:
 The king from Eatham I intend to steal
 And sit at chiefest steer of public weal.

[Exit.]

SCENE II. France. Before Orleans.

Sound a flourish. Enter CHARLES, ALENÇON, and BURGUNDY, marching with drum and soldiers.

Char. Mars his true moving, even as in the heavens
 So in the earth, to this day is not known:
 Late did he shine upon the English side;
 Now we are victors; upon us he smiles.
 What towns of any moment but we have?
 At pleasure here we lie near Orleans;
 Otherwhiles the famish'd English, like pale ghosts,

 Faintly besiege us one hour in a month.
Alen. They want their porridge and their full bull-beeves:

 Either they must be dieted like mules
 And have their provender tied to their mouths:
 Or pitious they will look, like drowned mice.

Burg. Let's raise the siege: why live we idly here?

Talbot is taken, whom we wont to fear:
 Remaineth none but mad-brain'd Salisbury;
 And he may well in fretting spend his gall,
 Nor men nor money hath he to make war.

Char. Sound, sound alarm! we will rush on them.

Now for the honour of the forlorn French!
 Him I forgive my death that killeth me
 When he sees me go back one foot or fly. [Exit.]

Here alarm: they are beaten back by the English with great loss. Re-enter CHARLES, ALENÇON, and BURGUNDY.

Char. Who ever saw the like! what men have I!

Dogs! cowards! dastards! I would ne'er have fled.

But that they left me 'midst my enemies.

Burg. Salisbury is a desperate homicide:
 He fighteth as one weary of his life.

The other lords, like lions wanting food,
 Do rush upon us as their hungry prey.

Alen. Froismart, a countryman of our records,

England all Oivers and Bowlands bred
 During the time Edward the Third did reign.

More truly now may this be verified:
 For none but Samsons and Goliaths

It sendeth forth to skirmish. One to ten!
 Lean raw-boned rascals! who would e'er suppose

They had such courage and audacity!

Char. Let's leave this town; for they are bare-brain'd slaves.

And hunger will enforce them to be more eager:

Of old I know them; rather with their teeth
 The walls they'll tear down than forsake the siege.

Burg. I think, by some odd gimmers or device

Their arms are set like clocks, still to strike on:
 Else ne'er could they hold out so as they do.

By my consent, we'll even let them alone.
Alen. Be it so.

Enter the BASTARD of Orleans.

Bast. Where's the Prince Dauphin? I have news for him.

Char. Bastard of Orleans, thrice welcome to us.

Bast. Methinks your looks are sad, your cheer spall'd:

Hath the late overthrow wrought this offence? Be not dismay'd, for succour is at hand:

A holy maid hither with me I bring, 50

Which by a vision sent to her from heaven

Ordained is to raise this tedious siege

And drive the English forth the bounds of France.

The spirit of deep prophecy she hath,

Exceeding the nine sibyls of old Rome:

What's past and what's to come she can descry.

Speak, shall I call her in? Believe my words,

For they are certain and unfallible.

Char. Go, call her in. [Exit Bastard.]

But first, to try her skill, 60

Reignier, stand thou as Dauphin in my place:

Question her proudly; let thy looks be stern:

By this means shall we sound what skill she hath.

Re-enter the BASTARD of Orleans, with JOAN LA PUELLE.

Reig. Fair maid, is't thou wilt do these wondrous feats?

Puc. Reignier, is't thou that thinkest to beguile me?

Where is the Dauphin? Come, come from behind:

I know thee well, though never seen before.

Be not amazed, there's nothing hid from me:

In private will I talk with thee apart.

Stand back, you lords, and give us leave awhile.

Reig. She takes upon her bravely at first dash.

Puc. Dauphin, I am by birth a shepherd's daughter, 70

My wit untrain'd in any kind of art.

Heaven and our Lady gracious hath it pleased

To shine on my contemptible estate:

Lo, whilst I waited on my tender lambs,

And to sun's parching heat display'd my cheeks,

God's mother deigned to appear to me

And in a vision full of majesty

Will'd me to leave my base vocation 80

And free my country from calamity:

Her aid she promised and assured success:

In complete glory she reveal'd herself;

And, whereas I was black and swart before,

With those clear eyes which she infused on me

That beauty am I blest with which you see.

Ask me what question thou canst possible,

And I will answer unpermeditated:

My courage try by combat, if thou darest,

And thou shalt find that I exceed my sex. 90

Resolve on this, thou shalt be fortunate,

If thou receive me for thy warlike mate.

Char. Thou hast astonish'd me with thy terms;

Only this proof I'll of thy valour make:

In single combat thou shalt buckle with me.

And if thou vanquishest, thy words are true; Otherwise I renounces all confidence.

Puc. I am prepared: here is my keen-edged sword.

Deck'd with five flower-de-luces on each side:

The which at Touraine, in Saint Katharine's churchyard, 100

Out of a great deal of old iron I chose forth.

Char. Then come, o' God's name; I fear no woman.

Puc. And while I live, I'll ne'er fly from a man.

[Here they fight, and Joan La Pucelle overcomes.]

Char. Stay, stay thy hands! thou art an Amazon

And fightest with the sword of Deborah.

Puc. Christ's mother helps me, else I were too weak.

Char. Whoe'er helps thee, 'tis thou that must help me:

Impatiently I burn with thy desire;

My heart and hands thou hast at once subdued.

Excellent Pucelle, if thy name be so, 110

Let me thy servant and not sovereign be:

'Tis the French Dauphin sueth to thee thus.

Puc. I must not yield to any rites of love,

For my profession's sacred from above:

When I have chased all thy foes from hence,

Then will I think upon a recompense.

Char. Meantime look gracious on thy prostrate thrall.

Reig. My lord, methinks, is very long in talk.

Alen. Doubtless he shrives this woman to her smock;

Else ne'er could he so long protract his speech.

Reig. Shall we disturb him, since he keeps no mean? 120

Alen. He may mean more than we poor men do know:

These women are shrewd tempters with their tongues.

Reig. My lord, where are you? what devise you on?

Shall we give over Orleans, or no?

Puc. Why, no, I say, distrustful recreants!

Fight till the last gasp; I will be your guard.

Char. What she says I'll confirm; we'll fight it out.

Puc. Asign'd am I to be the English scourge.

This night the siege assuredly I'll raise: 130

Expect Saint Martin's summer, halcyon days,

Since I have entered into these wars.

Glory is like a circle in the water,

Which never ceaseth to enlarge itself

Till by broad spreading it disfigure to 140

With Henry's death the English circle;

Dispersed are the glories it included.

Now am I like that proud insulting ship

Which Caesar and his fortune bore down

Char. Was Mahomet inspired with a devil?

Thou with an eagle art inspired?

Helen, the mother of great Constantine,

Was not Saint Philip's daughter, which Provest her of Rome, that's more on woman's

How may I reverently worship thee enough?

Alen. Leave off delays, and let us raise the

Brig. Woman, do what thou canst to save our honours;

Drive them from Orleans and be immortalised.

Char. Presently we'll try: come, let's away about it:

No prophet will I trust, if she prove false. 150
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. London. Before the Tower.

Enter the DUKE OF GLOUCESTER, with his Serving-men in blue coats.

Glos. I am come to survey the Tower this day:

Since Henry's death, I fear, there is conveyance. Where be these warders, that they wait not here!

Open the gates; 'tis Gloucester that calls.

First Warder. [Within] Who's there that knocks so imperiously!

First Serv. It is the noble Duke of Gloucester.

Second Warder. [Within] Whoe'er he be, you may not be let in.

First Serv. Villains, answer you so the lord protector!

First Warder. [Within] The Lord protect him! so we answer him:

We do no otherwise than we are will'd. 10

Glos. Who willed you? or whose will stands but mine!

There's none protector of the realm but I. Break up the gates, I'll be your warrant:

Shall I be flouted thus by dunghill grooms? [Gloucester's men rush at the Tower Gates, and Woodville the Lieutenant speaks within.]

Woods. What noise is this! what traitors have we here!

Glos. Lieutenant, is it you whose voice I hear!

Open the gates; here's Gloucester that would enter.

Woods. Have patience, noble duke; I may not open:

The Cardinal of Winchester forbids: From him I have express commandment 20

That thou nor none of thine shall be let in.

Glos. Faint-hearted Woodville, prizest him for me!

Arrogant Winchester, that haughty prelate, Whom Henry, our late sovereign, ne'er could break!

Thou art no friend to God or to the king: Open the gates, or I'll shut thee out shortly.

Serving-men. Open the gates unto the lord protector.

Or we'll burst them open, if that you come not quickly.

Enter to the Protector at the Tower Gates WINCHESTER and his men in tawny coats.

Win. How now, ambitious Humphry! what's this!

so he shut out!

me 30

Win. I do, thou most usurping proditor, And not protector, of the king or realm.

Glos. Stand back, thou manifest constable; Thou that contrivedst to murder our dead lord;

Thou that givest whores indulgences to sin: I'll canvass thee in thy broad cardinal's hat,

If thou proceed in this thy insolence.

Win. Nay, stand thou back; I will not budge a foot:

This be Damascus, be thou cursed Cain, To slay thy brother Abel, if thou wilt.

Glos. I will not slay thee, but I'll drive thee back:

Thy scarlet robes as a child's bearing-cloth I'll use to carry thee out of this place.

Win. Do what thou darest; I bear thee to thy face.

Glos. What! am I dared and bearded to my face!

Draw, men, for all this privileged place: Blue coats to tawny coats. Priest, beware your beard;

I mean to tug it and to cuff you soundly: Under my foot I stamp thy cardinal's hat:

In spite of pope or dignities of church, 50 Here by the cheeks I'll drag thee up and down.

Win. Gloucester, thou wilt answer this before the pope.

Glos. Winchester goose, I cry, a rope! a rope!

Now beat them hence; why do you let them stay!

Thee I'll chase hence, thou wolf in sheep's array.

Out, tawny coats! out, scarlet hypocrite!

Here Gloucester's men beat out the Cardinal's men, and enter in the hurly-burly the Mayor of London and his Officers.

May. Fie, lords! that you, being supreme magistrates,

Thus contumeliously should break the peace!

Glos. Peace, mayor! thou know'st little of my wrongs:

Here's Beaufort, that regards not God nor king, 60

Hath here distrain'd the Tower to his use.

Win. Here's Gloucester, a foe to citizens, One that still motions war and never peace.

(Overcharging your free purses with large fines, That seeks to overthrow religion,

Because he is protector of the realm, And would have armour here out of the Tower,

To crown himself king and suppress the prince.

Glos. I will not answer thee with words, but blows. [Here they skirmish again.]

May. Nought rests for me in this tumultuous strife 70

But to make open proclamation:

Come, officer; as loud as e'er thou canst Cry.

Off. All manner of men assembled here in arms this day against God's peace and the king's, we charge and command you, in his highness' name, to depart from all dwelling-places; and not to wear sword, weapon, or dagger, upon pain of death.

or see any upon pain of death.

Glow. Cardinal, I'll be no breaker of the law;

But we shall meet, and break our minds at large.

Win. Gloucester, we will meet; to thy cost, be sure;

Thy heart-blood I will have for this day's work.

May. I'll call for clubs, if you will not away.

This cardinal's more naughty than the devil.

Glow. Mayor, farewell; thou dost but what thou mayst.

Win. Abominable Gloucester, guard thy head;

For I intend to have it ere long.

[Exeunt, severally, Gloucester and Winchester with their Serving-men.]

May. See the coast clear'd, and then we will depart.

Good God, these nobles should such stomachs bear!

I myself fight not once in forty year. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Orleans.

Enter, on the walls, a Master Gunner and his Boy.

M. Gun. Sirrah, thou know'st how Orleans is besieged,

And how the English have the suburbs won.

Boy. Father, I know; and oft have shot at them,

How'er unfortunate I miss'd my aim.

M. Gun. But now thou shalt not. Be thou ruled by me:

Chief master-gunner am I of this town;

Something I must do to procure me grace.

The prince's espials have inform'd me

How the English, in the suburbs close in-trench'd,

Went through a secret grate of iron bars

In yonder tower to overpeer the city

And thence discover how with most advantage

They may vex us with shot or with assault.

To intercept this inconvenience,

A piece of ordnance 'gainst it I have plac'd;

And even these three days have I watch'd,

If I could see them.

Now do thou watch, for I can stay no longer.

If thou spy'st any, run and bring me word;

And thou shalt find me at the governor's. [Exit.]

Boy. Father, I warrant you; take you no care;

I'll never trouble you, if I may spy them. [Exit.]

Enter, on the turrets, the LORDS SALISBURY and TALBOT, SIR WILLIAM GLANSDALE, SIR THOMAS GARGRAVE, and others.

Sal. Talbot, my life, my joy, again return'd!

How wert thou handled being prisoner?

Or by what means got at thou to be released?

Discours. I prithee, on this turret's top.

Tal. The Duke of Bedford had a prisoner

Call'd the brave Lord Ponton de Santarilles;

For him was I exchanged and ransomed.

But with a haire man of arms by far

Once in contempt they would have barter'd me;

Which I disdain'd scorn'd and crav'd death

Rather than I would be so vile-esteem'd.

In fine, redeem'd I was as I desired.

But, O! the treacherous Fastolfe wounds my heart,

Whom with my bare fists I would execute,

If I now had him brought into my power.

Sal. Yet tell'st thou not how thou wert entertain'd.

Tal. With scoffs and scorn and contumelious taunts.

In open market-place produced they me,

To be a public spectacle to all:

Here, said they, is the terror of the French,

The scarecrow that affrights our children so.

Then broke I from the officers that led me,

And with my nails digg'd stones out of the ground,

To hurt at the beholders of my shame:

My grisly countenance made others fly;

None durst come near for fear of sudden death.

In iron walls they deem'd me not secure;

So great fear of my name 'mongst them was spread

That they supposed I could rend bars of steel

And spurn in pieces posts of adamant:

Wherefore a guard of chosen shot I had

That walk'd about me every minute while;

And if I did but stir out of my bed,

Ready they were to shoot me to the heart.

Enter the Boy with a linkstock.

Sal. I grieve to hear what torments you endured,

But we will be revenged sufficiently.

Now it is superfluous in Orleans:

Here, through this grate, I count each one

And view the Frenchmen how they fortify;

Let us look in; the sight will much delight thee.

Sir Thomas Gargrave, and Sir William Glansdale,

Let me have your express opinions

Where is best place to make our battery next.

Gar. I think, at the north gate; for there stand lords.

Glas. And I, here, at the bulwark of the bridge.

Tal. For aught I see, this city must be famish'd,

Or with light skirmishes enfeebled.

[Here they shoot. Salisbury and Gargrave fall.]

Sal. O Lord, have mercy on us, wretched sinners!

Gar. O Lord, have mercy on me, woful man!

Tal. What chance is this that suddenly hath crown'd us!

Speak, Salisbury; at least, if thou canst speak:

How farrest thou, mirror of all martial men?

One of thy eyes and thy cheek's side struck off!

Accused tower! accused fatal hand!

That hath contrived this woful tragedy!

In thirteen battles Salisbury's o'brance;

Henry the Fifth he first train'd to the wars;

Whilst any trumpet did sound, or drum struck up,

Sword did ne'er leave striking in the field,

At living men, Salisbury!

doth

One eye thou hast, to look to heaven for grace:
The sun with one eye vieweth all the world.
Heaven, be thou gracious to none alive,
If Salisbury wants mercy at thy hands!
Bate hence his body: I will help to bury it.
Sir Thomas Garrigue, hast thou any life?
Speak unto Talbot: nay, look up to him.
Salisbury, cheer thy spirit with this comfort;
Thou shalt not die whiles—
He beckons with his hand and smiles on me,
As who should say 'When I am dead and gone,
Remember to avenge me on the French.'
Plantagenet, I will; and like thee, Nero,
Play on the lute, beholding the tow'ns burn:
Wretched shall France be only in my name.
[Here an alarm, and it thunders and lightens.]
What stir is this? what tumult 's in the heavens?
Whence cometh this alarm and the noise?

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, my lord, the French have gather'd head:
The Dauphin, with one Joan la Pucelle joind,
A holy prophetess new risen up,
Is come with a great power to raise the siege.
[Here Salisbury lifteth himself up and groans.]
Tal. Hear, hear how dying Salisbury doth groan!
It irks his heart he cannot be revenged.
Frenchmen, I'll be a Salisbury to you:
Pucelle or puzzle, dolphin or dogfish,
Your hearts I'll stamp out with my horse's heels,
And make a quagmire of your mingled brains.
Convey me Salisbury into his tent,
And then we'll try what these dastard Frenchmen dare, [Alarm. Exit.]

SCENE V. The same.

*Here an alarm again; and TALBOT pursueth
the DAUPHIN, and driveth him: then enter JOAN LA PUELLE, driving Englishmen before her, and exit after them: then re-enter TALBOT.*

Tal. Where is my strength, my valour, and my force?
Our English troops retire, I cannot stay them;
A woman clad in armour chaseth them.

Re-enter LA PUELLE.

Here, here she comes, I'll have a bout with
thee;
Devil or devil's dam, I'll conjure thee:
Blood will I draw on thee, thou art a witch,
And straightway give thy soul to him thou

Puc. Unea, come, 'tis only I that must disgrace thee. [Here they fight.]

Tal. Heavens, can you suffer hell so to prevail?

My breast I'll burst with straining of my arms.

And when my shoulders crack my arms asunder,
My sword shall chastise this high-minded strumpet.

[They fight again.]
Talbot. Talbot, farewell; thy hour is not yet
come.

I must go victual Orleans forthwith.

[A short alarm: then enter the town with soldiers.]

O'ertake me, if thou canst; I scorn strength.
Go, go, cheer up thy hungry men;
Help Salisbury to make his list:
This day is ours, as many more be. [Exit.]

Tal. My thoughts are whirled wheel;

I know not where I am, nor what I
A witch, by fear, not force, like Hannibal, Drives back our troops and conquers as she lists:

So bees with smoke and doves with noisome
stench

Are from their hives and houses driven away.
They call'd us for our fierceness English dogs;
Now, like to whelps, we crying run away.

[A short alarm.]
Hark, countrymen! either renew the fight,
Or tear the lions out of England's coat;
Renounce your soil, give sheep in lions' stead:
Sheep run not half so treacherous from the wolf,

Or horse or oxen from the leopard,
As you fly from your oft-subdued slaves.

[Alarm. Here another skirmish.]
It will not be: retire into your trenches:
You all consented unto Salisbury's death,
For none would strike a stroke in his revenge.

Pucelle is enter'd into Orleans,
In spite of us or aught that we could do.
O, would I were to die with Salisbury!

The shame hereof will make me hide my head.
[Exit Talbot. Alarm; retreat; flourish.]

SCENE VI. The same.

Enter, on the walls, LA PUELLE, CHARLES, REIGNIER, ALENÇON, and Soldiers.

Puc. Advance our waving colours on the walls;

Rescued is Orleans from the English:
Thus Joan la Pucelle hath perform'd her word.

Char. Divinest creature, Astraea's daughter,
How shall I honour thee for this success?

Thy promises are like Adonis' gardens
That one day bloom'd and fruitful were the next.

France, triumph in thy glorious prophetess!
Recovered is the town of Orleans:

More blessed hap did ne'er befall our state.
Reig. Why ring not out the bells aloud throughout the town?

Dauphin, command the citizens make bonfires
And feast and banquet in the open streets,
To celebrate the joy that God hath given us.

Alen. All France will be replete with mirth and joy,

When they shall hear how we have play'd the
men.

Char. 'Tis Joan, not we, by whom the day
is won:

For which I will divide my crown with her,
And all the priests and monks in my realm shall in procession sing her endless praises.

A stately pyramid to her I'll raise:
Than Rhodope's or Maugham's ever was:

In memory of her when she is dead,
 Her ashes in an urn more precious
 Than the rich-jewell'd coffer of Darius,
 Transported shall be at high festivals
 Before the kings and queens of France.
 No longer on Saint Denis will we cry,
 But Joan la Pucelle shall be France's saint.
 Come in, and let us banquet royally,
 After this golden day of victory. 30
[Flourish. Excunt.]

ACT II

SCENE I. Before Orleans.

Enter a Sergeant of a band, with two Sentinels.

Serg. Sirs, take your places and be vigilant:
 If any noise or soldier you perceive
 Near to the walls, by some apparent sign
 Let us have knowledge at the court of guard.

First Sent. Sergeant, you shall. [Exit Sergeant.] Thus are poor servitors,
 When others sleep upon their quiet beds,
 Constrain'd to watch in darkness, rain and cold.

[Enter TALBOT, BEDFORD, BURGUNDY, and forces, with scaling-ladders, their drums beating a dead march.]

Tal. Lord Regent, and redoubt Burgundy,
 By whose approach the regions of Artois,
 Wallon and Picardy are friends to us, 10
 This happy night the Frenchmen are secure,
 Having all day caroused and banqueted:
 Embrace we then this opportunity
 As fitting best to quittance their deceit
 Contrived by art and baleful sorcery.

Bed. Coward of France! how much he wrongs his fame,
 Despairing of his own arm's fortitude,
 To join with witches and the help of hell!
Bur. Traitors have never other company,
 But what's that Pucelle whom they term so pure! 20

Tal. A maid, they say.

Bed. A maid! and be so martial!

Bur. Pray God she prove not masculine ere long.

If underneath the standard of the French
 She carry armour as she hath begun.

Tal. Well, let them practise and converse with spirits:

God is our fortress, in whose conquering name
 Let us resolve to scale their stinky bulwarks.

Bed. Ascend, brave Talbot; we will follow
 thee.

Tal. Not all together: better far, I guess,
 That we do make our entrance several ways; 30

That, if it chanceth that one of us do fail,
 The other yet may rise against their force.

Bed. Agreed: I'll to yond corner.

Bur. And I to this.

Tal. And here will Talbot mount, or make his grave.

Now, Salisbury, see thou, and for the right
 Of English Henry, shall this night appear
 How much in duty I am bound to both.

Sent. Arm! arm! the enemy doth make assault! [Cry: 'St George,' 'A Talbot!']

*The French leap over the walls in their shirts.
 Enter, several ways, the BASTARD of Orleans, ALENÇON, and REIGNIER, half ready, and half unready.*

Alen. How now, my lords! what, all un-ready so!

Bast. Unready! ay, and glad we 'scaped so
 well.

Reig. 'Twas time, I trow, to wake and leave our beds,

Hearing alarums at our chamber-doors.

Alen. Of all exploits since first I follow'd
 arms,

Ne'er heard I of a warlike enterprise
 More venturous or desperate than this.

Bast. I think this Talbot be a fiend of hell.

Reig. If not of hell, the heavens, sure, favour
 him.

Alen. Here cometh Charles: I marvel how he sped.

Bast. Tut, holy Joan was his defensive guard.

Enter CHARLES and LA PUCELLE.

Char. Is this thy cunning, thou deceitful dame! 50

Didst thou at first, to flatter us withal,
 Make us partakers of a little gain,

That now our loss might be ten times so much?

Puc. Wherefore is Charles impatient with his friend?

At all times will you have my power alike:
 Sleeping or waking must I still prevail,

Or will you blame and lay the fault on me?
 Improvident soldiers! had your watch been
 good,

This sudden mischief never could have fall'n.

Char. Duke of Alençon, this was your default, 60

That, being captain of the watch to-night,
 Did look no better to that weighty charge.

Alen. Had all your quarters been as safely kept

As that whereof I had the government,
 We had not been thus shamefully surpris'd.

Bast. Mine was secure.

Reig. And so was mine, my lord.

Char. And, for myself, most part of all this
 night,

Within her quarter and mine own precinct
 I was employ'd in passing to and fro,

About relieving of the sentinels: 70
 Then how or which way should they first break in!

Puc. Question, my lords, no further of the case,

How or which way: 'tis sure they found some
 place

But weakly guarded, where the breach was

And now there remains no other shift but this:
 To gather our soldiers, order it most discreetly,
 And lay new platforms to undermine them.

Alarm. Enter an English Soldier, crying 'A Talbot! a Talbot!' They fly, leaving their clothes behind.

Sold. I'll be so bold to take what they have left.

The cry of Talbot serves me for a sword;
For I have loaden me with many spoils, 80
Using no other weapon but his name. [Exit.]

SCENE II. Orleans. Within the town.

Enter TALBOT, BEDFORD, BURGUNDY, a Captain, and others.

Bed. The day begins to break, and night is fled,
Whose pitchy mantle over-veil'd the earth.
Here sound retreat, and cease our hot pursuit. 10
[Retreat sounded.]

Tal. Bring forth the body of old Salisbury,
And here advance it in the market-place,
The middle centre of this cursed town.
Now have I paid my vow unto his soul;
For every drop of blood was drawn from him
There hath at least five Frenchmen died to-night.

And that hereafter ages may behold 10
What ruin happen'd in revenge of him,
Within their chiefest temple I'll erect
A tomb, wherein his corpse shall be interr'd:
Upon the which, that every one may read,
Shall be engraved the sack of Orleans,
The treacherous manner of his inhum'd death
And what a terror he had been to France.
But, lords, in all our bloody massacre,
I muse we met not with the Dauphin's grace,
His new-come champion, virtuous Joan of Arc,
Nor any of his false confederates. 21

Bed. 'Tis thought, Lord Talbot, when the fight began,
Roused on the sudden from their drowsy beds,
They did amongst the troops of armed men
Leap o'er the walls for refuge in the field.

Bur. Myself, as far as I could well discern
For smoke and dusky vapours of the night,
Am sure I scared the Dauphin and his trull,
When arm in arm they both came swiftly running.

Like to a pair of loving turtle-doves 30
That could not live asunder day or night.
After that things are set in order here,
We'll follow them with all the power we have.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. All hail, my lords! Which of this princely train
Call ye the warlike Talbot, for his acts
So much applauded through the realm of France!

Tal. Here is the Talbot: who would speak with him!

Mess. The virtuous lady, Countess of 40
Wilt, modestly admiring thy renown,
By me, entreated, great lord, thou wouldst vouch-

your house she hath beheld the man

Whose glory fills the world with loud report.

Bur. Is it even so? Nay, then, I see our wars

Will turn unto a peaceful comic play.
When ladies crave to be encounter'd with.
You may not, my lord, despise her gentle suit.

Tal. Ne'er trust me then; for when a world of men

Could not prevail with all their oratory,
Yet hath a woman's kindness over-ruled:
And therefore tell her I return great thanks,
And in submission will attend on her.

Will not your honours bear me company?
Bed. No, truly; it is more than manners will:

And I have heard it said, unbidden guests
Are often welcomest when they are gone.

Tal. Well then, alone, since there's no remedy,

I mean to prove this lady's courtesy.
Come hither, captain. [Whisper.] You perceive my mind!

Capt. I do, my lord, and mean accordingly. [Exit, &c.]

SCENE III. Auvergne. The Countess's castle.

Enter the COUNTESS and her Porter.

Count. Porter, remember what I gave in charge;
And when you have done so, bring the keys to me.

Port. Madam, I will. [Exit.]
Count. The plot is laid: if all things fall out right,

I shall as famous be by this exploit
As Scythian Tonyris by Cyrus' death.
Great is the rumour of this dreadful knight,
And his achievements of no less account:
Fain would mine eyes be witness with mine ears,
To give their censure of these rare reports.

Enter Messenger and TALBOT.

Mess. Madam,
According as your ladyship desired,
By message craved, so is Lord Talbot come.

Count. And he is welcome. What! is this the man?

Mess. Madam, it is.
Count. Is this the scourge of France?
Is this the Talbot, so much fear'd abroad,
That with his name the mothers still their babes!

I see report is fabulous and false:
I thought I should have seen some Hercules,
A second Hector, for his grim aspect,
And large proportion of his strong-knit limbs.
Alas, this is a child, a silly dwarf!
It cannot be this weak and wither'd shrimp
Should strike such terror to his enemies.

Tal. Madam, I have been told to trouble you;

But since your ladyship is not at leisure,
I'll sort some other time to visit you.

Count. What means he now? Go ask him whether he goes.

Mess. Stay, my Lord Talbot; for my lady ^{craves}
To know the cause of your abrupt departure. 30
Tal. Marry, for that she's in a wrong belief,
I go to certify her Talbot's here.

Re-enter Porter with keys.

Count. If thou be he, then art thou prisoner.
Tal. Prisoner! to whom?

Count. To me, blood-thirsty lord;
And for that cause I train'd thee to my house.
Long time thy shadow hath been thrall to me,
For in my gallery thy picture hangs:
But now the substance shall endure the like,
And I will chain these legs and arms of thine,
That hat by tyranny these many years 40
Wasted our country, slain our citizens
And sent our sons and husbands captivate.

Tal. Ha, ha, ha!

Count. Laughest thou, wretch! thy mirth shall turn to moan.

Tal. I laugh to see your ladyship so fond
To think that you have aught but Talbot's shadow

Whereon to practise your severity.

Count. Why, art not thou the man?

Tal. I am indeed.

Count. Then have I substance too.

Tal. No, no, I am but shadow of myself: 50
You are deceived, my substance is not here;
For what you see is but the smallest part
And least proportion of humanity:
I tell you, madam, were the whole frame here,
It is of such a spacious lofty pitch,
Your roof were not sufficient to contain't.

Count. This is a riddling merchant for the nonce:

He will be here, and yet he is not here:

How can these contrarities agree?

Tal. That will I show you presently. 60

[Winds his horn. Drums strike up: a peal of ordnance. Enter Soldiers.

How say you, madam? are you now persuaded
That Talbot is but shadow of himself?

These are his substance, sinews, arms and
strength,

With which he yoketh your rebellious necks,

Razeth your cities and subverts your towns

And in a moment makes them desolate.

Count. Victorious Talbot! pardon my abuse:

I find thou art no less than fame hath bruited

And more than may be gather'd by thy shape.

Let my presumption not provoke thy wrath; 70

For I am sorry that with reverence

I did not entertain thee as thou art.

Tal. Be not dismay'd, fair lady; nor misconstrue

The mind of Talbot, as you did mistake

The outward composition of his body.

What you have done hath not offended me;

Nor other satisfaction do I crave,

But only, with your patience, that we may

Taste of your wine and see what cater you have;

For soldiers' stomachs always serve them well.

Count. With all my heart, and think me honoured

To meet so great a warrior in my house.

[Exeunt.

R

SCENE IV. London. The Temple-garden.

Enter the EARLS OF SOMERSET, SUFFOLK, and WARWICK; RICHARD PLANTAGENET, VER-NON, and another Lawyer.

Plan. Great lords and gentlemen, what means this silence?

Dare no man answer in a case of truth?

Suf. Within the Temple-hall we were too loud;

The garden here is more convenient.

Plan. Then say at once if I maintain'd the truth;

Or else was wrangling Somerset in the error?

Suf. Faith, I have been a truant in the law,
And never yet could frame my will to it;

And therefore frame the law unto my will.

Som. Judge you, my Lord of Warwick, then, between us.

War. Between two hawks, which flies the higher pitch;

Between two dogs, which hath the deeper
mouth;

Between two blades, which bears the better
temper;

Between two horses, which doth bear him best;

Between two girls, which hath the merriest eye;

I have perhaps some shallow spirit of judgement;

But in these nice sharp quillets of the law,

God! faith, I am no wiser than a daw.

Plan. Tut, tut, here is a mannerly forbearance:

The truth appears so naked on my side 80

That any purblind eye may find it out.

Som. And on my side it is so well apparell'd,

So clear, so shining and so evident

That it will glimmer through a blind man's eye.

Plan. Since you are tongue-tied and so loath to speak,

In dumb significants proclaim your thoughts:

Let him that is a true-born gentleman

And stands upon the honour of his birth,

If he suppose that I have pleaded truth,

From off this brier pluck a white rose with me. 90

Som. Let him that is no coward nor so fast-

terer,

But dare maintain the party of the truth,

Pluck a red rose from off this thorn with me.

War. I love no colour, and without all colour

Of base insinuating flattery

I pluck this white rose with Plantagenet.

Suf. I pluck this red rose with young

Somerset

And say withal I think he held the right.

Ver. Stay, lords and gentlemen, and pluck

no more.

Till you conclude that he upon whose side 90

The fewest roses are crop'd from the tree

Shall yield the other in the right opinion.

Som. Good Master Vernon, it is well objected:

If I have forest, I subscribe in silence.

Plan. And I.

Ver. Then for the truth and pleasure of the

I pluck this pale and maiden blossom here,
Giving my verdict on the white rose side.

Som. Pluck not your finger as you pluck it off.

Least bleeding you do paint the white rose red
And fall on my side so, against your will.

Ver. If I, my lord, for my opinion bleed,
Opinion shall be surgeon to my hurt
And keep me on the side where still I am.

Som. Well, well, come on: who else?

Lav. Unless my study and my books be false.

The argument you held was wrong in you:

[To Somerset.]

In sign whereof I pluck a white rose too.

Plant. Now, Somerset, where is your argument?

Som. Here in my scabbard, meditating that Shall dye your white rose in a bloody red.

Plant. Meantime your cheeks do counterfeit our roses;

For pale they look with fear, as witnessing
The truth on our side.

Som. No, Plantagenet,

It is not for fear but anger that thy cheeks
Blush for pure shame to counterfeit our roses,
And yet thy tongue will not confess thy error.

Plant. Hath not thy rose a canker, Somerset?

Som. Hath not thy rose a thorn, Plantagenet?

Plant. Ay, sharp and piercing, to maintain his truth;

Whence thy consuming canker eats his false-
hood.

Som. Well, I'll find friends to wear my bleeding roses.

That shall maintain what I have said is true,
Where false Plantagenet dare not be seen.

Plant. Now, by this maiden blossom in my
hand,

I scorn thee and thy fashion, peevish boy.

Suf. Turn not thy scorn this way, Planta-genet.

Plant. Proud Pole, I will, and scorn both him and thee.

Suf. I'll turn my part thereof into thy thrust.

Som. Away, away, good William de la Pole!

We grace the yeoman by conversing with him.

War. Now, by God's will, thou wrong'st him,
Somerset;

His grandfather was Lionel Duke of Clarence,
Third son to the third Edward King of England;

Spring careless yeomen from so deep a root!

Plant. He bears him on the place's privilege,
Or duns not for his craven heart, say thou.

Som. By him that made me, I'll maintain my words.

And, by his treason, stand'st not thou attainted,
Overgrown, and exempt from ancient gentry!

His treason yet lives guilty in thy blood;

And thou, though be matured, thou art a yeoman.

Plant. My father was attainted, not attainted,

Condemn'd to die for treason, but no traitor;
And that I'll prove on better men than Somerset.

Were growing time once ripen'd to my will.
For your partaker Pole and you

I'll note you in my book of re-
To scourge you for this apparel.

Look to it well and say you are well warn'd.

Som. Ah, thou shalt find us ready for thee
still;

And know us by these colours for thy foes,
For these my friends in spite of thee shall wear.

Plant. And, by my soul, this pale and dangerous

As cognizance of my blood-drinking hate,
Will I for ever and my faction wear.

Until it wither with me to my grave
Or flourish to the height of my degree.

Suf. Go forward and be choked with thy ambition!

And so farewell until I meet thee next.

Som. Have with thee, Pole. Farewell, ambitious Richard.

Plant. How I am braved and must performe endure it!

War. This blot that they object against your house

Shall be wiped out in the next parliament
Call'd for the truce of Winchester and Gloucester;

And if thou be not then created York,
I will not live to be accounted Warwick.

Meantime, in signal of my love to thee,
Against proud Somerset and William Pole,

Will I upon thy party wear this rose;

And here I prophesy: this brawl to-day,
Grown to this faction in the Temple-garden,

Shall send between the red rose and the white
A thousand souls to death and deadly night.

Plant. Good Master Vernon, I am bound to
you.

That you on my behalf would pluck a flower.

Ver. In your behalf still will I wear the same.

Lav. And so will I.

Plant. Thanks, gentle sir.

Come, let us four to dinner: I dare say
This quarrel will drink blood another day.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V. The Tower of London.

Enter MORTIMER, brought in a chair, and Gardens.

Mor. Kind keepers of my weak decaying age,
Let dying Mortimer here rest himself.

Even like a man new haled from the moor,
So fare my limbs with long imprisonment;

And these gray locks, the parents of death,
Nectar-like aged in an age of care.

Argue the end of Edmund Mortimer.

These eyes, like lamps whose smoking oil is spent,

Wax dim, as drawing to their end;

Weak shoulders, overborne with burdening
grief.

And pitiful men, like to a wither'd vine
That droops his sapless branches to the ground:

Yet see these feet, whose strengthless stay is unstable.

Unable to support this lump of clay,
Swift-winged with darts to get a grave,
As wishing I no other comfort have.
But tell me, keeper, will my nephew come?

First Goal. Richard Plantagenet, my lord, will come.

We sent unto the Temple, unto his chamber;
And answer was return'd that he will come.

Mor. Enough: my soul shall then be satisfied.

Poor gentlemen! his wrong doth equal mine.
Since Henry Monmouth first began to reign,

Before whose glory I was great in arms,
This loathsome sequestration have I had;

And even since then hath Richard been obscured,
Deprived of honour and inheritance.

But now the arbitrator of despair,
Just death, kind umpire of men's miseries,

With sweet enlargement doth dismiss me
hence:

I would his troubles likewise were expired,
That so he might recover what was lost.

Enter RICHARD PLANTAGENET.

First Goal. My lord, your loving nephew now is come.

Mor. Richard Plantagenet, my friend, is he
come?

Plant. Ay, noble uncle, thus ignobly used,
Your nephew, late despised Richard, comes.

Mor. Direct mine arms I may embrace his neck.

And in his bosom spend my latter gasp:
O, tell me when my lips do touch his cheeks,

That I may kindly give one fainting kiss.
And now declare, sweet stem from York's great stock.

Why didst thou say, of late thou wert despised?

Plant. First, lean thine aged back against mine arm;

And, in that case, I'll tell thee my di-

This day, in argument upon a case,
Some words there grew twixt Somerset and me;

Among which terms he used his Jewish tongue
And did upbraid me with my father's death:

Which obliges not him before my tongue,
Else with the like I had requited him.

Therefore, good uncle, for my father's sake,
In honour of a true Plantagenet

And for silence sake, declare the cause
My father, Earl of Cambridge, lost his head.

Mor. That cause, fair nephew, that imprison'd me

And bathed details'd me all my flowering youth
Within a loathsome dungeon, there to pine,

Was caused instrument of his decease.

Plant. Discover more at large what cause that was.

For I am ignorant and cannot guess.

Mor. I will, if that my fading breath permit
And death approach not ere my tale be done.

Henry the sixth, grandfather to this king,
Deposed his nephew Richard, Edward's son,

The first-born and the lawful heir
Of Edward the third, and thus at that deceased:

During whose reign the Percies of the north,
Finding his usurpation most unjust,

Endeavour'd my advancement to the throne:
The reason moved them various lords to this

Was, for that—young King Richard thus removed,

Leaving no heir begotten of his body—
I was the next by birth and parentage;

For by my mother I derived am
From Lionel Duke of Clarence, the third son

To King Edward the Third; whereas he
From John of Gaunt doth bring his pedigree,

Being but fourth of that heroic line.
But mark: as in this haughty great attempt

They labour'd to plant the rightful heir,
I lost my liberty and they their lives.

Long after this, when Henry the Fifth,
Succeeding his father Bolingbroke, did reign,

Thy father, Earl of Cambridge, then derived From famous Edmund Langley, Duke of York,

Marrying my sister that thy mother was,
Again in pity of my hard distress

Levied an army, meaning to redeem
And have install'd me in the dukedom:

But, as the rest, so fell that noble earl
And was beheaded. Thus the Mortimers,

In whom the title rested, were suppress'd.
Plant. Of which, my lord, your honour is the last.

Mor. True; and thou seest that I no issue have

And that my fainting words do warrant death:
Thou art my heir; the rest I wish thee gather:

But yet be wary in thy studious care.

Plant. Thy grave admonishments prevail
with me:

But yet, methinks, my father's execution
Was nothing less than bloody tyranny.

Mor. With silence, nephew, be thou politic:
Strong-fixed is the house of Lancaster

And like a mountain, not to be removed.
But now thy uncle is removing hence;

As princes do their courts, when they are stay'd
With long continuance in a settled place.

Plant. O, uncle, would some part of my young years

Might but redeem the passage of your age!
Mor. Thou dost then wrong me, as that slaughterer death

Which giveth many wounds when one will kill,
Mourn not, except thou sorrow for my good;

Only give order for my funeral;
And so farewell, and fair be all thy hopes

And prosperous be thy day in peace and war.
Plant. And peace, no war, bethall thy parting soul!

In prison hast thou spent a pilgrimage
And like a hermit overpaid thy days.

Well, I will lock him counsel in my ear
And what I do imagine let that rest.

Keepers, convey him hence, and I myself
Will see his burial better than his life.

[Edward the fourth, leaving a party of his
of Lancaster

Here dies the dusky torch of Mortimer,
Choked with smother of the usurper's rage.

And far these wrongs, these bitter injuries,

Which Somerset hath offer'd to my house,
I doubt not but with honour to redress;
And therefore haste I to the parliament,
Either to be restored to my blood,
Or make my ill the advantage of my good.

[Exit.]

ACT III.

SCENE I. London. The Parliament-house.

Flourish. Enter KING, EXETER, GLOUCESTER, WARWICK, SOMERSET, and SUFFOLK; the BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, RICHARD PLANTAGENET, and others. GLOUCESTER offers to put up a bill; WINCHESTER snatches it, and tears it.

Win. Comest thou with deep premeditated lines,
With written pamphlets studiously devised,
Humphrey of Gloucester? If thou canst accuse,

Or aught intend'st to lay unto my charge,
Do it without invention, suddenly;
As I with sudden and extemporal speech
Purpose to answer what thou canst object.

Glow. Presumptuous priest! this place commands my patience,

Or thou shouldst find thou hast dishonour'd me.
Think not, although in writing I prefer'd

The manner of thy vile outrageous crimes,
That therefore I have forg'd, or am not able

Verbatim to rehearse the method of my pen:
No, prelate; such is thy audacious wickedness,

Thy lewd, pestiferous and discentious pranks,
As very infants prattle of thy pride.

Thou art a most pernicious usurer,
Froward by nature, enemy to peace;

Lecherous, wanton, more than well becomes
A man of thy profession and degree;

And for thy treachery, what's more manifest?
In that thou laid'st a trap to take my life,

As well at London bridge as at the Tower.
Beside, I fear me, if thy thoughts were sifted,

The king, thy sovereign, is not quite exempt
From envious malice of thy swelling heart.

Win. Gloucester, I do defy thee. Lords, vouchsafe

To give me hearing what I shall reply.
If I were covetous, ambitious or perverse,

As he will have me, how am I so poor?
Or how hope I I seek not to advance

Or raise myself, but keep my wonted calling?
And for dissension, who preferreth peace

More than I do!—except I be provoked.
No, my good lords, it is not that offends;

It is not that that hath incensed the duke:
It is, because no one should sway but he;

No one but he should be about the king;
And that engendered thunder in his breast

And makes him roar these accusations forth. 40
But he shall know I am as good—

Glow. As good! Then bastard of my grandfather!

Win. Ay, lordly sir; for what are you, I pray,

But one usurper in another's throne?

Glow. Am I not protector, uncle priest?

Win. And am not I a prelate of the church?
Glow. Yea, as an outlaw in a castle keeps

And useth it to patronage his Win. Unreverent Gloucester!

Glow. Thou art reverent
Touching thy spiritual function, not thy life. 50

Win. Rome shall remedy this.
War. Roam thither, then.

Som. My lord, it were your duty to forbear.
War. Ay, see the bishop be not overborne.

Som. Methinks my lord should be religious
And know the office that belongs to such.

War. Methinks his lordship should be humbler;

It fitteth not a prelate so to plead.
Som. Yea, when his holy state is touch'd so near.

War. State holy or unhallow'd, what of that?

Is not his grace protector to the king? 60

Plan. [Aside] Plantagenet, I see, must hold
his tongue,

Lest it be said 'Speak, sirrah, when you should;
Must your bold verdict enter talk with lords!'

Else would I have a fling at Winchester.
King. Uncles of Gloucester and of Winchester,

The special watchmen of our English weal,

I would prevail, if prayers might prevail,
To join your hearts in love and amity.

O, what a scandal is it to our crown,
That two such noble peers as ye should jar! 70

Believe me, lords, my tender years can tell
Civil dissension is a viperous worm

That gnaws the bowels of the commonwealth.
[A noise within, 'Down with the tawny-coats!'

What tumult's this?
War. An uproar, I dare warrant,

Begun through malice of the bishop's men.
[A noise again, 'Stones! stones!'

Enter Mayor.

May. O, my good lords, and virtuous
Henry,

Pity the city of London, pity us!
The bishop and the Duke of Gloucester's men,

Forbidden late to carry any weapon,
Have fill'd their pockets full of pebble stones 80

And banding themselves in contrary parts
Do pelt so fast at one another's pate

That many have their giddy brains knock'd out:
Our windows are broke down in every street

And we for fear compell'd to shut our shops.

Enter Serving-men, in skirmish, with bloody pates.

King. We charge you, on allegiance to our self,

To hold your slaughtering hands and keep the
peace.

Pray, uncle Gloucester, mitigate this strife.
First Serv. Nay, if we be forbidden stones,

we'll fall to it with our teeth. 90

Sec. Serv. Do what ye dare, we are as resolute. [Skirmish again.]

Glow. You of my household, leave this peevish broil

And set this unbecomming fight aside.

Third Serv. My lord, we know your grace to be a man

Just and upright; and, for your royal birth,
Inferior to none but to his majesty:
And ere that we will suffer such a prince,
So kind a father of the commonweal,
To be disgraced by an inkhorn mate,
We and our wives and children all will fight too
And have our bodies slaughter'd by thy foes.

First Serv. Ay, and the very parings of our nails
Shall pitch a field when we are dead.

[Begin again.]

Glou. Stay, stay, I say!
And if you love me, as you say you do,
Let me persuade you to forbear awhile.

King. O, how this discord doth afflict my soul!

Can you, my Lord of Winchester, behold
My sighs and tears and will not once relent?
Who should be pitiful, if you be not?
Or who should study to prefer a peace,
If holy churchmen take delight in broils?

War. Yield, my lord protector; yield, Winchester;

Except you mean with obstinate repulse
To slay your sovereign and destroy the realm.
You see what mischief and what murder too
Hath been enacted through your enmity:
Then be at peace, except ye thirst for blood.

Win. He shall submit, or I will never yield.
Glou. Compassion on the king commands me stoop;

Or I would see his heart cut, ere the priest
Should ever get that privilege of me.

War. Behold, my Lord of Winchester, the duke

Hath banish'd moody discontented fury,
As by his smoothed brows it doth appear:
Why look you still so stern and tragical?

Glou. Here, Winchester, I offer thee my
hand.

King. Fie, uncle Beaufort! I have heard you preach

That malice was a great and grievous sin;
And will not you maintain the thing you
teach,

But prove a chief offender in the same?

War. Sweet king! the bishop hath a kindly gird.
For shame, my Lord of Winchester, relent!
What, shall a child instruct you what to do?

Win. Well, Duke of Gloucester, I will yield to thee;

Love for thy love and hand for hand I give.

Glou. [Aside] Ay, but, I fear me, with a hollow heart.

See here, my friends and loving countrymen,
This token serveth for a flag of truce
Betwixt ourselves and all our followers:
So help me God, as I dissemble not!

Win. [Aside] So help me God, as I intend it not!

King. O loving uncle, kind Duke of Gloucester,

How joyful am I made by this contract!
Away, my masters! trouble us no more;

But join in friendship, as your lords have done.

First Serv. Content: I'll to the surgeon's.

Sec. Serv. And so will I.

Third Serv. And I will see what physick the tavern affords.

[Exeunt Serving-men, Mayor, &c.]

War. Accept this scroll, most gracious
sovereign,
Which in the right of Richard Plantagenet
We do exhibit to your majesty.

Glou. Well urged, my Lord of Warwick:
for, sweet prince,

An if your grace mark every circumstance,
You have great reason to do Richard right;
Especially for those occasions

At Eltham Place I told your majesty.

King. And those occasions, uncle, were of force:

Therefore, my loving lords, our pleasure is
That Richard be restored to his blood.

War. Let Richard be restored to his blood;
So shall his father's wrongs be recompensed.

Win. As will the rest, so willeth Winchester.

King. If Richard will be true, not that alone

But all the whole inheritance I give
That doth belong unto the house of York,
From whence you spring by lineal descent.

Plan. Thy humble servant vows obedience
And humble service till the point of death.

King. Stoop then and set your knee against my foot;

And, in requerd of that duty done,
I gird thee with the valiant sword of York:

Rise, Richard, like a true Plantagenet,
And rise created princely Duke of York.

Plan. And so thrive Richard as thy foes may fall!

And as my duty springs, so perish they
That grudge one thought against your majesty!

All. Welcome, high prince, the mighty
Duke of York!

Son. [Aside] Perish, base prince, ignoble
Duke of York!

Glou. Now will it best avail your majesty
To cross the seas and to be crown'd in France:

The presence of a king engenders love
Amongst his subjects and his loyal friends,

As it disinclines his enemies.

King. When Gloucester says the word, King
Henry goes;

For friendly counsel cuts off many foes.

Glou. Your ships already are in readiness.
[Sennet. Flourish. Exeunt all but Enter.]

Eze. Ay, we may march in England or in
France,

Not seeing what is likely to ensue.
This late disunion grown betwixt the peers
Burns under fabled ashes of forged love

And will at last break out into a flame:
As fester'd members rot but by degrees,
Till bones and flesh and sinews fall away.

So will this base and sordid discord breed
And now I fear that fatal prophecy

Which in the time of Henry named the Fifth
Was in the mouth of every sucking babe:

That Henry born at Monmouth should rule all
And Henry born at Windsor lose all.

Which is so plain that Exeter doth wish
His days may finish ere that hapless time.

[Exit.]

SCENE II. France. Before Rouen.

Enter LA PUCELLE disguised, with four Soldiers with sacks upon their backs.

Puc. These are the city gates, the gates of Rouen.

Through which our policy must make a breach:
Take heed, be wary how you place your words;
Talk like the vulgar sort of market men
That come to gather money for their corn.

If we have entrance, as I hope we shall,
And that we find the slothful watch but weak,
I'll by a sign give notice to our friends,
That Charles the Dauphin may encounter them.

First Sol. Our sacks shall be a mean to sack
the city.

And we be lords and rulers over Rouen;
Therefore we'll knock.

[Knocks.]

Watch. [Within] Qui cat là!

Puc. Paysons, parvres gens de France;
Poor market folks that come to sell their corn.

Watch. Enter, go in; the market bell is rung.

Puc. Now, Rouen, I'll shake thy bulwarks to the ground.

[Exit.]

*Enter CHARLES, the BASTARD OF ORLEANS,
ALENÇON, REIGNIER, and forces.*

Char. Saint Denis bless this happy stratagem!

And once again we'll sleep secure in Rouen.

Bast. Here enter'd Pucelle and her practis-ants;

Now she is there, how will she specify
Where is the best and safest passage in!

Reig. By thrusting out a torch from yonder
tower;

Which, once discern'd, shows that her meaning is,

No way to that, for weakness, which she enter'd.

Enter LA PUCELLE on the top, thrusting out a torch burning.

Puc. Behold, this is the happy wedding torch

That joineth Rouen unto her countrymen,
But burning fatal to the Talbotites!

[Exit.]

Bast. See, noble Charles, the beacon of our friend;

The burning torch in yonder turret stands.

Char. Now shine it like a comet of revenge,
A prophet to the fall of all our foes!

Reig. Defer no time, delays have dangerous ends;

Enter, and cry 'The Dauphin!' presently,
And then do execution on the watch.

[Alarm. Exit.]

An alarm. Enter TALBOT in an excursion.

Tal. France, thou shalt rue this treason with thy tears.

If Talbot but survive thy treachery,
Pucelle, that witch, that damned sorceress,
Shall repent this hateful mischief; unwares,
Thou shalt be the pride of France.

[Exit.]

An alarm: excursions. BEDFORD, brought in sick in a chair. Enter TALBOT and BURGUNDY without; within LA PUCELLE, CHARLES, BASTARD, ALENÇON, and REIGNIER, on the walls.

Puc. Good morrow, gallants! want ye corn for bread?

I think the Duke of Burgundy will fast
Before he'll buy again at such a rate:

'Twas full of darnel; do you like the taste?

Bur. Scoff on, vile fiend and courtesan!

I trust ere long to choke thee with thine own
And make thee curse the harvest of that corn.

Char. Your grace may starve perhaps before that time.

Bed. O, let no words, but deeds, revenge
this treason!

Puc. What will you do, good grey-beard!
break a lance.

And run a tilt at death within a chair?

Tal. Fool fiend of France, and hag of all
despite,

Encompass'd with thy lustful paramours!
Becomes it thee to taunt his valiant age

And twit with cowardice a man half dead?

Damuel, I'll have a bout with you again,
Or else let Talbot perish with this shame.

Puc. Are ye so hot, sir? yet, Pucelle, hold
thy peace;

If Talbot do but thunder, rain will follow.

[The English whisper together in council.
God speed the parliament! who shall be the speaker?]

Tal. Dare ye come forth and meet us in the field?

Puc. Belike your lordship takes us then for fools.

To try if that our own be ours or no.

Tal. I speak not to that railing Hecate.
But unto thee, Alençon, and the rest;

Will ye, like soldiers, come and fight it out?

Alen. Signior, no.

Tal. Signior, hang! base rascals of France!
Like peasant foot-boys do they keep the walls

And dare not take up arms like gentlemen.

Puc. Away, captains! let's get us from the walls;

For Talbot means no goodness by his looks.
God be wi' you, my lord! we came but to tell
you

That we are here.

[Exit. Enter from the walls.
Tal. And there will we be too, ere it be long.

Or else reproach be Talbot's greatest shame!
Vow, Burgundy, by honour of thy house,

Prick'd on by public wrongs sustain'd in France,
Either to get the town again or die:

And I, as sure as English Henry lives
And as his father here was conqueror,
As sure as in this late-betrayed town
Great Cornu-dellion's heart was buried,
So sure I swear to get the town or die.

Bur. My vows are equal partners with thy vows.

Tal. But, see we go, against this dying
prince,

The valiant Duke of Bedford. Come, my lord,
We will bestow you in some better place,
Fitter for sickness and for crazy age.

Bed. Lord Talbot, do not so dishonour me:
Here will I sit before the walls of Rouen:
And will be partner of your weal or woe.

Bur. Courageous Bedford, let us now persuade you.

Bed. Not to be gone from hence; for once
I read

That stout Pendragon in his litter sick
'Ame to the field and vanquished his foes:
Methinks I should revive the soldiers' hearts,
Because I ever found them as myself.

Tal. Undaunted spirit in a dying breast!
Then be it so: heavens keep old Bedford safe!
And now no more ado, brave Burgundy,
But gather we our forces out of hand
And set upon our boasting enemy.

[Exeunt all but Bedford and Attendants.]

An alarm: excursions. Enter SIR JOHN FASTOLFE and a Captain.

Cap. Whither away, Sir John Fastolfe, in such haste?

Fast. Whither away! to save myself by flight:

We are like to have the overthrow again.

Cap. What! will you fly, and leave Lord
Talbot?

Fast. Ay.

All the Talbots in the world, to save my life.

Cap. Cowardly knight! ill fortune follow thee! [Exit.]

Retreat: excursions. LA PUCELLE, ALENÇON, and CHARLES fly.

Bed. Now, quiet soul, depart when heaven
please, [Exit.]

For I have seen our enemies' overthrow.
What is the trust or strength of foolish man!
They that of late were daring with their scoffs
Are glad and fain by flight to save themselves.

[Bedford dies, and is carried in by two in his chair.]

[An alarm. Re-enter TALBOT, BURGUNDY, and the rest.]

Tal. Lost, and recover'd in a day again!

This is a double honour, Burgundy:

Yet heavens have glory for this victory!

Bur. Warlike and martial Talbot, Burgundy
Enshrines thee in his heart and there erects
Thy noble deeds as valour's monuments.

Tal. Thanks, gentle duke. But where is Pucelle now?

I think her old familiar is asleep:

Now where's the Bastard's braves, and Charles his clocks?

What, all absent! Rouen hangs her head for
grief

That such a valiant company are fled.

Now will we take some order in the town,

Placing therein some expert officers,

And then depart to Paris to the king.

For a young Henry with his nobles he.

Bur. What wills Lord Talbot pleaseeth Burgundy?

Tal. But yet, before we go, let's not forget
The noble Duke of Bedford late deceased,
But see his exequies fulfill'd in Rouen:
A braver soldier never couch'd in ease,
A gentler heart did never sway in court;
But kings and mightiest potentates must die,
For that's the end of human misery. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. The plains near Rouen.

*Enter CHARLES, the BASTARD of Orleans,
ALENÇON, LA PUCELLE, and forces.*

Puc. Dismay not, princes, at this accident,
Nor grieve that Rouen is so recovered:
Care is no cure, but rather corrosive,
For things that are not to be remedied.
Let frantic Talbot triumph for a while
And like a peacock sweep along his tail;
We'll pull his plumes and take away his train,
If Dauphin and the rest will be ruled.

Char. We have been guided by thee hitherto
And of thy cunning had no diffidence:
One sudden foil shall never breed distrust.

Bast. Search out thy wit for secret policies,
And we will make thee famous through the world.

Alen. We'll set thy statue in some holy place,
And have thee revered like a blessed Employ thee then, sweet virgin, for our

Puc. Then thus it must be; this doth devise:

By fair persuasions mix'd with sugar'd words
We will entice the Duke of Burgundy
To leave the Talbot and to follow us.

Char. Ay, marry, sweeting, if we could do
that,

France were no place for Henry's warriors;
Nor should that nation boast it so with us,
But be extirped from our provinces.

Alen. For ever should they be expelled from
France

And not have title of an earldom here.

Puc. Your honours shall perceive how I will work

To bring this matter to the wished end.

[Drum sounds after off.]
Hark! by the sound of drum you may perceive
Their powers are marching unto Paris-ward,

Here sound an English march. Enter, and pass over at a distance, TALBOT and his forces.

There goes the Talbot, with his colours spread,
And all the troops of English after him.

French march. Enter the DUKE OF BURGUNDY and forces.

Now in the rearward comes the duke and his:
Fortune in favour makes him lag behind.
Summon a parley; we will talk with him.

[Trumpets sound a]

Char. A parley with the Duke of Burgundy.

Bur. Who answers a parley with the Burgundy?

Puc. The princely Charles of France, countryman.

Bur. What say'st thou, Charles? See I come marching hence.

Char. Speak, Pucelle, and enchant him with thy words.

Puc. Brave Burgundy, undoubted hope of France!

Stay, let thy humble handmaid speak to thee.

Bur. Speak on; but be not over-tedious.

Puc. Look on thy country, look on fertile France,

And see the cities and the towns defaced
By wasting ruin of the cruel foe.

As looks the mother on her lowly babe
When death doth close his tender dying eyes,
See, see the pining malady of France;

Behold the wounds, the most unnatural wounds,
Which thou thyself hast given her woful breast.
O, turn thy edged sword another way;

Strike those that hurt, and hurt not those that help.

One drop of blood drawn from thy country's bosom

Should grieve thee more than streams of foreign gore;

Return thee therefore with a flood of tears,
And wash away thy country's stained spots.

Bur. Either she hath bewitch'd me with her words,

Or nature makes me suddenly relent.

Puc. Besides, all French and France ex-claims on thee,

Doubting thy birth and lawful progeny.
Who join't thou with but with a lordly nation

That will not trust thee but for profit's sake?
When Talbot hath set footing once in France

And fashion'd thee that instrument of ill,
Who then but English Henry will be lord

And thou be thrust out like a fugitive?
Call we to mind, and mark but this for proof,

Was not the Duke of Orleans thy foe?
And was he not in England prisoner?

But when they heard he was thine enemy,
They set him free without his ransom paid,

In spite of Burgundy and all his friends.

See, then, thou fight at against thy countrymen
And join't with them will be thy slaughter-men.

Come, come, return; return, thou wandering lord;

Charles and the rest will take thee in their arms.

Bur. I am vanquished; these haughty words of hers

Have batter'd me like roaring cannon-shot,
And made me almost yield upon my knees.

Forgive me, country, and sweet countrymen,
And, lords, accept this hearty kind embrace:

My forces and my power of men are yours;
So farewell, Talbot; I'll no longer trust thee.

Puc. (Aside) Done like a Frenchman: turn,
and turn again!

Char. Welcome, brave duke! thy friendship makes us fresh.

Bast. And doth beget new courage in our breasts.

Alen. Pucelle hath bravely play'd her part in this.

And doth deserve a coronet of gold.

Char. Now let us on, my lords, and join our powers,

And seek how we may prejudice the foe.

SCENE IV. Paris. The palace.

Enter the KING, GLOUCESTER, BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, YORK, SUFFOLK, SOMERSET, WARWICK, EXETER: VERNON, BASSET, and others. To them with his Soldiers, TALBOT.

Tal. My gracious prince, and honourable peers,

Hearing of your arrival in this
I have awhile given truce unto my

To do my duty to my sovereign:
In sign whereof, this arm, that hath reclaim'd

To your obedience fifty fortresses,
Twelve cities and seven walled towns of strength,

Beside five hundred prisoners of esteem,
Lays fall his sword before your highness' feet,

And with submissive loyalty of heart
Ascribes the glory of his conquest got

First to my God and next unto your grace.

King. Is this the Lord Talbot, uncle Gloucester,

That hath so long been resident in France?

Glou. Yea, if it please your majesty, my liege.

King. Welcome, brave captain and victorious lord!

When I was young, as yet I am not old,
I do remember how my father said

A stouter champion never handled sword.
Long since we were resolved of your truth,

Your faithful service and your toil in war;
Yet never have you tasted our reward,

Or been requerdon'd with so much as thanks,
Because till now we never saw your face:

Therefore, stand up; and, for these good deeds,
We here create you Earl of Shrewsbury;

And in our coronation take your place.

[Sennet. Flourish. Exit all but Vernon and Basset.]

Vern. Now, sir, to you, that were so hot at sea,

Disgracing of these colours that I wear
In honour of my noble Lord of York:

Darest thou unmain'tain the former words thou spakest?

Bas. Yea, sir; as well as you dare patronage
The envious barking of your saucy tongue

Against my lord the Duke of Somerset.

Vern. Sirrah, thy lord I honour as he is.

Bas. Why, what is he? as good a man as York.

Vern. Hark ye; not so: in witness, take ye that.

Bas. Villain, thou know'st the law of arms is such

That whoso draws a sword, 'tis present death.
Or else this blow should breach thy dearest

blood.

But I'll unto his majesty, and crave
I may have liberty to vengeance this wrong;

When thou shalt see I'll meet thee to thy cost.

Vern. Well, miscreant, I'll be there as soon as you!

And, after, meet you sooner than you would.

ACT IV.

SCENE I. Paris. A hall of state.

Enter the KING, GLOUCESTER, BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, YORK, SUFFOLK, SOMERSET, WARWICK, TALBOT, EXETER, the Governor of Paris, and others.

Gloss. Lord bishop, set the crown upon his head.

Win. God save King Henry, of that name the sixth!

Gloss. Now, governor of Paris, take your oath,

That you elect no other king but him;
Esteem none friends but such as are his friends,
And none your foes but such as shall pretend
Malicious practices against his state:
This shall ye do, so help you righteous God!

Enter SIR JOHN FASTOLFE.

Fast. My gracious sovereign, as I rode from Calais

To haste unto your coronation, 10
A letter was deliver'd to my hands,

Writ to your grace from the Duke of Burgundy.

Tal. Shame to the Duke of Burgundy and thee!

I vow'd, base knight, when I did meet thee next,

To tear the garter from thy craven's leg, 15

Which I have done, because unworthily
Thou wast installed in that high degree.

Pardon me, princely Henry, and the rest:
This dastard, at the battle of Patay,

When but in all I was six thousand strong 20
And that the French were almost ten to one,

Before we met or that a stroke was given,
Like to a trusty squire did run away:

In which assault we lost twelve hundred men;
Myself and divers gentlemen beside

Were there surpris'd and taken prisoners.
Then judge, great lords, if I have done amiss;

Or whether that such cowards ought to wear
This ornament of knighthood, yea or no.

Gloss. To say the truth, this fact was infamous 30

And ill becoming any common man,
Much more a knight, a captain and a leader.

Tal. When first this order was ordain'd, my lords,

Knights of the garter were of noble birth,
Valiant and virtuous, full of haughty courage,

Such as were grown to credit by the wars;
Not fearing death, nor shrinking for distress,

But always resolute in most extremes.
He then that is not furnish'd in this sort

Doth but usurp the sacred name of knight, 40
Profaning this most honourable order,

And should, if I were worthy to be judge,
Be quite degraded, like a hedge-born swain

That doth presume to boast of gentle blood.

King. Stain to thy countrymen, thou hear'st thy doom!

Be packing; therefore, thou that wast a knight:

He banish thee, on pain of death.

[Exit Fastolfe.]

And now, my lord protector, view the letter
Sent from our uncle Duke of Burgundy.

Gloss. What means his grace, that he hath changed his style?

No more but, plain and bluntly, 'To the king!'
Hath he forgot he is his sovereign?

Or doth this churlish superscription
Pretend some alteration in good will?

What's here! [Reads] 'I have, upon especial cause,

Moved with compassion of my country's wreck,
Together with the pitiful complaints

Of such as your oppression feeds upon,
Forsaken your pernicious faction

And join'd with Charles, the rightful King of France.' 60

O monstrous treachery! can this be so,
That in alliance, amity and oaths,

There should be found such false dissembling guile?

King. What! doth my uncle Burgundy revolt?

Gloss. He doth, my lord, and is become your foe.

King. Is that the worst this letter doth contain?

Gloss. It is the worst, and all, my lord, he writes.

King. Why, then, Lord Talbot there shall talk with him

And give him chastisement for this abuse.

How say you, my lord? are you not content? 70

Tal. Content, my liege! yea, but that I am prevented,

I should have begg'd I might have been employ'd.

King. Then gather strength and march unto him straight:

Let him perceive how ill we brook his treason
And what offence it is to flout his friends.

Tal. I go, my lord, in heart desiring still
You may behold confusion of your foes. [Exit.]

Enter VERNON and BASSET.

Vern. Grant me the combat, gracious sovereign.

Bas. And me, my lord, grant me the combat too.

York. This is my servant: hear him, noble prince.

Som. And this is mine: sweet Henry, favour him.

King. Be patient, lords; and give them leave to speak.

Say, gentlemen, what makes you thus enjoin?

And wherefore crave you combat? or with whom?

Vern. With him, my lord; for he hath done me wrong.

Bas. And I with him; for he hath done me wrong.

King. What is that wrong whereof you both complain?

First let me know, and then I'll answer you.

Bas. Crossing the sea from England into France,

This follow

Upbraid me about the rose I wear;

King, the sanguine colour of the leaves represent my master's blushing cheeks,
I see stubbornly he did repugn the truth

About a certain question in the law

Argued betwixt the Duke of York and him;

With other vile and ignominious terms:

In confusion of which rude reproach

And in defence of my lord's worthiness,

I crave the benefit of law of arms. 100

Ver. And that is my petition, noble lord:

For though he seem with forged quaint conceit

To set a gloss upon his bold intent,

Yet know, my lord, I was provoked by him;

And he first took exceptions at this badge,

Pronouncing that the paleness of this flower

Bewray'd the faintness of my master's heart.

York. Will not this malice, Somerset, be left?

Som. Your private grudge, my Lord of York, will out.

Though ne'er so cunningly you smother it. 110

King. Good Lord, what madness rules in brainiac men,

When for so slight and frivolous a cause

Such factious circulations shall arise!

Good cousins both, of York and Somerset,

Quiet yourselves, I pray, and be at peace.

York. Let this discussion first be tried by fight,

And then your highness shall command a peace.

Som. The quarrel toucheth none but us

alone;

Betwixt ourselves let us decide it then.

York. There is my pledge; accept it, Somerset. 120

Ver. Nay, let it rest where it began at first.

Bas. Confirm it so, mine honourable lord.

Glo. Confirm it so! Confounded be your sides!

And perish ye, with your audacious prate!

Presumptuous vassals, are you not ashamed

With this immodest clamorous outrage

To trouble and disturb the king and us?

And you, my lords, methinks you do not well

To bear with their perverse objections;

Much less to take occasion from their mouths

To raise a mutiny betwixt yourselves: 130

Let me persuade you take a better course.

Ecc. It grieves his highness: good my lords,

be friends.

King. Come hither, you that would be competitions:

Henceforth I charge you, as you love our favour,

Quite to forget this quarrel and the cause.

And you, my lords, remember where we are;

In France, amongst a fickle wavering nation:

If they perceive dissension in our looks

And that within ourselves we disagree, 140

How will their grudging stomachs be provoked

To wild disobedience, and rebel!

Besides, what injury will there arise

If each foreign prince shall be certified

Of our a toy, a thing of no regard,

That Henry's power and chief nobility are themselves, and lost the realm of

France!

O, think upon the conquest of my father,
My tender years, and let us not forego
That for a trifle that was bought with blood!
Let me be umpire in this doubtful strife. 150
I see no reason, if I wear this rose,

(Putting on a red rose.

That any one should therefore be suspicious

I more incline to Somerset than York:

Both are my kinsmen, and I love them both:

As well they may upbraid me with my crown,

Because, forsooth, the king of Scots is crown'd.

But your discretions better can persuade

Than I am able to instruct or teach:

And therefore, as we hither came in peace, 160

So let us still continue peace and love.

Cousin of York, we institute your grace

To be our regent in these parts of France:

And, good my Lord of Somerset, unite

Your troops of horsemen with his bands of foot:

And, like true subjects, sons of your progenitors,

Go cheerfully together and digest

Your angry choler on your enemies.

Ourself, my lord protector and the rest

After some respite will return to Calais; 170

From thence to England; where I hope ere long

To be presented, by your victories,

With Charles, Alençon and that traitorous rout.

(Flourish. Accent all but York, Warwick,

Exeter and Vernon.

War. My Lord of York, I promise you, the king

Prettily, methought, did play the cat.

York. And so he did; but yet I like it not,

In that he wears the badge of Somerset.

War. Tush, that was but his fancy, blame him not;

I dare presume, sweet prince, he thought no

harm.

York. An if I wist he did,—but let it rest; 180

Other affairs must now be managed.

(Exeunt all but Exeter.

Ecc. Well didst thou, Richard, to suppress thy voice;

For, had the passions of thy heart burst out,

I fear we should have seen decider'd there

More rancorous spite, more furious raging

broils.

Than yet can be imagined or supposed.

But howe'er, no simple man that sees

This jarring discord of nobility,

This shouldering of each other in the court,

This factious bandying of their favourites, 190

But that it doth presage some ill event.

'Tis much when sceptres are in children's hands;

But more when envy breeds unkind division;

There comes the ruin, there begins confusion.

(Exit.

SCENE II. Before Bourdeaux.

Enter TALBOT, with trumpet and drum.

Tal. Go to the gates of Bourdeaux, trumpet;

Summon their general unto the wall.

Trumpet sounds. Enter General and others, aloft.

English John Talbot, captain, calls you forth,

Servant in arms to Henry King of England;

And thus he would: Open your city gates;

Be humble to us; call my sovereign yours,
And do him homage as obedient subjects;
And I'll withdraw me and my bloody power:
But, if you frown upon this proffer'd peace,
You tempt the fury of my three attendants, 10
Lean famine, quartering steel, and climbing
fire:

Who in a moment even with the earth
Shall lay your stately and air-braving towers,
If you forsake the offer of their love.

Gen. Thou ominous and fearful owl of
death,

Our nation's terror and their bloody scourge!
The period of thy tyranny approacheth.
On us thou canst not enter but by death;
For, I protest, we are well fortified
And strong enough to issue out and fight; 20
If thou retire, the Dauphin, well appointed,
Stands with the snarers of war to tangle thee:
On either hand thee there are squadrons
pitch'd,

To wait thee from the liberty of flight;
And no way canst thou turn thee for redress,
But death doth front thee with apparent spoil
And pale destruction meets thee in the face.
Ten thousand French have taken the sacrament
To rive their dangerous artillery
Upon no Christian soul but English Talbot, 30
Lo, there thou stand'st, a breathing valiant
man.

Of an invincible unconquer'd spirit!
This is the latest glory of thy prime
That I, thy enemy, due thee withal;
For ere the glass, that now begins to run,
Finish the process of his sandy hour,
These eyes, that see thee now well coloured,
Shall see thee wither'd, bloody, pale and dead.

[Drum afar off.]
Hark! hark! the Dauphin's drum, a warning
bell,

Sings heavy music to thy timorous soul; 40
And mine shall ring thy dire departure out.

[Exeunt General, &c.]
Tal. He fables not; I hear the enemy:
Out, some light horsemen, and peruse their wings.

O, negligent and heedless discipline!
How are we park'd and bounded in a pale,
A little herd of England's timorous deer,
Mazed with a yelping kennel of French curs!
If we be English deer, be then in blood;
Not maul-like, to fall down with a pinch,
But rather, moody-mad and desperate stage, 50
Turn on the bloody hounds with heads of steel
And make the cowards stand aloof at bay:
Sell every man his life as dear as mine,
And they shall find dear death of us, my friends.
God and Saint George, Talbot and England's
right,

Prosper our colours in this dangerous fight!
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Plains in Gascony.

Enter a Messenger that meets YORK. Enter
YORK with trumpet and many Soldiers:

YORK. Are not the speedy scouts return'd
again,

That dogg'd the mighty army of the Dauphin?
Mess. They are return'd, my lord, and give it out

That he is march'd to Bourdeaux with his power.

To fight with Talbot; as he march'd along,
By your espials were discovered

Two mightier troops than that the Dauphin led,
Which join'd with him and made their march for Bourdeaux.

YORK. A plague upon that villain Somerset,
That thus delays my promised supply 20

Of horsemen, that were levied for this siege!
Renowned Talbot doth expect my aid,

And I am lowt'd by a traitor villain
And cannot help the noble chevalier:

God comfort him in this necessity!
If he miscarry, farewell wars in France.

Enter SIR WILLIAM LUCY.

Lucy. Thou princely leader of our English
strength,

Never so needful on the earth of France,
Spur to the rescue of the noble Talbot,

Who now is girdled with a waist of iron 30
And hemm'd about with grim destruction:

To Bourdeaux, warlike duke! to Bourdeaux,
YORK!

Else, farewell Talbot, France, and England's
honour.

YORK. O God, that Somerset, who is proud
heart

Doth stop my cornets, were in Talbot's place!
So should we save a valiant gentleman

By forfeiting a traitor and a coward.
Mad ire and wrathful fury makes me weep,

That thus we die, while renegade traitors sleep.
Lucy. O, send some succour to the distressed
lord! 40

YORK. He dies, we lose; I break my warlike
word;

We mourn, France smiles; we lose, they daily get;

All long of this vile traitor Somerset.
Lucy. Then God take mercy on brave
Talbot's soul;

And on his son young John, who two hours
since

I met in travel toward his warlike father!
This seven years did not Talbot see his son;

And now they meet where both their lives are
done.

YORK. Alas, what joy shall noble Talbot have

To bid his young son welcome to his grave! 50
Away! vexation almost stops my breath.

That summer'd friends greet in the hour of
death.

*Lucy, farewell: no more my fortunes run,
But e'en the cause I cannot win the main*

Maine, Blois, Poitiers, and Tours, are won aw—

Lucy. Thus, while the villages of Normandy are won,

Feeds in the bosom of Sleeping negligence our country's loss.

The conquest of our shores will come, and soon—

That ever living man of memory,
Henry the Fifth: whilst they each other cross,
Lives, honours, lands and all hurry to loss.
[Exit.]

SCENE IV. Other plains in Gascony.

Enter SOMERSET, with his army; a Captain of Talbot's with him.

Som. It is too late; I cannot send them
now:

This expedition was by York and Talbot
Too rashly plotted: all our general force
Might with a sally of the very town
Be buckled with: the over-daring Talbot
Hath sullied all his gloss of former honour
By this unheeded, desperate, wild adventure:
York set him on to fight and die in shame,
That, Talbot dead, great York might bear the
name.

Cap. Here is Sir William Lucy, who with me
Set from our o'match'd forces forth for aid.

Enter SIR WILLIAM LUCY.

Som. How now, Sir William! whither were you sent?

Lucy. Whither, my lord! from bought and sold Lord Talbot:

Who, ring'd about with bold adversity,
Cries out for noble York and Somerset,
To best assailing death from his weak regions:
And whilst the honourable captain there
Drops bloody sweat from his war-wearied limbs,
And, in advantage lingering, looks for rescue,
You, his false hopes, the trust of England's
honour.

Keep off aloof with worthless emulation.
Let not your private discord keep away
The levied succours that should lend him aid,
While he, renowned noble gentleman,
Yields up his life unto a world of odds:
Orleans the Bastard, Charles, Burgundy,
Alençon, Reigner, compass him about,
And Talbot perisheth by your default.

Som. York set him on; York should have sent him aid.

Lucy. And York as fast upon your grace exclaims:

Swearing that you withhold his levied host,
Collected for this expedition.

Som. York lies; he might have sent and had the horse:

I owe him little duty, and less love;
And take foul scorn to fawn on him by sending.

Lucy. The fraud of England, not the force
of France,

Hath now entrapp'd the noble-minded Talbot:
Never to England shall he bear his life;
But dies, betray'd to fortune by your strife.

Som. Come, go; I will dispatch the horsemen
straight:

Within six hours they will be at his aid.
Lucy. Too late comes rescue: he is ta'en or
slain;

For if he could not, if he would have fled;
would Talbot never, though he might.

If he be dead, brave Talbot, then
!!

Lucy. His fame lives in the world, his shame in you.
[Exit.]

SCENE V. The English camp near Bourdeaux.

Enter TALBOT and JOHN his son.

Tal. O young John Talbot! I did send for
thee

To tutor thee in stratagems of
That Talbot's name might be in thee revived
When sapless age and weak unable limbs
Should bring thy father to his drooping chair.
But, O malignant and ill-boding stars!
Now thou art come unto a feast of death,
A terrible and unavowed danger:
Therefore, dear boy, mount on my swiftest
horse;

And I'll direct thee how thou shalt escape
By sudden flight: come, dally not, be gone.

John. Is my name Talbot? and am I your son?

And shall I fly! O, if you love my mother,
Dishonour not her honourable name,
To make a bastard and a slave of me!

The world will say, he is not Talbot's blood,
That basely fled when noble Talbot stood.

Tal. Fly, to revenge my death, if I be slain.

John. He that flies so will ne'er return
again.

Tal. If we both stay, we both are sure to die.

John. Then let me stay; and, father, do you fly:

Your loss is great, so your regard should be;
My worth unknown, no loss is known in me.

Upon my death the French can little boast;
In yours they will, in you all hopes are lost.

Flight cannot stain the honour you have won:

But mine it will, that no exploit have done:
You fled for vantage, every one will swear;

But, if I bow, they'll say it was for fear.
There is no hope that ever I will stay,

If the first hour I shrink and run away.
Here on my knee I beg mortality,

Rather than life preserved with infamy.

Tal. Shall all thy mother's hopes lie in one tomb?

John. Ay, rather than I'll shame my mother's womb.

Tal. Upon my blessing, I command thee go.

John. To fight I will, but not to fly the foe.

Tal. Part of thy father may be saved in
thee.

John. No part of him but will be shame in
me.

Tal. Thou never hadst renown, nor cannot not lose it.

John. Yes, your renowned name: shall flight abuse it?

Tal. Thy father's charge shall clear thee from that stain.

John. You cannot witness for me, being
slain.

If death be no apparent, then both fly.

Tal. And leave my followers here to fight and die!

My age was never tainted with such shame.

John. And shall my youth be guilty of such blame?

No more can I be sever'd from your side,
Than can yourself yourself in twain divide:

Stay, go, do what you will, the like do I:
For live I will not, if my father die.

Tal. Then here I take my leave of thee, fair son,

Born to eclipse thy life this afternoon.

Come, side by side together live and die;

And soul with soul from France to heaven fly.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. A field of battle.

Alarum: excursions, wherein TALBOT'S son is hemmed about, and TALBOT rescues him.

Tal. Saint George and victory! fight, soldiers, fight!

The regent hath with Talbot broke his word
And left us to the rage of France his sword.

Where is John Talbot? Pause, and take thy breath;

I gave thee life and rescued thee from death.

John. O, twice my father, twice am I thy son!

The life thou gavest me first was lost and done,
Till with thy warlike sword, despite of fate,

To my determined time thou gavest new date.

Tal. When from the Dauphin's crest thy sword struck fire,

It warm'd thy father's heart with proud desire
Of bold-faced victory. Then leaden age,

Quicken'd with youthful spleen and warlike rage,

Beat down Alençon, Orleans, Burgundy,
And from the pride of Gallia rescued thee.

The ifeful bastard Orleans, that drew blood
From thee, my boy, and had the maidenhood

Of thy first fight, I soon encountered,
And interchanging blows I quickly shed

Some of his bastard blood; and in disgrace so
Bespoke him thus: 'Contaminated, base

And misbegotten blood I spill of thine,
Mean and right poor, for that pure blood of mine

Which thou didst force from Talbot, my brave boy.'

Here, purposing the Bastard to destroy,
Came in strong rescue. Speak, thy father's care,

Art thou not weary, John? how dost thou fare?

Wilt thou yet leave the battle, boy, and fly,
Now thou art seal'd the son of chivalry?

Fly, to revenge my death when I am dead:
The help of one stands me in little stead.

O, too much folly is it, well I wot,
To hazard all our lives in one small boat!

If I to-day die not with Frenchmen's rage,
To-morrow I shall die with mickle age:

By me they nothing gain an if I stay;
'Tis but the shortening of my life one day:

In thee thy mother dies, our household's name,
My death's revenge, thy youth, and England's fame:

All these and more we hazard by thy stay;

All these are saved if thou wilt fly away.

John. The sword of Orleans hath not made me smart;

These words of yours draw life-blood from my heart;

On that advantage, bought with such a shame,
To save a paltry life and slay bright fame,

Before young Talbot from old Talbot fly,
The coward horse that bears me fall and die!

And like me to the peasant boys of France,
To be shame's scorn and subject of mischance!

Surely, by all the glory you have won,
An if I fly, I am not Talbot's son:

Then talk no more of flight, it is no boot;
If son to Talbot, die at Talbot's foot.

Tal. Then follow thou thy desperate sire of Crete,

Thou Icarus; thy life to me is sweet:
If thou wilt fight, fight by thy father's side;

And, commendable proved, let's die in pride.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. Another part of the field.

Alarum: excursions. Enter old TALBOT led by a Servant.

Tal. Where is my other life! mine own is gone;

O, where's young Talbot? where is valiant John?

Triumphant death, smear'd with captivity,
Young Talbot's valour makes me smile at thee:

When he perceived me shrink and on my knee,
His bloody sword he brandish'd over me,

And, like a hungry lion, did commence
Rough deeds of rage and stern impatience;

But when my angry guardant stood alone,
Tendering my ruin and assaill'd of none,

Dizzy-eyed fury and great rage of heart
Suddenly made him from my side to start

Into the clustering battle of the French;
And in that sea of blood my boy did drench

His over-mounting spirit, and there died,
My Icarus, my blossom, in his pride.

Serv. O my dear lord, lo, where your son is borne!

Enter Soldiers, with the body of young TALBOT.

Tal. Thou antic death, which laugh'st us here to scorn,

Anon, from thy insulting tyranny,
Coupled in bonds of perpetuity,

Two Talbots, winged through the lither sky,
In thy despite shall 'scape mortality.

O thou, whose wounds become hard-favour'd death,
Speak to thy father as thou yield thy breath!

Brave death by speaking, whether he will or no;
Imagine him a Frenchman and thy foe.

Poor boy! he smiles, methinks, as who should say,
Had death been French, then death had died

to-day.

Come, come and lay him in his father's arms:
My spirit can no longer bear these burning

Soldiers, adieu! I have what I would have Now my old arms are young John Talbot's grave.

Enter CHARLES, ALANCON, BURGUNDY, BARRARD, LA PUCELLE, and forces.

Char. Had York and Somerset brought rescue in.

We should have found a bloody day of this.

Barr. How the young whelp of Talbot's, raging wood,

Did dash his puny sword in Frenchmen's blood!

Puc. Once I encounter'd him, and thus I said:

born
To be the pillage of a giglot wench:
So, pushing in the bowels of the French,
He left me proudly, as unworthy fight.

Barr. Doubtless he would have made a noble knight;

See, where he lies inhearsed in the arms
Of the most bloody nurse of his harms!

Barr. How them to pieces, hack their bones
sunder,

Whose life was England's glory, Gallia's wonder.

Char. O, no, forbear! for that which we have fled

During the life, let us not wrong it dead. 50

Enter SIR WILLIAM LUCY, attended; Herald of the French preceding.

Lucy. Herald, conduct me to the Dauphin's tent,

To know who hath obtain'd the glory of the day.

Char. On what submissive message art thou sent?

Lucy. Submission, Dauphin! 'tis a mere French word;

We English warriors wot not what it means.

I come to know what prisoners thou hast taken
And to survey the bodies of the dead.

Char. For prisoners ask't thoust hell our prison is.

But tell me whom thou seek'st.

Lucy. But where's the great Alcides of the Alps?

Valiant Lord Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury,
Crested for his rare success in arms,

Greatest Earl of Warwick, Watford and Fulham;

Lord Talbot of Goodric and Urchinfield, Lord Strange of Blackmere, Lord Verdon of Alton,

Lord Oglethorpe of Wingfield, Lord Furnival of Stokeham,

The brave victorious Lord of Falconbridge;

Knight of the noble order of Saint George,
Worthy Saint Michael and the Golden Fleece;

Greatest knight to Henry the Sixth 70
Of all his years within the realm of France!

Lucy. How is a silly simpleton indeed!

For that, that two and fifty kingdoms hath,
Whom not as authors write as this,

How dost thou reason with all these titles standing and by-blown lies here at our feet.

Lucy. Is Talbot slain, the Frenchmen's only scourge,

Your kingdom's terror and black Nemesis?

O, were mine eye-balls into bullets turn'd,
That I in rage might shoot them at your faces!

(1) that I could but call these dead to life! 80
It were enough to fright the realm of France:

Were but his picture left amongst you here,
It would amaze the proudest of you all.

Give me their bodies, that I may bear them hence

And give them burial as becometh their worth.

Puc. I think this upstart is old Talbot's ghost,

He speaks with such a proud commanding spirit.

For God's sake, let him have 'em; to keep them here,

They would but stink, and putrefy the air. 90
Char. Go, take their bodies hence.

Lucy. I'll bear them hence; but from their ashes shall be reard

A phoenix that shall make all France afraid.

Char. So we be rid of them, do with 'em what they will.

And now to Paris, in this conquering vein
All will be ours, now bloody Talbot's slain. [Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I. London. The palace.

Senect. Enter KING, GLOUCESTER, and EXETER.

King. Have you perused the letters from the pope.

The emperor and the Earl of Armagnac?

Glow. I have, my lord; and their intent is this:

They humbly sue unto your excellency
To have a godly peace concluded of

Between the realms of England and of France.

King. How doth your grace affect their motion?

Glow. Well, my good lord; and as the only means

To stop effusion of our Christian blood
And establish quietness on every side. 10

King. Ay, marry, uncle; for I always thought

It was both impious and unnatural
That such inhumanity and bloody strife

Should reign among professors of one faith.

Glow. Beside, my lord, the sooner to effect
And surer bind this knot of amity,

The Earl of Armagnac, near knit to Charles,
A man of great authority in France,

Proffers his only daughter to your grace
In marriage, with a large and sumptuous dowry. 20

King. Marriage, uncle! alas, thy years are young!

And sister is my study and my bosom
Than wanton dalliance with a peasant.

Yet call the ambassadors; and, as you please,
So let them have their answers every one!

I shall be well content with any choice
Tends to God's glory and my country's weal.

Enter WINCHESTER in Cardinal's habit, a Legate and two Ambassadors.

Ecc. What! is my Lord of Winchester installed?

And call'd unto a cardinal's degree?
Then I perceive that will be verified.
Henry the Fifth did sometime prophesy,
'If once he come to be a cardinal,
He'll make his cap co-equal with the crown.'

King. My lords ambassadors, your several suits

Have been consider'd and debated on.
Your purpose is both good and reasonable;
And therefore are we certainly resolved
To draw conditions of a friendly peace;
Which by my Lord of Winchester we mean
Shall be transported presently to France.

Glo. And for the proffer of my lord your master,

I have inform'd his highness so at large
As liking of the lady's virtuous gifts,
Her beauty and the value of her dower,
He doth intend she shall be England's queen.

King. In argument and proof of which contract,

Hear her this jewel, pledge of my affection.
And so, my lord protector, see them guarded
And safely brought to Dover; where I shipp'd
Commit them to the fortune of the sea.

[Exeunt all but Winchester and Legate.]

Win. Stay, my lord legate: you shall first receive

The sum of money which I promised
Should be deliver'd to his holiness
For clothing me in these grave ornaments.

Leg. I will attend upon your lordship's leisure.

Win. [Aside] Now Winchester will not submit, I trow.

Or be inferior to the prouddest peer.

Humphrey of Gloucester, thou shalt well perceive

That, neither in birth or for authority,
The bishop will be overcome by thee:

I'll either make thee stoop and bend thy knee,
Or sack this country with a mutiny.

SCENE II. France. Plains in Anjou.

Enter CHARLES, BURGUNDY, ALENÇON, BASTARD, REIGNIER, LA PUCELLE, and forces.

Char. These news, my lords, may cheer our drooping spirits:

'Tis said the stout Parisians do revolt
And turn again unto the warlike French.

Alen. Then march to Paris, royal Charles of France.

And keep not back your powers in dalliance.

Puc. Peace be amongst them, if they turn to us;

Else, ruin combat with their palaces!

Enter Scout.

Scout. Success unto our valiant general,
And happiness to his accomplices!

Char. What things and our hearts! I prize, speak.

Scout. The English army, that divid'd was Into two parties, is now confin'd in one,
And means to give you battle presently.

Char. Somewhat too sudden, sir, the warning is;

But we will presently provide for them.

Bur. I trust the ghost of Talbot is not there;

Now he is gone, my lord, you need not fear.

Puc. Of all base passions, fear is most accursed.

Command the conquest, Charles, it shall be thine.

Let Henry fret and all the world repine.

Char. Then on, my lords; and France be fortunate! [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Before Angiers.

Alarum. Excursions. Enter LA PUCELLE.

Puc. The regent conquers, and the Frenchmen fly.

Now help, ye charming spells and peripatets;
And ye choice spirits that admonish me

And give me signs of future accidents.

[Thunder.]
You speedy helpers, that are substitutes
Under the lordly monarch of the north,
Appear and aid me in this enterprise.

Enter Fiends.

This speedy and quick appearance argues proof
Of your accustomed diligence to me.

Now, ye familiar spirits, that are call'd
Out of the powerful regions under earth,

Help me this once, that France may get the field.

[They wait, and speak not.]
O, hold me not with silence over-long!

Where I was wont to feed you with my blood,
I'll lop a member off and give it you

In earnest of a further benefit,
So you do condescend to help me now.

[They hang their heads.]
No hope to have redress! My body shall Pay recompense, if you will grant my suit.

[They shake their heads.]
Cannot my body nor blood sacrifice
Entreat you to your wonted fierceness?

Then take my soul, my body, soul and all,
Before that England give the French the field.

[They depart.]
See, they forsake me! Now the time is
That France must vail her lofty-plumed crest
And let her head fall into England's lap.

My ancient incantations are too weak,
And hold too strong for me to buckle with:

Now, France, thy glory droopeth to the dust.

Excursions. Re-enter LA PUCELLE.

band to band with YORK: LA PUCELLE takes. The French fly.

York. Downfall of France, I think I have you fast!

Unchain your spirits now with swelling
And try if they can gain your hearts:

A goodly prize, in her the devil's grace!
See, how she ugly with death looks and

As if with Circe she would change my shape!

Puc. Changed to a worse shape thou canst not be.

York. O, Charles the Dauphin is a proper man;

No shape but his can please your dainty eye.

Puc. A plaguing mischief light on Charles and thee!

And may ye both be suddenly surprised 40
By bloody hands, in sleeping on your beds!

York. Fell banning hag, enchantress, hold thy tongue!

Puc. I prithee, give me leave to curse awhile.

York. Curse, miscreant, when thou comest to the stake. [Exit.

Alarum. Enter SUFFOLK, with MARGARET in his hand.

Suf. Be what thou wilt, thou art my prisoner. [Gazes on her.

O fairest beauty, do not fear nor fly!

For I will touch thee but with reverent hands;

I kiss these fingers for eternal peace,

And lay them gently on thy tender side.

Who art thou? say, that I may honour thee. 50

Mar. Margaret my name, and daughter to a king.

The King of Naples, whose'er thou art.

Suf. An earl I am, and Suffolk am I call'd.

Be not offended, nature's miracle,

Thou art allotted to be taken by me:

So doth the swan her downy cygnet save,

Keeping them prisoner underneath her wings.

Yet, if this servile usage once offend,

Go and be free again as Suffolk's friend.

[She is going.

O, stay! I have no power to let her pass: 60

My hand would free her, but my heart says no.

As plays the sun upon the glassy streams,

Twinkling another counterfeited beam,

So seems this gorgeous beauty to mine eyes.

Fain would I woo her, yet I dare not speak;

I'll call for pen and ink, and write my mind.

Fie, de la Pote! disable not thyself;

Hast not a tongue? is she not here?

Wilt thou be daunted at a woman's sight?

Ay, beauty's princely majesty is such, 70

Confounds the tongue and makes the senses rough.

Mar. Say, Earl of Suffolk—if thy name be so—

What ransom must I pay before I pass?

For I perceive I am thy prisoner.

Suf. How canst thou tell she will deny thy suit.

Before thou make a trial of her love?

Mar. Why speak'st thou not? what ransom

Suf. She's stiff and therefore to be woo'd;

She is a woman, therefore to be won.

Mar. Wilt thou accept of ransom? yes,

or no? 80

Suf. Good man, remember that thou hast a

Thou shalt see Margaret be thy paramour!

Mar. I were best to leave him, for he will not hear.

Suf. There all is marr'd; there lies a cooling card.

Mar. He talks at random; sure, the man is mad.

Suf. And yet a dispensation may be had.

Mar. And yet I would that you would answer me.

Suf. I'll win this Lady Margaret. For whom?

Why, for my king: tush, that's a wooden thing!

Mar. He talks of wood: it is some carpenter.

Suf. Yet so my fancy may be satisfied, 91

And peace established between these realms.

But there remains a scruple in that too;

For though her father be the King of Naples,

Duke of Anjou and Maine, yet is he poor,

And our nobility will scorn the match.

Mar. Hear ye, captain, are you not at leisure?

Suf. It shall be so, disdain they ne'er so much:

Henry is youthful and will quickly yield.

Madam, I have a secret to reveal. 100

Mar. What though I be enthral'd? he seems a knight,

And will not any way dishonour me.

Suf. Lady, vouchsafe to listen what I say.

Mar. Perhaps I shall be rescued by the French;

And then I need not crave his courtesy.

Suf. Sweet madam, give me hearing in a cause—

Mar. Tush, women have been captivate ere now.

Suf. Lady, wherefore talk you so?

Mar. I cry you, mercy, 'tis but Quid pro Quo.

Suf. Say, gentle princess, would you not suppose 110

Your bondage happy, to be made a queen?

Mar. To be a queen in bondage is more vile

Than is a slave in base servility;

For princes should be free.

Suf. And so shall you,

If happy England's royal king be free.

Mar. Why, what concerns his freedom unto me?

Suf. I'll undertake to make thee Henry's queen.

To put a golden sceptre in thy hand

And set a precious crown upon thy head,

If thou wilt condescend to be my— 120

Mar. His love.

Suf. I am unworthy to be Henry's wife.

Mar. No, gentle madam; I unworthy am

To woo so fair a dame to be his wife

And have no portion in the choice myself.

How say you, madam, are ye so content?

Mar. An if my father please, I am content.

Suf. Then call our capes and our colours forth.

And, madam, at your father's castle walls

We'll crave a parley, to confer with him. 130

A parley sounded. Enter REIGNIER on the walls.

See, Reignier, see, thy daughter prisoner!

Reig. To whom?

Suf. To me.

Reig. Suffolk, what remedy? I am a soldier and unapt to weep Or to exclaim on fortune's fickleness.

Suf. Yes, there is remedy enough, my lord: Consent, and for thy honour give consent, Thy daughter shall be wedded to my king; Whom I with pain have woo'd and won thereto;

And this her easy-held imprisonment Hath gain'd thy daughter princely liberty. 140

Reig. Speaks Suffolk as he thinks!

Suf. Fair Margaret knows That Suffolk doth not flatter, face, or feign.

Reig. Upon thy princely warrant, I descend To give thee answer of thy just demand.

[Exit from the walls.]

Suf. And here I will expect thy coming.

Trumpets sound. Enter REIGNIER, below.

Reig. Welcome, brave earl, into our territories:

Command in Anjou what your honour pleases.

Suf. Thanks, Reignier, happy for so sweet a child,

Fit to be made companion with a king: What answer makes your grace unto my suit?

Reig. Since thou dost deign to woo her little worth

To be the princely bride of such a lord; Upon condition I may quietly

Enjoy mine own, the country Maine and Anjou, Free from oppression or the stroke of war,

My daughter shall be Henry's, if he please.

Suf. That is her ransom; I deliver her; And those two counties I will undertake

Your grace shall well and quietly enjoy.

Reig. And I again, in Henry's royal name, As deputy unto that gracious king,

Give thee her hand, for sign of plighted faith.

Suf. Reignier of France, I give thee kingly thanks,

Because this is in traffic of a king.

[Aside] And yet, methinks, I could be well content

To be mine own attorney in this case.

I'll over then to England with this news, And make this marriage to be solemnized.

So farewell, Reignier: set this diamond safe In golden palaces, as it becomes. 170

Reig. I do embrace thee, as I would embrace The Christian prince, King Henry, were he here.

Mer. Farewell, my lord: good wishes, praise and prayers

Shall Suffolk ever have of Margaret. [Going.]

Suf. Farewell, sweet madam: but hark you, Margaret:

No princely commendations to my king? Mer. Such commendations as becomes a maid,

A virgin and his servant, say to him, Words sweetly placed and modestly

But, madam, I must trouble you again; No loving token to his majesty!

Mar. Yes, my good lord, a pure unspotted heart.

Never yet taint with love, I send the king.

Suf. And this withal. [Kisses her.]

Mar. That for thyself: I will not so presume To send such peevish tokens to a king.

[Exeunt Reignier and Margaret.]

Suf. O, wert thou for myself! But, Suffolk, stay;

Thou mayst not wander in that labyrinth; There Minotaurs and ugly treasons lurk.

Solicit Henry with her wondrous praise: 190

Bethink thee on her virtues that surmount, And natural graces that extinguish art;

Repeat their semblance often on the seas, That, when thou comest to kneel at Henry's feet,

Thou mayst bereave him of his wits with wonder. [Exit.]

SCENE IV. Camp of the DUKE OF YORK in Anjou.

Enter YORK, WARWICK, and others.

York. Bring forth that sorceress condemn'd to burn.

Enter LA PUCELLE, guarded, and a Shepherd.

Shep. Ah, Joan, this kills thy father's heart outright!

Have I sought every country far and near, And, now it is my chance to find thee out,

Must I behold thy timeless cruel death?

Ah, Joan, sweet daughter Joan, I'll die with thee!

Puc. Decrepit miser! base ignoble wretch! I am descended of a gentler blood;

Thou art no father nor no friend of mine.

Shep. Out, out! My lords, an please you, 'tis not so;

I did beget her, all the parish knows: Her mother liveth yet, can testify

She was the first fruit of my bachelorship.

War. Graceless! wilt thou deny thy parentage?

York. This argues what her kind of life hath been,

Wicked and vile; and so her death concludes.

Shep. Fie, Joan, that thou wilt be so obstacle!

God knows thou art a collop of my flesh;

And for thy sake have I shed many a tear:

Deny me not, I prithe, gentle Joan. 200

Puc. Passant, avaunt! You have suborn'd this man,

Of purpose to obscure my noble birth.

Shep. 'Tis true, I gave a noble to the priest

The morn that I was wedded to her mother.

Kneel down and take my blessing, good my girl.

Wilt thou not stoop? Now cursed be the time (if thy nativity) I would the milk

Thy mother gave thee when thou suck'dst her breast.

Had been a little rancid for thy suck!

Or else, when thou didst creep my lambs-a-bed,

I wish some ravenous wolf had eaten thee! 210

Dost thou deny thy father, cursed deed!
O, burn her, burn her! hanging is too good.

[Exit.]
York. Take her away; for she hath lived too long.

To fill the world with vicious qualities.

Puc. First, let me tell you whom you have condemn'd:

Not me begotten of a shepherd swain,
But issued from the progeny of kings;

Virtuous and holy; chosen from above,
By inspiration of celestial grace,

To work exceeding miracles on earth.

I never had to do with wicked spirits:

But you, that are polluted with your lusts,
Stain'd with the guiltless blood of innocents,

Corrupt and tainted with a thousand vices,
Because you want the grace that others have,

You judge it straight a thing impossible
To compass wonders but by help of devils.

No, misconceived! Joan of Arc hath been
A virgin from her tender infancy,

Chaste and immaculate in very thought;

Whose maiden blood, thus rigorously effused,
Will cry for vengeance at the gates of heaven.

York. Ay, ay: away with her to execution!

War. And hark ye, sirs; because she is a maid,

Spare for no faggots, let there be snow:

Place barrels of pitch upon the fatal stake,
That so her torture may be shortened.

Puc. Will nothing turn your unrelenting hearts!

Then, Joan, discover thine infirmity,
That warranteth by law to be thy privilege.

I am with child, ye bloody homicides:
Murder not then the fruit within my womb,

Although ye hale me to a violent death.

York. Now heaven forfend! the holy maid with child!

War. The greatest miracle that e'er ye wrought:

Is all your strict preciseness come to this!

York. She and the Dauphin have been juggling:

I did imagine what would be her refuge.

War. Well, go to; we'll have no bastards
live;

Especially since Charles must father it.

Puc. You are deceived; my child is none of his;

It was Alençon that enjoy'd my love.

York. Alençon! that notorious Machiavel!

It dies, an if it had a thousand lives.

Puc. O, give me leave, I have deluded you:

'Twas neither Charles nor yet the duke I named,
But Reignier, king of Naples, that prevail'd.

War. A married man! that's most intolerable.

York. Why, how's a girl! I think she knows
not well,

These were so many, whom she may accuse.

War. It's sign she hath been liberal and free.

York. And yet, forsooth, she is a virgin pure, Strumpet, thy words condemn thy best and

Use to all things, for it is in vain.

Puc. Then lead me hence; with whom I leave my curse:

May never glorious sun reflect his beams
Upon the country where you make abode;

But darkness and the gloomy shade of death
Environ you, till mischief and despair;

Drive you to break your necks or hang your selves!

[Exit, guarded.]

York. Break thou in pieces and consume to ashes,

Thou foul accursed minister of hell!

Enter CARDINAL BEAUFORT,

Winchester, attended.

Car. Lord regent, I do greet your excellence
With letters of commission from the king.

For know, my lords, the states of Christendom,
Moved with remorse of these outrageous broils,

Have earnestly implored a general peace
Betwix our nation and the aspiring French;

And hereat hand the Dauphin and his train
Approacheth, to confer about some matter.

York. Is all our travail turn'd to this effect?

After the slaughter of so many peers,
So many captains, gentlemen and soldiers,

That in this quarrel have been overthrow'n
And sold their bodies for their country's benefit,

Shall we at last conclude estimate peace?

I have we not lost most part of all the towns,
By treason, falsehood and by treachery,

Our great progenitors had conquered?

War. Warwick, Warwick! I foresee with grief
The utter loss of all the realm of France.

War. Be patient, York: if we conclude a
peace,

It shall be with such strict and severe covenants
As little shall the Frenchmen gain thereby.

Enter CHARLES, ALENÇON, BASTARD,

REIGNIER, and others.

Char. Since, lords of England, it is thus agreed

That peaceful truce shall be proclaim'd in
France,

We come to be informed by yourselves
What the conditions of that league must be.

York. Speak, Winchester; for boiling choler chokes

The hollow passage of my poison'd voice,
By sight of these our hateful enemies.

Cur. Charles, and the rest, it is enacted
thus:

That, in regard King Henry gives consent,
Of mere compassion and of lenity,

To ease your country of distressful war,
And suffer you to breathe in fruitful peace,

You shall become true liegemen to his crown:

And, Charles, upon condition thou wilt swear
To pay him tribute, and submit thyself,

Thou shalt be placed as viceroy under him,
And still enjoy thy regal dignity.

Alen. Must he be then as shadow of his self?

Adorn his temples with a coronet,
And yet, in substance and authority,

Beaten his privilege of a private man!

This proffer is absurd and unreasonable.

Char. 'Tis known already that I am possess'd
With more than half the Gallican territories,
And therein reverenced for their lawful king:
Shall I, for lucre of the rest unvanquish'd,
Detract so much from that prerogative,
As to be call'd but viceroy of the whole?
No, lord ambassador, I'll rather keep
That which I have than, coveting for more,
Be cast from possibility of all.

York. Insulting Charles! hast thou by secret means

Used intercession to obtain a league,
And, now the matter grows to compromise,
Stand'st thou aloof upon comparison? 150

Either accept the title thou usurp'st,
Of benefit proceeding from our king
And not of any challenge of desert,
Or we will plague thee with incessant wars.

Rein. My lord, you do not well in obstinacy
To cavil in the course of this contract:
If once it be neglected, ten to one
We shall not find like opportunity.

Alen. To say the truth, it is your policy
To save your subjects from such massacre 160
And ruthless slaughters as are daily seen
By our proceeding in hostility:
And therefore take this compact of a truce,
Although you break it when your pleasure serves.

War. How say'st thou, Charles? shall our condition stand?

Char. It shall;
Only reserved, you claim no interest
In any of our towns of garrison.

York. Then swear allegiance to his majesty,
As thou art knight, never to disobey 170
Nor be rebellious to the crown of England,
Thou, nor thy nobles, to the crown of England.
So, now dismiss your army when ye please:
Hang up your ensigns, let your drums be still,
For here we entertain a solemn peace.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V. London. The palace.

Enter SUFFOLK in conference with the KING,
GLOUCESTER and EXETER.

King. Your wondrous rare description, noble earl,

Of beauteous Margaret hath astonish'd me:
Her virtues graced with external gifts
Do breed love's settled passions in my heart:
And like as rigour of tempestuous gusts
Provokes the mightiest hulk against the tide,
So am I driven by breath of her renown
Either to suffer shipwreck or arrive
Where I may have fruition of her love.

Suf. Tush, my good lord, this superficial tale

Is but a preface of her worthy praise;
The chief perfections of that lovely dame,
Had I sufficient skill to utter them,
Would make a volume of enticing lines,
Able to ravish any dull conceit:
And, which is more, she is not so divine,
So full-replete with choicest of all delights,
But with as humble lowliness of mind

She is content to be at your command;
Command, I mean, of virtuous chaste intents,
To love and honour Henry as her lord. 21

King. And otherwise will Henry never presume.

Therefore, my lord protector, give consent
That Margaret may be England's royal queen.

Glos. So should I give consent to flatter sin.
You know, my lord, your highness is betroth'd
Unto another lady of esteem:

How shall we then dispense with that contract,
And not deface your honour with reproach?

Suf. As doth a ruler with unlawful oaths; 30
Or one that, at a triumph having vow'd
To try his strength, forsaketh yet the lists
By reason of his adversary's odds:

A poor earl's daughter is unequal odds,
And therefore may be broke without offence.

Glos. Why, what, I pray, is Margaret more than that?
Her father is no better than an earl,
Although in glorious titles he excel.

Suf. Yes, my lord, her father is a king,
The King of Naples and Jerusalem; 40

And of such great authority in France
As his alliance will confirm our peace

And keep the Frenchmen in allegiance.

Glos. And so the Earl of Armagnac may do,
Because he is near kinsman unto Charles.

Eze. Beside, his wealth doth warrant a liberal dower,

Where Reignier sooner will receive than give.

Suf. A dower, my lords! disgrace not so your
king,

That he should be so abject, base and poor,
To choose for wealth and not for perfect love. 50

Henry is able to enrich his queen
And not to seek a queen to make him rich:

So worthless peasants bargain for their wives,
As market-men for oxen, sheep, or horses.

Marriage is a matter of more worth
Than to be dealt in by attorneyship;

Not whom we will, but whom his grace affects,
Must be companion of his nuptial bed:

And therefore, lords, since he affects her most,
It most of all these reasons bindeth us. 60

In our opinions she should be preferred.
For what is wedlock forced but a hell,

An age of discord and continual strife?
Whereas the contrary bringeth bliss,

And is a pattern of celestial peace.
Whom should we match with Henry, being a
king,

But Margaret, that is daughter to a king?
Her peerless features, joined with her birth,

Approves her fit for none but for a king;
Her valiant courage and undaunted spirit, 70

More than in women commonly is seen,
Will answer our hope in issue of a king;

For Henry, son unto a conqueror,
Is likely to beget more conquerors,

If with a lady of so high resolve
As is fair Margaret he be link'd in love.

Then yield, my lords; and here conclude with
me

That Margaret shall be queen, and none but she.

King. Whether it be through force of your report,

My noble Lord of Suffolk, or for that
 My tender youth was never yet attain'd
 With any passion of inflaming love,
 I cannot tell; but this I am assured,
 I feel such sharp dissension in my breast,
 Such fierces alarms both of hope and fear,
 As I am sick with working of my thoughts.
 Take, therefore, shipping; post, my lord, to
 France;

Agree to any covenants, and procure
 That Lady Margaret do vouchsafe to come
 To cross the seas to England and be crown'd 50
 King Henry's faithful and anointed queen:
 For your expenses and sufficient charge,
 Among the people gather up a tenth.
 Be gone, I say; for, till you do return,
 I rest perplexed with a thousand cares.

So And you, good uncle, banish all offence:
 If you do censure me by what you were,
 Not what you are, I know it will excuse
 This sudden execution of my will.

And so, conduct me where, from company, 200
 I may revolve and ruminat my grief. [Exit.

Glou. Ay, grief, I fear me, both at first and last. [Exeunt Gloucester and Exeter.

Suf. Thus Suffolk hath prevail'd; and thus he goes,

As did the youthful Paris once to Greece
 With hope to find the like event in love,
 But prosper better than the Trojan did.
 Margaret shall now be queen, and rule the
 king;

But I will rule both her, the king and realm.
 [Exit.

SCENE: England.

ACT I

SCENE I. London. The palace.

Flourish of trumpets: then hautboys. Enter the KING, HUMPHREY, Duke of Gloucester, SALISBURY, WARWICK, and CARDINAL BEAUFORT, on the one side; the QUEEN, SUFFOLK, YORK, SOMERSET, and BUCKINGHAM, on the other.

Suf. As by your high imperial majesty I had in charge at my depart for France, As procurator to your excellence, To marry Princess Margaret for your grace, So, in the famous ancient city Tours, In presence of the Kings of France and Sicil, The Dukes of Orleans, Calaber, Bretagne and Alençon, Seven earls, twelve barons and twenty reverend bishops,

I have perform'd my task and was espoused: And humbly now upon my bended knee, In sight of England and her lordly peers,

Deliver up my title in the queen
To your most gracious hands, that are the substance

Of that great shadow I did represent;
The happiest gift that ever marquess gave,
The fairest queen that ever king received.

King. Suffolk, arise. Welcome, Queen Margaret:

I can express no kinder sign of love
Than this kind kiss. O Lord, that lends me life,

Lend me a heart replete with thankfulness: so
For thou hast given me in this beauteous face
A world of earthly blessings to my soul,
If sympathy of love unite our thoughts.

Queen. Great King of England and my gracious lord,

The mutual conference that my mind hath had,
By day, by night, waking and in my dreams,
In courtly company or at my lute

With you, mine eldest-liest: I
Makes me the bolder to salute my Lord

With ruder terms, such as my wit affords

And over-joy of heart doth minister.

King. Her sight did ravish; but her grace in speech.

Her words y-clad with wisdom's majesty,
Makes me from wondering fall to weeping joys;
Such is the fulness of my heart's content.

Lords. With one cheerful voice welcome my
love.

All [kneeling]. Long live Queen Margaret,
England's happiness!

Queen. We thank you all.

Suf. My lord protector, so it please your
grace.

Here are the articles of contracted peace
Between our sovereign and the French king Charles.

For eighteen months concluded by consent.

Glos. [Reads]. 'Imprimis, It is agreed between the French king Charles, and William de la Pole, Marquess of Suffolk, ambassador for Henry King of England, that the said Henry shall espouse the Lady Margaret, daughter unto Reignier King of Naples, Sicilia and Jerusalem, and crown her Queen of England ere the thirtieth of May next ensuing. Item, that the duchy of Anjou and the county of Maine shall be released and delivered to the king her father.' — [Lays the paper fall.]

King. Uncle, how now!

Glos. Pardon me, gracious lord;
Some sudden quake hath struck me at the
heart.

And dimm'd mine eyes, that I can read no
further.

King. Uncle of Winchester, I pray, read
on.

Car. [Reads]. 'Item, It is further agreed between them, that the duchies of Anjou and Maine shall be released and delivered over to the king her father, and she sent over to the King of England's own proper cost and charges, without having any dowry.'

King. They please us well. Lord marquess, kneel down.

We have create thee the first duke of Suffolk,
And gird thee with the sword. Cousin of York,
We have discharge your grace from being regent of the parts of France, till term of eighteen months.

Be full exulted. Thanks, uncle Winchester,
Gloucester, York, Buckingham, Somerset,
Salisbury, and Warwick:

We thank you all for this great favour done,
In entertainment to my princely queen.
Come, let us in, and with all speed provide
To see her coronation be perform'd.

[Exeunt King, Queen, and Suffolk.]

Glos. Have peers of England, pillars of the state.

To you, Duke Humphrey must unload his grief,
Your grief, the common grief of all the land.

What did my brother Henry spend his youth,
His valour, coin and people, in the wars?

Did he no other lodge in open field,
In cold and summer's parching heat,

— France, his true inheritance?
My brother Bedford told his wife,
yep what Henry got!

Have you yourselves, Somerset, Buckingham,
Brave York, Salisbury, and victorious Warwick,
Received deep scars in France and Normandy?
Or hath mine uncle Beaufort and my
With all the learned council of the Studied so long, sat in the council—
Early and late, debating to and fro How France and Frenchmen might kept in awe.

And had his highness in his infancy
Crowned in Paris in despite of foes?
And shall these labours and these honours die?

Shall Henry's conquest, Bedford's vigilance,
Your deeds of war and all our counsel—
O peers of England, shameful is this league!

Fatal this marriage, cancelling your fame,
Blotting your names from books of memory,

Razing the characters of your renown,
Defacing monuments of conquer'd France,

Undoing all, as all had never been!

Car. Nephew, what means this passionate discourse.

This peroration with such circumstance?
For France, 'tis ours; and we will keep it still.

Glos. Ay, uncle, we will keep it, if we can;
But now it is impossible we should:

Suffolk, the new-made duke that rules the roost,
Hath given the duchy of Anjou and Maine
Unto the poor King Reignier, whose large style
Agrees not with the leanness of his purse.

Sal. Now, by the death of Him that died for
all,

These counties were the keys of Normandy.
But wherefore weeps Warwick, my valiant son?

War. For grief that they are past recovery:
For, were there hope to conquer them again,
My sword should shed hot blood, mine eyes no
tears.

Anjou and Maine! myself did win them both:
Those provinces these arms of mine did conquer:

And are the cities, that I got with wounds,
Deliver'd up again with peaceful words!

Mort Dieu!

York. For Suffolk's duke, may he be suffocate.

That dims the honour of this warlike isle!
France should have torn and rent my very
heart.

Before I would have yielded to this league.
I never read but England's kings have had large sums of gold and dowries with their wives;

And our King Henry gives away his own,
To match with her that brings no advantages.

Glos. A proper jest, and never heard before.
That Suffolk should demand a whole fifteenth
For costs and charges in transporting her!
She should have stay'd in France and starved in France.

Before—

Car. My Lord of Gloucester, now ye grow too hot:

It was the pleasure of lord the!

Glos. My Lord of

mind;

'Tis not my speeches

But 'tis my presence

Rancour will out:

I see thy fury: if I longer stay,
We shall begin our ancient bickerings.
Lordings, farewell; and say, when I am gone,
I prophesied France will be lost ere long.

[Exit.

Car. So, there goes our protector in a rage.
'Tis known to you he is mine enemy,
Nay, more, an enemy unto you all,
And no great friend, I fear me, to the king. 150
Consider, lords, he is the next of blood,
And heir apparent to the English crown:
Had Henry got an empire by his marriage,
And all the wealthy kingdoms of the west,
There's reason he should be displeased at it.
Look to it, lords; let not his smoothing words
Bewitch your hearts; be wise and circumspect.
What though the common people favour him,
Calling him 'Humphrey, the good Duke of Gloucester,'

Clapping their hands, and crying with loud
voice, 160

'Jesu maintain your royal excellence!'

With 'God preserve the good Duke Humphrey!'
I fear me, lords, for all this flattering gloss,
He will be found a dangerous protector.

Buck. Why should he, then, protect our
sovereign,

He being of age to govern of himself?

Cousin of Somerset, join you with me,

And all together, with the Duke of Suffolk,

We'll quickly noise Duke Humphrey from his seat.

Car. This weighty business will not brook
delay: 170

I'll to the Duke of Suffolk presently. [Exit.

Som. Cousin of Buckingham, though Humphrey's pride

And greatness of his place be grief to us,

Yet let us watch the haughty cardinal:

His insolence is more intolerable

Than all the princes in the land beside:

If Gloucester be displaced, he'll be protector.

Buck. Or thou or I, Somerset, will be protector,

Despite Duke Humphrey or the cardinal.

[Exeunt Buckingham and Somerset.

Sal. Pride went before, ambition follows
him. 180

While these do labour for their own preferment,
Behoves it us to labour for the realm.

I never saw but Humphrey Duke of Gloucester

Did bear him like a noble gentleman.

Oft have I seen the haughty cardinal,

More like a soldier than a man o' the church,

As stout and proud as he were lord of all,

Swear like a ruffian and demean himself

Unlike the ruler of a commonweal.

Warwick, my son, the comfort of my age, 190

Thy deeds, thy plainness and thy housekeeping,

Hath won the greatest favour of the commons,

Exceeding none but good Duke Humphrey:

And, brother York, thy acts in Ireland,

In bringing them to civil discipline,

Thy late exploits done in the heart of France,

When thou wert regret for our sovereign,

Have made thee fear'd and honour'd of the people:

Join we together, for the public good,
In what we can, to bridle and suppress 200
The pride of Suffolk and the cardinal,
With Somerset's and Buckingham's ambition;
And, as we may, cherish Duke Humphrey's
deeds.

While they do tend the profit of the land.

War. So God help Warwick, as he loves the
land,

And common profit of his country!

York. [Aside] And so says York, for he hath greatest cause.

Sal. Then let's make haste away, and look unto the main.

War. Unto the main! O father, Maine is lost;

That Maine which by main force Warwick did win, 210

And would have kept so long as breath did last!

Main chance, father, you meant; but I meant Maine,

Which I will win from France, or else be slain.

[Exeunt Warwick and Salisbury.

York. Anjou and Maine are given to the French;

Paris is lost; the state of Normandy

Stands on a tickle point, now they are gone:

Suffolk concluded on the articles,

The peers agreed, and Henry was well pleased

To change two dukedoms for a duke's fair daughter.

I cannot blame them all: what is't to them? 220
'Tis thine they give away, and not their own.

Pirates may make cheap pennyworths of their pillage

And purchase friends and give to courtiers;

Still revelling like lords till all be gone;

While as the silly owner of the goods

Weeps over them and wrings his hapless hands

And shakes his head and trembling stands aloof,

While all is shared and all is borne away,

Ready to starve and dare not touch his own:

So York must sit and fret and bite his tongue, 230

While his own lands are bargain'd for and sold, Methinks the realms of England, France and Ireland

Bear that proportion to my flesh and blood

As did the fatal brand Athene burn'd

Unto the prince's heart of Oalydon.

Anjou and Maine both given unto the French!

Cold news for me, for I had hope of France,

Even as I have of fertile England's soil.

A day will come when York shall claim his own;

And therefore I will take the Nevils' part, 240

And make a show of love to proud Duke Humphrey,

And, when I spy advantage, claim the crown,

For that's the golden mark I seek to hit:

Nor shall proud Lancaster usurp my right,

Nor hold the sceptre in his childish fist,

Nor wear the diadem upon his head,

Whose cheeks like hammers beat not for a crown.

Then, York, be still awhile, till time do serve:

Watch thou and wake when others be asleep.

To my into the secrets of the state; 250

Till Henry, surfeited in joys of love,

With his new bride and England's

queen,

SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI

[ACT I

And in my standard bear the arms of York,
To grapple with the house of Lancaster;
And, for perforce, I'll make him yield the crown,
Whose bookish rule hath pull'd fair England down. [Exit.]

SCENE II. The DUKE OF GLOUCESTER'S house.

Enter DUKE HUMPHREY and his wife ELEANOR.

Duch. Why droops my lord, like overripen'd corn,
Hanging the head at Ceres' plenteous load?
Why doth the great Duke Humphrey knit his brows,
As frowning at the favours of the world?
Why are thine eyes fix'd to the sullen earth,
Gazing on that which seems to dim thy sight?
What seest thou there? King Henry's diadem,
Enchased with all the honours of the world?
If so, gaze on, and grovel on thy face,
Until thy head be circled with the same. 10
Put forth thy hand, reach at the glorious gold.
What, is't too short? I'll lengthen it with mine;

And, having both together heaved it up,
We'll both together lift our heads to heaven,
And never more abase our sight so low
As to vouchsafe one glance unto the ground.

Glow. O Nell, sweet Nell, if thou dost love thy lord,

Banish the canker of ambitious thoughts.
And may that thought, when I imagine ill
Against my king and nephew, virtuous Henry,
Be my last breathing in this mortal world! 21
My troublous dream this night doth make me sad.

Duch. What dream'd my lord? tell me, and I'll requite it

With sweet rehearsal of my morning's dream.

Glow. Methought this staff, mine office-badge in court,

Was broke in twain; by whom I have forgot,
But, as I think, it was by the cardinal;
And on the pieces of the broken wand
Were placed the heads of Edmund Duke of Somerset,

And William de la Pole, first duke of Suffolk. 30
This was my dream: what it doth bode, God knows.

Duch. Tut, this was nothing but an argument
That he that breaks a stick of Gloucester's grove
Shall lose his head for his presumption.

But let to me, my Humphrey, my sweet duke:
Methought I sat in seat of majesty

In the cathedral church of Westminster,
And in that chair where kings and queens are seated;

When Henry and dame Margaret kneel'd to me
As to my head did set the diadem. 40

Duch. Nay, Eleanor, then must I chide out

Presumptuous dame, ill-nurtured Eleanor,
Art thou not second woman in the realm,
And the protector's wife, beloved of him?
Hast thou not worldly pleasure at command,
Above the reach or compass of thy thought?
And wilt thou still be hammering treachery,
To tumble down thy husband and thyself
From top of honour to disgrace's feet?
Away from me, and let me hear no more! 5

Duch. What, what, my lord! are you a choleric

With Eleanor, for telling but her dream?
Next time I'll keep my dreams unto myself,
And not be check'd.

Glow. Nay, be not angry; I am pleas'd again.

Enter Messenger.

Mess. My lord protector, 'tis his highness' pleasure

You do prepare to ride unto Saint Alban's,
Where as the king and queen do mean to hawk.

Glow. I go. Come, Nell, thou wilt ride with us!

Duch. Yes, my good lord, I'll follow presently. 6

[Exit Gloucester and Messenger.]
Follow I must; I cannot go before.

While Gloucester bears this base and humble mind.

Were I a man, a duke, and next of blood,
I would remove these tedious stumbling-blocks

And smooth my way upon their headless necks.
And, being a woman, I will not be slack

To play my part in Fortune's pageant.
Where are you there? Sir John! nay, fear not,

man,
We are alone; here's none but thee and I.

Enter HUME.

Hume. Jesus preserve your royal majesty!

Duch. What say'st thou? majesty! I am but grace. 7

Hume. But, by the grace of God, and Hume's advice,

Your grace's title shall be multiplied.
Duch. What say'st thou, man! hast thou as yet conferr'd

With Margery Jourdain, the cunning witch,
With Roger Bolingbroke, the conjurer?

And will they undertake to do me good?

Hume. This they have promised, to show your highness

A spirit raised from depth of under-ground,
That shall make answer to such questions 80

As by your grace shall be propounded him.

Duch. It is enough; I'll think upon the questions:

When from Saint Alban's we do make return,
We'll see these things effected to the full.

Here, Hume, take this reward; make merry, man.

With thy confederates in this weighty cause. [Exit.]

Hume. Hume must make merry with the duchess' gold;

Marry, and shall. But, how now, Sir John Hume!

Seal up your lips, and give no words but mum :
The business asketh silent secrecy.

Dame Eleanor gives gold to bring the witch :
(Gold cannot come amiss, were she a devil.
Yet have I gold flies from another coast ;
I dare not say, from the rich cardinal
And from the great and new-made Duke of

Suffolk,
Yet I do find it so ; for, to be plain,
They, knowing Dame Eleanor's aspiring humour,

Have hired me to undermine the duchess
And buz these conjurations in her brain.
They say 'A crafty knave does need no broker ;'
Yet am I Suffolk and the cardinal's broker.
Hume, if you take not heed, you shall go near
To call them both a pair of crafty knaves.
Will, so it stands ; and thus, I fear, at last Hume's knavery will be the duchess' wreck.
And her attainure will be Humphrey's fall :
Sord how it will, I shall have gold for all. [Exit.

SCENE III. The palace.

Enter three or four Petitioners, PETER, the Armourer's man, being one.

First Petit. My masters, let's stand close ;
my lord protector will come this way by and by, and then we may deliver our supplications in the quill.

Sec. Petit. Marry, the Lord protect him, for he's a good man ! Jesu bless him !

Enter SUFFOLK and QUEEN.

Peter. Here a' comes, methinks, and the queen with him. I'll be the first, sure.

Sec. Petit. Come back, fool ; this is the Duke of Suffolk, and not my lord protector.

Suf. How now, fellow ! wouldst any thing
with me ?

First Petit. I pray, my lord, pardon me ; I took ye for my lord protector.

Queen. [Reading] 'To my Lord Protector !'
Are your supplications to his lordship ? Let me see them : what is thine ?

First Petit. Mine is, an't please your grace, against John Goodman, my lord cardinal's man, for keeping my house, and lands, and wife and all, from me.

Suf. Thy wife too ! that's some wrong, indeed. What's yours ? What's here ! [Reads]
'Against the Duke of Suffolk, for enclosing the commons of Melford.' How now, air knave !

Sec. Petit. Alas, sir, I am but a poor peti-

[Non] Against my
Duke of York was rightful heir to the crown.

Queen. What sayst thou ! did the Duke of York say he was rightful heir to the crown ?

Peter. That my master was ! no, forsooth :
my master said that he was, and that the king
was an usurper.

Suf. Who is there ? [Enter Servant.] Take this fellow in, and send for his master with a pursuivant presently : we'll hear more of your matter before the king.

[Exit Servant with Peter.

Queen. And as for you, that love to be protected

Under the wings of our protector's grace,
Begin your suits anew, and sue to him.

[Tears the supplications.
Away, base cullions ! Suffolk, let them go.

All. Come, let's be gone. [Exit.

Queen. My Lord of Suffolk, say, is this the guise,

Is this the fashion in the court of England ?
Is this the government of Britain's isle,

And this the royalty of Albion's king ?
What, shall King Henry be a pupil still

Under the surly Gloucester's governance ?
Am I a queen in title and in style,

And must be made a subject to a duke ?
I tell thee, Pole, when in the city Tours

Thou ranst a tilt in honour of my love
And stolest away the ladies' hearts of France,

I thought King Henry had resembled thee
In courage, courtship and proportion :

But all his mind is bent to holiness,
To number Ave-Maries on his beads ;

His champions are the prophets and apostles,
His weapons holy saws of sacred writ,

His study is his tilt-yard, and his loves
Are brzen images of canonized saints.

I would the college of the cardinals
Would choose him pope and carry him to Rome,

And set the triple crown upon his head :
That were a state fit for his holiness.

Suf. Madam, be patient : as I was cause
Your highness came to England, so will I

In England work your grace's full content.
Queen. Beside the haughty protector, have

we Beaufort
The imperious churchman, Somerset, Buckingham,

And grumbling York ; and not the least of these

But can do more in England than the king.
Suf. And he of these that can do most of all

Cannot do more in England than the Nevils :

Salisbury and Warwick are no simple peers.
Queen. Not all these lords do vex me half

so much
As that proud dame, the lord protector's wife.

She sweeps it through the court with troops of ladies,

More like an empress than Duke Humphrey's
wife :

Strangers in court do take her for the queen :
She bears a duke's revenues on her back,

And in her heart she scorns our poverty :
Shall I not live to be avenged on her ?

Contempts her base-born calls as she is,
She vaunted 'mongst her minions 'other day,

The very train of her worst wearing gown
Was better worth than all my father's lands.

Till Suffolk gave two dukedoms for his daughter.
Suf. Madam, myself have lined a bank for her,

And placed a quire of such antient books,

That she will light to listen to the lay,
And never mount to trouble you again.

So, let her rest : and, madam, bid to meet
For I am bidd to counsel you in this.

Although we fancy not the cardinal,
Yet must we join with him and with the lords,
Till we have brought Duke Humphrey in

As for the Duke of York, this late complaint
Will make but little for his benefit. 104
So, one by one, we'll woo them all at last,
And you yourself shall steer the happy helm.

Sound a sennet. Enter the KING, DUKE HUMPHREY of Gloucester, CARDINAL BEAUFORT, BUCKINGHAM, YORK, SOMERSET, SALISBURY, WARWICK, and the DUCHESS of GLOUCESTER.

King. For my part, noble lords, I care not which;

Or Somerset or York, all's one to me.

York. If York have ill demean'd himself in France,

Then let him be deny'd the regentship.

Sum. If Somerset be unworthy of the place,
Let York be regent; I will yield to him.

War. Whether your grace be worthy, yes or no, 110

Dispute not that: York is the worthier.

Cor. Ambitious Warwick, let thy betters speak.

War. The cardinal's not my better in the field.

Buck. All in this presence are thy betters, Warwick.

War. Warwick may live to be the best of all.

Sal. Peace, sons! and show some reason, Buckingham.

Why Somerset should be preferr'd in this.

Queen. Because the king, forsooth, will have it so.

Glow. Madam, the king is old enough himself.

To give his censure: these are no women's matters. 120

Queen. If he be old enough, what needs your grace

To be protector of his excellence?

Glow. Madam, I am protector of the realm;

And, at his pleasure, will resign my place.

Suf. Rejoice it then and leave thine inscience.

Since thou wert king—as who is king but thou?—

The commonwealth hath daily run to wreck;

The Dauphin hath prevail'd beyond the seas;

And all the peers and nobles of the realm

Have been as bondmen to thy sovereignty. 130

Cor. The common best thou rack'd; the clergy's bags

Are leak and lean with thy extortions.

Sum. Thy sumptuous buildings and thy wife's cities

Have cost a mass of public treasury.

Buck. Thy cruelty in execution

Upon offenders hath exceeded law

And left thee to the mercy of the law.

Queen. Thy sale of offices and towns in France,

If they were known, as the suspect is great,

Would make thee quickly hop without thy head.

[Exit Gloucester. The Queen drops her fan.]

Give me my fan: what, minion! can ye not!

[She gives the Duchess a box on the ear.]

I cry you mercy, madam; was it you?

Duch. Was't it, yes, it was, proud French woman!

Could I come near your beauty with my nails,

I'd set my ten commandments in your face.

King. Sweet aunt, be quiet; 't is against her will.

Duch. Against her will! good king, look to't in time;

She'll hamper thee, and dandle thee like a baby:

Though in this place most master wear no breeches,

She shall not strike Dame Eleanor unrevenged. [Exit.]

Buck. Lord cardinal, I will follow Eleanor,

And listen after Humphrey, how he proceeds:

She's tickled now; her fume needs no spurs,

She'll gallop far enough to her destruction. [Exit.]

Re-enter GLOUCESTER.

Glow. Now, lords, my choler being over-blown

With walking once about the quadrangle,

I come to talk of commonwealth affairs.

As for your spiteful false objections,

Prove them, and I lie open to the law;

But God in mercy so deal with my soul, 160

As I in duty love my king and country!

But, to the matter that we have in hand:

I say, my sovereign, York is meekest man

To be your regent in the realm of France.

Suf. Before we make election, give me leave

To show some reason, of no little force,

That York is most unmeet of any man.

York. I'll tell thee, Suffolk, why I am unmeet:

First, for I cannot flatter thee in pride;

Next, if I be appointed for the place, 170

My Lord of Somerset will keep me here,

Without discharge, money, or furniture,

Till France be won into the Dauphin's hands:

Last time, I danced attendance on his will

Till Paris was besieg'd, famish'd, and lost.

War. That can I witness; and a fouler fact

Did never traitor in the land commit.

Suf. Peace, headstrong Warwick!

War. Image of pride, why should I hold my peace?

Enter HORNER, the Armourer, and his man PETER, guarded.

Suf. Because here is a man accused of treason:

Pray God the Duke of York excuse himself!

York. Doth any one accuse York for a traitor?

King. What mean'st thou, Suffolk; tell me, what are these?

Suf. Please it your

That doth accuse his master

His words were these: that

York

Was rightful heir unto the English crown

And that your majesty was an usurper.

King. Say, man, were these thy words?

Hor. An't shall please your majesty, I never said nor thought any such matter: God is my witness, I am falsely accused by the villain.

Pat. By these ten bones, my lords, he did speak them to me in the garret one night, as we were scouring my Lord of York's armour.

York. Base dunghill villain and mechanical, I'll have thy head for this thy traitor's speech. I do beseech your royal majesty,

Let him have all the rigour of the law. 299

Hor. Alas, my lord, hang me, if ever I spake the words. My accuser is my prentice; and when I did correct him for his fault the other day, he did vow upon his knees he would be even with me: I have good witness of this; therefore I beseech your majesty, do not cast away an honest man for a villain's accusation.

King. Uncle, what shall we say to this in law?

Glou. This doom, my lord, if I may judge: Let Somerset be regent o'er the French,

Because in York this breeds suspicion: 310

And let these have a day appointed them

For single combat in convenient place,

For he hath witness of his servant's malice:

This is the law, and this Duke Humphrey's doom.

Som. I humbly thank your royal majesty

Hor. And I accept the combat willingly.

Pat. Alas, my lord, I cannot fight; for God's sake, pity my case. The spite of man prevaileth against me. O Lord, have mercy upon me! I shall never be able to fight a blow.

O Lord, my heart! 322

Glou. Sirrah, or you must fight, or else be hang'd.

King. Away with them to prison; and the lay of combat shall be the last of the next month. Come, Somerset, we'll see thee sent away. [Flourish. Exit.]

SCENE IV. GLOUCESTER'S garden.

Enter MARGERY JOURDAIN, HUME, SOUTHWELL, and BOLINGBROKE.

Hume. Come, my masters: the duchess, I tell you, expects performance of your promises.

Boling. Master Hume, we are therefore provided: will her ladyship behold and hear our exorcisms?

Hume. Ay, what else? fear you not her courage.

Boling. I have heard her reported to be a woman of an invincible spirit: but it shall be convenient, Master Hume, that you be by her side, while we be busy below; and so, I pray you, go in God's name, and leave us. [Exit Hume.]

Hume. Mother Jourdain, be you prostrate and grovel on the earth; John Southwell, read you; and let us to our work.

Enter Duchess aloft, HUME following.

Duch. Well said, my masters; and welcome all. To this gear the sooner the better.

Boling. Fath'm, good lady; whence know their times?

Deep night, dark night, the silent of the night, The time of night when Troy was set on fire; so The time when screech-owls cry and hound-dogs howl

And spirits walk and ghosts break up their graves.

That time best fits the work we have in hand.

Madam, sit you and fear not: whom we raise,

We will make fast within a hallow'd verge.

[Here they do the ceremonies belonging, and make the circle; Bolingbroke or Southwell reads, Conjuro te, &c. It thunders and lightens terribly; then the Spirit riseth.]

Spir. Adsum.

M. Jourd. Asmath,

By the eternal God, whose name and power

Thou tremblest at, answer that I shall ask;

For, till thou speak, thou shalt not pass from hence. 30

Spir. Ask what thou wilt. That I had said and done!

Boling. 'First of the king: what shall of him become?' [Reading out of a paper.]

Spir. The duke yet lives that Henry shall depose;

But him outlive, and die a violent death.

[As the Spirit speaks, Southwell writes the answer.]

Boling. 'What fates await the Duke of Suffolk?'

Spir. By water shall he die, and take his end.

Boling. 'What shall befall the Duke of Somerset?'

Spir. Let him shun castles;

Safer shall be upon the sandy plains Than where castles mounted stand. 40

Have done, for more I hardly can endure.

Boling. Descend to darkness and the burning lake!

False fiend, avoid!

[Thunder and lightning. Exit Spirit.]

Enter the DUKE OF YORK and the DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM with their Guard and train.

York. Lay hands upon these traitors and their trash.

Beldam. I think we watch'd you at an inch.

What, madam, are you there? the king and commonweal

Are deeply indebted for this piece of pains:

My lord protector will, I doubt it not, See you well guard'd for these good deeds.

Duch. Not half so bad as thine to England's king. 50

Injurious duke, that threaten'st when's no danger.

Duch. True, madam, none at all: what said you this?

Away with them! let them be chop'd up anon, And kept asunder. You, madam, shall wait on Stafford, take her to thee.

[Exeunt above Duchess and Hume, followed by others.]

We'll see your traitors have all satisfaction.

All away!

[Exeunt spirit with Jourdain, Somerset, &c.]

York. Lord Buckingham, methinks you would I saw you.

A pretty plot, well chosen to build upon.

Now, pray, my lord, let's see the devil's writ. 60
What have we here? [Reads.]

'The duke yet lives, that Henry shall depose;
But him outlive, and die a violent death.'

Why, this is just

'Alto te, Alcida, Romanos vincere posse.'

Well, to the rest:

'Tell me what fate awaits the Duke of Suffolk?

By water shall he die, and take his end.

What shall betide the Duke of Somerset?

Let him shun castles;

Safer shall he be upon the sandy plains 70

Than where castles mounted stand.'

Come, come, my lords;

These oracles are hardly attain'd,

And hardly understood.

The king is now in progress towards Saint

Alban's.

With him the husband of this lovely lady:

Thither go these news, as fast as horse can carry them:

A sorry breakfast for my lord protector.

Buck. Your grace shall give me leave, my

Lord of York, 80

To be the post, in hope of his reward

York. At your pleasure, my good lord.

Who's within there, ho!

Enter a Servingman.

Invite my Lords of Salisbury and Warwick

To sup with me to-morrow night. Away!

[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I. Saint Alban's.

Enter the KING, QUEEN, GLOUCESTER, CARDINAL, and SUFFOLK, with Falconers halloing.

Queen. Believe me, lords, for flying at the brook,

I saw not better sport these seven years' day:

Yet, by your leave, the wind was very high;

And, ten to one, old Joan had not gone out.

King. But what a point, my lord, your falcon made.

And what a pitch she flew above the rest!

To see how God in all his creatures works!

Yea, man and birds are fain of climbing high.

Suf. No marvel, an it like your majesty.

My lord protector's hawks do tower so well; 10

They know their master loves to be aloft

And bears his thoughts above his falcon's pitch.

Glou. My lord, 'tis but a base ignoble mind

That mounts no higher than a bird can soar.

Car. I thought as much; he would be above the clouds.

Glou. Ay, my lord cardinal! how think you by that?

Was it not good your grace could fly to heaven?

King. The treasury of everlasting joy.

Car. Thy heaven is on earth; thine eyes and thoughts

Rest on a grove, the treasure of thy heart; 20

Perchance a falconer, dangerous peer.

That smootheth it so with king and commonweal!

Glou. What, cardinal, is your priesthood grown peremptory?

Tantene animis celestibus ira?

Churchmen so hot! good uncle, hide such malice;

With such holiness can you do it?

Suf. No malice, sir; no more than well becomes

So good a quarrel and so bad a peer.

Glou. As who, my lord!

Suf. Why, as you, my lord,

An't like your lordly lord-protectorship. 30

Glou. Why, Suffolk, England knows thine insolence.

Queen. And thy ambition, Gloucester.

King. I prithee, peace, good queen,

And whet not on these furious peers;

For blessed are the peacemakers on earth.

Car. Let me be blessed for the peace I make.

Against this proud protector, with my sword:

Glou. [Aside to Car.] Faith, holy uncle, would 'twere come to that!

Car. [Aside to Glou.] Marry, when thou darest.

Glou. [Aside to Car.] Make up no factious numbers for the matter; 40

In thine own person answer thy abuse.

Car. [Aside to Glou.] Ay, where thou darest

not peep: an if thou darest,

This evening, on the east side of the grove.

King. How now, my lords!

Car. Believe me, cousin Gloucester,

Had not your man put up the fowl so suddenly;

We had had more sport. [Aside to Glou.]

Come with thy two-hand sword.

Glou. True, uncle.

Car. [Aside to Glou.] Are ye advised! the east side of the grove!

Glou. [Aside to Car.] Cardinal, I am with
you.

King. Why, how now, uncle Gloucester!

Glou. Talking of hawking; nothing else.

my lord. 50

[Aside to Car.] Now, by God's mother, priest,

I'll have your crown for this,

Or all my fence shall fail.

Car. [Aside to Glou.] Medice, teipsum-

Protector, see to't well, protect yourself.

King. The winds grow high; so do your stomachs, lords.

How irksome is this music to my heart!

When such strings jar, what hope of harmony!

I pray, my lords, let me compound this strife.

Enter a Townsman of Saint Alban's, crying
'A miracle!'

Glou. What means this noise?

Fellow, what miracle dost thou proclaim? 60

Towns. A miracle! a miracle!

Suf. Come to the king and tell him what miracle.

Towns. Forsooth, a blind man at Saint

Alban's shrine.

Within this half-hour, hath received his sight;

A man that ne'er saw in his life before.

King. Now, God be praised, that to believing souls
Gives light in darkness, comfort in despair!

Enter the Mayor of Saint Alban's and his brethren, bearing SIMPOOX, between two in a chair, SIMPOOX's Wife following.

Car. Here comes the townsmen on procession,

To present your highness with the man.

King. Great is his comfort in this earthly vale,

Although by his sight his sin be multiplied.
Glou. Stand by, my masters: bring him near the king;

His highness' pleasure is to talk with him.

King. Good fellow, tell us here the circumstance,

That we for thee may glorify the Lord.

What hast thou been long blind and now restored?

Simp. Born blind, an't please your grace.

Wife. Ay, indeed, was he.

Suf. What woman is this?

Wife. His wife, an't like your worship.
Glou. Hadst thou been his mother, thou couldst have better told.

King. Where wert thou born?

Simp. At Berwick in the north, an't like your grace.

King. Poor soul, God's goodness hath been great to thee:

at never day nor night unhallow'd pass,
but still remember what the Lord hath done.

Queen. Tell me, good fellow, earnest thou here by chance, or of devotion, to this holy shrine?

Simp. God knows, of pure devotion; being call'd hundred times and oftener, in my sleep, go by good Saint Alban; who said, 'Simpcox, come, me, offer at my shrine, and I will help thee.'

Wife. Most true, forsooth; and many times and oft myself have heard a voice to call him so.

Car. What, art thou lame?

Simp. Ay, God Almighty help me!

Suf. How earnest thou so?

Simp. A fall off of a tree.

Wife. A plum-tree, master.

Glou. How long hast thou been blind?

Simp. O, born so, master.

Glou. What, and wouldst climb a tree?

Simp. But that in all my life, when I was a youth,

Wife. Too true; and bought his climbing very dear.

Glou. Mass, thou lovedst plums well, that wouldst venture so.

Simp. Alas, good master, my wife desired some damascens, and made me climb, with danger of my life.

Glou. A subtle knave! but yet it shall not serve.

me see thine eyes: wink now: now open them:

my opinion yet thou see'st not well.

Simp. Yes, master; clear as day, I thank God and Saint Alban.

Glou. Say'st thou me so? What colour is this cloak of?

Simp. Red, master; red as blood.

Glou. Why, that's well said. What colour is my gown of?

Simp. Black, forsooth: coal-black as jet.

King. Why, then, thou know'st what colour jet is of!

Suf. And yet, I think, jet did he never see.

Glou. But cloaks and gowns, before this day, a many.

Wife. Never, before this day, in all his life.

Glou. Tell me, sirrah, what's my name?

Simp. Alas, master, I know not.

Glou. What's his name?

Simp. I know not.

Glou. Nor his?

Simp. No, indeed, master.

Glou. What's thine own name?

Simp. Saunder Simpcox, an if it please you, master.

Glou. Then, Saunder, sit there, the lyingest knave in Christendom. If thou hadst been born blind, thou mightst as well have known all our names as thus to name the several colours we do wear. Slight may distinguish of colours, but suddenly to nominate them all, it is impossible. My lords, Saint Alban here hath done a miracle; and would ye not think his cunning to be great, that could restore this cripple to his legs again?

Simp. O master, that you could!

Glou. My masters of Saint Alban's, have you not beades in your town, and things called whips?

May. Yes, my lord, if it please your grace.

Glou. Then send for one presently.

May. Sirrah, go fetch the beadle hither straight. [Exit an Attendant.]

Glou. Now fetch me a stool hither by and by. Now, sirrah, if you mean to have yourself from whipping, leap me over this stool and run away.

Simp. Alas, master, I am not able to stand alone:

You go about to torture me in vain.

Enter a Beadle with whips.

Glou. Well, sir, we must have you find your Sirrah beadle, whip him till he leap over that same stool.

Bead. I will, my lord. Come on, sirrah; off with your doublet quickly.

Simp. Alas, master, what shall I do? I am not able to stand.

[After the Beadle hath hit him once, he leaps over the stool and runs away; and they follow and cry, 'A miracle!']

King. O God, see'st Thou this, and becom'st so long!

Queen. It made me laugh to see the villain run.

Glou. Follow the knave; and take this back away.

Wife. Alas, sir, we did it for good need.

Glow. Let there be whipped through every market-town, till they come to Berwick, from whence they came.

Car. Duke Humphrey has done a miracle to-day.

Sol. True; made the lame to leap and fly away.

Glow. But you have done more miracles than I;
You made in a day, my lord, whole towns to fly.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

King. What tidings with our cousin Buckingham?

Buck. Such as my heart doth tremble to unfold.

A sort of naughty persons, lowly bent,
Under the countenance and confederacy
Of Lady Eleanor, the protector's wife,
The ringleader and head of all this rout,
Have practised dangerously against your state,
Dealing with witches and with conjurers:
Whom we have apprehended in the fact;
Raising up wicked spirits from under ground,
Demanding of King Henry's life and death,
And other of your highness' privy-council;
As more at large your grace shall understand.

Car. [Aside to Glow.] And so, my lord protector, by this means

Your lady is forthcoming yet at London.
This news, I think, hath turn'd your weapon's edge;

'Tis like, my lord, you will not keep your hour.
Glow. Ambitious churchman, leave to afflict my heart:

Sorrow and grief have vanquish'd all my powers;

And, vanquish'd as I am, I yield to thee,
Or to the moment's groan.

King. O God, what mischiefs work the wicked ones,

Hoping confusion on their own heads thereby!

Queen. Gloucester, see here the tainture of thy next.

And look thyself be faultless, thou wert best.

Glow. Madam, for myself, to heaven I do appeal,

How I have loved my king and commonweal:
And, for my wife, I know not how it stands;

Sorry I am to hear what I have heard;
Noble she is, but if she have forgot

Honour and virtue and conversed with such
As like to pick, defile nobility,

I banish her my bed and company
And give her up as prey to day and shame,

That such dishonour'd Gloucester's honest name.

King. Well, for this night we will repose us
To-morrow toward London back again,

And look into this business thoroughly
And call these foul offenders to their answers

And bring the cause in justice equal scales,
Whom the law stands sure, whose rightness causes

SCENE II. London. The DUKE OF YORK'S garden.

Enter YORK, SALISBURY, and WARWICK.

York. Now, my good Lords of Salisbury and Warwick,

Our simple supper ended, give me leave
In this close walk to satisfy myself,
In craving your opinion of my title,
Which is infallible to England's crown.

Sol. My lord, I long to hear it at full.

War. Sweet York, begin: and if they claim be good,

The Nevils are thy subjects to command.

York. Then thus:
Edward the Third, my lord, had seven sons:

The first, Edward the Black Prince, Prince of Wales;

The second, William of Hatfield, and the third,
Lionel Duke of Clarence: next to whom

Was John of Gaunt, the Duke of Lancaster:
The fifth was Edmund Langley, Duke of York;

The sixth was Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Gloucester;

William of Windsor was the seventh and last.
Edward the Black Prince died before his father

And left behind him Richard, his only son,
Who after Edward the Third's death reign'd as king;

Till Henry Bolingbroke, Duke of Lancaster,
The eldest son and heir of John of Gaunt,

Crown'd by the name of Henry the Fourth,
Seized on the realm, deposed the rightful king.

Sent his poor queen to France, from whence she came.

And him to Fougnet; where, as all you know,
Harmless Richard was murder'd traitorously.

War. Father, the duke hath told the truth;
Thus got the house of Lancaster the crown.

York. Which now they hold by force and not by right;

For Richard, the first son's heir, being dead,
The issue of the next son should have reign'd.

Sol. But William of Hatfield died without an heir.

York. The third son, Duke of Clarence, from whose line

I claim the crown, had issue, Philippe, a
daughter,

Who married Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March;

Edmund had issue, Roger Earl of March;
Roger had issue, Edmund, Anne and Eleanor.

Sol. This Edmund, in the reign of Bolingbroke,

As I have read, laid claim unto the crown;

And, but for Owen Glendower, had been king.
Who kept him in captivity till he died.

But to the rest.

York. His eldest sister, Anne,
My mother, being heir unto the crown,

Married Richard Earl of Cambridge; who was
son

To Edmund Langley, Edward the Third's fifth son: she was his wife

Of Edmund Mortimer, who married Philippe,
Sole daughter unto Lionel Duke of Clarence:
So, if the issue of the elder son
Succeed before the younger, I am king.

War. What plain proceeding is more plain than this?

Henry hath claim the crown from John of Gaunt.

The fourth son; York claims it from the third.
Till Lionel's issue fails, he should not reign:

It fails not yet, but flourishes in these
And in thy sons, fair slips of such a stock.

Then, father Salisbury, kneel we together;
And in this private plot be we the first

That shall salute our rightful sovereign
With honour of his birthright to the crown.

Both. Long live our sovereign Richard,
England's king!

York. We thank you, lords. But I am not your king.

Till I be crown'd and that my sword be stain'd
With heart-blood of the house of Lancaster;

And that's not suddenly to be perform'd,
But with advice and silent secrecy.

Do you as I do in these dangerous days:
Wink at the Duke of Suffolk's insolence.

At Beaufort's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At Buckingham and all the crew of them.

Till they have snared the shepherd of the flock,
That virtuous prince, the good Duke Humphrey:

'Tis thus they seek, and they in seeking that Shall find their deaths, if York can prophesy.

Sol. My lord, break we off; we know your mind at full.

War. My heart assures me that the Earl of
Warwick

Shall one day make the Duke of York a king.
York. And, Nevil, this I do assure myself:

Richard shall live to make the Earl of Warwick
The greatest man in England but the king.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. A hall of justice.

*Sound trumpets. Enter the KING, the QUEEN,
GLOUCESTER, YORK, SUFFOLK, and SALIS-BURY; the DUCHESSES OF GLOUCESTER, MAR-GARET JOURDAIN, BOUTWELL, HUME, and BOLINGBROKE, under guard.*

King. Stand forth, Dame Eleanor Cobham, Gloucester's wife:

In sight of God and us, your guilt is great:
Receive the sentence of the law for sins

Such as by God's book are adjudged to death.
You four, from hence to prison back again;

From thence unto the place of execution:
The witch in Smithfield shall be burnt to ashes.

And you three shall be strangled on the gallows.
You, madame, for you are more nobly born,

Despoiled of your honour in your life,
Shall, after these days' open penance done

Live in your country here in banishment.
With Sir John Stanley, in the Isle of Man.

Duch. Welcome to banishment; welcome were my death.

Glo. Suffolk, the law, thou seest, hath judged thee:

cannot justify whom the law condemns.
Exeunt Dukes and other prisoners, guarded.

Mine eyes are full of tears, my heart of grief.
Ah, Humphrey, this dishonour in thine age!

Will bring thy head with sorrow to the ground!
I beseech your majesty, give me leave to go; so

Sorrow would solace and mine age would ease.
King. Stay, Humphrey Duke of Gloucester:

ere thou go,
Give up thy staff: Henry will to himself

Protector be; and God shall be my hope.
My stay, my guide and lantern to my lest:

And go in peace, Humphrey, no less beloved
Than when thou wert protector to thy king.

Queen. I see no reason why a king of years
Should be to be protected like a child.

God and King Henry govern England's realm.
Give up your staff, sir, and the king his realm.

Glo. My staff here, noble Henry, is my
staff:

As willingly do I the same resign
As e'er thy father Henry made it mine;

And even as willingly at thy foot I leave it
As others would ambitiously receive it.

Farewell, good king: when I am dead and gone.

May honourable peace attend thy throne! [Exit.]

Queen. Why, now is Henry king, and Margaret queen;

And Humphrey Duke of Gloucester scotches himself.

That bears the sword a main; two palls at
once;

His lady banish'd, and a limb lopp'd off.
This staff of honour rought, there let it stand

Where it best fits to be, in Henry's hand.
Suf. Thus droops this lofty pine and hangs his sprays:

Thus Eleanor's pride dies in her youngest days.

York. Lords, let him go. Please it your
majesty,

This is the day appointed for the combat;
And ready are the appellant and defendant.

The armourer and his man, to enter the lists.
So please your highness to behold the fight.

Queen. Ay, good my lord; but purposely therefore

Left I the court, to see this quarrel tried.
King. O God's name, see the lists and all things fit:

Here let them and it; and God defend the right!

York. I never saw a fellow more heated,

Or more afraid to fight, than is the appellant.
The servant of this armourer, my lords.

Enter at one door, HUME, the Ar-mourer, and his Neighbour, drinking to him as much that he is drunk; and he enters with a drum before him and his staff with a sand-bag fastened to it; and at the other door, FURCE, his man, with a drum and sand-bag, and Foulcon drinking to him.

First Neigh. Hark, neighbour Hume, I drink to you in a cup of sack; and here, my neighbour, you shall do well enough.

Sec. Neigh. And here, neighbour, here's a cup of charneco.

Third Neigh. And here's a pot of good double beer, neighbour: drink, and fear not your man.

Hor. Let it come, I' faith, and I'll pledge you all; and a fig for Peter!

First 'Pren. Here, Peter, I drink to thee: and be not afraid.

Sec. 'Pren. Be merry, Peter, and fear not thy master: fight for credit of the 'prentices.

Peter. I thank you all: drink, and pray for me, I pray you; for I think I have taken my last draught in this world. Here, Robin, an if I die, I give thee my apron: and, Will, thou shalt have my hammer: and here, Tom, take all the money that I have. O Lord bless me! I pray God! for I am never able to deal with my master, he hath learnt so much fence already.

Sal. Come, leave your drinking, and fall to blows. Sirrah, what's thy name? 81

Peter. Peter, forsooth.

Sal. Peter! what more?

Peter. Thump.

Sal. Thump! then see thou thump thy master well.

Hor. Masters, I am come hither, as it were, upon my man's instigation, to prove him a knave and myself an honest man: and touching the Duke of York, I will take my death, I never meant him any ill, nor the king, nor the queen: and therefore, Peter, have at thee with a downright blow!

York. Dispatch: this knave's tongue begins to double.

Sound, trumpets, alarum to the combatants!
[Alarm. They fight, and Peter strikes him down.

Hor. Hold, Peter, hold! I confess, I confess treason. [Dies.]

York. Take away his weapon. Fellow, thank God, and the good wine in thy master's way.

Peter. O God, have I overcome mine enemy in this presence! O Peter, thou hast prevailed in right!

King. Go, take hence that traitor from our sight;

For by his death we do perceive his guilt:
And God in justice hath reveal'd to us
The truth and innocence of this poor fellow,
Which he had thought to have murder'd wrong-fully.

Come, fellow, follow us for thy reward.
[Sound a flourish. Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. A street.

Enter GLOUCESTER and his Servingmen, in mourning cloaks.

Gloss. Thus sometimes hath the brightest day a cloud;

And after summer evermore succeeds
Season winter, with his faithful nipping cold:
So curse and joys abound, as seasons fleet.
[Enter a clock.]

York. Ten, my lord.
Gloss. 'Tis the hour that was appointed me

To watch the coming of my punish'd duchess:
Unceasing may she endure the flinty streets,
To tread them with her tender-feeling feet.
Sweet Nell, ill can thy noble mind abroad
The abject people gazing on thy face,
With envious looks, laughing at thy shame,
That erst did follow thy proud chariot-wheels
When thou didst ride in triumph through the streets.
But, soft! I think she comes; and I'll prepare
My tear-stain'd eyes to see her miseries.

Enter the DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER in white sheet, and a taper burning in her hand; with SIR JOHN STANLEY, the Sheriff, and Officers.

Serv. So please your grace, we'll take her from the sheriff.

Gloss. No, stir not, for your lives; let her pass by.

Duch. Come you, my lord, to see my open shame!

Now thou dost penance too. Look how they gaze!

See how the giddy multitude do point,
And nod their heads, and throw their eyes on thee!

Ah, Gloucester, hide thee from their hateful looks.

And, in thy closet pent up, rue my shame,
And ban thine enemies, both mine and thine!

Gloss. Be patient, gentle Nell; forget this grief.

Duch. Ah, Gloucester, teach me to forget myself!

For whilst I think I am thy married wife
And thou a prince, protector of this land,

Methinks I should not thus be led along,
Maid'd up in shame, with papers on my back,

And follow'd with a rabble that rejoice
To see my tears and hear my deep-set groans.

The ruthless flint doth cut my tender feet,
And when I start, the envious people laugh

And bid me be advised how I tread.
Ah, Humphrey, can I bear this shameful yoke!

Trow'st thou that e'er I'll look upon the world,
Or count them happy that enjoy the sun!

No; dark shall be my light and night my day:
To think upon my pomp shall be my hell.

Sometimes I'll say, I am Duke Humphrey's wife,
And he a prince and ruler of the land:

Yet so he ruled and such a prince he was
As he stood by whilst I, his forlorn duchess,

Was made a wonder and a pointing-stock
To every idle rascal follower.

But be thou mild and blush not at my shame,
Nor stir at nothing till the axe of death

Hang over thee, as, sure, it shortly will;
For Suffolk, he that can do all in all

With her that hateth thee and hates us all,
And York and impious Beaufort, that false

friend,
Have all lined bushes to betray thy wings.

And, fly thou how thou canst, they'll hang
thee:

But fear not thou, until thy foot be maim'd,
Nor never seek prevention of thy loss.

Glou. Ah, Nell, forbear! thou aimest all away;
 I must offend before I be attainted;
 And had I twenty times so many foes, 60
 And each of them had twenty times their
 power,
 All these could not procure me any scathe,
 So long as I am loyal, true and crimeless.
 Wouldst have me rescue thee from this reproach?
 Why, yet thy scandal were not wiped away,
 But I in danger for the breach of law.
 Thy greatest help is quiet, gentle Nell:
 I pray thee, sort thy heart to patience;
 These few days' wonder will be quickly worn.

Enter a Herald.

Her. I summon your grace to his majesty's parliament,
 Holden at Bury the first of this next month.
Glou. And my consent ne'er ask'd herein
 before!

This is close dealing. Well, I will be there.

[Exit Herald.]
My Nell, I take my leave: and, master sheriff, Let not her penance exceed the king's commission.

Sher. An't please your grace, here my commission stays,
 And Sir John Stanley is appointed now
 To take her with him to the Isle of Man.

Glou. Must you, Sir John, protect my lady
 here?

Stan. So am I given in charge, may't please
 your grace. 80

Glou. Entreat her not the worse in that
 I pray

You use her well: the world may laugh again;
 And I may live to do you kindness if

You do it her: and so, Sir John, farewell!

Duch. What, gone, my lord, and bid me not farewell!

Glou. Witness my tears, I cannot stay to
 speak.

[Exeunt Gloucester and Scoldingmen.]
Duch. Art thou gone too! all comfort go with thee!

For none abides with me: my joy is death;

Death, at whose name I oft have been afraid,
 Because I wish'd this world's eternity. 90

Stanley, I prithee, go, and take me hence;
 I care not whither, for I beg no favour,

Only convey me where thou art commanded.

Stan. Why, madam, that is to the Isle of
 Man;

There to be used according to your state.

Duch. That's bad enough, for I am but re-proach'd;

And shall I then be used reproachfully!

Stan. Like to a duchess, and Duke Humphrey's lady;

According to that state you shall be used.

Duch. Sheriff, farewell, and better than I

 [Although thou hast been conduct of my shame.
Sher. It is my office; and, madam, pardon
 me.

Duch. Ay, ay, farewell; thy office is discharged.

Come, Stanley, shall we go?

Stan. Madam, your penance done, throw off
 this sheet,

And go we to attire you for our journey.

Duch. My shame will not be shifted with my sheet:

No, it will hang upon my richest robes
 And show itself, attire me how I can.

Go, lead the way; I long to see my prison. 110
[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I. The Abbey at Bury St Edmund's.
Sound a sennet. Enter the KING, the QUEEN,
CARDINAL BEAUFORT, SUFFOLK, YORK, BUCKINGHAM, SALISBURY and WARWICK to the Parliament.

King. I muse my Lord of Gloucester is not
 come:

'Tis not his wont to be the hindmost man,
 What'er occasion keeps him from us now.

Queen. Can you not see? or will ye not observe

The strangeness of his alter'd countenance?

With what a majesty he bears himself,
 How insolent of late he is become,

How proud, how peremptory, and unlike himself!

We know the time since he was mild and affable,

And if we did but glance a far-off look, 30
 Immediately he was upon his knee,

That all the court admired him for submission:
 But meet him now, and, be it in the morn,

When every one will give the time of day,
 He knits his brow and shows an angry eye

And passeth by with stiff unbowed knee,
 Disdaining duty that to us belongs.

Small curs are not regarded when they grin;
 But great men tremble when the lion roars;

And Humphrey is no little man in England. 40
 First note that he is near you in descent,

And should you fall, he is the next will mount.
 Me seemeth then it is no policy,

Respecting what a rancorous mind he bears
 And his advantage following your decease.

That he should come about your royal person
 Or be admitted to your highness' council.

By flattery hath he won the commons' hearts,
 And when he please to make commotion,

'Tis to be fear'd they all will follow him. 50
 Now 'tis the spring, and weeds are shallow-rooted;

 Suffer them now, and they'll o'ergrow the

And choke the herbs for want of husbandry.

The reverent care I bear unto my lord
 Made me collect these dangers in the duke.

If it be fond, call it a woman's fear;
 Which fear if better reasons can supplant,

I will subscribe and say I wrong'd the duke.

My Lord of Suffolk, Buckingham, and York,
 Reprove my allegation, if you can;

Or else conclude my words effectual.

Suf. Well hath your highness seen into this duke;

And, had I first been put to speak my mind,
I think I should have told your grace's tale.
The duchess by his subornation,
Upon my life, began her devilish practices:
Oh, if he were not privy to those faults,
Yet, by reputing of his high descent,
As next the king he was successive heir,
And such high vaunts of his nobility,
Did instigate the bedlam brain-sick duchess
By wicked means to frame our sovereign's fall.
Smooth runs the water where the brook is deep;
And in his simple show he harbours treason.
The fox barks not when he would steal the lamb.

No, no, my sovereign; Gloucester is a man
Unsound yet and full of deep deceit.

Cur. Did he not, contrary to form of law,
Devise strange deaths for small offences done?

York. And did he not, in his protectorship,
Levy great sums of money through the realm
For soldiers' pay in France, and never sent it?
By means whereof the towns each day revolted.

Buck. Tut, these are petty faults to faults unknown,
Which time will bring to light in smooth Duke Humphrey.

King. My lords, at once: the care you have
of us,
To mow down thorns that would annoy our foot,
Is worthy praise: but, shall I speak my conscience,

Our kinsman Gloucester is as innocent

From meaning treason to our royal person 70
As is the sucking lamb or harmless dove:
The duke is virtuous, mild and too well given
To dream on evil or to work my downfall.

Queen. Ah, what's more dangerous than this fond alliance!

Seems he a dove? his feathers are but borrow'd,
For he's disposed as the hateful raven:

Is he a lamb? his skin is surely lent him,
For he's inclined as is the ravenous wolf.

Who cannot steal a shape that means deceit?
Take heed, my lord; the welfare of us all 80
Hangs on the cutting short that fraudulent man.

Enter SOMERSET.

King. All health unto my gracious sovereign!

King. Welcome, Lord Somerset. What news
from France?

Som. That all your interest in those territories

Is utterly bereft you: all is lost.

King. Cold news, Lord Somerset: but God's will be done!

York. [Aside] Cold news for me; for I had hope of France

As fruitful as I hope for fertile England.
There are the blossoms blasted in the bud

And intercepts eat my leaves away;
But I will endure this gear as long.

Or will you take for a glorious grave.

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Queen. All happiness unto my lord the king!

Pardon, my liege, that I have stay'd so long.

Suf. Nay, Gloucester, know that thou art come too soon.

Unless thou wert more loyal than thou art:
I do arrest thee of high treason!

Glon. Well, Suffolk, thou shalt not see me blush

Nor change my countenance for this arrest:

A heart unspotted is not easily daunted. 30
The purest spring is not so free from mud.

As I am clear from treason to my sovereign:
Who can accuse me? wherein am I guilty?

York. 'Tis thought, my lord, that you took bribes of France,

And, being protector, stay'd the soldiers' pay:
By means whereof his highness hath lost
France.

Glon. Is it but thought so? what are they that think it?

I never robb'd the soldiers of their pay,
Nor ever had one penny bribe from France.

So help me God, as I have watch'd the night,
Ay, night by night, in studying good 40
England,

That doth that else I wrested from the king,
Or any grant I hoarded to my use,

Be brought against me at my trial-day!
No; many a pound of mine own proper store,

Because I would not tax the needy commons,
Have I dispursed to the garrisons,

And never ask'd for restitution.

Cur. It serves you well, my lord, to say so
much.

Glon. I say no more than truth, so help me
God!

York. In your protectorship you did devise Strange tortures for offenders never heard of.

That England was defamed by tyranny.

Glon. Why, 'tis well known that, whilst
I was protector,

Pity was all the fault that was in me;
For I should melt at an offender's tears,

And lowly words were ransom for their fault.
Unless it were a bloody murderer,

Or foul felonious thief that steered poor passengers,

I never gave them condign punishment: 50
Murder indeed, that bloody sin, I tortured
Above the felon or what trespass else.

Suf. My lord, these faults are easy, quickly
answer'd:

But mightier crimes are laid unto your charge,
Whereof you cannot easily purge yourself.

I do arrest you in his highness' name;
And here commit you to my lord cardinal

To keep, until your further time of trial.

King. My Lord of Gloucester, be my special hope

That you will clear yourself from all suspect:
My conscience tells me you are innocent. 60

Glon. Ah, gracious lord, these days are dangerous:

Virtue is choked with foul ambition
And charity chased hence by rancour's hand;

Foul subornation is predominant
And equity exiled your highness' land.

I know their compass is to bury my life,
And if my death might murther this hard hope

And prove the period of their tyranny,
I would expend it with all willingness: 150
But mine is made the prologue to their play;
For thousands more, that yet suspect no peril,
Will not conclude their plotted tragedy.
Beaufort's red sparkling eyes blab his heart's malice.

And Suffolk's cloudy brow his stormy hate;
Sharp Buckingham unburies with his tongue
The envious load that lies upon his heart;
And dogged York, that reaches at the moon,
Whose overweening arm I have pluck'd back,
By false accuse doth level at my life: 160

And you, my sovereign lady, with the rest,
Causeless have laid disgraces on my head
And with your best endeavour have stirr'd up
My best liege to be mine enemy:
Ay, all of you have laid your heads together—
Myself had notice of your conventicles—
And all to make away my guiltless life.

I shall not want false witness to condemn me,
Nor store of treasons to augment my guilt;
The ancient proverb will be well effected: 170
'A staff is quickly found to beat a dog.'

Car. My liege, his railing is intolerable:
If those that care to keep your royal person
From treason's secret knife and traitors' rage
Be thus upbraided, child and rascal at,
And the offender granted scope of speech,
'Twill make them cool in zeal unto your grace.

Suf. Hath he not twit our sovereign lady
here

With ignominious words, though clerkly
couch'd,

As if she had suborned some to swear 180
False allegations to overthrow his state!

Queen. But I can give the loser leave to chide.

Glor. Far truer spoke than meant: I lose,
indeed;

Bestrow the winners, for they play'd me false!
And well such losers may have leave to speak.

Buck. He'll wrest the sense and hold us here all day:

Lord cardinal, he is your prisoner.

Car. Sir, take away the duke, and guard him sure.

Glor. Ah! thus King Henry throws away his crutch

Before his legs be firm to bear his body. 190
Thus is the shepherd beaten from his side

And wolves are gnawing who shall gnaw thee
first.

Ah, that my fear were false! ah, that it were!
For, good King Henry, thy decay I fear.

[Exit, guarded.]

King. My lords, what to your wisdoms seemeth best,

To do or undo, as if ourself were here.

Queen. What, will your highness leave the parliament?

King. Ay, Margaret; my heart is drown'd with grief,

Whose flood begins to flow within mine eyes,
My body round engirt with misery. 200

For what a more miserable than discontent!
Ah, uncle Humphrey! in thy face I see
The map of honour, truth and loyalty:

And yet, good Humphrey, is the hour to come
That e'er I proved thee false or fear'd thy faith.
What lurking star now envies thy estate,
That these great lords and Margaret our queen
Do seek subversion of thy harmless life!
Thou never didst them wrong nor no man
wrong;

And as the butcher takes away the calf 210
And binds the wretch and beats it when it strays,

Bearing it to the bloody slaughter-house,
Even so remorseless have they borne him
hence;

And as the dam runs lowing up and down,
Looking the way her harmless young one went,
And can do nought but wail her darling's loss,
Even so myself bewails good Gloucester's case
With sad unhelpful tears, and with dimm'd eyes
Look after him and cannot do him good,
So mighty are his vowed enemies. 220

His fortunes I will weep and 'twixt each groan
Say 'Who's a traitor! Gloucester he is none.'

[Exeunt all but Queen, Cardinal Beaufort,
Suffolk, and York; Somerset remains apart.]

Queen. Free lords, cold snow melts with the sun's hot beams.

Henry my lord is cold in great affairs,
Too full of foolish pity, and Gloucester's show

Beguiles him as the mournful crocodile
With sorrow snares relenting passengers,

Or as the snake roll'd in a flowering bank,
With shining checker'd slough, doth sting a
child

That for the beauty thinks it excellent. 230
Believe me, lords, were none more wise than I—

And yet herein I judge mine own wit good—
This Gloucester should be quickly rid the world,
To rid us from the fear we have of him.

Car. That he should die is worthy policy;
But yet we want a colour for his death:

'Tis meet he be condemn'd by course of law.

Suf. But, in my mind, that were no policy:
The king will labour still to save his life,

The commons haply rise, to save his life; 240
And yet we have but trivial argument,

More than mistrust, that shows him worthy
death.

York. So that, by this, you would not have him die.

Suf. Ah, York, no man alive so false as I!

York. 'Tis York that hath more reason for his death.

But, my lord cardinal, and you, my Lord of Suffolk,

Say as you think, and speak it from your souls,
Were't not all one, an empty eagle were set

To guard the chicken from a hungry king,
As place Duke Humphrey for the king's protector? 250

Queen. So the poor chicken should be sure of death.

Suf. Madam, 'tis true; and were't not madness, then,

To make the fox surveyor of the fold;
Who being named a crafty murderer,

His guile should be but idly posted over,
Because his purpose is not contented:

No; let him die, in that he is a fox.

By nature proved an enemy to the flock,
Before his chaps be stain'd with crimson blood,
As Humphrey, proved by reasons, to my liege.
And do not stand on quillets how to slay
him :

Be it by gins, by snares, by subtlety,
Sleeping or waking, tis no matter how,
So he be dead : for that is good deceit
Which makes him first that first intends deceit.

Queen. Thrice-noble Suffolk, 'tis resolutely spoke.

Suf. Not resolute, except so much were
done ;

For things are often spoke and seldom meant :
But that my heart accordeth with my tongue,
Seeing the deed is meritorious, 270
And to preserve my sovereign from his foe,
Say but the word, and I will be his priest.

Car. But I would have him dead, my Lord of Suffolk,
Ere you can take due orders for a priest :
Say you consent and censure well the deed,
And I'll provide his exequier,
I tender so the safety of my liege.

Suf. Here is my hand, the deed is worthy doing.

Queen. And so say I.

York. And I : and now we three have spoke
it. 280
It skills not greatly who impugns our doom.

Enter a Post.

Post. Great lords, from Ireland am I come

To signify that rebels there are up
And put the Englishmen unto the sword :
Send succours, lords, and stop the rage betime,
Before the wound do grow incurable :
For, being green, there is great hope of help.

Car. A breach that craves a quick expedient stop !

What counsel give you in this weighty cause ?
York. That Somerset be sent as regent thither : 290

'Tis meet that lucky ruler be employ'd ;
Witness the fortune he hath had in France.

Som. If York, with all his far-fet policy,
Had been the regent there instead of me,
He never would have stay'd in France so long.

York. No, not to lose it all, as thou hast
done :

I rather would have lost my life betimes
Than bring a burthen of dishonour home
By staying there so long till all were lost.
Show me one scar character'd on thy skin : 300
Men's flesh preserved so whole do seldom win.

Queen. Nay, then, this spark will prove a raging fire,

If wind and fuel be brought to feed it with :
No more, good York ; sweet Somerset, be still :
Thy fortune, York, hadst thou been regent
there,

Might happily have proved far worse than his.

York. What worse than nought ? nay, then,
a shame tells all !

Som. And, in the number, thee that wisest

Car. My Lord of York, try what your fortune is.

The uncivil kerns of Ireland are in arms 310
And temper clay with blood of Eng
To Ireland will you lead a band of Collected choicely, from each count
And try your hap against the Irishmen ?

York. I will, my lord, so please his ma
Suf. Why, our authority is his comen
And what we do establish he confirms :
Then, noble York, take thou this task in York. I am content : provide me soldiers,

lords,

Whiles I take order for mine own affairs. 320

Suf. A charge, Lord York, that I will see
perform'd.

But now return we to the false Duke Humphrey.
Car. No more of him ; for I will deal with
him

That henceforth he shall trouble us no more.
And so break off ; the day is almost spent :

Lord Suffolk, you and I must talk of that event York. My Lord of Suffolk, within fourteen days

At Bristol I expect my soldiers ;
For there I'll ship them all for Ireland.

Suf. I'll see it truly done, my Lord of York.
[Exeunt all but York.]

York. Now, York, or never, steel thy fearful
thoughts, 331

And change misdoubt to resolution :
Be that thou hepest to be, or what thou art

Resign to death : it is not worth the enjoying :
Let pale-faced fear keep with the mean-born
man,

And find no harbour in a royal heart.
Faster than spring-time showers comes thought on thought,

And not a thought but thinks on dignity.
My brain more busy than the labouring spider

Weaves tedious snares to trap mine enemies.
Well, nobles, well, 'tis politicly done,

To send me packing with an host of men :
I fear me you but warm the starved snake,

Who, cherish'd in your breasts, will sting your hearts.

'Twas men I lack'd and you will give them me :
I take it kindly ; yet be well assured

You put sharp weapons in a madman's hands.
Whiles I in Ireland pourish a mighty band,

I will stir up in England some black storm
Shall blow ten thousand souls to heaven or hell :

And this fell tempest shall not cease to rage 351
Until the golden circuit on my head,

Like to the glorious sun's transparent beams,
Do calm the fury of this mad-bred flaw.

And, for a minister of my intent,
I have seduced a headstrong Kentishman,

John Cade of Ashford,
To make commotion, as full well he can,

Under the title of John Mortimer.
In Ireland have I seen this stubborn Cade 360

Oppose himself against a troop of horse,
And fought so long, till that his thighs with darts

Were almost like a sharp-quill'd porpentine ;
And, in the end being recovered, I have seen

Him caper upright like a wild mandrake.

Shaking the bloody darts as he his bells.
Full often, like a shag-hair'd crafty kern,
Hath he conversed with the enemy,
And undiscover'd come to me again
And given me notice of their villanies. 370
This devil here shall be my substitute;
For that John Mortimer, which now is dead,
In face, in gait, in speech, he doth resemble:
By this I shall perceive the commons' mind,
How they affect the house and claim of York.
Say he be taken, rack'd and tortured,
I know no pain they can inflict upon him
Will make him say I moved him to those arms.
Say that he thrive, as 'tis great like he will,
Why, then from Ireland come I with my
strength 380
And reap the harvest which that rascal sow'd;
For Humphrey being dead, as he shall be,
And Henry put apart, the next for me. [Exit.]

SCENE II. Bury St Edmund's. A room of state.

Enter certain Murderers, hastily.

First Mur. Run to my Lord of Suffolk; let him know
We have dispatch'd the duke, as he commanded.
Sec. Mur. O that it were to do! What have we done!
Didst ever hear a man so penitent?

Enter SUFFOLK.

First Mur. Here comes my lord.

Suf. Now, sir, have you dispatch'd this thing?

First Mur. Ay, my good lord, he's dead.

Suf. Why, that's well said. Go, get you to my house;
I will reward you for this venturous deed.
The king and all the peers are here at hand. 39
Have you laid fair the bed? Is all things well.
According as I gave directions?

First Mur. 'Tis, my good lord.

Suf. Away! be gone. [Exit Murderers.]

Sound trumpets. Enter the KING, the QUEEN, CARDINAL BEAUFORT, SOMERSET, with Attendants.

King. Go, call our uncle to our presence
straight;
Say we intend to try his grace to-day,
If he be guilty, as 'tis published.

Suf. I'll call him presently, my noble lord.
[Exit.]

King. Lords, take your places; and, I pray you all,
Proceed no straiter 'gainst our uncle Gloucester
Than from true evidence of good esteem
He be approved in practice culpable.

Queen. God forbid any malice should prevail
That faultless may condemn a nobleman!
Pray God he may acquit him of suspicion!

King. I thank thee, Meg; these words content me much.

Re-enter SUFFOLK.

How now! why look'st thou pale? why tremblest
thou?

Where is our uncle? what's the matter, Suffolk?

Suf. Dead in his bed, my lord; Gloucester
is dead.

Queen. Marry, God forbid!

Car. God's secret judgement! I did dream to-night

he duke was dumb and could not speak a word. [The King swoons.]

Queen. How fares my lord? Help, lords!
the king is dead.

Som. Bear up his body; wring him by the nose.

Queen. Run, go, help, help! O Henry, ope thine eyes!

Suf. He doth revive again: madam, be patient.

King. O heavenly God!

Queen. How fares my gracious lord?

Suf. Comfort, my sovereign! gracious Henry,
comfort!

King. What, doth my Lord of Suffolk comfort me?

Came he right now to sing a raven's note, 40
Whose dismal tune bereft my vital powers;

And thinks he that the chirping of a wren,
By crying comfort from a hollow breast,

Can chase away the first-conceived sound?
Hide not thy poison with such sugar'd words;

Lay not thy hands on me; forbear, I say;
Their touch affrights me as a serpent's sting.

Thou baleful messenger, out of my sight!
Upon thy eye-balls murderous tyranny

Sits in grim majesty, to fright the world. 50
Look not upon me, for thine eyes are wounding:

Yet do not go away: come, basilisk,
And kill the innocent gazer with thy sight;

For in the shade of death I shall find joy;
In life but double death, now Gloucester's dead.

Queen. Why do you rate my Lord of Suffolk
thus?

Although the duke was enemy to him,
Yet he most Christian-like laments his death:

And for myself, foe as he was to me,
Might liquid tears or heart-offending groans 60

Or blood-consuming sighs recall his life, would be blind with weeping, sick with

groans,
Look pale as primrose with blood-drinking

signs,
And all to have the noble duke alive.

What know I how the world may deem of me?
For it is known we were but hollow friends:

It may be judged I made the duke away;
So shall my name with slander's tongue be wounded,

And princes' courts be fill'd with my reproach.

This get I by his death: ay me, unhappy! 70
To be a queen, and crown'd with infamy!

King. Ah, woe is mine for Gloucester, wretched
man!

Queen. Be woe for me, more wretched than
he is.

What, dost thou turn away and hide thy face?
I am no loathsome leper; look on me.

What! art thou, like the adder, venom deaf?
Be poisonous too and kill thy father's queen.

Is all thy comfort shut in Gloucester's tomb?
Why, then, dame Margaret was never thy joy.

Break his statue and worship it.
And make my image but an alehouse sign.
Was I for this nigh wreck'd upon the sea
And twice by awkward wind from England's bank

Drove back again unto my native clime?
What boded this, but well forewarning wind
Did seem to say 'Seek not a scorpion's nest,
Nor set no footing on this unkind shore'!
What did I then, but cursed the gentle gusts
And he that loosed them forth their brazen caves;

And bid them blow towards England's blessed shore,

Or turn our stern upon a dreadful rock!
Yet Æolus would not be a murderer,
But left that hateful office unto thee:
The pretty-vaulting sea refused to drown me,
Knowing that thou wouldst have me drown'd
on shore,

With tears as salt as sea, through thy unkindness:

The splitting rocks cover'd in the sinking sands
And would not dash me with their ragged
sides,

Because thy flinty heart, more hard than they,
Might in thy palace perish Margaret.
As far as I could ken thy chalky cliffs,
When from thy shore the tempest beat us back,
I stood upon the hatches in the storm,
And when the dusky sky began to rob
My earnest-gazing sight of thy land's view,
I took a costly jewel from my neck,
A heart it was, bound in with diamonds,
And threw it towards thy land: the sea received it,

And so I wish'd thy body might my heart: 100
And even with this I lost fair England's view
And bid mine eyes be packing with my heart
And call'd them blind and dusky spectacles,
For losing ken of Albion's wished coast.
How often have I tempted Suffolk's tongue,
The agent of thy foul inconstancy,
To sit and witch me, as Ascanius did
When he to madding Dido would unfold
His father's acts commenced in burning Troy!
Am I not witch'd like her? or thou not false like him?

Ay me, I can no more! die, Margaret! 120
For Henry weeps that thou dost live so long.

Noise within. Enter WARWICK, SALISBURY, and many Commons.

War. It is reported, mighty sovereign,
That good Duke Humphrey traitorously is murder'd

By Suffolk and the Cardinal Beaufort's means.
His commons, like an angry hive of bees
That want their leader, scatter up and down
And care not who they sting in his revenge.
Myself have calm'd their spiteful mutiny,
Until they hear the order of his death.

King. That he is dead, good Warwick, 'tis too true.

But how he died God knows, not Henry:
Examine the countess, view his breathless corpse,
And lament them upon his sudden death.

War. That shall I do, my liege. Stay, Salisbury,

With the rude multitude till I return. [Exit.]

King. O Thou that judgest all things, stay
my thoughts,

My thoughts, that labour to persuade my soul
Some violent hands were laid on Humphrey's
life!

If my suspect be false, forgive me,
For judgement only doth belong to Thee.

Fain would I go to chafe his paly lips
With twenty thousand kisses and to drain
Upon his face an ocean of salt tears.

To tell my love unto his dumb deaf trunk
And with my fingers feel his hand unfeeling:

But all in vain are these mean obsequies;
And to survey his dead and earthy image,

What were it but to make my sorrow greater!

Re-enter WARWICK, and others, bearing GLOUCESTER's body on a bed.

War. Come hither, gracious sovereign, view this body.

King. That is to see how deep my grave is made;

For with his soul fled all my worldly solace,
For seeing him I see my life in death.

War. As surely as my soul intends to live
With that dread King that took our state upon
him

To free us from his father's wrathful curse,
I do believe that violent hands were laid
Upon the life of this thrice-famed duke.

Sw. A dreadful oath, sworn with a solemn tongue!

What instance gives Lord Warwick for his vow?

War. See how the blood is settled in his face.

Of have I seen a timely-parted ghost,
Of ashy semblance, meagre, pale and bloodless,
Being all descended to the labouring heart?

Who, in the conflict that it holds with death,
Attracts the same for aidance 'gainst the enemy;

Which with the heart there cools and new returneth

To blush and beautify the cheek again.
But see, his face is black and full of blood,

His eye-balls further out than when he lived,
Staring full ghastly like a strangled man;

His hair upreard, his nostrils stretched with struggling;

His hands abroad display'd, as one that grasp'd
And tug'd for life and was by strength subdued:

Look, on the sheets his hair, you see, is sticking;

His well-proportion'd beard made rough and rugged,

Like to the summer's corn by tempest lodged.
It cannot be but he was murder'd here!

The least of all these signs were probable.
Sw. Why, Warwick, who should do the duke to death?

Myself and Beaufort had him in protection;
And we, I hope, are no murderers.

War. But both of you were sworn Duke
Humphrey's foes,

And you, forsooth, had the good duke to keep :
 'Tis like you would not feast him like a friend ;
 And 'tis well seen he found an enemy.

Queen. Then you, belike, suspect these noble-
 men

As guilty of Duke Humphrey's timeless death.

War. Who finds the heifer dead and bleeding fresh

And sees fast by a butcher with an axe,
 But will suspect 'twas he that made the slaughter ?

Who finds the partridge in the puttock's nest,
 But may imagine how the bird was dead,
 Although the kite soar with unbloody beak !
 Even so suspicious is this tragedy.

Queen. Are you the butcher, Suffolk ?
 Where's your knife ?

Is Beaumont term'd a kite ? Where are his talons ?

Suf. I wear no knife to slaughter sleeping
 men ;

But here's a vengeful sword, rusted with ease,
 That shall be scour'd in his rancorous heart
 That slanders me with murder's crimson badge.
 Say, if thou dar'st, proud Lord of Warwickshire,

That I am faulty in Duke Humphrey's death.

[Exeunt Cardinal, Somerset, and others.
War. What dares not Warwick, if false
 Suffolk dare him ?

Queen. He dares not calm his contumelious
 spirit

Nor cease to be an arrogant controller,
 Though Suffolk dare him twenty thousand
 times.

War. Madam, be still ; with reverence may
 I say ;

For every word you speak in his behalf
 Is slander to your royal dignity.

Suf. Blunt-witted lord, ignoble in demean-our !

If ever lady wrong'd her lord so much,
 Thy mother took into her blameful bed
 Some stern untutor'd churl, and noble stock
 Was grafted with crab-tree slip ; whose fruit thou art

And never of the Nevils' noble race.
War. But that the guilt of murder bucklers
 thee

And I should rob the deathman of his fee,
 Quitting thee thereby of ten thousand shames,
 And that my sovereign's presence makes me
 mild,

I would, false murderous coward, on thy knee
 Make thee beg pardon for thy passed speech
 And say it was thy mother that thou meant'st,
 That thou thyself wast born in bastardy ;
 And after all this fearful homage done,

Suf. Thou shalt be waking while I shed thy blood,

If from this presence thou dar'st go with me.

War. Away even now, or I will drag thee
 hence :

Unworthy though thou art, I'll cope with thee
 And do some service to Duke Humphrey's ghost. [Exeunt Suffolk and Warwick.

King. What stronger breastplate than a heart untainted !

Thrice is he arm'd that hath his quarrel just,
 And he but naked, though lock'd up in steel,
 Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted.

Queen. What noise is this ?

Re-enter SUFFOLK and WARWICK, with their weapons drawn.

King. Why, how now, lords ! your wrathful weapons drawn

Here in our presence ! dare you be so bold ?
 Why, what tumultuous clamour have we here ?

Suf. The traitorous Warwick with the men of Bury

Set all upon me, mighty sovereign.

Sal. [To the Commons, entering] Sirs, stand apart ; the king shall know your mind.

Dread lord, the commons send you word by me,
 Unless Lord Suffolk straight be done to death,

Or banished fair England's territories,
 They will by violence tear him from your palace

And torture him with grievous lingering death.
 They say, by him the good Duke Humphrey

died ;

They say, in him they fear your highness' death ;
 And mere instinct of love and loyalty,

Free from a stubborn opposite intent,
 As being thought to contradict your liking,

Makes them thus forward in his banishment.
 They say, in care of your most royal person,

That if your highness should intend to sleep
 And charge that no man should disturb your rest

In pain of your dislike or pain of death,
 Yet, notwithstanding such a strait edict,

Were there a serpent seen, with forked tongue,
 That slily glided towards your majesty,

It were but necessary you were waked,
 Lest, being suffer'd in that harmful slumber,

The mortal worm might make the sleep eternal ;
 And therefore do they cry, though you forbid,

That they will guard you, whether you will
 or no,

From such fell serpents as false Suffolk is,
 With whose envenomed and fatal sting

Your loving uncle, twenty times his worth,
 They say, is shamefully bereft of life.

Commons. [Within] An answer from the king, my Lord of Salisbury !

Suf. 'Tis like the commons, rude unpolish'd
 hinds,

Could send such message to their sovereigns :
 But you, my lord, were glad to be employ'd

To show how quaint an orator you are :
 But all the honour Salisbury hath won

Is, that he was the lord ambassador
 Sent from a sort of tinkers to the king.

Commons. [Within] An answer from the king, or we will all break in !

King. Go, Salisbury, and tell them all from
 me,

I thank them for their tender loving care ;
 And had I not been cited so by them,

Yet did I purpose as they do counsel ;
 For, sure, my thoughts do hourly profess

Mischance unto my state by Suffolk's means !

But three days longer, on the pain of death.

[Exit Salisbury.]
Queen. O Henry, let me plead for gentle

Suffolk!

King. Ungentle queen, to call him gentle

Suffolk! 290

No more, I say: if thou dost plead for him,

Thou wilt but add increase unto my wrath.

Had I but said, I would have kept my word,

But when I swear, it is irrevocable.

If, after three days' space, thou here be'st found

On any ground that I am ruler of,

The world shall not be ransom for thy life.

Come, Warwick, come, good Warwick, go with

me;

I have great matters to impart to thee.

[Exeunt all but Queen and Suffolk.]

Queen. Mischance and sorrow go along with

you! 300

Heart's discontent and sour affliction

Be playfellows to keep you company!

There's two of you; the devil make a third!

And threefold vengeance tend upon your steps!

Suf. Cease, gentle queen, these execrations

And let thy Suffolk take his heavy leave.

Queen. Fie, coward woman and soft-hearted wretch!

Hast thou not spirit to curse thine enemy?

Suf. A plague upon them! wherefore should

I curse them!

Would curses kill, as doth the mandrake's

groan, 310

I would invent as bitter-searching terms,

As curs, as harsh and horrible to hear,

Deliver'd strongly through my fix'd teeth,

With full as many signs of deadly hate,

As lean-faced Envy in her loathsome cave:

My tongue should stumble in mine earnest

words;

Mine eyes should sparkle like the beaten flint;

Mine hair be fix'd on end, as one distract;

Ay, every joint should seem to curse and ban:

And even now my burthen'd heart would break,

Should I not curse them. Poison be their drink! 321

Gall, worse than gall, the daintiest that they taste!

Their sweetest shade a grove of cypress trees!

Their chiefest prospect murdering basilisks!

Their softest touch as smart as lizards' stings!

Their music frightful as the serpent's hiss,

And hooting screech-owls make the covert full!

All the foul terrors in dark-seated hell—

Queen. Enough, sweet Suffolk; thou torment'st thyself;

And these dread curses, like the sun 'gainst

glaze, 330

Or like an overcharged gun, recoil,

And turn the force of them upon thyself.

Suf. You bade me ban, and will you bid me leave!

Now, by the ground that—

What could I curse away a winter's night,

Though standing naked on a mountain top,

Where sitting cold would never let grass grow,

And think it but a minute sport in sport.

Queen. O, let me entreat thee cease. Give me thy hand,

That I may dew it with my mournful tears;

Nor let the rain of heaven wet this place, 341

To wash away my woful monuments.

O, could this kiss be printed in thy hand,

That thou might'st think upon these by the seal,

Through whom a thousand sighs are breathed for thee!

So, get thee gone, that I may know my grief;

'Tis but surmised whiles thou art standing by,

As one that surfeits thinking on a want.

I will repeat thee, or, be well assured,

Adventure to be banished myself: 350

And banished I am, if but from thee.

(Go; speak not to me; even now be gone.

O, go not yet! Even thus two friends condemn'd

Embrace and kiss and take ten thousand leaves,

Loather a hundred times to part than die.

Yet now farewell; and farewell life with thee!

Suf. Thus is poor Suffolk ten times banished.

Once by the king, and three times thrice by

thee.

'Tis not the land I care for, wert thou thence;

A wilderness is populous enough. 360

So Suffolk had thy heavenly company;

For where thou art, there is the world itself,

With every several pleasure in the world,

And where thou art not, desolation.

I can no more; live thou to joy thy life;

Myself no joy in nought but that thou livest.

Enter VAUX.

Queen. Whither goes Vaux so fast! what news, I prithee!

Vaux. To signify unto his majesty

That Cardinal Beaufort is at point of death;

For suddenly a grievous sickness took him, 370

That makes him gasp and stare and catch

the air,

Blaspheming God and cursing men on earth.

Sometime he talks as if Duke Humphrey's ghost

Were by his side; sometime he calls the king

And whispers to his pillow as to him

The secrets of his overcharged soul:

And I am sent to tell his majesty

That even now he cries aloud for him.

Queen. Go tell this heavy message to the king. [Exit Vaux.]

Ay me! what is this world! what news are

these! 380

But wherefore grieve I at an hour's poor loss,

(Mitting Suffolk's exile, my soul's treasure!

Why only, Suffolk, mourn I not for thee,

And with the southern clouds contend in tears

Theirs for the earth's increase, mine for my sorrows!

Now get thee hence: the king, thou know'st, is coming;

If thou be found by me, thou art but dead.

Suf. If I depart from thee, I cannot live;

And in thy sight to die, what were it else

But like a pleasant slumber in thy lap? 390

Here could I breathe my soul into the air,

As mild and gentle as the cradle-babe
Dying with mother's dug between its lips:
Where, from thy sight, I should be raging mad
And cry out for thee to close up mine eyes,
To have thee with thy lips to stop my mouth;
So shouldst thou either turn my flying soul,
Or I should breathe it so into thy body,
And then it lived in sweet Elysium.
To die by thee were but to die in jest;
From thee to die were torture more than death:
O, let me stay, befall what may befall!

Queen. Away! though parting be a fretful corrosive,
It is applied to a deathful wound.
To France, sweet Suffolk: let me hear from
thee;
For whoso'er thou art in this world's globe,
I'll have an Iris that shall find thee out.

Suf. I go.
Queen. And take my heart with thee.
Suf. A jewel, lock'd in the wofull'st cask
That ever did contain a thing of worth. 410
Even as a splitted bark, so sunder we:
This way fall I to death.

Queen. This way for me.
[Exeunt severally.]

SCENE III. A bedchamber.

Enter the King, SALISBURY, WARWICK, to the CARDINAL in bed.

King. How fares my lord? speak, Beaufort, to thy sovereign.

Car. If thou be'st death, I'll give thee England's treasure,

Enough to purchase such another island,
So thou wilt let me live, and feel no pain.

King. Ah, what a sign it is of evil life,
Where death's approach is seen so terrible!

War. Beaufort, it is thy sovereign speaks to
thee.

Car. Bring me unto my trial when you
will.

Did he not in his bed? where should he die?
Can I make men live, whether they will or not?

O, torture me no more! I will confess. 11
Alive again! then show me where he is:

I'll give a thousand pound to look upon him.
He hath no eyes, the dust hath blinded them.

Comb down his hair; look, look! it stands up-
right,

Like lime-twigs set to catch my winged soul.
Give me some drink; and bid the apothecary

Bring the strong poison that I bought of him.
King. O thou eternal Mover of the heavens,

Look with a gentle eye upon this wretch! 20
Look with a gentle eye upon this wretch!

O, beat away the busy meddling fiend
That lays strong sieges unto this wretch's soul

And from his bosom purge this black despair!
War. See, how the pangs of death do make him grin!

Sal. Disturb him not; let him pass peaceably.

King. Peace to his soul, if God's good pleasure be!

Lord cardinal, if thou think'st on heaven's bliss,
Hold up thy hand, make signal of thy hope.

He dies, and makes no sign. O God, forgive
him!

War. So bad a death argues a monstrous
life.

King. Forbear to judge, for we are: 30
all.

Close up his eyes and draw the curtain close;
And let us all to meditation. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I. The coast of Kent.

*Alarum. Fight at sea. Ordinance goes off.
Enter a Captain, a Master, a Master's-Mate, WALTER WHITMORE, and others; with them SUFFOLK, and others, prisoners.*

Cap. The gaudy, blabbing and remorseful
day

Is crept into the bosom of the sea;
And now loud-howling wolves arouse the jades

That drag the tragic melancholy night;
Who, with their drowsy, slow and flagging

wings,
Clip dead men's graves and from their misty jaws

Breathe foul contagious darkness in the air.

Therefore bring forth the soldiers of our prize;
For, whilst our pinnace anchors in the Downs,

Here shall they make their ransom on the sand,
(Or with their blood stain this discolour'd shore.

Master, this prisoner freely give I thee;
And thou that art his mate, make boot of this;

The other, Walter Whitmore, is thy share.
First Gent. What is my ransom, master?

let me know.
Master. A thousand crowns, or else lay down your head.

Mate. And so much shall you give, or off goes yours.

Cap. What, think you much to pay two thousand crowns,

And bear the name and port of gentlemen? 20

Cut both the villains' throats; for die you shall:
The lives of those which we have lost in fight

Be counterpoised with such a petty sum!
First Gent. I'll give it, sir; and therefore spare my life.

Sec. Gent. And so will I and write home

for it straight.
Whit. I lost mine eye in laying the prize aboard,

And therefore to revenge it, shalt thou die:

[To Suf.]
And so should these, if I might have my will.

Cap. Be not so rash; take ransom, let him
live.

Suf. Look on my George; I am a gentle-
man:

Rate me at what thou wilt, thou shalt be paid.
Whit. And so am I; my name is Walter

Whitmore. 21
How now! why start'st thou? what, doth death

affright?
name affrights me, in whose sound

A cunning man did calculate my birth:

And

Yet let not this make thee be bloody-minded;
Thy name is Gualtier, being rightly sounded.

Whit. Gualtier or Walter, which it is, I care not;

Never yet did base dishonour blur our name,
But with our sword we wiped away the blot; 40
Therefore, when merchant-like I sell revenge,
Strike be my sword, my arms torn and defaced,
And I proclaim'd a coward through the world!

Suf. Stay, Whitmore; for thy prisoner is a prince,
The Duke of Suffolk, William de la Pole.

Whit. The Duke of Suffolk muffled up in rags!

Suf. Ay, but these rags are no part of the duke:

Jove sometime went disguised, and why not I!

Cap. But Jove was never slain, as thou shalt be.

Suf. Obscure and lowly swain, King Henry's blood, 50

The honourable blood of Lancaster,
Must not be shed by such a jaded groom.
Hast thou not kiss'd thy hand and held my stirrup?

Bare-headed plodded by my foot-cloth mule
And thought thee happy when I shook my head?

How often hast thou waited at my cup,
Fed from my trencher, kneel'd down at the board,

When I have feasted with Queen Margaret!
Remember it and let it make thee crest-fall'n,
Ay, and alay this thy abortive pride, 60

How in your vorking lobby hast thou stood

And duly waited for my coming forth!

This hand of mine hath writ in thy behalf
And therefore shall it charm thy riotous tongue.

Whit. Speak, captain, shall I stab the foreign swain?

Cap. First let my words stab him, as he hath me.

Suf. Base slave, thy words are blunt and so art thou.

Cap. Convey him hence and on our long-boat's side

Strike off his head.

Suf. Thou dar'st not, for thy own.

Cap. Yes, Pole.

Suf. Pole!

Cap. Pool! Sir Pool! lord! 70

Ay, kennel, puddle, sink; whose silt and dirt

Troubles the silver spring where England drinks.

Now will I dam up this thy yawning mouth

For swallowing the treasure of the realm;

Thy lips that kiss'd the queen shall sweep the ground;

And thou that smiledst at good Duke Humphrey's death

Against the sweetest winds shalt grin in vain,

Who in contempt shall kiss at thee again:

A wedded be thou to the bags of hell,

Aspiring to ass a mighty lord 80

As the daughter of a worthless king.

subject, wealth, nor diadem.

By art thou grown great ambitious Sylla, overpowered of thy mother's bleeding heart.

By thee Anjou and Maine were sold to France,
The false revolting Normans through thee
Disdain to call us lord, and Flouardy
Hath slain their governors, surprised our forts
And sent the ragged soldiers wounded home. 90
The princely Warwick, and the Nevils all,
Whose dreadful swords were never drawn in vain,

As hating thee, are rising up in arms:
And now the house of York, thrust from the crown

By shameful murder of a guiltless king
And lofty proud encroaching tyranny,
Burns with revenging fire; whose hopeful colours

Advance our half-faced sun, striving to shine,
Under the which is writ 'Invitis nubibus,'
The commons here in Kent are up in arms: 100

And, to conclude, reproach and beggary
Is crept into the palace of our king,
And all by thee. Away! convey him hence.

Suf. O that I were a god, to shoot forth thunder

Upon these paltry, servile, abject drudges!
Small things make base men proud: this villain here,

Being captain of a pinnace, threatens more
Than Bargasus the strong Illyrian pirate.
Drones suck not eagles' blood but rob beehives:

It is impossible that I should die
By such a lowly vassal as thyself. 110

Thy words move rage and not remorse in me:
I go of message from the queen to France;

I charge thee wait me safely cross the Channel.

Cap. Walter,—

Whit. Come, Suffolk, I must wait thee to thy death.

Suf. Gelidus timor occupat artus, it is the fear.

Whit. Thou shalt have cause to fear before I leave thee.

What, are ye daunted now! now will ye stony!

First Gent. My gracious lord, entreat him, speak him fair. 120

Suf. Suffolk's imperial tongue is stern and rough.

Used to command, untaught to plead for favour.
Far be it we should honour such as these

With humble suit: no, rather let my head
Stoop to the block than these knees bow to any

Save to the God of heaven and to my king;
And sooner dance upon a bloody pole

Than stand uncovered to the vulgar groom.
True nobility is exempt from fear:

More can I bear than you dare execute. 130

Cap. Hail him away, and let him talk no more.

Suf. Come, soldiers, show what cruelty you can,
That this my death may never be forgot!

Great men oft die by vile bezonians:
A Roman sworder and banditto slave

Murder'd sweet Tully; Brutus' bastard hand
Stabb'd Julius Caesar; savage Islanders

Pompey the Great; and Suffolk dies by pikes.

[Exeunt Whitmore and others with Suffolk.]

Cap. And as for those whose names we have set,

It is our pleasure one of them depart: 140
Therefore come you with us and let him go.

[Exeunt all but the First Gentleman.]

Re-enter WHITMORE with SUFFOLK's body.

Whit. There let his head and lifeless body lie.

Until the queen his mistress bury it. [Exit First Gent.]
O barbarous and bloody spectacle!

His body will I bear unto the king:
If he revenge it not, yet will his friends;
So will the queen, that living held him dear.
[Exit with the body.]

SCENE II. Blackheath.

Enter GEORGE BEVIS and JOHN HOLLAND.

Bevis. Come, and get thee a sword, though made of a bath: they have been up these two days.

Holl. They have the more need to sleep now, then.

Bevis. I tell thee, Jack Cade the clothier means to dress the commonwealth, and turn it, and set a new nap upon it.

Holl. So he had need, for 'tis threnbare. Well, I say it was never merry world in England since gentlemen came up.

Bevis. O miserable age! virtue is not regarded in handicrafts-men.

Holl. The nobility think scorn to go in leather aprons.

Bevis. Nay, more, the king's council are no good workmen.

Holl. True; and yet it is said, labour in thy vocation; which is as much to say as, let the magistrates be labouring men; and therefore should we be magistrates.

Bevis. Thou hast hit it; for there's no better sign of a brave mind than a hard hand.

Holl. I see them! I see them! There's Best's son, the tanner of Wingham.

Bevis. He shall have the skins of our enemies, to make dog's-leather of.

Holl. And Dick the Butcher.

Bevis. Then is sin struck down like an ox, and iniquity's throat cut like a calf.

Holl. And Smith the weaver.

Bevis. Argo, their thread of life is spun.

Holl. Come, come, let's fall in with them.

Drum. Enter CADE, DICK Butcher, SMITH the Weaver, and a Sawyer, with infinite numbers.

Cade. We John Cade, so termed of our supposed father.

Dick. [Aside] Or rather, of stealing a cade of herrings.

Cade. For our enemies shall fall before us, inspired with the spirit of prizing down kings and pri-

Dick. Command silence.

Cade. He was a Mortimer.

Dick. He was an honest man, and a good

Cade. My mother a Flemingist.

Dick. [Aside] I knew her well; she was a midwife.

Cade. My wife descended of the Ladies.

Dick. [Aside] She was, indeed, a pedler's daughter, and sold many laces.

Smith. [Aside] But now of late, not able to travel with her turned pack, she washes backs here at home.

Cade. Therefore am I of an honourable house.

Dick. [Aside] Ay, by my faith, the field is honourable; and there was he born, under a hedge, for his father had never a house but the cage.

Cade. Valiant I am.

Smith. [Aside] A' must needs; for beggary is valiant.

Cade. I am able to endure much.

Dick. [Aside] No question of that; for I have seen him whipped three market-days together.

Cade. I fear neither sword nor fire.

Smith. [Aside] He need not fear the sword; for his coat is of proof.

Dick. [Aside] But methinks he should stand in fear of fire, being burnt i' the hand for stealing of sheep.

Cade. Be brave, then; for your captain is brave, and vows reformation. These shall be in England seven halfpenny loaves sold for a penny: the three-hooped pot shall have ten hoops; and I will make it felony to drink small beer: all the realm shall be in common; and in Cheapside shall my palfrey go to grass; and when I am king, as king I will be.

All. God save your majesty!

Cade. I thank you, good people: there shall be no money; all shall eat and drink on my score; and I will apparel them all in one livery, that they may agree like brothers and worship me their lord.

Dick. The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers.

Cade. Nay, that I mean to do. Is not this a lamentable thing, that of the skin of an innocent lamb should be made parchment?

that parchment, being scribbled o'er, should undo a man? Some say the hot sun dries it; I say, 'tis the bee's wax; for I did see seal once to a thing, and I was never mine own man since. How now! who's there?

Enter some, bringing forward the Clerk of Chatham.

Smith. The clerk of Chatham: he can write and read and cast account.

Cade. O monstrous!

Smith. We took him setting of boys' copies.

Cade. Here's a villain!

Smith. Has a book in his pocket, and letters in it.

Cade. Nay, then, he is a conjurer.

Dick. Nay, he can make parchment, and write court-hand.

Cade. I am sorry for't: the man is a villain.

Dick. I am sorry for't: the man is a villain.

Cade. I am sorry for't: the man is a villain.

Dick. I am sorry for't: the man is a villain.

Cade. I am sorry for't: the man is a villain.

Dick. I am sorry for't: the man is a villain.

Cade. I am sorry for't: the man is a villain.

Dick. I am sorry for't: the man is a villain.

Cade. I am sorry for't: the man is a villain.

Dick. I am sorry for't: the man is a villain.

Clerk. Emmanuel.

Dick. They use to write it on the top of letters: 'twill go hard with you.

Cade. Let me alone. Dost thou use to write thy name? or hast thou a mark to thyself, like an honest plain-dealing man?

Clerk. Sir, I thank God, I have been so well brought up that I can write my name.

All. He hath confessed: away with him! he's a villain and a traitor.

Cade. Away with him, I say! hang him with his pen and ink-horn about his neck.

[Exit one with the Clerk.]

Enter MICHAEL.

Mich. Where's our general?

Cade. Here I am, thou particular fellow.

Mich. Fly, fly, fly! Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother are hard by, with the king's forces.

Cade. Stand, villain, stand, or I'll fell thee down. He shall be encountered with a man as good as himself: he is but a knight, is a!

Mich. No.

Cade. To equal him, I will make myself a knight presently. [Kneels] Rise up Sir John Mortimer. [Rises] Now have at him!

Enter SIR HUMPHREY STAFFORD and his Brother, with drum and soldiers.

Staf. Rebellious hinds, the filth and scum of Kent,

Mark'd for the gallows, lay your weapons down; Home to your cottages, forsake this groom: The king is merciful, if you revolt.

Bro. But angry, wrathful, and inclined to blood,

If you go forward; therefore yield, or die.

Cade. As for these silken-coated slaves, I pass not:

It is to you, good people, that I speak. Over whom, in time to come, I hope to reign; For I am rightful heir unto the crown.

Staf. Villain, thy father was a plasterer; And thou thyself a sheerman, art thou not?

Cade. And Adam was a gardener.

Bro. And what of that?

Cade. Marry, this: Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March,

Married the Duke of Clarence' daughter, did he not?

Staf. Ay, sir.

Cade. By her he had two children at one birth.

Bro. That's false.

Cade. Ay, there's the question; but I say, 'tis true:

The elder of them, being put to nurse, Was by a beggar-woman stolen away;

And, ignorant of his birth and parentage, Became a bricklayer when he came to age:

His son am I; deny it, if you can.

Dick. Nay, 'tis too true; therefore he shall be king.

Staf. Sir, he made a chimney in my father's house, and the bricks are alive at this day to testify it; therefore deny it not.

Staf. And will you credit this base drudge's words,

That speaks he knows not what?

All. Ay, marry, will we; therefore get ye gone.

Bro. Jack Cade, the Duke of York hath taught you this.

Cade. [Aside] He lies, for I invented it myself.

Go to, sirrah, tell the king from me, that, for his father's sake, Henry the Fifth, in whose time boys went to span-counter for French crowns, I am content he shall reign; but I'll be protector over him.

Dick. And furthermore, we'll have the Lord Say's head for selling the dukedom of Maine.

Cade. And good reason; for thereby is England maimed, and fain to go with a staff, but that my puissance holds it up. Fellow kings, I tell you that that Lord Say hath gelded the commonwealth, and made it an eunuch; and more than that, he can speak French; and therefore he is a traitor.

Staf. O gross and miserable ignorance! Cade. Nay, answer, if you can: the Frenchmen are our enemies; go to, then, I ask but this: can he that speaks with the tongue of an enemy be a good counsellor, or no?

All. No, no; and therefore we'll have his head.

Bro. Well, seeing gentle words will not prevail,

Assail them with the army of the king.

Staf. Herald, away; and throughout every town

Proclaim them traitors that are up with Cade; That those which fly before the battle ends

May, even in their wives' and children's sight, Be hang'd up for example at their doors:

And you that be the king's friends, follow me. [Exeunt the two Staffords, and soldiers.]

Cade. And you that love the commons, follow me.

Now show yourselves men; 'tis for liberty. We will not leave one lord, one gentleman;

Spare none but such as go in clouted shoon; For they are thrifty honest men and such

As would, but that they dare not, take our parts.

Dick. They are all in order and march toward us.

Cade. But then are we in order when we are most out of order. Come, march forward. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Another part of Blackheath.

Alarums to the fight, wherein both the STAFFORDS are slain. Enter CADE and the rest.

Cade. Where's Dick, the butcher of Ashford?

Dick. Here, sir.

Cade. They tell before thee like sheep and oxen, and thou behavest thyself as if thou hadst been in thine own slaughter-house; therefore thou wilt I reward thee, the Lord shall be as long again as it is; and thou shalt have a license to kill for a hundred seeking one.

Dick. I desire no more.
Cade. And, to speak truth, thou deservest o' less. This monument of the victory will bear [putting on Sir Humphrey's brigandine];
 and the bodies shall be dragged at my one heels till I do come to London, where we will have the mayor's sword borne before us.
Dick. If we mean to thrive and do good,
 seek open the gaols and let out the prisoners.
Cade. Fear not that, I warrant thee. Come, at's march towards London. [Exeunt. 20]

SCENE IV. London. The palace.

Enter the KING with a supplication, and the QUEEN with Suffolk's head, the DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM and the LORD SAY.

Queen. Oft have I heard that grief softens the mind
 And makes it fearful and degenerate;
 Think therefore on revenge and cease to weep.
 But who can cease to weep and look on this!
 Here may his head lie on my throbbing breast:
 But where's the body that I should embrace?
Buck. What answer makes your grace to be rebels' supplication?
King. I'll send some holy bishop to entreat;
 For God forbid so many simple souls should perish by the sword! And I myself, rather than bloody war shall cut them short,
 will parley with Jack Cade their general:
 But stay, I'll read it over once again.

Queen. Ah, barbarous villains! hath this lovely face
 Ruled, like a wandering planet, over me,
 And could it not enforce them to relent,
 That were unworthy to behold the same?
King. Lord Say, Jack Cade hath sworn to have thy head.
Say. Ay, but I hope your highness shall have him.
King. How now, madam!
 still lamenting and mourning for Suffolk's
 death!
 fear me, love, if that I had been dead, thou wouldst not have mourn'd so much for me.
Queen. No, my love, I should not mourn, but die for thee.

Enter a Messenger.

King. How now! what news! why comest thou in such haste?
Mess. The rebels are in Southwark; fly, my
 lord!
Jack Cade proclaims himself Lord Mortimer,
 Descended from the Duke of Clarence's house,
 And calls your grace usurper openly.
 And vows to crown himself in Westminster.
 His army is a ragged multitude
 Of hinds and peasants, rude and merciless:
 Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother's death hath given them heart and courage to proceed
 All ———, lawyers, courtiers, gentlemen,
 They call caterpillars and intend their
 death.
King. O graceless men! they know not what they do.

Buck. My gracious lord, retire to Killingworth,
 Until a power be raised to put them down.
Queen. Ah, were the Duke of Suffolk now alive,
 These Kentish rebels would be soon appeased!
King. Lord Say, the traitors hate thee;
 Therefore away with us to Killingworth.
Say. So might your grace's person be in danger.
 The sight of me is odious in their eyes;
 And therefore in this city will I stay
 And live alone as secret as I may.

Enter another Messenger.

Mess. Jack Cade hath gotten London bridge:
 The citizens fly and forsake their houses:
 The rascal people, thirsting after prey,
 Join with the traitor, and they jointly swear
 To spoil the city and your royal court.
Buck. Then linger not, my lord; away, take horse.
King. Come, Margaret; God, our hope, will succour us.
Queen. My hope is gone, now Suffolk is deceased.
King. Farewell, my lord: trust not the Kentish rebels.
Buck. Trust nobody, for fear you be betray'd.
Say. The trust I have is in mine innocence,
 And therefore am I bold and resolute. [Exeunt. 60]

SCENE V. London. The Tower.

*Enter LORD SCALES upon the Tower, walking.
 Then enter two or three Citizens below.*

Scales. How now! is Jack Cade slain?
First Cit. No, my lord, nor likely to be slain; for they have won the bridge, killing all those that withstand them: the lord mayor craves aid of your honour from the Tower to defend the city from the rebels.
Scales. Such aid as I can spare you shall command;
 But I am troubled here with them myself;
 The rebels have assay'd to win the Tower.
 But get you to Smithfield and gather head.
 And thither I will send you Matthew Goffe; Fight for your king, your country and your lives;
 And so, farewell, for I must hence again. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. London. Cannon Street.

Enter JACK CADE and the rest, and striking his staff on London-stone.

Cade. Now is Mortimer lord of this city.
 And here, sitting upon London-stone, I charge and command that, of the city's cost, the piping-conduit run nothing but ale and wine this first year of our reign. And now jump-forward it shall be treason for any that calls me other than Lord Mortimer.

Enter a Soldier, running.

Sold. Jack Cade! Jack Cade!

Cade. Knock him down there.

[They kill him.]

Smith. If this fellow be wise, he'll never call ye Jack Cade more: I think he hath a very fair warning.

Dick. My lord, there's an army gathered together in Smithfield.

Cade. Come, then, let's go fight with them: but first, go and set London bridge on fire; and, if you can, burn down the Tower too. Come, let's away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. London. Smithfield.

Alarums. MATTHEW GOFFE is slain, and all the rest. Then enter JACK CADE, with his company.

Cade. So, sirs: now go some and pull down the Savoy; others to the inns of court; down with them all.

Dick. I have a suit unto your lordship.

Cade. Be it a lordship, thou shalt have it for that word.

Dick. Only that the laws of England may come out of your mouth.

Holl. [Aside] Mass, 'twill be sore law, then; for he was thrust in the mouth with a spear, and 'tis not whole yet.

Smith. [Aside] Nay, John, it will be stinking law; for his breath stinks with eating toasted cheese.

Cade. I have thought upon it, it shall be so. Away, burn all the records of the realm; my mouth shall be the parliament of England.

Holl. [Aside] Then we are like to have biting statutes, unless his teeth be pulled out.

Cade. And henceforward all things shall be in common. [Exit.]

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, a prize, a prize! here's the Lord Say, which sold the towns in France; he that made us pay one and twenty fifteens, and one shilling to the pound, the last subsidy.

Enter GEORGE BETHES, with the LORD SAY.

Cade. Well, he shall be beheaded for it ten times. Ah, thou say, thou serge, nay, thou mistress lord! now art thou within point-blank of our jurisdiction regal. What canst thou do my majesty for giving up of Nor-unto Monsieur Basinecu, the dauphin's son? Be it known unto thee by these promises, even the presence of Lord Mortimer, that I am the beacon that must sweep the court clean of such filth as thou art. Thou hast most traitorously corrupted the youth of the realm, in erecting a grammar school; and whereas before our forefathers had no other books but the sunne and the tully, thou hast gotten printing to be used, and, contrary to the law, his crown and dignity, thou hast made a paper-mill. It will be proved to thy words as no Christian ear can endure to hear. Thou hast appointed justices of peace, to call poor men before them about matters they were not able to answer. Moreover, thou hast put them in prison; and because they could not read, thou hast hanged them; whereas, indeed,

only for that cause they have been most worthy to live. Thou dost ride in a sat-cloth, dost thou not?

Say. What of that?

Cade. Marry, thou oughtest not to let thy horse wear a cloak, when homester men than thou go in their hose and doublets.

Dick. And work in their shirt too; as my self, for example, that am a butcher.

Say. You men of Kent—

Dick. What say you of Kent?

Say. Nothing but this; 'tis 'bousa terra mala gena.'

Cade. Away with him, away with him! he speaks Latin.

Say. Hear me but speak, and bear me when you will.

Kent, in the Commentaries Cæsar writ,

is term'd the civil place of all this isle:

Sweet is the country, because full of riches;

The people liberal, valiant, active, wealthy;

Which makes me hope you are not void of pity:

I sold not Maine, I lost not Normandy.

Yet, to recover them, would lose my life.

Justice with favour have I always done;

Prayers and tears have moved me, gifts could never.

When have I aught exacted at your hands,

But to maintain the king, the realm and you?

Large gifts have I bestow'd on learned clerks,

Because my book prefer'd me to the king,

And seeing ignorance is the curse of God,

Knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to heaven.

Unless you be possess'd with devilish spirits,

You cannot but forbear to murder me:

This tongue hath parley'd unto foreign kings

For your behoof,—

Cade. Tut, when struck'st thou one blow in the field?

Say. Great men have reaching hands: oh

have I struck

Those that I never saw and struck them dead.

Geo. O monstrous coward! what, to come behind folks?

Say. These cheeks are pale for watching for your good.

Cade. Give him a box o' the ear and that will make 'em red again.

Say. Long sitting to determine poor men's causes

Hath made me full of sickness and diseases.

Cade. Ye shall have a hampen candle then and the help of hatchet.

Dick. Why dost thou quiver, man?

Say. The palsy, and not fear, provokes me.

Cade. Nay, be bold at us, as who should say, I'll be even with you: I'll see if his head will stand steeper on a pole, or no. Take him away, and behead him.

Say. Tell me wherein!

Have I affected wealth or honour?

Are my cheeks fill'd up with

Is my apparel sumptuous to behold?
Whom have I injured, that ye seek my death?
These hands are free from guiltless blood-shedding,
This breast from harbouring foul deceitful
thoughts.
O, let me live!

Cade. [Aside] I feel remorse in myself with his words; but I'll bridle it: he shall die, an it be but for pleading so well for his life. Away with him! he has a familiar under his tongue;
he speaks not o' God's name. Go, take him away, I say, and strike off his head presently;
and then break into his son-in-law's house, Sir James Cromer, and strike off his head, and bring them both upon two poles hither.

All. It shall be done.

Say. Ah, countrymen! if when you make your prayers,
God should be so obdurate as yourselves,
How would it fare with your departed souls?
And therefore yet relent, and save my life.

Cade. Away with him! and do as I command ye. [Exeunt some with Lord Say.]
The proudest peer in the realm shall not wear a head on his shoulders, unless he pay me tribute;
there shall not a maid be married, but she shall pay to me her maidenhead ere they have it:
men shall hold of me in capite; and we charge and command that their wives be as free as heart can wish or tongue can tell.

Dick. My lord, when shall we go to Cheapside and take up commodities upon our bills?

Cade. Marry, presently.

All. O, brave!

Re-enter one with the heads.

Cade. But is not this braver? Let them kiss one another, for they loved well when they were alive. Now part them again, lest they consent about the giving up of some more towns in France. Soldiers, defer the spoil of the city until night: for with these borne before us, instead of maces, will we ride through the streets; and at every corner have them kiss.
Away!

[Exeunt.

SCENE VIII. Southwark.

Alarm and retreat. Enter CADE and all his rabblement.

Cade. Up Fish Street! down Saint Magnus' (corner) kill and knock down! throw them into Thames! [Sound a parley.] What noise this I hear? Pure any be so bold to sound retreat or parley, when I command them kill!

Enter BUCKINGHAM and old CLIFFORD, attended.

Buck. Ay, here they be that dare and will disturb thee:

Know, Cade, we come ambassadors from the
king

Unto the commons whom thou hast misled;
And here pronounce free pardon to them all

That will forsake thee and go home in peace.

Cly. What say ye, countrymen! will ye

And yield to mercy whilst 'tis offer'd you;
Or let a rebel lead you to your deaths?
Who loves the king and will embrace his
pardon,

Fling up his cap, and say 'God save his majesty!'

Who hateth him and honours not his father, Henry the Fifth, that made all France to quake,

Shake he his weapon at us and pass by.

All. God save the king! God save the king!

Cade. What, Buckingham and Clifford, are ye so brave? And you, base peasants, do ye believe him? will you needs be hanged with your pardons about your necks? Hadst my sword therefore broke through London gates, that you should leave me at the White Hart in Southwark? I thought ye would never have given out these arms till you had recovered your ancient freedom; but you are all recreants and dastards, and delight to live in slavery to the nobility. Let them break your backs with burthens, take your houses over your heads, ravish your wives and daughters before your faces: for me, I will make shift for one; and so, God's curse light upon you all!

All. We'll follow Cade, we'll follow Cade!

Cly. Is Cade the son of Henry the Fifth?
That thus you do exclaim you'll go with him?
Will he conduct you through the heart of
France,

And make the meanest of you earls and dukes?

Alas, he hath no home, no place to fly to!

Nor knows he how to live but by the spoil,

Unless by robbing of your friends and us.

Were't not a shame, that whilst you live at jar,

The fearful French, whom you late vanquish'd,

Should make a start o'er seas and vanquish you?

Mc thinks already in this civil broil

I see them lording it in London streets,

Crying 'Villains!' unto all they meet.

Better ten thousand base-born Cades miscarry

Than you should stoop unto a Frenchman's mercy.

To France, to France, and get what you have

lost;

Spare England, for it is your native coast:

Henry hath money, you are strong and manly;

God on our side, doubt not of victory.

All. A Clifford! a Clifford! we'll follow the king and Clifford.

Cade. Was ever feather so lightly blown to and fro as this multitude? The name of Henry the Fifth hales them to an hundred misdeeds and makes them leave me desolate. I see them lay their heads together to surprise me. My sword make way for me, for here is no staying.

In despite of the devil and hell, have through the very midst of you! and heaven and honour be witness that no want of resolution in me, but only my followers' base and innomious treasons, makes me bid you to my heels.

Buck. What, is he fled? Go some, and follow him:

And he that brings his head unto the king,

Shall have a thousand crowns for his reward.

[Exeunt some of them.]

Follow me, soldiers: we'll devise a mean
To reconcile you all unto the king. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IX. Kenilworth Castle.

Sound trumpets. Enter KING, QUEEN, and SOMERSET, on the terrace.

King. Was ever king that joy'd an earthly throne,
And could command no more content than I!
No sooner was I crept out of my cradle
But I was made a king, at nine months old.
Was never subject long'd to be a king
As I do long and wish to be a subject.

Enter BUCKINGHAM and old CLIFFORD.

Buck. Health and glad tidings to your majesty!

King. Why, Buckingham, is the traitor
Cade surprised?
Or is he but retired to make him strong?

Enter, below, multitudes, with halters about their necks.

Clif. He is fled, my lord, and all his powers
do yield;
And humbly thus, with halters on their necks,
Expect your highness' doom, of life or death.

King. Then, heaven, set ope thy everlasting gates,

To entertain my vows of thanks and praise!
Soldiers, this day have you redeem'd your lives
And shew'd how well you love your prince and country;

Continue still in this so good a mind,
And Henry, though he be unfortunate,
Assure yourselves, will never be unkind:
And so, with thanks and pardon to you all,
I do dismiss you to your several countries.

All. God save the king! God save the king!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Please it your grace to be advertised
The Duke of York is newly come from Ireland,
And with a puissant and a mighty power
Of gallowglasses and stout kerns
Is marching hitherward in proud array,
And still proclaimeth, as he comes along,
His arms are only to remove from thee
The Duke of Somerset, whom he terms a traitor.

King. Thus stands my state, 'twixt Cade and York distress'd;

Clif. Like to a ship that, having 'scaped a tempest,
Is straightway calm'd and boarded with a pirate;

But now is Cade driven back, his men dispersed, and York in arms to second him.

King. I pray thee, Buckingham, go and meet him, and ask him what's the reason of these arms;

then I'll send Duke Edmund to the Tower;

and Somerset, we will commit these thither,

lest his army be dismissed from him.

Clif. My lord,

I would myself to prison willingly,

or into death, to do my country good.

King. In any case, be not too rough in terms;

For he is fierce and cannot brook hard language.

Buck. I will, my lord; and doubt not so to deal.

As all things shall redound unto your good.

King. Come, wife, let's in, and learn to govern better;

For yet may England curse my wretched reign.
[Flourish. Exeunt.]

SCENE X. Kent. Iden's garden.

Enter CADE.

Cade. Fie on ambition! fie on myself, that have a sword, and yet am ready to furnish:
These five days have I hid me in these woods and durst not peep out, for all the country is laid for me; but now am I so hungry that if I might have a lease of my life for a thousand years I could stay no longer. Wherefore, on a brick wall have I climbed into this garden, to see if I can eat grass, or pick a salet another while, which is not amiss to cool a man's stomach this hot weather. And I think this word 'salet' was born to do me good: for many a time, but for a salet, my brain-pan had been cleft with a brown bill; and many a time, when I have been dry and bravely marching, it hath served me instead of a quart pot to drink in; and now the word 'salet' must serve me to feed on.

Enter IDEN.

Iden. Lord, who would live turnmold in
the court,

And may enjoy such quiet walks as these!

This small inheritance my father left me.

Contenteth me, and worth a monarchy.

I seek not to wax great by others' waning.

Or gather wealth, I care not, with what envy:

Sufficeth that I have maintains my state

And sends the poor well pleased from my gate.

Cade. Here a the lord of the soil come to seize me for a stray, for entering his fee-simple without leave. Ah, villain, thou wilt betray me, and get a thousand crowns of the king

by carrying my head to him: but I'll make thee eat iron like an ostrich, and swallow my sword like a great pin, ere thou and I part.

Iden. Why, rude companion, whatso'er thou

be,

I know thee not; why, then, should I betray

thee?

Is't not enough to break into my garden,

And, like a thief, to come to rob my grounds,

Climbing my walls in spite of me the owner,

But thou wilt brave me with these saucy terms!

Cade. Brave thee! ay, by the best blood that ever was broached, and heard thee too.

Look on me well: I have eat no meat these five days; yet, come thou and thy five men, and if I do not leave you all as dead as a door-

naul, I pray God I may never eat grass more.

Iden. Nay, it shall ne'er be said, while England stands,

That Alexander Iden, an equine of Kent,

Took odds to combat a poor lambard's man.

Oppose thy steadfast-gazing eyes to mine,
See if thou canst outface me with thy looks;
Set limb to limb, and thou art far the lesser;
Thy hand is but a finger to my fist,
Thy leg a stick compared with this truncheon;
My foot shall fight with all the strength thou hast;

And if mine arm be heaved in the air,
Thy grave is digg'd already in the earth.
As for words, whose greatness answers words,
Let this my sword report what speech forbears.

Cade. By my valour, the most complete champion that ever I heard! Steel, if thou turn the edge, or cut not out the burly-boned clown in chins of beef ere thou sleep in thy sheath, I beseech God on my knees thou mayst be turned to hobnails.

[Here they fight. Cade falls.]

O, I am slain! famine and no other hath slain me: let ten thousand devils come against me, and give me but the ten meals I have lost, and I'll defy them all. Wither, garden; and be henceforth a burying-place to all that do dwell in this house, because the unconquered soul of Cade is fled.

Iden. Is't Cade that I have slain, that monstrous traitor!

Sword, I will hallow thee for this thy deed,
And hang thee o'er my tomb when I am dead:
Ne'er shall this blood be wiped from thy point;
But thou shalt wear it as a herald's coat.
To emblaze the honour that thy master got.

Cade. Iden, farewell, and be proud of thy victory. Tell Kent from me, she hath lost her best man, and exhort all the world to be cowards;
for I, that never feared any, am vanquished by famine, not by valour.

Iden. How much thou wrong'st me, heaven be my judge.

Die, damned wretch, the curse of her that bare
thee;

And as I thrust thy body in with my sword,
So wish I, I might thrust thy soul to hell.
Hence will I drag thee headlong by the heels
Into a dunghill which shall be thy grave,
And there cut off thy most ungracious head;
Which I will bear in triumph to the king,
Giving thy trunk for crows to feed upon.

[Exit.]

ACT V.

SCENE I. Fields between Dartford and Blackheath.

[Enter YORK, and his army of Irish, with drum and colours.]

York. From Ireland thus comes York to claim his right,
And pluck the crown from feeble Henry's head;
King, bells, aloud; burn, bonfires, clear and bright.

To entertain great England's lawful king.
Ah! sancta majestas, who would not buy thee
dear!

Let them obey that know not how to rule;
This hand was made to handle nought but
gold.

I cannot give due action to my words,
Except a sword or accipre balance it:
A sceptre shall it have, have I a soul,
On which I'll toss the flower-de-luce of France.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

Whom have we here? Buckingham, to disturb
me!

The king hath sent him, sure: I must dissemble.

Buck. York, if thou meanest well, I greet thee well.

York. Humphrey of Buckingham, I accept thy greeting.

Art thou a messenger, or come of pleasure?

Buck. A messenger from Henry, our dread
liege.

To know the reason of these arms in peace;
Or why thou, being a subject as I am,
Against thy oath and true allegiance sworn, so
Should raise so great a power without his leave,
Or dare to bring thy force so near the court.

York. [Aside] Scarce can I speak, my choler is so great:

O, I could hew up rocks and fight with flint,

I am so angry at these object terms;

And now, like Ajax Telamonius,

On sheep or oxen could I spend my fury.

I am far better born than I am the king.

More like a king, more kingly in my thoughts:

But I must make fair weather yet a while,

Till Henry be more weak and I more strong.

Buckingham. I prithee, pardon me,

That I have given no answer all this while;

My mind was troubled with deep melancholy.

The cause why I have brought this army hither

Is to remove proud Somerset from the king,

Seditious to his grace and to the state.

Buck. That is too much presumption on thy
part:

But if thy arms be to no other end,

The king hath yielded unto thy demand:

The Duke of Somerset is in the Tower.

York. Upon thine honour, is he prisoner?

Buck. Upon mine honour, he is prisoner.

York. Then, Buckingham, I do dismiss my powers.

Soldiers, I thank you all; disperse yourselves;

Meet me to-morrow in Saint George's field.

You shall have pay and every thing you wish.

And let my sovereign, virtuous Henry,

Command my eldest son, nay, all my sons,

As pledges of my fealty and love;

I'll send them all as willing as I live:

Lands, goods, horse, armour, any thing I have,

Is his to use, so Somerset may die.

Buck. York, I commend this kind sub-
mission:

We twain will go into his highness' tent.

Enter KING and Attendants.

King. Buckingham, doth York intend no harm to us,

That thus he marcheth with thee arm in arm?

York. In all submission and humility

York doth present himself unto your highness.

King. Then what intends these forces thou dost bring?

York. To have the traitor Somerset from hence,
And fight against that monstrous rebel Cade,
Who since I heard to be discomfited.

Enter IDEN, with CADE's head.

Iden. If one so rude and of so mean condition

May pass into the presence of a king,
Io, I present your grace a traitor's head,
The head of Cade, whom I in combat slow.

King. The head of Cade! Great God, how just art Thou!

O, let me view his visage, being dead,
That living wrought me such exceeding trouble.
Tell me, my friend, art thou the man that slew him?

Iden. I was, an't like your majesty.

King. How art thou call'd? and what is thy degree?

Iden. Alexander Iden, that's my name;
A poor esquire of Kent, that loves his king.

Duck. So please it you, my lord, 'twere not amiss

He were created knight for his good service.

King. Iden, kneel down. [He kneels.] Rise up a knight.

We give thee for reward a thousand marks,
And will that thou henceforth attend on us.

Iden. May Iden live to merit such a bounty,
And never live but true unto his liege! [Rises.]

Enter QUEEN and SOMERSET.

King. See, Buckingham, Somerset comes with the queen:

Go, bid her hide him quickly from the duke.

Queen. For thousand Yorks he shall not hide his head,

But boldly stand and front him to his face.

York. How now! is Somerset at liberty?

Then, York, unloose thy long-imprison'd thoughts,

And let thy tongue be equal with thy heart.

Shall I endure the sight of Somerset?

False king! why hast thou broken faith with me,

Knowing how hardly I can brook abuse?

King did I call thee? no, thou art not king,

Not fit to govern and rule multitudes,

Which dar'st not, no, nor canst not rule a traitor.

That head of thine doth not become a crown;

Thy hand is made to grasp a palmer's staff,

And not to grasp an awful princely sceptre.

That gold must round engirt these brows of mine,

Whose smile and frown, like to Achilles' spear,

Is able with the change to kill and cure.

Here is a hand to hold a sceptre up

And with the same to act controlling laws.

Give place: by heaven, thou shalt rule no more

O'er him whom heaven created for thy ruler.

Som. O monstrous traitor! I arrest thee,

York.

O' capital treason 'gainst the king and crown:

O'ey, and dangerous traitor! kneel for grace.

York. Wouldst have me kneel? first let me ask of them.

If they can brook I bow a knee to man.

Sirrah, call in my sons to be my bail:

I know, ere they will have me go to ward,

They'll pawn their swords for my enfranchisement.

Queen. Call hither Clifford; bid him come

again,

To say if that the bastard boys of York

Shall be the surer for their traitor father.

York. O blood-bespotted Neapolitan,

Outcast of Naples, England's bloody scourge:

The sons of York, thy betters in their birth,

Shall be their father's bail; and hark to those

That for my surety will refuse the boys!

Enter EDWARD and RICHARD.

See where they come: I'll warrant they'll make it good.

Enter old CLIFFORD and his Son.

Queen. And here comes Clifford to deny their bail.

Cliff. Health and all happiness to my lord!

the king!

York. I thank thee, Clifford: say, what news with thee?

Say, do not fright us with an angry look;

We are thy sovereign, Clifford, kneel again;

For thy mistaking so, we pardon thee.

Cliff. This is my king, York, I do not mistake;

But thou mistakest me much to think I do:

To beham with him! is the man grown mad!

King. Ay, Clifford; a bedlam and ambitious humour

Makes him oppose himself against his king.

Cliff. He is a traitor; let him to the Tower,

And chop away that factious pate of his.

Queen. He is arrested, but will not obey;

His sons, he says, shall give their words for

him.

York. Will you not, sons?

Edw. Ay, noble father, if our words will serve.

Rich. And if words will not, then our weapons shall.

Cliff. Why, what a brood of traitors have we here!

York. Look in a glass, and call thy image

so:

I am thy king, and thou a false-heart traitor.

Call hither to the stake my two brave bears,

That with the very shaking of their chains

They may astonish these fell-lurking curs:

Bid Salisbury and Warwick come to me.

Enter the EARLS OF WARWICK and SALISBURY.

Cliff. Are these thy bears? we'll bait thy bears to death.

And manacle the bear-ward in their chains.

If thou dar'st bring them to the baiting place.

Rich. O, have I seen a hot o'erweening cur

Run back and bite, because he was witheld?

Who, I

Hath e-

And sue

If you oppose yourselves to match Lord Warwick.

Clif. Hence, heap of wrath, foal indigested lump,

As crooked in thy manners as thy shape!

York. Nay, we shall heat you thoroughly anon.

Clif. Take heed, lest by your heat you burn yourselves.

King. Why, Warwick, hath thy knee forgot to bow!

Old Salisbury, shame to thy silver hair,
Thou mad misleader of thy brain-sick son!
What, wilt thou on thy death-bed play the ruffian,

And seek for sorrow with thy spectacles?
O, where is faith? O, where is loyalty?

If it be banish'd from the frosty head,
Where shall it find a harbour in the earth?

Wilt thou go dig a grave to find out war,
And shame thine honourable age with blood?

Why art thou old, and want'st experience? 171
Or wherefore dost abuse it, if thou hast it?

For shame! in duty bend thy knee to me
That bows unto the grave with mickle age.

Sal. My lord, I have consider'd with myself
The title of this most renowned duke;

And in my conscience do repute his grace
The rightful heir to England's royal seat.

King. Hast thou not sworn allegiance unto me!

Sal. I have. 180

King. Canst thou dispense with heaven for such an oath?

Sal. It is great sin to swear unto a sin,
But greater sin to keep a sinful oath.

Who can be bound by any solemn vow
To do a murderous deed, to rob a man,

To force a spotless virgin's chastity,
To reave the orphan of his patrimony,

To wring the widow from her custom'd right,
And have no other reason for this wrong

But that he was bound by a solemn oath? 190

Queen. A subtle traitor needs no sophister.

King. Call Buckingham, and bid him arm himself.

York. Call Buckingham, and all the friends thou hast, am resolved for death or dignity.

Clif. The first I warrant thee, if dreams prove true.

War. You were best to go to bed and dream again.

To keep thee from the tempest of the field.

Clif. I am resolved to bear a greater storm
Than any thou canst conjure up to-day;

And that I'll write upon thy burgonet, 200
Might I but know thee by thy household badge.

War. Now, by my father's badge, old Nevil's crest,

The rampant bear chain'd to the ragged staff,
This day I'll wear aloft my burgonet,

As on a mountain top the cedar shows
That keeps his leaves in spite of any storm,

Even to affright thee with the view thereof.

Clif. And from thy burgonet I'll read thy bear

And tread it under foot with all contempt,

Despite the bear-ward that protects the bear. 210

Y. Clif. And so to arms, victorious father,
To quell the rebels and their complices.

Rich. Fie! charity, for shame! speak not in spite.

For you shall sup with Jesu Christ to-night.

Y. Clif. Foul stigmatic, that's more than thou canst tell.

Rich. If not in heaven, you'll surely sup in hell. [Exeunt severally.]

SCENE II. Saint Alban's.

Alarums to the battle. Enter WARWICK.

War. Clifford of Cumberland, 'tis Warwick calls:

And if thou dost not hide thee from the bear,
Now, when the angry trumpet sounds alarm

And dead men's cries do fill the empty air,
Clifford, I say, come forth and fight with me:

Proud northern lord, Clifford of Cumberland,
Warwick is hoarse with calling thee to arms.

Enter YORK.

How now, my noble lord! what, all afoot?

York. The deadly-handed Clifford slew my steed.

But match to match I have encounter'd him so
And made a prey for carrion kites and crows

Even of the bonny beast he loved so well.

Enter old CLIFFORD.

War. Of one or both of us the time is come.

York. Hold, Warwick, seek thee out some other chase.

For I myself must hunt this deer to death.

War. Then, nobly, York; 'tis for a crown thou fight'st.

As I intend, Clifford, to thrive to-day,
It grieves my soul to leave thee unarm'd. [Exit.]

Clif. What seest thou in me, York? why dost thou pause?

York. With thy brave bearing should I be in love.

But that thou art so fast mine enemy.

Clif. Nor should thy prowess want praise and esteem.

But that 'tis shown ignobly and in treason.

York. So let it help me now against thy sword.

As I in justice and true right express it.

Clif. My soul and body on the action both!

York. A dreadful lay! Address thee instantly. [They fight, and Clifford falls.]

Clif. I am consuming in curves. [Clif.]

York. Thus war hath given thee power to see thou art still.

Peace with his soul, heaven, if it be thy will to so.

[Exit.]

Enter young CLIFFORD.

Y. Clif. Shame and confusion! all is lost the rout;

Four frames disorder, and disorder wounds
Where it should guard. O war, thou son of hell,

Whom angry heavens do make thy minister,

Throw in the frozen bosoms of our part
Hot souls of vengeance! Let no soldier fly.
He that is truly dedicate to war
Hath no self-love, nor he that loves himself
Hath not essentially but by circumstance
The name of valour. [Seeing his dead father]

O, let the vile world end.
And the premised flames of the last day
Knit earth and heaven together!
Now let the general trumpet blow his blast,
Particularities and petty sounds
To cease! Wast thou ordain'd, dear father,
To lose thy youth in peace, and to achieve
The silver livery of advised age,
And, in thy reverence and thy chair-days, thus
To die in ruffian battle! Even at this sight
My heart is turn'd to stone: and while 'tis
mine,
It shall be stony. York not our old men
spares;

No more will I their babes: tears virginal
Shall be to me even as the dew to fire,
And beauty that the tyrant oft reclaims
Shall to my flaming wrath be oil and flax.
Henceforth I will not have to do with pity:
Meet I an infant of the house of York,
Into as many gobbets will I cut it
As wild Medea young Abayrus did:
In cruelty will I seek out my fame.
Come, thou new ruin of old Clifford's house:
As did Æneas old Anchises bear,
So bear I thee upon my manly shoulders;
But then Æneas bare a living load,
Nothing so heavy as these woes of mine.
[Exit, bearing off his father.]

Enter RICHARD and SOMERSET to fight.
SOMERSET is killed.

Rich. So, lie thou there;
For underneath an alehouse' paltry sign,
The Castle in Saint Alban's, Somerset
Hath made the wizard famous in his death.
Sword, hold thy temper; heart, be wrathful
still:
Priests pray for enemies, but princes kill. [Exit.]

Fight; excursions. Enter KING, QUEEN, and others.

Queen. Away, my lord! you are slow; for shame, away!

King. Can we outrun the heavens! good
Margaret, stay.

Queen. What are you made of! you'll nor fight nor fly:

Now is it manhood, wisdom and defence,
To give the enemy way, and to secure us
By what we can, which can no more but fly.

[Alarum afar off.]
If you be taken, we then should see the bottom
Of all our fortunes: but if we haply escape,
As well we may, if not through your neglect, so
We shall to London get, where you are loved

And where this breach now in our fortunes
made
May readily be stopp'd.

Re-enter young CLIFFORD.

Y. Cliff. But that my heart's on future
mischiefs set,
I would speak blasphemy ere hid you fly:
But fly you must; uncurable discontent
Reigns in the hearts of all our present parts.
Away, for your relief! and we will live
To see their day and them our fortune give:
Away, my lord, away! [Exit.]

SCENE III. Fields near St Alban's.

Alarum. Retreat. Enter YORK, RICHARD, WARWICK, and Soldiers, with drum and colours.

York. Of Salisbury, who can report of him,
That winter lion, who in rage forgets
Aged contusions and all brush of time,
And, like a gallant in the brow of youth,
Repairs him with occasion! This happy day
Is not itself, nor have we won one foot,
If Salisbury be lost.

Rich. My noble father,
Three times to-day I help him to his horse,
Three times beatrid him; thrice I led him off,
Persuaded him from any further act:
But still, where danger was, still there I met
him;
And like rich hangings in a homely house,
So was his will in his old feeble body.
But, noble as he is, look where he comes.

Enter SALISBURY.

Sal. Now, by my sword, well hast thou fought to-day;

By the mass, so did we all. I thank you,
Richard:

God knows how long it is I have to live;
And it hath pleased him that three times
to-day

You have defended me from imminent death.
Well, lords, we have not got that which we
have:

'Tis not enough our foes are this time fled,
Being opposites of such repairing nature.

York. I know our safety is to follow them;
For, as I hear, the king is fled to London,
To call a present court of parliament.

Let us pursue him ere the writs go forth.
What says Lord Warwick! shall we after them!

War. After them! nay, before them, if we can.

Now, by my faith, lords, 'twas a glorious day:
Saint Alban's battle won by famous York

Shall be eternized in all age to come.
Sound drums and trumpets, and to London all:

And more such days as these to us befall!
[Exit.]

SCENE: England and France.

ACT I.

SCENE I. London. The Parliament-house.

Alarm. Enter the DUKE OF YORK, EDWARD, RICHARD, NORFOLK, MONTAGUE, WARWICK, and Soldiers.

War. I wonder how the king escaped our hands.

York. While we pursued the horsemen of the north,

He slyly stole away and left his men;
Whereat the great Lord of Northumberland,
Whose warlike ear could never brook retreat,
Cheer'd up the drooping army; and himself,
Lord Clifford and Lord Stafford, all abreast, Charged our main battle's front, and breaking in
Were by the swords of common soldiers slain.

Edw. Lord Stafford's father, Duke of Buckingham,
Is either slain or wounded dangerously;
I cleft his heaver with a downright blow;
That this is true, father, behold his blood.
Mont. And, brother, here's the Earl of Wiltshire's blood,
Whom I encounter'd as the battles join'd.

Rich. Speak thou for me and tell them what I did.

[Throwing down the Duke of Somerset's head.
York. Richard hath best deserved of all my sons.

But is your grace dead, my Lord of Somerset?
Nor. Such hope have all the line of John of Gaunt!

Rich. Thus do I hope to shake King Henry's head.

War. And so do I. Victorious Prince of York,

Before I see thee seated in that throne
Which now the house of Lancaster usurps,
I vow by heaven these eyes shall never close.
This is the palace of the fearful king,
And this the regal seat: possess it, York;
For this is thine and not King Henry's heir.

York. Assist me, then, sweet Warwick, and I will;

For hither we have broken in by force.

Nor. We'll all assist you; he that shall die.

York. Thanks, gentle Norfolk: stay by me, my lords;

And, soldiers, stay and lodge by me this night.

War. And when the king comes, offer him no violence.

Unless he seek to thrust you out perforce.

York. The queen this day here holds her parliament.

But little thinks we shall be of her council:

By words or blows here let us win our right.

Rich. Arm'd as we are, let's stay within this house.

War. The bloody parliament shall this be call'd.

Unless Plantagenet, Duke of York, be king, 40

And bashful Henry deposed, whose cowardice Hath made us by-words to our enemies.

York. Then leave me not, my lords; be resolute;

I mean to take possession of my right.

War. Neither the king, nor he that loves him best,

The proudest he that holds up Lancaster,

Dares stir a wing, if Warwick shake his bells.

I'll plant Plantagenet, root him up who dares: Resolve thee, Richard; claim the English crown.

Flourish. Enter KING HENRY, CLIFFORD, NORTHUMBERLAND, WESTMORELAND, EXETER, and the rest.

K. Hen. My lords, look where the sturly rebel sits, 50

Even in the chair of state: belike he means, Back'd by the power of Warwick, that false peer,

To aspire unto the crown and reign as king.

Earl of Northumberland, he slew thy father, And thine, Lord Clifford; and you both have your revenge

On him, his sons, his favourites and his friends.

North. If I be not, heavens be revenged on me!

Clif. The hope thereof makes Clifford mourn in steel.

West. What shall we suffer this! let's pluck him down:

My heart for anger burns; I cannot brook it.

K. Hen. Be patient, gentle Earl of Westmoreland. 61

Clif. Patience is for postrooms, such as he: He durst not sit there, had your father lived.

My gracious lord, here in the parliament Let us assail the family of York.

North. Well hast thou spoken, cousin: be it so.

K. Hen. Ah, know you not the city favours them.

And they have troops of soldiers at their beck?

Rich. But when the duke is slain, they'll quickly fly.

K. Hen. But be the thought of this from Henry's heart, 70

Remember the members of the parliament-house! Consider of knaves, frowns, words and threats

Shall be the days that Henry means to use.

Remember that Duke of York, descend my throne, And kneel for grace and mercy at my feet;

York. I am thine.

Exe. For shame, come down: he made thee Duke of York.

York. 'Twas my inheritance, as the earldom was.

Exe. Thy father was a traitor to the crown.

War. Exeter, thou art a traitor to the crown. In following this usurping Henry, 81

Clif. Whom should he follow but his natural king?

War. True, Clifford; and that's Richard Duke of York.

K. Hen. And shall I stand, and thou sit in my throne?

York. It must and shall be so: content thyself.

War. Be Duke of Lancaster; let him be king.

West. He is both king and Duke of Lancaster;

And that the Lord of Westmoreland shall maintain.

War. And Warwick shall disprove it. You forget

That we are those which chased you, from the field

And slew your fathers, and with colours spread March'd through the city to the palace gates.

North. Yes, Warwick, I remember it to my grief:

And, by his soul, thou and thy house shall rue it.

West. Plantagenet, of thee and these thy sons,

Thy kinsmen and thy friends, I'll have more lives

Than drops of blood were in my father's veins.

Clif. Urge it no more; lest that, instead of words,

I send thee, Warwick, such a messenger As shall revenge his death before I stir. 90

War. Poor Clifford! how I scorn his worthless threats!

York. Will you we show our title to the crown?

If not, our swords shall plead it in the field.

K. Hen. What title hast thou, traitor, to the crown?

Thy father was, as thou art, Duke of York;

Thy grandfather, Roger Mortimer, Earl of March:

I am the son of Henry the Fifth, Who made the Dauphin and the French to stoop

And seized upon their towns and provinces.

War. Talk not of France, with thou hast lost it all. 110

K. Hen. The kind protector lost it, and not I:

When I was crown'd I was but nine

old. Rich. You are old enough now, and yet methinks, you lose.

Father, tear the crown from this usurper's head.

Edw. Sweet father, do so; set it on your head.

Mont. Good brother, no: thou lovest And honourst arms.

Let's fight it out and not stand reviling thus.

Rich. Sound drums and trumpets, and the king will fly.

York. Sons, peace!

K. Hen. Peace, thou! and give King Henry leave to speak.

War. Plantagenet shall speak first: hear him, lords;

And be you silent and attentive too,
For he that interrupts him shall not live.

K. Hen. Think'st thou that I will leave my kingly throne,

Wherein my grandsire and my father sat?

No: first shall war unpeople this my realm;

Ay, and their colours, often borne in France,
And now in England to our hearts great

sorrow,

Shall be my winding-sheet. Why faint you, lords?

My title's good, and better far than his.

War. Prove it, Henry, and thou shalt be king.

K. Hen. Henry the Fourth by conquest got the crown.

York. 'Twas by rebellion against his king.

K. Hen. [Aside] I know not what to say;
my title's weak.—

Tell me, may not a king adopt an heir?

York. What then?

K. Hen. An if he may, then am I lawful king;

For Richard, in the view of many lords,
Design'd the crown to Henry the Fourth,

Whose heir my father was, and I am his.

York. He rose against him, being his sovereign,

And made him to resign his crown perforce.

War. Suppose, my lords, he did it unconstrain'd.

Think you 'twere prejudicial to his crown?

Ecc. No; for he could not so resign his crown.

But that the next heir should succeed and reign.

K. Hen. Art thou against us, Duke of Exeter?

Ecc. His is the right, and therefore pardon me.

York. Why whisper you, my lords, and answer not?

Ecc. My conscience tells me he is lawful king.

K. Hen. [Aside] All will revolt from me, and turn to him.

North. Plantagenet, for all the claim thou lay'st, think not that Henry shall be so deposed.

War. Deposed he shall be, in despite of all.

North. Thou art deceived: 'tis not thy southern power,

Of Essex, Norfolk, Suffolk, nor of Kent,
Which makes thee thus presumptuous and

proud,

'an set the duke up in despite of me.

Clif. King Henry, be thy title right or wrong,

ord Clifford vows to fight in thy defence: 160
I'll that ground gape and swallow me alive,

ere I shall kneel to him that slew my father!

K. Hen. O Clifford, how thy words revive my heart!

York. Henry of Lancaster, resign thy crown.

What matter you, or what conspire you, lords?

War. Do right unto this princely Duke of York,

Or I will fill the house with armed men,
And over the chair of state, where now he sits,

Write up his title with usurping blood.

[He stamps with his foot, and the Soldiers show themselves.

K. Hen. My Lord of Warwick, hear me but one word:

Let me for this my life-time reign as king.

York. Confirm the crown to me and to mine heirs,

And thou shalt reign in quiet while thou livest.

King. I am content: Richard Plantagenet, Enjoy the kingdom after my decease.

Clif. What wrong is this unto the prince your son?

War. What good is this to England and himself?

West. Base, fearful and despairing Henry!

Clif. How hast thou injured both thyself and us!

West. I cannot stay to hear these articles.

North. Nor I.

Clif. Come, cousin, let us tell the queen these news.

West. Farewell, faint-hearted and degenerate king,

In whose cold blood no spark of honour bides.

North. Be thou a prey unto the house of York,

And die in hands for this unmanly deed!

Clif. In dreadful war may'st thou be overcome,
Or live in peace abandon'd and despis'd!

[Exeunt North, Clif., and West.

War. Turn this way, Henry, and regard them not.

Ecc. They seek revenge and therefore will not yield.

K. Hen. Ah, Exeter!

War. Why should you sigh, my lord?

K. Hen. Not for myself, Lord Warwick, but my son,

Whom I unnaturally shall disinher't.

But be it as it may: I here entail
The crown to thee and to thine heirs for ever;

Conditionally, that here thou take an oath
To cease this civil war, and, whilst I live,

To honour me as thy king and sovereign,
And neither by treason nor hostility

To seek to put me down and reign thyself.

York. This oath I willingly take and will perform.

War. Long live King Henry! Plantagenet, embrace him.

K. Hen. And long live thou and thine thy forward sons!

York. Now York and Lancaster are reconcil'd.

Ecc. Accus'd be he that seeks to make them foes!

[Sennet. Here they come again.

York. Farewell, my gracious lord; I'll to my camp.

War. And I'll keep London with my soldiers.

Nor. And I to Norfolk with my followers.

Mont. And I unto the sea from whence I came.

[Exeunt York and his Sons, Warwick, Norfolk, Montague, their Soldiers, and Attendants.]

K. Hen. And I, with grief and sorrow, to the court. 210

Enter QUEEN MARGARET and the PRINCE OF WALES.

Exc. Here comes the queen, whose looks bewray her anger:

I'll steal away.

K. Hen. Exeter, so will I.

Q. Mar. Nay, go not from me; I will follow thee.

K. Hen. Be patient, gentle queen, and I will stay.

Q. Mar. Who can be patient in such extremes!

Ah, wretched man! would I had died a maid, And never seen thee, never borne thee son, Seeing thou hast proved so unnatural a father! Hath he deserved to lose his birthright thus? Hadst thou but loved him half so well as I, 220 Or felt that pain which I did for him once, Or nourish'd him as I did with my blood, Thou wouldst have left thy dearest heart-blood there.

Rather than have made that savage duke thine heir

And disinherited thine only son.

Prince. Father, you cannot disinherit me: If you be king, why should not I succeed?

K. Hen. Pardon me, Margaret; pardon me, sweet son:

The Earl of Warwick and the duke enforced me.

Q. Mar. Enforced thee! art thou king, and wilt be forced? 230

I shame to hear thee speak. Ah, timorous wretch!

Thou hast undone thyself, thy son and me; And given unto the house of York such head As thou shalt reign but by their sufferance. To entail him and his heirs unto the crown, What is it, but to make thy sepulchre And creep into it far before thy time?

Warwick is chancellor and the lord of Calais; Stern Falconbridge commands the narrow seas; The duke is made protector of the realm; 240 And yet shalt thou be safe! such safety finds The trembling lamb environed with wolves. Had I been there, which am a silly woman, The soldiers should have torn'd me on their pikes

Before I would have granted to that act.

But thou prefer'st thy life before thine honour:

And seeing thou dost, I here divorce myself Both from thy table, Henry, and thy bed,

Until that act of parliament be repeal'd Wherby my son is disinherited. 250

The northern lords that have sworn thy colours

Will follow mine, if once they see them spread;

And spread they shall be, to thy foul disgrace And utter ruin of the house of York.

Thus do I leave thee. Come, son, let's away;

Our army is ready; come, we'll after them.

K. Hen. Stay, gentle Margaret, and hear me speak.

Q. Mar. Thou hast spoke too much already: get thee gone.

K. Hen. Gentle son Edward, thou wilt stay with me!

Q. Mar. Ay, to be murder'd by his enemies. Prince. When I return with victory from the field. 260

I'll see your grace: till then I'll follow her.

Q. Mar. Come, son, away; we may not linger thus.

[Exeunt Queen Margaret and the Prince.]

K. Hen. Poor queen! how love to me and to her son

Hath made her break out into terms of rage! Revenged may she be on that hateful duke,

Whose haughty spirit, winged with desire, Will cost my crown, and like an empty eagle

Tire on the flesh of me and of my son! The loss of those three lords torments my heart: 270

I'll write unto them and entreat them fair. Come, cousin, you shall be the messenger.

Exc. And I, I hope, shall reconcile them all. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Sandal Castle.

Enter RICHARD, EDWARD, and MONTAGUE.

Rich. Brother, though I be youngest, give me leave.

Edw. No, I can better play the orator.

Mont. But I have reasons strong and forcible.

Enter the DUKE OF YORK.

York. Why, how now, sons and brother! at a strife!

What is your quarrel? how began it first?

Edw. No quarrel, but a slight contention.

York. About what?

Rich. About that which concerns your grace and us;

The crown of England, father, which is yours.

York. Mine, boy! not till King Henry be dead. 280

Rich. Your right depends not on his life or death.

Edw. Now you are heir, therefore enjoy it now:

By giving the house of Lancaster leave to breathe,

It will outrun you, father, in the end.

York. I took an oath that he should quietly reign.

Edw. But for a kingdom any oath may be broken:

I would break a thousand oaths to reign one year.

Rich. No; God forbid your grace should be forewarn.

York. I shall be, if I claim by open war.

Rich. I'll prove the contrary, if you'll hear me speak. 290

York. Thou canst not, son; it is impossible.

Rich. An oath is of no moment, being not took

Before a true and lawful magistrate,
That hath authority over him that swears:
Henry had none, but did usurp the place;
Then, seeing 'twas he that made you to depose,
Your oath, my lord, is vain and frivolous.
Therefore, to arms! And, father, do but think
How sweet a thing it is to wear a crown;
Within whose circuit is Elysium 30
And all that poets feign of bliss and joy.
Why do we linger thus? I cannot rest
Until the white rose that I wear be dyed
Even in the lukewarm blood of Henry's heart.
York. Richard, enough; I will be king, or
die.

Brother, thou shalt to London presently,
And whet on Warwick to this enterprise.
Thou, Richard, shalt to the Duke of Norfolk,
And tell him privily of our intent.
You, Edward, shall unto my Lord Cobham, 40
With whom the Kentishmen will willingly rise:
In them I trust; for they are soldiers,
Witty, courteous, liberal, full of spirit.
While you are thus employ'd, what resteth
more.

But that I seek occasion how to rise,
And yet the king not privy to my drift,
Nor any of the house of Lancaster!

Enter a Messenger.

But, stay: what news? Why comest thou in such post?

Mess. The queen with all the northern earls and lords

Intend here to besiege you in your castle: 50
She is hard by with twenty thousand men;
And therefore fortify your hold, my lord.

York. Ay, with my sword. What! think'st thou that we fear them?

Edward and Richard, you shall stay with me;
My brother Montague shall post to London:
Let noble Warwick, Cobham, and the rest,
Whom we have left protectors of the king,
With powerful policy strengthen themselves,
And trust not simple Henry nor his oaths.

Mont. Brother, I go; I'll win them, fear it
not: 60

And thus most humbly I do take my leave.
[Exit.]

Enter SIR JOHN MORTIMER and SIR HUGH MORTIMER.

York. Sir John and Sir Hugh Mortimer, mine uncles,

You are come to Sandal in a happy hour;
The army of the queen mean to besiege us.

Sir John. She shall not need; we'll meet her in the field.

York. What, with five thousand men?

Rich. Ay, with five hundred, father, for a need:

A woman's general; what should we fear?
[A march afar off.]

Edw. I hear their drums: let's set our men in order,

and issue forth and bid them battle straight.

York. Five men to twenty! though the odds be great, 71

I doubt not, uncle, of our victory.

Many a battle have I won in France,
When as the enemy hath been ten to one:
Why should I not now have the like success?
[Alarum. Excunt.]

SCENE III. Field of battle betwix Sandal Castle and Wakefield.

Alarums. Enter RUTLAND and his Tutor.

Rut. Ah, whither shall I fly to 'scape their hands?

Ah, tutor, look where bloody Clifford comes!

Enter CLIFFORD and Soldiers.

Clif. Chaplain, away! thy priesthood saves thy life.

As for the brat of this accursed duke,
Whose father slew my father, he shall die.

Tut. And I, my lord, will bear him company.

Clif. Soldiers, away with him!

Tut. Ah, Clifford, murder not this innocent
child,

Lest thou be hated both of God and man!
[Exit, dragged off by Soldiers.]

Clif. How now! is he dead already? or is it fear 20

That makes him close his eyes? I'll open
them.

Rut. So looks the pent-up lion o'er the wretch

That trembles under his devouring paws;
And so he walks, insulting o'er his prey,

And so he comes, to rend his limbs asunder.
Ah, gentle Clifford, kill me with thy sword.

And not with such a cruel threatening look.
Sweet Clifford, hear me speak before I die.

I am too mean a subject for thy wrath:
Be thou revenged on men, and let me live. 30

Clif. In vain thou speak'st, poor boy; my father's blood

Hath stopp'd the passage where thy words should enter.

Rut. Then let my father's blood open it
again:

He is a man, and, Clifford, cope with him.
Clif. Had I thy brethren here, their lives 40

and thine
Were not revenge sufficient for me;

No, if I digg'd up thy forefathers' graves
And hung their rotten coffins up in chains,

It could not slake mine ire, nor ease my heart.
The sight of any of the house of York 50

Is as a fury to torment my soul;
And till I root out their accursed line

And leave not one alive, I live in hell.
Therefore— [Lifting his hand.]

Rut. O, let me pray before I take my death!
To thee I pray; sweet Clifford, pity me!

Clif. Such pity as my rapier's point affords.
Rut. I never did thee harm: why wilt thou 60

slay me?
Clif. Thy father hath.

Rut. But 'twas ere I was born.
Thou hast one son; for his sake pity me. 70

Lest in revenge thereof, altho' God is just,
He be as miserably slain as I.

Ah, let me live in prison all my days;
And w—

THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI

[ACT I

Then let me die, for now thou hast no cause.

Clif. No cause!

Thy father slew my father; therefore, die.

But. Di faciant laudis summa sit ista tues!
[Stabs him.
[Dies.

Clif. Plantagenet! I come, Plantagenet!
And this thy son's blood cleaving to my blade
Shall rust upon my weapon, till thy blood,
Congeal'd with this, do make me wipe off both.
[Exit.

SCENE IV. Another part of the field.

Alarum. Enter RICHARD, Duke of York.

York. The army of the queen hath got the field:

My uncles both are slain in rescuing me;
And all my followers to the eager foe
Turn back and fly, like ships before the wind
Or lambs pursued by hunger-starved wolves.
My sons, God knows what hath bechanced them:

But this I know, they have demean'd themselves

Like men born to renown by life or death.
Three times did Richard make a lane to me,
And thrice cried 'Courage, father! fight it out!'

And full as oft came Edward to my side,
With purple falchion, painted to the hilt
In blood of those that had encounter'd him:
And when the hardest warriors did retire,
Richard cried 'Charge!' and gave no foot of ground!

And cried 'A crown, or else a glorious tomb!
A sceptre, or an earthly sepulchre!'

With this, we charged again: but, out, alas!
We bodged again; as I have seen a swan
With bootless labour swim against the tide
And spend her strength with over-matching waves.
[A short alarum within.

Ah, hark! the fatal followers do pursue;
And I am faint and cannot fly their fury:
And were I strong, I would not shun their fury:

The sands are number'd that make up my life;
Here must I stay, and here my life must end.

Enter QUEEN MARGARET, CLIFFORD, NORTHUMBERLAND, the young Prince, and Soldiers.
Come, bloody Clifford, rough Northumberland,
I dare your quenchless fury to more rage:
I am your butt, and I abide your shot.

North. Yield to our mercy, proud Plantagenet.

Clif. As, to such mercy as his ruthless arm,
With downright payment, shew'd unto my father.

Now Fleethon hath tumbled from his car,
And made an evening at the noontide prick.

York. My ashes, as the phoenix, may bring forth

A bird that will revenge upon you all:
And in that hope I throw mine eyes to heaven,
—sing whatever you can afflict me with,
—come you not! what! multitudes, and

Clif. So cowards fight when they can fly no further;

So doves do peck the falcon's piercing talons;
So desperate thieves, all hopeless of their lives,
Breathe out invectives against the officers.

York. O Clifford, but bethink thee once again,

And in thy thought o'er-run my former time;
And, if thou canst for blushing, view this face,
And bite thy tongue, that slander'd him with cowardice.

Whose frown hath made thee faint and fly ere this!

Clif. I will not bandy with thee word for word,

But buckle with thee blows, twice two for one.

Q. Mar. Hold, valiant Clifford! for a thousand causes

I would prolong awhile the traitor's life.

Wrath makes him deaf: speak thou, Northumberland.

North. Hold, Clifford! do not honour him so much

To prick thy finger, though to wound his heart
What valour were it, when a cur doth grin,
For one to thrust his hand between his teeth,
When he might spurn him with his foot away:
It is war's prize to take all vantages;

And ten to one is no impeachment of valour.
[They lay hands on York, who struggles.

Clif. Ay, ay, so strives the woodcock with the gin.

North. So doth the cony struggle in the net.

York. So triumph thieves upon their conquer'd booty;

So true men yield, with robbers so o'ermatch'd.

North. What would your grace have done unto him now?

Q. Mar. Brave warriors, Clifford and Northumberland,

Come, make him stand upon this molehill here,
That raught at mountains with outstretched arms,

Yet parted but the shadow with his hand,
What! was it you that would be England's king?

Was't you that revell'd in our parliament,
And made a preachment of your high descent!

Where are your mess of sons to back you now!
The wanton Edward, and the lusty George?

And where's that valiant crook-back prelate,
Dicky your boy, that with his grumbling voice

Was wont to cheer his dail in matins?
Or, with the rest, where is your darling Rutland?

Look, York: I stain'd this napkin with the blood

That valiant Clifford, with his rapier's point, so

Made issue from the bosom of the boy:
And if thine eyes can water for his death,

I give thee this to dry thy cheeks withal.
Alas, poor York! but that I hate thee deadly,

I should lament thy miserable state.
I prithee, grieve, to make me merry, York.

What, hath thy fiery heart so parch'd thine entrails

That not a tear can fall for Rutland's death!

Why art thou patient, man! thou shouldst be mad;

And I, to make thee mad, do mock thee thus.
Stamp, rave, and fret, that I may sing and dance.

You wouldst be fce'd, I see, to make me sport:
York cannot speak, unless he wear a crown.
A crown for York! and, lords, bow low to him:
Hold you his hands, whilst I do set it on.

[Putting a paper crown on his head.
Ay, marry, sir, now looks he like a king!
Ay, this is he that took King Henry's chair,
And this is he was his adopted heir.
But how is it that great Plantagenet
s crown'd so soon, and broke his solemn oath?
s I bethink me, you should not be king: for ill our King Henry had shook hands with
death.

And will you pale your head in Henry's glory,
And rob his temples of the diadem,
Now in his life, against your holy oath?
O, 'tis a fault too too unpardonable!
O, with the crown; and, with the crown, his
head:
d, whilst we breathe, take time to do him
dead.

Clif. That is my office, for my father's sake.
Q. Mar. Nay, stay; let's hear the orisons
he makes.

York. She-wolf of France, but worse than wolves of France,
Those tongues more poisons than the adder's tooth!

How ill-becoming is it in thy sex
to triumph, like an Amazonian trull,
Upon their woes whom fortune captivates!
But that thy face is, visard-like, unchanging,
Made impudent with use of evil deeds,
would assay, proud queen, to make thee blush.
to tell thee whence thou camest, of whom derived,
Were shame enough to shame thee, wert thou not shameless.

My father bears the type of King of Naples,
Of both the Sicils and Jerusalem,
Yet not so wealthy as an English yeoman.
Lath that poor monarch taught thee to insult?
needs not, nor is boots thee not, proud queen,
unless the adage must be verified,
that beggars mounted run their horse to death.
his beauty that deth off make women proud:
but, (God be known, thy share thereof is small:
his virtue that doth make them most admired;
the contrary doth make thee wonder'd at: 131
his government that makes them soon divid;
he want thereof makes thee abominable:

My art as opposite to every good as the Antipodes are unto us,
as the south to the septentrion.
tiger's heart wrapt in a woman's hide!
How couldst thou drain the life-blood of the
child,

to bid the father wipe his eyes withal,
and yet be seen to bear a woman's face! 140
Women are soft, mild, pitiful and flexible;
thou stern, obdurate, flinty, rough, remorseless.
didst thou me rage? why, now thou hast thy wish:
couldst have me weep? why, now thou hast
thy will:

For raging wind blows up incessant showers,
And when the rage allays, the rain begins.
These tears are my sweet Rutland's obsequies:
And every drop cries vengeance for his death,
Against thee, fell Clifford, and thee, false French-
woman.

North. Beahrew me, but his passion moves me so

That hardly can I check my eyes from tears.
York. That face of his the hungry cannibals
Would not have touch'd, would not have stain'd with blood:

But you are more inhuman, more inexorable,
O, ten times more, than tigers of Hyrcania.
See, ruthless queen, a hapless father's tears:
This cloth thou dip'dst in blood of my sweet
boy,

And I with tears do wash the blood away.
Keep thou the napkin, and go boast of this:
And if thou tell'st the heavy story right, 160
Upon my soul, the hearers will shed tears;
Yea even my foes will shed fast-falling tears,
And say 'Alas, it was a piteous deed!'

There, take the crown, and, with the crown,
my curse;

And in thy need such comfort come to thee
As now I reap at thy too cruel hand!
Hard-hearted Clifford, take me from the world:
My soul to heaven, my blood upon your heads!

North. Had he been slaughter-man to all my kin,

I should not for my life but weep with him, 170
To see how truly sorrow gripes his soul.

Q. Mar. What, weeping-ripe, my Lord Northumberland?

Think but upon the wrong he did us all,
And that will quickly dry thy melting tears.

Clif. Here's for my oath, here's for my father's death.

Q. Mar. And here's to right our gentle-hearted king.

York. Open Thy gate of mercy, gracious
God!

My soul flies through these wounds to seek out
Thea.

Q. Mar. Off with his head, and set it on York gates;

So York may overlook the town of York. 180
[Flourish. Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I. A plain near Mortimer's Cross in Herefordshire.

A march. Enter EDWARD, RICHARD, and their power.

Edw. I wonder how our princely father
'scaped,

Or whether he be 'scaped away or no.
From Clifford's and Northumberland's pursuits:

Had he been ta'en, we should have bound the new;

Had he been slain, we should have heard the news;

Or had he 'scaped, methinks we should have heard

The happy tidings of his good escape.

How fares my brother? why is he so sad?

Rich. I cannot joy, until I be resolved
Where our right valiant father is become.
I saw him in the battle range about;
And watch'd him how he singled Clifford forth.
Methought he bore him in the thickest troop
As doth a lion in a herd of neat;
Or as a bear, encompass'd round with dogs,
Who having pinch'd a few and made them cry,
The rest stand all aloof, and bark at him.
So fared our father with his enemies;
So fled his enemies my warlike father:
Methinks 'tis prize enough to be his son.
See how the morning opens her golden gates,
And takes her farewell of the glorious sun!
How well resembles it the prime of youth,
Trim'd like a younker prancing to his love!

Edw. Dazzle mine eyes, or do I see three suns?

Rich. Three glorious suns, each one a perfect
sun;

Not separated with the racking clouds,
But sever'd in a pale clear-shining sky.
See, see! they join, embrace, and seem to kiss,
As if they vow'd some league inviolable:
Now are they but one lamp, one light, one sun.
In this the heaven figures some event.

Edw. 'Tis wondrous strange, the like yet never heard of.

I think it cites us, brother, to the field,
That we, the sons of brave Plantagenet,
Each one already blazing by our meeds,
Should notwithstanding join our lights together
And over-shine the earth as this the world.
Whate'er it bodes, henceforward will I bear
Upon my target three fair-shining suns.

Rich. Nay, bear three daughters: by your leave I speak it,
You love the breeder better than the male.

Enter a Messenger.

But what art thou, whose heavy looks foretell
Some dreadful story hanging on thy tongue?

Mess. Ah, one that was a woful looker-on
When as the noble Duke of York was slain,
Your princely father and my loving lord!

Edw. O, speak no more, for I have heard too
much.

Rich. Say how he died, for I will hear it all.

Mess. Environed he was with many foes,
And stood against them, as the hope of Troy
Against the Greeks that would have enter'd
Troy.

But Hercules himself must yield to odds;
And many strokes, though with a little axe,
Hew down and fell the hardest-limb'd oak.
By many hands your father was subdued;
But only slaughter'd by the ireful arm
Of unrelenting Clifford and the queen.
Who crown'd the gracious duke in high despite,
Laugh'd in his face; and when with grief he
wept,

The ruthless queen gave him to dry his cheeks
In skin steeped in the harmless blood
Of sweet young Rutland, by rough Clifford
slain:

And many scorn, many foul taunts,
And on his head, and on the gates of York

They set the same; and there it doth remain,
The saddest spectacle that e'er I view'd.

Edw. Sweet Duke of York, our prop to lean upon,

Now thou art gone, we have no staff, no stay,
O Clifford, boisterous Clifford! thou hast slain
The flower of Europe for his chivalry,
And treacherously hast thou vanquish'd him,
For hand to hand he would have vanquish'd
thee.

Now my soul's palace is become a Ah, would she break from hence, that this body

Might in the ground be closed up in rest!
For never henceforth shall I joy again,
Never, O never, shall I see more joy!

Rich. I cannot weep; for all my body's moisture

Scarce serves to quench my furnace-burning
heart:

Nor can my tongue unload my heart's burthen;

For selfsame wind that I should speak withal
Is kindling coals that fires all my breast,
And burns me up with flames that tears
quench.

To weep is to make less the depth of grief:
Tears then for babes; blows and revenge for me!
Richard, I hear thy name; I'll vengeance thy
Or die renowned by attempting it.

Edw. His name that valiant duke hath
with thee;

His dukedom and his chair with me is left.
Rich. Nay, if thou be that princely eagle
bird,

Show thy descent by gazing 'gainst the sun:
For chair and dukedom, throne and kingdom
say;

Either that is thine, or else thou wert not his.

March. Enter WARWICK, MARQUESS OF MONTAGUE, and their army.

War. How now, fair lords! What fare's news abroad?

Rich. Great Lord of Warwick, if we recount

Our baleful news, and at each word's deliver
Stab poniards in our flesh till all were told,
The words would add more anguish than wounds.

O valiant lord, the Duke of York is slain!

Edw. O Warwick, Warwick! that Plantagenet,

Which held thee dear as his soul's part.

Is by the stern Lord Clifford done to death.

War. Ten days ago I drown'd these news
tears;

And now, to add more measure to your weal
I come to tell you things with then befall'n.

After the bloody fray at Wakefield fought Where your brave father breathed his gasps,

Tidings, as swiftly as the wind could run,
Were brought me of your loss and his depart.

I, then in London, keeper of the king,
Must'rd my soldiers, gather'd forces of
And very well appointed, as I thought,

h'd toward Saint Alban's to intercept the queen,
 aring the king in my behalf along;
 or by my scouts I was advertised hat she was coming with a full intent
 o dash our late decree in parliament ouching King Henry's oath and your succession.

short tale to make, we at Saint Alban's met, ur battles join'd, and both sides fiercely
 fought:

ut whether 'twas the coldness of the king,
 ho look'd full gently on his warlike queen,
 hat robb'd my soldiers of their heated spleen;
 r whether 'twas report of her success;

r more than common fear of Clifford's rigour,
 Who thunders to his captives blood and death,
 cannot judge: but, to conclude with truth,
 Their weapons like to lightning came and went;

Our soldiers,' like the night-owl's lazy flight,
 r like an idle thresher with a flail,
 Fell gently down, as if they struck their friends.

I cheer'd them up with justice of our cause,
 With promise of high pay and great rewards:
 But all in vain; they had no heart to fight,

o we in them no hope to win the day;
 o that we fled; the king unto the queen;
 ord George your brother, Norfolk and myself,

in haste, post-haste, are come to join with you;
 or in the marches here we heard you were,
 taking another head to fight again.

Edw. Where is the Duke of Norfolk, gentle
 Warwick?

and when came George from Burgundy to England?

War. Some six miles off the duke is with the soldiers;

and for your brother, he was lately sent un your kind aunt, Duchess of Burgundy, ith aid of soldiers to this needful war.

Rich. 'Twas odds, belike, when valiant Warwick fled:

have I heard his praises in pursuit,
 ne'er till now his scandal of retire.

War. Nor now my scandal, Richard, dost thou hear;

x thou shalt know this strong right hand of mine

un pluck the diadem from faint Henry's head, nd wring the awful sceptre from his fist,
 ere he as famous and as bold in war

s he is famed for mildness, peace, and prayer.
Rich. I know it well, Lord Warwick; blame me not:

is love I bear thy glories makes me speak.
 ut in this troublous time what's to be done?
 hall we go throw away our coats of steel,

nd wrap our bodies in black mourning gowns,
 umbering our Avo-Maries with our beads?
 r shall we on the helmets of our foes

ell our devotion with revengeful arms?
 for the last, say ay, and to it, lords.

War. Why, therefore Warwick came to seek you out;

nd therefore comes my brother Montague.
 Mend me, lords. The proud insulting queen, ith Clifford and the taught Northumberland,
 nd of their feather many more proud birds,

Have wrought the easy-melting king like wax.

He swore consent to your succession,
 His oath enrolled in the parliament;

And now to London all the crew are gone,
 To frustrate both his oath and what beside
 May make against the house of Lancaster.

Their power, I think, is thirty thousand strong:
 Now, if the help of Norfolk and myself,
 With all the friends that thou, brave Earl of March,

Amongst the loving Welshmen canst procure,
 Will but amount to five and twenty thousand,
 Why, Vis! to London will we march amain,

And once again bestride our foaming steeds,
 And once again cry 'Charge upon our foes!'
 But never once again turn back and fly.

Rich. Ay, now methinks I hear great Warwick speak:

Ne'er may he live to see a sunshiny day,
 That cries 'Retire,' if Warwick bid him stay.

Edw. Lord Warwick, on thy shoulder will I lean;

And when thou fail'st—as God forbid the hour!—
 Must Edward fall, which peril heaven forsend!

War. No longer Earl of March, but Duke
 of York:

The next degree is England's royal throne;
 For King of England shalt thou be proclaim'd
 In every borough as we pass along:

And he that throws not up his cap for joy
 Shall for the fault make forfeit of his head.
 King Edward, valiant Richard, Montague,
 Stay we no longer, dreaming of renown,
 But sound the trumpets, and about our task.

Rich. Then, Clifford, were thy heart as hard
 as steel,
 As thou hast shown it flinty by thy deeds,
 I come to pierce it, or to give thee mine.

Edw. Then strike up drums: God and Saint George for us!

Enter a Messenger.

War. How now! what news?

Mess. The Duke of Norfolk sends you word
 by me,

The queen is coming with a puissant host;
 And craves your company for speedy counsel.

War. Why then it sorts, brave warriors,
 let's away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Before York.

Flourish. Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, the PRINCE OF WALES, CLIFFORD, and NORTHUMBERLAND, with drums and trumpets.

Q. Mar. Welcome, my lord, to this brave town of York.

Yonder's the head of that arch-enemy
 That sought to be encompass'd with your
 crown:

Doth not the object cheer your heart, my lord?
R. Hen. Ay, as the rocks cheer them that fear their wreck:

To see this sight, it irks my very soul.
 Withhold revenge, dear God! 'tis not my fault,
 Nor willingly have I infringed my vow.

Clif. My gracious liege, this too much lenity
And harmful pity must be laid aside.

To whom do lions cast their gentle looks?
Not to the beast that would usurp their den.
Whose hand is that the forest bear doth lick?
Not his that spoils her young before her face.
Who escapes the lurking serpent's mortal sting?
Not he that sets his foot upon her back.
The smallest worm will turn being trodden on,
And doves will peck in safeguard of their brood.

Ambitious York did level at thy crown,
Thou smiling while he knit his angry brows:
He, but a duke, would have his son a king,
And raise his issue, like a loving sire;
Thou, being a king, blest with a goodly son,
Didst yield consent to disinherit him,
Which argued thee a most unloving father.
Unreasonable creatures feed their young;
And though man's face be fearful to their eyes,
Yet, in protection of their tender ones,
Who hath not seen them, even with those wings
Which sometime they have used with fearful
flight,

Make war with him that climb'd unto their nest,
Offering their own lives in their young's defence?
For shame, my liege, make them your precedent!

Were it not pity that this goodly boy
Should lose his birthright by his father's fault,
And long hereafter say unto his child,
'What my great-grandfather and grandsire got
My careless father fondly gave away'?

Ah, what a shame were this! Look on the boy;
And let his manly face, which promiseth
Successful fortune, steel thy melting heart
To hold thine own and leave thine own with
him.

K. Hen. Full well hath Clifford play'd the orator,

Inferring arguments of mighty force.
But, Clifford, tell me, didst thou never hear
That things ill-got had ever had success?
And happy always was it for that son
Whose father for his hoarding went to hell?
I'll leave my son my virtuous deeds behind;
And would my father had left me no more!
For all the rest is held at such a rate
As brings a thousand-fold more care to keep
Than in possession any jot of pleasure.

Ah, cousin York! would thy best friends did
know

How it doth grieve me that thy head is here!

Q. Mar. My lord, cheer up your spirits: our foes are nigh,
And this soft courage makes your followers
faint.

You promised knighthood to our forward son:
Unsheathe the your sword, and dub him presently.
Edward, kneel down.

K. Hen. Edward Plantagenet, arise a knight;
And learn this lesson, draw thy sword in right.

Prince. My gracious father, by your kindly
leave,

I'll fight it as apparent to the crown,
And my sword shall guard me to the death.

Clif. Why, that is spoken like a tower
prince.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Royal commanders, be in readiness
For with a band of thirty thousand men
Comes Warwick, backing of the Duke of York
And in the towns, as they do march along,
Proclaims him king, and many fly to him:
Darraign your battle, for they are at hand.

Clif. I would your highness would depart
the field:
The queen hath best success when you are absent.

Q. Mar. Ay, good my lord, and leave us our fortune.

K. Hen. Why, that's my fortune too; th-fore I'll stay.

North. Be it with resolution then to fight.

Prince. My royal father, cheer these noble lords
And hearten those that fight in your defence:
Unsheathe your sword, good father; cry
George!

March. *Enter EDWARD, GEORGE, RICHARD
WARWICK, NORFOLK, MONTAGUE, and Soldiers.*

Edm. Now, perjured Henry! wilt thou for grace,

And set thy diadem upon my head:
Or hide the mortal fortune of the field?

Q. Mar. Go, rate thy minions, proud insuring boy!

Becomes it thee to be thus hold in terms
Before thy sovereign and thy lawful king?

Edm. I am his king, and he should bow his knee;

I was adopted heir by his consent:
Since when, his oath is broke; for, as I hear,

You, that are king, though he do wear the
crown,

Have caused him, by new act of parliament,
To blot out me, and put his own son in.

Clif. And reason too:

Who should succeed the father but the son?

Rich. Are you there, butcher! O, I cannot speak!

Clif. Ay, crook-back, here I stand to answer
thee,

Or any he the proudest of thy sort.

Rich. 'Twas you that kill'd young Ruth-was it not?

Clif. Ay, and old York, and yet not without cause.

Rich. For God's sake, lords, give signal the fight.

War. What say'st thou, Henry, wilt yield the crown?

Q. Mar. Why, how now, long-tongued
Warwick! dare you speak?

When you and I met at Saint Alban's last,
Your legs did better service than your hands.

War. Then 'twas my turn to fly, and not his thine.

Clif. You said so much before, and yet fled.

War. 'Twas not your valour, Clifford, that me thence.

North. No, nor your manhood that durst make you stay.

Rich. Northumberland, I hold thee reverently.

North. Speak off the parley; for scarce I can refrain the execution of my big-swoln heart.

Rich. Upon that Clifford, that cruel child-killer.

North. I slew thy father, call'st thou him a child?

Rich. Ay, like a dastard and a treacherous coward.

North. As thou didst kill our tender brother Rutland; but ere sunset I'll make thee curse the deed.

K. Hen. Have done with words, my lords, and hear me speak.

Q. Mar. Defy them then, or else hold close thy lips.

K. Hen. I prithee, give no limits to my tongue:

am a king, and privileged to speak.

Rich. My liege, the wound that bred this meeting here cannot be cured by words; therefore be still.

Rich. Then, executioner, unsheathe thy sword:

by him that made us all, I am resolved that Clifford's manhood lies upon his tongue.

Edw. Say, Henry, shall I have my right, or no?

North. A thousand men have broke their fasts to-day, that ne'er shall dine unless thou yield the crown.

War. If thou deny, their blood upon thy head;

for York in justice puts his armour on.

Prince. If that be right which Warwick says is right, ere is no wrong, but every thing is right.

Rich. Whoever got thee, there thy mother stands;

as well I wot, thou hast thy mother's tongue.

Q. Mar. But thou art neither like thy sire nor dam;

it like a foul mis-shapen stigmatic, mark'd by the destinies to be avoided, venom toads, or lizards' dreadful stings.

Rich. Iron of Naples hid with English gilt, whose father bears the title of a king,—

as if a channel should be call'd the sea,— hardest thou not, knowing whence thou art extrah't,

to let thy tongue detect thy base-born heart?

Edw. A wisp of straw were worth a thousand crowns.

to make this shameless callet know herself.

Queen of Greece was fairer far than thou, although thy husband may be Menelaus;

and ne'er was Agamemnon's brother wrong'd by that false woman, as this king by thee.

father revell'd in the heart of France, who tamed the king, and made the dauphin stoop;

and had he match'd according to his state, he might have kept that glory to this day; but when he took a beggar to his bed, and graced thy poor sire with his bridal-day, when then that sunshine brew'd a shower to him,

That wash'd his father's fortunes forth of France.

And heap'd sedition on his crown at home. For what hath broach'd this tumult but thy pride!

Hadst thou been meek, our title still had slept; And we, in pity of the gentle king,

Had slipp'd our claim until another age.

Geo. But when we saw our sunshine made thy spring,

And that thy summer bred us no increase, We set the axe to thy usurping root;

And though the edge hath something hit ourselves,

Yet, know thou, since we have begun to strike, We'll never leave till we have hewn thee down,

Or bathed thy growing with our heated bloods.

Edw. And, in this resolution, I defy thee; Not willing any longer conference,

Since thou deniest the gentle king to speak.

Sound trumpets! let our bloody colours wave! And either victory, or else a grave.

Q. Mar. Stay, Edward.

Edw. No, wrangling woman, we'll no longer stay:

These words will cost ten thousand lives this day.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. A field of battle between Towton and Saxton, in Yorkshire.

Alarum. Excursions. Enter WARWICK.

War. Forspent with toil, as runners with a race,

I lay me down a little while to breathe;

For strokes received, and many blows repaid, Have robb'd my strong-knit sinews of their strength.

And spite of spite needs must I rest awhile.

Enter EDWARD, running.

Edw. Smile, gentle heaven! or strike, ungentle death!

For this world frowns, and Edward's sun is clouded.

War. How now, my lord! what hap! what hope of good!

Enter GEORGE.

Geo. Our hap is loss, our hope but sad despair;

Our ranks are broke, and ruin follows us:

What counsel give you! whither shall we fly!

Edw. Bootless is flight, they follow us with wings;

And weak we are and cannot shun pursuit.

Enter RICHARD.

Rich. Ah, Warwick, why hast thou withdrawn thyself!

Thy brother's blood the thirsty earth hath drunk,

Broach'd with the steele point of Clifford's lance;

And in the very pangs of death he cried, Like to a dismal clangor heard from far,

Warwick, revenge! brother, revenge! So, underneath the belly of their steeds,

That stain'd their fetlocks in his smoking blood,
The noble gentleman gave up the ghost.

War. Then let the earth be drunken with our blood:

I'll kill my horse, because I will not fly.
Why stand we like soft-hearted women here,
Wailing our losses, whiles the foe doth rage;
And look upon, as if the tragedy
Were play'd in jest by counterfeiting actors!
Here on my knee I vow to God above,
I'll never pause again, never stand still, 30
Till either death hath closed these eyes of mine
Or fortune given me measure of revenge.

Edw. O Warwick, I do bend my knee with thine;

And in this vow do chain my soul to thine!
And, ere my knee rise from the earth's cold
face,

I throw my hands, mine eyes, my heart to thee,
Thou setter up and plucker down of kings,
Beseeching thee, if with thy will it stands
That to my foes this body must be prey,
Yet that thy brazen gates of heaven may ope,
And give sweet passage to my sinful soul! 41
Now, lords, take leave until we meet again,
Where'er it be, in heaven or in earth.

Rich. Brother, give me thy hand; and,
gentle Warwick,

Let me embrace thee in my weary arms:
I, that did never weep, now melt with woe
That winter should cut off our spring-time so.

War. Away, away! Once more, sweet lords,
farewell.

Geo. Yet let us all together to our troops,
And give them leave to fly that will not stay;
And call them pillars that will stand to us; 51
And, if we thrive, promise them such rewards
As victors wear at the Olympian games:
This may plant courage in their quailing breasts;
For yet is hope of life and victory.
Forslow no longer, make we hence again.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Another part of the field.

Excursions. Enter RICHARD and CLIFFORD.

Rich. Now, Clifford, I have singled thee
alone:

Suppose this arm is for the Duke of York,
And this for Rutland; both bound to revenge,
Wert thou environ'd with a brazen wall.

Clif. Now, Richard, I am with thee here
alone:

This is the hand that stabb'd thy father York;
And this the hand that slew thy brother
Rutland;

And here's the heart that triumphs in their
death

And cheers these hands that slew thy sire and
brother

To execute the like upon thyself; 20
And so, have at thee!

[A cry fight. Warwick comes; Clifford flies.]
Rich. Nay, Warwick, single out some other will hunt this wolf to death.

For

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Another part of the field.

Alarum. Enter KING HENRY VI alone.

King. This battle fares like to the morning's war,

When dying clouds contend with growing light,
What time the shepherd, blowing of his nails,
Can neither call it perfect day nor night.
Now ways it this way, like a mighty sea
Forced by the tide to combat with the wind;
Now ways it that way, like the selfsame
Forced to retire by fury of the wind;
Sometime the flood prevails, and then the wind;

Now one the better, then another best; 10
Both tugging to be victors, breast to breast,
Yet neither conqueror nor conquered:
So is the equal poise of this fell war.

Here on this molehill will I sit me down.
To whom God will, there be the victory!
For Margaret my queen, and Clifford too,
Have chid me from the battle; swearing both
They prosper best of all when I am thence.
Would I were dead! if God's good will were so;
For what is in this world but grief and woe! 20
O God! methinks it were a happy life,
To be no better than a homely swain;
To sit upon a hill, as I do now,

To carve out dials quaintly, point by point,
Thereby to see the minutes how they run,
How many make the hour full complete;
How many hours bring about the day;
How many days will finish up the year;
How many years a mortal man may live.
When this is known, then to divide the times:
So many hours must I tend my flock; 31
So many hours must I take my rest;
So many hours must I contemplate;
So many hours must I sport myself;
So many days my ewes have been with young;
So many weeks ere the poor fools will ean;
So many years ere I shall shear the fleece;
So minutes, hours, days, months, and years,
Pass'd over to the end they were created,
Would bring white hairs unto a quiet grave. 40

Ah, what a life were this! how sweet! how lovely!
Gives not the hawthorn-bush a sweeter shade
To shepherds looking on their silly sheep,
Than doth a rich embroider'd canopy
To kings that fear their subjects' treachery?
O, yes, it doth; a thousand-fold it doth.
And to conclude, the shepherd's homely curd,
His cold thin drink out of his leather bottle,
His wonted sleep under a fresh tree's shade,
All which secure and sweetly he enjoys,
Is far beyond a prince's delicacies,
His viands sparkling in a golden cup,
His body couched in a curious bed,
When care, mistrust, and treason waits on 50

Alarum. Enter a Son that has killed his father, dragging in the dead body.

Son. Ill blows the wind that profits
This man, whom hand to hand I
May be possessed with some store of crowns;
And I, that haply take them from him now,

say yet ere night yield both my life and them
 To some man else, as this dead man doth me. 60
 Who's this? O God! it is my father's face.
 Whom in this conflict I unware have kill'd.
) heavy times, begetting such events!
 From London by the king was I press'd forth;
 My father, being the Earl of Warwick's man,
 Came on the part of York, press'd by his master;
 And I, who at his hands received my life,
 Have by my hands of life bereaved him.
 Pardon me, God, I knew not what I did!
 And pardon, father, for I knew not thee! 70
 My tears shall wipe away these bloody marks;
 And no more words till they have flow'd their fill.

K. Hen. O piteous spectacle! O bloody
 times!
 Whiles lions war and battle for their dens,
 Poor harmless lambs abide their enmity.
 Weep, wretched man, I'll aid thee tear for tear;
 And let our hearts and eyes, like civil war,
 Be blind with tears, and break o'ercharged with
 grief.

Enter a Father that has killed his son, bringing in the body.

Fath. Thou that so stoutly hast resisted me,
 Give me thy gold, if thou hast any gold; 80
 For I have bought it with an hundred blows.
 But let me see: is this our foeman's face?
 Ah, no, no, no, it is mine only son!
 Ah, boy, if any life be left in thee,
 Throw up thine eye! see, see what showers
 arise,
 Blown with the windy tempest of my heart,
 Upon thy wounds, that kill mine eye and heart!
 Al pity, God, this miserable age!
 What stratagems, how fell, how butcherly,
 Erroneous, mutinous and unnatural, 90
 This deadly quarrel daily doth beget!
 O boy, thy father gave thee life too soon,
 And hath bereft thee of thy life too late!

K. Hen. Woe above woe! grief more than common grief!
 that my death would stay these ruthless
 deeds!
 Al pity, pity, gentle heaven, pity!
 Al red rose and the white are on his face,
 be fatal colours of our striving houses:
 he one his purple blood right well resembles;
 be other his pale cheeks, methinks, presenteth:
 either one rose, and let the other flourish; 101
 I you contend, a thousand lives must wither.

Son. How will my mother for a father's
 death

take on with me and ne'er be satisfied!

Fath. How will my wife for slaughter of my son

had seas of tears and ne'er be satisfied!

K. Hen. How will the country for these woful chances

think the king and not be satisfied!

Son. Was ever son so rued a father's death?

Fath. Was ever father so bemoan'd his son?

K. Hen. Was ever king so grieved for subjects' woe?

is your sorrow; mine ten times so much.

Son. I'll bear thee hence, where I may weep my fill.

Fath. These arms of mine shall be thy winding-sheet;

My heart, sweet boy, shall be thy sepulchre,
 For from my heart thine image ne'er shall go;
 My sighing breast shall be thy funeral bell;
 And so obsequious will thy father be,
 t Even for the loss of thee, having no more,
 As Priam was for all his valiant sons. 120
 I'll bear thee hence; and let them fight that
 will,

For I have murdered where I should not kill.
(Exit with the body.)

K. Hen. Sad-hearted men, much overgone with care,

Here sits a king more woful than you are.

Alarums: excursions. Enter QUEEN MARGA-RET, the PRINCE, and EXETER.

Prince. Fly, father, fly! for all your friends are fled,

And Warwick rages like a chafed bull:
 Away! for death doth hold us in pursuit.

Q. Mar. Mount you, my lord; towards Berwick post amain:

Edward and Richard, like a brace of greyhounds
 Having the fearful flying hare in sight, 130
 With fiery eyes sparkling for very wrath,

And bloody steel grasp'd in their ireful hands,
 Are at our backs; and therefore hence amain.

Ere. Away! for vengeance comes along with
 them:

Nay, stay not to expostulate, make speed;
 Or else come after: I'll away before.

K. Hen. Nay, take me with thee, good sweet
 Exeter:

Not that I fear to stay, but love to go
 Whither the queen intends. Forward; away!

(Exit.)

SCENE VI. Another part of the field.

A loud alarum. Enter CLIFFORD, wounded.

Clif. Here burns my candle out; ay, here it
 dies,

Which, whiles it lasted, gave King Henry light.
 O Lancaster, I fear thy overthrow

More than my body's parting with my soul!
 My love and fear giued many friends to thee;

And, now I fall, thy tough countenance melts.
 Impairing Henry, strengthening misproud

York,

The common people swarm like summer flies;
 And whither fly the gnats but to the sun?

And who shines now but Henry's enemies? 140
 (1) Phoebus, hadst thou never given consent
 That Phaethon should check thy fiery steeds,
 Thy burning car never had scorched the earth!

And, Henry, hadst thou sway'd as kings should
 do,

Or as thy father and his father did,
 Giving no ground unto the houses of York,

They never then had sprung like summer flies;
 I and ten thousand in this tickle realm

Had left no mourning widows for our death;
 And thou this day hadst kept thy chair in peace.

For what doth cheerish weeds but gentle air? as

And what makes robbers bold but too much lenity!

Bootless are plaints, and cureless are my wounds;

No way to fly, nor strength to hold out flight:

The foe is merciless, and will not pity;

For at their hands I have deserved no pity.

The air hath got into my deadly wounds,

And much effuse of blood doth make me faint.

Come, York and Richard, Warwick and the rest;

I stabb'd your fathers' bosoms, split my breast.
[He faints.]

Alarm and retreat. Enter EDWARD, GEORGE, RICHARD, MONTAGUE, WARWICK, and Soldiers.

Edw. Now breathe we, lords: good fortune bids us pause,

And smoothe the frowns of war with peaceful looks.

Some troops pursue the bloody-minded queen,

That led calm Henry, though he were a king,

As doth a sail, fill'd with a fretting gust,

Command an argosy to stem the waves.

But think you, lords, that Clifford died with them!

War. No, 'tis impossible he should escape;

For, though before his face I speak the words,

Your brother Richard mark'd him for the grave:

And wheresoe'er he is, he's surely dead.

[Clifford groans, and dies.]

Edw. Whose soul is that which takes her heavy leave?

Rich. A deadly groan, like life and death's departing.

Edw. See who it is: and, now the battle's ended,

If friend or foe, let him be gently used.

Rich. Revoke that doom of mercy, for 'tis

Clifford;

Who not contented that he lopp'd the branch

In hewing Rutland when his leaves put forth,

But set his murdering knife unto the root

From whence that tender spray did sweetly

spring.

I mean our princely father, Duke of York.

War. From off the gates of York fetch down

the head,

Your father's head, which Clifford placed there;

Instead whereof let this supply the room:

Measure for measure must be answered.

Edw. Bring forth that fatal screech-owl to our house,

That nothing sung but death to us and ours:

Now death shall stop his dismal threatening sound.

And his ill-boding tongue no more shall speak.

War. I think his understanding is bereft.

Speak, Clifford, dost thou know who speaks to

thee?

Dark cloudy death o'er shades his beams of life,

And he nor sees nor hears us what we say.

Rich. O, would he did! and so perhaps he

doth:

Tell him his policy to counterfeit,

Because he would avoid such bitter taunts

Which in the time of death he gave our father.

Geo. If so thou think'st, vex him with eager words.

Rich. Clifford, ask mercy and obtain no grace.

Edw. Clifford, repent in bootless penitence.

War. Clifford, devise excuses for thy faults.

Geo. While we devise fell tortures for thy faults.

Rich. Thou didst love York, and I am son to York.

Edw. Thou pitied'st Rutland; I will pity

thee.

Geo. Where's Captain Margaret, to fence

you now?

War. They mock thee, Clifford: swear:

thou wast wont.

Rich. What, not an oath? nay, then the world goes hard

When Clifford cannot spare his friends an oath;

I know by that he's dead; and, by my soul,

If this right hand would buy two hours' life,

That I in all despite might rail at him,

This hand should chop it off, and with the issuing blood

stifle the villain whose unstanched thirst

York and young Rutland could not satisfy.

War. Ay, but he's dead: off with the traitor's head,

And rear it in the place your father's stands.

And now to London with triumphant march,

There to be crown'd England's royal king:

From whence shall Warwick cut the sea to

France,

And ask the Lady Bona for thy queen:

So shalt thou sinew both these lands together

And, having France thy friend, thou shalt n

dread

The scatter'd foe that hopes to rise again;

For though they cannot greatly sting to hurt,

Yet look to have them buzz to offend thine ear

First will I see the coronation;

And then to Brittany I'll cross the sea,

To effect this marriage, so it please my lord.

Edw. Even as thou wilt, sweet Warwick, I

it be;

For in thy shoulder do I build my seat,

And never will I undertake the thing

Wherein thy counsel and consent is wanting.

Richard, I will create thee Duke of Gloucester

And George, of Clarence: Warwick, as counsel

Shall do and undo as him pleaseth best.

Rich. Let me be Duke of Clarence, Geo

of Gloucester;

For Gloucester's dukedom is too ominous.

War. Tut, that's a foolish observation:

Richard, be Duke of Gloucester. Now

London,

To see these honours in possession.

[Exeunt]

ACT III.

SCENE I. A forest in the north of England

Enter two Keepers, with cross-bows in their hands.

First Keeper. Under this thick-grown we'll shroud ourselves;
For through this laund anon the deer will o

nd in this covert will we make our stand, ulling the principal of all the deer.

Sec. Keep. I'll stay above the hill, so both may shoot.

First Keep. That cannot be; the noise of thy cross-bow

Will scare the herd, and so my shoot is lost.

Here stand we both, and aim we at the best:

And, for the time shall not seem tedious,

I'll tell thee what befel me on a day

In this self-place where now we mean to stand.

Sec. Keep. Here comes a man; let's stay till he be past.

Enter KING HENRY, disguised, with a prayer-book.

K. Hen. From Scotland am I stol'n, even

To seek mine own land with my wishful sight.

K. Hen. Harry, Harry, 'tis no land of thine;

Thy place is fill'd, thy sceptre wrung from thee;

Thy balm wash'd off wherewith thou wast

Anointed:

Thy bending knee will call thee Cæsar now,

Thy humble suitors press to speak for right,

Thy not a man comes for redress of thee;

How can I help them, and not myself?

First Keep. Ay, here's a deer whose skin's

A keeper's fee:

Is is the quondam king; let's seize up

him.

K. Hen. Let me embrace thee, sour adversity,

For wise men say it is the wisest course.

Sec. Keep. Why linger we? let us lay hands upon him.

First Keep. Forbear awhile; we'll hear a little more.

K. Hen. My queen and son are gone to France for aid;

As I hear, the great commanding Warwick

thither gone, to crave the French king's sister

in aid for Edward: if this news be true,

For queen and son, your labour is but lost;

For Warwick is a subtle orator,

Lewis a prince soon won with moving

words.

His account then Margaret may win him.

She's a woman to be pitied much:

She'll will nuke a battery in his breast;

Tears will pierce into a marble heart;

Her tongue will be mild whiles she doth mourn

And Nero will be tainted with remorse.

Go hear and see her plaints, her brinish tears.

But she's come to beg, Warwick, to give;

Go, on his left side, craving aid for Henry,

Go, on his right, asking a wife for Edward.

He weeps, and says his Edward is deposed;

He smiles, and says his Edward is install'd;

But she, poor wretch, for grief can speak no

more.

When Warwick tells his tale, smooths the

wrong,

Perth arguments of mighty strength,

And in conclusion wins the king from her,

With promise of his sister, and what else,

to strengthen and support King Edward's place.

O Margaret, thus 'twill be; and thou, poor soul,

Art then forsaken, as thou went'st forlorn!

Sec. Keep. Say, what art thou that talk'st of king and queens?

K. Hen. More than I seem, and less than I was born to;

A man at least, for less I should not be;

And men may talk of kings, and why not I?

Sec. Keep. Ay, but thou talk'st as if thou wert a king.

K. Hen. Why, so I am, in mind; and that's enough.

Sec. Keep. But, if thou be a king, where is thy crown?

K. Hen. My crown is in my heart, not on my head;

Not deck'd with diamonds and Indian stones,

Nor to be seen: my crown is called content:

A crown it is that seldom kings enjoy.

Sec. Keep. Well, if you be a king crown'd with content,

Your crown content and you must be contented

To go along with us; for, as we think,

You are the king King Edward hath deposed;

And we his subjects sworn in all allegiance

Will apprehend you as his enemy.

K. Hen. But did you never swear, and break an oath?

Sec. Keep. No, never such an oath; nor will not now.

K. Hen. Where did you dwell when I was

King of England?

Sec. Keep. Here in this country, where we now remain.

K. Hen. I was anointed king at nine months old;

My father and my grandfather were kings,

And you were sworn true subjects unto me:

And tell me, then, have you not broke your oaths?

First Keep. No;

For we were subjects but while you were king.

K. Hen. Why, am I dead? do I not breathe

a man?

Ah, simple men, you know not what you swear!

Look, as I blow this feather from my face,

And as the air blows it to me again,

Obedying with my wind when I do blow,

And yielding to another when it blows,

Commanded always by the greater gust;

Such is the lightness of you common men.

But do not break your oaths; for of that sin go

My mild entreaty shall not make you guilty.

Go where you will, the king shall be commanded;

And be you kings, command, and I'll obey.

First Keep. We are true subjects to the king, King Edward.

K. Hen. So would you be again to Henry,

If he were seated as King Edward is.

First Keep. We charge you, in God's name, and the king's,

To go with us unto the officers.

K. Hen. In God's name, lead; your king's name be obey'd:

And what God will, that let your king perform:

And what he will, I humbly yield unto. 101
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. London. The palace.

Enter KING EDWARD, GLOUCESTER,
CLARENCE, and LADY GREY.

K. Edw. Brother of Gloucester, at Saint
Alban's field
This lady's husband, Sir Richard Grey, was slain.

His lands then seized on by the conqueror:
Her suit is now to repossess those lands;
Which we in justice cannot well deny,
Because in quarrel of the house of York
The worthy gentleman did lose his life.

Glow. Your highness shall do well to grant her suit;

It were dishonour to deny it her.

K. Edw. It were no less; but yet I'll make a pause. 10

Glow. [Aside to Clar.] Yea, is it so!

I see the lady hath a thing to grant,

Before the king will grant her humble suit.

Clar. [Aside to Glow.] He knows the game:
how true he keeps the wind!

Glow. [Aside to Clar.] Silence!

K. Edw. Widow, we will consider of your suit;

And come some other time to know our mind.

L. Grey. Right gracious lord, I cannot brook
delay:

May it please your highness to resolve me now;
And what your pleasure is, shall satisfy me. 20

Glow. [Aside to Clar.] Ay, widow! then I'll warrant you all your lands,

An if what pleases him shall pleasure you.

Fight closer, or good faith, you'll catch a blow.

Clar. [Aside to Glow.] I fear her not, unless she chance to fall.

Glow. [Aside to Clar.] God forbid that! for he'll take vantages.

K. Edw. How many children hast thou, widow! tell me.

Clar. [Aside to Glow.] I think he means to beg a child of her.

Glow. [Aside to Clar.] Nay, whip me then:
he'll rather give her two.

L. Grey. Three, my most gracious lord.

Glow. [Aside to Clar.] You shall have four,
if you'll be ruled by him. 30

K. Edw. 'Twere pity they should lose their father's lands.

L. Grey. Be pitiful, dread lord, and grant it then.

K. Edw. Lords, give us leave: I'll try this widow's wit.

Glow. [Aside to Clar.] Ay, good leave have you; for you will have leave,

Till youth take leave and leave you to the crutch.
[Glow. and Clar. retire.]

K. Edw. Now tell me, madam, do you love your children?

L. Grey. Ay, full as dearly as I love myself.

K. Edw. And would you not do much to do them good?

L. Grey. To do them good, I would sustain much loss.

K. Edw. Then get your husband's lands,
do them good.

L. Grey. Therefore I came unto your majesty.

K. Edw. I'll tell you how these lands are to be got.

L. Grey. So shall you bind me to your highness' service.

K. Edw. What service wilt thou do me, if I give them?

L. Grey. What you command, that rests me to do.

K. Edw. But you will take exceptions;
my boon.

L. Grey. No, gracious lord, except I cannot do it.

K. Edw. Ay, but thou canst do what mean to ask.

L. Grey. Why, then I will do what you grace commands.

Glow. [Aside to Clar.] He plies her hard and much rain wears the marble.

Clar. [Aside to Glow.] As red as fire! nay,
then her wax must melt.

L. Grey. Why stops my lord? shall I hear my task?

K. Edw. An easy task; 'tis but to love
a king.

L. Grey. That's soon perform'd, because I am a subject.

K. Edw. Why, then, thy husband's lands freely give thee.

L. Grey. I take my leave with many thanks.

Glow. [Aside to Clar.] The match is made
she seals it with a cursey.

K. Edw. But stay thee, 'tis the fruits of love
I mean.

L. Grey. The fruits of love I mean, I loving liege.

K. Edw. Ay, but, I fear me, in another sense.

What love, think'st thou, I sue so much to get?

L. Grey. My love till death, my humble
thanks, my prayers;

That love which virtue begs and virtue grants.

K. Edw. No, by my troth, I did not mean such love.

L. Grey. Why, then you mean not as thought you did.

K. Edw. But now you partly may perceive
my mind.

L. Grey. My mind will never grant what perceive

Your highness aims at, if I aim aright.

K. Edw. To tell thee plain, I aim to
with thee.

L. Grey. To tell you plain, I had rather be in prison.

K. Edw. Why, then thou shalt not have thy husband's lands.

L. Grey. Why, then mine honesty shall my dower;

For by that loss I will not purchase them.

K. Edw. Therein thou wrong'st thy child mightily.

L. Grey. Herein your highness wrongs them and me.

t, mighty lord, this merry inclination cords not with the sadness of my suit:
 as you dismiss me, either with 'ay' or 'no.'

K. Edw. Ay, if thou wilt say 'ay' to my request;
 if thou dost say 'no' to my demand. 80
 L. Grey. Then, no, my lord. My suit is at an end.

Glou. [Aside to Clar.] The widow likes him not, she knits her brows.

Clar. [Aside to Glou.] He is the bluntest
 wooer in Christendom.

K. Edw. [Aside] Her looks do argue her replete with modesty;
 or words do show her wit incomparable;
 in her perfections challenge sovereignty:
 no way or other, she is for a king;
 and she shall be my love, or else my queen.—
 say that King Edward take thee for his queen?

L. Grey. 'Tis better said than done, my gracious lord: 90
 as a subject fit to jest withal,
 as far unfit to be a sovereign.

K. Edw. Sweet widow, by my state I swear
 to thee
 speak no more than what my soul intends;
 and that is, to enjoy thee for my love.

L. Grey. And that is more than I will yield unto:

I know I am too mean to be your queen,
 and yet too good to be your concubine.

K. Edw. You cavil, widow: I did mean, my queen.

L. Grey. 'Twill grieve your grace my sons should call you father. 100

K. Edw. No more than when my daughters call thee mother.

you art a widow, and thou hast some children;
 and, by God's mother, I, being but a bachelor,
 see other some: why, 'tis a happy thing to be the father unto many sons.

never no more, for thou shalt be my queen.

Glou. [Aside to Clar.] The ghostly father
 now hath done his shrift.

Clar. [Aside to Glou.] When he was made a shriver, 'twas for shift.

K. Edw. Brothers, you muse what chat we two have had.

Glou. The widow likes it not, for she looks very sad. 110

K. Edw. You 'ld think it strange if I should marry her.

Clar. To whom, my lord?

K. Edw. Why, Clarence, to myself.

Glou. That would be ten days' wonder at the least.

Clar. That's a day longer than a wonder lasts.

Glou. By so much is the wonder in extremes.

K. Edw. Well, jest on, brothers: I can tell you both
 a suit is granted for her husband's lands.

Enter a Nobleman.

Rob. My gracious lord, Henry your foe is taken,
 and brought your prisoner to your palace gate.

K. Edw. See that he be convey'd unto the Tower: 120

And go we, brothers, to the man that took him,
 To question of his apprehension.

Widow, go you along. Lords, use her honourably. [Exeunt all but Gloucester.]

Glou. Ay, Edward will use women honourably.

Would he were wasted, marrow, bones and all,
 That from his loins no hopeful branch may
 spring,

To cross me from the golden time I look for!
 And yet, between my soul's desire and me—

The lustful Edward's title buried— 129

Is Clarence, Henry, and his son young Edward,
 And all the unlook'd for issue of their bodies,

To take their rooms, ere I can place myself:
 A cold premeditation for my purpose!

Why, then, I do but dream on sovereignty;
 Like one that stands upon a promontory,

And spies a far-off shore where he would tread,
 Wishing his foot were equal with his eye,

And chides the sea that sunders him from thence.

Saying, he 'll lade it dry to have his way:
 So do I wish the crown, being so far off: 130

And so I chide the means that keeps me
 from it;

And so I say, I 'll cut the causes off,
 Flattering me with impossibilities.

My eye's too quick, my heart o'erween's too
 much,

Unless my hand and strength could equal them.

Well, say there is no kingdom then for Richard;
 What other pleasure can the world afford?

I 'll make my heaven in a lady's lap,
 And deck my body in gay ornaments,

And witch sweet ladies with my words and
 looks. 139

O miserable thought! and more unlikely
 Than to accomplish twenty golden crowns!

Why, love forsook me in my mother's womb:
 And, for I should not deal in her soft laws,

She did corrupt frail nature with some bribe,
 To shrink mine arm up like a wither'd shrub;

To make an envious mountain on my back,
 Where sits deformity to mock my body;

To shape my legs of an unequal size;
 To disproportion me in every part, 140

Like to a chaos, or an unlick'd bear-whelp
 That carries no impression like the dam.

And am I then a man to be beloved?
 O monstrous fault, to harbour such a thought!

Then, since this earth affords no joy to me,
 But to command, to check, to o'erbear such
 As are of better person than myself,

I 'll make my heaven to dream upon the crown,
 And, whilst I live, to account this world but
 hell,

Until my mis-shap'd trunk that bears this head
 Be round impaled with a glorious crown. 149

And yet I know not how to get the crown,
 For many lives stand between me and home:

And I—like one lost in a thorny wood,
 That needs the thorns and is rent with the thorns,

Seeking a way and straying from the way:
 Not knowing how to find the open air,

But tolling desperately to find it out,—
 Torment myself to catch the English crown;
 And from that torment I will free myself, 180
 Or hew my way out with a bloody axe.
 Why, I can smile, and murder whiles I smile,
 And cry 'Content' to that which grieves my
 heart,
 And wet my cheeks with artificial tears,
 And frame my face to all occasions.
 I'll drown more sailors than the mermaid shall;
 I'll slay more gazers than the basilisk;
 I'll play the orator as well as Nestor,
 Deceive more slyly than Ulysses could,
 And, like a Sinon, take another Troy. 190
 I can add colours to the chameleon,
 Change shapes with Proteus for advantages,
 And set the murderous Machiavel to school.
 Can I do this, and cannot get a crown?
 Tut, were it farther off, I'll pluck it down.

[Exit.]

SCENE III. France. The King's palace.

Flourish. Enter LEWIS the French King, his sister BONA, his Admiral, called BOURBON: PRINCE EDWARD, QUEEN MARGARET, and the EARL OF OXFORD. LEWIS sits, and riseth up again.

K. Lew. Fair Queen of England, worthy Margaret,
 Sit down with us: it ill befits thy state
 And birth, that thou shouldst stand while Lewis doth sit.

Q. Mar. No, mighty King of France: now Margaret Must strike her sail and learn awhile to serve
 Where kings command. I was, I must confess,
 Great Albion's queen in former golden days:
 But now mischance hath trod my title down,
 And with dishonour laid me on the ground;
 Where I must take like seat unto my fortune,
 And to my humble seat conform myself. 21

K. Lew. Why, say, fair queen, whence springs this deep despair?

Q. Mar. From such a cause as fills mine eyes with tears
 And stops my tongue, while heart is drown'd in care.

K. Lew. What'er it be, be thou still like thyself.

And sit thee by our side: [Sits her by him]
 yield not thy neck

To fortune's yoke, but let thy dauntless mind
 Still ride in triumph over all mischance.

Be plain, Queen Margaret, and tell thy grief:
 It shall be eased, if France can yield relief. 20

Q. Mar. Those gracious words revive my drooping thoughts

And give my tongue-led sorrows leave to speak.
 Now, therefore, be it known to noble Lewis,

That Henry, sole possessor of my love,
 Is of a king become a banish'd man,

And forced to live in Scotland a forlorn;
 While proud ambitious Edward Duke of York

Usurps the regal title and the seat
 Of England's true-anointed lawful king.

This is the cause that I, poor Margaret,

With this my son, Prince Edward, Henry's
 heir,

Am come to crave thy just and lawful aid;
 And if thou fail us, all our hope is done;

Scotland hath will to help, but cannot help;
 Our people and our peers are both misled;

Our treasure seized, our soldiers put to flight,
 And, as thou seest, ourselves in heavy plight.

K. Lew. Renowned queen, with patience calm the storm,

While we bethink a means to break it off.

Q. Mar. The more we stay, the stronger grows our foe.

K. Lew. The more I stay, the more I'll succour thee.

Q. Mar. O, but impatience waiteth on true
 sorrow.

And see where comes the breeder of my sorrow!

[Enter WARWICK.]

K. Lew. What's he approacheth boldly to our presence?

Q. Mar. Our Earl of Warwick, Edward's greatest friend.

K. Lew. Welcome, brave Warwick! What brings thee to France?

[He descends. She riseth.]

Q. Mar. Ay, now begins a second storm to rise;

For this is he that moves both wind and tide.
War. From worthy Edward, King of Albion,

My lord and sovereign, and thy vowed friend,
 I come, in kindness and unfeigned love, 31

First, to do greetings to thy royal person;
 And then to crave a league of amity;

And lastly, to confirm that amity
 With nuptial knot, if thou vouchsafe to grant

That virtuous Lady Bona, thy fair sister,
 To England's king in lawful marriage.

Q. Mar. [Aside] If that go forward, Henry's hope is done.

War. [To Bona] And, gracious madam, in our king's behalf, 32

I am commanded, with your leave and favour,
 Humbly to kiss your hand and with my tongue

To tell the passion of my sovereign's heart;
 Where fame, late entering at his heedful ears,

Hath placed thy beauty's image and thy virtue.
Q. Mar. King Lewis and Lady Bona, hear me speak,

 Before you answer Warwick. His demand

Springs not from Edward's well-meant honest
 love,

But from deceit bred by necessity;
 For how can tyrants safely govern home,

Unless abroad they purchase great alliance? 33
 To prove him tyrant this reason may suffice,

That Henry liveth still; but were he dead,
 Yet here Prince Edward stands, King Henry's

son.
 Look, therefore, Lewis, that by this league and

marriage
 Thou draw not on thy danger and dishonour;

For though usurpers away the rule awhile,
 Yet heavens are just, and time suppresseth

wrong.
War. Injurious Margaret!

Prince, And why not queen?

War. Because thy father Henry did usurp;
And thou no more art prince than she is queen.

Oxf. Then Warwick disannuls great John of Gaunt,

Which did subdue the greatest part of Spain;
And, after John of Gaunt, Henry the Fourth,
Whose wisdom was a mirror to the wisest;
And, after that wise prince, Henry the Fifth,
Who by his prowess conquered all France;
From these our Henry lineally descends.

War. Oxford, how haps it, in this smooth discourse,

You told not how Henry the Sixth hath lost
All that which Henry the Fifth had gotten? ⁹⁰
Methinks these peers of France should smile at that.

But for the rest, you tell a pedigree
Of threescore and two years; a silly time
To make prescription for a kingdom's worth.

Oxf. Why, Warwick, canst thou speak against thy liege,

Whom thou obeyed'st thirty and six years,
And not bewray thy treason with a blush?

War. Can Oxford, that did ever fence the right,

Now buckler falsehood with a pedigree?

For shame! leave Henry, and call Edward king.

Oxf. Call him my king by whose injurious doom

My elder brother, the Lord Aubrey Vere,
Was done to death! and more than so, my father,

Even in the downfall of his mellow'd years,
When nature brought him to the door of death?

No, Warwick, no; while life upholds this arm,
This arm upholds the house of Lancaster.

War. And I the house of York.

K. Lew. Queen Margaret, Prince Edward,
and Oxford,

Vouchsafe, at our request, to stand aside, ¹¹⁰
While I use further conference with Warwick.

[They stand aloof.]
Q. Mar. Heavens grant that Warwick's words bewitch him not!

K. Lew. Now, Warwick, tell me, even upon thy conscience,

Is Edward your true king? for I were loath
To link with him that were not lawful chosen.

War. Thereon I pawn my credit and mine honour.

K. Lew. But is he gracious in the people's eye?

War. The more that Henry was unfortunate.

K. Lew. Then further, all dissembling set aside,

Tell me for truth the measure of his love
Unto our sister Bona.

War. Such it seems
As may become a monarch like himself.

Myself have often heard him say and swear
That this his love was an eternal plant,

Whereof the root was fix'd in virtue's ground,
The leaves and fruit maintain'd with beauty's sun,

Exempt from envy, but not from disdain,
Unless the Lady Bona quit his pain.

K. Lew. Now, sister, let us hear your firm resolve.

Bona. Your grant, or your denial, shall be mine: ¹²⁰

To War. Yet I confess that often ere this day,

When I have heard your king's desert recounted,
Mine ear hath tempted judgment to desire.

K. Lew. Then, Warwick, thus: our sister shall be Edward's;

And now forthwith shall articles be drawn Touching the jointure that your king must make,

Which with her dowry shall be counterpoised.
Draw near, Queen Margaret, and be a witness

That Bona shall be wife to the English king.

Prince. To Edward, but not to the English king. ¹⁴⁰

Q. Mar. Deceitful Warwick! it was thy device

By this alliance to make void my suit:
Before thy coming Lewis was Henry's friend.

K. Lew. And still is friend to him and Margaret:

But if your title to the crown be weak,
As may appear by Edward's good success,

Then 'tis but reason that I be released
From giving aid which late I promised.

Yet shall you have all kindness at my hand
That your estate requires and mine can yield.

War. Henry now lives in Scotland at his ease, ¹⁵¹

Where having nothing, nothing can be lost.
And as for you yourself, our quondam queen,

You have a father able to maintain you;
And better 'twere you troubled him than France.

Q. Mar. Peace, impudent and shameless Warwick, peace,

Proud setter up and puller down of kings!
I will not hence, till, with my talk and tears,

Both full of truth, I make King Lewis behold
Thy sly conveyance and thy lord's false love; ¹⁶⁰

For both of you are birds of selfsame feather.
[Post blows a horn within.]

K. Lew. Warwick, this is some post to us or thee.

Enter a Post.

Post. [To War.] My lord ambassador, these letters are for you,

Sent from your brother, Marquess Montague:
[To Lewis] These from our king unto your majesty:

[To Margaret] And, madam, these for you;
from whom I know not.

[They all read their letters.]

Oxf. I like it well that our fair queen and mistress

Smiles at her news, while Warwick frowns at his.

Prince. Nay, mark how Lewis stamps; as he were nettled:

I hope all's for the best. ¹⁷⁰

K. Lew. Warwick, what are thy news? and yours, fair queen?

Q. Mar. Mine, such as fill my heart with unhop'd joys.

War. Mine, full of sorrow and heart's discontent.

K. Lew. What! has your king married the Lady Grey?

And now, to soothe your forgery and his,
Sends me a paper to persuade me patience?
Is this the alliance that he seeks with France?
Dare he presume to scorn us in this manner?

Q. Mar. I told your majesty as much before:
This proveth Edward's love and Warwick's honesty.

War. King Lewis, I here protest, in sight of heaven,

And by the hope I have of heavenly bliss,
That I am clear from this misdeed of Edward's,
No more my king, for he dishonours me,
But most himself, if he could see his shame.
Did I forget that by the house of York
My father came untimely to his death?
Did I let pass the abuse done to my niece?
Did I impale him with the regal crown?
Did I put Henry from his native right? 100
And am I guerdon'd at the last with shame?
Shame on himself! for my desert is honour:
And to repair my honour lost for him,
I here renounce him and return to Henry.

My noble queen, let former grudges pass,
And henceforth I am thy true servitor:
I will revenge his wrong to Lady Bona
And replant Henry in his former state.

Q. Mar. Warwick, these words have turn'd
my hate to love;

And I forgive and quite forget old faults, 200
And joy that thou becomest King Henry's friend.

War. So much his friend, ay, his unfeigned friend,

That, if King Lewis vouchsafe to furnish us
With some few bands of chosen soldiers,
I'll undertake to land them on our coast
And force the tyrant from his seat by war.

'Tis not his new-made bride shall succour him:
And as for Clarence, as my letters tell me,
He's very likely now to fall from him,
For matching more for wanton lust than
honour, 210

Or than for strength and safety of our country.

Bona. Dear brother, how shall Bona be revenged?

But by thy help to this distressed queen?

Q. Mar. Renowned prince, how shall poor
Henry live,

Unless thou rescue him from foul despair?

Bona. My quarrel and this English queen's are one.

War. And mine, fair lady Bona, joins with
yours.

K. Lew. And mine with hers, and thine, and Margaret's.

Therefore at last I firmly am resolved
You shall have aid. 220

Q. Mar. Let me give humble thanks for all
at once.

K. Lew. Then, England's messenger, return
in post,

And tell false Edward, thy supposed king,
That Lewis of France is sending over masquers
To revel it with him and his new bride:
These good wits' past, go fear thy king withal.

Bona. Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower shortly,

I'll wear the willow garland for his sake.

Q. Mar. Tell him, my mourning weeds are laid aside,

And I am ready to put armour on. 230

War. Tell him from me that he hath done me wrong,

And therefore I'll uncrown him ere 'tis long.
There's thy reward: be gone. [Exit Post.

K. Lew. But, Warwick,
Thou and Oxford, with five thousand men,
Shall cross the seas, and bid false Edward
battle;

And, as occasion serves, this noble queen
And prince shall follow with a fresh supply.

Yet, ere thou go, but answer me one doubt,
What pledge have we of thy firm loyalty? 239

War. This shall assure my constant loyalty,
That if our queen and this young prince agree,

I'll join mine eldest daughter and my joy
To him forthwith in holy wedlock bands.

Q. Mar. Yes, I agree, and thank you for your motion.

Son Edward, she is fair and virtuous,
Therefore delay not, give thy hand to Warwick;

And, with thy hand, thy faith irrevocable,
That only Warwick's daughter shall be thine.

Prince. Yes, I accept her, for she well deserves it;

And here, to pledge my vow, I give my hand.

[He gives his hand to Warwick.]

K. Lew. Why stay we now? These soldiers shall be levied, 251

And thou, Lord Hounston, our high admiral,
Shalt wait them over with our royal fleet.

I long till Edward fall by war's mischance,
For mocking marriage with a dame of France.

[Exeunt all but Warwick.]

War. I came from Edward as ambassador,
But I return his sworn and mortal foe:

Matter of marriage was the charge he gave me,
But dreadful war shall answer his demand.

Had he none else to make a stale but me? 260
Then none but I shall turn his jest to sorrow.

I was the chief that raised him to the crown,
And I'll be chief to bring him down again:

Not that I pity Henry's misery,
But seek revenge on Edward's mockery. [Exit.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I. London. The palace.

Enter GLOUCESTER, CLARENCE, SOMERSET, and MONTAGUE.

Glou. Now tell me, brother Clarence, what think you

Of this new marriage with the Lady Grey?
Hath not our brother made a worthy choice?

Clar. Alas, you know, 'tis far from hence to
France;

How could he stay till Warwick made return?

Som. My lords, forbear this talk; here comes
the king.

Glou. And his well-chosen bride.

Clar. I mind to tell him plainly what I think

*Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD, attended ;
LADY GREY, as Queen ; PEMBROKE, STAF-FORD, HASTINGS, and others.*

K. Edw. Now, brother of Clarence, how like you our choice,

That you stand pensive, as half malcontent ?
Clar. As well as Lewis of France, or the Earl of Warwick,

Which are so weak of courage and in judgement

That they'll take no offence at our abuse.

K. Edw. Suppose they take offence without a cause,

They are but Lewis and Warwick : I am
Edward,

Your king and Warwick's, and must have my
will.

Glou. And shall have your will, because our
king :

Yet hasty marriage seldom proveth well.

K. Edw. Yea, brother Richard, are you offended too ?

Glou. Not I :
No, God forbid that I should wish them sever'd

Whom God hath join'd together ; ay, and twere pity

To sunder them that yoke so well together.

K. Edw. Setting your scorn and your mis-like aside,

Tell me some reason why the Lady Grey Should not become my wife and England's

queen.

And you too, Somerset and Montague,
Speak freely what you think.

Clar. Then this is mine opinion : that King
Lewis

Becomes your enemy, for mocking him

About the marriage of the Lady Bona.

Glou. And Warwick, doing what you gave in charge,

Is now dishonoured by this new marriage.

K. Edw. What if both Lewis and Warwick be appeased

By such invention as I can devise ?

Mont. Yet, to have join'd with France in such alliance

Would more have strengthen'd this our commonwealth

'Gainst foreign storms than any home-bred
marriage.

Hast. Why, knows not Montague that of itself

England is safe, if true within itself ?

Mont. But the safer when 'tis back'd with France.

Hast. 'Tis better using France than trusting
France :

Let us be back'd with God and with the seas
Which He hath given for fence impregnable ;

And with their helps only defend ourselves ;
In them and in ourselves our safety lies.

Clar. For this one speech Lord Hastings well deserves

To have the heir of the Lord Hungerford.

K. Edw. Ay, what of that ? It was my will and grant ;

And for this once my will shall stand for law

Glou. And yet methinks your grace hath not done well,

To give the heir and daughter of Lord Scales⁵¹
Unto the brother of your loving bride ;

She better would have fitted me or Clarence :
But in your bride you bury brotherhood.

Clar. (Or else you would not have bestow'd
the heir

Of the Lord Bonville on your new wife's son,
And leave your brothers to go speed elsewhere.

K. Edw. Alas, poor Clarence ! is it for a wife
That thou art malcontent ? I will provide thee.

Clar. In choosing for yourself, you show'd your judgement,

Which being shallow, you shall give me leave⁶¹
To play the broker in mine own behalf ;

And to that end I shortly mind to leave you.

K. Edw. Leave me, or tarry, Edward will be king,

And not be tied unto his brother's will.

Q. Eliz. My lords, before it pleased his majesty

To raise my state to title of a queen,

Do me but right, and you must all confess

That I was not ignoble of descent ;

And manner than myself have had like fortune.

But as this title honours me and mine,

So your dislike, to whom I would be pleasing,

Doth cloud my joys with danger and with sorrow.

K. Edw. My love, forbear to fawn upon their frowns :

What danger or what sorrow can befall thee,

No long as Edward is thy constant friend,

And their true sovereign, whom they must obey !

Nay, whom they shall obey, and love thee too,

Unless they seek for hatred at my hands ;

Which if they do, yet will I keep thee safe,

And they shall feel the vengeance of my wrath.

Glou. I hear, yet say not much, but think the more.

[Aside.

Enter a Post.

K. Edw. Now, messenger, what letters or what news

From France ?

Post. My sovereign liege, no letters ; and few words.

But such as I, without your special pardon,

Dare not relate.

K. Edw. Go to, we pardon thee : therefore,
in brief,

Tell me their words as near as thou canst guess
them.

What answer makes King Lewis unto our
letters ?

Post. At my depart, these were his very
words :

'Go tell false Edward, thy supposed king,
That Lewis of France is sending over masquers

To revel it with him and his new bride.'

K. Edw. Is Lewis so brave ? he like he thinks me Henry.

But what said Lady Bona to my marriage ?

Post. These were her words, utter'd with mild disdain :

'Tell him, I hope he'll prove a widower shortly,

I'll wear the willow garland for his sake.' 100
K. Edw. I blame not her, she could say little less;

 She had the wrong. But what said Henry's

queen?
 For I have heard that she was there in place.
Post. 'Tell him,' quoth she, 'my mourning

weeds are done,
 And I am ready to put armour on.'
K. Edw. Belike she minds to play the Amazon.

 But what said Warwick to these injuries?

Post. He, more incensed against your majesty Than all the rest, discharged me with these

words: 109
 'Tell him from me that he hath done me wrong,
 And therefore I'll uncrown him ere 't be long.'

K. Edw. Ha! durst the traitor breathe out so proud words?

Well, I will arm me, being thus forewarn'd:
 They shall have wars and pay for their presumption.

But say, is Warwick friends with Margaret?

Post. Ay, gracious sovereign; they are so link'd in friendship,
 That young Prince Edward marries Warwick's

daughter.
Clar. Belike the elder; Clarence will have the younger.

Now, brother king, farewell, and sit you fast,
 For I will hence to Warwick's other daughter;
 That, though I want a kingdom, yet in marriage

I may not prove inferior to yourself.
 You that love me and Warwick, follow me.

[Exit Clarence, and Somerset follows.
Glow. [Aside] Not I:
 My thoughts aim at a further matter: I

Stay not for the love of Edward, but the crown.
K. Edw. Clarence and Somerset both gone
 to Warwick!

Yet am I arm'd against the worst can happen;
 And haste is needful in this desperate case.

Pembroke and Stafford, you in our behalf 120
 Go levy men, and make prepare for war;
 They are already, or quickly will be landed:
 Myself in person will straight follow you.

[Exeunt Pembroke and Stafford.
But, ere I go, Hastings and Montague,
 Resolve my doubt. You twain, of all the rest,

Are near to Warwick by blood and by alliance:
 Tell me if you love Warwick more than me!

If it be so, then both depart to him;
 I rather wish you foes than hollow friends:
 But if you mind to hold your true obedience,

Give me assurance with some friendly vow,
 That I may never have you in suspect.

Mont. So God help Montague as he proves
 true!

Hast. And Hastings as he favours Edward's cause!

K. Edw. Now, brother Richard, will you stand by us?

Glow. Ay, in despite of all that shall withstand you.

K. Edw. Why, so! then am I sure of victory.
 Now therefore let us hence; and lose no hour,
 Till we meet Warwick with his foreign power.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. A plain in Warwickshire.

*Enter WARWICK and OXFORD, with French
 soldiers.*

War. Trust me, my lord, all hitherto goes
 well;
 The common people by numbers swarm to us.

Enter CLARENCE and SOMERSET.

But see where Somerset and Clarence comes!
 Speak suddenly, my lords, are we all friends?

Clar. Fear not that, my lord.
War. Then, gentle Clarence, welcome unto
 Warwick;

And welcome, Somerset: I hold it cowardice
 To rest mistrustful where a noble heart
 Hath pawn'd an open hand in sign of love;

Else might I think that Clarence, Edward's
 brother, 10
 Were but a feigned friend to our proceedings:

But welcome, sweet Clarence; my daughter shall be thine.

And now what rests but, in night's coverture,
 Thy brother being carelessly encamp'd,
 His soldiers lurking in the towns about,

And but attended by a simple guard,
 We may surprise and take him at our pleasure!
 Our scouts have found the adventure very easy:

That as Ulysses and stout Diomedes
 With sleight and manhood stole to Rhesus'
 tents, 20

And brought from thence the Thracian fatal
 steels,
 So we, well cover'd with the night's black mantle,

 At unawares may beat down Edward's guard
 And seize himself; I say not, slaughter him,
 For I intend but only to surprise him.

You that will follow me to this attempt,
 Applaud the name of Henry with your leader.

[They all cry, 'Henry!'
 Why, then, let's on our way in silent sort:
 For Warwick and his friends, God and Saint

George! [Exeunt.

SCENE III. Edward's camp, near Warwick.

*Enter three Watchmen, to guard the KING'S
 tent.*

First Watch. Come on, my masters, each
 man take his stand:
 The king by this is set him down to sleep.

Second Watch. What, will he not to bed?
First Watch. Why, no; for he hath made a solemn vow

Never to lie and take his natural rest
 Till Warwick or himself be quite suppress'd.

Second Watch. To-morrow then belike shall be the day,
 If Warwick be so near as men report.

Third Watch. But say, I pray, what nobleman is that
 That with the king here resteth in his tent? 30

First Watch. 'Tis the Lord Hastings, the king's chiefest friend.

Third Watch. O, is it so! But why commands the king

That his chief followers lodge in towns about him,

While he himself keeps in the cold field!

Second Watch. 'Tis the more honour, because more dangerous.

Third Watch. Ay, but give me warship and quietness;

I like it better than a dangerous honour.

If Warwick knew in what estate he stands,

'Tis to be doubted he would waken him.

First Watch. Unless our halberds did shut up his passage.

Second Watch. Ay, wherefore else guard we his royal tent,

But to defend his person from night-foes!

Enter WARWICK, CLARENCE, OXFORD, SOMERSET, and French soldiers, silent all.

War. This is his tent; and see where stand his guard.

Courage, my masters! honour now or never!

But follow me, and Edward shall be ours.

First Watch. Who goes there?

Second Watch. Stay, or thou diest!
[Warwick and the rest cry all, 'Warwick! Warwick!' and set upon the Guard, who fly, crying, 'Arm! arm!' Warwick and the rest following them.]

The drum playing and trumpet sounding, re-enter WARWICK, SOMERSET, and the rest, bringing the KING out in his gown, sitting in a chair. RICHARD and HASTINGS fly over the stage.

Som. What are they that fly there?

War. Richard and Hastings: let them go here is the duke.

K. Edw. The duke! Why, Warwick, when we parted,

Thou call'dst me king.

War. Ay, but the case is alter'd: When you disgraced me in my embassy,

Then I degraded you from being king.

And come now to create you Duke of York.

Alas! how should you govern any kingdom,

That know not how to use ambassadors,

Nor how to be contented with one wife,

Nor how to use your brothers brotherly,

Nor how to study for the people's welfare,

Nor how to shroud yourself from enemies!

K. Edw. Yes, brother of Clarence, art thou here too!

Nay, then I see that Edward needs must down.

Yet, Warwick, in despite of all mischance,

Of thee thyself and all thy complices,

Edward will always bear himself as king:

Though fortune's malice overthrow my state,

My mind exceeds the compass of her wheel.

War. Then, for his mind, be Edward England's king:

But Henry now shall wear the English crown,

And be true king indeed, thou but the shadow.

My Lord of Somerset, at my request,

See that forth with Duke Edward he convey'd

Unto my brother, Archbishop of York.

When I have fought with Pembroke and his

I'll follow you, and tell what answer

Lewis and the Lady Bona send to him.

Now, for a while farewell, good Duke of York.

[They lead him out forcibly.]

K. Edw. What fates impose, that men must needs abide;

It boots not to resist both wind and tide.

[Exit, guarded.]

Oxf. What now remains, my lords, for us

to do

But march to London with our soldiers!

War. Ay, that's the first thing that we have to do;

To free King Henry from imprisonment

And see him seated in the regal throne.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. London. The palace.

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH and RIVERS.

Riv. Madam, what makes you in this sudden change!

Q. Eliz. Why, brother Rivers, are you yet to learn

What late misfortune is befall'n King Edward?

Riv. What! loss of some pitch'd battle against Warwick?

Q. Eliz. No, but the loss of his own royal person.

Riv. Then is my sovereign slain?

Q. Eliz. Ay, almost slain, for he is taken prisoner,

Either betray'd by falsehood of his guard

Or by his foe surpris'd as unawares:

And, as I further have to understand,

Is new committed to the Bishop of York,

Fell Warwick's brother and by that our foe.

Riv. These news I must confess are full of grief;

Yet, gracious madam, hear it as you may:

Warwick may lose, that now hath won the day.

Q. Eliz. Till then fair hope must hinder life's decay.

And I the rather wean me from despair

For love of Edward's offspring in my womb:

This is it that makes me bridle passion

And bear with mildness my misfortune's cross;

Ay, ay, for this I draw in many a tear

And stop the rising of blood-sucking sighs,

Lest with my sighs or tears I blast or drown

King Edward's fruit, true heir to the English crown.

Riv. But, madam, where is Warwick then become?

Q. Eliz. I am inform'd that he comes towards London.

To set the crown once more on Henry's head:

Guess thou the rest; King Edward's friends must down.

But, to prevent the tyrant's violence,

For trust not him that hath once broken faith:—

I'll hence forthwith unto the sanctuary.

To save at least the heir of Edward's right:

There shall I rest secure from force and fear.

Come, therefore, let us fly while we may:—

If Warwick take us we are sure to die.

I'll wear the willow garland for his sake.' 100
K. Edw. I blame not her, she could say

 George!

[Exeunt.

SCENE III. Edward's camp, near Warwick.

*Enter three Watchmen, to guard the KING'S
 tent.*

First Watch. Come on, my masters, each
 man take his stand:

The king by this is set him down to sleep.

Second Watch. What, will he not to bed?

First Watch. Why, no; for he hath made a solemn vow

Never to lie and take his natural rest
 Till Warwick or himself be quite suppress'd.

Second Watch. To-morrow then belike shall
 be the day,

If Warwick be so near as men report.

Third Watch. But say, I pray, what noble-
 man is that?

That with the king here resteth in his tent? 10

First Watch. 'Tis the Lord Hastings, the
 king's chiefest friend.

Third Watch. O, is it so! But why commands the king

That his chief followers lodge in towns about him.

While he himself keeps in the cold field!

Second Watch. 'Tis the more honour, because more dangerous.

Third Watch. Ay, but give me worship and quietness;

I like it better than a dangerous honour.

If Warwick knew in what estate he stands,

'Tis to be doubted he would waken him.

First Watch. Unless our halberds did shut up his passage.

Second Watch. Ay, wherefore else guard we his royal tent,

But to defend his person from night-foes!

Enter WARWICK, CLARENCE, OXFORD, SOMERSET, and French soldiers, silent all.

War. This is his tent; and see where stand his guard.

Courage, my masters! honour now or never!

But follow me, and Edward shall be ours.

First Watch. Who goes there?

Second Watch. Stay, or thou diest!

[Warwick and the rest cry all, 'Warwick! Warwick!' and set upon the Guard, who fly, crying, 'Arm! arm!' Warwick and the rest following them.]

The drum playing and trumpet sounding, re-enter WARWICK, SOMERSET, and the rest, bringing the KING out in his gown, sitting in a chair. RICHARD and HASTINGS fly over the stage.

Som. What are they that fly there?

War. Richard and Hastings: let them go; here is

The duke.

K. Edw. The duke! Why, Warwick, when we parted,

Thou call'dst me king.

War. Ay, but the case is alter'd:

When you disgraced me in my embassy,

Then I degraded you from being king.

And come now to create you Duke of York.

Alas! how should you govern any kingdom,

That know not how to use ambassadors,

Nor how to be contented with one wife,

Nor how to use your brothers brotherly,

Nor how to stray for the people's welfare,

Nor how to shroud yourself from enemies!

K. Edw. Yea, brother of Clarence, art thou here too!

Nay, then I see that Edward needs must down.

Yet, Warwick, in despite of all mischance,

Of thee thyself and all thy complices,

Edward will always bear himself as king:

Though fortune's malice overthrow my state,

My mind exceeds the compass of her wheel.

War. Then, for his mind, be Edward England's king: [Takes off his crown.]

But Henry now shall wear the English crown,

And be true king indeed, thou but the shadow.

My Lord of Somerset, at my request,

See that forthwith Duke Edward be convey'd

Unto my brother, Archbishop of York.

When I have fought with Pembroke and his fellow,

I'll follow you, and tell what answer Lewis and the Lady Bonn send to him.

Now, for a while farewell, good Duke of York.

[They lead him out forcibly.]

K. Edw. What fate imposes, that men must

needs abide;

It boots not to resist both wind and tide.

[Exit, guarded.]

Oxf. What now remains, my lords, for us

to do

But march to London with our soldiers!

War. Ay, that's the first thing that we have to do;

To free King Henry from imprisonment

And see him seated in the regal throne.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. London. The palace.

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH and RIVERS.

Riv. Madam, what makes you in this sudden change?

Q. Eliz. Why, brother Rivers, are you yet to learn

What late misfortune is befall'n King Edward?

Riv. What! loss of some pitch'd battle against Warwick?

Q. Eliz. No, but the loss of his own royal person.

Riv. Then is my sovereign slain?

Q. Eliz. Ay, almost slain, for he is taken prisoner,

Either betray'd by falsehood of his guard

Or by his foe surprised at unawares;

And, as I further have to understand,

Is now committed to the Bishop of York,

Fell Warwick's brother and by that our foe.

Riv. These news I must confess are full of grief;

Yet, gracious madam, bear it as you may:

Warwick may lose, that now hath won the day.

Q. Eliz. Till then fair hope must hinder life's decay.

And I the rather wean me from despair

For love of Edward's offspring in my womb:

This is it that makes me bride passion

And bear with mildness my misfortune's cross:

Ay, ay, for this I draw in many a tear

And stop the rising of blood-sucking sighs,

Lest with my sighs or tears I blast or drown

King Edward's fruit, true heir to the English crown.

Riv. But, madam, where is Warwick then become?

Q. Eliz. I am inform'd that he comes towards London.

To set the crown once more on Henry's head:

Guess thou the rest; King Edward's friends must down.

But, to prevent the tyrant's violence,—

For trust not him that hath once broken faith,—

I'll hence forthwith unto the sanctuary

To save at least the heir of Edward's state.

There shall I rest secure from force and fear.

Come, therefore, let us fly while we may.

[Warwick takes us we are sure to the sanctuary.]

SCENE V. A park near Middleham Castle in Yorkshire.

Enter GLOUCESTER, LORD HASTINGS, and SIR WILLIAM STANLEY.

Glos. Now, my Lord Hastings and Sir William Stanley,
Leave off to wonder why I drew you hither,
Into this chiefest thicket of the park.
Thus stands the case: you know our king, my brother,

Is prisoner to the bishop here, at whose hands
He hath good usage and great liberty,
And, often but attended with weak guard,
Comes hunting this way to disport himself.
I have advertised him by secret means
That if about this hour he make this way
Under the colour of his usual game,
He shall here find his friends with horse and men
To set him free from his captivity.

Enter KING EDWARD and a Huntsman with him.

Hunt. This way, my lord; for this way lies the game.

K. Edw. Nay, this way, man: see where the huntsmen stand.

Now, brother of Gloucester, Lord Hastings, and the rest,

Stand you thus close, to steal the bishop's deer?
Glos. Brother, the time and case requireth haste:

Your horse stands ready at the park-corner.

K. Edw. But whither shall we then?

Hast. To Lynn, my lord, so And ship from thence to Flanders.

Glos. Well guess'd, believe me; for that was my meaning.

K. Edw. Stanley, I will requite thy forwardness.

Glos. But wherefore stay we? 'tis no time to talk.

K. Edw. Huntsman, what say'st thou? wilt thou go along?

Hunt. Better do so than tarry and be hang'd.

Glos. Come then, away; let's ha' no more ado.

K. Edw. Bishop, farewell: shield thee from Warwick's frown;
And pray that I may repossess the crown.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. London. The Tower.

Flourish. Enter KING HENRY, CLARENCE, WARWICK, SOMERSET, young RICHMOND, OXFORD, MONTAGUE, and Lieutenant of the Tower.

K. Hen. Master Lieutenant, now that God and I have
Have shewn Edward from the regal seat,
And set him in my captive state to liberty,
And have hope, my sorrows unto joys,
What are thy due fees?

Lieu. Subjects may challenge nothing of their sovereigns;

But if an humble prayer may prevail,
I then crave pardon of your majesty.

K. Hen. For what, lieutenant? for well using me?

Nay, be thou sure I'll well requite thy kindness;
For that it made my imprisonment a pleasure;
Ay, such a pleasure as incaged birds
Conceive when after many moody thoughts
At last by notes of household harmony
They quite forget their loss of liberty.

But, Warwick, after God, thou set'st me free,
And chiefly therefore I thank God and thee;
He was the author, thou the instrument.

Therefore, that I may conquer fortune's spite
By living low, where fortune cannot hurt me,
And that the people of this blessed land
May not be punish'd with my thwarting stars,
Warwick, although my head still wear the crown,

I here resign my government to thee.
For thou art fortunate in all thy deeds.

War. Your grace hath still been famed for virtuous;

And now may seem as wise as virtuous,
By spying and avoiding fortune's malice,
For few men rightly temper with the stars:
Yet in this one thing let me blame your grace,
For choosing me when Clarence is in place.

Clar. No, Warwick, thou art worthy of the sway,

To whom the heavens in thy nativity
Adjudget an olive branch and laurel crown,
As likely to be blest in peace and war;
And therefore I yield thee my free consent.

War. And I choose Clarence only for protector.

K. Hen. Warwick and Clarence, give me both your hands:

Now join your hands, and with your hands your hearts,

That no dissension hinder government:

I make you both protectors of this land,
While I myself will lead a private life

And in devotion spend my latter days,
To sin's rebuke and my Creator's praise.

War. What answers Clarence to his sovereign's will?

Clar. That he consents, if Warwick yield consent;

For on thy fortune I repose myself.

War. Why, then, though loath, yet must I be content:

We'll yoke together, like a double shadow
To Henry's body, and supply his place;

I mean, in bearing weight of government,
While he enjoys the honour and his ease.

And, Clarence, now then it is more than needful
Forthwith that Edward be pronounced a traitor,
And all his lands and goods be confiscate.

Clar. What else? and that succession be determined.

War. Ay, therein Clarence shall not want his part.

K. Hen. But, with the first of all your chief affairs,

Let me entreat, for I command no more.

That Margaret your queen and my son Edward
Be sent for, to return from France with speed;
For, till I see them here, by doubtful fear
My joy of liberty is half eclipsed.

Clar. It shall be done, my sovereign, with all speed.

K. Hen. My Lord of Somerset, what youth is that,
Of whom you seem to have so tender care?

Som. My liege, it is young Henry, earl of Richmond.

K. Hen. Come hither, England's hope.
[Lays his hand on his head.] If secret powers
Suggest but truth to my divining thoughts,
This pretty lad will prove our country's bliss.
His looks are full of peaceful majesty,
His head by nature framed to wear a crown,
His hand to wield a sceptre, and himself
Likely in time to bless a regal throne.
Make much of him, my lords, for this is he Must help you more than you are hurt by me.

Enter a Post.

War. What news, my friend!

Post. That Edward is escaped from your
brother.

And fled, as he hears since, to Burgundy.

War. Unsaucy news! but how made he escape?

Post. He was convey'd by Richard Duke of Gloucester

And the Lord Hastings, who attended him
In secret ambush on the forest side
And from the bishop's huntsmen rescued him;
For hunting was his daily exercise.

War. My brother was too careless of his charge.

But let us hence, my sovereign, to provide
A salve for any sore that may betide.

[*Exeunt all but Somerset, Richmond,
and Oxford.*]

Som. My lord, I like not of this flight of Edward's;

For doubtless Burgundy will yield him help,
And we shall have more wars before 't be long.

As Henry's late presaging prophecy
Did glad my heart with hope of this young

Richmond.

So doth my heart misgive me, in these conflicts
What may befall him, to his harm and ours:
Therefore, Lord Oxford, to prevent the worst,
Forthwith we'll send him hence to Brittany,
Till storms be past of civil enmity.

Oxf. Ay, for if Edward repossess the crown, Tis like that Richmond with the rest shall
down.

Som. It shall be so; he shall to Brittany.

Come, therefore, let's about it speedily.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. Before York.

Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD, GLOUCESTER,
HASTINGS, and Soldiers.

K. Edw. Now, brother Richard, Lord
Hastings, and the rest,

Yet thus far fortune maketh us arm'd,
And says that once more I shall interchange

My waned state for Henry's regal crown.
Well have we pass'd and now repass'd the seas
And brought desired help from Burgundy:
What then remains, we being thus arrived
From Ravenspurgh haven before the gates of York,

But that we enter, as into our dukedom!
Glow. The gates made fast! Brother, I like not this;

For many men that stumble at the threshold
Are well foretold that danger lurks within.

K. Edw. Tush, man, abodements must not now affright us:

By fair or foul means we must enter in,
For hither will our friends repair to us.

Hast. My liege, I'll knock once more to summon them.

Enter, on the walls, the Mayor of York, and his Brethren.

May. My lords, we were forewarned of your coming,

And shut the gates for safety of ourselves;
For now we owe allegiance unto Henry.

K. Edw. But, master mayor, if Henry be
your king,

Yet Edward at the least is Duke of York.

May. True, my good lord; I know you for no less.

K. Edw. Why, and I challenge nothing but my dukedom,

As being well content with that alone.

Glow. [Aside] But when the fox hath once got in his nose,

He'll soon find means to make the body follow.

Hast. Why, master mayor, why stand you in a doubt?

Open the gates; we are King Henry's friends.

May. Ay, say you so! the gates shall then be open'd. [The gates descend.]

Glow. A wise stout captain, and soon persuaded!

Hast. The good old man would fain that all were well.

So 'twere not 'long of him; but being enter'd,
I doubt not, I, but we shall soon persuade

Both him and all his brothers unto reason.

Enter the Mayor and two Aldermen, below.

K. Edw. So, master mayor: those gates must not be shut

But in the night or in the time of war.

What! fear not, man, but yield me up the keys; [Takes his keys.]

For Edward will defend the town and thee,
And all those friends that deign to follow me.

March. Enter MONTGOMERY, with drum and soldiers.

Glow. Brother, this is Sir John Montgomery,
Our trusty friend, unless I be deceived.

K. Edw. Welcome, Sir John! But why come you in arms?

Mont. To help King Edward in his time of storm.

As every loyal subject ought to do.

K. Edw. Thanks, good Montgomery; but we now forget

Our title to the crown and only claim

Our dukedom till God please to send the rest.

Mont. Then fare you well, for I will hence again:

I came to serve a king and not a duke.

Drummer, strike up, and let us march away. Go

(The drum begins to march.)

K. Hen. Nay, stay, Sir John, awhile, and we'll debate

By what safe means the crown may be recover'd.

Mont. What talk you of debating? in few

words,

If you'll not here proclaim yourself our king,

I'll leave you to your fortune and be gone

To keep them back that come to succour you:

Why shall we fight, if you pretend no title?

Glow. Why, brother, wherefore stand you on nice points?

K. Hen. When we grow stronger, then we'll make our claim:

Till then, 'tis wisdom to conceal our meaning.

Hast. Away with scrupulous wit! now arms must rule.

Glow. And fearless minds climb soonest unto crowns.

Brother, we will proclaim you out of hand;

The trait thereof will bring you many friends.

K. Hen. Then be it as you will; for 'tis my right.

And Henry but usurps the diadem.

Mont. Ay, now my sovereign speaketh like himself;

And now will I be Edward's champion.

Hast. Sound trumpet; Edward shall be here

proclaim'd:

Come, fellow-soldier, make thou proclamation.

(Flourish.)

Sold. Edward the Fourth, by the grace of God, king of England and France, and lord of Ireland, &c.

Mont. And whose'er gainsays King Edward's right,

By this I challenge him to single fight.

(Thomas doth his pennant let.)

Al. Long live Edward the Fourth!

K. Hen. Thanks, brave Montgomery; and thanks unto you all:

If fortune serve me, I'll requite this kindness.

Now, for this night, let's harbour here in York;

And when the morning sun shall raise his car

Above the border of this horizon,

We'll forward towards Warwick and his mates;

For well I wot that Henry is no soldier.

Al. Forward Clarence! how evil it becoms thee,

To sister Henry and forsake thy brother!

Yet, as we may, we'll meet both thee and

Warwick.

Come on, brave soldiers: doubt not of the day,

And, that once gotten, doubt not of large pay.

(Exeunt.)

Scene VIII. London. The palace.

Flourish. Enter KING HENRY, WARWICK,

MONTAGUE, CLARENCE, EXETER, and

OXFORD.

War. What counsel, lords? Edward from Bath.

With hasty Germans and blunt Hollanders,

Hath pass'd in safety through the narrow seas,

And with his troops doth march amain to

London:

And many giddy people flock to him.

K. Hen. Let a levy men, and beat him back

again.

Clar. A little fire is quickly trodden out;

Which, being suffer'd, rivers cannot quench.

War. In Warwickshire I have true-hearted

friends,

Not mutinous in peace, yet bold in war:

Those will I muster up: and thou, son Clarence,

Shalt stir up in Suffolk, Norfolk and in Kent,

The knights and gentlemen to come with thee:

Thou, brother Montague, in Buckingham,

Northampton and in Leicestershire, shalt find

Men well inclined to hear what thou command'st:

And thou, brave Oxford, wondrous well beloved,

In Oxfordshire shalt muster up thy friends.

My sovereign, with the loving citizens,

Like to his island girl in with the ocean,

Or modest Dian circled with her nymphs,

Shall rest in London till we come to him.

Fair lords, take leave and stand not to reply.

Farewell, my sovereign.

K. Hen. Farewell, my Hector, and my Troy's true hope.

Clar. In sign of truth, I kiss your highness'
hand.

K. Hen. Well-minded Clarence, be thou fortunate!

Mont. Comfort, my lord; and so I take my leave.

Oxf. And thus I seal my truth, and bid adieu.

K. Hen. Sweet Oxford, and my loving
Montague,

And all at once, once more a happy farewell.

War. Farewell, sweet lords: let's meet at Coventry.

(Exeunt all but King Henry and Exeter.)

K. Hen. Here at the palace will I rest awhile.

Cousin of Exeter, what thinks your lordship?

Methinks the power that Edward hath in field

Should not be able to encounter mine.

Exe. The doubt is that he will seduce the rest.

K. Hen. That's not my fear; my need hath got me fame:

I have not stopp'd mine ears to their demands,

Nor posted off their suits with slow delays:

My pity hath been balm to heal their wounds,

My mildness hath allay'd their swelling griefs,

My mercy dried their water-flowing tears;

I have not been desirous of their wealth,

Nor much oppress'd them with great subsidies.

Nor forward of revenge, though they much err'd:

Then why should they love Edward more than
me?

No, Exeter, these grooves challenge grace:

And when the lion lewys upon the lamb,

The lamb will never cease to follow him.

(Shout within. A Lancaster! A Lancaster!)

Ecc. Hark, hark, my lord! what shouts are these!

Enter KING EDWARD, GLOUCESTER, and soldiers.

K. Edw. Seize on the shame-faced Henry, bear him hence;
And once again proclaim us king of England.
You are the fount that makes small brooks to flow:

Now stops thy spring; my sea shall suck them dry,

And swell so much the higher by their ebb.
Hence with him to the Tower; let him not speak. [Exeunt some with King Henry.]

And, lords, towards Coventry bend we our course,

Where peremptory Warwick now remains:
The sun shines hot; and, if we use delay,

60 Cold biting winter mars our hoped-for hay.

Glou. Away betimes, before his forces join,
And take the great-grown traitor unawares:

Drive warriors, march amain towards Coventry. [Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I. Coventry.

Enter WARWICK, the Mayor of Coventry, two Messengers, and others upon the walls.

War. Where is the post that came from valiant Oxford?

How far hence is thy lord, mine honest fellow?

First Mess. By this at Dunsmore, marching hitherward.

War. How far off is our brother Montague?

Second Mess. By this at Daintrey, with a puissant troop.

Enter SIR JOHN SOMERVILLE.

War. Say, Somerville, what says my loving son?

And, by thy guess, how nigh is Clarence now?

Som. As Southam I did leave him with his forces,

And do expect him here some two hours hence. [Drum heard.]

War. Then Clarence is at hand; I hear his drum.

Som. It is not his, my lord; here Southam lies:

The drum your honour hears marcheth from Warwick.

War. Who should that be? belike, unlook'd-for friends.

Som. They are at hand, and you shall quickly know.

March: flourish. Enter KING EDWARD, GLOUCESTER, and soldiers.

K. Edw. Go, trumpet, to the walls, and sound a parle.

Glou. See how the surly Warwick mans the wall!

War. O unbid spite! is sportful Edward come!

Where slept our scouts, or how are they seduced?

That we could hear no news of his repair? 20
K. Edw. Now, Warwick, wilt thou ope the city gates,

Speak gentle words and humbly bend thy knee,
Call Edward king and at his hands beg mercy?

And he shall pardon thee these outrages.

War. Nay, rather, wilt thou draw thy forces hence,

Confess who set thee up and pluck'd thee down,
Call Warwick patron and be penitent?

And thou shalt still remain the Duke of York.

Glou. I thought, at least, he would have said the king;

Or did he make the jest against his will? 30
War. Is not a dukedom, sir, a goodly gift?

Glou. Ay, by my faith, for a poor earl to give:

I'll do thee service for so good a gift.

War. 'Twas I that gave the kingdom to thy brother.

K. Edw. Why then 'tis mine, if but by Warwick's gift.

War. Thou art no Atlas for so great a weight:

And, weakling, Warwick takes his gift again;
And Henry is my king, Warwick his subject.

K. Edw. But Warwick's king is Edward's prisoner:

And, gallant Warwick, do but answer this: 40
What is the body when the head is off?

Glou. Alas, that Warwick had no more forecast

But, whilst he thought to steal the single ten,
The king was silly finger'd from the deck!

You left poor Henry at the Bishop's palace,
And, ten to one, you'll meet him in the Tower.

K. Edw. 'Tis even so; yet you are Warwick still.

Glou. Come, Warwick, take the time; kneel down, kneel down:

Nay, when? strike now, or else the iron cools.

War. I had rather chop this hand off at a blow,

And with the other fling it at thy face,

Than bear so low a sail, to strike to thee. 50

K. Edw. Sail how thou canst, have wind and tide thy friend,

This hand, fast wound about thy coal-black hair,

Shall, whilst thy head is warm and new cut off,
Write in the dust this sentence with thy blood,

'Wind-changing Warwick now can change no more.

Enter OXFORD, with drum and colours.

War. O chearful colours! see where Oxford comes!

Oxf. Oxford, Oxford, for Lancaster!

[He and his forces enter the city.]

Glou. The gates are open, let us enter too.

K. Edw. So other foes may not upon our backs. 60

Stand we in good array; for they no doubt
Will issue out again and bid us battle:
If not, the city being but of small defence,
We'll quickly rouse the traitors in the name.

War. O, welcome, Oxford! for we want thy help.

Enter MONTAGUE, with drum and colours.

Mont. Montague, Montague, for Lancaster!
[He and his forces enter the city.]

Glow. Thou and thy brother both shall buy this treason

Even with the dearest blood your bodies bear.

K. Edw. The harder match'd, the greater victory:

My mind presseth happy gain and conquest.⁷⁰

Enter SOMERSET, with drum and colours.

Som. Somerset, Somerset, for Lancaster!
[He and his forces enter the city.]

Glow. Two of thy name, both Dukes of Somerset,

Have sold their lives unto the house of York;
And thou shalt be the third, if this sword hold.

Enter CLARENCE, with drum and colours.

War. And lo, where George of Clarence sweeps along,

Of force enough to bid his brother battle;
With whom an upright zeal to right prevails
More than the nature of a brother's love!

Come, Clarence, come; thou wilt, if Warwick call.⁸⁰

Clar. Father of Warwick, know you what this means?

[Taking his red rose out of his hat.]

Look here, I throw my infamy at thee:
I will not ruinate my father's house,
Who gave his blood to lime the stones together,
And set up Lancaster. Why, trow'st thou,
Warwick,

That Clarence is so harsh, so blunt, unnatural,
To bend the fatal instruments of war

Against his brother and his lawful king?
Perhaps thou wilt object my holy oath:

To keep that oath were more impiety
Than Jephthah's, when he sacrific'd his daughter.⁹⁰

I am so sorry for my trespass made
That, to deserve well at my brother's hands,

I here proclaim myself thy mortal foe,
With resolution, wheresoe'er I meet thee—

As I will meet thee, if thou stir abroad—
To plague thee for thy foul misleading me.

And so, proud-hearted Warwick, I defy thee,
And to my brother turn my blushing cheeks.

Pardon me, Edward, I will make amends:¹⁰⁰
And, Richard, do not frown upon my faults.

For I will henceforth be no more unconstant.
K. Edw. Now welcome more, and ten times more beloved,

Than if thou never hadst deserved our hate.

Glow. Welcome, good Clarence; this is brother-like.

War. O passing traitor, perjured and unjust!

K. Edw. What, Warwick, wilt thou leave the town and fight?

Or shall we beat the stones about thine ears?

War. Alas, I am not coop'd here for defence!

I will away towards Barnet presently.¹¹⁰
And let fight battle, Edward, if thou dar'st.

K. Edw. Yes, Warwick, Edward dares, and leads the way.

Lords, to the field; Saint George and victory!
[Exeunt King Edward and his company.]

March. Warwick and his company follow.

SCENE II. A field of battle near Barnet.

Alarm and excursions. Enter KING EDWARD, bringing forth WARWICK wounded.

K. Edw. So, lie thou there: die thou, and die our fear;

For Warwick was a hug that fear'd us all:
Now, Montague, sit fast; I seek for thee,

That Warwick's bones may keep thine company.¹²⁰
[Exit.]

War. Ah, who is nigh? come to me, friend or foe,

And tell me who is victor, York or Warwick?
Why ask I that! my mangled body shows,

My blood, my want of strength, my sick heart shows,

That I must yield my body to the earth
And, by my fall, the conquest to my foe.¹³⁰

Thus yields the cedar to the axe's edge,
Whose arms gave shelter to the princely eagle,

Under whose shade the ramping lion slept,
Whose top-branch overpeer'd Jove's spreading

tree
And kept low shrubs from winter's powerful

wind.
These eyes, that now are dimm'd with death's

black veil,
Have been as piercing as the mid-day sun,

To search the secret treasours of the world:
The wrinkles in my brows, now fill'd with

blood,
Were likend' oft to kingly sepulchres;

For who lived king, but I could dig his grave?
And who durst smile when Warwick bent his brow?¹⁴⁰

Lo, now my glory smear'd in dust and blood!

My parks, my walks, my manors that I had,
Even now forsake me, and of all my lands

Is nothing left me but my body's length.
Why, what is pomp, rule, reign, but earth and dust?

And, live we how we can, yet die we must.

Enter OXFORD and SOMERSET.

Som. Ah, Warwick, Warwick! wert thou as we are,

We might recover all our loss again:¹⁵⁰
The queen from France hath brought a puissant

power:
Even now we heard the news: ah, couldst thou

fly!

War. Why, then I would not fly. Ah, Montague,

If thou be there, sweet brother, take my hand,
And with thy lips keep in my soul awhile!

Thou lovest me not; for, brother, if thou
Thy tears would wash this cold congealed

That glues my lips and will not let me speak.
Come quickly, Montague, or I am dead.

Som. Ah, Warwick! Montague hath breath'd his last;¹⁶⁰

And to the latest gasp cried out for Warwick
And said 'Commend me to my valiant brother.' And more he would have said, and more he spoke,

Which sounded like a clamour in a vault,
That might not be distinguish'd; but at last
I well might hear, deliver'd with a groan,
'O, farewell, Warwick!'

War. Sweet rest his soul! Fly, lords, and save yourselves;

For Warwick bids you all farewell, to meet in heaven. [Dies.]

Oxf. Away, away, to meet the queen's great power! [Here they bear away his body.]
Exeunt.

SCENE III. Another part of the field.

Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD in triumph; with GLOUCESTER, CLARENCE, and the rest.

K. Edw. Thus far our fortune keeps an upward course,
And we are graced with wreaths of victory.
But, in the midst of this bright-shining day,
I spy a black, suspicious, threatening cloud,
That will encounter with our glorious sun,
Ere he attain his careful western bed:

I mean, my lords, those powers that the queen
Hath raised in Gallia have arrived our coast
And, as we hear, march on to fight with us.

Clar. A little gale will soon disperse that cloud

And blow it to the source from whence it came
The very beams will dry those vapours up,
For every cloud engenders not a storm.

Glow. The queen is valued thirty thousand strong,

And Somerset, with Oxford, fled to her:
If she have time to breathe, be well assured
Her faction will be full as strong as ours.

K. Edw. We are advertised by our loving
friends

That they do hold their course toward Tewks-
bury:

We, having now the best at Barnet field, —
Will thither straight, for willingness bids way;
And, as we march, our strength will be augmented

In every county as we go along.
Strike up the drum; cry 'Courage!' and away
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Plains near Tewksbury.

March. Enter QUEEN MARGARET, PRINCE EDWARD, SOMERSET, OXFORD, and soldiers.

Q. Mar. Great lords, wise men ne'er sit and wail their loss,

But cheerly seek how to redress their harms.
What though the mast be now blown overboard,

The cable broke, the holding-anchor lost,
And half our masts swallow'd in the flood?

Yet lives our pilot still. Is't meet that he Should leave the helm and like a fearful lad

With fearful eyes add water to the sea
And give more strength to that which hath too

much,
While, in his moans, the ship splits on the rock,

Which industry and courage might have saved!
Ah, what a shame! ah, what a fault were this!
I say Warwick was our anchor; what of that!
And Montague our topmast; what of him!
Our slaughter'd friends the tackles; what of
these!

Why, is not Oxford here another anchor?

And Somerset another goodly mast?

The friends of France our shrouds and tacklings!

And, though unskilful, why not Ned and I
For once allow'd the skilful pilot's charge?

We will not from the helm to sit and weep,
But keep our course, though the rough wind

say no,
From shelves and rocks that threaten us with wreck.

As good to chide the waves as speak them fair.

And what is Edward but a ruthless sea?

What Clarence but a quicksand of deceit?

And Richard but a ragged fatal rock?

All these the enemies to our poor bark.

Say you can swim; alas, 'tis but a while!

Tread on the sand; why, there you quickly

sink:

Bestride the rock; the tide will wash you off,

(Or else you famish; that's a threefold death.

This speak I, lords, to let you understand,

If case some one of you would fly from us,

That there's no hoped-for mercy with the brothers

More than with ruthless waves, with sands and rocks.

Why, courage then! what cannot be avoided

'Twere childish weakness to lament or fear.

Prince. Methinks a woman of this valiant

spirit

Should, if a coward heard her speak these

words,

Infuse his breast with magnanimity

And make him, naked, foil a man at arms,

I speak not this as doubting any here;

For did I but suspect a fearful man,

He should have leave to go away betimes,

Lest in our need he might infect another

And make him of like spirit to himself.

If any such be here—as God forbid!—

Let him depart before we need his help.

Oxf. Women and children of, so high a

courage,

And warriors faint! why, 'twere perpetual shame.

O brave young prince! thy famous grandfather

Doth live again in thee: long mayst thou live

To bear his image and renew his glories!

Som. And he that will not fight for such a hope,

Go home to bed, and like the owl by day,

If he arise, be mock'd and wonder'd at.

Q. Mar. Thanks, gentle Somerset; sweet

Oxford, thanks.

Prince. And take his thanks that yet hath nothing else.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Prepare you, lords, for Edward is at

hand,

Ready to fight; therefore be resolute.

Oxf. I thought no less: it is his policy
To haste thus fast, to find us unprovided.

Som. But he's deceived; we are in readiness.

Q. Mar. This cheers my heart, to see your forwardness.

Oxf. Here pitch our battle; hence we will not budge.

Flourish and march. Enter KING EDWARD, GLOUCESTER, CLARENCE, and soldiers.

K. Edw. Brave followers, yonder stands the thorny wood,
Which, by the heavens' assistance and your strength,

Must by the roots be hewn up yet ere night.
I need not add more fuel to your fire, 70

For well I wot ye blaze to burn them out:
Give signal to the fight, and to it, lords!

Q. Mar. Lords, knights, and gentlemen,
what I should say

My tears gainsay: for every word I speak,
Ye see, I drink the water of mine eyes.

Therefore, no more but this: Henry, your sovereign,

Is prisoner to the foe; his state usurp'd,
His realm a slaughter-house, his subjects slain,

His statutes cancell'd and his treasure spent;
And yonder is the wolf that makes this spoil. 80

You fight in justice: then, in God's name, lords,
Be valiant and give signal to the fight.

[Alarum: Retreat: Excursions. Exit.]

SCENE V. Another part of the field.

Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD, GLOUCESTER, CLARENCE, and soldiers; with QUEEN MARGARET, OXFORD, and SOMERSET, prisoners.

K. Edw. Now here a period of tumultuous broils.

Away with Oxford to Hamme Castle straight:
For Somerset, off with his guilty head.

Go, bear them hence; I will not hear them speak.

Oxf. For my part, I'll not trouble thee with words.

Som. Nor I, but stoop with patience to my fortune.

[Exit Oxford and Somerset, guarded.]

Q. Mar. So part we sadly in this troublous world.

To meet with joy in sweet Jerusalem.

K. Edw. Is proclamation made, that who finds Edward

Shall have a high reward, and he his life! 10

Glow. It is: and lo, where youthful Edward comes!

Enter soldiers, with PRINCE EDWARD.

K. Edw. Bring forth the gallant, let us hear him speak.

What! can so young a thorn begin to prick!
Edward, what satisfaction canst thou make

For bearing arms, for stirring up my subjects,
And all the trouble thou hast turn'd me to?

Prince. Speak like a subject, proud ambitious York!

Suppose that I am now my father's mouth;

Resign thy chair, and where I stand kneel thou,
Whilst I propose the selfsame words to thee, so

Which, traitor, thou wouldst have me answer to.

Q. Mar. Ah, that thy father had been so resolved!

Glow. That you might still have worn the petticoat,

And ne'er have stol'n the breech from Lancaster.

Prince. Let Æsop fable in a winter's night;
His curriish riddles sort not with this place.

Glow. By heaven, brat, I'll plague ye for that word.

Q. Mar. Ay, thou wast born to be a plague to men.

Glow. For God's sake, take away this captive scold.

Prince. Nay, take away this scolding crook-back rather. 30

K. Edw. Peace, wilful boy, or I will charm your tongue.

Clar. Untutor'd lad, thou art too malapert.

Prince. I know my duty; you are all undutiful:

Lascivious Edward, and then perjured George,
And thou mis-shapen Dick, I tell ye all

I am your better, traitors as ye are:

And thou usurp'st my father's right and mine.

K. Edw. Take that, thou likeness of this railer here. [Stabs him.]

Glow. Sprawl'st thou? take that, to end thy agony. [Stabs him.]

Clar. And there's for twitting me with perjury. [Stabs him.] 40

Q. Mar. O, kill me too!

Glow. Marry, and shall. [Offers to kill her.]

K. Edw. Hold, Richard, hold; for we have done too much.

Glow. Why should she live, to fill the world with words?

K. Edw. What, doth she swoon? use means for her recovery.

Glow. Clarence, excuse me to the king my brother;

I'll hence to London on a serious matter:

Ere ye come there, be sure to hear some news.

Clar. What? what?

Glow. The Tower, the Tower. [Exit.] 50

Q. Mar. O Ned, sweet Ned! speak to thy mother, boy!

Canst thou not speak? O traitors! murderers!

They that stol'st Cæsar shed no blood at all,
I did not offend, nor were not worthy blame,

If this foul deed were by to equal it:

He was a man; this, in respect, a child:
And men ne'er spend their fury on a child.

What's worse than murderer, that I may name it!

No, no, my heart will burst, an if I speak:
And I will speak, that so my heart may burst.

Butchers and villains! bloody cannibals! 60

How sweet a plant have you untimely crop'd!

You have no children, butchers! if you had,

The thought of them would have stirr'd up remorse:

But if you ever chance to have a child,

Look in his youth to have him so cut off

As, deathmen, you have rid this sweet young prince!

K. Edw. Away with her; go, bear her hence performe.

Q. Mar. Nay, never bear me hence, dispatch me here;
Here sheathe thy sword, I'll pardon thee my
death;

What wilt thou not? then, Clarence, do it
thou.

Clar. By heaven, I will not do thee so much ease.

Q. Mar. Good Clarence, do; sweet Clarence, do thou do it.

Clar. Didst thou not hear me swear I would not do it?

Q. Mar. Ay, but thou wast to forswear thy-
self:

Twice sin before, but now 'tis charity.

What wilt thou not? Where is that devil's butcher,

Hard favour'd Richard! Richard, where art
thou?

Thou art not here: murder is thy aim'd-deed;
Petitioners for blood thou ne'er put'st back.

K. Edw. Away, I say; I charge ye, bear her
hence.

Q. Mar. So come to you and yours, as to this prince!

K. Edw. Where's Richard gone?

Clar. To London, all in post; and, as I guess,
To make a bloody supper in the Tower.

K. Edw. He's sudden, if a thing comes in his head.

Now march we hence: discharge the common sort

With pay and thanks, and let's away to London
And see our gentle queen how well she fares:

By this, I hope, she hath a son for me. [Exit.]

SCENE VI. London. The Tower.

Enter KING HENRY and GLOUCESTER, with the Lieutenant, on the walls.

Glow. Good day, my lord. What, at your book so hard?

K. Hen. Ay, my good lord:—my lord, I should say rather;

'Tis sin to flatter; good' was little better:

'Good Gloucester' and 'good devil' were like,
And both preposterous; therefore, not 'good
lord.'

Glow. Sirrah, leave us to ourselves: we must confer. [Exit Lieutenant.]

K. Hen. So flies the reckless shepherd from the wolf;

So first the harmless sheep doth yield his fleece
And next his throat unto the butcher's knife.

What scene of death hath Rouscius now to act?

Glow. Suspicion always haunts the guilty
mind;

The thief doth fear each bush an officer.

K. Hen. The bird that hath been lined in a bush,

With trembling wings misdoubteth every bush;
And I, the hapless male to one sweet bird,

Have now the fatal object in my eye
Where my poor young was lined, was caught and kill'd.

Glow. Why, what a peevish fool was that of Crete,

That taught his son the office of a fowl!

And yet, for all his wings, the fool was drownd.

K. Hen. I, Diodorus; my poor boy, I mean;
Thy father, Minos, that drownd our course;

The son that fear'd the death of my sweet boy
Thy brother Edward, and himself the sea;

Whose envious gulf did swallow up his life.
Ah, kill me with thy weapon, not with words!

My breast can better brook thy dagger's point
Than can my ears that tragic history.

But wherefore dost thou come? is't for my life?

Glow. Think'st thou I am an executioner?

K. Hen. A persecutor, I am sure, thou art:
If murdering innocents be executing,

Why, then thou art an executioner.

Glow. Thy son I kill'd for his presumption.

K. Hen. Hadst thou been kill'd when first thou didst presume,

Thou hadst not lived to kill a son of mine.

And thus I prophesy, that many a thousand;
Which now mistrust no parcel of my fear,

And many an old man's sigh and many a
widow's,

And many an orphan's water-standing eye—
Men for their sons, wives for their husbands,

And orphans for their parents' timeless death—
Shall rue the hour that ever thou wast born.

The owl shriek'd at thy birth,—an evil sign;
The night-crow cried, aboding luckless time;

Dogs howl'd, and hideous tempest shook down
trees;

The raven rook'd her on the chimney's top,
And chattering pies in dismal discords sung.

Thy mother felt more than a mother's pain,
And yet brought forth less than a mother's
hope,

To wit, an indigested and deformed lump,
Not like the fruit of such a goodly tree.

To wit, thou in thy head when thou wast
born.

To signify thou camest to bite the world:

And, if the rest be true which I have heard,
Thou camest—

Glow. I'll hear no more: die, prophet, in thy speech: [Strike him.]

For this, amongst the rest, was I ordain'd.

K. Hen. Ay, and for much more slaughter after this.

O, God forgive my sins, and pardon thee! [Dies.]

Glow. What, will the aspiring blood of Lancaster

Sink in the ground? I thought it would have mounted.

See how my sword weeps for the poor king's
death!

O, may such purple tears be always shed
From those that wish the downfall of our house!

If any spark of life be yet remaining,
Down, down to hell; and say I sent thee thither:

[Strike him again.]
I, that have neither pity, love, nor fear,
Indeed, 'tis true that Henry told me of;
For I have often heard my mother say
I came into the world with my legs forward:

Had I not reason, think ye, to make haste,
And seek their ruin that usurp'd our right?

The midwife wonder'd and the women cried
 'O, Jesus bless us, he is born with teeth!'
 And so I was; which plaitly signified
 That I should snarl and bite and play the dog.
 Then, since I've heavens have shaped my body so
 Let hell make cruel use of my mind to answer it.
 I have no brother, like no brother; 80
 And this word 'brother,' which greybeards call divine,
 Be resident in men like one another
 And not in me: I am myself alone.
 Clarence, beware; thou keep'st me from the light:
 But I will sort a pitchy day for thee;
 For I will buzz abroad such prophecies
 That Edward shall be fearful of his life,
 And then, to purge his fear, I'll be thy death.
 King Henry and the prince his son are gone:
 Clarence, thy turn is next, and then the rest, 90
 Counting myself but bad till I be best.
 I'll throw thy body in another room
 And triumph, Henry, in thy day of doom.

[Exit, with the body.]

SCENE VII. London. The palace.

Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD, QUEEN ELIZABETH, CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, HASTINGS, a Nurse with the young Prince, and Attendants.

K. Edw. Once more we sit in England's royal throne,
 Re-purchased with the blood of enemies.
 What valiant foemen, like to autumn's corn,
 Have we mow'd down in tops of all their pride!
 Three Dukes of Somerset, threefold renown'd
 For hardy and undoubted champions;
 Two Clifords, as the father and the son,
 And two Northumberlands; two braver men
 Ne'er spur'd their coursers at the trumpet's
 sound;
 With them, the two brave bears, Warwick and
 Montague, 20
 That in their chains fetter'd the kingly lion
 And made the forest tremble when they roar'd.

Thus have we swept suspicion from our seat
 And made our footstool of security.
 Come hither, Bea, and let me kiss my boy.
 Young Ned, for thee, thine uncles and myself
 Have in our armours watch'd the winter's night,
 Went all afoot in summer's scalding heat,
 That thou might'st repose the crown in peace;
 And of our labours thou shalt reap the gain. 20
Glouc. [Aside] I'll blast his harvest, if your head were laid;

For yet I am not look'd on in the world.
 This shoulder was ordain'd so thick to heave;
 And heave it shall some weight, or break my
 back:

Work thou the way,—and thou shalt execute.
K. Edw. Clarence and Gloucester, love my lovely queen;

And kiss your princely nephew, brothers both.
Clar. The duty that I owe unto your majesty
 I seal upon the lips of this sweet babe.

Q. Elis. Thanks, noble Clarence; worthy brother, thanks. 30

Glouc. And, that I love the tree from whence thou sprang'st,

Witness the loving kiss I give the fruit.
 [Aside] To say the truth, so Judas kiss'd his master,
 And cried 'all hail!' when as he meant all
 harm.

K. Edw. Now am I seated as my soul delights,

Having my country's peace and brothers' loves.
Clar. What will your grace have done with Margaret?

Reignier, her father, to the king of France
 Hath pawn'd the Sicils and Jerusalem,
 And hither have they sent it for her ransom.

K. Edw. Away with her, and wait her hence to France.

And now what rests but that we spend the
 time 40

With stately triumphs, mirthful comic shows,
 Such as befits the pleasure of the court?
 Sound drums and trumpets! farewell sour annoy!

For here, I hope, begins our lasting joy.
 [Exeunt.]

Soldiers, &c.

SCENE: England.

ACT I.

SCENE I. London. A street.

Enter RICHARD, DUKE OF GLOUCESTER, solus.

Glow. Now is the winter of our discontent
Made glorious summer by this sun of York;
And all the clouds that lour'd upon our house
In the deep bosom of the ocean buried.
Now are our brows bound with victorious wreaths;
Our bruised arms hung up for monuments;
Our stern alarms changed to merry meetings,
Our dreadful marches to delightful measures.
Grim-visaged war hath smooth'd his wrinkled front;
And now, instead of mounting barbed steeds to fright the souls of fearful adversaries,
He capers nimbly in a lady's chamber
To the lascivious pleasing of a lute.
But I, that am not shaped for tricks,
Nor made to court an amorous king's glass;

I, that am rudely stamp'd, and want love's
majesty
To strut before a wanton ambling nymph;
I, that am curtail'd of this fair proportion,
Cheated of feature by dissembling nature,
Deform'd, unfinish'd, sent before my time
Into this breathing world, scarce half made up,
And that so lamely and unfashionable
That dogs bark at me as I halt by them;
Why, I, in this weak piping time of peace,
Have no delight to pass away the time,
Unless to spy my shadow in the sun
And descant on mine own deformity:
And therefore, since I cannot prove a lover,
To entertain these fair well-spoken days,
I am determin'd to prove a villain.
And hate the idle pleasures of these days.
Plots have I laid, inductions dangerous,
By drunken prophecies, libels and dreams,
To set my brother Clarence and the king
In deadly hate the one against the other;
And if King Edward be as true and just

As I am subtle, false and treacherous,
This day should Clarence closely be mew'd up,
About a prophecy, which says that G.
Of Edward's heirs the murderer shall be. 40
Dive, thoughts, down to my soul: here Clarence comes.

Enter CLARENCE, guarded, and BRAKENBURY.

Brother, good day: what means this armed guard

That waits upon your grace?

Clar. His majesty,
Tendering my person's safety, hath appointed
This conduct to convey me to the Tower.

Glow. Upon what cause?

Clar. Because my name is George.
Glow. Alack, my lord, that fault is none of
yours:

He should, for that, commit your godfathers:
O, belike his majesty hath some intent 49
That you shall be new-christen'd in the Tower.
But what's the matter, Clarence? may I know?

Clar. Yea, Richard, when I know; for I protest

As yet I do not: but, as I can learn,
He hearkens after prophecies and dreams;
And from the cross-row plucks the letter G,
And says a wizard told him that by G
His issue disinherited should be;

And, for my name of George begins with G,
It follows in his thoughts that I am he. 59

Thus, as I learn, and such like toys as these Have moved his highness to commit me now.

Glow. Why, this it is, when men are ruled by women:

'Tis not the king that sends you to the Tower;
My Lady Grey his wife, Clarence, 'tis she
That tempests him to this extremity.

Was it not she and that good man of worship,
Anthony Woodville, her brother there,
That made him send Lord Hastings to the Tower,

secure
But the queen's kindred and night-walking heralds

That strudge betwixt the king and Mistress
Shore.

Hear ye not what an humble suppliant
Lord Hastings was to her for his delivery?

Glow.

Get my

I'll tell you what

If we will keep in favour with the king,
To be her man and wear her livery: 80

The jealous overweening widow and herself,
Since that our brother dubb'd them gentle-
women,

Are mighty gossips in this monarchy.

Clar. I beseech your graces both to pardon
me

His majesty hath graciously given in charge
That no man shall have private conference,
Of what degree soever, with his brother,

Glow. Even so; an't please your worship,
Brakenbury,

You may partake of any thing we

We speak no treason, man: we say the king is wise and virtuous, and his noble queen

Well struck in years, fair, and not jealous;
We say that Shore's wife hath a pretty foot,

A cherry lip, a bonny eye, a passing pleasing
tongue;

And that the queen's kindred are made gentle-folds:

How say you, sir? can you deny all this?
Brak. With this, my lord, myself have nought to do.

Glow. Naught to do with Mistress Shore? I tell thee, fellow,

He that doth naught with her, excepting one,
Were best he do it secretly, alone. 100

Brak. What one, my lord?

Glow. Her husband, knave: wouldst thou betray me?

Brak. I beseech your grace to pardon me,
and withal

Forbear your conference with the noble duke.
Clar. We know thy charge, Brakenbury, and will obey.

Glow. We are the queen's subjects, and must obey.

Brother, farewell: I will unto the king;
And whatsoever you will employ me in,

Were it to call King Edward's widow sister,
I will perform it to enfranchise you. 110

Meantime, this deep disgrace in brotherhood
Touches me deeper than you can imagine.

Clar. I know it pleaseth neither of us well.
Glow. Well, your imprisonment shall not be long;

I will deliver you, or else lie for you:
Meantime, have patience.

Clar. I must perforce. Farewell.
[Exeunt Clarence, Brakenbury, and Guard.]

Glow. Go, tread the path thou shalt ne'er return.

Simple, plain Clarence | I do love thee so,
that I will shortly send thy soul to heaven,

heaven will take the present at our hands.
it who comes here! the new-deliver'd

Hastings! 121

Enter LORD HASTINGS.

Hast. Good time of day unto my gracious
lord!

Glow. As much unto my good lord chamberlain!

Well are you welcome to the open air.
How hath your lordship brook'd imprisonment?

Hast. With patience, noble lord, as prisoners must;

But I shall live, my lord, to give them thanks
That were the cause of my imprisonment.

Glow. No doubt, no doubt; and so shall Clarence too;

For they that were your enemies are his,
And have prevail'd as much on him as you.

Hast. Move pity that the eagle should be mew'd,

While kites and buzzards prey at liberty.
Glow. What news staid?

Hast. No news so bad abroad as this at home;

The king is sickly, weak and melancholy,
And his physicians fear him mightily.

Glou. Now, by Saint Paul, this news is bad indeed.

O, he hath kept an evil diet long,
And overmuch consumed his royal person: 140

This very grievous to be thought upon.

What, is he in his bed?

Hast. He is.

Glou. Go you before, and I will follow you.

[Exit Hastings.]

He cannot live, I hope; and must not die
Till George be pack'd with post-horse up to heaven.

I'll in, to urge his hatred more to Clarence,
With lies well steel'd with weighty arguments;

And, if I fail not in my deep intent,
Clarence hath not another day to live: 150

Which done, God take King Edward to his mercy,

And leave the world for me to bustle in!

For then I'll marry Warwick's youngest daughter.

What though I kill'd her husband and her father?

The readiest way to make the wench amends
Is to become her husband and her father:

The which will I; not all so much for love
As for another secret close intent,

By marrying her which I must reach unto.
But yet I run before my horse to market: 160

Clarence still breathes; Edward still lives and reigns:

When they are gone, then must I count my gains. [Exit.]

SCENE II. The same. Another street.

Enter the corpse of KING HENRY the Sixth, Gentlemen with halberds to guard it; LADY ANNE being the mourner.

Anne. Set down, set down your honourable load,

If honour may be shrouded in a hearse,
Whilst I a while obsequiously lament

The untimely fall of virtuous Lancaster.
Poor key-cold figure of a holy king!

Pale ashes of the house of Lancaster!
Thou bloodless remnant of that royal blood!

Be it lawful that I invoke thy ghost,
To hear the lamentations of poor Anne,

Wife to thy Edward, to thy slaughter'd son, 10

Stab'd by the selfsame hand that made these wounds!

Lo, in these windows that let forth thy life,
I pour the helpless balm of my poor eyes.

Curst be the hand that made these fatal holes!
Curst be the heart that had the heart to do it!

Curst be the blood that let this blood from hence!
More direful hap betide that hated wretch,

That makes us wretched by the death of thee,
Than I can wish to adders, spiders, toads,

Or any creeping venom'd thing that lives!
If ever he have child, abortive be it,

Prodigious and unnatural brought to light,
Whose ugly and unnatural aspect

May fright the hopeful mother at the view;
And that be heir to his unhappiness!

If ever he have wife, let her be made
As miserable by the death of him

As I am made by my poor lord and thee!
Come, now towards Chertsey with your holy load,

Taken from Paul's to be interred there: 30

And still, as you are weary of the weight,
Rest you, whilst I lament King Henry's corpse.

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glou. Stay, you that bear the corpse, and set it down.

Anne. What black magician conjures up this fiend,

To stop devoted charitable deeds?

Glou. Villains, set down the corpse; or, by Saint Paul,

I'll make a corpse of him that disobeys.

Gent. My lord, stand back, and let the coffin pass.

Glou. Unmanner'd dog! stand thou, when I command:

Advance thy halberd higher than my breast, 40

Or, by Saint Paul, I'll strike thee to my foot,
And spurn upon thee, beggar, for thy boldness.

Anne. What, do you tremble! are you all afraid?

Alas, I blame you not; for you are mortal,
And mortal eyes cannot endure the devil.

Avaunt, thou dreadful minister of hell!
Thou hadst but power over his mortal body,

His soul thou canst not have; therefore, be gone.

Glou. Sweet saint, for charity, be not so curst.

Anne. Foul devil, for God's sake, hence, and trouble us not; 50

For thou hast made the happy earth thy hell,
Fill'd it with cursing cries and deep exclaims.

If thou delight to view thy heinous deeds,
Behold this pattern of thy butcheries.

O, gentlemen, see, see! dead Henry's wounds
Open their congeal'd mouths and bleed afresh!

Blush, blush, thou lump of foul deformity!
For 'tis thy presence that exhales this blood

From cold and empty veins, where no blood dwells;

Thy deed, inhuman and unnatural, 60

Provokes this deluge most unnatural.
O God, which this blood maketh, revenge his death!

O earth, which this blood drinketh, revenge his death!

Either heaven with lightning strike the murderer dead,

Or earth, gape open wide and eat him quick!

As thou dost swallow up this good king's blood,
Which his hell-govern'd arm hath butcher'd!

Glou. Lady, you know no rules of charity,
Which renders good for bad, blessings for curses.

Anne. Villain, thou know'st no law of God nor man!

No beast so fierce but knows some touch of pity.

Glou. But I know none, and therefore have no beast.

Anne. O wonderful, when devils tell the truth!

Glou. More wonderful, when angels are so

Vouchsafe, divine perfection of a woman,
Of these supposed evils, to give me leave,
By circumstance, but to acquit myself.

Anne. Vouchsafe, defused infection of a man,

For these known evils, but to give me leave,
By circumstance, to curse thy cursed self. 80

Glou. Fairer than tongue can name thee, let me have

Some patient leisure to excuse myself.

Anne. Fouler than heart can think thee, thou canst make

No excuse current, but to hang thyself.

Glou. By such despair, I should accuse myself.

Anne. And, by despairing, shouldst thou stand excused;

For doing worthy vengeance on thyself,
Which didst unworthy slaughter upon others.

Glou. Say that I slew them not!

Anne. Why, then they are not dead:
But dead they are, and, devilish slave, by thee.

Glou. I did not kill your husband.

Anne. Why, then he is alive.

Glou. Nay, he is dead; and slain by Edward's hand.

Anne. In thy foul throat thou liest: Queen Margaret saw

Thy murderous falchion smoking in his blood;
The which thou once didst bend against her breast,

But that thy brothers beat aside the point.

Glou. I was provoked by her slanderous tongue,

Which laid their guilt upon my guiltless shoulders.

Anne. Thou wast provoked by thy bloody mind,

Which never dreamt on aught but butcheries:
Didst thou not kill this king?

Glou. I grant ye. 101

Anne. Dost grant me, hedgehog! then, God grant me too

Thou mayst be damned for that wicked deed!
O, he was gentle, mild, and virtuous!

Glou. The fitter for the King of heaven, that hath him.

Anne. He is in heaven, where thou shalt never come.

Glou. Let him thank me, that help to send him thither;

For he was fitter for that place than earth.

Anne. And thou unfit for any place but hell.

Glou. Yes, one place else, if you will hear me name it. 110

Anne. Some dungeon.

Glou. Your bed-chamber.

Anne. Ill rest betide the chamber where thou liest!

Glou. So will it, madam, till I lie with you.

Anne. I hope so.

Glou. I know so. But, gentle Lady Anne,
To have this long encounter of our wits,
And fall somewhat into a slower method,

Is not the cause of the timeless deaths
Of these Plantagenets, Henry and Edward,
As blameful as the executioner!

Anne. Thou art the cause, and most account effect.

Glou. Your beauty was the cause of that effect;

Your beauty, which did haunt me in my sleep
To undertake the death of all the world.

So I might live one hour in your sweet bosom.

Anne. If I thought that, I tell thee, homicide,
These nails should rend that beauty from my cheeks.

Glou. These eyes could never endure sweet beauty's wreck;

You should not blemish it, if I stood by:
As all the world is cheered by the sun,

So I by that; it is my day, my life. 120

Anne. Black night o'ershade thy day, and death thy life!

Glou. Curse not thyself, fair creature; thou art both.

Anne. I would I were, to be revenged on thee.

Glou. It is a quarrel most unnatural,
To be revenged on him that loveth you.

Anne. It is a quarrel just and reasonable,
To be revenged on him that slew my husband.

Glou. He that bereft thee, lady, of thy husband,

Did it to help thee to a better husband.

Anne. His better doth not breathe upon the earth. 140

Glou. He lives that loves thee better than he could.

Anne. Name him.

Glou. Plantagenet.

Anne. Why, that was he.

Glou. The selfsame name, but one of better nature.

Anne. Where is he?

Glou. Here. [She spitteth at him.]

Why dost thou spit at me?

Anne. Would it were mortal poison, for thy sake!

Glou. Never came poison from so sweet a place.

Anne. Never hung poison on a fouler soul.
Out of my sight! thou dost infect my eyes.

Glou. Thine eyes, sweet lady, have infected mine. 150

Anne. Would they were basilisks, to strike thee dead!

Glou. I would they were, that I might die at once;

For now they kill me with a living death.
Those eyes of thine from mine have drawn salt tears,

Shamed their aspect with store of childish drops:

These eyes, which never shed remorseful tear,
No, when my father York and Edward wept,

To hear the piteous moan that Rutland made
When black-faced Clifford shook his sword at him;

Nor when thy warlike father, like a child, 160
Told the sad story of my father's death,
And twenty times made pause to sob, and weep

That all the standers-by had wet their cheeks,
Like trees bedash'd with rain: in that sad time
My manly eyes did scorn an humble tear;
And what these sorrows could not thence exhale,

Thy beauty hath, and made them blind with weeping.

I never sued to friend nor enemy;
My tongue could never learn sweet smoothing
words:

But, now thy beauty is proposed my foe, 170
My proud heart sues and prompts my tongue to speak. [She looks scornfully at him.]

Teach not thy lips such scorn, for they were made

For kissing, lady, not for such contempt.
If thy revengeful heart cannot forgive,
Lo, here I lend thee this sharp-pointed sword;
Which if thou please to hide in this true bosom,
And let the soul forth that adorns thee,
I lay it naked to the deadly stroke,
And humbly beg the death upon my knee.

[He lays his breast open; she offers at it with his sword.]

J. now says

Edward,
But 'twas thy heavenly face that set me on.
[Here she lets fall the sword.]

Take up the sword again, or take up me.
Anne. Arise, dissembler: though I wish thy
death,

I will not be the executioner.

Glow. Then bid me kill myself, and I will do it.

Anne. I have already.
Glow. Tush, that was in thy rage
Speak it again, and, even with the word,
That hand, which, for thy love, did kill thy
love, 190

Shall, for thy love, kill a far truer love;
To both their deaths thou shalt be accessory.

Anne. I would I knew thy heart.
Glow. 'Tis figured in my tongue.

Anne. I fear me both are false.
Glow. Then never man was true.

Anne. Well, well, put up your sword.
Glow. Say, then, my peace is made.

Anne. That shall you know hereafter.
Glow. But shall I live in hope?

Anne. All men, I hope, live so.
Glow. Vouchsafe to wear this ring.

Anne. To take is not to give.
Glow. Look, how this ring encompasseth thy finger,

Even so thy breast encloseth my poor heart;
Wear both of them, for both of them are thine.
And if thy poor devoted suppliant may
But beg one favour at thy gracious hand,
Thou dost confirm his happiness for ever.

Anne. What is it? 200

Glow. That it would please thee leave these and designs

To him that hath more cause to be a mourner,
And presently repair to Crosby Place;
Where, after I have solemnly interr'd
At Chertsey monastery this noble king, and wet his grave with my repentant tears,

will with all expedient duty see you:
or divers unknown reasons, I beseech you,
grant me this boon.

Anne. With all my heart; and much it joys me too, 220

'o see you are become so penitent.
Tressel and Berkeley, go along with me.

Glow. Bid me farewell.
Anne. 'Tis more than you deserve;

But since you teach me how to flatter you,
Imagine I have said farewell already.

[Exeunt Lady Anne, Tressel, and Berkeley.]
Glow. Sirs, take up the corpse.

Gent. Towards Chertsey, noble lord!

Glow. No, to White-Friars; there attend my coming. [Exeunt all but Gloucester.]

Was ever woman in this humour woo'd?
Was ever woman in this humour won?

I'll have her; but I will not keep her long. 230
What! I, that kill'd her husband and his father,
To take her in her heart's extremest hate,
With curses in her mouth, tears in her eyes,

The bleeding witness of her hatred by;
Having God, her conscience, and these bars

against me,
And I nothing to back my suit at all,
But the plain devil and dissembling looks,

And yet to win her, all the world to nothing!
Ha!

Hath she forgot already that brave prince, 240
Edward, her lord, whom I, some three months
since,

Stab'd in my angry mood at Tewkesbury?
A sweeter and a lovelier gentleman,
Framed in the prodigality of nature,

Young, valiant, wise, and, no doubt, right royal,
The spacious world cannot again afford:

And will she yet debase her eyes on me,
That cropp'd the golden prince of this sweet

prince,
And made her widow to a woful bed?

On me, whose all not equals Edward's moiety?
On me, that halt and am unshapen thus? 250

My dukedom to a beggarly denier,
I do mistake my person all this while:

Upon my life, she finds, although I cannot,
Myself to be a marvellous proper man.

I'll be at charges for a looking-glass,
And entertain some score or two of tailors,

To study fashions to adorn my body:
Since I am crept in favour with myself,

I will maintain it with some little cost. 260
But first I'll turn you fellow in his grave;
And then return lamenting to my love.

Shine out, fair sun, till I have bought a glass,
That I may see my shadow as I pass. [Exit.]

SCENE III. The palace.

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH, LORD RIVERS, and LORD GREY.

Riv. Have patience, madam; there's no doubt his majesty

Will soon recover his accustomed health.

Grey. In that you took it ill, it makes him

Therefore, for God's sake, entertain good comfort,
And cheer his grace with quick and merry words.

Q. Eliz. If he were dead, what would betide of me?

Riv. No other harm but loss of such a lord.

Q. Eliz. The loss of such a lord includes all harm.

Grey. The heavens have bless'd you with a goodly son,

To be your comforter when he is gone. 10

Q. Eliz. Oh, he is young, and his minority is put unto the trust of Richard Gloucester, A man that loves not me, nor none of you.

Riv. Is it concluded he shall be protector?

Q. Eliz. It is determined, not concluded yet: But so it must be, if the king miscarry.

Enter BUCKINGHAM and DERBY.

Grey. Here come the lords of Buckingham and Derby.

Buck. Good time of day unto your royal grace!

Der. God make your majesty joyful as you have been!

Q. Eliz. The Countess Richmond, good my Lord of Derby, 20

To your good prayers will scarcely say amen. Yet Derby, notwithstanding she's your wife, And loves not me, be you, good lord, assured I hate not you for her proud arrogance.

Der. I do beseech you, either not believe The envious slanders of her false accusers; Or, if she be accused in true report, Bear with her weakness, which, I think, proceeds

From wayward sickness, and no grounded malice.

Riv. Saw you the king to-day, my Lord of Derby? 30

Der. But now the Duke of Buckingham and I

Are come from visiting his majesty.

Q. Eliz. What likelihood of his amendment, lords?

Buck. Madam, good hope; his grace speaks cheerfully.

Q. Eliz. God grant him health! Did you confer with him?

Buck. Madam, we did: he desires to make amonement

Between the Duke of Gloucester and your brothers,

And between them and my lord chamberlain; And sent to warn them to his royal presence.

Q. Eliz. Would all were well! but that will never be: 40

I fear our happiness is at the highest.

Enter GLOUCESTER, HASTINGS, and DORSET.

Glow. They do me wrong, and I will not endure it:

Who are they that complain unto the king, That I am stern, and love them not? I love his grace but lightly, and with such dissensions rumours.

Because I cannot flatter and speak fair, Smile in men's faces, smooth, deceive and cog, Duck with French nods and apish courtesy, I must be held a rancorous enemy. 30

Cannot a plain man live and think no harm, But thus his simple truth must be abused

By silken, sly, insinuating Jacks?

Riv. To whom in all this presence speaks your grace?

Glow. To thee, that hast nor honesty nor grace.

When have I injured thee? when done thee wrong?

Or thee? or thee? or any of your faction?

A plague upon you all! His royal person,— Whom God preserve better than you would wish!—

Cannot be quiet scarce a breathing-while, 60 But you must trouble him with lewd complaints.

Q. Eliz. Brother of Gloucester, you mistake the matter.

The king, of his own royal disposition, And not provoked by any sutor else;

Aiming, belike, at your interior hatred, Which in your outward actions shows itself

Against my kindred, brothers, and myself, Makes him to send; that thereby he may gather

The ground of your ill-will, and so remove it.

Glow. I cannot tell: the world is grown so bad, 70

That wrens make prey where eagles dare not perch:

Since every Jack became a gentleman, There's many a gentle person made a Jack.

Q. Eliz. Come, come, we know your meaning, brother Gloucester;

You envy my advancement and my friends': God grant we never may have need of you!

Glow. Meantime, God grants that we have need of you:

Our brother is imprison'd by your means, Myself disgraced, and the nobility

Held in contempt; whilst many fair promotions Are daily given to ennoble those 80

That scarce, some two days since, were worth a noble.

Q. Eliz. By Him that raised me to this careful height

From that contented hap which I enjoy'd, I never did incense his majesty

Against the Duke of Clarence, but have been An earnest advocate to plead for him.

My lord, you do me shameful injury, Falsely to draw me in these vile suspects.

Glow. You may deny that you were not the cause 90

Of my Lord Hastings' late imprisonment.

Riv. She may, my lord, for—

Glow. She may, Lord Rivers! why, who knows not so?

She may do more, sir, than denying that: She may help you to many fair promotions

And then deny her aiding hand therein, And lay those honours on your high descent.

What may she not? She may, yea, marry, may she, 100

Riv. What, marry, may she?

Glow. What, marry, may she! marry with a king.

A bachelor, a handsome stripling too:

I wis your grandam had a worse match.

Q. Eliz. My Lord of Gloucester, I have too long borne

Your blunt upbraidings and your bitter scoffs:

By heaven, I will acquaint his majesty

With those gross taunts I often have endured.

I had rather be a country servant-maid

Than a great queen, with this condition,

To be thus taunted, scorn'd, and baited at:

Enter QUEEN MARGARET, behind.

Small joy have I in being England's queen.

Q. Mar. And lessen'd be that small, God, I beseech thee!

Thy honour, state and seat is due to me.

Glow. What! threat you me with telling of the king?

Tell him, and spare not: look, what I have said I will avouch in presence of the king:

I dare adventure to be sent to the Tower.

It time to speak; my pains are quite forgot.

Q. Mar. Out, devil! I remember them too well:

Thou slewest my husband Henry in the Tower, And Edward, my poor son, at Tewksbury.

Glow. Ere you were queen, yea, or your husband's king,

I was a pack-horse in his great affairs;

A weeder-out of his proud adversaries,

A liberal rewarder of his friends:

To royalise his blood I split mine own.

Q. Mar. Yea, and much better blood than his or thine.

Glow. In all which time you and your husband Grey

Were factious for the house of Lancaster;

And, Rivers, so were you. Was not your husband

In Margaret's battle at Saint Alban's slain?

Let me put in your minds, if you forget, What you have been ere now, and what you are:

Withal, what I have been, and what I am.

Q. Mar. A murderous villain, and so still thou art.

Glow. Poor Clarence did forsake his father, Warwick;

Yea, and forswore himself,—which Jesu pardon!

Q. Mar. Which God revenge!

Glow. To fight on Edward's party for the crown;

And for his meed, poor lord, he is mow'd up.

I would to God my heart were flint, like Edward's;

Or Edward's soft and pitiful, like mine:

I am too childish-foolish for this world.

Q. Mar. His thee to hell for shame, and leave the world.

Thou cacodemon! there thy kingdom is.

Riv. My Lord of Gloucester, in those busy days

Which here you urge to purge us enemies, We follow'd then our lord, our lawful king:

So should we you, if you should be our king.

Glow. If I should be! I had rather be a pedlar:

Far be it from my heart, the thought of it!

Q. Eliz. As little joy, my lord, as you suppose

You should enjoy, were you this country's king.

As little joy may you suppose in me,

That I enjoy, being the queen thereof.

Q. Mar. A little joy enjoys the queen thereof;

For I am she, and altogether joyless.

can no longer hold me patient. [Advancing.]

fear me, you wrangling pirates, that fall out in sharing that which you have pil'd from me!

Which of you trembles not that looks on me?

If not, that, I being queen, you bow like subjects,

Yet that, by you deposed, you quake like rebels!

O gentle villain, do not turn away!

Glow. Foul wrinkled witch, what makest thou in my sight?

Q. Mar. But repetition of what thou hast marr'd;

That will I make before I let thee go.

Glow. Wert thou not banished on pain of death?

Q. Mar. I was; but I do find more pain in banishment

Than death can yield me here by my abode.

A husband and a son thou owest to me;

And thou a kingdom; all of you allegiance:

The sorrow that I have, by right is yours,

And all the pleasures you usurp are mine.

Glow. The curse my noble father laid on thee,

When thou didst crown his warlike brows with paper

And with thy scorns drew'st rivers from his eyes,

And then, to dry them, gavest the duke a about

Steep'd in the faultless blood of pretty

land,—

His curses, then from bitterness of soul

Denounced against thee, are all fallen upon thee;

And God, not we, hath plagued thy bloody deed.

Q. Eliz. So just is God, to right the innocent.

Hast. O, 'twas the foulest deed to slay that babe,

And the most mercurious that e'er was heard of!

Riv. Tyrants themselves wept when it was reported.

Dor. No man but prophesied revenge for it.

Buck. Northumberland, then present, sought to see it.

Q. Mar. What! were you smiting all before I came,

Ready to catch each other by the throat,

And turn you all your hatred now on me!

Did York's dead curse prevail so much with heaven?

That Henry's death, my lovely Edward's death,

That Clarence's loss, my world's destruction,

Could all but answer for that hateful deed?

Can curses pluck the clouds and scatter lightning?

Why, then, give way, dull clouds, to my quick curses!

For Edward my son, which was Prince of Wales,
Die in his youth by like untimely violence! ²⁰²
Thyself a queen, for me that was a queen,
Outlive thy glory, like my wretched self!
Long may'st thou live to wail thy children's loss;
And see another, as I see thee now,
Deck'd in thy rights, as thou art stall'd in mine!
Long die thy happy days before thy death;
And, after many lengthen'd hours of grief,
Die neither mother, wife, nor England's queen!
Rivers and Dorset, you were standers by, ²¹⁰
And so wast thou, Lord Hastings, when my son
Was stabb'd with bloody daggers: God, I pray
him,

That none of you may live your natural age,
But by some unlook'd accident cut off!
Glou. Have done thy charm, thou hateful wither'd hag!

Q. Mar. And leave out thee! stay, dog, for thou shalt hear me.

If heaven have any grievous plague in store
Exceeding those that I can wish upon thee,
O, let them keep it till thy sins be ripe,
And then hurl down their indignation ²²⁰
On thee, the troubler of the poor world's peace!
The worm of conscience still begnaw thy soul!
Thy friends suspect for traitors while thou livest,

And take deep traitors for thy dearest friends!
No sleep close up that deadly eye of thine,
Unless it be whilst some tormenting dream
Affrights thee with a hell of ugly devils!
Thou elvish-mark'd, abortive, rooting hog!
Thou that wast seal'd in thy nativity
The slave of nature and the son of hell! ²³⁰
Thou slander of thy mother's heavy womb!
Thou loathed issue of thy father's loins!
Thou rag of honour! thou detested—

Glou. Margaret.

Q. Mar. Richard!

Glou.

Q. Mar. I call thee not.
Glou. I cry thee mercy then, for I had thought

That thou hadst call'd me all these bitter names.

Q. Mar. Why, so I did; but look'd for no reply.

O, let me make the period to my curse!

Glou. 'Tis done by me, and ends in 'Margaret.'

Q. Mar. Thus have you breathed your curse

Q. Mar. Poor painted queen, vain flourish of my fortune!

Why strow'st thou sugar on that bottled spider,
Whose deadly web ensnareth thee about!

God! thou wast't a knife to kill thyself.
Hence will come when thou shalt live for me
These curses that poisonous bunch-back'd

Worms, false-boding women, and thy frantic

Less than eels move our patience.

Q. Mar. Foul shame upon you! you have all moved mine.

Riv. Were you well served, you would be taught your duty. ²³⁰

Q. Mar. To serve me well, you all should do me duty,
Teach me to be your queen, and you my subjects:

O, serve me well, and teach yourselves that duty!

Dor. Dispute not with her; she is lunatic.

Q. Mar. Peace, master marquess, you are malapert:

Your fire-new stamp of honour is scarce current,
(1) that your young nobility could judge
What 'twere to lose it, and be miserable!

They that stand high have many blasts to shake
them;

And if they fall, they dash themselves to pieces.
Glou. Good counsel, marry! learn it, learn it, marquess. ²⁶¹

Dor. It toucheth you, my lord, as much as
me.

Glou. Yea, and much more: but I was born
so high,

Our airy buildeth in the cedar's top,
And dallies with the wind and scorns the sun.

Q. Mar. And turns the sun to shade; alas!
alas!

Witness my son, now in the shade of death;
Whose bright out-shining beams thy cloudy
wrath

Hath in eternal darkness folded up.
Your airy buildeth in our airy's nest. ²⁷⁰

(1) God, that seest it, do not suffer it;
As it was won with blood, lost be it so!

Buck. Have done! for shame, if not for charity.

Q. Mar. Urge neither charity nor shame to
me:

Uncharitably with me have you dealt,
And shamefully by you my hopes are butcher'd.
My charity is outrage, life my shame;

And in that shame still live my sorrow's rage!
Buck. Have done, have done.

Q. Mar. O princely Buckingham, I'll kiss
thy hand. ²⁸⁰

In sign of league and amity with thee:
Now fair betal thee and thy noble house!

Thy garments are not spotted with our blood,
Nor thou within the compass of my curse.

Buck. Nor no one here; for curses never pass
The lips of those that breathe them in the air.

Q. Mar. I'll not believe but they ascend the sky,

And there awake God's gentle-sleeping peace.
(1) Buckingham, take heed of yonder dog!

Look, when he fawns, he bites; and when he bites,

His venom tooth will rankle to the death:
Have not to do with him, beware of him!

Sin, death, and hell have set their marks on
him.

And all their ministers attend on him.
Glou. What doth she say, my Lord of Buckingham?

Buck. Nothing that I respect, my gracious

Q. Mar. What, dost thou scorn me for my gentle counsel?
And soothe the devil that I warn thee from?
O, but remember this another day,
When he shall split thy very heart with sorrow,
And say poor Margaret was a prophetess! 301
Live each of you the subjects to his hate,
And he to yours, and all of you to God's!

[Exit.]

Haast. My hair doth stand on end to hear her curses.

Riv. And so doth mine: I muse why she's at liberty.

Glow. I cannot blame her: by God's holy mother,

She hath had too much wrong; and I repent my part thereof that I have done to her.

Q. Eliz. I never did her any, to my knowledge.

Glow. But you have all the vantage of her wrong. 310

I was too hot to do somebody good,
That is too cold in thinking of it now.

Marry, as for Clarence, he is well repaid;
He is frank'd up to fattening for his pains:

God pardon them that are the cause of it!

Riv. A virtuous and a Christian-like conclusion.

To pray for them that have done scathe to us.

Glow. So do I ever: [Aside] being well advised.

For had I cursed now, I had cursed myself.

[Enter CATESBY.]

Cates. Madam, his majesty doth call for you; 32

And for your grace; and you, my noble lords.

Q. Eliz. Catesby, we come. Lords, will you go with us?

Riv. Madam, we will attend your grace.

[Exeunt all but Gloucester.]

Glow. I do the wrong, and first begin to brawl.

The secret mischiefs that I set abroad
I lay unto the grievous charge of others.

Clarence, whom I, indeed, have laid in darkness,
I do beweepe to many simple gulls;

Namely, to Hastings, Derby, Buckingham;
And say it is the queen and her allies 330

That stir the king against the duke my brother.

Now, they believe it; and withal whet me
To be revenged on Rivers, Vaughan, Grey:

Tell them I sigh; and, with a piece of scripture,
Tell them that God bids us do good for evil:

And thus I clothe my naked villany
With old odd ends stolen out of holy writ;

And seem a saint, when most I play the devil.

[Enter two Murderers.]

But, soft! here come my executioners.
How now, my hardy, stout resolved mates! 34

Are you now going to dispatch this deed?

First Murd. We are, my lord; and come to have the warrant.

That we may be admitted where he is.

Glow. Well thought upon: I have it here about me. 35

When you have done, repair to Crosby Place.

But, sirs, be sudden in the execution,
Withal obdurate, do not hear him plead;
For Clarence is well-spoken, and perhaps
May move your hearts to pity, if you mark him.

[First Murd. Tush!

Fear not, my lord, we will not stand to prate;
Talkers are no good doers: be assured

We come to use our hands and not our tongues.

Glow. Your eyes drop millstones, when fools' eyes drop tears:

I like you, lads; about your business straight;
Go, go, dispatch.

First Murd. We will, my noble lord. 36

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. London. The Tower.

[Enter CLARENCE and BRAKENBURY.]

Brak. Why looks your grace so heavily to-day?

Clar. O, I have pass'd a miserable night,
So full of ugly sights, of ghastly dreams,

That, as I am a Christian faithful man,
I would not spend another such a night,

Though 'twere to buy a world of happy days,
So full of dismal terror was the time!

Brak. What was your dream? I long to hear you tell it.

Clar. Methoughts that I had broken from the Tower,

And was embark'd to cross to Burgundy; 40

And, in my company, my brother Gloucester;
Who from my cabin tempted me to walk

Upon the hatches: thence we look'd toward England,

And cited up a thousand fearful times,
During the wars of York and Lancaster

That had befall'n us. As we paced along
Upon the giddy footing of the hatches,

Methought that Gloucester stumbled; and, in falling,

Struck me, that thought to stay him, overboard,
Into the tumbling billows of the main. 45

Lord, Lord! methought, what pain it was to drown!

What dreadful noise of waters in mine ears!
What ugly sights of death within mine eyes!

Methought I saw a thousand fearful wrecks:
Ten thousand men that fishes gnaw'd upon;

Wedges of gold, great anchors, heaps of pearl,
Inestimable stones, unvalued jewels,

All scatter'd in the bottom of the sea:
Some lay in dead men's skulls; and, in those holes

Where eyes did once inhabit, there were crept,
As 'twere in scorn of eyes, reflecting gems, 50

Which woo'd the slimy bottom of the deep,
And mock'd the dead bones that lay scatter'd

by
Brak. Had you such leisure in the time of death

To gaze upon the secrets of the deep?

Clar. Methought I had; and often did I strive

To yield the ghost: but still the evil fiend

Kept in my soul, and would not let it forth:
To seek the empty, vast and wandering air;

But smother'd it within my panting bulk. 55

Which almost burst to belch it in the sea.

Brak. Awaked you not with this sore agony?
Clar. O, no; my dream was lengthen'd after his;

O, then began the tempest to my soul,
Who pass'd, methought, the melancholy flood,
With that grim ferryman which poets write of,
Unto the kingdom of perpetual night.
The first that there did greet my stranger soul,
Was my great father-in-law, renowned Warwick;

Who cried aloud, 'What scourge for perjury so
Can this dark monarchy afford false Clarence?'
And so he vanish'd: then came wandering by
A shadow like an angel, with bright hair
Dabbled in blood; and he squeak'd out aloud,
'Clarence is come; false, fleeting, perjured
Clarence.'

That stabb'd me in the field by Tewksbury;
Seize on him, Furies, take him to your torments!

With that, methoughts, a legion of foul fiends
Environ'd me about, and howled in mine ears
Such hideous cries, that with the very noise so I trembling wak'd, and for a season after
Could not believe but that I was in hell,
Such terrible impression made the dream.

Brak. No marvel, my lord, though it affrighted you;

I promise you, I am afraid to hear you tell it.

Clar. O Brakenbury, I have done those things,

Which now bear evidence against my soul
For Edward's sake; and see how he requites
me!

O God! if my deep prayers cannot appease thee,
But thou wilt be avenged on my misdeeds, so
Yet excuse thy wrath in me alone,
O, spare my guiltless wife and my poor children!
I pray thee, gentle keeper, stay by me;
My soul is heavy, and I fain would sleep.

Brak. I will, my lord: God give your grace good rest! [Clarence sleeps.]

Sorrow breaks seasons and reposing hours,
Makes the night morning, and the noon-tide
night.

Princes have but their titles for their glories,
An outward honour for an inward taint;
And, for unfeild imagination, so
They often feel a world of restless cares:
So that, betwixt their titles and low names,
There's nothing differs but the outward fame.

Enter the two Murderers.

First Murd. He! who's here?

Brak. In God's name what are you, and how came you hither?

First Murd. I would speak with Clarence, and I came hither on my legs.

Brak. Yes, are you so brief?

Sec. Murd. O sir, it is better to be brief than t tedious. Show him our commission; talk no more. [Brakenbury reads it.]

Brak. I am, in this, commanded to deliver
The noble Duke of Clarence to your hands:
I will not reason what is meant hereby,
Because I will be guiltless of the speaking.
Here are the Murs, these are the Duke's asleep:

I'll to the king; and signify to him
That thus I have resign'd my charge to you.

First Murd. Do so, it is a point of fate you well. [Exit Brakenbury.]

Sec. Murd. What, shall we stab sleeps!

First Murd. No; then he will say 'twas done cowardly, when he wakes.

Sec. Murd. When he wakes! why, fool, he shall never wake till the Judgement-day.

First Murd. Why, then he will say we stabbed him sleeping.

Sec. Murd. The urging of that word 'Judgement' hath bred a kind of remorse in me.

First Murd. What, art thou afraid?

Sec. Murd. Not to kill him, having a warrant for it; but to be damned for killing him, from which no warrant can defend us.

First Murd. I thought thou hadst been resolute.

Sec. Murd. So I am, to let him live.

First Murd. Back to the Duke of Glouc-cester, tell him so.

Sec. Murd. I pray thee, stay a while: I hope my holy humour will change; 'twas wont to hold me but while one would tell twenty.

First Murd. How dost thou feel thyself
now?

Sec. Murd. Faith, some certain drops of conscience are yet within me.

First Murd. Remember our reward, when the deed is done.

Sec. Murd. Zounds, he dies: I had forgot the reward.

First Murd. Where is thy conscience now?

Sec. Murd. In the Duke of Gloucester's purse.

First Murd. So when he opens his purse to give us our reward, thy conscience flies out.

Sec. Murd. Let it go; there's few or none will entertain it.

First Murd. How if it come to thee again?

Sec. Murd. I'll not meddle with it: it is a dangerous thing; it makes a man a coward: a man cannot steal, but it accuseth him; he cannot swear, but it checks him; he cannot lie with his neighbour's wife, but it detects him: 'tis a blushing shamefast spirit that inhabits in a man's bosom; it fills one full of obstacles: it made me once restore a purse of gold that I found; it bemoans any man that keeps it: it is turned out of all towns and cities for a dangerous thing; and every man that means to live well endeavours to trust to himself and so live without it.

First Murd. Zounds, it is even now at my elbow, persuading me not to kill the Duke.

Sec. Murd. Take the devil in thy mind, and believe him not: he would insinuate with thee
but to make thee sigh.

First Murd. Tut, I am strong-hearted, he cannot prevail with me, I warrant thee.

Sec. Murd. Spoke like a tall fellow that respects his reputation. Come, shall we to this gear?

First Murd. Take him over the shoulder with the hilts of thy sword, and then we will chop him in the mainway—but in the next room.

Sec. Murd. O excellent device! make a sop of him.

First Murd. Hark! he stirs: shall I strike?

Sec. Murd. No, first let's reason with him.

Clar. Where art thou, keeper? give me a cup of wine.

Sec. Murd. You shall have wine enough, my lord, anon.

Clar. In God's name, what art thou?

Sec. Murd. A man, as you are. 170

Clar. But not, as I am, royal.

Sec. Murd. Nor you, as we are, loyal.

Clar. Thy voice is thunder, but thy looks are humble.

Sec. Murd. My voice is now the king's, my looks mine own.

Clar. How darkly and how deadly dost thou speak!

Your eyes do menace me: why look you pale? Who sent you hither? Wherefore do you come?

Both. To, to, to—

Clar. To murder me?

Both. Ay, ay.

Clar. You scarcely have the hearts to tell me so. 180

And therefore cannot have the hearts to do it. Wherein, my friends, have I offended you?

First Murd. Offended us you have not, but the king.

Clar. I shall be reconciled to him again.

Sec. Murd. Never, my lord; therefore prepare to die.

Clar. Are you call'd forth from out a world of men

To slay the innocent? What is my offence? Where are the evidence that do accuse me?

What lawful quest have given their verdict up Unto the frowning judge? or who pronounced

The bitter sentence of poor Clarence' death? Before I be convict by course of law,

To threaten me with death is most unlawful. I charge you, as you hope to have redemption

By Christ's dear blood shed for our grievous sins,

That you depart and lay no hands on me: The deed you undertake is damnable.

First Murd. What we will do, we do upon command.

Sec. Murd. And he that hath commanded is the king.

Clar. Erroneous vessel! the great King of kings 200

Hath in the tables of his law commanded That thou shalt do no murder: and wilt thou,

then,

Spurn at his edict and fulfil a man's?

Take heed; for he holds vengeance in his hands,

To hurl upon their heads that break his law.

Sec. Murd. And that same vengeance doth he hurl on thee,

For false forswearing and for murder too: Thou didst receive the holy sacrament,

To fight in quarrel of the house of Lancaster.

First Murd. And, like a traitor to the name of God, 210

Didst break that vow; and with thy treacherous blade

Unrip'dst the bowels of thy sovereign's son.

Sec. Murd. Whom thou wast sworn to cherish and defend.

First Murd. How canst thou urge God's dreadful law to us?

When thou hast broke it in so dear degree?

Clar. Alas! for whose sake did I that ill deed?

For Edward, for my brother, for his sake: Why, sir,

He sends ye not to murder me for this; For in this sin he is as deep as I. 220

If God will be revenged for this deed, O, know you yet, he doth it publicly:

Take not the quarrel from his powerful arm; He needs no indirect nor lawless course

To cut off those that have offended him." First Murd. Who made thee, then, a bloody minister,

When gullant-springing brave Plantagenet, That princely novice, was struck dead by thee?

Clar. My brother's love, the devil, and my rage.

First Murd. Thy brother's love, our duty, and thy fault, 230

Provoke us hither now to slaughter thee.

Clar. Oh, if you love my brother, hate not me;

I am his brother, and I love him well. If you be hired for meed, go back again,

And I will send you to my brother Gloucester, Who shall reward you better for my life

Than Edward will for tidings of my death.

Sec. Murd. You are deceived, your brother Gloucester hates you.

Clar. O, no, he loves me, and he holds me dear:

Go you to him from me. Both. Ay, so we will. 240

Clar. Tell him, when that our princely father York

Bless'd his three sons with his victorious arm, And charged us from his soul to love each other,

He little thought of this divided friendship: Did Gloucester think of this, and he will weep.

First Murd. Ay, mistresses; as he lesson'd us to weep.

Clar. O, do not slander him, for he is kind.

First Murd. Right.

As snow in harvest. Then decidest thyself: 'Tis he that sent us hither now to slaughter thee. 250

Clar. It cannot be; for when I parted with him,

He hugg'd me in his arms, and swore, with sobs,

That he would labour my delivery.

Sec. Murd. Why, so he doth, now he delivers thee

From this world's thralldom to the joys of heaven.

First Murd. Make peace with God, for you must die, my lord.

Clar. Hast thou that holy feeling in thy soul, To counsel me to make my peace with God,

And art thou yet to thy own soul as kind, That thou wilt war with God by murdering me?

Ah, sir, consider, he that set you on

To do this deed will hate you for the deed.

Sec. Murd. What shall we do?

Clar. Relent, and save your souls.

First Murd. Relent! 'tis cowardly and womanish.

Clar. Not to relent is beastly, savage, devilish.

Which of you, if you were a prince's son,
Being pent from liberty, as I am now,
If two such murderers as yourselves came to you,

Would not entreat for life?

My friend, I spy some pity in thy looks; 270

O, if thine eye be not a flatterer,

Come thou on my side, and entreat for me,

As you would beg, were you in my distress:

A begging prince what beggar pities not?

Sec. Murd. Look behind you, my lord.

First Murd. Take that, and that: if all this will not do, [Stabs him.]

I'll drown you in the malmsey-butt within.

[Exit, with the body.]

Sec. Murd. A bloody deed, and desperately dispatch'd!

How fain, like Pilate, would I wash my hands

Of this most grievous guilty murder done! 280

Re-enter First Murderer.

First Murd. How now! what mean'st thou, that thou help'st me not?

By heavens, the duke shall know how slack thou art!

Sec. Murd. I would he knew that I had saved his brother!

Take thou the fee, and tell him what I say:

For I repent me that the duke is slain. [Exit.]

First Murd. So do not I: go, coward as thou

art.

Now must I hide his body in some hole,

Until the duke take order for his burial:

And when I have my meed, I must away;

For this will out, and here I must not stay. 290

[Exit.]

ACT II

SCENE I. London. The palace.

Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD sick, QUEEN

ELIZABETH, DORSET, RIVERS, HASTINGS,

BUCKINGHAM, GREY, and others.

K. Edw. Why, so: now have I done a good day's work:

You peers, continue this united league:

I every day expect an embassy

From my Redeemer to redeem me hence;

And now in peace my soul shall part to heaven,

Since I have set my friends at peace on earth.

Rivers and Hastings, take each other's hand;

Dissemble not your hatred, swear your love.

Riv. By heaven, my heart is purged from grudging hate!

And with my hand I seal my true heart's love. 10

Hast. So thrive I, as I truly swear the like!

K. Edw. Take heed you daily not before be that in the supreme King of kings

Confound your hidden falsehood, and award

Neither of you to be the other's end.

Hast. So prosper I, as I swear perfect love!

Riv. And I, as I love Hastings with my heart!

K. Edw. Madam, yourself are not exempt in this,

Nor your son Dorset, Buckingham, nor you;

You have been factious one against the other. 20

Wife, love Lord Hastings, let him kiss your hand;

And what you do, do it unfeignedly.

Q. Eliz. Here, Hastings; I will never more remember

Our former hatred, so thrive I and mine!

K. Edw. Dorset, embrace him; Hastings, love lord marquess.

Dor. This interchange of love, I here protest,

Upon my part shall be unviolable.

Hust. And so swear I, my lord.

[They embrace.]

K. Edw. Now, princely Buckingham, seal

thou this league

With thy embracements to my wife's allies, 30

And make me happy in your unity.

Buck. Whenever Buckingham doth turn his

hate

On you or yours [to the Queen], but with all

duteous love

Doth cherish you and yours, God punish me

With hate in those where I expect most love!

When I have most need to employ a friend,

And most assured that he is a friend,

Deep, hollow, treacherous, and full of guile,

Be he unto me! this do I beg of God,

When I am cold in zeal to you or yours. 40

[They embrace.]

K. Edw. A pleasing cordial, princely Buck-

ingham,

Is this thy vow unto my sickly heart.

There wanteth now our brother Gloucester here,

To make the perfect period of this peace.

Buck. And, in good time, here comes the noble duke.

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glou. Good morrow to my sovereign king and queen;

And, princely peers, a happy time of day!

K. Edw. Happy, indeed, as we have spent the day.

Brother, we have done deeds of charity;

Made peace of enmity, fair love of hate, 50

Between these swelling wrong-incensed peers.

Glou. A blessed labour, my most sovereign

liege:

Amongst this princely heap, if any here,

By false intelligence, or wrong surmise,

Hold me a foe;

If I unwittingly, or in my rage,

Have sought committed that is hardly borne

By any in this presence, I desire

To reconcile me to his friendly peace:

'Tis death to me to be at enmity; 60

I hate it, and desire all good men's love.

First, madam, I entreat true peace of you.

Which I will purchase with my dangerous service;

Of you, my noble cousin Buckingham,

If ever any grudge were lodged between us

Of you, Lord Rivers, and, Lord Grey, of you;

That all without desert have drawn'st out me;

Dukes, earls, lords, gentlemen; indeed, of all.
I do not know that Englishman alive
With whom my soul is any jot at odds
More than the infant that is born to-night:
I thank my God for my humility.

Q. Eliz. A holy day shall this be kept hereafter:

I would to God all strifes were well compounded.
My sovereign liege, I do beseech your majesty
To take our brother Clarence to your grace.

Glou. Why, madam, have I offer'd love for
this,

To be so flouted in this royal presence?

Who knows not that the noble Duke is dead?

[They all start.]

You do him injury to scorn his corpse.
Riv. Who knows not he is dead! who knows
he is!

Q. Eliz. All-seeing heaven, what a world is
this!

Buck. Look I so pale, Lord Dorset, as the rest!

Dor. Ay, my good lord; and no one in this presence

But his red colour hath forsook his cheeks.

K. Edw. Is Clarence dead? the order was reversed.

Glou. But he, poor soul, by your first order
died.

And that a winged Mercury did bear;
Some tardy cripple bore the countermand,
That came too lag to see him buried.
God grant that some, less noble and less loyal,
Nearer in bloody thoughts, but not in blood,
Deserve not worse than wretched Clarence did,
And yet go current from suspicion!

Enter DERBY.

Der. A boon, my sovereign, for my service
done!

K. Edw. I pray thee, peace: my soul is full of sorrow.

Der. I will not rise, unless your highness grant.

K. Edw. Then speak at once what is it thou demand'st.

Der. The forfeit, sovereign, of my servant's
life:

Who slew to-day a riotous gentleman
Lately attendant on the Duke of Norfolk.

K. Edw. Have I a tongue to doom my brother's death,

And shall the same give pardon to a slave?
My brother slew no man; his fault was thought,
And yet his punishment was cruel death.

Who sued to me for him? who, in my rage,
Kneel'd at my feet, and bade me be advised?

Who spake of brotherhood? who spake of love?
Who told me how the poor soul did forsake

The mighty Warwick, and did fight for me?
Who told me, in the field by Tewkesbury,

When Oxford had me down, he rescued me,
And said, 'Dear brother, live, and be a king!'

Who told me, when we both lay in the field
Frozen almost to death, how he did lap me

Even in his own garments, and gave himself
All this and more, to the small cold night?

All this from my remembrance brutes with

Sinfully pluck'd, and not a man of you
Had so much grace to put it in my mind.
But when your carvers or your waiting-vassals
Have done a drunken slaughter, and defaced
The precious image of our dear Redeemer,
You straight are on your knees for pardon,

And I, unjustly too, must grant it you:
But for my brother not a man would speak,

Nor I, ungracious, speak unto myself
For him, poor soul. The proudest of you all
Have been beholding to him in his life;

Yet none of you would once plead for his life.
O God, I fear thy justice will take hold

On me, and you, and mine, and yours for this!
Come, Hastings, help me to my closet. Oh, poor Clarence!

[Exeunt some with King and Queen.]

Glou. This is the fruit of rashness! Mark'd you not

How that the guilty kindred of the queen
Look'd pale when they did hear of Clarence'

death?

O, they did urge it still unto the king!
God will revenge it. But come, let us in,
To comfort Edward with our company.

Buck. We wait upon your grace. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. The palace.

Enter the DUCHESS OF YORK, with the two children of CLARENCE.

Boy. Tell me, good grandam, is our father
dead?

Duch. No, boy.

Boy. Why do you wring your hands, and beat your breast,

And cry 'O Clarence, my unhappy son!'

Girl. Why do you look on us, and shake
your head,

And call us wretches, orphans, castaways,
If that our noble father be alive?

Duch. My pretty cousins, you mistake me
much;

I do lament the sickness of the king,
As loath to lose him, not your father's death;

It were lost sorrow to wail one that's lost.

Boy. Then, grandam, you conclude that he is dead.

The king my uncle is to blame for this:
God will revenge it; whom I will importune
With daily prayers all to that effect.

Girl. And so will I.

Duch. Peace, children, peace! the king doth love you well;

Incapable and shallow innocents,
You cannot guess who caused your father's
death.

Boy. Grandam, we can; for my good uncle
Gloucester

Told me, the king, provoked by the queen,
Devised enchantments to imprison him;

And when my uncle told me so, he laugh'd
And laugh'd me in his arm, and said, 'I had my check;

Made me only see him as on my father,
And he would love me dearly as his child.'

Duch. Oh, that deceit should steal such gentle shapes,
And with a virtuous vizard hide foul guile!
He is my son; yea, and therein my shame;
Yet from my dugs he drew not this deceit. 30

Boy. Think you my uncle did dissemble, grandam?

Duch. Ay, boy.

Boy. I cannot think it. Hark! what noise is this!

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH, with her hair about her ears; RIVERS and DORSET after her.

Q. Eliz. Oh, who shall hinder me to wail and weep,
To chide my fortune, and torment myself?
I'll join with black despair against my soul,
And to myself become an enemy.

Duch. What means this scene of rude impatience?

Q. Eliz. To make an act of tragic violence:
Edward, my lord, your son, our king, is dead.
Why grow the branches now the root is wither'd?
Why wither the leaves the sap being gone?
If you will live, lament; if die, be brief,
That our swift-winged souls may catch the king's;

Or, like obedient subjects, follow him
To his new kingdom of perpetual rest.

Duch. Ah, so much interest have I in thy sorrow

As I had title in thy noble husband!
I have bewept a worthy husband's death,
And lived by looking on his images; 50

But now two mirrors of his princely semblance
Are crack'd in pieces by malignant death,
And I for comfort have but one false glass,
Which grieves me when I see my shame in him.
Thou art a widow; yet thou art a mother,
And hast the comfort of thy children left thee:
But death hath snatch'd my husband from mine arms.

And pluck'd two crutches from my feeble limbs,
Edward and Clarence. O, what cause have I,
Thine being but a moiety of my grief, 60
To overgo thy plaints and drown thy cries!

Boy. Good aunt, you wept not for our father's death;

How can we aid you with our kindred tears?

Girl. Our fatherless distress was left un-mend'd;

Your widow-doleur likewise be unwept!

Q. Eliz. Give me no help in lamentation;
I am not barren to bring forth complaints:
All springs reduce their currents to mine eyes,
That I, being govern'd by the watery moon,
May send forth piteous tears to drown the world!

Oh for my husband, for my dear lord Edward!

Child. Oh for our father, for our dear lord Clarence!

Duch. Alas for both, both mine, Edward and Clarence!

Q. Eliz. What stay had I but Edward! and he's gone.

Child. What stay had we but Clarence! and he's gone.

Duch. What stays had I but they! and they are gone.

Q. Eliz. Was never widow had so dear a loss!

Child. Were never orphans had so dear a loss!

Duch. Was never mother had so dear a loss!

Alas, I am the mother of these moans! 80

Their woes are parcel'd, mine are general.

She for an Edward weeps, and so do I;

I for a Clarence weep, so doth not she;

These bales for Clarence weep, and so do I;

I for an Edward weep, so do not they:

Alas, you three, on me, threefold distress'd,

Pour all your tears! I am your sorrow's nurse,

And I will pamper it with lamentations.

Dor. Comfort, dear mother; God is much displeased

That you take with unthankfulness his doing:
In common worldly things, 'tis call'd ungrateful, 91

With dull unwillingness to repay a debt

Which with a bounteous hand was kindly lent;

Much more to be thus opposite with heaven,

For it requires the royal debt it lent you.

Riv. Madam, bethink you, like a careful

mother,

Of the young prince your son: send straight

for him;

Let him be crown'd; in him your comfort lives:

Drown desperate sorrow in dead Edward's grave;

And plant your joys in living Edward's throne.

Enter GLOUCESTER, BUCKINGHAM, DERBY, HASTINGS, and KATCLIFF.

Glouc. Madam, have comfort: all of us have cause 101

To wail the dimming of our shining star;

But none can cure their harms by wailing them.

Madam, my mother, I do cry you mercy;

I did not see your grace: humbly on my knee

I crave your blessing.

Duch. God bless thee; and put mockness in thy mind,

Love, charity, obedience, and true duty!

Glouc. [Aside] Amen; and make me die a good old man!

That is the butt-end of a mother's blessing: 110

I marvel why her grace did leave it out.

Buck. You cloudy princes and heart-sorrowing peers,

That bear this mutual heavy load of moan,

Now cheer each other in each other's love:

Though we have spent our harvest of this king.

We are to reap the harvest of his son.

The broken rancour of your high-sworn hearts,

But lately splinter'd, knit, and join'd together,

Must gently be preserved, cherish'd, and kept;

Me seemeth good, that, with some little train,

Forthwith from Ludlow the young prince be

fetch'd

Hither to London, to be crown'd our king.

Riv. Why with some little train, my Lord of Buckingham!

Buck. Marry, my lord, lest, by a multitude

The new-heal'd wound of malice should break

out;

Which would be so much the more dangerous

By how much the scab is green and yet un-govern'd:

Where every horse bears his commanding rein,
And may direct his course as please himself,
As well the fear of harm, as harm apparent, 130
In my opinion, ought to be prevented.

Glou. I hope the king made peace with all
of us;

And the compact is firm and true in me.

Riv. And so in me; and so, I think, in all:
Yes, since it is but green, it should be put
To no apparent likelihood of breach,
Which haply by much company might be urged:
Therefore I say with noble Buckingham,
That it is meet so few should fetch the prince.

Hast. And so say I. 140

Glou. Then be it so; and go we to determine

Who they shall be that straight shall post to Ludlow.

Madam, and you, my mother, will you go
To give your censures in this weighty business?

Q. Eliz. } With all our hearts.
Duch. }

[Exeunt all but Buckingham and Gloucester.]

Buck. My lord, whoever journeys to the prince,

For God's sake, let not us two be behind;

For, by the way, I'll sort occasion,

As index to the story we late talk'd of,

To part the queen's proud kindred from the
king. 150

Glou. My other self, my counsel's consistory,
My oracle, my prophet! My dear cousin,

I, like a child, will go by thy direction.

Towards Ludlow then, for we'll not stay behind.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. London. A street.

Enter two Citizens, meeting.

First Cit. Neighbour, well met: whither away so fast?

Sec. Cit. I promise you, I scarcely know myself:

Hear you the news abroad?

First Cit. Ay, that the king is dead.

Sec. Cit. Bad news, by r'lady; seldom comes the better:

I fear, I fear 'twill prove a troublous world.

Enter another Citizen.

Third Cit. Neighbours, God speed!

First Cit. Give you good morrow, sir.

Third Cit. Doth this news hold of good King Edward's death?

Sec. Cit. Ay, sir, it is too true; God help the while!

Third Cit. Then, masters, look to see:
troublous world.

First Cit. No, no; by God's good grace his son shall reign.

Third Cit. Woe to that land that's govern'd by a child!

Sec. Cit. In him there is a hope of government.

That in his morning council under him,
And in his full and ripen'd years himself,
No doubt, shall then and till then govern well.

First Cit. So stood the state when Henry the Sixth

Was crown'd in Paris but at nine months old.

Third Cit. Stood the state so? No, no, good friends, God wot;

'or then this land was famously enrich'd
With politic grave counsel; then the king so

Had virtuous uncles to protect his grace.

First Cit. Why, so hath this, both by the father and mother.

Third Cit. Better it were they all came by the father,

Or by the father there were none at all;
For emulation now, who shall be nearest,

Will touch us all too near, if God prevent not.
O, full of danger is the Duke of Gloucester!

And the queen's sons and brothers haught and
proud:

And were they to be ruled, and not to rule,
This sickly land might solace as before. 30

First Cit. Come, come, we fear the worst;
all shall be well.

Third Cit. When clouds appear, wise men put on their cloaks;

When great leaves fall, the winter is at hand;

When the sun sets, who doth not look for night?
Untimely storms make men expect a dearth.

All may be well; but, if God sort it so,
'Tis more than we deserve, or I expect.

Sec. Cit. Truly, the souls of men are full of dread:

Ye cannot reason almost with a man
That looks not heavily and full of fear. 40

Third Cit. Before the times of change, still is it so:

By a divine instinct men's minds mistrust
Ensuing dangers; as, by proof, we see

The waters swell before a boisterous storm.
But leave it all to God. Whither away!

Sec. Cit. Marry, we were sent for to the justices.

Third Cit. And so was I: I'll bear you company. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. London. The palace.

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF YORK, the young DUKE OF YORK, QUEEN ELIZABETH, and the DUCHESS OF YORK.

Arch. Last night, I hear, they lay at Northampton;

At Stony-Stratford will they be to-night:

To-morrow, or next day, they will be here.

Duch. I long with all my heart to see the
prince:

I hope he is much grown since last I saw him.

Q. Eliz. But I hear, no; they say my son
of York

Hath almost overtaken him in his growth.

York. Ay, mother; but I would not have it so.

Duch. Why, my young cousin, it is good to grow.

York. Grandam, one night, as we did sit at talk'd how I did love than my brother: 'Ay, quoth my uncle

Gloucester,

'Small herbs have grace, great weeds do grow space.'

And since, methinks, I would not grow so fast, Because sweet flowers are slow and weeds make haste.

Duch. Good faith, good faith, the saying did not hold

In him that did object the same to thee;
He was the wretchedst thing when he was young,

So long a-growing and so leisurely,
That, if this rule were true, he should be gracious.

Arch. Why, madam, so, no doubt, he is.

Duch. I hope he is; but yet let mothers doubt.

York. Now, by my troth, if I had been re-member'd,

I could have given my uncle's grace a flout,
To touch his growth nearer than he touch'd
mine.

Duch. How, my pretty York! I pray thee,
let me hear it.

York. Marry, they say my uncle grew so fast

That he could gnaw a crust at two hours old:
'Twas full two years ere I could get a tooth.

Grandam, this would have been a biting jest.

Duch. I pray thee, pretty York, who told thee this?

York. Grandam, his nurse.

Duch. His nurse! why, she was dead ere thou wert born.

York. If 'twere not she, I cannot tell who told me.

Q. Eliz. A pious boy: go to, you are too shrewd.

Arch. Good madam, be not angry with the child.

Q. Eliz. Pitchers have ears.

Enter a Messenger.
Arch. Here comes a messenger. What
news!

Mess. Such news, my lord, as grieves me to unfold.

Q. Eliz. How fares the prince?

Mess. Well, madam, and in health.

Duch. What is thy news then?

Mess. Lord Rivers and Lord Grey are sent to Pomfret.

With them Sir Thomas Vaughan, prisoner.

Duch. Who hath committed them?

Mess. The mighty dukes
Gloucester and Buckingham.

Q. Eliz. For what offence?

Mess. The sum of all I can, I have disclosed;
Why or for what these nobles were committed is all unknown to me, my gracious lady.

Q. Eliz. Ay me, I see the downfall of our house!

The time now hath aimed the gentle hind; so
the innocent and awless throne;
the innocent and awless throne;
the innocent and awless throne;

the innocent and awless throne;
the innocent and awless throne;
the innocent and awless throne;

the innocent and awless throne;
the innocent and awless throne;
the innocent and awless throne;

the innocent and awless throne;
the innocent and awless throne;
the innocent and awless throne;

My husband lost his life to get the crown;
And often up and down my sons were toss'd,

For me to joy and weep their gain and loss:
And being seated, and domestic broils

Clean over-blown, themselves, the conquerors, 60
Make war upon themselves; good against
blood,

Self against self: O, preposterous
And frantic outrage, and thy damned spleen;

Or let me die, to look on death no more!

Q. Eliz. Come, come, my boy; we will to sanctuary.

Madam, farewell. I'll go along with you.

Duch. I'll go along with you.
Q. Eliz. You have no cause.

Arch. My gracious lady, go;
And thither bear your treasure and your goods.

For my part, I'll resign unto your grace 70
The seal I keep: and so betide to me
As well I tender you and all of yours!

Come, I'll conduct you to the sanctuary.

[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I. London. A street.

The trumpets sound. Enter the young PRINCE,
the Dukes of GLOUCESTER and BUCKING-HAM, CARDINAL BOUCHAMER, CATHERBY, and
others.

Duch. Welcome, sweet prince, to London, to your chamber.

Glou. Welcome, dear cousin, my thoughts'
sovereign:

The weary way hath made you melancholy.

Prince. No, uncle; but our crosses on the way

Have made it tedious, wearisome, and heavy:
I want more uncles here to welcome me.

Glou. Sweet prince, the untainted virtue of your years

Hath not yet dived into the world's deceit:
Nor more can you distinguish of a man

Than of his outward show; which, God he knows, 20

Seldom or never jumpeth with the heart.
Those uncles which you want were dangerous;

Your grace attended to their sugar'd words,
But look'd not on the poison of their hearts:

God keep you from them, and from such false
friends!

Prince. God keep me from false friends!
but they were none.

Glou. My lord, the mayor of London comes to greet you.

Enter the Lord Mayor, and his train.

May. God bless your grace with health and happy days!

Prince. I thank you, good my lord; and thank you all.

I thought my mother, and my brother York, so
Would long ere this have met us on the way:

Fie, what a slug is Hastings, that he comes not
To tell us whether they will come or no!

Enter LORD HASTINGS.

Duch. And, in good time, here comes the sweating lord.

Prince. Welcome, my lord: what, will our mother come?

Hast. On what occasion, God he knows, not I.

The queen your mother, and your brother York, Have taken sanctuary: the tender prince Would fain have come with me to meet your

But by his mother was perforce withheld.
Buck. Flo, what an indirect and peevish course

Is this of hers! Lord cardinal, will your grace Persuade the queen to send the Duke of York Unto his princely brother presently?

If she deny, Lord Hastings, go with him, And from her jealous arms pluck him perforce.

Card. My Lord of Buckingham, if my weak oratory

Can from his mother win the Duke of York, Anon expect him here; but if she be obdurate To mild entreaties, God in heaven forbid
We should infringe the holy privilege
Of blessed sanctuary! not for all this land
Would I be guilty of so deep a sin.

Buck. You are too senseless-obstinate, my lord,

Too ceremonious and traditional:
Weigh it but with the grossness of this age,
You break not sanctuary in seizing him.
The benefit thereof is always granted
To those whose dealings have deserved the place,
And those who have the wit to claim the place;
This prince hath neither claim'd it nor deserved it.

And therefore, in mine opinion, cannot have it:
Then, taking him from thence that is not there,
You break no privilege nor charter there.

Oft have I heard of sanctuary men;
But sanctuary children ne'er till now.

Card. My lord, you shall o'er-rule my mind for once.

Come on, Lord Hastings, will you go with me?
Hast. I go, my lord.

Prince. Good lords, make all the speedy haste you may.

[Exeunt Cardinal and Hastings.]

Sav, uncle Gloucester, if our brother come,
Where shall we sojourn till our coronation?

Glou. Where it seems best unto your royal self.

If I may counsel you, some day or two
Your highness shall repose you at the Tower:
Then where you please, and shall be thought most fit

For your best health and recreation.

Prince. I do not like the Tower, of any place.
Did Julius Caesar build that place, my lord?

Buck. He did, my gracious lord, begin that place;

Which, since, succeeding ages have re-edified.

Prince. Is it upon record, or else reported Successfully from age to age, he built it?

Buck. Upon record, my gracious lord.

Prince. But say, my lord, it were not registered.

Methinks the truth should live from age to age,
As 'twere retained to all posterity,
Even to the general all-ending day.

Glou. [Aside] So wise so young, they say,
do never live long.

Prince. What say you, uncle?

Glou. I say, without characters, fame lives long.

[Aside] Thus, like the formal vice, Iniquity, moralize two meanings in one word.

Prince. That Julius Caesar was a famous man;

With what his valour did enrich his wit,
His wit set down to make his valour live:

Death makes no conquest of this conqueror;
For now he lives in fame, though not in life.

'I tell you what, my cousin Buckingham,—
Buck. What, my gracious lord?

Prince. An if I live until I be a man,
'I win our ancient right in France again,

Or die a soldier, as I lived a king.

Glou. [Aside] Short summers lightly have a forward spring.

Enter young YORK, HASTINGS, and the
CARDINAL.

Buck. Now, in good time, here comes the Duke of York.

Prince. Richard of York! how fares our loving brother?

York. Well, my dread lord; so must I call
you now.

Prince. Ay, brother, to our grief, as it is
yours:

Too late he died that might have kept that title,
Which by his death hath lost much majesty.

Glou. How fares our cousin, noble Lord of York?

York. I thank you, gentle uncle. O, my
lord,

You said that idle weeds are fast in growth;
The prince my brother hath outgrown me far.

Glou. He hath, my lord.

York. And therefore is he idle!

Glou. O, my fair cousin, I trust not my so.

York. Then he is more beholding to you than I.

Glou. He may command me as my sovereign;
But you have power in me as in a kinsman.

York. I pray you, uncle, give me this dagger.

Glou. My dagger, little cousin! with all my heart.

Prince. A beggar, brother!

York. Of my kind uncle, that I know will give;

And being but a toy, which is no grief to give.

Glou. A greater gift than that I'll give my cousin.

York. A greater gift! O, that's the sword to it.

Glou. Ay, gentle cousin, were it light enough.

York. O, then, I see, you will part with light gifts;

In weightier things you'll say a beggar seeks.

Glou. It is too heavy for your grace to wear.

York. I weigh it lightly, were it heavier.

Glou. What would you have my weapon?

York. I would, that I might thank you as you call me.

Glou. How?

York. Little.

Prince. My Lord of York will still be cross in talk :

Uncle, your grace knows how to bear with him.

York. You mean, to bear me, not to bear with me :

Uncle, my brother mocks both you and me ;
Because that I am little, like an ape, 130

He thinks that you should bear me on your shoulders.

Buck. With what a sharp-provided wit he reasons !

To mitigate the scorn he gives his uncle,

He prettily and aptly taunts himself :

So cunning and so young is wonderful.

Glow. My lord, will 't please you pass along ?

Myself and my good cousin Buckingham

Will to your mother, to treat of her

To meet you at the Tower and welcome you.

York. What, will you go unto the Tower, my lord ? 140

Prince. My lord protector needs will have it so.

York. I shall not sleep in quiet at the Tower.

Glow. Why, what should you fear ?

York. Marry, my uncle Clarence's angry ghost :
My grandam told me he was murder'd there.

Prince. I fear no uncles dead.

Glow. Nor none that live, I hope.

Prince. An if they live, I hope I need not fear.

But come, my lord ; and with a heavy heart,
Thinking on them, go I unto the Tower. 150

[A Sennet. Exeunt all but Gloucester, Buckingham and Catesby.]

Buck. Think you, my lord, this little prating York

Was not incensed by his subtle mother
To taunt and scorn you thus opprobriously ?

Glow. No doubt, no doubt : O, 'tis a perilous boy !

Bold, quick, ingenious, forward, capable :

He is all the mother's, from the top to toe.

Buck. Well, let them rest. Come hither, Catesby.

Thou art sworn as deeply to effect what we intend

As closely to conceal what we impart : 159

Thou know'st at our reasons urged upon the way ;
What think'st thou ? is it not an easy matter

To make William Lord Hastings of our mind,
For the instalment of this noble duke

In the seat royal of this famous isle ?

Cate. He for his father's sake so loves the prince,

That he will not be won to aught against him.

Buck. What think'st thou, then, of Stanley ?
what will he ?

Cate. He will do all in all as Hastings doth.

Buck. Well, then, no more but this : go, gentle Catesby,

And, as it were far off, sound thou Lord Hastings. 170

How he doth stand affected to our purpose ;
And summon him to-morrow to the Tower,

To be about the coronation.
In that time, and him tractable to us,

Show him, and show him all our reasons :

If he be leaden, icy-cold, unwilling,
Be thou so too ; and so break off your talk.

And give us notice of his inclination :

For we to-morrow hold divided councils.
Wherein thyself shalt highly be employ'd. 180

Glow. Commend me to Lord William : tell him, Catesby.

His ancient knot of dangerous adversaries
To-morrow are let blood at Pomfret-castle ;

And bid my friend, for joy of this good news,
Give Mistress Shore one gentle kiss the more.

Buck. Good Catesby, go, effect this business soundly.

Cate. My good lords both, with all the heed I may.

Glow. Shall we hear from you, Catesby, ere we sleep ?

Cate. You shall, my lord.

Glow. At Crosby Place, there shall you find us both. [Exit Catesby. 190]

Buck. Now, my lord, what shall we do, if we perceive

Lord Hastings will not yield to our complots ?

Glow. Chop off his head, man ; somewhat we will do :

And, look, when I am king, claim thou of me
The earldom of Hereford, and the moveables

Whereof the king my brother stood possess'd.

Buck. I 'll claim that promise at your grace's hands.

Glow. And look to have it yielded with all willingness.

Come, let us sup betimes, that afterwards
We may digest our complots in some form. 200

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Before Lord Hastings' house.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. What, ho ! my lord !

Hast. [Within] Who knocks at the door !

Mess. A messenger from the Lord Stanley.

Enter LORD HASTINGS.

Hast. What is 't o'clock ?

Mess. Upon the stroke of four.

Hast. Cannot thy master sleep these tedious nights ?

Mess. So it should seem by that I have to say.
First, he commends him to your noble lordship.

Hast. And then ?

Mess. And then he sends you word 10
He dreamt to-night the boar had rased his helm :

Besides, he says there are two councils held ;
And that may be determined at the one

Which may make you and him to rue at the other.

Therefore he sends to know your lordship's pleasure.

If presently you will take horse with him.

And with all speed post with him toward the north.

To shun the danger that his soul divines.

Hast. Go, fellow, go, return unto thy lord ;
Bid him not fear the separated councils : 20

His honour and myself are at the one.
And at the other is my secret Catesby ;

Where nothing can proceed that toucheth us

Whereof I shall not have intelligence.
 Tell him his fears are shallow, wanting instance:
 And for his dreams, I wonder he is so fond
 To trust the mockery of unquiet slumbers:
 To fly the boar before the boar pursues,
 Were to incense the boar to follow us
 And make pursuit where he did mean no chase.
 Go, bid thy master rise and come to me; 42
 And we will both together to the Tower,
 Where, he shall see, the boar will use us kindly.
Mess. My gracious lord, I'll tell him what you say. [Exit.]

Enter CATESBY.

Cate. Many good morrows to my noble lord!
Hast. Good morrow, Catesby; you are early stirring:
 What news, what news, in this our tottering
 state?
Cate. It is a reeling world, indeed, my lord;
 And I believe 'twill never stand upright
 Till Richard wear the garland of the realm. 40 Hast. How! wear the garland! dost thou mean the crown?
Cate. Ay, my good lord.
Hast. I'll have this crown of mine cut from my shoulders
 Ere I will see the crown so foul misplaced.
 But canst thou guess that he doth aim at it?
Cate. Ay, on my life; and hopes to find you forward

Upon his party for the gain thereof;
 And thereupon he sends you this good news,
 That this same very day your enemies,
 The kindred of the queen, must die at Pomfret.
Hast. Indeed, I am no mourner for that
 news, 51

Because they have been still mine enemies:
 But, that I'll give my voice on Richard's side,
 To bar my master's heirs in true descent,
 God knows I will not do it, to the death.

Cate. God keep your lordship in that gracious
 mind!

Hast. But I shall laugh at this a twelvemonth hence,
 That they who brought me in my master's hate,
 I live to look upon their tragedy.

I tell thee, Catesby,— 60
Cate. What, my lord?

Hast. Ere a fortnight make me elder,
 I'll send some packing that yet think not on it.

Cate. 'Tis a vile thing to die, my gracious
 lord,

When men are unprepared and look not for it.
Hast. O monstrous, monstrous! and so falls
 it out

With Rivers, Vaughan, Grey: and so 'twill do
 With some men else, who think themselves as safe

As thou and I: who, as thou know'st, are dear
 To princely Richard and to Buckingham. 70

Cate. The princess both make high account of you;

[Aside.] For they account his head upon the bridge.

Hast. I know they do; and I have well deserved it.

Enter LORD STANLEY.

Come on, come on; where is your boar-spear,
 man!

Fear you the boar, and go so unprovided?

Stan. My lord, good morrow; good morrow.

Catesby:

You may jest on, but, by the holy rood,

I do not like these several councils, I

Hast. My lord,

I hold my life as dear as you do yours; 80

And never in my life, I do protest.

Was it more precious to me than 'tis now:

Think you, but that I know our state secure,

I would be so triumphant as I am!

Stan. The lords at Pomfret, when they rode from London,

Were jocund, and supposed their state was sure,

And they indeed had no cause to mistrust;

But yet, you see, how soon the day o'ercast.

This sudden stab of rancour I misdoubt:

Pray God, I say, I prove a needless coward! go

What, shall we toward the Tower! the day is spent.

Hast. Come, come, have with you. Wot
 you what, my lord?

To-day the lords you talk of are beheaded.

Stan. They, for their truth, might better wear their heads

Than some that have accused them wear their hats.

But come, my lord, let us away.

Enter a Pursuivant.

Hast. Go on before; I'll talk with this good fellow. [Exit Stanley and Catesby.]

How now, airrah! how goes the world with thee?

Purs. The better that your lordship please to ask.

Hast. I tell thee, man, 'tis better with me
 now 300

Than when I met thee last where now we meet:

Then was I going prisoner to the Tower,

By the suggestion of the queen's allies;

But now, I tell thee—keep it to thyself—

This day those enemies are put to death,

And I in better state than e'er I was.

Purs. God hold it, to your honour's good content!

Hast. Gramercy, fellow: there, drink that for me. [Throws him his purse.]

Purs. God save your lordship! [Exit.]

Enter a Priest.

Priest. Well met, my lord; I am glad to see your honour. 320

Hast. I thank thee, good Sir John, with all my heart.

I am in your debt for your last exercise;
 Come the next Sabbath, and I will content you.

[He whispers to his man.]

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

Buck. What, talking with a priest, that chamberlain?

Your friend at Pomfret, they do need the priest;
 Your honour hath no surviving work in hand.

Hast. Good faith, and when I see him tomorrow.

Those men you talk of came into my mind.

What, go you toward the Tower?

Buck. I do, my lord; but long I shall not stay: 120

I shall return before your lordship thence.

Hast. 'Tis like enough, for I stay dinner there.

Buck. [Aside] And supper too, although thou know'st it not.

Come, will you go?

Hast. I'll wait upon your lordship. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Pomfret Castle.

Enter SIR RICHARD RATCLIFF, with halberds, carrying RIVERS, GREY, and VAUGHAN to death.

Rat. Come, bring forth the prisoners.

Riv. Sir Richard Ratcliff, let me tell thee this:

To-day shalt thou behold a subject die

For truth, for duty, and for loyalty.

Grey. God keep the prince from all the pack of you!

A knot you are of damned blood-suckers.

Vaug. You live that shall cry woe for this hereafter.

Rat. Dispatch; the limit of your lives is out.

Riv. O Pomfret, Pomfret! O thou bloody prison,

Fatal and ominous to noble peers! 10

Within the guilty closure of thy walls

Richard the second here was hack'd to death;

And, for more slander to thy dismal seat,

We give thee up our guiltless blood to drink.

Grey. Now Margaret's curse is fall'n upon our heads.

For standing by when Richard stab'd her son.

Riv. Then cursed she Hastings, then cursed she Buckingham.

Then cursed she Richard. O, remember, God,

To hear her prayers for them, as now for us!

And for my sister and her princely sons, 20

Be satisfied, dear God, with our true blood,

Which, as thou know'st, unjustly must be spill'd.

Rat. Make haste; the hour of death is expiate.

Riv. Come, Grey, come, Vaughan, let us all embrace:

And take our leave, until we meet in heaven. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. The Tower of London.

Enter BUCKINGHAM, DERBY, HASTINGS, the BISHOP OF ELY, RATCLIFF, LOVELL, with others, and take their seats at a table.

Hast. My lords, at once: the cause why we are met

Is, to determine of the coronation.

In God's name, speak: when is the royal day?

Buck. Are all things fitting for that royal time?

Der. It is, and wants but nomination.

Hast. To-morrow, then, I judge a happy day.

Buck. Who knows the lord protector's mind with the noble duke?

Ely. Your grace, we think, should soonest know his mind.

Buck. Who, I, my lord! we know each other's faces, 10

But for our hearts, he knows no more of mine, Than I of yours;

Nor I no more of his, than you of mine.

Lord Hastings, you and he are near in love.

Hast. I thank his grace, I know he loves me well;

But, for his purpose in the coronation,

I have not sounded him, nor he deliver'd

His gracious pleasure any way therein:

But you, my noble lords, may name the time;

And in the duke's behalf I'll give my voice,

Which, I presume, he'll take in gentle part.

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Ely. Now in good time, here comes the duke himself.

Glow. My noble lords and cousins all, good morrow.

I have been long a sleeper; but, I hope,

My absence doth neglect no great designs,

Which by my presence might have been concluded.

Buck. Had not you come upon your cue, my lord,

William Lord Hastings had pronounced your part,—

I mean, your voice,—for crowning of the king.

Glow. Than my Lord Hastings no man might be bolder; 20

His lordship knows me well, and loves me well.

Hast. I thank your grace.

Glow. My lord of Ely!

Ely. My lord!

Glow. When I was last in Holborn,

I saw good strawberries in your garden there:

I do beseech you send for some of them.

Ely. Marry, and will, my lord, with all my heart. [Exit.]

Glow. Cousin of Buckingham, a word with you.

Catesby hath sounded Hastings in our business,

And finds the testy gentleman so hot,

As he will lose his head ere give consent 40

His master's son, as worshipful he terms it,

Shall lose the royalty of England's throne.

Buck. Withdraw you hence, my lord, I'll follow you.

[Exit Gloucester, Buckingham following.]

Der. We have not yet set down this day of triumph.

To-morrow, in mine opinion, is too sudden;

For I myself am not so well provided.

As else I would be, were the day prolong'd.

Re-enter BISHOP OF ELY.

Ely. Where is my lord protector? I have sent for these strawberries.

Hast. His grace looks cheerfully and smooth to-day; 50

There's some conceit or other likes him well,

When he bid good morrow with such a spirit.

I think there's never a man in Christendom

That can less hide his love or hate than he;

For by his face straight shall you know his heart.

Der. What of his heart perceive you in his face?

By any likelihood he show'd to-day!

Hast. Marry, that with no man here he is offended;

For, were he, he had shown it in his looks.

Der. I pray God he be not, I say. 60

Re-enter GLOUCESTER and BUCKINGHAM.

Glow. I pray you all, tell me what they deserve

That do conspire my death with devilish plots of damned witchcraft, and that have prevail'd Upon my body with their hellish charms!

Hast. The tender love I bear your grace, my lord,

Makes me most forward in this noble presence To doom the offenders, whatsoever they be: I say, my lord, they have deserved death.

Glow. Then be your eyes the witness of this ill:

See how I am bewitch'd; behold mine arm 70 Is like a blasted sapling, wither'd up:

And this is Edward's wife, that monstrous witch,

Consorted with that harlot strumpet Shore, That by their witchcraft thus have marked me.

Hast. If they have done this thing, my gracious lord,—

Glow. If! thou protector of this damned strumpet,

Tellst thou me of 'ifs'! Thou art a traitor: Off with his head! Now, by Saint Paul I swear,

I will not dine until I see the same. Lovel and Ratcliff, look that it be done: 80

The rest, that love me, rise and follow me. [Exeunt all but Hastings, Ratcliff, and Lovel.]

Hast. Woe, woe for England! not a whit for me;

For I, too fond, might have prevented this. Stanley did dream the bear did raze his helm;

And I disdain'd it, and did scorn to fly: Three times to-day my foot-cloth horse did stumble, And startled, when he look'd upon the Tower, As loath to bear me to the slaughter-house.

O, now I want the priest that spake to me: I now repent I told the pursuivant, 90

As 'twere triumphing at mine enemies, How they at Pomfret bloodily were butcher'd, And I myself secure in grace and favour.

O Margaret, Margaret, now thy heavy curse Is lighted on poor Hastings' wretched head!

Hast. Dispatch, my lord; the duke would be at dinner:

Make a short shrift; he longs to see your head.

Hast. O momentary grace of mortal men, Which we more hunt for than the grace of God!

Who builds his hopes in air of your good looks, Lives like a drunken sailor on a mast, 100

Ready, with every nod, to tumble down Into the fatal bowels of the deep.

Lov. Come, come, dispatch; 'tis bootless to exclaim.

Hast. O bloody Richard! miserable England! I prophesy the fearful time to thee

That ever wretched age hath look'd upon. Come, lead me to the block; bear him my head: They smile at me that shortly shall be dead. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. The Tower-walls.

Enter GLOUCESTER and BUCKINGHAM, in rotten armour, marvellous ill-favoured.

Glow. Come, cousin, canst thou quake, and change thy colour,

Murder thy breath in middle of a word, And then begin again, and stop again,

As if thou wert distraught and mad with terror? Buck. Tut, I can counterfeit the deep tragedian;

Speak and look back, and pry on every side, Tremble and start at wagging of a straw,

Intending deep suspicion: ghastly looks Are at my service, like enforced smiles;

And both are ready in their offices. 10 At any time, to grace my stratagems.

But what, is Cateby gone?

Glow. He is; and, see, he brings the mayor along.

Enter the Mayor and CATEBY.

Buck. Lord mayor,—

Glow. Look to the drawbridge there! Buck. Hark! a drum.

Glow. Cateby, o'erlook the walls.

Buck. Lord mayor, the reason we have sent— Glow. Look back, defend thee, here are enemies. Buck. God and our innocency defend and guard us!

Glow. Be patient, they are friends, Ratcliff and Lovel. 20

Enter LOVEL and RATCLIFF, with HASTINGS' head.

Lov. Here is the head of that ignoble traitor, The dangerous and unsuspected Hastings.

Glow. So dear I loved the man, that I must weep.

I took him for the plainest harmless creature That breathed upon this earth a Christian;

Made him my book, wherein my soul recorded The history of all her secret thoughts:

So smooth he daub'd his vice with show of virtue.

That, his apparent open guilt omitted, I mean, his conversation with Shore's wife, 30

He lived from all attainder of suspect. Buck. Well, well, he was the covert shelter traitor

That ever lived. Would you imagine, or almost believe,

Were I not that, by great preservation, We live to tell it you, the subtle traitor

This day had plotted, in the council-chamber To murder me and my good Lord of Gloucester?

May. What, had he so? Glow. What, think you we are fools or infolles? Or that we would, against the form of law,

100 rashly to the villain's death, expose the peril of the state,

The peace of England and our persons' safety,
 Inferred us to this execution!

May. Now, fair befall you! he deserved his death;

And you, my good lords, both have well pro-

To warn false traitors from the like attempt.
 I never look'd for better at his hands,

After he once fell in with Mistress Shore.

Glow. Yet had not we determined he should die,

Until your lordship came to see his death;
 Which now the loving haste of these our friends,

Somewhat against our meaning, have prevented:
 Because, my lord, we would have had you heard

The traitor speak, and timorously confess
 The manner and the purpose of his treason;

That you might well have signified the same
 Unto the citizens, who haply may

Misconstrue us in him and wail his death.

May. But, my good lord, your grace's word shall serve,

As well as I had seen and heard him speak;
 And doubt you not, right noble princes both,

But I'll acquaint our devout citizens
 With all your just proceedings in this cause.

Glow. And to that end we wish'd your lordship here,

To avoid the carping censures of the world.
Buck. But since you come too late of our intent,

 Yet witness what you hear we did intend:

And so, my good lord mayor, we bid farewell.
[Exit Mayor.]

Glow. Go, after, after, cousin Buckingham.
 The mayor towards Guildhall hies him in all post:

There, at your meet'st advantage of the time,
 Infer the bastardy of Edward's children:

Tell them how Edward put to death a citizen,
 Only for saying he would make his son

Heir to the crown; meaning indeed his house,
 Which, by the sign thereof, was termed so.

Moreover, urge his hateful luxury,
 And bestial appetite in change of lust;

Which stretched to their servants, daughters,
 wives,

Even where his lustful eye or savage heart,
 Without control, list to make his prey.

May. For a need, thus far come near my person:
 Tell them, when that my mother went with

child

Of that unmatte Edward, noble York
 My princely father then had wars in France;

And, by just computation of the time,
 Found that the issue was not his begot;

Which well appeared in his lineaments,
 Being nothing like the noble duke my father:

But touch this sparingly, as 'twere far off;
 Because you know, my lord, my mother lives.

Buck. Fear not, my lord, I'll play the creator.

As if the golden fee for which I plead
 Were for myself; and so, my lord, adieu.

Glow. If you thrive well, bring them to Baynard's Castle;

Whence you shall find me well accompanied
 With learned fathers and well-learned bishops.

Buck. I go; and towards three or four o'clock

Look for the news that the Guiaffords.

Glow. Go, Lovel, with all speed to Doctor
 Shaw;

[To Cate.] Go thou to Friar Penker; bid them
 both

Meet me within this hour at Baynard's Castle.
[Exeunt all but Gloucester.]

Now will I in, to take some privy order
 To draw the brats of Clarence out of sight;

And to give notice, that no manner of person
 At any time have recourse unto the princes.

[Exit.]

SCENE VI. The same. A street.

Enter a Scrivener, with a paper in his hand.
Scriv. This is the indictment of the good

Lord Hastings;
 Which in a set hand fairly is engross'd.

That it may be this day read o'er in Paul's.
 And mark how well the sequel hangs together:

Eleven hours I spent to write it over,
 For yesternight by Cataly was it brought me;

The precedent was full as long a-doing;
 And yet within these five hours lived Lord

Hastings,
 Untainted, unexamined, free, at liberty.

Here's a good world the while! Why who's so gross,

That seeth not this palpable device?
 Yet who's so blind, but says he sees it not?

Bad is the world; and all will come to nought,
 When such bad dealing must be seen in thought.

[Exit.]

SCENE VII. Baynard's Castle.

Enter GLOUCESTER and BUCKINGHAM, at several doors.

Glow. How now, my lord, what say the citizens?

Buck. Now, by the holy mother of our Lord,
 The citizens are mum and speak not a word.

Glow. Touch'd you the bastardy of Edward's children?

Buck. I did; with his contract with Lady
 Lucy,

And his contract by deputy in France;
 The insatiate greediness of his desires,

And his enforcement of the city wives;
 His tyranny for trifles; his own bastardy,

As being got, your father then in France,
 And his resemblance, being not like the duke:

Withal I did infer your lineaments,
 Being the right idea of your father,

Both in your form and nobleness of mind;
 Laid open all your victories in Scotland,

Your discipline in war, wisdom in peace,
 Your bounty, virtue, fair humility;

Indeed, left nothing fitting for the purpose
 Untouch'd, or slightly handled, in discourse:

And when mine oratory grew to an end,
 I bid them that did love their country's good

Cry 'God save Richard, England's royal king!'
Glow. Ah! and did they so!

Buck. No, so God help me, they spake not a word;

But, like dumb statues or breathing stones,
Gazed each on other, and look'd deadly pale.
Which when I saw, I reprehended them;
And ask'd the mayor what meant this wilful silence:

His answer was, the people were not wont
To be spoke to but by the recorder. 30
Then he was urged to tell my tale again,
'Thus saith the duke, thus hath the duke in-fer'd':

But nothing spake in warrant from himself.
When he had done, some followers of mine own,
At the lower end of the hall, hurl'd up their caps,
And some ten voices cried 'God save King
Richard!'

And thus I took the vantage of those few,
'Thanks, gentle citizens and friends,' quoth I;
'This general applause and loving shout
Argues your wisdoms and your love to Richard.'
And even here brake off, and came away. 41

Glow. What tongueless blocks were they!
would they not speak?

Buck. No, by my truth, my lord.
Glow. Will not the mayor then and his brethren come?

Buck. The mayor is here at hand: intend some fear;

Be not you spoke with, but by mighty suit:
And look you get a prayer-book in your hand.
And stand betwixt two churchmen, good my
lord;

For on that ground I'll build a holy descent:
And be not easily won to our request: 50 Play the maid's part, still answer nay, and take it.

Glow. I go; and if you plead as well for them
As I can say nay to thee for myself,
No doubt we'll bring it to a happy issue.

Buck. Go, go, up to the leads; the lord mayor knocks. [Exit Gloucester.

Enter the Mayor and Citizens.

Welcome, my lord: I dance attendance here;
I think the duke will not be spoke withal.

Enter CATESBY.

Here comes his servant: how now, Catesby,
What says he?

Cate. My lord, he doth entreat your grace
To visit him to-morrow or next day: 60
He is within, with two right reverend fathers,
Devinely bent to meditation;

And in no worldly suit would he be moved,
To draw him from his holy exercise.

Buck. Return, good Catesby, to thy lord
again;

Tell him, myself, the mayor and citizens,
In deep designs and matters of great moment,
No less importing than our general good,
Are come to have some conference with his
grace.

Cate. I'll tell him what you say, my lord. 70

Buck. Ah, ha, my lord, this prince is not an Edward!

He is not lolling on a lewd day-bed,

but on his knees at meditation;
Not dallying with a brace of courtizans,
But meditating with two deep divines;
Not sleeping, to enrich his idle body,
But praying, to enrich his watchful soul:
Happy were England, would this gracious prince
Take on himself the sovereignty thereof:
But, sure, I fear, we shall ne'er win him to it. 80
May. Marry, God forbid his grace should say us nay!
Buck. I fear he will.

Re-enter CATESBY.

How now, Catesby, what says your lord?
Cate. My lord,

He wonders to what end you have assembled
Such troops of citizens to speak with him,
His grace not being warn'd thereof before:
My lord, he fears you mean no good to him.

Buck. Sorry I am my noble cousin should Suspect me, that I mean no good to him:
Nay heaven, I come in perfect love to him; 90
And so once more return and tell his grace.

[Exit Catesby.

When holy and devout religious men
Are at their beads, 'tis hard to draw them
thence.

So sweet is zealous contemplation.

Enter GLOUCESTER aloft, between two Bishops CATESBY returns.

May. See, where he stands between two clergymen!

Buck. Two props of virtue for a Christian
prince.

To stay him from the fall of vanity:
And, see, a book of prayer in his hand,
True ornaments to know a holy man.
Famous Plantagenet, most gracious prince, 100
Lend favourable ears to our request;

And pardon us the interruption
Of thy devotion and right Christian zeal.

Glow. My lord, there needs no such apology:
I rather do beseech you pardon me,

Who, earnest in the service of my God,
Neglect the visitation of my friends.

But, leaving this, what is your grace's pleasure?

Buck. Even that, I hope, which pleases God above,

And all good men of this ungovern'd isle. 110

Glow. I do suspect I have done some offence
That seems disgraceful in the city's eyes.

And that you come to reprove my ignorance.

Buck. You have, my lord: would it might please your grace,

At our entreaties, to amend that fault!

Glow. Else wherefore breathe I in a Christian land?

Buck. Then know, it is your fault that you
reign

The supreme seat, the throne majestic,
The scepter'd office of your ancestors.

Your state of fortune and your due of birth, 120
The lineal glory of your royal house,
To the corruption of a blemish'd stock;

As in the midnoon of your sleep,
In we waken to our country's ill; then want her proper

Her face defaced with scars of infamy,
Her royal stock graft with ignoble plants,
And almost shouldered in the swallowing gulf
Of blind forgetfulness and dark oblivion,
Which to recure, we heartily solicit 130
Your gracious self to take on you the charge
And kindly government of this your land,
Not as protector, steward, substitute,
Or lowly factor for another's gain;
But as successively from blood to blood,
Your right of birth, your empery, your own.
For this, consorted with the citizens,
Your very worshipful and loving friends,
And by their vehement instigation,
In this just suit come I to move your grace. 140

Glouc. I know not whether to depart in silence,

Or bitterly to speak in your reproof.
Best fitteth my degree or your condition:
If not to answer, you might haply think
Tongue-tied ambition, not replying, yielded
To bear the golden yoke of sovereignty,
Which fondly you would here impose on me;
If to reprove you for this suit of yours,
So season'd with your faithful love to me,
Then, on the other side, I check'd my friends.
Therefore, to speak, and to avoid the first, 151
And then, in speaking, not to incur the last,
Definitively thus I answer you.

Your love deserves my thanks; but my desert
Unmeritable shuns your high request.
First, if all obstacles were cut away,
And that my path were even to the crown,
As my ripe revenue and due by birth;
Yet so much is my poverty of spirit, 160
So mighty and so many my defects,
As I had rather hide me from my greatness,
Being a bark to brook no mighty sea,
Than in my greatness covet to be hid,
And in the vapour of my glory smother'd.
But, God be thanked, there's no need of me,
And much I need to help you, if need were;
The royal tree hath left us royal fruit,
Which, mellow'd by the stealing hours of time,
Will well become the seat of majesty,
And make, no doubt, us happy by his reign. 170
On him I lay what you would lay on me,
The right and fortune of his happy stars;
Which God defend that I should wring from him!

Buck. My lord, this argues conscience in your grace:

But the respects thereof are nice and trivial,
As circumstances well considered.
You say that Edward is your brother's son:
So say we too, but not by Edward's wife:
For first he was contract to Lady Lucy—
Your mother lives a witness to that vow— 180
And afterward by substitute betroth'd
To Bona, sister to the King of France.
These both put by, a poor petitioner,
A poor-creased mother of a many children,
A heavily-sorrowing and distressed widow,
Even in the afternoon of her best days,
Has made a purchase of his lustful eye,
And thus she hath begot this Edward.

Glouc. This is a malicious tale, I see.

This Edward, whom our manners term the prince.

More bitterly could I expostulate,
Save that, for reverence to some alive,
I give a sparing limit to my tongue.
Then, good my lord, take to your royal self
This proffer'd benefit of dignity;
If not to bless us and the land withal,
Yet to draw forth your noble ancestry
From the corruption of abusing times
Unto a lineal true-derived course. 200

May. Do, good my lord, your citizens entreat you.

Buck. Refuse not, mighty lord, this proffer'd love.

Cate. O, make them joyful, grant their lawful suit!

Glouc. Alas, why would you heap these cares on me!

I am unfit for state and majesty;
I do beseech you, take it not amiss;
I cannot nor I will not yield to you.

Buck. If you refuse it,—as, in love and zeal
Loath to depose the child, your brother's son:
As well we know your tenderness of heart
And gentle, kind, effeminate remorse,
Which we have noted in you to your kin,
And equally indeed to all estates,—

Yet whether you accept our suit or no,
Your brother's son shall never reign our king:
But we will plant some other in the throne,
To the disgrace and downfall of your house;
And in this resolution here we leave you.—
Come, citizens! 'rounds! I'll entreat no more.

Glouc. O, do not swear, my lord of Buckingham.

Cate. Call them again, my lord, and accept their suit. 210

Another. Do, good my lord, lest all the land do rue it.

Glouc. Would you enforce me to a world o' care!

Well, call them again. I am not made o' stones,

But penetrable to your kind entreats,
Albeit against my conscience and my soul.

Re-enter BUCKINGHAM and the rest.

Cousin of Buckingham, and you sage, grave men,

Since you will buckle fortune on my back.

To bear her burthen, whether I will or no,
I must have patience to endure the load: 220

But if black scandal or foul-faced reproach
Attend the sequel of your imposition,

Your more enforcement shall acquaintance me
From all the impure blot and stains thereof;

For God he knows, and you may partly see,
How far I am from the desire thereof.

May. God bless your grace! we see it, and will say it.

Glouc. In saying so, you shall but say the truth.

Buck. Then I salute you with this kindly title:

Long live Richard, England's royal king!

May. and Others.

Buck. To-morrow will it please you to be crown'd?

Glo. Even when you please, since you will have it so.

Buck. To-morrow, then, we will attend your grace:

And so most joyfully we take our leave.

Glo. Come, let us to our holy task again.

Farewell, good cousin; farewell, gentle friends.
[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I. Before the Tower.

Enter, on one side, QUEEN ELIZABETH, DUCHESS OF YORK, and MARQUESS OF DORSET; on the other, ANNE, DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER, leading LADY MARGARET PLANTAGENET, CLARENCE'S young Daughter.

Duch. Who meets us here? my niece Plantagenet led in the hand of her kind aunt of Gloucester? Now, for my life, she's wandering to the Tower. On pure heart's love to greet the tender princes. Daughter, well met.

Anne. God give your graces both

A happy and a joyful time of day!

Q. Eliz. As much to you, good sister! Whither away?

Anne. No farther than the Tower; and, as I guess, upon the like devotion as yourselves,

to congratulate the gentle princes there.

Q. Eliz. Kind sister, thanks: we'll enter all together.

Enter BRAKENBURY.

And, in good time, here the lieutenant comes. Master lieutenant, pray you, by your leave, how doth the prince, and my young son of York?

Brak. Right well, dear madam. By your patience,

I may not suffer you to visit them:

The king hath strictly charged the contrary.

Q. Eliz. The king! why, who's that?

Brak. I cry you mercy: I mean the lord protector.

Q. Eliz. The Lord protect him from that kindly title!

Hath he set bounds betwixt their love and me? I am their mother; who should keep me from them?

Duch. I am their father's mother; I will see them.

Anne. Their aunt I am in law, in love their mother:

Then bring me to their sights; I'll bear thy blame.

An. Brak. No, madam, no; I may not leave it so;

I am bound by oath, and therefore pardon me.

Enter LORD STANLEY.

Stan. Let me but meet you, ladies, one hour hence,

And I'll salute your grace of York as mother, And reverend looker on, of two fair queens.

[To Anne] Come, madam, you must straight to Westminster.

There to be crown'd Richard's royal queen.

Q. Eliz. O, cut my lace in sunder, that my pent heart

May have some scope to beat, or else I swoon With this dead-killing news!

Anne. Despitful tidings! O unpleasant news!

Dor. Be of good cheer: mother, how fares your grace?

Q. Eliz. O Dorset, speak not to me, get thee hence!

Death and destruction dog thee at the heels; for Thy mother's name is ominous to children.

If thou wilt outstrip death, go cross the seas, And live with Richmond, from the reach of hell:

Go, hie thee, hie thee from this slaughter-house,

Lest thou increase the number of the dead; And make me die the thrall of Margaret's curse,

Nor mother, wife, nor England's counted queen.

Stan. Full of wise care is this your counsel, madam.

Take all the swift advantage of the hours; You shall have letters from me to my son

To meet you on the way, and welcome you. Be not taken tardy by unwise delay.

Duch. O ill-dispersing wind of misery! O my accursed womb, the bed of death!

A cockatrice hast thou hatch'd to the world, Whose unavoided eye is murderous.

Stan. Come, madam, come; I in all haste was sent.

Anne. And I in all unwillingness will go. I would to God that the inclusive verge

(Of golden metal that must round my brow) Were red-hot steel, to sear me to the brain!

Anointed let me be with dandy venom, And die, ere men can say, God save the queen!

Q. Eliz. Go, go, poor soul, I envy not thy story;

To feed my humour, wish myself no harm.

Anne. No! why? When he that is my husband now

Came to me, as I follow'd Henry's corpse, When scarce the blood was well wash'd from his hands

Which issued from my other angel-husband And that dead saint which then I weeping follow'd;

O, when, I say, I look'd on Richard's face, This was my wish: 'Be thou,' quoth I, 'accursed,

For making me, so young, as old a widow! And, when thou wast, let sorrow haunt thy bed;

And be thy wife—if any be so mad—As miserable by the life of thee

As thou hast made me by thy death; and shall I, ere I can repeat this curse again,

Even in so short a space, my woman's heart Grossly grew captive to his honey words so
And proved the subject of my own soul's curse,
Which ever since hath kept my eyes from rest;
For never yet one hour in his bed
Have I enjoy'd the golden dew of sleep,
But have been waked by his timorous dreams.
Besides, he hates me for my father Warwick;
And will, no doubt, shortly be rid of me.

Q. Eliz. Poor heart, adieu! I pity thy complaining.

Anne. No more than from my soul I mourn for yours.

Q. Eliz. Farewell, thou woful welcomer of glory!

Anne. Adieu, poor soul, that takest thy leave of it!

Duch. [To Dorset] Go thou to Richmond, and good fortune guide thee!

[To Anne] Go thou to Richard, and good angels guard thee!

[To Queen Eliz.] Go thou to sanctuary, and good thoughts possess thee!

I to my grave, where peace and rest lie with me!
Eighty odd years of sorrow have I seen,
And each hour's joy wreck'd with a week of teen.

Q. Eliz. Stay, yet look back with me unto the Tower.

Pity, you ancient stones, those tender babes
Whom envy hath immured within your walls!
Rough cradle for such little pretty ones! 101
Rude ragged nurse, old sullen playfellow
For tender princess, use my babies well!
So foolish sorrow bids your stones farewell.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. London. The palace.

Sennet. Enter RICHARD, in pomp, crowned; BUCKINGHAM, CATESBY, a Page, and others.

K. Rich. Stand all apart. Cousin of Buckingham!

Buck. My gracious sovereign!

K. Rich. Give me thy hand. [Here he ascends his throne.] Thus high, by thy advice

And thy assistance, is King Richard seated;
But shall we wear these honours for a day!
Or shall they last, and we rejoice in them?

Buck. Still live they and for ever may they last!

K. Rich. O Buckingham, now do I play the touch

To try if thou be current gold indeed:
Young Edward lives: think now what I would say.

Buck. Say on, my loving lord.

K. Rich. Why, Buckingham, I say, I would be king.

Buck. Why, so you are, my thrice renowned king.

K. Rich. Ha! am I king? 'tis so: but Edward lives.

Buck. True, noble prince.

O bitter consequence,
That Edward still should live! True, noble

Cousin, thou wert not wont to be dull:
Shall I be plain? I wish the dead;
And I would have it suddenly 'n'd.
What sayest thou? speak suddenly be brief.

Buck. Your grace may do your pleasure.

K. Rich. Tut, tut, thou art all thy kindness freest.

Say, have I thy consent that they shall die?

Buck. Give me some breath, some little pause, my lord,

Before I positively speak herein:
I will resolve your grace immediately. [Exit.]

Cate. [Aside to a stander by] The king is angry: see, he bites the lip.

K. Rich. I will converse with iron-witted fools

And unrespective boys: none are for me
That look into me with considerate eyes: 10
High-reaching Buckingham grows circumspect.

Boy. Page. My lord!

K. Rich. Know'st thou not any whom corrupting gold

Would tempt unto a close exploit of death?

Page. My lord, I know a discontented gentleman,

Whose humble means match not his haughty mind:

Gold were as good as twenty orators,
And will, no doubt, tempt him to any thing.

K. Rich. What is his name?

Page. His name, my lord, is Tyrrel.

K. Rich. I partly know the man: go, call him hither. [Exit Page.]

The deep-revolving witty Buckingham
No more shall be the neighbour to my counsel

Hath he so long held out with me untired,
And stops he now for breath?

Enter STANLEY.

How now! what news with you?

Stan. My lord, I hear the Marquis Dorset

fled
To Richmond, in those parts beyond the sea
Where he abides. [Stands apart.]

K. Rich. Catesby!

Cate. My lord!

K. Rich. Rumour it abroad
That Anne, my wife, is sick and like to die:

I will take order for her keeping close.
Inquire me out some mean-born gentleman,
Whom I will marry straight to Clarence's daughter:

The boy is foolish, and I fear not him.
Look, how thou dream'st! I say again, give

That Anne my wife is sick and like to die:
About it: for it stands me much upon.

To stop all hopes whose growth may damage me

I must be married to my brother's daughter,
Or else my kingdom stands on brittle glass.

Murder her brothers, and then marry her!
Uncertain way of gain! But I am in

So far in blood that sin will pluck on sin:
Tear-falling pity dwells not in this eye.

Re-enter Page, with TYRREL.

Is thy name Tyrrel?

Tyr. James Tyrrel, and your most obedient subject.

K. Rich. Art thou, indeed?

Tyr. Prove me, my gracious sovereign.

K. Rich. Darest thou resolve to kill a friend of mine? 70

Tyr. Ay, my lord;

But I had rather kill two enemies.

K. Rich. Why, there thou hast it: two deep enemies,

Foes to my rest and my sweet sleep's disturbers

Are they that I would have thee deal upon:

Tyrrel, I mean those bastards in the Tower.

Tyr. Let me have open means to come to them,

And soon I'll rid you from the fear of them.

K. Rich. Thou sing'st sweet music. Hark,

come hither, Tyrrel:

Go, by this token: rise, and lend thine ear: 80

[Whispers.]

There is no more but so: say it is done,

And I will love thee, and prefer thee too.

Tyr. 'Tis done, my gracious lord.

K. Rich. Shall we hear from thee, Tyrrel, ere we sleep?

Tyr. Ye shall, my lord. [Exit.]

Re-enter BUCKINGHAM.

Buck. My lord, I have consider'd in my mind

The late demand that you did sound me in.

K. Rich. Well, let that pass. Darest is fled to Richmond.

Buck. I hear that news, my lord.

K. Rich. Stanley, he is your wife's son: well, look to it. 90

Buck. My lord, I claim your gift, my due by promise,

For which your honour and your faith is pawn'd;

The earldom of Hertford and the moveables

That which you promised I should possess.

K. Rich. Stanley, look to your wife: if she convey

Letters to Richmond, you shall answer it.

Buck. What says your highness to my just demand?

K. Rich. As I remember, Henry the Sixth

Did prophecy that Richmond should be king,

When Richmond was a little poevish boy. 100

A king, perhaps, perhaps.—

Buck. My lord!

K. Rich. How chance the prophet could not at that time

Have told me, I being by, that I should kill

him?

Buck. My lord, your promise for the earldom—

K. Rich. Richmond! When last I was at

Exeter,

The mayor in courtesy show'd me the castle,

And call'd it Rougemont: at which name I started,

Because a bard of Ireland told me once,

I should not live long after I saw Richmond.

Buck. My lord!

K. Rich. Ay, what's o'clock?

Buck. I am thus bold to put your grace in mind

Of what you promised me.

K. Rich. Well, but what's o'clock?

Buck. Upon the stroke of ten.

K. Rich. Well, let it strike.

Buck. Why let it strike?

K. Rich. Because that, like a Jack, thou

keep'st the stroke

Betwixt thy begging and my meditation.

I am not in the giving vein to-day.

Buck. Why, then resolve me whether you will or no. 120

K. Rich. Tut, tut,

Thou troublest me; I am not in the vein.

[Exit all but Buckingham.]

Buck. Is it even so? rewards be my true

service

With such deep contempt? made I him king

for this?

O, let me think on Hastings, and be gone

To Brecknock, while my fearful head is on! [Exit.]

SCENE III. The same.

Enter TYRREL.

Tyr. The tyrannous and bloody deed is done,

The most arch act of pitious massacre

That ever yet this land was guilty of.

Dighton and Forrest, whom I did unborn

To do this ruthless piece of butchery,

Although they were flesh'd villains, bloody dogs,

Melting with tenderness and kind compassion

Wept like two children in their deaths' and stories,

'Lo, thus,' quoth Dighton, 'lay those tender

babes:'

'Thus, thus,' quoth Forrest, 'girdling one another 20

Within their innocent alabaster arms;

Their lips were four red roses on a stalk,

Which in their summer beauty kiss'd each

other.

A book of prayers on their pillow lay:

Which once, quoth Forrest, 'almost changed

my mind;

But O! the devil!—there the villain stopp'd:

Whilst Dighton thus told on: 'We smothered

The most replenish'd sweet work of nature,

That from the prime creation e'er was framed,'

Thus both are gone with conscience and remorse; 30

They could not speak; and so I left them both,

To bring this tidings to the bloody king.

And here he comes.

Enter KING RICHARD.

All hail, my sovereign liege!

K. Rich. Kind Tyrrel, am I happy in thy

news?

Tyr. If to have done the thing you gave in charge

Beget your happiness, be happy then,

For it is done, my lord.

K. Rich. But didst thou see them dead?

Tyr. I did, my lord.

K. Rich. And buried?

Tyr. The chaplain of the Tower

them:

But how or in what place I do not know. 30
K. Rich. Come to me, Tyrrel, soon at after supper.

And thou shalt tell the process of their death.
 Meantime, but think how I may do thee good,
 I be inheritor of thy desire.

Farewell till soon. [Exit Tyrrel.]

The son of Clarence have I pent up close;
 His daughter meanly have I match'd in marriage;

The sons of Edward sleep in Abraham's bosom,
 And Anne my wife hath bid the world good night.

Now, for I know the Breton Richmond aims
 At young Elizabeth, my brother's daughter, 41
 And, by that knot, looks proudly o'er the crown,
 To her I go, a jolly thriving wooer.

Enter CATSBY.

Catsb. My lord!

K. Rich. Good news or bad, that thou comest in so bluntly?

Catsb. Bad news, my lord: Ely is fled to Richmond;

And Buckingham, back'd with the hardy
 Welshmen,

Is in the field, and still his power increaseth.

K. Rich. Ely with Richmond troubles me more near

Than Buckingham and his rash-levied army. 50

Come, I have heard that fearful commenting
 Is leaden servitor to dull delay;

Delay leads impotent and snail-paced beggary:

Then fiery expedition be my wing,

Jove's Mercury, and herald for a king!

Come, muster men: my counsel is my shield;

We must be brief when traitors brave the field.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Before the palace.

Enter QUEEN MARGARET.

Q. Mar. So, now prosperity begins to mellow
 And drop into the rotten mouth of death.

Here in these confines ally have I lurk'd,

To watch the waning of mine adversaries.

A dire induction am I witness to,

And woe to France, hoping the consequence

Will prove as bitter, black, and tragical.

Wretched thou, wretched Margaret: who comes
 here?

*Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH and the DUCHESS
 OF YORK.*

Q. Eliz. Ah, my young princes! ah, my tender babes!

My unknown flowers, new-appearing sweets! 10

If yet your gentle souls fly in the air

And be not fix'd in doom perpetual,

Hower about me with your airy wings

And hear your mother's lamentation!

Q. Mar. Hower about her; say, that right for right

Shall damn'd your infant morn to aged night.

Duch. So many miseries have crazed my reason,

That my once-vibrant tongue is mute and dumb,

And I, poor Margaret, why art thou dead!

Q. Mar. Plantagenet doth quit Plantagenet.
 Edward for Edward pays a dying debt. 21

Q. Eliz. Wilt thou, O God, fly from such gentle lambs,

And throw them in the entrails of the wolf?

When didst thou sleep when such a deed was
 done?

Q. Mar. When holy Harry died, and my sweet son.

Duch. Blind sight, dead life, poor mortal living ghost,

Woe's scene, world's shame, grave's due by life usurp'd,

Brief abstract and record of tedious days,
 Rest thy unrest on England's lawful earth,

Unlawfully made drunk with innocents' blood!

Q. Eliz. O, that thou wouldst as well afford a grave 31

As thou canst yield a melancholy seat!

Then would I hide my bones, not rest them
 here.

O, who hath any cause to mourn but I?

Q. Mar. If ancient sorrow be most reverend,
 Give mine the benefit of seniority,

And let my woes frown on the upper hand.
 If sorrow can admit society,

[Sitting down with them.]
 Tell o'er your woes again by viewing mine:

I had an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him; 40

I had a Harry, till a Richard kill'd him:

Thou hadst an Edward, till a Richard kill'd
 him;

Thou hadst a Richard, till a Richard kill'd him.

Duch. I had a Richard too, and thou didst kill him;

I had a Rutland too, thou help'st to kill him.

Q. Mar. Thou hadst a Clarence too, and Richard kill'd him.

From forth the kennel of thy womb hath crept
 A hell-hound that doth hunt us all to death:

That dog, that had his teeth before his eyes,
 To worry lambs and lap their gentle blood, 50

That foul defacer of God's handiwork,
 That excellent grand tyrant of the earth,

That reigns in gall'd eyes of weeping souls,
 Thy womb let loose, to chase us to our graves.

O upright, just, and true-disposing God,
 How do I thank thee, that this carnal cur

Preys on the issue of his mother's body,
 And makes her pew-fellow with others' moan!

Duch. O Harry's wife, triumph not in my woes!

God witness with me, I have wept for thine. 60

Q. Mar. Bear with me; I am hungry for revenge.

And now I cloy me with beholding it.
 Thy Edward he is dead, that stabb'd my

Edward!

Thy other Edward dead, to quit my Edward:
 Young York he is but boot, because both they

Match not the high perfection of my loss:
 Thy Clarence he is dead that kill'd my Edward:

And the beholders of this tragedy,
 The adulterate Hastings, Rivers, Vaughan, Grey,
 Untimely smother'd in their dusty graves. 70
 Richard yet lives, hail's black iniquities;

Only reserved their factor, to buy souls
And send them thither: but at hand, at hand,
Ensues his piteous and unpitied end:
Earth gapes, hell burns, fiends roar, saints pray,
To have him suddenly convey'd away.
Cancel his bond of life, dear God, I pray,
That I may live to say, The dog is dead!

Q. Eliz. O, thou didst prophesy the time
I would come

That I should wish for thee to help me curse
That bottled spider, that foul bunch-back'd toad!

Q. Mar. I call'd thee then vain flourish of my fortune;

I call'd thee then poor shadow, painted queen;
The presentation of but what I was;

The flattering index of a direful pageant;

One heaved a-high, to be hur'd down below;

A mother only mock'd with two sweet babes;

A dream of what thou wert, a breath, a bubble,

A sign of dignity, a garish flag,

To be the aim of every dangerous shot;

A queen in jest, only to fill the scene.

Where is thy husband now! where be thy brothers!

Where are thy children! wherein dost thou joy!

Who sues to thee and cries 'God save the queen'!

Where be the bending peers that flatter'd thee?

Where be the thronging troops that follow'd
thee!

Decline all this, and see what now thou art:

For happy wife, a most distressed widow;

For joyful mother, one that wails the name;

For queen, a very caittif crown'd with care;

For one being sued to, one that humbly sues;

For one that scorn'd at me, now scorn'd of me;

For one being fear'd of all, now fearing of none;

For one commanding all, obey'd of none.

Thus hath the course of justice wheel'd about,

And left thee but a very prey to time;

Having no more but thoughts of what thou wert,

To torture thee the more, being what thou art.

Thou didst usurp my place, and dost thou not usurp the just proportion of my sorrow!

Now thy proud neck bears half my burthen'd yoke;

From which even here I slip my weary neck,

And leave the burthen of it all on thee.

Farewell, York's wife, and queen of sad mis-
chance;

These English woes will make me smile in
France.

Q. Eliz. O thou well skill'd in curses, stay
awhile,

And teach me how to curse mine enemies!

Q. Mar. Forbear to sleep the nights, and
fast the days;

Compare dead happiness with living woe;

Think that thy babes were fairer than they
were,

And he that slew thee fouler than he is:

Bettering thy loss makes the bad cause worse

Revolving this will teach thee how to curse.

Q. Eliz. My woes are dull; O, quicken
them with thine!

Q. Mar. Thy woes will make them sharp,
and pierce the mine.

Q. Eliz. O, thou well skill'd in curses, stay
awhile,

And teach me how to curse mine enemies!

Q. Mar. Forbear to sleep the nights, and
fast the days;

Compare dead happiness with living woe;

Think that thy babes were fairer than they
were,

And he that slew thee fouler than he is:

Bettering thy loss makes the bad cause worse

Revolving this will teach thee how to curse.

Q. Eliz. My woes are dull; O, quicken
them with thine!

Q. Mar. Thy woes will make them sharp,
and pierce the mine.

Duch. Why should calamity be full of words?

Q. Eliz. Windy attorneys to their client's
woes,

Airy succeders of intestate joys,

Poor breathing orators of miseries!

Let them have scope: though what they do im-
part

Help not at all, yet do they ease the heart.

Duch. If so, then be not tongue-tied: go
with me,

And in the breath of bitter words let's smother
My damned son, which thy two sweet sons smother'd.

I hear his drum: be copious in exclams.

Enter KING RICHARD, marching, with drums and trumpets.

K. Rich. Who intercepts my expedition?

Duch. O, she that might have intercepted
thee,

By strangling thee in her accursed womb,

From all the slaughters, wretch, that thou hast
done!

Q. Eliz. Hidest thou that forehead with a golden crown,

Where should be graven, if that right were
right,

The slaughter of the prince that owed that
crown,

And the dire death of my two sons and brothers?

Tell me, thou villain slave, where are my children!

Duch. Thou toad, thou toad, where is thy brother Clarence?

And little Ned Plantagenet, his son!

Q. Eliz. Where is kind Hastings, Rivers,
Vaughan, Grey?

K. Rich. A flourish, trumpets! strike alarm,
drums!

Let not the heavens hear these tell-tale women
Rail on the Lord's anointed: strike, I say!

(Flourish. Alarums.)

Either be patient, and entreat me fair,

(Or with the clamorous report of war
Thus will I drown your exclamations.

Duch. Art thou my son?

K. Rich. Ay, I thank God, my father, and yourself.

Duch. Then patiently hear my impatientie.

K. Rich. Madam, I have a touch of your condition,

Which cannot brook the accent of reproof.

Duch. O, let me speak!

K. Rich. Do then; but I'll not hear, Duch. I will be mild and gentle in my speech.

K. Rich. And brief, good mother; for I am in haste.

Duch. Art thou so hasty? I have stay'd for
thee,

God knows, in anguish, pain and agony.

K. Rich. And came I not at last to comfort
you?

Duch. No, by the holy rood, thou know'st
it well,

Thou comest on earth to make the world thy
hell.

A grievous burthen was thy birth to me;
Tetchy and wayward was thy infancy;
Thy school-days frightful, desperate, wild, and furious,

Thy prime of manhood daring, bold, and ven-turous, ¹⁷⁰

Thy age confirm'd, proud, subtle, bloody, treacherous,

More mild, but yet more harmful, kind in hatred;

What comfortable hour canst thou name,
That ever graced me in thy company?

K. Rich. Faith, none, but Humphrey Hour, that call'd your grace

To breakfast once forth of my company.

If I be so disgracious in your sight,

Let me march on, and not offend your grace.

Strikes up the drum.

Duch. I prithee, hear me speak.

K. Rich. You speak too bitterly.

Duch. Hear me a word; ¹⁸⁰

For I shall never speak to thee again.

K. Rich. So.

Duch. Either thou wilt die, by God's just ordination,

Ere from this war thou turn a conqueror,
Or I with grief and extreme age shall perish

And never look upon thy face again.

Therefore take with thee my most heavy curse;
Which, in the day of battle, tire thee more

Than all the complete armour that thou wear'st!

My prayers on the adverse party fight; ¹⁹⁰

And there the little souls of Edward's children

Whisper the spirits of thine enemies

And promise them success and victory.

Bloody thou art, bloody will be thy end;

Shame serves thy life and doth thy death attend. ^[Exit.]

Q. Eliz. Though far more cause, yet much less spirit to curse

Abides in me: I say amen to all.

K. Rich. Stay, madam; I must speak a word with you.

Q. Eliz. I have no more sons of the royal
blood:

For thee to murder: for my daughters, Richard,
They shall be praying nuns, not weeping

queens; ²⁰⁰

And therefore level not to hit their lives.

K. Rich. You have a daughter call'd Elizabeth,

Virtuous and fair, royal and gracious.

Q. Eliz. And must she die for this? O, let her live.

And I'll corrupt her manners, stain her beauty;
Blender myself as false to Edward's bed;

Throw over her the veil of infamy;

So she may live unscar'd of bleeding slaughter,

I will confess she was not Edward's daughter.

K. Rich. Wrong not her birth, she is of royal blood. ²¹¹

Q. Eliz. To save her life, I'll say she is not
so.

K. Rich. Her life is only safest in her birth.

Q. Eliz. And only in that safety died her
brother.

K. Rich. Lo, at their births good stars were conspiring.

Q. Eliz. No, to their lives bad friends were contrary.

K. Rich. All unavoided is the doom of destiny.

Q. Eliz. True, when avoided grace makes destiny:

My babes were destined to a fairer death,
If grace had bless'd thee with a fairer life. ²²⁰

K. Rich. You speak as if that I had slain my cousins.

Q. Eliz. Cousins, indeed; and by their uncle cozen'd

Of comfort, kingdom, kindred, freedom, life.
Whose hand soever lanced their tender hearts,

Thy head, all indirectly, gave direction:

No doubt the murderous knife was dull and blunt

Till it was whetted on thy stone-hard heart,
To revel in the entrails of my lambs.

But that still use of grief makes wild grief tame,
My tongue should to thy ears not name my boys ²³⁰

Till that my nails were anchor'd in thine eyes;
And I, in such a desperate bay of death,

Like a poor bark, of sails and tackling reft,
Rush all to pieces on thy rocky bosom.

K. Rich. Madam, so thrive I in my enterprise

And dangerous success of bloody wars,
As I intend more good to you and yours

Than ever you or yours were by me wrong'd!

Q. Eliz. What good is cover'd with the face
of heaven,

To be discover'd, that can do me good? ²⁴⁰

K. Rich. The advancement of your children, gentle lady.

Q. Eliz. Up to some scaffold, there to lose their heads!

K. Rich. No, to the dignity and height of
honour.

The high imperial type of this earth's glory.

Q. Eliz. Flatter my sorrows with report
of it;

Tell me what state, what dignity, what honour.
Canst thou demise to any child of mine?

K. Rich. Even all I have; yea, and myself and all,

Will I withal endow a child of thine;
So in the Lethes of thy angry soul ²⁵⁰

Thou drown the sad remembrance of those wrongs

Which thou supposest I have done to thee.

Q. Eliz. Be brief, lest that the process of thy kindness

Last longer telling than thy kindness' date.

K. Rich. Then know, that from my soul I love thy daughter.

Q. Eliz. My daughter's mother thinks it with her soul.

K. Rich. What do you think?

Q. Eliz. That thou dost love my daughter from thy soul:

So from thy soul's love didst thou love her
brothers;

And from my heart's love I do thank thee for it.

K. Rich. Be not so hasty to confound my meaning: ²⁶¹

I mean, that with my soul I love thy daughter.

And mean to make her queen of England.

Q. Eliz. Say then, who dost thou mean shall be her king?

K. Rich. Even he that makes her queen: who should be else?

Q. Eliz. What, thou?

K. Rich. I, even I: what think you of it, madam?

Q. Eliz. How canst thou woo her?

K. Rich. That would I learn of you.

As one that are best acquainted with her humour.

Q. Eliz. And wilt thou learn of me?

K. Rich. Madam, with all my heart. 270

Q. Eliz. Send to her, by the man that slew her brothers,

A pair of bleeding hearts; thereon engrave Edward and York; then haply she will weep: Therefore present to her,—as sometime Margaret Did to thy father, steep'd in Rutland's blood,—A handkerchief; which, say to her, did drain The purple sap from her sweet brother's body. And bid her dry her weeping eyes therewith.

If this inducement force her not to love,

Send her a story of thy noble acts; 280

Tell her thou madest away her uncle Clarence.

Her uncle Rivers; yea, and, for her sake,

Madest quick conveyance with her good aunt

Anne.

K. Rich. Come, come, you mock me; this is not the way

To win your daughter.

Q. Eliz. There is no other way;

Unless thou couldst put on some other shape,

And not be Richard that hath done all this.

K. Rich. Say that I did all this for love of her.

Q. Eliz. Nay, then indeed she cannot choose but hate thee,

Having bought love with such a bloody spoil.

K. Rich. Look, what is done cannot be now amended: 291

Men shall deal unadvisedly sometimes,

Which after hours give leisure to repent.

If I did take the kingdom from your sons,

To make amends, I'll give it to your daughter.

If I have kill'd the issue of your womb,

To quicken your increase, I will beget

Mine issue of your blood upon your daughter:

A grandam's name is little less in love

Than is the doting title of a mother; 300

They are as children but one step below,

Even of your mettle, of your very blood;

Of all one pain, save for a night of groans

Endured of her, for whom you bid like sorrow.

Your children were vexation to your youth,

But mine shall be a comfort to your age.

The loss you have is but a son being king,

And by that loss your daughter is made queen.

I cannot make you what amends I would,

Therefore accept such kindness as I can. 311

Dorset your son, that with a fearful soul

Leads discontented steps in foreign soil,

This fair alliance quickly shall call home

To high promotions and great dignity:

The king, that calls your beautiful daughter

Familiarly shall call thy Dorset brother;

Again shall you be mother to a king,

And all the ruins of distressful times

Repair'd with double riches of content.

What! we have many goodly days to see: 320

The liquid drops of tears that you have shed

Shall come again, transform'd to orient pearl,

Advantaging thy loan with interest

Of ten times double gain of happiness.

So, then, my mother, to thy daughter go;

Make bold her bashful years with your experience;

Prepare her ears to hear a wooer's tale;

Put in her tender heart the aspiring flame

Of golden sovereignty; acquaint the princess

With the sweet silent hours of marriage joys:

And when this arm of mine hath chastised 331

The petty rebel, dull-brain'd Buckingham,

Bound with triumphant garlands will I come

And lead thy daughter to a conqueror's bed;

To whom I will retail my conquest won,

And she shall be sole victress, Caesar's Caesar.

Q. Eliz. What were I best to say? her father's brother

Would be her lord? or shall I say, her uncle?

Or, he that slew her brothers and her uncles?

Under what title shall I woo for thee, 340

That God, the law, my honour and her love,

Can make seem pleasing to her tender years?

K. Rich. Infer fair England's peace by this alliance.

Q. Eliz. Which she shall purchase with still lasting war.

K. Rich. Say that the king, which may command, entreats.

Q. Eliz. That at her hands which the king's King forbids.

K. Rich. Say, she shall be a high and mighty

queen.

Q. Eliz. To wait the title, as her mother

doth.

K. Rich. Say, I will love her everlastingly.

Q. Eliz. But how long shall that title 'ever'

last? 350

K. Rich. Sweetly in force unto her fair life's end.

Q. Eliz. But how long fairly shall her sweet life last?

K. Rich. So long as heaven and nature

lengthens it.

Q. Eliz. So long as hell and Richard liken

of it.

K. Rich. Say, I, her sovereign, am her subject love.

Q. Eliz. But she, your subject, loathes such sovereignty.

K. Rich. Be eloquent in my behalf to her.

Q. Eliz. An honest tale speeds best being plainly told.

K. Rich. Then in plain terms tell her my loving tale.

Q. Eliz. Plain and not honest is too harsh a style. 360

K. Rich. Your reasons are too shallow and too quick.

Q. Eliz. O no, my reasons are too deep and too deep and dead, nor influence the action.

K. Rich. Hark not on that string, madam ;
that is past.

Q. Eliz. Hark on it still shall I till heart-strings break.

K. Rich. Now, by my George, my garter, and my crown,—

Q. Eliz. Profaned, dishonour'd, and the third usurp'd.

K. Rich. I swear—

Q. Eliz. By nothing ; for this is no oath :
The George, profaned, hath lost his holy honour ;
The garter, blemish'd, pawn'd his knightly
virtue ;

The crown, usurp'd, disgraced his kingly glory.
If something thou wilt swear to be believed,

Swear then by something that thou hast not wrong'd.

K. Rich. Now, by the world—

Q. Eliz. 'Tis full of thy foul wrongs.

K. Rich. My father's death—

Q. Eliz. Thy life hath that dishonour'd.

K. Rich. Then, by myself—

Q. Eliz. Thyself thyself misuseth.

K. Rich. Why then, by God—

Q. Eliz. God's wrong is most of all.

If thou hadst fear'd to break an oath by Him,
The unity the king thy brother made

Had not been broken, nor my brother slain : 380
If thou hadst fear'd to break an oath by Him,
The imperial metal, circling now thy brow,

Had graced the tender temples of my child,
And both the princes had been breathing here,

Which now, two tender playfellows for dust,
Thy broken faith hath made a prey for worms.

What canst thou swear by now ?

K. Rich. The time to come.

Q. Eliz. That thou hast wronged in the time o'erpast ;

For I myself have many tears to wash
Henceforth time, for time past wrong'd by thee.

The children live, whose parents thou hast slaughter'd, 391

Un govern'd youth, to wail it in their age ;
The parents live, whose children thou hast

butcher'd,
Old wither'd plants, to wail it with their age.

Swear not by time to come ; for that thou hast misused are used, by time misused o'erpast.

K. Rich. As I intend to prosper and repent,
So strive I in my dangerous attempt

Of hostile arms ! myself myself confound !
Heaven and fortune bar me happy hours ! 400

Day, yield me not thy light ; nor, night, thy rest !

Be opposite all planets of good luck
To my proceedings, if, with pure heart's love,
Immaculate devotion, holy thoughts,

I tender not thy beautiful princely daughter !
In her consists my happiness and thine ;

Without her, fellows to this land and me,
To thee, herself, and many a Christian soul,

Death, desolation, ruin and decay ;
not to be avoided but by this ; 410

not to be avoided but by this.
O, good mother, — I must call you so—

Be the memory of my love to her :
That which I will be, not what I have been ;

Not what I am, but what I will deserve ;
not what I am, but what I will deserve :

Urge the necessity and state of times,
And be not jealous-fond in great desires.

Q. Eliz. Shall I be tempted of the devil thrust K. Rich. Ay, if the devil tempt thee to do good.

Q. Eliz. Shall I forget myself to be myself ?
K. Rich. Ay, if yourself's remembrance wrong yourself. 421

Q. Eliz. But thou didst kill my children.
K. Rich. But in your daughter's womb I bury them :

Where in that nest of spicery they shall breed
Selves of themselves, to your recomforture.

Q. Eliz. Shall I go win my daughter to thy
will ?

K. Rich. And be a happy mother by the deed.

Q. Eliz. I go. Write to me very shortly,
And you shall understand from me my mind.

K. Rich. Bear her my true love's kiss ; and so, farewell. [Exit Queen Elizabeth.] 430

Relenting fool, and shallow, changing woman !

Enter RATCLIFF ; CATESBY following.

How now ! what news ?

Rat. My gracious sovereign, on the western coast

Rideth a puissant navy ; to the shore
Throng many doubtful hollow-hearted friends,

Unarm'd, and unresolv'd to beat them back ;
'Tis thought that Richmond is their admiral ;

And there they hull, expecting but the aid
Of Buckingham to welcome them ashore.

K. Rich. Some light-foot friend post to the Duke of Norfolk : 440

Ratcliff, thyself, or Catesby ; where is he ?
Cate. Here, my lord.

K. Rich. Fly to the duke : [To Ratcliff]
Post thou to Salisbury :

When thou comest thither, — [To Catesby] Dull,
unmindful villain,

Why stand'st thou still, and go'st not to the duke ?

Cate. First, mighty sovereign, let me know your mind,

What from your grace I shall deliver to him.

K. Rich. O, true, good Catesby : bid him levy straight

The greatest strength and power he can make,
And meet me presently at Salisbury. 450

Cate. I go. [Exit.]

Rat. What is't your highness' pleasure I shall do

At Salisbury ?

K. Rich. Why, what wouldst thou do there before I go ?

Rat. Your highness told me I should post
before.

K. Rich. My mind is changed, sir, my mind is changed.

Enter LORD STANLEY.

How now, what news with you ?

Stan. None good, my lord, to please you with the hearing ;

Nor none so bad, but it may well be told.
K. Rich. Mayday, a mischief ! mischief good nor bad ! 460

Why dost thou run so many mile about,
When thou mayest tell thy tale a nearer way?
Once more, what news?

Stan. Richmond is on the seas.
K. Rich. There let him sink, and be the seas
on him!

White-liver'd runagate, what doth he there?

Stan. I know not, mighty sovereign, but by guess.

K. Rich. Well, sir, as you guess, as you guess!

Stan. Stir'd up by Dorset, Buckingham, and Ely.

He makes for England, there to claim the crown.

K. Rich. Is the chair empty? is the sword unsway'd?

Is the king dead? the empire unpossess'd?

What heir of York is there alive but we?
And who is England's king but great York's
heir?

Then, tell me, what doth he upon the sea?
Stan. Unless for that, my liege, I cannot guess.

K. Rich. Unless for that he comes to be your liege.

You cannot guess wherefore the Welshman comes.

Thou wilt revolt, and fly to him, I fear.

Stan. No, mighty liege; therefore mistrust me not.

K. Rich. Where is thy power, then, to beat him back?

Where are thy tenants and thy followers?
Are they not now upon the western shore,
Safe-conducting the rebels from their ships?

Stan. No, my good lord, my friends are in the north.

K. Rich. Cold friends to Richard: what do they in the north.

When they should serve their sovereign in the west?

Stan. They have not been commanded,
mighty sovereign:

Please it your majesty to give me leave,
I'll muster up my friends, and meet your grace
Where and what time your majesty shall please.

K. Rich. Ay, ay, thou wouldst be gone to join with Richmond:

I will not trust you, sir.

Stan. Most mighty sovereign,
You have no cause to hold my friendship
doubtful:

I never was nor never will be false.

K. Rich. Well,
Go muster men; but, hear you, leave behind your son, George Stanley: look your faith be firm.

Or else his head's assurance is but frail.

Stan. So deal with him as I prove true to you.

Exit.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My gracious sovereign, now in Devonshire.

As I by friends am well advertised,
Sir Edward Courtney, and the haughty prelate
Bishop of Exeter, his brother there,
With many more confederates, are in arms.

300

Enter another Messenger.

Third Mess. My lord, the army of the Duke of Buckingham—

K. Rich. Out on you, owls! nothing but songs of death! [He striketh him.]

Take that, until thou bring me better news.

310

Third Mess. The news I have to tell your
majesty
Is, that by sudden floods and fall of waters,
Buckingham's army is dispersed and scatter'd;
And he himself wander'd away alone,
No man knows whither.

K. Rich. I cry thee mercy:
There is my purse to cure that blow of thine.
Hath any well-advised friend proclaim'd
Reward to him that brings the traitor in?

Third Mess. Such proclamation hath been made, my liege.

Enter another Messenger.

Fourth Mess. Sir Thomas Lovel and Lord
Marquis Dorset,

'Tis said, my liege, in Yorkshire are in arms.
Yet this good comfort bring I to your grace,
The Breton navy is dispersed by tempest:
Richmond, in Dorsetshire, sent out a boat
Unto the shore, to ask those on the banks
If they were his assistants, yea or no;
Who answer'd him, they came from Buckingham.
Upon his party: he, mistrusting them,
Hoised sail and made away for Brittany.

K. Rich. March on, march on, since we are up in arms:
If not to fight with foreign enemies,
Yet to beat down these rebels here at home.

Re-enter CATHERY.

Cath. My liege, the Duke of Buckingham is taken:
That is the best news: that the Earl of Richmond
Is with a mighty power landed at Milford,
Is colder tidings, yet they must be told.
K. Rich. Away towards Salisbury! while we reason here,
A royal battle might be won and lost:
Some one take order Buckingham be brought
To Salisbury: the rest march on with me.

320

Flourish. Exit.

SCENE V. Lord Derby's house.

Enter DERBY and SIR CHRISTOPHER URWICK.

Der. Sir Christopher, tell Richmond this
from me:
In the stir of this most bloody hour
In Stanley is frank'd up in haste
I goot young George.

The fear of that withholds my present aid.
But tell me, where is princely Richmond now?

Chris. At Pembroke, or at Harford-west, in Wales.

Der. What men of name resort to him?

Chris. Sir Walter Herbert, a renowned soldier;

Sir Gilbert Talbot, Sir William Stanley; 10
Oxford, redoubted Pembroke, Sir James Blunt,
And Rice ap Thomas, with a valiant crew;
And many more of noble fame and worth:
And towards London they do bend their course,
If by the way they be not fought withal.

Der. Return unto thy lord; commend me
to him:

Tell him the queen hath heartily consented
He shall espouse Elizabeth her daughter.
These letters will resolve him of my mind.
Farewell. [Exeunt. 20

ACT V.

SCENE I. Salisbury. An open place.

Enter the Sheriff, and BUCKINGHAM, with halberds, led to execution.

Buck. Will not King Richard let me speak with him?

Sher. No, my good lord; therefore be patient.

Buck. Hastings, and Edward's children,
Rivers, Grey,

Holy King Henry, and thy fair son Edward,
Vaughan, and all that have miscarried
By underhand corrupted foul injustice,
If that your moody discontented souls
Do through the clouds behold this present hour,
Even for revenge mock my destruction!
This is All-Souls' day, fellows, is it not? 10

Sher. It is, my lord.

Buck. Why, then All-Souls' day is my body's doomsday.

This is the day that, in King Edward's time,
I wish'd might fall on me, when I was found
False to his children or his wife's allies;
This is the day wherein I wish'd to fall
By the false faith of him I trusted most;
This, this All-Souls' day to my fearful soul
Is the determined respite of my wrongs:
That high All-Seer that I dallied with 20
Hath turn'd my feigned prayer on my head
And given in earnest what I begg'd in jest.
Thus doth he force the swords of wicked men
To turn their own points on their masters'
bosoms:

Now Margaret's curse is fallen upon my head;
When he, quoth she, 'shall split thy heart
with sorrow,

Remember Margaret was a prophetess.
Come, sir, convey me to the block of shame;
Wrong hath but wrong, and blame the due of blame. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. The camp near Tamworth.

Enter RICHMOND, OXFORD, BLUNT, HERBERT, and others, with drum and colours.

Fellows in arms, and my most

Bruised underneath the yoke of it,—
Thus far into the bowels of the land
Have we march'd on without impediment;
And here receive we from our father!
Lines of fair comfort and encouragement
The wretched, bloody, and usurping I
That spoil'd your summer fields and 10
vines,

Swills your warm blood like wash, and makes his trough

In your embowell'd bosoms, this foul swine 10
Lies now even in the centre of this isle,

Near to the town of Leicester, as we learn:

From Tamworth thither is but one day's march.

In God's name, cheerly on, courageous friends,

To reap the harvest of perpetual peace

By this one bloody trial of sharp war.

Oxf. Every man's conscience is a thousand
swords,

To fight against that bloody homicide.

Herb. I doubt not but his friends will fly to us.

Blunt. He hath no friends but who are friends for fear, 20

Which in his greatest need will shrink from him.

Richm. All for our vantage. Then, in God's name, march:

True hope is swift, and flies with swallow's
wings;

Kings it makes gods, and meaner creatures
kings. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. Bosworth Field.

Enter KING RICHARD in arms, with NORFOLK, the EARL OF SURREY, and others.

K. Rich. Here pitch our tents, even here in Bosworth field.

My Lord of Surrey, why look you so sad?

Sur. My heart is ten times lighter than my looks.

K. Rich. My Lord of Norfolk,—

Nor. Here, most gracious liege.

K. Rich. Norfolk, we must have knocks:
ha! must we not?

Nor. We must both give and take, my gracious lord.

K. Rich. Up with my tent there! here will
I lie to-night;

But where to-morrow! Well, all's one for that.

Who hath descried the number of the foe?

Nor. Six or seven thousand is their utmost
power. 10

K. Rich. Why, our battalion trebles that account;

Besides, the king's name is a tower of strength,

Which they upon the adverse party want.

Up with my tent there! Valiant gentlemen,

Let us survey the vantage of the field;

Call for some men of sound direction;

Let's want no discipline, make no delay;

For, lords, to-morrow is a busy day. [Exeunt.

Enter on the other side of the field, RICHMOND, SIR WILLIAM BRANDON, OXFORD, and others.

Some of the Soldiers pitch Richmond's tent.

Richm. The weary sun hath made a 1
set,

And, by the bright track of his fiery car,
Gives signal of a goodly day to-morrow.
Sir William Brandon, you shall bear my standard.

Give me some ink and paper in my tent:
I'll draw the form and model of our battle,
Limit each leader to his several charge,
And part in just proportion our small strength.
My Lord of Oxford, you, Sir William Brandon,
And you, Sir Walter Herbert, stay with me.
The Earl of Pembroke keeps his regiment:
Good Captain Blunt, bear my good-night to him,
And by the second hour in the morning
Desire the earl to see me in my tent:
Yet one thing more, good Blunt, before thou
go'st.

Where is Lord Stanley quarter'd, dost thou
know?

Blunt. Unless I have mista'en his colours
much,

Which well I am assured I have not done,
His regiment lies half a mile at least
South from the mighty power of the king.

Richm. If without peril it be possible,
Good Captain Blunt, bear my good-night to him,
And give him from me this most needful scroll.

Blunt. Upon my life, my lord, I'll under-
take it;

And so, God give you quiet rest to-night!

Richm. Good night, good Captain Blunt.
Come, gentlemen,

Let us consult upon to-morrow's business:
In to our tent; the air is raw and cold.

[They withdraw into the tent.]

Enter, to his tent, KING RICHARD, NORFOLK,
RATCLIFF, CATESBY, and others.

K. Rich. What is't o'clock?
Cate. It's supper-time, my lord;

It's nine o'clock.

K. Rich. I will not sup to-night.
Give me some ink and paper.

What, is my beaver easier than it was?
And all my armour laid into my tent?

Cate. It is, my liege; and all things are in readiness.

K. Rich. Good Norfolk, hie thee to thy
charge;

Use careful watch, choose trusty sentinels.

Nor. I go, my lord.

K. Rich. Stir with the lark to-morrow, gentle Norfolk.

Nor. I warrant you, my lord. [Exit.]

K. Rich. Catesby!

Cate. My lord!

K. Rich. Send out a pursuivant at arms

To Stanley's regiment: bid him bring his power

Before sunrise, lest his son George fall

Into the blind cave of eternal night.

[Exit Catesby.]

I'll me a bowl of wine. Give me a watch.

Souldie white Surrey for the field to-morrow.

Look that my staves be sound, and not too heavy.

Ratcliff!

Rat. My lord!

K. Rich. Saw'st thou the melancholy Lord

Northumberland?

Rat. Thomas the Earl of Surrey, and himself.

Much about cock-shut time, from troop to troop
Went through the army, cheering up the soldiers.

K. Rich. So, I am satisfied. Give me a bowl of wine:

I have not that alacrity of spirit,
Nor cheer of mind, that I was wont to have.

Set it down. Is ink and paper ready?

Rat. It is, my lord.

K. Rich. Bid my guard watch; leave me.

Ratcliff, about the mid of night come to my

tent

And help to arm me. Leave me, I say.

[Exit Ratcliff and the other Attendants.]

Enter DERBY to RICHMOND in his tent, Lords and others attending.

Der. Fortune and victory sit on thy helm!
Richm. All comfort that the dark night can afford

Be to thy person, noble father-in-law!

Tell me, how fares our loving mother?

Der. I, by attorney, bless thee from thy

mother,

Who prays continually for Richmond's good:

So much for that. The silent hours steal on,

And flaky darkness breaks within the east.

In brief,—for so the season bids us be,—

Prepare thy battle early in the morning.

And put thy fortune to the arbitrement

Of bloody strokes and mortal-staring war.

I, as I may,—that which I would I cannot,—

With best advantage will deceive the time,

And aid thee in this doubtful shock of arms:

But on thy side I may not be too forward,

Lest, being seen, thy brother, tender George,

Be executed in his father's sight.

Farewell: the leisure and the fearful time

Cuts off the ceremonious vows of love

And ample interchange of sweet discourse,

Which so long sunder'd friends should dwell

upon:

God give us leisure for these rites of love!

Once more, adieu: be valiant, and speed well!

Richm. Good lords, conduct him to his regiment:

I'll strive, with troubled thoughts, to take a nap,

Lest leaden slumber peise me down to-morrow,

When I should mount with wings of victory:

Once more, good night, kind lords and gentle-
men.

[Exit all but Richmond.]

O Thou, whose captain I account myself,

Look on my forces with a gracious eye:

Put in their hands thy bruising irons of wrath,

That they may crush down with a heavy fall

The usurping helmets of our adversaries!

Make us thy ministers of chastisement,

That we may praise thee in the victory!

To thee I do commend my watchful soul,

Ere I let fall the windows of mine eyes:

Sleeping and waking, O, defend me still!

[Sleeps.]

Enter the Ghost of PRINCE EDWARD, son to HENRY the Sixth.

Ghost. [To Richard] Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow!

Think, how thou stab'dst me in my prime of youth

As Tewkesbury: despair, therefore, and die! 150
[To Richmond] Be cheerful, Richmond; for the wronged souls
 Of butcher'd princes fight in thy behalf:
 King Henry's issue, Richmond, comforts thee.

Enter the Ghost of HENRY the Sixth.

Ghost. [To Richard] When I was mortal, my anointed body
 By thee was punched full of deadly holes:
 Think on the Tower and me: despair, and die!
 Harry the Sixth bids thee despair and die!

[To Richmond] Virtuous and holy, be thou conqueror!

Harry, that prophesied thou shouldst be king,
 Doth comfort thee in thy sleep: live, and flourish! 130

Enter the Ghost of CLARENCE.

Ghost. [To Richard] Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow!

I that was wash'd to death with fulsome wine,
 Poor Clarence, by thy guile betrayed to death!
 To-morrow in the battle think on me,
 And fall thy edgeless sword: despair, and die!—
[To Richmond] Thou offspring of the house of Lancaster,

The wronged heirs of York do pray for thee;
 Good angels guard thy battle! live, and flourish!

Enter the Ghosts of RIVERS, GREY, and VAUGHAN.

Ghost of R. [To Richard] Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow,

Rivers, that died at Pomfret! despair, and die!

Ghost of G. [To Richard] Think upon Grey, and let thy soul despair! 145

Ghost of V. [To Richard] Think upon Vaughan, and, with guilty fear,

Let fall thy lance: despair, and die!

All. [To Richmond] Awake, and think our wrongs in Richard's bosom

Will conquer him! awake, and win the day!

Enter the Ghost of HASTINGS.

Ghost. [To Richard] Bloody and guilty, guiltily awake,

And in a bloody battle end thy days!
 Think on Lord Hastings: despair, and die!

[To Richmond] Quiet untroubled soul, awake, awake!

Arm, fight, and conquer, for fair England's sake! 150

Enter the Ghosts of the two young Princes.

Ghosts. [To Richard] Dream on thy cousins smother'd in the Tower:

Let us be lead within thy bosom, Richard,
 And weigh thee down to ruin, shame, and death!

Thy nephews' souls bid thee despair and die!

[To Richmond] Sleep, Richmond, sleep in peace, and wake in joy;

Good angels guard thee from the bear's annoy!
 I, a happy friend of kings!

I, a friend of kings, do bid thee flourish.

Enter the Ghost of LADY ANNE.

Ghost. [To Richard] Richard, thy wife, that wretched Anne thy wife,

That never slept a quiet hour with thee, 160
 Now fills thy sleep with perturbation.

To-morrow in the battle think on me,
 And fall thy edgeless sword: despair, and die!

[To Richmond] Thou quiet soul, sleep thou a quiet sleep;

Dream of success and happy victory!
 Thy adversary's wife doth pray for thee.

Enter the Ghost of BUCKINGHAM.

Ghost. [To Richard] The first was I that help'd thee to the crown;

The last was I that felt thy tyranny:
 O, in the battle think on Buckingham,

And die in terror of thy guiltiness! 170
 Dream on, dream on, of bloody deeds and death:

Fainting, despair; despairing, yield thy breath!

[To Richmond] I died for hope ere I could lend thee aid:

But cheer thy heart, and be thou not dismay'd:
 God and good angels fight on Richmond's side;

And Richard falls in height of all his pride.
[The Ghosts vanish. King Richard starts out of his dream.]

K. Rich. Give me another home; bind up my wounds.

Have mercy, Jesu!—Soft! I did but dream.

O coward conscience, how dost thou afflict me!
 The lights burn blue. It is now dead midnight.

Cold fearful drops stand on my trembling flesh.
 What do I fear? myself? there's none else by:

Richard loves Richard; that is, I am I.
 Is there a murderer here? No. Yes, I am;

Then fly. What, from myself? Great reason why:

Least I revenge. What, myself upon myself?
 Alack, I love myself. Wherefore? for any good

That I myself have done unto myself?

O, no! alas, I rather hate myself
 For hateful deeds committed by myself! 180

I am a villain: yet I lie, I am not.
 Fool, of thyself speak well: fool, do not flatter.

My conscience hath a thousand several tongues,
 And every tongue brings in a several tale,

And every tale condemns me for a villain.
 Perjury, perjury, in the high'st degree;

Murder, stern murder, in the direst degree;
 All several sins, all used in each degree,

Throng to the bar, crying all, Guilty! guilty!
 I shall despair. There is no creature loves me;

And if I die, no soul shall pity me: 190
 Nay, wherefore should they, since that I myself

Find in myself no pity to myself?

Methought the souls of all that I had murder'd
 Came to my tent; and every one did threat

To-morrow's vengeance on the head of Richard.

Enter RATCLIFF.

Rat. My lord!

K. Rich. 'Tis he! who is there?

Rat. Ratcliff, my lord; he is. The early village-cook

Hath twice done salutation to the morn; ²¹⁰
Your friends are up, and buckle on their armour.

K. Rich. O Ratcliff, I have dream'd a fearful dream!
What thinkest thou, will our friends prove all true?

Rat. No doubt, my lord.

K. Rich. O Ratcliff, I fear, I fear,—

Rat. Nay, good my lord, be not afraid of shadows.

K. Rich. By the apostle Paul, shadows to-night

Have struck more terror to the soul of Richard Than can the substance of ten thousand soldiers Armed in proof, and led by shallow Richmond. It is not yet near day. Come, go with me; ²²⁰
Under our tents I'll play the eaves-dropper, To see if any mean to shrink from me. [Exeunt.]

Enter the Lords to RICHMOND, sitting in his tent.

Lords. Good morrow, Richmond!

Richm. Cry mercy, lords and watchful gentlemen,

That you have ta'en a tardy sluggard here.

Lords. How have you slept, my lord!

Richm. The sweetest sleep, and fairest-boding dreams

That ever enter'd in a drowsy head.

Have I since your departure had, my lords.

Methought their souls, whose bodies Richard murder'd, ²³⁰

Came to my tent, and cried on victory:

I promise you, my soul is very jocund

In the remembrance of so fair a dream.

How far into the morning is it, lords!

Lords. Upon the stroke of four.

Richm. Why, then 'tis time to arm and give direction.

His oration to his soldiers.

More than I have said, loving countrymen,
The leisure and enforcement of the time
Forbids to dwell upon: yet remember this;
God and our good cause fight upon our side;
The prayers of holy saints and wronged souls,
Like high-reard bulwarks, stand before our faces;

Richard except, those whom we fight against
Had rather have us win than him they follow:

For what is he they follow? truly, gentlemen,
A bloody tyrant and a homicide;

One raised in blood, and one in blood established;

One that made means to come by what he hath,
And slaughter'd those that were the means to help him;

A base foul soul, made precious by the foil ²⁵⁰
Of England's chain, whose he is falsely set;

One that hath ever been God's enemy:

If you do sweet to put a tyrant down,
You sleep in peace, the tyrant being slain;

If you do fight against your country's foe,
Your country's fat shall pay your pains the hire;

If you do fight in safeguard of your wives, ²⁶⁰
Your wives shall welcome home the conquerors;

If you do free your children from the sword,
Your children's children quit it in your age.

Then, in the name of God and all these rights, Advance your standards, draw your willing swords.

For me, the ransom of my bold attempt
Shall be this cold corpse on the earth's cold
face;

But if I thrive, the gain of my attempt
The least of you shall share his part thereof.
Sound drums and trumpets boldly and cheerfully;
God and Saint George! Richmond and victory!

[Exeunt. ²⁷⁰]

Re-enter KING RICHARD, RATCLIFF, Attendants and Forces.

K. Rich. What said Northumberland as touching Richmond?

Rat. That he was never trained up in arms.

K. Rich. He said the truth: and what said Surrey then?

Rat. He smiled and said 'The better for our purpose.'

K. Rich. He was in the right; and so indeed it is. [Clock striketh.]

Tell the clock there. Give me a calendar.

Who saw the sun to-day?

Rat. Not I, my lord.

K. Rich. Then he dares not to shine; for by the book

He should have braved the east an hour ago:

A black day will it be to somebody. ²⁸⁰

Ratcliff!

Rat. My lord!

K. Rich. The sun will not be seen to-day;

The sky doth frown and lour upon our army.

I would these dewy tears were from the ground.

Not shine to-day! Why, what is that to me

More than to Richmond! for the selfsame

heaven

That frowns on me looks sadly upon him.

Enter NORFOLK.

Nor. Arm, arm, my lord; the foe vaunts in the field.

K. Rich. Come, bustle, bustle; caparison my horse.

Call up Lord Stanley, bid him bring his power:

I will lead forth my soldiers to the plain. ²⁹⁰

And thus my battle shall be ordered:

My forward shall be drawn out all in length,

Consisting equally of horse and foot;

Our archers shall be placed in the midst;

John Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Earl of Surrey,

Shall have the leading of this foot and horse.

They thus directed, we will follow

in the main battle, whose puissance on either side

Shall be well winged with our chiefest horse.

This, and Saint George to boot! What think'st thou, Norfolk?

[Exeunt. ³⁰⁰]

Nor. A good direction, warlike sovereign.
This found I on my tent this morning.

K. Rich. [Reads] 'Jockey of Norfolk, be not too bold,

For Dickon thy master is bought and sold.
A thing devised by the enemy.

Go, gentlemen, every man unto his charge:
Let not our babbling dreams affright our souls:
Conscience is but a word that cowards use,
Devised at first to keep the strong in awe: 310
Our strong arms be our conscience, swords our law.

March on, join bravely, let us to't pell-mell;
If not to heaven, then hand in hand to hell.

His oration to his Army.

What shall I say more than I have infer'd?
Remember whom you are to cope withal;
A sort of vagabonds, rascals, and runaways,
A scum of Bretons, and base lackey peasants,
Whom their o'er-cloyed country vomits forth
To desperate ventures and assured destruction.
You sleeping safe, they bring to you unrest;
You having lands, and blest with beauteous
wives, 321

They would restrain the one, disdain the other.
And who doth lead them but a paltry fellow,
Long kept in Bretagne at our mother's cost?
A milk-sop, one that never in his life
Felt so much cold as over shoes in snow!
Let's whip these stragglers o'er the seas again;
Lash hence these overweening rags of France,
These famish'd beggars, weary of their lives;
Who, but for dreaming on this fond exploit, 330
For want of means, poor rats, had hang'd themselves:

If we be conquer'd, let men conquer us,
And not these bastard Bretons; whom our fathers
Have in their own land beaten, bobbd, and thump'd,

And in record, left them the heirs of shame.
Shall these enjoy our lands! lie with our wives?
Ravish our daughters? [Drum afar off.] Hark!
I hear their drum.

Fight, gentlemen of England! fight, bold
yeomen!

Draw, archers, draw your arrows to the head!
Spur your proud horses hard, and ride in blood;
Amass the welkin with your broken staves! 341

Enter a Messenger.

What says Lord Stanley? will he bring his
power?

Mess. My lord, he doth deny to come.

K. Rich. Off with his son George's head!

Nor. My lord, the enemy is past the marsh:
After the battle let George Stanley die.

K. Rich. A thousand hearts are great within my bosom:

Advance our standards, set upon our foes;
Our ancient word of courage, fair Saint George,
Inspire us with the spleen of fiery dragons! 350
Upon them! Victory sit on our helms.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. Another part of the field.

Alarum: excursions. Enter NORFOLK and forces fighting; to him CATBERT.

Cate. Rescue, my Lord of Norfolk, rescue, rescue!

The king enacts more wonders than a man,
Daring an opposite to every danger:
His horse is slain, and all on foot he fights,
Seeking for Richmond in the throat of death.
Rescue, fair lord, or else the day is lost.

Alarums. Enter KING RICHARD.

K. Rich. A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!

Cate. Withdraw, my lord; I'll help you to a horse.

K. Rich. Slave, I have set my life upon a cast,

And I will stand the hazard of the die: 10
I think there be six Richmonds in the field;
Five have I slain to-day instead of him.

A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!
[Exeunt.

SCENE V. Another part of the field.

Alarum. Enter RICHARD and RICHMOND; they fight. RICHARD is slain. Retreat and flourish. Re-enter RICHMOND, DERBY bearing the crown, with divers other Lords.

Richm. God and your arms be praised, victorious friends!

The day is ours, the bloody dog is dead.
Der. Courageous Richmond, well hast thou acquit thee.

Lo, here, this long-usurped royalty
From the dead temples of this bloody wretch
Have I pluck'd off, to grace thy brows withal:
Wear it, enjoy it, and make much of it.

Richm. Great God of heaven, say Amen
to all!

But, tell me, is young George Stanley living?
Der. He is, my lord, and safe in Leicester
town: 10

Whither, if it please you, we may now withdraw us.

Richm. What men of name are slain on either side?

Der. John Duke of Norfolk, Walter Lord
Ferrers,

Sir Robert Brakenbury, and Sir William Brandon.

Richm. Inter their bodies as becomes their births:

Proclaim a pardon to the soldiers fled
That in submission will return to us:

And then, as we have ta'en the sacrament,
We will unite the white rose and the red:

Smile heaven upon this fair conjunction! 20
That long have frown'd upon their enmity!

What traitor hears me, and says not amen!
England hath long been mad, and scarr'd her-
self;

The brother blindly shed the brother's blood,

The father rashly slaughter'd his own son,
The son, compell'd, been butcher to the sire :
All this divided York and Lancaster,
Divided in their dire division,
O, now, let Richmond and Elizabeth,
The true succeeders of each royal house,
By God's fair ordinance conjoin together !
And let their heirs, God, if thy will be so,
Enrich the time to come with smooth-faced
 peace,
With smiling plenty and fair prosperous days !

Abate the edge of traitors, gracious Lord,
That would reduce these bloody days again,
And make poor England weep in streams of
 blood !
Let them not live to taste this land's increase 30 That would with treason wound this fair land's
 peace !
Now civil wounds are stopp'd, peace lives
 again :
That she may long live here, God say amen !⁴⁰

THE PROLOGUE.

I COME no more to make you laugh: things now,
That bear a weighty and a serious brow,
Sad, high, and working, full of state and woe,
Such noble scenes as draw the eye to flow,
We now present. Those that can pity, here
May, if they think it well, let fall a tear:
The subject will deserve it. Such as give Their money out of hope they may believe,
May here find truth too. Those that come to see

Only a show or two, and so agree
The play may pass, if they be still and willing,
I'll undertake may see away their shilling Richly in two short hours. Only they
That come to hear a merry bawdy play,
A noise of targets, or to see a fellow
In a long motley coat guarded with yellow,
Will be deceived; for, gentle hearers, know
To seek our chosen truth with such a show
As this and fight is, beside forfeiting
Our own brains, and the opinion that we bring,
To make that only true we now intend,
Which we no never an understanding friend.

Therefore, for goodness' sake, and as you are known

The first and happiest hearers of the town,
Be sad, as we would make ye: think ye see
The very persons of our noble story
As they were living: think you see them great,
And follow'd with the general throng and sweat
Of thousand friends: then in a moment, see
How soon this mightiness meets misery: so
And, if you can be merry then, I'll say
A man may weep upon his wedding-day.

ACT I.

SCENE I. London. An ante-chamber in the palace.

Enter the DUKE OF NORFOLK at one door; at the other, the DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM and the LORD ABERGAVENNY.

Buck. Good morrow, and well met. How have ye done
Since last we saw in France?
Nor. I thank your grace,
Healthful; and ever since a fresh admirer
Of what I saw there.

Buck. An untimely ague
Stay'd me a prisoner in my chamber when
Those suns of glory, those two lights of men,
Met in the vale of Andron.

Nor. Twixt Guynes and Arde:
I was then present, saw them salute on horse-
back;
Beheld them, when they lighted, how they clung

In their embracement, as they grew together:
Which had they, what four throned ones could have weigh'd
Such a compounded one?

Buck. All the whole time
I was my chamber's prisoner.

Nor. Then you lost
The view of earthly glory: men might say,
Till this time pomp was single, but now married
To one above itself. Each following day
Became the next day's master, till the last
Made former wonders its. To-day the French,
All cluquant, all in gold, like heathen gods,
Shone down the English; and, to-morrow, they Made Britain India: every man that stood Show'd like a mine. Their dwarfish pages were
As cherubins, all gilt: the madams too,
Not used to toil, did almost sweat to bear
The pride upon them, that their very labour
Was to them as a painting: now this masque
Was cried incomparable; and the ensuing
night

Made it a fool and beggar. The two kings,
Equal in lustre, were now best, now worst,
As presence did present them; him in eye,
All him in praise: and, being present both,
I was said they saw but one; and no discern Went was his tongue in censure. When these suns—

or so they phrase 'em—by their heralds challenged
The noble spirits to arms, they did perform
Beyond thought's compass; that former fabulous story,
Being now seen possible enough, got credit,
That Bavia was believed.

Buck. O, you go far.
Nor. As I belong to worship and affect
In honour honesty, the tract of every thing
Would by a good discourser lose some life.
Which action's self was tongue to. All was royal;

to the disposing of it nought rebell'd,
Order gave each thing view; the office did distinctly his full function.

Buck. Who did guide,
I mean, who set the body and the limbs
Of this great sport together, as you guess?

Nor. One, certes, that promises no element
In such a business.

Buck. I pray you, who, my lord?
Nor. All this was order'd by the good discretion

Of the right reverend Cardinal of York.
Buck. The devil speed him! no man's plea is freed

From his ambitious finger. What had he
To do in these sacred vanities? I wonder
That such a head can with his very bulk

Take up the rays o' the beneficial sun
And keep it from the earth.

Nor. Surely, sir,
There's in him stuff that puts him to these ends;
For, being not propp'd by ancestry, whose
grace

Chalks successors their way, nor call'd upon for
For high feats done to the crown; neither allied

To eminent assistants; but, spider-like,
Out of his self-drawing web, he gives us note,
The force of his own merit makes his way;
A gift that heaven gives for him, which buys
A place next to the king.

Aber. I cannot tell
What heaven hath given him,—let some graver eye

Pierce into that; but I can see his pride Peep through each part of him: whence has he
that,

If not from hell? the devil is a niggard,
Or has given all before, and he begins
A new hell in himself.

Buck. Why the devil,
Upon this French going out, took he upon
him,

Without the privy o' the king, to appoint
Who should attend on him? He makes up the file

Of all the gentry; for the most part such
To whom as great a charge as little honour
He meant to lay upon; and his own letter,
The honourable board of council out,
Must fetch him in the papers.

Aber. I do know
Kinsmen of mine, three at the least, that have
By this so sicken'd their estates, that never
They shall abound as formerly.

Buck. O, many Have broke their backs with laying manors on 'em

For this great journey. What did this vanity
But minister communication of
A most poor issue?

Nor. Grievingly I think,
The peace between the French and us not values

The cost that did conclude it.

Buck. Every man,
After the hideous storm that follow'd, was
A thing inspired; and, not consulting, leaped
Into a general prophecy; That this tempest,
Dashing the garment of this peace, aboded
The sudden breach on't.

Nor. Which is bidded only
For France hath sav'd the league, and hath attack'd

Our merchants' goods at Bourdeaux.

Aber. Is it therefore

The ambassador is silenced?

Nor. Harry, is't.

Aber. A proper title of a peace; and, say,

At a . . . known man!

Buck. Why, all this business
Our reverend cardinal carried.

Nor. Like it now given.

The state takes notice of the!

Betwixt you and the cardinal. I advise you—
And take it from a heart that wishes towards
you

Honour and plentiful safety—that you read
The cardinal's malice and his potency Together; to consider further that
What his high hatred would effect wants not
A minister in his power. You know his nature,
That he's revengful, and I know his sword Hath a sharp edge: it's long and, 't may be
said,

It reaches far, and where 'twill not extend,
Thither he darts it. Bosom up my counsel, You'll find it wholesome. Lo, where comes that rock
That I advise your shunning.

Enter CARDINAL WOLSEY, the purse borne before him, certain of the Guard, and two Secretaries with papers. The CARDINAL in his passage fixeth his eye on BUCKINGHAM, and BUCKINGHAM on him, both full of disdain.

Wol. The Duke of Buckingham's surveyor, hail

Where's his examination?

First Sec. Here, so please you.

Wol. Is he in person ready?

First Sec. Ay, please your grace.

Wol. Well, we shall then know more; and Buckingham
Shall lessen this big look.

[Exit Wolsey and his Train.]

Buck. This butcher's cur is venom-mouth'd, and I
Have not the power to muzzle him; therefore best

Not wake him in his slumber. A beggar's book
Outworth a noble's blood.

Nor. What, are you chafed?
Ask God for temperance; that's the appliance only

Which your disease requires.

Buck. I read in 's looks
Matter against me; and his eye reviled
Me, as his object: at this instant
He bores me with some trick: he's gone to the
king;

I'll follow and outstare him.

Nor. Stay, my lord,
And let your reason with your choler question
What 'tis you go about: to climb steep hills
Requires slow pace at first: anger is like
A full-hot horse, who being allow'd his way,
Sets on his heels. Not a man in England
Can advise me like you: be to yourself
As you would to your friend.

Buck. I'll to the king;
And from a mouth of honour quite cry down
This low fellow's insolence; or proclaim
Some difference in no persons.

Nor. Be advised;
Don't put a furnace for your foe so hot
That it do singe yourself: we may outrun,
My noble swinnock, that which we run at,

And lose by over-running. Know you not,
The fire that mounts the liquor till 't run o'er,
In seeming to augment it wastes it? Be advised:

I say again, there is no English soul
More stronger to direct you than y.
If with the sap of reason you would quench,
Or but allay, the fire of passion.

Buck. Sir,
I am thankful to you; and I'll go
By your prescription: but this top-¹²⁵
Whom from the flow of gall I name ¹²⁶ fellow
From sincere motions, by intelligence
And proofs as clear as founts in July
We see each grain of gravel, I do know
To be corrupt and treasonous.

Nor. Say not 'treasonous' Buck. To the king I'll say 't; and make my vouch as strong

As shore of rock. Attend. This holy fox,
Or wolf, or both,—for he unequal ravenous
As he is subtle, and as prone to mischief ¹²⁶
As able to perform 't; his mind and place
Infecting one another, yea, reciprocally—
Only to show his pomp as well in France
As here at home, suggests the king our master
To this last costly treaty, the interview,
That swallow'd so much treasure, and like a glass

Did break i' the rinsing.

Nor. Faith, and so it did.
Buck. Pray, give me favour, sir. This cunning cardinal

The articles o' the combination drew
As himself pleased; and they were ratified ¹⁷⁰
As he cried 'Thus let be': to as much end
As give a crutch to the dead: but our count-
cardinal

Has done this, and 'tis well: for worthy Wolsey,
Who cannot err, he did it. Now this follows,—
Which, as I take it, is a kind of puppy
To the old dam, treason.—Charles the emperor,
Under pretence to see the queen his aunt,—
For 'twas indeed his colour, but he came
To whisper Wolsey,—here makes visitation:
His fears were, that the interview betwixt ¹⁸⁰ England and France might, through their amity,

Breed him some prejudice: for from this league
Peep'd harms that menaced him: he privily
Deals with our cardinal; and, as I trow,—
Which I do well; for I am sure the emperor Paid ere he promised; whereby his suit was granted

Ere it was ask'd; but when the way was made,
And paved with gold, the emperor thus desired,
That he would please to alter the king's course,
And break the forward peace. Let the king
know,

As soon he shall by me, that thus the cardinal
Does buy and sell his honour as he pleases,
And for his own advantage.

Nor. I am sorry
To hear this of him; and could wish he were Something mistaken in 't.

Buck. No, not a syllable:
I do pronounce him in that very shape
He shall appear in proof.

Enter BRANDON, a Sergeant-at-arms before him, and two or three of the Guard.

Bras. Your office, sergeant; execute it.

Serv.

Sir,

My lord the Duke of Buckingham, and Earl of Hereford, Stafford, and Northampton, I doo Arrest thee of high treason, in the name Of our most sovereign king.

Buck. Lo, you, my lord,
The net has fall'n upon me! I shall perish Under device and practice.

Bras. I am sorry
To see you ta'en from liberty, to look on
The business present: 'tis his highness' pleasure
You shall to the Tower.

Buck. It will help me nothing
To plead mine innocence; for that dye is on me Which makes my whitest part black. The will
of heaven

Be done in this and all things! I obey. 210
O my Lord Abergavenny, fare you well!

Bras. Nay, he must bear you company.
The king [To Abergavenny.]
Is pleased you shall to the Tower, till you know
How he determines further.

Aber. As the duke said,
The will of heaven be done, and the king's pleasure
By me obey'd!

Bras. Here is a warrant from
The king to attach Lord Montacute; and the bodies
Of the duke's confessor, John de la Car,
One Gilbert Peck, his chancellor.—

Buck. So, so; 215
These are the limbs o' the plot; no more, I hope.

Bras. A monk o' the Chartreux.

Buck. O, Nicholas Hopkins!

Bras. He.

Buck. My surveyor is false; the o'er-great
cardinal
Hath show'd him gold; my life is spann'd already:

I am the shadow of poor Buckingham,
Whose figure even this instant cloud puts on,
By darkening my clear sun. My lord, farewell.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. The same. The council-chamber.

Cornets. Enter the KING, leaning on the CARDINAL's shoulder, the Nobles, and SIR THOMAS LOVELL; the CARDINAL places himself under the KING's feet on his right side.

King. My life itself, and the best heart of it, Thanks you for this great care: I stood i' the level
Of a full-charged confederacy, and give thanks
To you that choked it. Let be call'd before us
That gentlemen of Buckingham's; in person
I'll hear him his confessions justify;
And point point the treasons of his master
He shall as a rebel.

A noise within, crying 'Room for the Queen!'

Enter QUEEN KATHARINE, ushered by the DUKE OF NORFOLK, and the DUKE OF SUFFOLK: she kneels. The KING rises from his state, takes her up, kisses and placeth her by him.

Q. Kath. Nay, we must longer kneel: I am a suitor.

King. Arise, and take place by us: half your suit 20

Never name to us; you have half our power:
The other moiety, ere you ask, is given;
Repeat your will and take it.

Q. Kath. Thank your majesty.
That you would love yourself, and in that love
Not unconsider'd leave your honour, nor
The dignity of your office, is the point
Of my petition.

King. Lady mine, proceed.

Q. Kath. I am solicited, not by a few,
And those of true condition, that your subjects
Are in great grievance: there have been commissions 20

Sent down among 'em, which hath flaw'd the
heart

Of all their loyalties: wherein, although,
My good lord cardinal, they vent reproaches
Most bitterly on you, as putter on
Of these exactions, yet the king our master—

Whose honour heaven shield from soil!—even he escapes not

Language unmannerly, yea, such which breaks
The sides of loyalty, and almost appears
In loud rebellion.

Nor. Not almost appears,
It doth appear; for, upon these taxation, 30

The clothiers all, not able to maintain
The many to them 'longing, have put off

The appliers, carders, fullers, weavers, who,
Unfit for other life, compell'd by hunger

And lack of other means, in desperate manner
Daring the event to the teeth, are all in uproar,

And danger serves among them.

King. Taxation!
Wherein? and what taxation? My lord cardinal,

You that are blamed for it alike with us,
Know you of this taxation?

Wol. Please you, sir, 40
I know but of a single part, in sight
Pertains to the state; and front but in that file
Where others tell steps with me.

Q. Kath. No, my lord,
You know no more than others; but you frame

Things that are known alike; which are not wholesome

To those which would not know them, and yet
must

Perforce be their acquaintance. These ex-actions,

Whereof my sovereign would have note, they are

Most pestilent to the hearing; and, to bear 'em,
The back is sacrifice to the load. They say 50

they are devised by you; or else you suffer
Too hard an exaction.

King. Still exaction!

The nature of it! in what kind, let's know,
Is this erection!

Q. Kath. I am much too venturous
In tempting of your patience; but am bolden'd Under your promised pardon. The subjects'
grief

Comes through commissions, which compel from each

The sixth part of his substance, to be levied
Without delay; and the pretence for this Is named, your wars in France: this makes bold mouths:

Tongues spit their duties out, and cold hearts
freeze

Allegiance in them; their curses now Live where their prayers did: and it's come to pass,

This tractable obedience is a slave
To each incensed will. I would your highness
Would give it quick consideration, for
There is no prinner business.

King. By my life,
This is against our pleasure.

Wol. And for me,
I have no further gone in this than by
A single voice; and that not pass'd me but 70
By learned approbation of the judges. If I am Trafficed by ignorant tongues, which neither
know

My faculties nor person, yet will be
The chronicles of my doing, let me say
Tis but the fate of place, and the rough brake
That virtues must go through. We must not stint
Our necessary actions, in the fear

To cope malicious censurers; which ever,
As ravenous fishes, do a vessel follow
That is new-trimm'd, but benefit no further 80
Than vainly longing. What we oft do best,
By sick interpreters, once weak ones, is
Not ours, or not allow'd; what worst, as oft,
Hitting a grosser quality, is cried up
For our best act. If we shall stand still,
In fear our motion will be mock'd or carp'd at,
We should take root here where we sit, or sit
State-statues only.

King. Things done well,
And with a care, exempt themselves from fear;
Things done without example, in their issue 90
Are to be fear'd. Have you a precedent
Of this commission? I believe, not any.
We must not read our subjects from our laws,
And stick them in our will. Sixth part of each?

A trembling contribution! Why, we take From every tree lop, bark, and part o' the timber;

And, though we leave it with a root, thus hack'd

The air will drink the sap. To every county
Where this is question'd send our letters, with Free pardon to each man that has denied 100
The force of this commission: pray, look to't;
I put it to your care.

Wol. A word with you.
[To the Secretary.]

Let there be letters writ to every shire,
Of the king's grace and pardon. The grieved commoners

Hardly conceive of me; let it be noised
That through our intercession this revokement
And pardon comes: I shall anon advise you Further in the proceeding. [Exit Secretary.]

Enter Surveyor.

Q. Kath. I am sorry that the Duke of Buckingham

Is run in your displeasure.

King. It grieves many: 110
The gentleman is learn'd, and a most rare
speaker;

To nature none more bound; his training
such,

That he may furnish and instruct great teachers,
And never seek for aid out of himself. Yet
see,

When these so noble benefits shall prove
Not well disposed, the mind growing once corrupt,

They turn to vicious forms, ten times more ugly

Than ever they were fair. This man so complete,

Who was enroll'd 'mongst wonders, and when we,

Almost with ravish'd listening, could not find
His hour of speech a minute; he, my lady, 120
Hath into monstrous habits put the graces

That once were his, and is become as black
As if beameard in hell. Sit by us; you shall hear—

This was his gentleman in trust—of him
Things to strike honour sad. Bid him recount
The fore-recited practices; whereof
We cannot feel too little, hear too much.

Wol. Stand forth, and with bold spirit relate what you,

Most like a careful subject, have collected 130
Out of the Duke of Buckingham.

King. Speak freely.
Surv. First, it was usual with him, every
day

It would infect his speech, that if the king
Should without issue die, he'll carry it so
To make the sceptre his; these very words
I've heard him utter to his son-in-law,

Lord Aberavenny; to whom by oath he menaced

Revenge upon the cardinal.

Wol. Please your highness, note
This dangerous conception in this point. 139
Not friended by his wish, to your high person
His will is most malignant; and it stretches
Beyond you, to your friends.

Q. Kath. My learn'd lord cardinal,
Deliver all with charity.

King. Speak on:
How grounded he his title to the crown,
Upon our fall? to this point have thou heard
him

At any time speak aught?

Surv. He was brought to this
By a vain prophecy of Nicholas Hopkins.

King. What was that Hopkins?

Surv. Sir, a Charleux friar.

His confessor; who told him every minute
With words of sovereignty.

King. How know'st thou this? 150
Serv. Not long before your highness sped to France.

The duke being at the Bosc, within the parish Saint Lawrence Poultny, did of me demand What was the speech among the Londoners Concerning the French journey: I replied, Men fear'd the French would prove perfidious, To the king's danger. Presently the duke Said, 'twas the fear, indeed; and that he doubted

'Twould prove the verity of certain words Spoke by a holy monk; 'that oft,' says he, 160 'Hath sent to me, wishing me to permit John de la Car, my chaplain, a choice hour To hear from him a matter of some moment: Whom after under the confession's seal He solemnly had sworn, that what he spoke My chaplain to no creature living, but To me, should utter, with demure confidence This pausingly ensued: Neither the king nor's heirs,

Tell you the duke, shall prosper: bid him strive To gain the love o' the commonalty: the duke Shall govern England.'

Q. Kath. If I know you well, 171
 You were the duke's surveyor, and lost your office

On the complaint o' the tenants: take good heed

You charge not in your spleen a noble person And spoil your nobler soul: I say, take heed; Yes, heartily beseech you.

King. Let him on.
 so forward.

Serv. On my soul, I'll speak but truth. told my lord the duke, by the devil's illusions The monk might be deceived; and that 'twas dangerous for him

To ruminate on this so far, until 180 It forged him some design, which, being believed,

'twas much like to do: he answer'd, 'Tush, It can do me no damage;' adding further, That, had the king in his last sickness fall'd, The cardinal's and Sir Thomas Lovell's heads should have gone off.

King. Ha! what, so rank? Ah ha! There's mischief in this man: canst thou say further?

Serv. I can, my liege.

King. Proceed.

Serv. Being at Greenwich, After your highness had reproved the duke About Sir William Blouner,—

King. I remember 190 Of such a time; being my sworn servant, The duke retain'd him his. But on; what hence?

Serv. 'II,' quoth he, 'I for this had been committed, As to the Tower, I thought, I would have play'd

The part my father meant to act upon The usurper Richard; who, being at Salisbury, Made suits to come in's presence; which I granted, As he made semblance of his duty, would,

Have put his knife into him.'

King. A giant traitor! 200
Wol. Now, madam, may his highness live in freedom, And this man out of prison!

Q. Kath. God mend all!

King. There's something more would out of thee; what say'st?

Serv. After 'the duke his father,' with 'the knife,

He stretch'd him, and, with one hand on his dagger,

Another spread on's breast, mounting his eyes, He did discharge a horrible oath; whose tenour Was,—were he evil used, he would outgo

His father by as much as a performance Does an irresolute purpose.

King. There's his period, To alacathe his knife in us. He is attach'd;

Call him to present trial: if he may 211 Find mercy in the law, 'tis he; if none,

Let him not seek't of us: by day and night, He's traitor to the height. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. An ante-chamber in the palace.

Enter the LORD CHAMBERLAIN and LORD SANDS.

Cham. It's possible the spells of France should juggle

Men into such strange mysteries!

Sands. New customs, Though they be never so ridiculous, Nay, let 'em be unmanly, yet are follow'd.

Cham. As far as I see, all the good our English

Have got by the late voyage is but merely A fit or two o' the face; but they are shrewd ones;

For when they hold 'em, you would swear directly

Their very noses had been counsellors To Pepin or Clotharius, they keep state on.

Sands. They have all new legs, and have ones: one would take it,

That never saw 'em pace before, the spavins Or springhalt reign'd among 'em.

Cham. Death! my lord, Their clothes are after such a pagan cut too,

That, sure, they've worn out Christendom.

Enter SIR THOMAS LOVELL.

How now? What news, Sir Thomas Lovell?

Lov. Faith, my lord, I hear of none, but the new proclamation

That's clapp'd upon the court-gate.

Cham. What is't?

Lov. The reformation of our manners' gallants

That fill the court with quarrels, talk, and tallies.

Cham. I'm glad 'tis there: now I would pray our monarch

To think an English countess may be wise.

And never see the Louvre.

Lov. They must either,
For so run the conditions, leave those remnants
Of fool and feather that they got in France,
With all their honourable points of ignorance
Pertaining thereunto, as fights and fireworks,
Abusing better men than they can be,
Out of a foreign wisdom, renouncing clean
The faith they have in tennis, and tall stockings, Short blister'd breeches, and those types of travel, 31

And understand again like honest men;
Or pack to their old playfellows: there, I take
it,

They may, 'cum privilegio,' wear away
The lag end of their lewdness and be laugh'd at.

Sands. 'Tis time to give 'em physic, their diseases

Are grown so catching.

Cham. What a loss our ladies
Will have of these trim vanities!

Lov. Ay, marry,
There will be woe indeed, lords: the sly whore-
sons

Have got a speeding trick to lay down ladies;
A French song and a fiddle has no fellow. 41

Sands. The devil fiddle 'em! I am glad they are going,

For, sure, there's no converting of 'em: now
An honest country lord, as I am, beaten
A long time out of play, may bring his plain-

And have an hour of hearing; and, by'r lady,
Held current music too.

Cham. Well said, Lord Sands;
Your colt's tooth is not cast yet.

Sands. No, my lord;
Nor shall not, while I have a stump.

Cham. Sir Thomas,
Whither were you a-going?

Lov. To the cardinal's: 50
Your lordship is a guest too.

Cham. O, 'tis true:
This night he makes a supper, and a great one,
To many lords and ladies; there will be
The beauty of this kingdom, I'll assure you.

Lov. That churchman bears a bounteous mind indeed.

A hand as fruitful as the land that feeds us;
His dews fall every where.

Cham. No doubt he's noble;
He had a black mouth that said other of
him.

Sands. He may, my lord; has wherewithal:
in him

Sparring would show a worse sin than ill doctrine; 60

Men of his way should be most liberal;
They are set here for examples.

Cham. True, they are so;
But few now give so great ones. My barge

Your lordship shall along. Come, good Sir
Thomas,

We shall be late else; which I would not be,
As you spoke to, with Sir Henry Guildford
To be competitors.

I am your lordship's. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. A Hall in York Place.

Hautboys. A small table under a state for the CARDINAL, a longer table for the guests.
Then enter ANNE BULLEN and divers other Ladies and Gentlemen as guests, at one door; at another door, enter SIR HENRY GUILDFORD.

Guild. Ladies, a general welcome from his grace

Salutes ye all; this night he dedicates
To fair content and you: none here, he hopes,

In all this noble bery, has brought with her
One care abroad; he would have all as merry

As, first, good company, good wine, good welcome,

Can make good people. O, my lord, you're tardy:

Enter LORD CHAMBERLAIN, LORD SANDS,
and SIR THOMAS LOVELL.

The very thought of this fair company
Clapp'd wings to me.

Cham. You are young, Sir Harry Guildford.
Sands. Sir Thomas Lovell, had the cardinal

But half my lay thoughts in him, some of these Should find a running banquet ere they rested,
I think would better please 'em: by my life,
They are a sweet society of fair ones.

Lov. O, that your lordship were but now confessor

To one of two of these!

Sands. I would I were;

They should find easy penance.

Lov. Faith, how easy!

Sands. As easy as a down-bed would afford it.

Cham. Sweet ladies, will it please you sit?
Sir Harry,

Place you that side; I'll take the charge of
this: 50

His grace is entering. Nay, you must not freeze;

Two women placed together makes cold weather:

My Lord Sands, you are one will keep 'em
waking;

Pray, sit between these ladies.

Sands. By my faith,
And thank your lordship. By your leave, sweet

ladies:

If I chance to talk a little wild, forgive me;
I had it from my father.

Anne. Was he mad, sir?
Sands. O, very mad, exceeding mad, in love too:

But he would bite none; just as I do now,
He would kiss you twenty with a branch.

[King's her.
Cham. Well said, my lord. 50

So, now you're fairly seated. Gentlemen,
The penance lies on you, if these fair ladies

Pass away frowning.

Sands. For my little ones,
Let me alone.

Hautboys. Enter CARDINAL WOLSEY, and takes his state.

Wol. You're welcome, my fair guests: that noble lady,
Or gentleman, that is not freely merry,
Is not my friend: this, to confirm my welcome;
And to you all, good health. [Drinks.]

Sanda. Your grace is noble:
Let me have such a bowl may hold my thanks,
And save me so much talking.

Wol. My Lord Sands, 40
I am beholding to you: cheer your neighbours.
Ladies, you are not merry: gentlemen,
Whose fault is this?

Sanda. The red wine first must rise
In their fair cheeks, my lord; then we shall have 'em
Talk us to silence.

Anne. You are a merry gamester,
My Lord Sands.

Sanda. Yes, if I make my play.
Here's to your ladyship: and pledge it, madam,
For 'tis to such a thing,—

Anne. You cannot show me.
Sanda. I told your grace they would talk anon.

[Drum and trumpet, chambers discharged.]
Wol. What's that?

Cham. Look out there, some of ye.
[Exit Servant.]

Wol. What warlike voice, so
And to what end, is this? Nay, ladies, fear
not;

By all the laws of war you're privileged.

Re-enter Servant.

Cham. How now! what is't?
Serv. A noble troop of strangers,
For so they seem: they've left their barge and landed;

And hither make, as great ambassadors
From foreign princes.

Wol. Good lord chamberlain,
Go, give 'em welcome; you can speak the French tongue;

And, pray, receive 'em nobly, and conduct 'em
Into our presence, where this heaven of beauty shall shine at full upon them. Some attend
him. 60

[Exit Chamberlain, attended. All rise, and tables removed.]
You have now a broken banquet; but we'll mend it.

A good digestion to you all: and once more
I shower a welcome on ye; welcome all.

Hautboys. Enter the KING and others, as masquers, habited like shepherds, ushered by the LORD CHAMBERLAIN. They pass directly before the CARDINAL, and gracefully salute him.

A noble company! what are their pleasures?

Cham. Because they speak no English, thus they pray'd

To tell your grace, that, having heard by fame
Of this so noble and so fair assembly
This night to meet here, they could do no less.

Out of the great respect they bear to beauty,
But leave their flocks; and, under your fair conduct,

Crave leave to view these ladies and entreat
An hour of revels with 'em.

Wol. Say, lord chamberlain,
They have done my poor house grace; for which I pay 'em

A thousand thanks, and pray 'em take their pleasures.

[They choose Ladies for the dance. The King chooses Anne Bullen.]

King. The fairest hand I ever touch'd! O beauty,

Till now I never knew thee! [Music. Dance.]
Wol. My lord!

Cham. Your grace!

Wol. Pray, tell 'em thus much from me:
There should be one amongst 'em, by his person,
More worthy this place than myself; to whom,
If I but knew him, with my love and duty 80
I would surrender it.

Cham. I will, my lord.
[Whispers the Masquera.]

Wol. What say they?

Cham. Such a one, they all confess,
There is indeed; which they would have your
grace

Find out, and he will take it.
Wol. Let me see, then.

By all your good leaves, gentlemen; here I'll make

My royal choice.
King. Ye have found him, cardinal:

[Unmasking.]
You hold a fair assembly: you do well, lord;

You are a churchman, or, I'll tell you, cardinal,
I should judge now unhappily.

Wol. I am glad
Your grace is grown so pleasant.

King. My lord chamberlain, 90
Prithee, come hither: what fair lady's that?

Cham. An't please your grace, Sir Thomas
Bullen's daughter,—

The Viscount Rochford,—one of her highness's
women.

King. By heaven, she is a dainty one.
Sweetheart,

I were unmannerly, to take you out,
And not to kiss you. A health, gentlemen!

Let it go round.
Wol. Sir Thomas Lovell, is the banquet ready

For the privy chamber?

Lov. Yes, my lord.
Wol. Your grace,

I fear, with dancing is a little heated. 100
King. I fear, too much.

Wol. There's fresher air, my lord,
In the next chamber.

King. Lead in your ladies, every one: sweet partner,

I must not yet forsake you: let's be Good my lord cardinal: I have half a health

To drink to these fair ladies, and a measure
To lead 'em once again; and then let's dance.

Who's best in favour? Let the music speak it.
[Exeunt with trumpets.]

KING HENRY VIII

[ACT II

Nor. What's the cause?
Cham. It seems the marriage with his brother's wife

Has crept too near his conscience.

Suf. No, his conscience
Has crept too near another lady.

Nor. 'Tis so: 19
This is the cardinal's doing, the king-cardinal:
That blind priest, like the eldest son of fortune, Turns what he list. The king will know him
one day.

Suf. Pray God he do! he'll never know himself else.

Nor. How holily he works in all his business!
And with what zeal! for, now he has crack'd
the league

Between us and the emperor, the queen's great nephew,

He dives into the king's soul, and there scatters
Dangers, doubts, wringing of the conscience, Fears, and despair; and all these for his
marriage:

And out of all these to restore the king, 30
He counsels a divorce; a loss of her
That, like a jewel, has hung twenty years
About his neck, yet never lost her lustre;
Of her that loves him with that excellence
That angels love good men with; even of her
That, when the greatest stroke of fortune falls,
Will bless the king: and is not this course pious!

Cham. Heaven keep me from such counsel!
'Tis most true

These news are every where; every tongue speaks 'em,

And every true heart weeps for't: all that dare
Look into these affairs see this main end, 41
The French king's sister. Heaven will one day open

The king's eyes, that so long have slept upon
This bold bad man.

Suf. And free us from his slavery.

Nor. We had need pray,
And heartily, for our deliverance;
Or this imperious man will work us all
From princes into pages: all men's honours
Lie like one lump before him, to be fashion'd
Into what pitch he please.

Suf. For me, my lords, 50
I love him not, nor fear him; there's my creed:
As I am made without him, so I'll stand,
If the king please; his curses and his blessings
Touch me alike, they're breath I not believe in.
I know him, and I know him; so I leave him to him that made him proud, the pope.

Nor. Let's in;
And with some other business put the king
From these and thoughts, that work too much
upon him:

My lord, you'll bear us company?

Cham. Excuse me;
The king has sent me elsewhere: besides, 60
You'll find a most unfit time to disturb him:
Fare you to your lordships.

Nor. Thanks, my good lord chamberlain.
[Exit Lord Chamberlain; and the King draws the curtain, and sits standing pensively.]

Suf. How sad he looks! sure, he is much afflicted.

King. Who's there, ha?

Nor. Pray God he be not angry.

King. Who's there, I say! How dare you thrust yourselves

Into my private meditations?
Who am I! ha!

Nor. A gracious king that pardons all offences

Malice ne'er meant: our breach of duty this
way

Is business of estate; in which we come 70
To know your royal pleasure.

King. Ye are too bold:
Go to: I'll make ye know your times of business:

Is this an hour for temporal affairs, ha?

Enter WOLSEY and CAMPEIUS, with a commission.

Who's there? my good lord cardinal! O my Wolsey,

The quiet of my wounded conscience;
Thou art a cure fit for a king. [To Camp.]

You're welcome,
Most learned reverend sir, into our kingdom:

Use us and it. [To Wol.] My good lord, have great care

I be not found a talker.

Wol. Sir, you cannot. 73
I would your grace would give us but an hour
Of private conference.

King. [To Nor. and Suf.] We are busy; go.

Nor. [Aside to Suf.] This priest has no pride
in him!

Suf. [Aside to Nor.] Not to speak of;
I would not be so sick thought for his place:

But this cannot continue.

Nor. [Aside to Suf.] If it do,
I'll venture one have-at-him.

Suf. [Aside to Nor.] I another.

Wol. Your grace has given a precedent of wisdom

Above all princes, in committing freely
Your scruple to the voice of Christendom:

Who can be angry now? what envy reach you!
The Spaniard, tied by blood and favour to her,

Must now confess, if they have any goodness,
The trial just and noble. All the clerics,

I mean the learned ones, in Christian kingdoms
Have their free voices: Rome, the nurse of judgement,

Invited by your noble self, hath sent

One general tongue unto us, this good man,
This just and learned priest, Cardinal Campeius

Whom once more I present unto your highness
King. And once more in mine arms I bid him welcome,

And thank the holy conclave for their love: 80

They have sent me such a man I would not wish'd for.

Cam. Your grace must needs deserve a stranger's love.

You are so noble. To your highness' hand
I tender my commission; by whose virtue

The court of Rome commanding, you, my lord

Cardinal of York, are join'd with me their servant

In the impartial judging of this business.

King. Two equal men. The queen shall be acquainted

Forthwith for what you come. Where's Gardiner?

Wol. I know your majesty has always loved
her 110

So dear in heart, not to deny her that
A woman of less place might ask by law :

Scholars allow'd freely to argue for her.

King. Ay, and the best she shall have ; and my favour

To him that does best : God forbid else.
Cardinal,

Prithce, call Gardiner to me, my new secretary :
I find him a fit fellow. [Exit Wolsey.]

Re-enter WOLSEY, with GARDINER.

Wol. [Aside to Gard.] Give me your hand :
much joy and favour to you ;

You are the king's now.

Gard. [Aside to Wol.] But to be commanded

For ever by your grace, whose hand has raised
me.

King. Come hither, Gardiner.

Cam. My Lord of York, was not one Doctor
Pace

In this man's place before him ?

Wol. Yes, he was.

Cam. Was he not held a learned man ?

Wol. Yes, surely.

Cam. Believe me, there's an ill opinion spread then

Even of yourself, lord cardinal.

Wol. How ! of me ?

Cam. They will not stick to say you envied
him,

And fearing he would rise, he was so virtuous,
Kept him a foreign man still ; which so grieved
him,

That he ran mad and died.

Wol. Heaven's peace be with him !
That's a Christian care enough : for living mur-murers 121

There's places of rebuke. He was a fool ;
For he would needs be virtuous : that good
fellow,

If I command him, follows my appointment :
I will have none so near else. Learn this,
brother,

We live not to be griped by meaner persons.

King. Deliver this with modesty to the queen. [Exit Gardiner.]

The most convenient place that I can think of
For such receipt of learning is Black-Friars ;

There ye shall meet about this weighty business.
My Wolsey, see it furnish'd. O, my lord, 141

Would it not grieve an able man to leave
So sweet a bedfellow ! But, conscience, conscience !

O, 'tis a tender place ; and I must leave her.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. An ante-chamber of the Queen's apartments.

Enter ANNE BULLEN and an Old Lady.

Anne. Not for that neither : here's the pang that pinches :

His highness having lived so long with her, and she

So good a lady that no tongue could ever
Pronounce dishonour of her ; by my life,

She never knew harm-doing : O, now, after
So many courses of the sun enthroned,

Still growing in a majesty and pomp, the which
To leave a thousand-fold more bitter than

'Tis sweet at first to acquire,—after this process,
To give her the avault ! it is a pity 10

Would move a monster.

Old L. Hearts of most hard temper
Melt and lament for her.

Anne. O, God's will ! much better
She ne'er had known pomp : though 't be temporal,

Yet, if that quarrel, fortune, do divorce
It from the bearer, 'tis a sufferance panging

As soul and body's severing.

Old L. Alas, poor lady !
She's a stranger now again.

Anne. So much the more
Must pity drop upon her. Verily,

I swear, 'tis better to be lowly born,
And range with humble livers in content, 20

Than to be perk'd up in a glittering grief,
And wear a golden sorrow.

Old L. Our content
Is our best having.

Anne. By my troth and maidenhead,
I would not be a queen.

Old L. Beswew me, I would,
And venture maidenhead for 't ; and so would
you,

For all this spice of your hypocrisy :
You, that have so fair parts of woman on you,

Have too a woman's heart ; which ever yet
Affected eminence, wealth, sovereignty ;

Which, to say sooth, are blessings ; and which gifts, 30

Saving your mincing, the capacity
Of your soft cheveril conscience would receive,

If you might please to stretch it.

Anne. Nay, good troth, Old L. Yes, troth, and troth ; you would not be a queen !

Anne. No, not for all the riches under heaven.

Old L. 'Tis strange : a three-pence hawk'd would hire me,

Old as I am, to queen it ; but, I pray you,
What think you of a duchess ? have you limbs
To bear that load of title ?

Anne. No, in truth.

Old L. Then you are weakly made : pluck off a little ;

I would not be a young count in your way,
For more than blushing comes to ; if you look
Cannot vouchsafe this burthen, 'tis too weak
Ever to get a boy.

Anne. How you do talk !

I swear again, I would not be a queen
For all the world.

Old L. In faith, for little England
You 'ld venture an emballing: I myself
Would for Carnarvonshire, although there 'long'd No comes to the crown but that. Lo, who come here!

Enter the LORD CHAMBERLAIN.

Cham. Good morrow, ladies. What were't worth to know
The secret of your conference!

Anne. My good lord,
Not your demand; it values not your asking:
Our mistress' sorrows we were pitying.

Cham. It was a gentle business, and becoming

The action of good women: there is hope
All will be well.

Anne. Now, I pray God, amen!

Cham. You bear a gentle mind, and heavenly blessings

Follow such creatures. That you may, fair lady,

Perceive I speak sincerely, and high note's
Taken of your many virtues, the king's majesty Commends his good opinion of you, and Does purpose honour to you no less flowing
Than Marchioness of Pembroke; to which title
A thousand pound a year, annual support,
Out of his grace he adds.

Anne. I do not know
What kind of my obedience I should tender;
More than my all is nothing; nor my prayers
Are not words duly hallow'd, nor my wishes
More worth than empty vanities; yet prayers and wishes

Are all I can return. Beseech your lordship, to Vouchsafe to speak my thanks and my obedience,

As from a blushing handmaid, to his highness;
Whose health and royalty I pray for.

Cham. Lady,
I shall not fail to approve the fair conceit
The king hath of you. [Aside] I have persued her well;

Beauty and honour in her are so mingled
That they have caught the king: and who knows yet

But from this lady may proceed a gem
To lighten all this isle! I'll to the king,
And say I spoke with you.

[Exit Lord Chamberlain.]

Anne. My honour'd lord. So

Old L. Why, this it is; see, see!
I have been begging sixteen years in court,
Am yet a courtesier beggary, nor could Come yet between too early and too late
For any suit of pounds; and you, O fate!
A very fresh fish here—fit, fit, fit upon
This compell'd fortune!—have your mouth fill'd up

Before you open it.

Anne. This is strange to me.
Old L. How tastes it? Is it bitter? forty years, no.

That was a lady once, 'tis an old story, so
That would make a queen, that would she not,

For all the mud in Egypt: have you heard it?

Anne. Come, you are pleasant.

Old L. With your theme, I could!
O'er mount the lark. The Pembroke!

A thousand pounds a year for pure
No other obligation! By my life,
That promises me thousands: home 's train
Is longer than his foreskirt. By this time
I know your back will bear a due
Are you not stronger than you were?

Anne. Good lady,
Make yourself mirth with your particular far
And leave me out on't. Would I had n
If this salute my blood a jot: it faints!
To think what follows.

The queen is comfortless, and we forgetful
In our long absence: pray, do not deliver
What here you've heard to her.

Old L. What do you think me?
[Exit.]

SCENE IV. A hall in Black-Friars.

*Trumpets, snarls, and cornets. Enter two Vergers, with short silver wands; next them, two Scribes, in the habit of doctors;
after them, the ARCHBISHOP of CANTER-BURY alone; after him, the BISHOPS of LINCOLN, ELY, ROCHESTER, and SAINT
ASAPH; next them, with some small distance, follows a Gentleman bearing the purse, with the great seal, and a cardinal's hut; then two Priests, bearing each a silver cross; then a Gentleman-usher bare-headed, accompanied with a Sergeant-at-arms bearing a silver mace; then two Gentlemen bearing two great silver pillars; after them, side by side, the two CARDINALS; two Nobles with the sword and mace. The King takes place under the cloth of state; the two CARDINALS sit under him as judges. The QUEEN takes place some distance from the King. The Bishops place themselves on each side the court, in manner of a consistory; below them, the Scribes. The Lords sit next the Bishops. The rest of the Attendants stand in convenient order about the stage.*

Vol. Whilst our commission from Rome is read,

Let silence be commanded.

King. What's the need!

It hath already publicly been read,
And on all sides the authority allow'd;

You may, then, spare that time.

Vol. Be't so, Proceed.
Scribe. Say, Henry King of England, come into the court.

Crier. Henry King of England, &c.

King. Here.

Scribe. Say, Katherine Queen of England, come into the court.

Crier. Katherine Queen of England, &c.
[The Queen makes no answer, rises out of her chair, goes about the court, comes to the King, and kneels at his feet; then speaks.]

Q. Kath. Sir, I desire you do me right and justice;

And to bestow your pity on me: for I am a most poor woman, and a stranger, born out of your dominions; having here no judge indifferent, nor no more assurance of equal friendship and proceeding. Alas, sir, in what have I offended you? what cause hath my behaviour given to your displeasure. That thus you should proceed to put me off, 21 And take your good grace from me? Heaven witness,

I have been to you a true and humble wife, At all times to your will conformable; Ever in fear to kindle your dislike, Yea, subject to your countenance, glad or sorry As I saw it inclined: when was the hour I ever contradicted your desire, Or made it not mine too? Or which of your friends

Have I not strove to love, although I knew 30 He were mine enemy? what friend of mine That had to him deriv'd your anger, did I continue in my liking? nay, gave notice He was from thence discharged? Sir, call to mind

That I have been your wife, in this obedience, upward of twenty years, and have been blest With many children by you: if, in the course And process of this time, you can report, And prove it too, against mine honour aught, My bond to wedlock, or my love and duty, 40 Against your sacred person, in God's name, Turn me away; and let the foulst contempt Shut door upon me, and so give me up To the sharpest kind of justice. Please you, sir, The king, your father, was reputed for A prince most prudent, of an excellent And unmatched wit and judgement: Ferdinand, My father, king of Spain, was reckon'd one The wisest prince that there had reign'd by many

A year before: it is not to be question'd 50 That they had gather'd a wise council to them Of every realm, that did debate this business, Who deem'd my marriage lawful: wherefore I humbly

Beseech you, sir, to spare me, till I may Be by my friends in Spain advised; whose counsel

I will implore: if not, if the name of God, Your pleasure be fulfill'd!

Wol. You have here, lady, And of your choice, these reverend fathers; men Of singular integrity and learning. Yea, the elect of the land, who are assembled 60 To plead your cause: it shall be therefore bootless

That longer you desire the court; as well For your own quiet, as to rectify What is unsettled in the king.

Cam. His grace Hath spoken well and justly: therefore, madam, It's fit this royal session do proceed; And that, without delay, their arguments Be now produced and heard.

Q. Kath. Lord cardinal, To you I speak.

Wol. Your pleasure, madam!

Q. Kath. Sir, I am about to weep; but, thinking that We are a queen, or long have dream'd so, certain

The daughter of a king, my drops of tears I'll turn to sparks of fire.

Wol. Be patient yet, Q. Kath. I will, when you are humble; nay, before,

Or God will punish me. I do believe, Induced by potent circumstances, that You are mine enemy, and make my challenge You shall not be my judge: for it is you Have blown this coal betwixt my lord and me; Which God's dew quench! Therefore I say again, 80

I utterly abhor, yes, from my soul Refuse you for my judge; whom, yet once more,

I hold my most malicious foe, and think not At all a friend to truth.

Wol. I do profess You speak not like yourself: who ever yet Have stood to charity, and display'd the Of disposition gentle, and of wisdom O'erstopping woman's power. Madam, you do me wrong:

I have no spleen against you; nor injustice For you or any: how far I have proceeded, 90 Or how far further shall, is warranted By a commission from the consistory, Yea, the whole consistory of Rome. You charge me

That I have blown this coal: I do deny it: The king is present: if it be known to him That I gainsay my deed, how may he wound, And worthily, my falsehood! yea, as much As you have done my truth. If he know That I am free of your report, he knows I am not of your wrong. Therefore in him too It lies to cure me: and the cure is, to Remove these thoughts from you: the which before

His highness shall speak in, I do beseech You, gracious madam, to unthink your speaking And to say so no more.

Q. Kath. My lord, my lord, I am a simple woman, much too weak To oppose your cunning. You're meek and humble-mouth'd;

You sign your place and calling, in full seeming, With meekness and humility; but your heart Is cramm'd with arrogancy, spleen, and spite. You have, by fortune and his highness' favour, Gone slightly o'er low steps and now are mounted

Where powers are your retainers, and your words,

Domestics to you, serve your will as a slave Yourself pronounces their office. I trust, then, You tender more your person's honour than Your high profession spiritual: that speak I do refuse you for my judge; and here, Before you all, appeal unto the king. To bring my whole cause to the highness' eye And so to be judg'd by him. [She presents to the King, and goes to weep.]

Cam. The queen is obstinate,
Stubborn to justice, apt to accuse it, and Disdainful to be tried by't: 'tis not well.
She's going away.

King. Call her again.

Crier. Katharine Queen of England, come into the court.

Grif. Madam, you are call'd back.

Q. Kath. What need you note it? I pray you,
keep your way:

When you are call'd, return. Now, the Lord help,

They vex me past my patience! Pray you,
pass on: 130

I will not tarry; no, nor ever more
Upon this business my appearance make
In any of their courts.

[Exeunt Queen, and her Attendants.]

King. Go thy ways, Kate:
That man I the world who shall report he has
A better wife, let him in nought be trusted,
For speaking false in that: thou art, alone,
If thy rare qualities, sweet gentleness,
Thy meekness saint-like, wife-like government,
Obeys in commanding, and thy parts 139
Sovereign and pious else, could speak thee out,
The queen of earthly queens: she's a noble born;
And, like her true nobility, she has Carried herself towards me.

Wol. Most gracious sir,
In humblest manner I require your highness,
That it shall please you to declare, in hearing
Of all these ears,—for where I am robb'd and bound,

There must I be unloosed, although not there
At once and fully satisfied,—whether ever I Did broach this business to your highness: or Laid any scruple in your way, which might 150
Induce you to the question on't or ever
Have to you, but with thanks to God for such A royal lady, speak one the least word that might

Be to the prejudice of her present state,
Or touch of her good person!

King. My lord cardinal,
I do excuse you; yea, upon mine honour,
I free you from't. You are not to be taught
That you have many enemies, that know not
Why they are so, but, like to village-curs, 159
Bark when their fellows do: by some of these
The queen is put in anger. You're excused:
But will you be more justified? you ever
Have wish'd the sleeping of this business; never desired

It to be stirr'd; but oft have hinder'd, oh.
The passages made toward it: on my honour,
I speak my good lord cardinal to this point,
And thus far clear him. Now, what moved me to't.

I will be bold with time and your attention:
Then mark it,—inducement. Thus it came;
give heed to't:

My grace first received a tenderness, 170
Sudden, and prick, on certain speeches utter'd
By the Bishop of Bayonne, then French ambassador.

Which hath been either sent on the debating between twice the Duke of Orleans and

Our daughter Mary: 't the progress of this business.

Ere a determinate resolution, he,
I mean the bishop, did require a respite;
Wherein he might the king his lord advertise
Whether our daughter were legitimate,
Respecting this our marriage with the flowerer, Sometimes our brother's wife. This respite shook 181

The bosom of my conscience, enter'd me.
Yea, with a splitting power, and made to tremble

The region of my breast; which forced such
way,

That many mazed considerations did throng
And press'd in with this caution. First, me-
thought

I stood not in the smile of heaven; who had Commanded nature, that my lady's womb,
If it conceived a male child by me, should
Do no more offices of life to't than 190

The grave does to the dead; for her male issue (Or died where they were made, or shortly after This world had air'd them: hence I took a
thought,

This was a judgement on me; that my kingdom,

Well worthy the best heir o' the world, should
not

Be gladdened in't by me: then follows, that I weigh'd the danger which my realms stood in
By this my issue's fail; and that gave to me
Many a groaning throe. Thus hulling in
The wild sea of my conscience, I did steer Toward this remedy, whereupon we are Now present here together: that's to say,
I meant to rectify my conscience,—which
I then did feel full sick, and yet not well,—
By all the reverend fathers of the land
And doctors learn'd: first I began in private
With you, my Lord of Lincoln; you remember
How under my oppression I did reek,
When I first moved you.

Lin. Very well, my liege.

King. I have spoke long: be pleased yourself to say 210

How far you satisfied me.

Lin. So please your highness,
The question did at first so stagger me,
Bearing a state of mighty moment in't
And consequence of dread, that I committed
The daring counsel which I had to doubt;
And did entreat your highness to this course
Which you are running here.

King. I then moved you,
My Lord of Canterbury; and got your leave
To make this present summons: unsolicited
I left no reverend person in this court; 220

But by particular consent proceeded
Under your hands and seals: therefore, go on;
For no dislike I the world against the person
Of the good queen, but the sharp thorny points
Of my alleged reasons, drive this forward:
Prove but our marriage lawful, by my life
And kingly dignity, we are contented
To wear our mortal state to come with her, Katharine our queen, before the primest creature

That's paragon'd o' the world.

Cum. So please your highness, 350
The queen being absent, 'tis a needful fitness
That we adjourn this court till further day:
Meanwhile must be an earnest motion
Made to the queen, to call back her appeal
She intends unto his holiness.

King. [Aside] I may perceive
These cardinals trifle with me: I abhor
This dilatory sloth and tricks of Rome.
My learn'd and well-beloved servant, Cranmer,
Prithee, return: with thy approach, I know,
My comfort comes along. Break up the court:
I say, set on. 241

[Exeunt in manner as they entered.]

ACT III

SCENE I. London. The QUEEN'S apartments.

The QUEEN and her Women, as at work.

Q. Kath. Take thy lute, wench: my soul grows sad with troubles;
Sing, and disperse 'em, if thou canst: leave working.

SONG.

Orpheus with his lute made trees,
And the mountain tops that freeze;
Bow themselves when he did sing:
To his music plants and flowers
Ever sprung: as sun and showers
There had made a lasting spring.
Every thing that heard him play,
Even the billows of the sea,
Hung their heads, and then lay by. 10
In sweet music is such art,
Killing care and grief of heart
Fall asleep, or hearing, die.

Enter a Gentleman.

Q. Kath. How now!

Gent. An't please your grace, the two great cardinals

Wait in the presence.

Q. Kath. Would they speak with me?

Gent. They will'd me say so, madam.

Q. Kath. Pray their graces
To come near. [Exit Gent.] What can be their business

With me, a poor weak woman, fall'n from
favour? 20

I do not like their coming. Now I think on't,
They should be good men; their affairs as righteous:

But all hoods make not monks.

Enter the two Cardinals, WOLSEY and CAMPELUS.

Wol. Peace to your highness.

Q. Kath. Your graces find me here part of a housewife,

I would be all, against the worst may happen.
What are your pleasures with me, reverend
lords?

Wol. May it please you, noble madam, to withdraw
Into your private chamber, we shall give you

The full cause of our coming.

Q. Kath. Speak it here;
There's nothing I have done yet, o' my conscience, 30

Deserves a corner: would all other women
Could speak this with as free a soul as I do:
My lords, I care not, so much I am happy
Above a number, if my actions
Were tried by every tongue, every eye saw 'em,
Envy and base opinion set against 'em,
I know my life so even. If your business
Seek me out, and that way I am wife in,
Out with it boldly: truth loves open dealing.

Wol. Tanta est erga te mentis integritas, regina serenissima, — 41

Q. Kath. O, good my lord, no Latin;
I am not such a truant since my coming.
As not to know the language I have lived in:
A strange tongue makes my cause more strange,
suspicious;

Pray, speak in English: here are some will
thank you,
If you speak truth, for their poor mistress' sake:
Believe me, she has had much wrong: lord
cardinal,

The willing'st sin I ever yet committed
May be absolved in English.

Wol. Noble lady, 50
I am sorry my integrity should breed,
And service to his majesty and you,
So deep suspicion, where all faith was meant.
We come not by the way of accusation,
To taint that honour every good tongue blesses,
Nor to betray you any way to sorrow,
You have too much, good lady; but to know
How you stand minded in the weighty difference

Between the king and you; and to deliver,
Like free and honest men, our just opinions 60
And comforts to your cause.

Cum. Most honour'd madam,
My Lord of York, out of his noble nature,
Zeal and obedience he still bore your grace,
Forgetting, like a good man, your late censure
Both of his truth and him, which was too far,
Offers, as I do, in a sign of peace,
His service and his counsel.

Q. Kath. [Aside] To betray me —
My lords, I thank you both for your good will;
Ye speak like honest men; pray God, ye prove so!

But how to make ye suddenly an answer, 70
In such a point of weight, so near mine
honour, —

More near my life, I fear, — with my weak wit,
And to such men of gravity and learning,
In truth, I know not. I was set at work
Among my maids: full list, God knows, looking

Either for such men or such business.
For her sake that I have been, — for I feel
The last fit of my greatness, — good your graces,
Let me have time and counsel for my cause:
Alas, I am a woman, friendless, hopeless! 80

Wol. Madam, you wrong the king's love with these fears:

Your hopes and friends are infinite. 85
Q. Kath. In England

But little for my profit: can you think, lords,
That any Englishman dare give me counsel?
Or be a known friend, 'gainst his highness'

pleasure.
Though he be grown so desperate to be honest,
And live a subject? Nay, forsooth, my friends,
They that must weigh out my afflictions,
They that my trust must grow to, live not here:
They are, as all my other comforts, far hence
In mine own country, lords.

Cam. I would your grace
Would leave your griefs, and take my counsel.

Q. Kath. How, sir?
Cam. Put your main cause into the king's protection;

He's loving and most gracious: 'twill be much
Both for your honour better and your cause;
For if the trial of the law o'ertake ye,
You'll part away disgraced.

Vol. He tells you rightly.
Q. Kath. Ye tell me what ye wish for both,—my ruin:

Is this your Christian counsel? out upon ye!
Heaven is above all yet; there sits a judge: 100
That no king can corrupt.

Cam. Your rage mistakes us.
Q. Kath. The more shame for ye: holy men I thought ye,

Upon my soul, two reverend cardinal virtues:
But cardinal sins and hollow hearts I fear ye:
Mend 'em, for shame, my lords. Is this your comfort?

The cordial that ye bring a wretched lady,
A woman lost among ye, laugh'd at, scorn'd?
I will not wish ye half my miseries;
I have more charity: but say, I warn'd ye;
Take heed, for heaven's sake, take heed, lest at
once 110

The burthen of my sorrows fall upon ye.
Vol. Madam, this is a mere distraction;
You turn the good we offer into envy.

Q. Kath. Ye turn me into nothing: woe upon ye
And all such false professors! would you have
me—

If you have any justice, any pity;
If ye be any thing but churchmen's habits—
Put my sick cause into his hands that hates
me!

Alas, has banish'd me his bed already, 119
His love, too long ago! I am old, my lords,
And all the fellowship I hold now with him
Is only my obedience. What can happen
To me above this wretchedness! all your studies
Make me a cure like this.

Cam. Your fears are worse.
Q. Kath. Have I lived thus long—let me speak myself—
Since virtue finds no friends—a wife, a true
one!

A woman, I dare say without vain-glory,
Never so wounded with suspicion?
Honest with all her full affections
'mongst loved him next heaven! 120

superstitious to him!
Alas, how can I now be content him?
Alas, how can I now be content him?
Alas, how can I now be content him?

Bring me a constant woman to her husband.
One that ne'er dream'd a joy beyond his
pleasure;

And to that woman, when she has done most,
Yet will I add an honour, a great patience.

Vol. Madam, you wander from the good we aim at.

Q. Kath. My lord, I dare not make myself
so guilty,

To give up willingly that noble title 120
Your master wed me to: nothing but death
Shall e'er divorce my dignities.

Vol. Pray, hear me.
Q. Kath. Would I had never trod this English earth,

(Or felt the flatteries that grow upon it!)
Ye have angels' faces, but heaven knows your hearts.

What will become of me now, wretched lady!
I am the most unhappy woman living.

Alas, poor wench, where are now your
fortunes!

Shipwreck'd upon a kingdom, where no pity,
No friends, no hope; no kindred weep for me;
Almost no grave allow'd me: like the lily, 121
That once was mistress of the field and flourish'd,
I'll hang my head and perish.

Vol. If your grace
Could but be brought to know our ends are honest,
You'd feel more comfort: why should we,
good lady,

Upon what cause, wrong you? alas, our places,
The way of our profession is against it:
We are to cure such sorrows, not to sow 'em.
For goodness' sake, consider what you do;
How you may hurt yourself, ay, utterly 120
Grow from the king's acquaintance, by this carriage.

The hearts of princes kiss obedience,
So much they love it; but to stubborn spirits
They swell, and grow as terrible as storms.
I know you have a gentle, noble temper,
A soul as even as a calm: pray, think us
Those we profess, peace-makers, friends, and servants.

Cam. Madam, you'll find it so. You wrong your virtues
With these weak women's fears: a noble spirit,
As yours was put into you, ever casts 123
Such doubts, as false coin, from it. The king loves you;

Beware you lose it not; for us, if you please
To trust us in your business, we are ready
To use our utmost studies in your service.

Q. Kath. Do what ye will, my lords: and,
pray, forgive me.

If I have used myself unmannerly;
You know I am a woman, lacking wit
To make a seemly answer to such persons.

Pray, do my service to his majesty:
He has my heart yet; and shall have my prayers While I shall have my life. Come, reverend fathers, 124

Bestow your counsels on me: she now begs
That little thought, when she sat fasting here.
She should have bought her dignities as dear.

SCENE II. Ante-chamber to the King's apartment.

Enter the DUKE OF NORFOLK, the DUKE OF SUFFOLK, the EARL OF SURREY, and the LORD CHAMBERLAIN.

Nor. If you will now unite in your complaints,

And force them with a constancy, the cardinal cannot stand under them: if you omit the offer of this time, I cannot promise But that you shall sustain more new disgraces, With these you bear already.

Sur. I am joyful To meet the least occasion that may give me Remembrance of my father-in-law, the duke, To be revenged on him.

Suf. Which of the peers Have unconteinn'd gone by him, or at least 10 Strangely neglected? when did he regard The stamp of nobleness in any person Out of himself?

Cham. My lords, you speak your pleasures: What he deserves of you and me I know; What we can do to him, though now the time Gives way to us, I much fear. If you cannot bar his access to the king, never attempt Any thing on him; for he hath a witchcraft Over the king in his tongue.

Nor. O, fear him not; His spell in that is out; the king hath found Matter against him that for ever mars 21 The honey of his language. No, he's settled, Not to come off, in his displeasure.

Sur. Sir, I should be glad to hear such news as this Once every hour.

Nor. Believe it, this is true: In the divorce his contrary proceedings Are all unfolded; wherein he appears As I would wish mine enemy.

Sur. How came His practices to light?

Suf. Most strangely.

Sur. (A how, how?)

Suf. The cardinal's letters to the pope mis-carried, 30

And came to the eye of the king: wherein was read,

How that the cardinal did entreat his holiness To stay the judgement of the divorce; for if

It did take place, 'I do,' quoth he, 'perceive My king is tangled in affection to

A creature of the queen's, Lady Anne Bullen.'

Sur. Has the king this?

Suf. Believe it.

Sur. Will this work?

Cham. The king in this perceives him, how he counts

And hedges his own way. But in this point All his tricks founder, and he brings his physic

After his patient's death; the king already 41 Hath married the fair lady.

Sur. Would he had!

Suf. May you be happy in your wish, my lord!

For, I protest, you have it.

Sur. Now, all my joy.

Trace the conjunction!

Suf. My amen to't!

Nor. All men's!

Suf. There's order given for her coronation:

Marry, this is yet but young, and may be left

To some ears unaccounted. But, my lords,

She is a gallant creature, and complete 49

In mind and feature: I persuade me, from her

Will fall some blessing to this land, which shall

In it be memorized.

Sur. But, will the king

Digest this letter of the cardinal's?

The Lord forbid!

Nor. Marry, amen!

Suf. No, no;

There be more wasps that buzz about his nose

Will make this sting the sooner. Cardinal

Campeius

Is stol'n away to Rome; hath ta'en no leave;

Has left the cause of the king unhandled; and

Is posted, as the agent of our cardinal,

To second all his plot. I do assure you 60

The king cried Ha! at this.

Cham. Now, God incense him,

And let him cry Ha! louder!

Nor. But, my lord,

When returns Cranmer?

Suf. He is return'd in his opinions; which

Have satisfied the king for his divorce,

Together with all famous colleges

Almost in Christendom; shortly, I believe,

His second marriage shall be publish'd, and

Her coronation. Katharine no more

Shall be call'd queen, but princess dowager 70

And widow to Prince Arthur.

Nor. This same Cranmer's

A worthy fellow, and hath ta'en much pain

In the king's business.

Suf. He has; and we shall see him

For it an archbishop.

Nor. So I hear.

Suf. 'Tis so.

The cardinal!

Enter WOLSEY and CROMWELL.

Nor. Observe, observe, he's moody.

Wol. The packet, Cromwell,

Gave't you the king?

Crom. To his own hand, in his bedchamber.

Wol. Look'd he o' the inside of the paper?

Crom. Presently

He did unseal them: and the first he view'd,

He did it with a serious mind; a heed 80

Was in his countenance. You he bade

Attend him here this morning.

Wol. Is he ready

To come abroad?

Crom. I think, by this he is.

Wol. Leave me awhile. (Exit Cromwell.)

[Aside] It shall be to the Duchess of Alençon,

The French king's sister: he shall marry her

Anne Bullen! No; I'll no Anne Bullen for

him:

There's more in 't than fair visage. Bullen!

No, we'll no Bullen. Speedily I will

To hear from Rome. The Marchioness of Flanders!

Nor. He's discontented.

Suf. May be, he hears the king
Does what his anger to him.

Suf. Sharp enough,
Lord, for thy justice!

Vol. [Aside] The late queen's gentlewoman,
a knight's daughter,
To be her mistress' mistress! the queen's queen!
This candle burns not clear: 'tis I must snuff it;
Then out it goes. What though I know her virtuous

And well deserving! yet I know her for A spleeny Lutheran; and not wholesome to Our cause, that she should lie i' the bosom of Our hard-ruled king. Again, there is sprung up
An heretic, an arch one, Cranmer; one
Hath crawl'd into the favour of the king,
And is his oracle.

Nor. He is ver'd at something.
Suf. I would 'twere something that would fret the string,

The master-cord on 's heart!

Enter the KING, reading of a schedule, and LOVELL.

Suf. The king, the king!
King. What piles of wealth hath he accumulated

To his own portion! and what expense by the hour
Seems to flow from him! How, i' the name of thrift,

Does he rake this together! Now, my lords,
Saw you the cardinal?

Nor. My lord, we have Stood here observing him: some strange commotion

Is in his brain: he bites his lip, and starts;
Stops on a sudden, looks upon the ground.
Then lays his finger on his temple; straight
Springs out into fast gait; then stops again,
Strikes his breast hard, and anon he casts
His eye against the moon: in most strange postures

We have seen him set himself.

King. It may well be;
There is a mutiny in 's mind. This morning
Papers of state he sent me to peruse,
As I required: and wot you what I found
There,—on my conscience, put unwittingly!
Smooth, an inventory, thus importing;
The several parcels of his plate, his treasure, Rich stuffs, and ornaments of household; which I find at such proud rate, that it out-speaks
Possession of a subject.

Nor. It's heaven's will:
Some spirit put this paper in the packet,
To blam your eye withal.

King. If we did think
His contemplation were above the earth,
And fix'd on spiritual object, he should still Dwell in his musings: but I am afraid
His thoughts are below the moon, not worth
His pains considering.

[Enter Lovell, who goes to the Cardinal.
Vol. Heaven forgive me!
Nay, God bless your highness!

King. Good my lord,
You are full of heavenly stuff, and bear the inventory

Of your best graces in your mind; the which You were now running o'er: you have scarce
time

To steal from spiritual leisure a brief
To keep your earthly audit: sure, in th
I deem you an ill husband, and am gl
To have you therein my companion.

Vol. Sir,
For holy offices I have a time; a time
To think upon the part of business whic
I bear i' the state; and nature does requir
Her times of preservation, which perforce
I, her frail son, amongst my brethren mortal,
Must give my tendance to.

King. You have said well.
Vol. And ever may your highness yoke
together,

As I will lend you cause, my doing well
With my well saying!

King. 'Tis well said again;
And 'tis a kind of good deed to say well:
And yet words are no deeds. My father loved
you;

He said he did; and with his deed did crown
His word upon you. Since I had my office,
I have kept you next my heart: have not alone
Employ'd you where high profits might come
home,

But pared my present havings, to bestow
My bounties upon you.

Vol. [Aside] What should this mean! 160
Suf. [Aside] The Lord increase this business!

King. Have I not made you
The prime man of the state! I pray you, tell
me,

If what I now pronounce you have found true:
And, if you may confess it, say withal,
If you are bound to us or no. What say you?

Vol. My sovereign, I confess your royal graces,
Shower'd on me daily, have been more than could

My studied purposes requite; which went Beyond all man's endeavours: my endeavours
Have ever come too short of my desires, 170
Yet filed with my abilities: mine own ends
Have been mine so that evermore they pointed To the good of your most sacred person and
The profit of the state. For your great graces
Heap'd upon me, poor undeserver, I
Can nothing render but allegiant thanks,
My prayers to heaven for you, my loyalty,
Which ever has and ever shall be growing,
Till death, that winter, kill it.

King. Fairly answer'd;
A loyal and obedient subject is 180

Therein illustrated: the honour of it
Does pay the act of it; as, i' the contrary,
The foulness is the punishment. I presume
That, as my hand has open'd bounty to you,
My heart dropp'd love, my power rain'd honour,
more

On you than any; so your hand and heart,
Your brain, and every function of your power

Should, notwithstanding that your bond of duty,
As 'twere in love's particular, be more
To me, your friend, than any.

Wol. I do profess 190
That for your highness' good I ever labour'd
More than mine own; that am, have, and will be—
Though all the world should crack their duty
To you,
And throw it from their soul; though perils did Abound, as thick as thought could make 'em,
and

Appear in forms more horrid,—yet my duty,
As doth a rock against the chiding flood,
Should the approach of this wild river break,
And stand unshaken yours.

King. 'Tis nobly spoken:
Take notice, lords, he has a loyal breast, 200
For you have seen him open't. Read o'er this; [Giving him papers.]
And after, this: and then to breakfast with What appetite you have.

[Exit King, frowning upon Cardinal Wolsey: the Nobles throng after him, smiling and whispering.]

Wol. What should this mean?
What sudden anger's this? how have I reap'd it!
He parted frowning from me, as if ruin
Leap'd from his eyes: so looks the chafed lion
Upon the daring huntsman that has gall'd him;
Then makes him nothing. I must read this paper;

I fear, the story of his anger. 'Tis so;
This paper has undone me: 'tis the account 210
Of all that world of wealth I have drawn together

For mine own ends; indeed, to gain the popedom.

And see my friends in Rome. O negligence!
Fit for a fool to fall by: what cross devil
Made me put this main secret in the packet
I sent the king? Is there no way to cure this?
No new device to beat this from his brains?
I know 'twill stir him strongly; yet I know
A way, if it take right, in spite of fortune Will bring me off again. What's this? 'To the Pope!' 220

The letter, as I live, with all the business
I writ to's holiness. Nay then, farewell!
I have touch'd the highest point of all my greatness;

And, from that full meridian of my glory
I haste now to my setting: I shall fall
Like a bright exhalation in the evening,
And no man see me more.

Re-enter to WOLSEY, the DUKES OF NORFOLK and SUFFOLK, the EARL OF SURREY, and the LORD CHAMBERLAIN.

Nor. Hear the king's pleasure, cardinal who commands you
To render up the great seal presently
Into our hands; and to confine yourself 230
To Asher House, my Lord of Winchester's,
Till you hear further from his highness.

Wol.

Stay:

Where's your commission, lords? words cannot carry Authority so weighty.

Sur. Who dare cross 'em,
Bearing the king's will from his mouth expressly?

Wol. Till I find more than will or words to do it.

I mean your malice, know, officious lords,
I dare and must deny it. Now I feel
Of what coarse metal ye are moulded, envy:
How eagerly ye follow my disgraces, 240

As if it fed ye! and how sleek and wanton
Ye appear in every thing may bring my ruin!
Follow your envious courses, men of malice;
You have Christian warrant for 'em, and, no
doubt,

In time will find their fit rewards. That seal,
You ask with such a violence, the king,
Mine and your master, with his own hand gave
me;

Rade me enjoy it, with the place and honours,
During my life; and, to confirm his goodness,
Tied it by letters-patents: now, who'll take it?

Sur. The king, that gave it.

Wol. It must be himself, then. 251

Sur. Thou art a proud traitor, priest.

Wol. Proud lord, thou liest:
Within these forty hours Surrey durst better
Have burnt that tongue than said so.

Sur. Thy ambition,
Thou scarlet sin, robb'd this beawling land
Of noble Buckingham, my father-in-law:

The heads of all thy brother cardinals,
With thee and all thy best parts bound together,

Weigh'd not a hair of his. Plagues of your policy!

You sent me deputy for Ireland; 260
Far from his succour, from the king, from all That might have mercy on the fault thou gavest him;

Whilst your great goodness, out of holy pity,
Absolved him with an axe.

Wol. This, and all else

This talking lord can lay upon my credit,
I answer is most false. The duke by law Found his deserts: how innocent I was
From any private malice in his end.

His noble jury and foul cause can witness.
If I loved many words, lord, I should tell you
You have as little honesty as honour, 271

That in the way of loyalty and truth
Toward the king, my ever royal master,
Dare mate a sounder man than Surrey can be,
And all that love his follies.

Sur. By my soul,
Your long coat, priest, protects you; thou shouldst feel

My sword! the life-blood of thee else. My
lords,

Can ye endure to hear this arrogance?
And from this fellow? If we live then tamely,
To be thus jaded by a piece of scarlet, 280

Farewell nobility: let his grace go forward,
And dare us with his cap like larks.

Wol. All goodness

Is poison to thy stomach.

Sar. Yes, that goodness
Of gleaming all the land's wealth into one,
Into your own hands, cardinal, by extortion;
The goodness of your intercepted packets
You writ to the pope against the king: your goodness.

Since you provoke me, shall be most notorious.
My Lord of Norfolk, as you are truly noble,
As you respect the common good, the state ^{ago}
Of our despised nobility, our issues,
Wag, if he live, will scarce be gentlemen,
Produce the grand sum of his sins, the articles
Collected from his life. I'll startle you Worse than the ringing bell, when the brown
wench

Lay kissing in your arms, lord cardinal.

Wol. How much, methinks, I could despise
this man,

But that I am bound in charity against it!

Nor. Those articles, my lord, are in the king's hand:

But, thus much, they are foul ones.

Wol. So much fairer ³⁰⁰
And spotless shall mine innocence arise,
When the king knows my truth.

Sar. This cannot save you:

I thank my memory, I yet remember
Some of these articles; and out they shall.

Now, if you can blush and cry 'guilty,' cardinal,
You'll show a little honesty.

Wol. Speak on, sir;

I dare your worst objections; if I blush,
It is to see a nobleman want manners.

Sar. I had rather want those than my head.
Have at you!

First, that, without the king's assent or knowledge, ³¹⁰

You wrought to be a legate; by which power
You main'd the jurisdiction of all bishops.

Nor. Then, that in all you writ to Rome, or ^{else}

To foreign princes, 'Ego et Rex meus'
Was still inscribed; in which you brought the
king

To be your servant.

Sar. Then that, without the knowledge
Either of king or council, when you went

Ambassador to the emperor, you made bold
To carry into Flanders the great seal.

Sar. Item, you sent a large commission ³²⁰
To Gregory de Casado, to conclude,
Without the king's will or the state's allowance,
A league between his highness and Ferrara.

Sar. That, out of mere ambition, you have coined

Your holy hat to be stamp'd on the king's coin.

Sar. Then that you have sent innumerable substance—

By what means got, I leave to your own conscience—

To furnish Rome, and to prepare the ways
You have for dignities; to the mere undoing
the kingdom. Many more there are; ³³⁰ since they are of you, and odious, not taint my mouth with.

Sar. O my lord,
Is not a falling man too far? his virtue:

His faults lie open to the laws; let them,
Not you, correct him. My heart weeps to see
him

So little of his great self.

Sar. I forgive him.

Sar. Lord cardinal, the king's further pleasure is,

Because all those things you have done of late,
By your power legatine, within this kingdom,

Fall into the compass of a preunured ³⁴⁰
That therefore such a writ be sued against you;
To forfeit all your goods, lands, tenements, Chattels, and whatsoever, and to be out of the king's protection. This is my charge.

Nor. And so we'll leave you to your meditations

How to live better. For your stubborn answer
About the giving back the great seal to us,

The king shall know it, and, no doubt, shall
thank you.

So fare you well, my little good lord cardinal.

[Exeunt all but Wolsey.]

Wol. So farewell to the little good you bear
me. ³⁵⁰

Farewell! a long farewell, to all my greatness!
This is the state of man: to-day he puts forth

The tender leaves of hopes; to-morrow blossoms,

And bears his blushing honours thick upon him;
The third day comes a frost, a killing frost,

And, when he thinks, good easy man, fall surely

His greatness is a-ripening, nips his root,
And then he falls, as I do. I have ventured,

Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders,
This many summers in a sea of glory, ³⁶⁰

But far beyond my depth: my high-blown pride
At length broke under me and now has left me,

Wearied and old with service, to the mercy
Of a rude stream, that must for ever hide me.

Vain pomp and glory of this world, I hate ye;
I feel my heart new open'd. O, how wretched

Is that poor man that hangs on princes' favours!
There is, betwixt that smile we would aspire to,

That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruin,
More pangs and fears than wars or women have: ³⁷⁰

And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer,
Never to hope again.

Enter CROMWELL, and stands amazed.

Why, how now, Cromwell!

Crom. I have no power to speak, sir.

Wol. What, amazed
At my misfortune? can thy spirit wonder

A great man should decline? Nay, an you weep,

I am fall'n indeed.

Crom. How does your grace!

Wol. Why, well;
Never so truly happy, my good Cromwell.

I know myself now; and I feel within me
A peace above all earthly dignities.

A still and quiet conscience. The king has cured me. ³⁸⁰

I humbly thank his grace; and from these shoulders,

These ruin'd pillars, out of pity, taken

A load would sink a navy, too much honour:
O, 'tis a burden, Cromwell, 'tis a burden

Too heavy for a man that hopes for heaven!

Crom. I am glad your grace has made that right use of it.

Wol. I hope I have: I am able now, methinks,

Out of a fortitude of soul I feel,

To endure more miseries and greater far

Than my weak-hearted enemies dare offer. 390

What news abroad?

Crom. The heaviest and the worst
Is your displeasure with the king.

Wol. God bless him!

Crom. The next is, that Sir Thomas More is chosen

Lord chancellor in your place.

Wol. That's somewhat sudden:
But he's a learned man. May he continue

Long in his highness' favour, and do justice

For truth's sake and his conscience; that his bones,

When he has run his course and sleeps in
blessings,

May have a tomb of orphans' tears wept on 'em!
What more?

Crom. That Cranmer is return'd with welcome. 400

Install'd lord archbishop of Canterbury.

Wol. That's news indeed.

Crom. Last, that the Lady Anne,
Whom the king hath in secrecy long married,

This day was view'd in open as his queen,

Going to chapel; and the voice is now

Only about her coronation.

Wol. There was the weight that pull'd me down. O Cromwell,

The king has gone beyond me: all my glories
In that one woman I have lost for ever:

No sun shall ever usher forth mine honours,

Or gild again the noble troops that waited 411

Upon my smiles. Go, get thee from me,

Cromwell;

I am a poor fall'n man, unworthy now

To be thy lord and master: seek the king;

That sun, I pray, may never set! I have told
him

What and how true thou art: he will advance
thee;

Some little memory of me will stir him—

I know his noble nature—not to let

Thy hopeful service perish too: good Cromwell,

Neglect him not; make use now, and provide

For thine own future safety.

Crom. O my lord, 421

Must I, then, leave you? must I needs forgo

So good, so noble and so true a master?

Hear witness, all that have not hearts of iron,

With what a sorrow Cromwell leaves his lord.

The king shall have my service; but my prayers

For ever and for ever shall be yours.

Wol. Cromwell, I did not think to see a tear

In all my miseries; but thou hast forced me,

Out of thy honest truth, to play the woman. 430

Let's dry our eyes: and thus far bear me,

Cromwell;

And, when I am forgotten, as I shall be,

And sleep in dull cold marble, where no mention

Of me more must be heard of, say, I taught
thee.

Say, Wolsey, that once trod the ways of glory,
And sounded all the depths and shoals of
honour,

Bound thee a way, out of his wreck, to rise in;

A sure and safe one, though thy master mis'd it dark but my fall, and that that ruin'd me. 439

Join with me, I charge thee, fling away ambition:
By that sin fell the angels; how can man, then,

The image of his Maker, hope to win by it?
Love thyself last: cherish those hearts that
hate thee;

Corruption wins not more than honesty.
Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace,

To silence envious tongues. Be just, and fear
not:

Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's,
Thy God's, and truth's; then if thou fall'st, O
Cromwell,

Thou fall'st a blessed martyr! Serve the king;
And,—prithce, lead me in: 450

There take an inventory of all I have,
To the last penny; 'tis the king's: my robe,

And my integrity to heaven, is all
I dare now call mine own. O Cromwell, Crom-
well!

Had I but served my God with half the zeal
I served my king, he would not in mine age

Have left me naked to mine enemies.
Crom. Good sir, have patience.

Wol. So I have. Farewell
The hopes of court! my hopes in heaven do dwell. [Exit.

ACT IV.

SCENE I. A street in Westminster.

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting one another.

First Gent. You're well met once again.

Sec. Gent. So are you.

First Gent. You come to take your stand

here, and behold

The Lady Anne pass from her coronation?

Sec. Gent. 'Tis all my business. At our last encounter,

The Duke of Buckingham came from his trial.

First Gent. 'Tis very true: but that time

offer'd sorrow;

This, general joy.

Sec. Gent. 'Tis well: the citizens,

I am sure, have shown at full their royal

mind—

As, let 'em have their rights, they are ever forward—

In celebration of this day with shows,

Pageants and sights of honour.

First Gent. Never granting

No, I'll assure you, better taken, sir.

Sec. Gent. May I be hold to ask what that contains,

That paper in your hand?

First Gent. Yes: 'tis the list

Of those that claim their offices this day.

By custom of the coronation.

The Duke of Suffolk is the first, and claims known those customs.

I should have been beholding to your paper.
But, I beseech you, what's become of Katharine?
The princess dowager! how goes her business!

First Gent. That I can tell you too. The Archbishop of Canterbury, accompanied with other learned and reverend fathers of his order, held a late court at Dunstable, six miles off from Ampthill where the princess lay; to which she was often cited by them, but appear'd not: And, to be short, for not appearance and the king's late scruple, by the main assent of all these learned men she was divorced; and the late marriage made of none effect: Since which she was removed to Kimbolton, where she remains now sick.

Sec. Gent. Alas, good lady! [Trumpets.]
The trumpets sound: stand close, the queen is coming. [Hautboys.]

THE ORDER OF THE CORONATION.

1. A lively flourish of Trumpets.
2. Then, two Judges.
3. Lord Chancellor, with the purse and mace before him.
4. Choristers, singing. [Music.]
5. Mayor of London, bearing the mace. Then Garter, in his coat of arms, and on his head a gilt copper crown.
6. Marquess Dorset, bearing a sceptre of gold, on his head a demi-coronet of gold. With him, the Earl of Surrey, bearing the rod of silver with the dove, crowned with an earl's coronet. Collars of SS.
7. Duke of Suffolk, in his robe of estate, his coronet on his head, bearing a long white wand, as high-steward. With him, the Duke of Norfolk, with the rod of marshalship, a coronet on his head. Collars of SS.
8. A canopy borne by four of the Cinque-ports: under it, the Queen in her robe; in her hair richly adorned with pearls, crowned. On each side her, the Bishops of London and Winchester.
9. The old Duchess of Norfolk, in a coronet of gold, wrought with flowers, bearing the Queen's train.
10. Certain Ladies or Countesses, with plain circlets of gold without flowers.

They pass over the stage in order and state.

Sec. Gent. A royal train, believe me. These I know:

Who's that that bears the sceptre?
First Gent. Marquess Dorset:
And that the Earl of Surrey, with the rod.

Sec. Gent. A bold brave gentleman. That should be The Duke of Suffolk!

First Gent. 'Tis the same; high-steward.
Sec. Gent. And that my Lord of Norfolk?
First Gent. Yes.

Sec. Gent. Heaven bless thee!

[Looking on the Queen.]
Thou hast the sweetest face I ever look'd on.

Sir, as I have a soul, she is an angel
Our king has all the Indies in his arms,
And more and richer, when he strains that lady:

I cannot blame his conscience.

First Gent. They that bear
The cloth of honour over her, are four barons
Of the Cinque-ports.

Sec. Gent. Those men are happy; and so are all are near her.

I take it, she that carries up the train
Is that old noble lady, Duchess of Norfolk.

First Gent. It is; and all the rest are countesses.

Sec. Gent. Their coronets say so. These are stars indeed;

And sometimes falling ones.

First Gent. No more of that.
[Exit procession, and then a great flourish of trumpets.]

Enter a third Gentleman.

First Gent. God save you, sir! where have you been broiling!

Third Gent. Among the crowd! the Abbey;
where a finger

Could not be wedged in more: I am stifled
With the mere rankness of their joy.

Sec. Gent. You saw
The ceremony?

Third Gent. That I did.

First Gent. How was it? 60

Third Gent. Well worth the seeing.

Sec. Gent. Good sir, speak it to us.

Third Gent. As well as I am able. The rich stream

Of lords and ladies, having brought the queen
To a prepared place in the choir, fell off

A distance from her; while her grace sat down
To rest awhile, some half an hour or so,

In a rich chair of state, opposing freely
The beauty of her person to the people.

Believe me, sir, she is the goodliest woman
That ever lay by man: which when the people

Had the full view of, such a noise arose
As the shrouds make at sea in a stiff tempest.

As loud, and to as many tunes: hats, cloaks, Doublets, I think,—flew up; and had their faces

Been loose, this day they had been lost. Such joy

I never saw before. Great-bellied women,
That had not half a week to go, like rams

In the old time of war, would shake the priest,
And make 'em reel before 'em. No man living

Could say 'This is my wife, these; all were woven 80

So strangely in one piece.

Sec. Gent. But, what follow'd?

Third Gent. At length her grace rose, and with modest paces

Came to the altar; where she kneel'd, and saint-like

Cast her fair eyes to heaven and pray'd devoutly.
Then rose again and bow'd her.

When by the Archbishop of Canterbury
She had all the royal makings of a queen;
As holy oil, Edward Confessor's crown,
The rod, and bird of peace, and all such emblems

Laid nobly on her: which perform'd, the choir,
With all the choicest music of the kingdom, 91
Together sung 'To Deum.' So she parted,
And with the same full state paced back again
To York-place, where the feast is held.

First Gent. Sir,
You must no more call it York-place, that's
past;

For, since the cardinal fell, that title's lost:
Tis now the king's, and call'd Whitehall.

Third Gent. I know it;
But 'tis so lately alter'd, that the old name
Is fresh about me.

Sec. Gent. What two reverend bishops Were those that went on each side of the queen?

Third Gent. Stokesly and Gardiner; the
one of Winchester, 100
Newly prefer'd from the king's secretary,
The other, London.

Sec. Gent. He of Winchester
Is held no great good lover of the archbishop's,
The virtuous Crammer.

Third Gent. All the land knows that:
However, yet there is no great breach; when it
comes,
Crammer will find a friend will not shrink from
him.

Sec. Gent. Who may that be, I pray you?
Third Gent. Thomas Cromwell;
A man in much esteem with the king, and truly
A worthy friend. The king has made him master 110

O' the jewel house,
And one, already, of the privy council.

Sec. Gent. He will deserve more.

Third Gent. Yes, without all doubt.
Come, gentlemen, ye shall go my way, which
Is to the court, and there ye shall be my guests:
Something I can command. As I walk thither,
I'll tell ye more.

Both. You may command us, sir. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Kimbolton.

Enter KATHARINE, Dowager, sick; led between GRIFFITH, her gentleman usher, and PATIENCE, her woman.

Grif. How does your grace!
Kath. O Griffith, sick to death!

My legs, like loaden branches, bow to the earth,
Willing to leave their burthen. Reach a chair:
So; now, methinks, I feel a little ease.
Durst thou not tell me, Griffith, as thou led'st
me,

That the great child of honour, Cardinal
Wolsey,

Was dead?

Grif. Yes, madam; but I think your grace,
Out of the pain you suffer'd, gave no ear to't.

Kath. Prithce, good Griffith, tell me how he died:

If well, he stapp'd before me, happily 120

For my example.

Grif. Well, the voice goes, madam:
For after the stout Earl Northumberland Arrested him at York, and brought him forward,

As a man sorely tainted, to his answer,
He fell sick suddenly, and grew so ill
He could not sit his mule.

Kath. Alas, poor man!

Grif. At last, with easy roads, he came to Leicester.

Lodged in the abbey; where the reverend abbot,
With all his covent, honourably received him;
To whom he gave these words, 'O, father abbot,
An old man, broken with the storms of state,
Is come to lay his weary bones among ye;
Give him a little earth for charity!'
So went to bed; where eagerly his sickness
Pursued him still: and, three nights after this,
About the hour of eight, which he himself
Foretold should be his last, full of repentance,
Continual meditations, tears, and sorrows,
He gave his honours to the world again,
His blessed part to heaven, and slept in peace.

Kath. So may he rest; his faults lie gently
on him!

Yet thus far, Griffith, give me leave to speak
him, 131

And yet with charity. He was a man
Of an unbounded stomach, ever ranking
Himself with princes; one that, by suggestion,
Tied all the kingdom; simony was fair-play;
His own opinion was his law: 't' the presence
He would say untruths; and be ever double
Both in his words and meaning: he was never,
But where he meant to ruin, pitiful: 40
His promises were, as he then was, mighty;
But his performance, as he is now, nothing:
(Of his own body he was ill, and gave
The clergy ill example.

Grif. Noble madam,
Men's evil manners live in brass; their virtues
We write in water. May it please your high-
ness

To hear me speak his good now!

Kath. Yes, good Griffith;

I were malicious else.

Grif. This cardinal,
Though from an humble stock, undoubtedly
Was fashion'd to much honour from his cradle.
He was a scholar, and a ripe and good one; 51
Exceeding wise, fair-spoken, and persuading;
Lofty and sour to them that loved him not;
But to those men that sought him sweet as summer.

And though he were untaught in getting,
Which was a sin, yet in bestowing, madam,
He was most princely: ever witness for him
Those twine of learning that he raised in you, Ipswich and Oxford; one of which fell with
him.

Unwilling to outlive the good that did it; 61
The other, though unfinish'd, yet so famous,
So excellent in art, and still so rising,
That Christendom shall ever speak his virtues.
His overthrow heap'd happiness upon him;
For then, and not till then, he felt himself
And found the blessedness of being single.

And, to add greater honours to his age
That man could give him, he died fearing God.

Kath. After my death I wish no other herald.

No other speaker of my living actions,
To keep mine honour from corruption,
But such an honest chronicler as Griffith,
Whom I most hated living, thou hast made me,
With thy religious truth and modesty,
Now in his ashes honour: peace be with him!
Patience, be near me still; and set me lower:
I have not long to trouble thee. Good Griffith,
Cause the musicians play me that sad note
I named my knell, whilst I sit meditating
On that celestial harmony I go to.

[Sad and solemn music.]

Grif. She is asleep: good wench, let's sit down quiet,

For fear we wake her: softly, gentle Patience.

The vision. Enter, solemnly tripping one after another, six personages, clad in white robes, wearing on their heads garlands of bays, and golden vizards on their faces:
branches of bays or palm in their hands.
They first congregate unto her, then dance; and,
at certain changes, the first two hold a spare garland over her head; at which the other four make reverent curvettes; then the two that hold the garland deliver the same to the other next two, who observe the same order in their changes, and holding the garland over her head: which done, they deliver the same garland to the last two, who likewise observe the same order: at which, as it were by inspiration, she makes in her sleep signs of rejoicing, and holdeth up her hands to heaven: and so in their dancing vanish, carrying the garland with them. The music continues.

Kath. Spirits of peace, where are ye? are ye all gone.

And leave me here in wretchedness behind ye?

Grif. Madam, we are here.

Kath. It is not you I call for:
Saw ye none enter since I slept?

Grif. None, madam.

Kath. Not Saw you not, even now, a blessed troop

Invite me to a banquet; whose bright faces
Cast thousand beams upon me, like the sun?

They promised me eternal happiness;
And brought me garlands, Griffith, which I feel
I am not worthy yet to wear: I shall, assuredly,

Grif. I am most joyful, madam, such good visions

Enrich your fancy.

Kath. Did the music leave,
They are harsh and heavy to me. [Music ceases.]

How much has grace been stolen on the sudden?
How long has time been drawn? how pale she looks.

What if an angry deity? Mark her eyes!
How she looks! how she looks! pray, pray,
Heaven comfort her!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. An't like your grace,—
Kath. You are a sorry fellow: too

Deserve we no more reverence?

Grif. You are to blame,
Knowing she will not lose her wanted great-
ness.

To use so rude behaviour; go to, kneel.

Mess. I humbly do entreat your highness'
pardon;

My haste made me unmannerly. There is staying

A gentleman, sent from the king, to see you.

Kath. Admit him entrance, Griffith: but this fellow

Let me ne'er see again.
[Exeunt Griffith and Messenger.]

Re-enter GRIFFITH, with CAPUCIUS.

If my sight fail not,
You should be lord ambassador from the emperor.

My royal nephew, and your name Capucius.

Cap. Madam, the same; your servant.

Kath. O, my lord,
The times and titles now are alter'd strangely

With me since first you knew me. But, I pray
you,

What is your pleasure with me?

Cap. Noble lady,
First, mine own service to your grace; the next,
The king's request that I would visit you;

Who grieves much for your weakness, and by
me

Sends you his princely commendations,
And heartily entreats you take good comfort.

Kath. O my good lord, that comfort comes too late;

'Tis like a paragon after execution:
That gentle physic, given in time, had cur'd
me;

But now I am past all comforts here, but prayers.

How does his highness?

Cap. Madam, in good health.

Kath. So may he ever do! and ever flourish,
When I shall dwell with worms, and my poor
name

Banish'd the kingdom! Patience, is that letter
I caused you write, yet sent away?

Pat. No, madam.
[Giving it to Katherine.]

Kath. Sir, I most humbly pray you to deliver

This to my lord the king.

Cap. Most willing, madam.

Kath. In which I have commended to his goodness

The motel of our chaste loves, his young
daughter:

The dew of heaven fall thick in blessings on
her!

Despatching him to give her virtuous breeding,—
She is young, and of a noble modest nature,
I hope she will deserve well,—and a little
To love her for her mother's sake, that lov'd
him,

Heaven knows how dearly. My next poor petition

Upon my wretched women, that so long
Have follow'd both my fortunes faithfully:
(Of which there is not one, I dare avow,
And now I should not lie, but will deserve,
For virtue and true beauty of the soul,
For honesty and decent carriage,
A right good husband, let him be a noble:
And, sure, those men are happy that shall have em.

The last is, for my men; they are the poorest,
But poverty could never draw 'em from me;
That they may have their wages duly paid 'em,
And something over to remember me by: 151
If heaven had pleased to have given me longer
life

And able means, we had not parted thus.
These are the whole contents: and, good my
lord,

By that you love the dearest in this world,
As you wish Christian peace to souls departed, Stand these poor people's friend, and urge the
king

To do me this last right.
Cap. By heaven, I will,
Or let me lose the fashion of a man!

Kath. I thank you, honest lord. Remember
me 160

In all humility unto his highness:
Say his long trouble now is passing
Out of this world; tell him, in death I bless'd
him,

For so I will. Mine eyes grow dim. Farewell,
My lord. Griffith, farewell. Nay, Patience,
You must not leave me yet: I must to bed:
Call in more women. When I am dead, good
wench,

Let me be used with honour: strew me over
With maiden flowers, that all the world may
know

I was a chaste wife to my grave: embalm me,
Then lay me forth: although unqueen'd, yet
like 171

A queen, and daughter to a king, inter me.
I can no more. [Exeunt, leading Katharine.]

ACT V.

SCENE I. London. A gallery in the palace.

Enter GARDINER, Bishop of Winchester, a Page with a torch before him, met by SIR
THOMAS LOVELL.

Gar. It's one o'clock, boy, is't not?

Boy. It hath struck.

Gar. These should be hours for recreation,
Not for delights: times to repair our nature
With comforting repose, and not for us
To waste these times. Good hour of night, Sir
Thomas!

Whither so late?

Gar. I - primero

With the Duke of Suffolk.

Love. I must to him too,
Before he go to bed. I'll take my leave.

Gar. Not yet, Sir Thomas Lovell. What's
the matter? 10

It seems you are in haste: as if there be
No great offence belongs to't, give your friend
Some touch of your late business: affairs, that walk,

As they say spirits do, at midnight, have
In them a wilder nature than the business
That seeks dispatch by day.

Love. My lord, I love you;
And durst commend a secret to your ear:
Much weightier than this work. The queen's in labour,

They say, in great extremity: and fear'd
She'll with the labour end.

Gar. The fruit she goes with 20
I pray for heartily, that it may find
Good time, and live: but for the stock, Sir
Thomas,

I wish it grubb'd up now. Methinks I could
Love.

(Cry the amen; and yet my conscience says.
She's a good creature, and, sweet lady, decess:
Deserve our better wishes.

Gar. But, sir, sir,
Hear me, Sir Thomas: you're a gentleman
Of mine own way: I know you wise, religious;
And, let me tell you, it will never be well,
Till not, Sir Thomas Lovell, take't of me, 30 Till Cranmer, Cromwell, her two hands, and
she,

Sleep in their graves.

Love. Now, sir, you speak of two
The most remark'd of the kingdom. As for Cromwell,

Reside that of the jewel house, is made master
Of the rolls, and the king's secretary; further,
sir,

Stands in the gap and trade of most preferments,
With which the time will load him. The archbishop

Is the king's hand and tongue; and who dare
speak

One syllable against him!

Gar. Yea, yes, Sir Thomas,
There are that dare; and I myself have ventured
To speak my mind of him: and indeed this
day,

Sir, I may tell it you, I think I have Incensed the lords of the council, that he is
For so I know he is, they know he is.
A most arch heretic, a pestilence

That doth infect the land: with which they moved

Have broken with the king: who hath so far
Given ear to our complaint, of his great grace,
And princely care, forwarding them full redress,
Our reasons told before him, hath commanded
To-morrow morning to the council-board, Sir
His be converted. He's a man we must
Thomas,

And we must root him out. From the house
I hinder you the king; good night, Sir Thomas.

Love. Many good nights, my lord, and your servant. [Exeunt Gardiner and Page.]

Enter the KING and SUFFOLK.

King. Charles, I will play no more to-night; My mind's not on't; you are too hard for me.

Suf. Sir, I did never win of you before.

King. But little, Charles; Nor shall not, when my fancy's on my play. Go

Now, Lovell, from the queen what is the news?

Lov. I could not personally deliver to her What you commanded me, but by her woman I sent your message; who return'd her thanks In the great'st humbleness, and desired your highness

Most heartily to pray for her.

King. What say'st thou, ha! To pray for her! what, is she crying out!

Lov. So said her woman; and that her sufferance made Almost each pang a death.

King. Alas, good lady! Suf. God safely quit her of her burthen, and With gentle travail, to the gladdening of Your highness with an heir!

King. 'Tis midnight, Charles; Prithee, to bed; and in thy prayers remember The estate of my poor queen. Leave me alone; For I must think of that which company Would not be friendly to.

Suf. I wish your highness A quiet night; and my good mistress will Remember in my prayers.

King. Charles, good night. [Exit Suffolk.]

Enter SIR ANTHONY DENNY.

Well, sir, what follows?

Den. Sir, I have brought my lord the archbishop,

As you commanded me.

King. Ha! Canterbury?

Den. Ay, my good lord.

King. 'Tis true: where is he, Denny?

Den. He attends your highness' pleasure.

King. Bring him to us.

[Exit Denny.]

Lov. [Aside] This is about that which the bishop spake:

I am happily come hither.

Re-enter DENNY, with CRANMER.

King. Avoid the gallery. [Lovell seems to stay.] Ha! I have said. Be gone.

What! [Re-enter Lovell and Denny.]

Cran. [Aside] I am fearful: wherefore frowns he thus?

'Tis his aspect of terror. All's not well.

King. How now, my lord! you do desire to know

Whence I sent for you.

Cran. [Kneeling] It is my duty To stand your highness' pleasure.

King. Pray you, arise, My good and gracious Lord of Canterbury.

Come, you and I must walk a turn together; I have news to tell you: come, come, give me

Some news.

Cran. My lord, I grieve at what I speak, And am loath to repeat what follows:

I have come unwillingly, of late

Heard many grievous, I do say, my lord, Grievous complaints of you; which, being considered,

Have moved us and our council, that you shall This morning come before us; where, I know,

You cannot with such freedom purge yourself, But that, till further trial in those

Which will require your answer, you must take Your patience to you, and be well attended

To make your house our Tower: you a brother of us,

It fits we thus proceed, or else no will Would come against you.

Cran. [Kneeling] I humbly thank your highness;

And am right glad to catch this good occasion Most thoroughly to be winnow'd, where my chaff

And corn shall fly asunder: for, I know, There's none stands under more calumnious tongues Than I myself, poor man.

King. Stand up, good Canterbury: Thy truth and thy integrity is rooted

In us, thy friend: give me thy hand, stand up: Prithee, let's walk. Now, by my holiday,

What manner of man are you! My lord, I look'd

You would have given me your petition, that I should have taken some pains to bring together

Yourselves and your accusers; and to have heard you,

Without indurance, further.

Cran. Most dread liege, The good I stand on is my truth and honesty:

If they shall fail, I, with mine enemies, Will triumph o'er my person; which I weigh not, Being of those virtues vacant. I fear nothing What can be said against me.

King. Know you not How your state stands i' the world, with the whole world?

Your enemies are many, and not small; their practices

Must bear the same proportion; and not ever The justice and the truth o' the question carries

The due o' the verdict with it; at what ease Might corrupt minds procure knaves as corrupt

To swear against you! such things have been done.

You are potentially opposed; and with a malice Of as great size. Ween you of better luck,

I mean, in perjured witness, than your master, Whose minister you are, whilst here he liv'd

Upon this naughty earth! Go to, go to; You take a precipice for no leap of danger,

And woo your own destruction.

Cran. God and your majesty Protect mine innocence, or I fall into

The trap is laid for me!

King. Be of good cheer; They shall no more prevail than we give way to.

Keep comfort to you; and this morning see You do appear before them: if they shall chance, In charging you with matters, to commit you.

The best possessions to the contrary Fail not to use, and with what vehemency

The occasion shall instruct you: if entreaties
Will render you no remedy, this ring 130
I deliver them, and your appeal to us
There make before them. Look, the good man weeps!
He's honest, on mine honour. God's blest
mother!
I swear he is true-hearted; and a soul
None better in my kingdom. (Set you gone,
And do as I have bid you. [Exit Cranmer.]
He has strangled
His language in his tears.

Enter Old Lady, Lovell following.

Grat. [Within] Come back: what mean
you?

Old L. I'll not come back; the tidings that I bring
Will make my boldness manners. Now, good angels 139
Fly o'er thy royal head, and shade thy person
Under their blessed wings!

King. Now, by thy looks
I guess thy message. Is the queen deliver'd?
Say, ay; and of a boy.

Old L. Ay, ay, my liege;
And of a lovely boy: the God of heaven
Both now and ever bless her! 'tis a girl,
Promises boys hereafter. Sir, your queen Desires your visitation, and to be Acquainted with this stranger: 'tis as like you
As cherry is to cherry.

King. Lovell!

Lor. Sir?

King. Give her an hundred marks. I'll to the queen. [Exit.]

Old L. An hundred marks! By this light,
I'll ha' more. 171

An ordinary groom is for such payment.
I will have more, or scold it out of him.
Said I for this, the girl was like to him?
I will have more, or else unmay't; and now,
While it is hot, I'll put it to the issue.

[Exitant.]

SCENE II. Before the council-chamber.

Pursuivants, Pages, &c. attending.

Enter CRANMER, Archbishop of Canterbury.

Cran. I hope I am not too late; and yet the gentleman,
That was sent to me from the council, pray'd
me
To make great haste. All fast! what means this? Ho!
Who waits there! Sure, you know me!

Enter Keeper.

Keep. Yes, my lord
But yet I cannot help you.
Cran. Why?

Enter DOCTOR BUTTS.

Keep. Your grace must wait till you be call'd for.
Cran. So.
Butts. [Aside] This is a piece of malice. I am glad

I came this way so happily: the king will understand it presently. [Exit.]

Butts. [Aside] 'Tis Butts, 180
The king's physician: as he pass'd along,
How earnestly he cast his eyes upon me!
Pray heaven, he sound not my disgrace! For certain,

This is of purpose laid by some that hate me—
God turn their hearts! I never sought their malice—
To quench mine honour: they would shame to make me
Wait else at door, a fellow-counsellor,
'Mong boys, groomes, and lackeys. But their
pleasures
Must be fulfill'd, and I attend with patience.

Enter the KING and BUTTS at a window above.

Butts. I'll show your grace the strangest sight—

King. What's that, Butts? so

Butts. I think your highness saw this many a day.

King. Body o' me, where is it?

Butts. There, my lord.
The high promotion of his grace of Canterbury;

Who holds his state at door, 'mongst paravi-vants,
Pages, and footboys.

King. Ha! 'tis he, indeed:
Is this the honour they do one another?
'Tis well there's one above 'em yet. I had thought

They had parted so much honesty among 'em,
At least, good manners, as not thus to suffer
A man of his place, and so near our favour, so
To dance attendance on their lordships' pleasures.

And at the door too, like a post with packets.
By holy Mary, Butts, there's a knavery:
Let 'em alone, and draw the curtain close!
We shall hear more anon. [Exitant.]

SCENE III. The Council-Chamber.

*Enter LORD CHANCELLOR; places himself at the upper end of the table on the left hand;
a seat being left void above him, as for CANTERBURY'S seat. DUKE OF SUFFOLK,
DUKE OF NORFOLK, SURREY, LORD CRAN-MERLAIN, GARDINER, seat themselves in order on each side. CROMWELL at lower end, as secretary. Keeper at the door.*

Chan. Speak to the business, master secretary:

Why are we met in council?

Crom. Please your honour,
The chief cause concerns his grace of Canterbury.

Gar. Has he had knowledge of it?

Crom. Yes.
Nor. Who waits there?

Keep. Without, my noble lord?

Gar. Yes.
Keep. My lord's command?

And has done half an hour, to know your pleasure.

Cham. Let him come in.

Keep. Your grace may enter now.

[Cranmer enters and approaches the council-table.]

Cham. My good lord archbishop, I'm very

sorry

To sit here at this present, and behold

That chair stand empty: but we all are men, so

In our own natures frail, and capable

Of our flesh; few are angels: out of which frailty

And want of wisdom, you, that best should teach us,

Have misdeem'd yourself, and not a little,

Toward the king first, then his laws, in fillinz

The whole realm, by your teaching and your chaplains.

For so we are inform'd, with new opinions,

Diverse and dangerous: which are heresies,

And, not reform'd, may prove pernicious. 19

Gar. Which reformation must be sudden too,

My noble lords: for those that tame wild horses

Peace 'em not in their hands to make 'em gentle,

But stop their mouths with stubborn bits, and spur 'em,

Till they obey the manage. If we suffer,

Out of our easiness and childish pity

To one man's honour, this contagious sickness,

Farwell all physica: and what follows then?

Comotions, upstarts, with a general taint

Of the whole state: as, of late days, our neighbours,

The upper Germany, can dearly witness, 30

Yet freshly pitied in our memories.

Cran. My good lords, hitherto, in all the progress

Both of my life and office, I have labour'd,

And with no little study, that my teaching

And the strong course of my authority

Might go one way, and safely; and the end

Was ever, to do well: nor is there living,

I speak it with a single heart, my lords,

A man that more detests, more stirs against,

Both in his private conscience and his place, 40

Defectors of a public peace, than I do.

Fear heaven, the king may never find a heart

With less allegiance in it! Men that make

Heavy and crooked malice nourishment

Do so taint the best. I do beseech your lordships,

That in this case of justice, my accusers,

Be what they will, may stand forth face to face,

And stoutly urge against me.

Gar. Nay, my lord,

That cannot be: you are a counsellor,

And, by that virtue, no man dare accuse you. 50

Gar. My lord, because we have business of more moment,

We will be short with you. 'Tis his highness'

pleasure,

And our consent, for better trial of you,

That you be committed to the Tower;

Which being but a private man again,

You shall know many dare accuse you boldly,

And, I fear, you are provided for.

Cham. Ah, my good Lord of Winchester, I

You are always my good friend; if your will

pass,

I shall both find your lordship judge and juror,

You are so merciful: I see your end; 61

'Tis my undoing: love and meekness, lord,

Become a churchman better than ambition:

Win straying souls with modesty again,

Cast none away. That I shall clear myself,

Lay all the weight ye can upon my

I make as little doubt, as you do con-

In doing daily wrongs. I could say more,

But reverence to your calling makes me modest.

Gar. My lord, my lord, you are a secretary, 70

That's the plain truth: your painted gloss discovers,

To men that understand you, words and weakness.

Cran. My Lord of Winchester, you are a little,

By your good favour, too sharp: men so noble,

However faulty, yet should find respect

For what they have been 'tis a cruelty

To load a falling man.

Gar. Good master secretary,

I cry your honour mercy; you may, worst

Of all this table, say so.

Cran. Why, my lord?

Gar. Do not I know you for a favourer 80

Of this new sect? ye are not sound.

Cran. Not sound?

Gar. Not sound, I say.

Cran. Would you were half so honest!

Men's prayers then would seek you, not their fears.

Gar. I shall remember this bold language.

Cran. Du.

Remember your bold life too.

Cham. This is too much:

Forbear, for shame, my lords.

Gar. I have done.

Cran. And I.

Cham. Then thus for you, my lord: it stands agreed.

I take it, by all voices, that forthwith

You be convey'd to the Tower a prisoner: 90

There to remain till the king's further pleasure

Be known unto us: are you all agreed, lords?

All. We are.

Cran. Is there no other way of mercy,

But I must needs to the Tower, my lords?

Gar. What other

Would you expect? you are strangely troublesome.

Let some o' the guard be ready there.

Enter Guard.

Cran. For me?

Must I go like a traitor thither?

Gar. Receive him,

And see him safe to the Tower.

Cham. Stay, good my lords,

I have a little yet to say. Look there, my

lords;

By virtue of that ring, I take my oath

Out of the grips of cruel men, and give it 100

To a most noble judge, the king my master.

Cham. This is the king's ring.

Sur. 'Tis no counterfeit.

Suf. 'Tis this right ring, by heaven: I told ye all,
When we first put this dangerous stone a-rolling.

'Twould fall upon ourselves.

Nor. Do you think, my lords,
The king will suffer but the little finger
Of this man to be vex'd?

Chas. 'Tis now too certain:
How much more is his life in value with him!
Would I were fairly out on't!

Cran. My mind gave me,
In seeking tales and informations 110
Against this man, whose honesty the devil
And his disciples only envy at,
Ye blew the fire that burns ye: now have at ye!

Enter KING, frowning on them; takes his seat.

Gar. Dread sovereign, how much are we bound to heaven

In daily thanks, that gave us such a prince;
Not only good and wise, but most religious:
One that, in all obedience, makes the church
The chief aim of his honour; and, to strengthen
That holy duty, out of dear respect,
His royal self in judgement comes to bear. 120
The cause betwixt her and this great offender.

King. You were ever good at sudden commendations.

Bishop of Winchester. But know, I come not
To hear such flattery now, and in my presence;
They are too thin and bare to hide offences.
To me you cannot reach, you play the spaniel,
And think with wagging of your tongue to win
me;

But, whatsoever thou takest me for, I'm sure
Thou hast a cruel nature and a bloody.

[To Cranmer] Good man, sit down. Now let me see the proudest 130
He, that dares most, but wag his finger at thee:
By all that's holy, he had better starve
Than but once think this place becomes thee
not.

Suf. May it please your grace,—

King. No, sir, it does not please me.
I had thought I had had men of some understanding

And wisdom of my council; but I find none.
Was it discretion, lords, to let this man,
This good man,—few of you deserve that title,—
This honest man, wait like a housey footboy
At chamber-door? and one as great as you are?
Why, what a shame was this! Did my commission 141

Bid ye so far forget yourselves! I gave ye Power as he was a counsellor to try him,
Not as a grocer; there's some of ye, I see,
More out of malice than integrity,
Would try him to the utmost, had ye mean;
Which ye shall never have while I live.

Chas. Thus far,
My most dread sovereign, may it like your
grace
To let my tongue excuse all. What was pur-posed

Concerning this imprisonment, was rather, 150
If there be faith in men, meant for his trial,

And fair purgation to the world, than malice,
I'm sure, in me.

King. Well, well, my lords, respect him;
Take him, and use him well, he's worthy of it,
I will say thus much for him, if a prince

May be beholding to a subject, I Am, for his love and service, so to him,

Make me no more ado, but all embrace him:
Be friends, for shame, my lords! My Lord of Canterbury, 160

I have a suit which you must not deny me;
That is, a fair young maid that yet wants baptism,

You must be godfather, and answer for her.

Cran. The greatest monarch now alive may glory

In such an honour: how may I deserve it,
That am a poor and humble subject to you?

King. Come, come, my lord, you'd spare your spoons: you shall have two noble partners with you; the old Duchess of Norfolk, and Lady Marquess Dorset: will these please you? 170
Once more, my Lord of Winchester, I charge you,
Embrace and love this man.

Gar. With a true heart
And brother-love I do it.

Cran. And let heaven
Witness, how dear I hold this confirmation.

King. Good man, those joyful tears show thy true heart:

The common voice, I see, is verified
Of thee, which says thus, 'Do my Lord of Canterbury

A shrewd turn, and he is your friend for ever.'
(Come, lords, we trifle time away: I long

To have this young one made a Christian. 180
As I have made ye one, lords, one remain;
So I grow stronger, you more honour gain.

SCENE IV. The palace yard.

Noise and tumult within. Enter Porter and his Man.

Port. You'll leave your noise to rascals: do you take the court for a garden? ye rude slaves, leave your railing.

[Within] Good master porter, I belong to the laries.

Port. Belong to the gallows, and be hang'd, ye rogue! Is this a place to roar in? Fetch me a dozen crab-tree staves, and strong ones: these are but switches to 'em. I'll scratch your heads:
you must be seeing christenings! do you look for ale and cakes here, you rude rascals!

Man. Pray, sir, be patient: 'tis as much impossible—

Unless we sweep 'em from the door with cannons—

To scatter 'em, as 'tis to make 'em whole.
On May-day morning; which will serve us
We may as well push against a rock,
sir, sir.

Port. How got they in, and be hang'd!

Man. Alas, I know not: how shall I tell you?

As much as one would expect of a fool.
You see the poor remainder—could I tell you,

I made no spare, sir.

Port. You did nothing, sir.
Man. I am not Samson, nor Sir Guy, nor Colbrand.

To mow 'em down before me: but if I spared any

That had a head to hit, either young or old, He or she, cuckold or cuckold-maker, Let me ne'er hope to see a chine again; And that I would not for a cow, God save her!

[Within.] Do you hear, master porter?

Port. I shall be with you presently, good master puppy. Keep the door close, sirrah. 30

Man. What would you have me do?

Port. What should you do, but knock 'em down by the dozens? Is this Moorfields to muster in? or have we some strange Indian with the great tool come to court, the women so besiege us? Bless me, what a fry of fornication is at door! On my Christian conscience, this one christening will begot a thousand; here will be father, godfather, and all together. 35

Man. The spoons will be the bigger, sir. There is a fellow somewhat near the door, he should be a brazier by his face, for, o' my conscience, twenty of the dog-days now reign in's nose; all that stand about him are under the line, they need no other penance: that fire-drake did I hit three times on the head, and three times was his nose discharged against me; he stands there, like a mortar-piece, to blow us. There was a haberdasher's wife of small wit near him, that railed upon me till her pinked porringer fell off her head, for kindling such a combustion in the state. I missed the meteor once, and hit that woman; who cried out 'Clubs!' when I might see from far some forty truncheoners draw to her succour, which were the hope o' the Strand, where she was quartered. They fell on; I made good my place: at length they came to the broom-staff to me; I defied 'em still: when suddenly a file of boys behind 'em, loose shot, delivered such a shower of pebbles, that I was fain to draw mine honour in, and let 'em win the work: the devil was amongst 'em, I think, surely.

Port. These are the youths that thunder at a playhouse, and fight for luten apples; that no audience, but the tribulation of Tower-hill, or the fumes of Limehouse, their dear brothers, are able to endure. I have some of 'em in Lincolns Patrum, and there they are like to dance these three days; besides the running banquet of two headles that is to come. 40

Enter LORD CHAMBERLAIN.

Cham. Mercy o' me, what a multitude are here!

They grow still too; from all parts they are — a fair here! Where are these

These gay knaves? Ye have made a fine hand,

There's a trim public let in: are all these
I shall

Great store of room, no doubt, left for the ladies,

When they pass back from the christening.

Port. An't please your honour, We are but men; and what so many may do, Not being torn a-piece, we have done: 35

An army cannot rule 'em.
Cham. As I live, If the king blame me for't, I'll lay ye all By the heels, and suddenly; and on your heads Clap round fines for neglect: ye are lazy knaves; And here ye lie baiting of bombards, when Ye should do service. Hark! the trumpets sound;

They're come already from the christening: Go, break among the press, and find a way out To let the troop pass fairly; or I'll find A Marshalsea shall hold ye play these two months. 40

Port. Make way there for the princess.

Man. You great fellow, Stand close up, or I'll make your head ache.

Port. You! the carnlet, get up o' the rail; I'll peck you o'er the pales else. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. The palace.

Enter trumpets, sounding; then two Aldermen, LORD MAYOR, GARTER, CRANMER, DUKE OF NORFOLK with his marshal's staff, DUKE OF SUFFOLK, two Noblemen bearing great standing-bowls for the christening-gifts; then four Noblemen bearing a canopy, under which the DUCHESS OF NORFOLK, godmother, bearing the child richly habited in a mantle, &c., train borne by a Lady; then follows the MARCHIONESS DORSET, the other godmother, and Ladies. The troop pass once about the stage, and GARTER speaks.

Gart. Heaven, from thy endless goodness, send prosperous life, long, and ever happy, to the high and mighty princess of England, Elizabeth!

Flourish. Enter KING and Guard.

Cran. [Kneeling.] And to your royal grace, and the good queen,

My noble partners, and myself, thus pray: All comfort, joy, in this most gracious lady, Heaven ever laid up to make parents happy, May hourly fall upon ye!

King. Thank you, good lord archbishop: What is her name?

Cran. Elizabeth.
King. Stand up, lord. 45

[The King kisses the child.]
With this kiss take my blessing: God protect thee!

Into whose hand I give thy life.

Cran. Amen.
King. My noble guests, ye have been too prodigal:

I thank ye heartily; so shall this lady, When she has so much English.

Cran. Let me speak, sir.
For heaven now bids me; and the words I utter

Let none think flattery, for they'll find 'em
truth.

This royal infant—heaven still move about
her!

Though in her cradle, yet now promises
Upon this land a thousand thousand blessings,
Which time shall bring to ripeness: she shall
be—

But few now living can behold that goodness—
A pattern to all princes living with her,
And all that shall succeed: Saba was never
More covetous of wisdom and fair virtue
Than this pure soul shall be: all princely graces.

That mould up such a mighty piece as this is,
With all the virtues that attend the good,
Shall still be doubled on her: truth shall nurse
her,

Holy and heavenly thoughts still counsel her:
She shall be loved and fear'd: her own shall bless her;

Her foes shake like a field of beaten corn,
And hang their heads with sorrow: good grows
with her:

In her days every man shall eat in safety,
Under his own vine, what he plants; and sing
The merry songs of peace to all his neighbours:
God shall be truly known; and those about her
From her shall read the perfect ways of honour,
And by those claim their greatness, not by
blood.

Nor shall this peace sleep with her: but as when

The bird of wonder dies, the maiden phoenix,
Her ashes new create another heir,
As great in admiration as herself;
So shall she leave her blessedness to one,
When heaven shall call her from this cloud of darkness.

Who from the sacred ashes of her honour
Shall star-like rise, as great in fame as she was,
And so stand fix'd: peace, plenty, love, truth,
terror,

That were the servants to this chosen infant,
Shall then be his, and like a vine grow to him
Wherever the bright sun of heaven shall shine.
His honour and the greatness of his name Shall be, and make new nations: he shall
flourish,

And, like a mountain cedar, reach his branches

To all the plains about him: our children's children

Shall see this, and bless heaven.

King. Thou speakest wonders.
Cran. She shall be, to the happiness of England,

An aged princess; many days shall see her,
And yet no day without a deed to crown it.

Would I had known no more! but she must
die,

She must, the saints must have her; yet a virgin,

A most unspotted lily shall she pass
To the ground, and all the world shall mourn
her.

King. O lord archbishop,
Thou hast made me now a man! never, before
This happy child, did I get any thing:

This oracle of comfort has so pleased me,
That when I am in heaven I shall desire

To see what this child does, and praise my Maker.

I thank ye all. To you, my good lord mayor, ye
And your good brethren, I am much beholding;

I have received much honour by your presence,
And ye shall find me thankful. Lead the way,
lords:

Ye must all see the queen, and she must thank ye.

She will be sick else. This day, no man think
Has business at his house; for all shall stay:

This little one shall make it holiday. [Exeunt.]

EPILOGUE.

'Tis ten to one this play can never please
All that are here: some come to take their ease,

And sleep an act or two; but those, we fear,
We have frighted with our trumpets; so, 'tis clear,

They'll say 'tis naught: others, to hear the city
Abused extremely, and to cry 'That's witty!'

Which we have not done neither: that, I fear,
All the expected good we're like to hear

For this play at this time, is only in
The merciful construction of good women: so

For such a one we show'd 'em: if they smile,
And say 'twill do, I know, within a while

All the best men are ours; for 'tis ill hap,
If they hold when their ladies bid 'em clap.

SCENE: Troy, and the Grecian camp before it.

PROLOGUE.

In Troy, there lies the scene. From isles of Greece

The princes orgulous, their high blood chafed,
Have to the port of Athens sent their ships,
Fraught with the ministers and instruments

Of cruel war: sixty and nine, that wore
Their crowns regal, from the Athenian bay Put forth toward Phrygia; and their vow is

To sack Troy, within whose strong immures
The staid Helen, Menelaus' queen, With wanton Paris sleeps; and that's the general. 20

To Tenedos they come;
And the deep-drawing barks do there discharge
Their warlike freightage: now on Dardan

plains
The fresh and yet unbruised Greeks do pitch
Their brave pavilions: Priam's six-gated city,
Dardanus, and Tymbra, Helias, Chetras, Troien,
And Antenorides, with many staples

And responsive and fulfilling bolts,
r up the nose of Troy.

Expectation, tickling skittish spirits, sons and other side, Trojan and Greek,
sets all on hazard: and hither am I come to see the issue, but not in confidence that's part of actor's voice, but suited to audience as our argument,

to show, fair beholders, that our play

Leaps o'er the vaunt and firstlings of those
broils,

Beginning in the middle, starting thence away
To what may be digested in a play.

Like or find fault; do as your pleasures are: 30
Now good or bad, 'tis but the chance of war.

ACT I.

SCENE I. Troy. Before Priam's palace.

Enter TROILUS armed, and PANDARUS.

Tro. Call here my varlet; I'll unarm again:
Why should I war without the walls of Troy,

That find such cruel battle here within?
Each Trojan that is master of his heart,

Let him to field; Troilus, alas! hath none.
Pan. Will this gear ne'er be mended!

Tro. The Greeks are strong; and, skilful to their strength,

Pierce to their skill and to their fierceness
valiant;

But I am weaker than a woman's tear,
Tamer than sleep, fonder than ignorance, 20

Less valiant than the virgin in the night,
And skillless as unpractised infancy.

Pan. Well, I have told you enough of this:
for my part, I'll not meddle nor make no further. He that will have a cake out of the wheat must needs tarry the grinding.

Tro. Have I not tarried?
Pan. Ay, the grinding; but you must tarry
the bolting.

Tro. Have I not tarried?

Pan. Ay, the boding, but you must tarry
the leavering.

Tro. Still have I tarried.

Pan. Ay, to the leavering; but here's yet in the word 'hereafter' the kneading, the making of the cake, the heating of the oven and the baking; nay, you must stay the cooling too, or you may chance to burn your lips.

Tro. Patience herself, what goddess e'er
she be,

Doth lesser blench at sufferance than I do.

At Priam's royal table do I sit;

And when fair Cressid comes into my
thoughts,—

So, traitor! 'When she comes!' When is she thence?

Pan. Well, she looked yesternight fairer than ever I saw her look, or any woman else.

Tro. I was about to tell thee:—when my
heart,

As welked with a sigh, would rive in twain,
Lo! Hector or my father should perceive me,
I have, as when the sun doth light a storm,
Buried this sigh in wrinkle of a smile:

But sorrow, that is couch'd in seeming gladness,
Is like that mirth fate turns to sudden sadness.

Pan. An her hair were not somewhat darker than Helen's—well, go to—there were no more comparison between the women: but, for my part, she is my kinswoman; I would not, as they term it, praise her: but I would somebody had heard her talk yesterday, as I did. I will not dispraise your sister Cassandra's wit, but—

Tro. O Pandarus! I tell thee, Pandarus,—
When I do tell thee, there my hopes lie drown'd,

Repy not in how many fathoms deep
"they lie drown'd." I tell thee I am mad

In Cressid's love: thou answer'st 'she is fair';
I pour'd in the open ulcer of my heart

Her eyes, her hair, her cheek, her gait, her
voice,

Handiest in thy discourse, O, that her hand,
In whose comparison all whites are ink,

Writing their own reproach, to whose soft scizure

The cygnet's down is harsh and spirit of sense
Hard as the palm of ploughman: this thou

tell'st me,

As true thou tell'st me, when I say I love her;
But, saying thus, instead of oil and balm,

Thou lay'st in every gash that love hath given
me

The knife that made it.

Pan. I speak no more than truth.

Tro. Thou dost not speak so much.

Pan. Faith, I'll not meddle in't. Let her be as she is: if she be fair, 'tis the better for her; an she be not, she has the mends in her own hands.

Tro. Good Pandarus, how now, Pandarus?

Pan. I have had ray labour for my travail;
My thoughts on of her and my thoughts on of you;
gone between and between, but small thanks for my labour.

Tro. What, art thou angry, Pandarus? what,
with me?

Pan. Because she's kin to me, therefore she's not so fair as Helen; an she were not kin to me, she would be as fair on Friday as Helen is on Sunday. But what care I? I care not an she were a black-a-moor; 'tis all one
to me.

Tro. Say I she is not fair?

Pan. I do not care whether you do or no.
She's a fool to stay behind her father; let her to the Greeks; and so I'll tell her the next time I see her; for my part, I'll meddle now make no more of the matter.

Tro. Pandarus,—

Pan. Not I.

Tro. Sweet Pandarus,—

Pan. Pray you, speak no more to me: I will leave all as I found it, and there an end. 91

[Exit Pandarus. An alarm.

Tro. Peace, you ungracious clamour! peace, rude sounds!

Fools on both sides! Helen must needs be fair,
When with your blood you daily paint her thus.

I cannot fight upon this argument;
It is too starved a subject for my sword.

But Pandarus,—O gods, how do you plague me!
I cannot come to Cressid but by Pandar;

And he's as tetchy to be woo'd to woo,
As she is stubborn-chaste against all suit. 100

Tell me, Apollo, for thy Daphne's love,
What Cressid is, what Pandar, and what we?

Her bed is India; there she lies, a pearl:
Between our Ilium and where she resides,

Let it be call'd the wild and wandering flood,
Onself the merchant, and this sailing Pandar

Our doubtful hope, our convoy and our bark.

Alarm. Enter ÆNEAS.

Æne. How now, Prince Troilus! wherefore not afield?

Tro. Because not there: this woman's answer sorts,

For womanish it is to be from thence. 110
What news, Æneas, from the field to-day?

Æne. That Paris is returned home and hurt.

Tro. By whom, Æneas?

Æne. Troilus, by Menelaus.

Tro. Let Paris bleed: 'tis but a scar to honour;
Paris is gored with Menelaus' horn. [Alarm.

Æne. Hark, what good sport is out of town
to-day!

Tro. Better at home, if 'would I might'
were 'may.'

But to the sport abroad: are you bound thither?

Æne. In all swift haste.

Tro. Come, go we then together. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. The same. A street.

Enter CRESSIDA and ALEXANDER.

Cres. Who were these went by?

Alex. Queen Hecuba and Priam.

Cres. And whither go they?

Alex. Up to the wall's summit.

Whose height compass'd as subject all the walls,
To see the battle. Hector, where's he?

Is, as a virtue, first, to-day was slain:
He came, and he was slain, and he was slain.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA

[ACT I

And, like as there were husbandry in war,
Before the sun rose he was harness'd light,
And to the field goes he; where every flower
Did, as a prophet, weep what it forecast
In Hector's wrath.

Crea. What was his cause of anger?

Alex. The noise goes, this: there is among the Greeks
A lord of Trojan blood, nephew to Hector;
They call him Ajax.

Crea. Good; and what of him?

Alex. They say he is a very man per se,
And stands alone.

Crea. So do all men, unless they are drunk, sick, or have no legs.

Alex. This man, lady, hath robbed many beasts of their particular additions; he is as valiant as the lion, churlish as the bear, slow as the elephant: a man into whom nature hath so crowded humours that his valour is crushed into folly, his folly sauced with discretion:
there is no man hath a virtue that he hath not a glimpse of, nor any man an attain but he carries some stain of it: he is melancholy without cause, and merry against the hair: he hath the joints of every thing, but every thing so out of joint that he is a gouty Briareus, many hands and no use, or purblind Argus, all eyes and no sight.

Crea. But how should this man, that makes me smile, make Hector angry?

Alex. They say he yesterday coped Hector in the battle and struck him down, the disdain and shame whereof hath ever since kept Hector fasting and waking.

Crea. Who comes here?

Alex. Madam, your uncle Pandarus.

Enter PANDARUS.

Crea. Hector's a gallant man.

Alex. As may be in the world, lady.

Pan. What's that? what's that?

Crea. Good morrow, uncle Pandarus.

Pan. Good morrow, cousin Cressid: what do you talk of? Good morrow, Alexander.
How do you, cousin? When were you at Ilium?

Crea. This morning, uncle.

Pan. What were you talking of when I came? Was Hector armed and gone ere ye came to Ilium? Helen was not up, was she?

Crea. Hector was gone, but Helen was not up.

Pan. Even so: Hector was stirring early.

Crea. That were we talking of, and of his anger.

Pan. Was he angry?

Crea. So he says here.

Pan. True, he was so: I know the cause too: he'll lay about him to-day, I can tell them that; and there's Troilus will not come for behind him: let them take heed of Troilus,
I can tell them that too.

Crea. What is he angry too?

Pan. Who, Troilus? Troilus is the better man of the two.

Crea. Further: there's no comparison.

Pan. What, not between Troilus and Hector?
Do you know a man if you see him?

Crea. Ay, if I ever saw him before and knew
him.

Pan. Well, I say Troilus is Troilus.

Crea. Then you say as I say; for, I am sure,
he is not Hector.

Pan. No, nor Hector is not Troilus in some degree.

Crea. 'Tis just to each of them; he is himself.

Pan. Himself! Alas, poor Troilus! I would he were.

Crea. So he is.

Pan. Condition, I had gone barefoot to India.
Crea. He is not Hector.

Pan. Himself! no, he's not himself: would a' were himself! Well, the gods are above;
time must friend or end: well, Troilus, well:
I would my heart were in her body. No,
Hector is not a better man than Troilus.

Crea. Excuse me.

Pan. He is elder.

Crea. Pardon me, pardon me.

Pan. Th' other's not come to't; you shall tell me another tale, when th' other's come to't.
Hector shall not have his wit this year.

Crea. He shall not need it, if he have his own.

Pan. Nor his qualities.

Crea. No matter.

Pan. Nor his beauty.

Crea. 'Twould not become him; his own's
better.

Pan. You have no judgement, niece: Helen herself swore th' other day, that Troilus, for a brown favour—for so 'tis, I must confess,—not brown neither,—

Crea. No, but brown.

Pan. Faith, to say truth, brown and not brown.

Crea. To say the truth, true and not true.

Pan. She praised his complexion above
Paris.

Crea. Why, Paris hath colour enough.

Pan. So he has.

Crea. Then Troilus should have too much:
if she praised him above, his complexion is higher than his; he having colour enough, and the other higher, is too flaming a praise for a good complexion. I had as lief Helen's golden tongue had commended Troilus for a copper nose.

Pan. I swear to you, I think Helen loves him better than Paris.

Crea. Then she's a merry Greek indeed.

Pan. Nay, I am sure she does. She came to him th' other day into the compassed window, —and, you know, he has not past three or four hairs on his chin,—

Crea. Indeed, a tapestry's arithmetic may soon bring his particulars therein to a total.

Pan. Why, he is very young; and yet will be, within three pound, lift as much as his brother Hector.

Crea. Is he so young a man and so old a lifter?

Pan. But to prove to you that Helen loves him; she came and puts me her white hand to his cloven chin—

Cres. Juno have mercy! how came it cloven?

Pan. Why, you know, 'tis dimpled: I think his smiling becomes him better than any man in all Phrygia.

Cres. O, he smiles valiantly.

Pan. Does he not?

Cres. O yes, an' 'twere a cloud in autumn.

Pan. Why, go to, then: but to prove to you that Helen loves Troilus,— Cres. Troilus will stand to the proof, if you'll prove it so.

Pan. Troilus! why, he esteems her no more than I esteem an addle egg.

Cres. If you love an addle egg as well as you love an idle head, you would eat chickens if the shell.

Pan. I cannot choose but laugh, to think how she tickled his chin: indeed, she has a marvellous white hand, I must needs confess—

Cres. Without the rack.

Pan. And she takes upon her to spy a white hair on his chin.

Cres. Alas, poor chin! many a wart is richer.

Pan. But there was such laughing! Queen Ilecuba laughed that her eyes ran o'er.

Cres. With mill-stones.

Pan. And Cassandra laughed.

Cres. But there was more temperate fire under the pot of her eyes: did her eyes run over too?

Pan. And Hector laughed.

Cres. At what was all this laughing?

Pan. Marry, at the white hair that Helen spied on Troilus' chin.

Cres. An't had been a green hair, I should have laughed too.

Pan. They laughed not so much at the hair as at his pretty answer.

Cres. What was his answer?

Pan. Quoth she, 'Here's but two and fifty hairs on your chin, and one of them is white.'

Cres. This is her question.

Pan. That's true; make no question of that. 'Two and fifty hairs, quoth he, and one white: that white hair is my father, and all the rest are his sons.' 'Jupiter!' quoth she, 'which of these hairs is Paris my husband?' 'The forked one,' quoth he, 'pluck't out, and give it him.' But there was such laughing! and Helen so blushed, and Paris so chafed, and all the rest so laughed, that it passed.

Cres. So let it now; for it has been a great while going by.

Pan. Well, cousin, I told you a thing yesterday; think on't.

Cres. So I do.

Pan. I'll be sworn 'tis true; he will weep you, an' 'twere a man-born in April.

Cres. And I'll spring up in his tears, an' 'twere a nettle against May.

[A retreat sounded.

Pan. Hark! they are coming from the field: all we stand up here, and see them as they are toward Ilum! good niece, do, sweet niece, aid.

Cres. At your pleasure.

Pan. Here, here, here's an excellent place; here we may see most bravely: I'll tell you them all by their names as they pass by; but mark Troilus above the rest.

Cres. Speak not so loud.

ÆNEAS passes.

Pan. That's Æneas: is not that a brave man? he's one of the flowers of Troy, I can tell you: but mark Troilus; you shall see anon.

ANTENOR passes.

Cres. Who's that?

Pan. That's Antenor: he has a shrewd wit, I can tell you; and he's a man good enough: he's one o' the soundest judgements in Troy, whosoever, and a proper man of person. When comes Troilus? I'll show you Troilus anon: if he see me, you shall see him nod at me.

Cres. Will he give you the nod?

Pan. You shall see.

Cres. If he do, the rich shall have more.

HECTOR passes.

Pan. That's Hector, that, that, look you, that; there's a fellow! Go thy way, Hector! There's a brave man, niece. O brave Hector! Look how he looks! there's a countenance! is't not a brave man?

Cres. O, a brave man!

Pan. Is a' not it does a man's heart good. Look you what hacks are on his helmet! look you yonder, do you see? look you there: there's no jesting; there's laying on, take't off who will, as they say: there be hacks!

Cres. Be those with swords?

Pan. Swords! any thing, he cares not; an the devil come to him, it's all one; by God's lid, it does one's heart good. Yonder comes Paris, yonder comes Paris.

PARIS passes.

Look ye yonder, niece; is't not a gallant man too, is't not? Why, this is brave now. Who said he came hurt home to-day? he's not hurt: why, this will do Helen's heart good now, ha! Would I could see Troilus now! You shall see Troilus anon.

HELENUS passes.

Cres. Who's that?

Pan. That's Helenus. I marvel where Troilus is. That's Helenus. I think he went not forth to-day. That's Helenus.

Cres. Can Helenus fight, uncle?

Pan. Helenus? no. Yes, he'll fight in different well. I marvel where Troilus is. Hark! do you not hear the people cry 'Troilus'? Helenus is a priest.

Cres. What smacking fellow comes yonder?

TROILUS passes.

Pan. Where! yonder! that's Diomedes. 'Tis Troilus! there's a man, niece! Hark! Brave Troilus! the prince of chivalry!

Cres. Peace, for shame, peace!

Pan. Mark him; note him. O brave Troilus!

Look well upon him, niece: look you how his sweat is bloodied, and his helm more hacked than Hector's; and how he looks, and how he goes! O admirable youth! he ne'er saw three and twenty. Go thy way, Troilus, go thy way!
Had I a sister were a grace, or a daughter a goddess, he should take his choice. O admirable man! Paris! Paris is dirt to him; and, I warrant, Helen, to change, would give an eye to hock.

Cress. Here comes more.

Forces pass.

Pan. Asses, fools, dolts! chaff and bran, chaff and bran! porridge after meat! I could live and die if the eyes of Troilus. Ne'er look, ne'er look; the eagles are gone; crows and daws, crows and daws! I had rather be such a man as Troilus than Agamemnon and all Greece.

Cress. There is among the Greeks Achilles,
a better man than Troilus.

Pan. Achilles! a drayman, a porter, a very camel.

Cress. Well, well.

Pan. 'Well, well!' Why, have you any discretion? have you any eyes? do you know what a man is? Is not birth, beauty, good shape, discourse, manhood, learning, gentleness, virtue, youth, liberality, and such like, the spice and salt that season a man?

Cress. Ay, a minced man; and then to be baked with no date in the pie, for then the man's date's out.

Pan. You are such a woman! one knows not at what ward you lie.

Cress. Upon my back, to defend my belly;
upon my wit, to defend my wiles; upon my secrecy, to defend mine honesty; my mask, to defend my beauty; and you, to defend all these;
and at all these wards I lie, at a thousand watches.

Pan. Say one of your watches.

Cress. Nay, I'll watch you for that; and that's one of the chiefest of them too: if I cannot ward what I would not have hit, I can watch you for telling how I took the blow; unless it swell past hiding, and then it's past watching.

Pan. You are such another!

Enter TROILUS'S Boy.

Boy. Sir, my lord would instantly speak with you.

Cress. Where?

Boy. At your own house; there he unarms
him.

Pan. Good boy, tell him I come. [Exit Boy.]
I doubt he's hurt. Fare ye well, good niece.

Cress. Adieu, uncle.

Pan. I'll be with you, niece, by and by.

Cress. To bring, uncle!

Pan. Ay, a token from Troilus.

Cress. By the same token, you are a hawk.

Enter Pandarus.
Wine, vena, gifts, tears, and love's full sacrifice.

He is another's enterprise:

But more in Troilus thousand fold I see.
Than in the glass of Pandar's praise may be;
Yet hold I off. Women are angels, wooing; Things won are done; joy's soul lies in the doing.

That she beloved knows nought that knows not
this:

Men prize the thing ungain'd more than it is:

That she was never yet that ever knew

Love got so sweet as when desire did sue.

Therefore this maxim out of love I teach:

Achievement is command; ungain'd, beseech:

Then though my heart's content firm love doth

bear,

Nothing of that shall from mine eyes appear.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. The Grecian camp. Before Agamemnon's tent.

Sennet. Enter AGAMEMNON, NESTOR, ULYSSES, MENELAUS, and others.

Agam. Princes,

What grief hath set the jaundice on your checks?

The ample proposition that hope makes

In all designs begun on earth below

Falls in the promised largeness: checks and disasters

Grow in the veins of actions highest rear'd,

As knots, by the conflux of meeting sap,

Infect the sound pine and divert his grain

Tortive and errant from his course of growth.

Nor, princes, is it matter new to us

That we come short of our suppose so far

That after seven years' siege yet Troy wall-

stand;

Sith every action that hath gone before,

Whereof we have record, trial did draw

Bias and thwart, not answering the aim,

And that unbowed figure of the thought

That gave't surmised shape. Why then, princes,

Do you with cheeks abash'd behold our works,

And call them shames! which are indeed

nought else

But the protractive trials of great Jove

To find permissive constancy in men:

The fineness of which metal is not found

In fortune's love: for then the back and onward,

The wise and fool, the artist and unlearn'd,

The hard and soft, seem all affined and kin:

But, in the wind and tempest of her frown,

Distinction, with a broad and powerful fan,

Puffing at all, winnows the light away;

And what hath mass or matter, by itself

Lies rich in virtue and unmingled.

Nest. With due observance of thy godlike

seat,

Great Agamemnon, Nestor shall apply

Thy latest words. In the removal of chance

Lies the true proof of men: the sea being smooth,

How many shallow bantle boats dare sail

Upon her patient breast, making their way

With those of nobler bulk!

But let the gulfman sweep once across

The gentle Thetis, and anon behold

The strong-ribb'd bark through liquid mountains cut,
Bounding between the two moist elements,
Like Perseus' horse: where's then the saucy boat

Whose weak untimber'd sides but even now
Co-rival'd greatness! Either to harbour fled,
Or made a toast for Neptune. Even so
Both valour's show and valour's worth divide
In storms of fortune; for in her ray and brightness

The herd hath more annoyance by the breeze
Than by the tiger; but when the splitting wind
Makes flexible the knees of knotted oaks,
And flies fled under shade, why, then the thing
of courage

As roused with rage with rage doth sympathize,
And with an accent tuned in selfsame key
Retorts to chiding fortune.

Ulysses.

Agamemnon,
Thou great commander, nerve and bone of Greece,

Heart of our numbers, soul and only spirit,
In whom the tempers and the minds of all
Should be shut up, hear what Ulysses speaks.
Besides the applause and approbation

The which, [To Agamemnon] most mighty for thy place and sway,

[To Nestor] And thou most reverend for thy stretch'd-out life

I give to both your speeches, which were such
As Agamemnon and the hand of Greece
Should hold up high in brass, and such again
As venerable Nestor, hatch'd in silver,
Should with a bond of air, strong as the axle-
tree

On which heaven rides, knit all the Greekish cars

To his experienced tongue, yet let it please
both,

Thou great, and wise, to hear Ulysses speak.
Agam. Speak, Prince of Ithaca; and be't of less expect

That matter needless, of importless burden,
Divide thy lips, than we are confident,
When rank Theraites open his mastic jaws,
We shall hear music, wit and oracle.

Ulysses. Troy, yet upon his basis, had been
down,

And the great Hector's sword had lack'd a master,

But for these instances.

The specialty of rule hath been neglected:
And, look, how many Grecian tents do stand
Hollow upon this plain, so many hollow factions.

When that the general is not like the hive:
To whom the foragers shall all repair,

What honey is expected? Degree being vis-arded,

The unworthiest shows as fairly in the mask.
The heavens themselves, the planets and this centre

Observe degree, priority and place,
Instaure, course, proportion, season, form,
Office and custom, in all time of order;

And therefore is the glorious planet Sol
In noble eminence enthroned and spher'd

Amidst the other; whose medicinal are

Corrects the ill aspects of planets evil,
And posts, like the commandment of a king,
Sans check to good and bad: but when planets

In evil mixture to disorder wander,
What plagues and what portents! what mutiny!
What raging of the sea! shaking of earth!
Commotion in the winds! frights, changes,
horrors,

Divert and crack, rend and deracinate
The unity and married calm of states Quite from their fixture! O, when degree is shak'd,

Which is the ladder to all high designs,
The enterprise is sick! How could communities,
Degrees in schools and brotherhoods in cities,
Peaceful commerce from dividable shores,
The primogenitive and due of birth,
Prerogative of age, crowns, sceptres, laurels,
But by degree, stand in authentic place!
Take but degree away, untune that string,
And, hark, what discord follows! each thing
meets

In mere oppugnancy: the bounded waters
Should lift their bosoms higher than the shores
And make a sop of all this solid globe:
Strength should be lord of imbecility,
And the rude son should strike his father dead;
Force should be right; or rather, right and
wrong,

Between whose endless jar justice resides,
Should lose their names, and so should justice
too.

Then every thing includes itself in power,
Power into will, will into appetite;
And appetite, an universal wolf,
So doubly seconded with will and power,
Must make perforce an universal prey,
And last eat up himself. Great Agamemnon,
This chaos, when degree is suffocate,
Follows the choking.

And this neglection of degree it is
That by a pace goes backward, with a purpose
It hath to climb. The general's disdain'd
By him one step below, he by the next,
That next by him beneath; so every step,
Exemplary by the first pace that is stick
Of his superior, grows to an envious fever
Of pale and bloodless emulation:
And 'tis this fever that keeps Troy on foot,
Not her own sinews. To end a tale of length, Troy in our weakness stands, not in her
strength.

Nest. Most wisely hath Ulysses here discovered

The fever whereof all our power is sick.

Agam. The nature of the sickness found,
Ulysses,

What is the remedy?
Ulysses. The great Achilles, whom opinion
crowns

The sinew and the forehead of our host,
Having his ear full of his airy fame,
Grows dainty of his worth and in his Lies mocking our designs: with him
Upon a lazy bed the livelong day
Breaks scornful jests,
And with ridiculous and awkward action,

Which, slanderer, he imitation calls,
 Hayageants us. Sometime, great A
 Thy topless deputation he puts on,
 And, like a strutting player, whose conceits
 Lies in his hamstring, and doth think it rich
 To hear the wooden dialogues and sound
 Twine his stretch'd footing and the scaffold.

He be-pitted and o'er-wrested seeming
 He sets thy greatness in; and when he speaks,
 'Tis like a chime a-mending; with terms un-squared,

Which, from the tongue of roaring Typhon
 dropp'd,

Would seem hyperboles. At this fusty stuff
 The large Achilles, on his press'd bed lolling,
 From his deep chest laughs out a loud applause;
 Cries 'Excellent! 'tis Agamemnon just.
 Now play me Nestor; hem, and stroke thy beard,

As he being drest to some oration.
 That's done, as near as the extremest ends
 Of parallels, as like as Vulcan and his wife:
 Yet god Achilles still cries 'Excellent!

'Tis Nestor right. Now play him me, Patroclus,
 Arming to answer in a night alarm.

And then, forsooth, the faint defects of age
 Must be the scene of mirth; to cough and spit,
 And, with a palsy-fumbling on his gorget,
 Shake in and out the rivet: and at this sport
 Sir Valour dies; cries 'O, enough, Patroclus;

Or give me ribs of steel! I shall split all
 In pleasure of my spleen.' And in this fashion,
 All our abilities, gifts, natures, shapes,

Severals and generals of grace exact,
 Achievements, plots, orders, preventions,
 Excitements to the field, or speech for truce,
 Success or loss, what is or is not, serves
 As stuff for these two to make paradoxes.

Nest. And in the imitation of these twin—
 Who, as Ulysses says, opinion crowns
 With an imperial voice—many are infect.

Ajax is grown self-will'd, and bears his head
 In such a rein, in full as proud a place
 As broad Achilles; keeps his tent like him; 100
 Makes factious feasts; rails on our state of war,
 Bold as an oracle, and sets Theraites,

A slave whose gall coins slanders like a mint,
 To match us in comparisons with dirt,
 To weaken and discredit our exposure,
 How rank we've rounded in with danger.

Ulys. They tax our policy, and call it cowardice,

Count wisdom as no member of the war,
 Forbail precedence and esteem no act 100
 But that of hand; the still and mental parts,
 That do contrive how many hands shall strike,
 When stones call them on, and know by numbers

 Of their observance tell the enemies' weight,—
 Why, this hath not a finger's dignity:

They call this best work, masonry, closet-war;
 He that runs that battery down the wall,
 For the great swing and of his poise,
 He stays before his that made the

men
 Or those that with the firmness of their souls
 By reason guide his execution.

11

Nest. Let this be granted, and Achilles' horse
 Makes many Thetis' sons.

Agam. What trumpet! look, Menelaus,
 Men. From Troy.

Enter AENEAS.
 Agam. What would you fore our tent?

Aene. Is this great Agamemnon's tent, I pray you?

Agam. Even this.

Aene. May one, that is a herald and a prince,
 Do a fair message to his kingly ears?

Agam. With surety stronger than Achilles' arm 200

'Fore all the Greckish heads, which with one
 voice

Call Agamemnon head and general.

Aene. Fair leave and large security. How may

A stranger to those most imperial looks
 Know them from eyes of other mortals?

Agam. How!

Aene. Ay;

I ask, that I might waken reverence,
 And bid the cheek be ready with a blush
 Modest as morning when she coldly eyes
 The youthful Phœbus;

Which is that god in office, guiding men? 230
 Which is the high and mighty Agamemnon?

Agam. This Trojan scorns us; or the men of Troy

Are ceremonious courtiers.

Aene. Courtiers as free, as debonaire, un-arm'd,

As bending angels; that's their fame in peace:
 But when they would seem soldiers, they have galls,

Good arms, strong joints, true swords; and,
 Jove's accord

Nothing so full of heart. But peace, Aeneas,
 Peace, Trojan; lay thy finger on thy lips! 240
 The worthiness of praise distains his worth,
 If that the praised himself bring the praise
 forth:

But what the repining enemy commands,
 That breath fame blows; that praise, sole pure, transcends.

Agam. Sir, you of Troy, call you yourself
 Aeneas!

Aene. Ay, Greek, that is my name.

Agam. What's your affair, I pray you?

Aene. Sir, pardon; 'tis for Agamemnon's cars.

Agam. He hears nought privately that comes from Troy.

Aene. Nor I from Troy come not to whisper
 him: 250

I bring a trumpet to awake his ear,
 To set his senses on the attentive bent,
 And then to speak.

Agam. Speak frankly as the wind:
 It is not Agamemnon's sleeping ears:

That thou shalt know, Trojan, he is awake.
 He tells thee so himself.

Aene. 260

Send thy brass voice
 tents;

And every Greek of mettle, let him know,
What Troy means fairly shall he spoke aloud.

[Trumpet sounds.]

We have, great Agamemnon, here in Troy 260
A prince call'd Hector.—Priam is his father.—
Who in this dull and long-continued truce
Is rusty grown : he bade me take a trumpet,
And to this purpose speak. Kings, princes,
lords!

If there be one among the fair'st of Greece
That holds his honour higher than his ease,
That seeks his praise more than he fears his peril,

That knows his valour, and knows not his fear,
That loves his mistress more than in confession,
With truant vows to her own lips he loves, 270
And dare avow her beauty and her worth
In other arms than hers,—to him this challenge.

Hector, in view of Trojans and of Greeks,
Shall make it good, or do his best to do it,
He hath a lady, wiser, fairer, truer,
Than ever Greek did compass in his arms,

And will to-morrow with his trumpet call
Midway between your tents and walls of Troy,
To rouse a Grecian that is true in love :

If any come, Hector shall honour him ; 280
If none, he'll say in Troy when he retires,
The Grecian daries are sunburnt and not worth
The splinter of a lance. Even so much.

Agam. This shall be told our lovers, Lord
Æneas ;

If none of them have soul in such a kind,
We left them all at home : but we are soldiers ;
And may that soldier a mere recreant prove,
That means not, hath not, or is not in love !

If then one is, or hath, or means to be,
That one meets Hector ; if none else, I am he.

Nest. Tell him of Nestor, one that was a
man 291

When Hector's grandsire suck'd : he is old now ;
But if there be not in our Grecian host
One noble man that hath one spark of fire,

To answer for his love, tell him from me
I'll hide my silver beard in a gold beaver
And in my vanbraces put this wither'd brawn,

And meeting him will tell him that my lady
Was fairer than his grandam and as chaste
As may be in the world : his youth in flood, 300

I'll prove this truth with my three drops of
blood.

Æne. Now heavens forbid such scarcity of youth !

Ulyss. Amen.

Agam. Fair Lord Æneas, let me touch your
hand ;

To our pavilion shall I lead you, sir,
Achilles shall have word of this intent ;

So shall each lord of Greece, from tent to tent ;
Yourself shall feast with us before you go

And find the welcome of a noble foe.
[Exeunt all but Ulysses and Nestor.]

Ulyss. Nestor ! 310

Nest. What says Ulysses ?

Ulyss. I have a young conception in my brain ;

Do you my time to bring it to some shape.

Nest. What is't ?

Ulyss. This 'tis :

Bunt wedges give hard knots : the seeded side
That hath to this maturity blown up
In rank Achilles must or now be crop'd,
Or, shedding, breed a nursery of like evil,
To overbulk us all.

Nest. Well, and how ! 320

Ulyss. This challenge that the gallant Hector sends,

However it is spread in general name,
Relates in purpose only to Achilles.

Nest. The purpose is perspicuous even as substance,

Whose grossness little characters sum up ;
And, in the publication, make no strain,

But that Achilles, were his brain as barren
As banks of Libya,—though, Apollo knows,
'Tis dry enough,—will, with great speed of
judgement,

At, with celerity, find Hector's purpose 330
Pointing on him.

Ulyss. And wake him to the answer, think
you !

Nest. Yes, 'tis most meet : whom may you else oppose,

That can from Hector bring his honour off,
If not Achilles ? Though't be a sportful combat,

Yet in the trial much opinion dwells ;
For here the Trojans taste our dear't repute
With their finest palate : and trust to me,

Ulysses,

Our imputation shall be oddly poised
In this wild action ; for the success, 340

Although particular, shall give a scantling
Of good or bad unto the general ;

And in such indexes, although small prick'd
To their subsequent volumes, there is seen
The baby figure of the giant mass

Of things to come at large. It is supposed :
He that meets Hector issues from our choice ;

And choice, being mutual act of all our souls,
Makes merit her election, and doth boil
As 'twere from forth us all, a man distilled : 350

Out of our virtues ; who misarrying,
What heart receives from hence the conquering
part.

To steel a strong opinion to themselves !
Which entertain'd limbs are his instruments,
In no less working than are swords and bows
Directive by the limbs.

Ulyss. Give pardon to my speech :

Therefore 'tis meet Achilles meet not Hector.
Let us, like merchants, show our foulest wares,

And think, perchance, they'll sell ; if not, 360
The lustre of the better yet to show,
Shall show the better. Do not content
That ever Hector and Achilles meet ;

For both our honour and our shame in this
Are dogg'd with two strange followers.

Nest. I see them not with any ill eyes :
what are they ?

Ulyss. What glory our Achilles shares from Hector,

Were he not proud, we all should share with
him ;

But he already is too insolent ;
And we were better punch in Aias' eye,
Than in the pride and salt scorn of his eyes,

Should he 'scape Hector fair: if he were foil'd,
Why then, we did our main opinion crush
In faint of our best man. No, make a lottery;
And, by device, let blockish Ajax draw
The sort to fight with Hector: among ourselves
Give him allowance for the better man;
For that will pay the great Myrmidon
Who broils in loud applause, and make him
fall

His crest that prouder than blue Iris bends. 380
If the dull brainless Ajax come safe off,
We'll dress him up in voices: if he fail,
Yet go we under our opinion still
That we have better men. But, hit or miss,
Our project's life this shape of sense assumes:
Ajax employ'd plucks down Achilles' plumes.

Ned. Ulysses,
Now I begin to relish thy advice;
And I will give a taste of it forthwith
To Agamemnon: go we to him straight. 390
Two curs shall tame each other: pride alone
Must tarre the mastiffs on, as 'twere their bone.
[Exeunt.]

ACT II

SCENE I. A part of the Grecian camp.

Enter AJAX and THERSITES.

Ajax. Thersites!
Ther. Agamemnon, how if he had boils?
full, all over, generally!

Ajax. Thersites!
Ther. And those boils did run? say so: did not the general run then? were not that a botchy cure?

Ajax. Dog!
Ther. Then would 'come some matter from him; I see none now. 40

Ajax. Thou bitch-wolf's son, canst thou not hear? [Beating him] Feel, then.

Ther. The plague of Greece upon thee, thou mongrel beef-witted lord!

Ajax. Speak then, thou vineweatst leaven, speak: I will beat thee into handsomeness.

Ther. I shall sooner rail thee into wit and holiness: but, I think, thy horse will sooner con an oration than thou learn a prayer without book. Thou canst strike, canst thou? a red murrain o' thy jade's tricks! 41

Ajax. Toadsfoot, learn me the proclamation.
Ther. Dost thou think I have no sense, thou strildest me thus?

Ajax. The proclamation!
Ther. Thou art proclaimed a fool, I think.
Ajax. Do not, serpentine, do not: my fingers itch.

Ther. I would thou didst itch from head to foot and I had the scratching of thee; I would make thee the loathsome scab in Greece.
When thou art forth in the incursions, thou sistest as slow as a snail.

Ajax. I say, the proclamation!
Ther. Thou grumblest and raillest every hour on Achilles, and thou art as full of envy at his goodness as Caliban is at Prosperina's beauty, saying thou hastest at him.

Ajax. Mistrust Thersites!

Ther. Thou shouldst strike him. 40

Ajax. Cobloast!

Ther. He would pun thee into shivers with his fist, as a sailor breaks a biscuit.

Ajax. [Beating him] You whoopson cur!

Ther. Do, do.

Ajax. Thou stool for a witch!

Ther. Ay, do, do; thou sudden-witted lord!
thou hast no more brain than I have in mine elbows; an assinego may tutor thee: thou scurry-valiant ass! thou art here but to thrash Trojans; and thou art bought and sold among those of any wit, like a barbarian slave. If thou use to beat me, I will begin at thy heel, and tell what thou art by inches, thou thing of no bowels, thou!

Ajax. You dog!

Ther. You scurry lord!

Ajax. [Beating him] You cur!

Ther. Mars his idiot! do, rudeness; do, camel; do, do. 59

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.

Achil. Why, how now, Ajax! wherefore do you thus? How now, Thersites! what's the matter, man?

Ther. You see him there, do you?

Achil. Ay; what's the matter?

Ther. Nay, look upon him.

Achil. So I do: what's the matter?

Ther. Nay, but regard him well.

Achil. Well! why, I do so.

Ther. But yet you look not well upon him;
for, whosoever you take him to be, he is Ajax.

Achil. I know that, fool.

Ther. Ay, but that fool knows not himself.

Ajax. Therefore I beat thee.

Ther. Lo, lo, lo, lo, what modicums of wit
he utters! his evasions have ears thus long.
I have bobbed his brain more than he has beat my bones: I will buy nine sparrows for a penny, and his pia mater is not worth the ninth part of a sparrow. This lord, Achilles, Ajax, who wears his wit in his belly and his guts
in his head, I'll tell you what I say of him. 51

Achil. What?

Ther. I say, this Ajax—

[Ajax offers to beat him.]

Achil. Nay, good Ajax.

Ther. Has not so much wit—

Achil. Nay, I must hold you.

Ther. As will stop the eye of Helen's nose, for whom he comes to fight.

Achil. Peace, fool!

Ther. I would have peace and quietness, but the fool will not; he there: that he: look you there.

Ajax. O thou damned cur! I shall—

Achil. Will you set your wit to a fool's?

Ther. No, I warrant you; for a fool's will ashame it.

Patr. Good words, Thersites.

Achil. What's the quarrel?

Ajax. I bade the vile owl go learn me the tenour of the proclamation, and he rails upon
me. 100

Ther. I serve thee not.

Ajax. Well, go to, go to.

Ther. I serve here voluntary.

Achil. Your last service was sufferance, 'twas not voluntary: no man is beaten voluntary: Ajax was here the voluntary, and you as under an impress.

Ther. 'E'en so; a great deal of your wit, too, lies in your sinews, or else there be liars. Hector shall have a great catch, if he knock out either of your brains: a' were as good crack a fusty nut with no kernel.

Achil. What, with me too, Thersites?

Ther. There's Ulysses and old Nestor, whose wit was mouldy ere your grandsires had nails on their toes, yoke you like draught-oxen and make you plough up the wars.

Achil. What, what?

Ther. Yes, good sooth: to, Achilles! to, Ajax! to!

Ajax. I shall cut out your tongue.

Ther. 'Tis no matter; I shall speak as much as thou afterwords.

Patr. No more words, Thersites; peace!

Ther. I will hold my peace when Achilles' brach bids me, shall I?

Achil. There's for you, Patroclus.

Ther. I will see you hanged, like cloppoles, ere I come any more to your tents: I will keep where there is wit stirring and leave the faction of fools.

Patr. A good riddance.

Achil. Marry, this, sir, is proclaim'd through all our host:

That Hector, by the fifth hour of the sun, Will with a trumpet twixt our tents and Troy To-morrow morning call some knight to arms That hath a stomach; and such a one that dare Maintain—I know not what: 'tis trash. Farewell.

Ajax. Farewell. Who shall answer him?

Achil. I know not: 'tis put to lottery; otherwise

He knew his man.

Ajax. O, meaning you. I will go learn more of it.

SCENE II. Troy. A room in Priam's palace.

Enter PRIAM, HECTOR, TROILUS, PARIS, and HELENUS.

Pri. After so many hours, lives, speeches spent,

Thus once again says Nestor from the Greeks:

'Deliver Helen, and all damage else—

'As honour, loss of time, travail, expense,

'Wounds, friends, and what else dear that is consumed

In hot digestion of this cormorant war—

Shall be struck off.' Hector, what say you to't?

Hect. Though no man lesser fears the Greeks than I

As far as toucheth my particular,

Yet, dread Priam,

There is no lady of more softer bowels,

More spongy to suck in the sense of fear,

More ready to cry out 'Who knows what follows?'

Than Hector is: the wound of peace is surety,

Surety secure; but modest doubt is call'd

The beacon of the wise, the tent that searches To the bottom of the worst. Let Helen go: Since the first sword was drawn about this question,

Every tithe soul, 'mongst many thousand diemes,

Hath been as dear as Helen; I mean, of ours:

If we have lost so many tenths of ours,

To guard a thing not ours nor worth to us,

Had it our name, the value of one ten,

What merit 's in that reason which denies

The yielding of her up?

Tro. Fie, fie, my brother!

Weigh you the worth and honour of a king

So great as our dread father in a scale

Of common ounces: will you with counters sum

The past proportion of his infinite?

And buckle in a waist most fathomless

With spans and inches so diminutive

As fears and reasons? fie, for godly shame!

Hec. No marvel, though you bite so sharp at reasons,

You are so empty of them. Should not our father

Dear the great sway of his affairs with reasons, Because your speech hath none that tells him so?

Tro. You are for dreams and slumbers, brother priest;

You fur your gloves with reason. Here are your reasons:

You know an enemy intends you harm;

You know a sword employ'd is perilous,

And reason flies the object of all harm:

Who marvels then, when Helenus beholds

A Grecian and his sword, if he do set

The very wings of reason to his heels

And fly like chidden Mercury from Jove, Or like a star disorb'd? Nay, if we talk of reason,

Let's shut our gates and sleep: manhood and honour

Should have hure-hearts, would they but fat their thoughts

With this cramm'd reason: reason and respect Make livers pale and lustihood deject.

Hec. Brother, she is not worth what she doth cost

The holding.

Tro. What is aught, but as 'tis valued?

Hec. But value dwells not in particular will:

It holds his estimate and dignity

As well wherein 'tis precious of itself

As in the prizer: 'tis mad idolatry

To make the service greater than the god;

And the will dotes that is attributive

To what infection itself affects,

Without some image of the affected merit.

Tro. I take to-day a wife, and my election

Is led on in the conduct of my will:

My will enkindled by mine eyes and ears,

Two traded pilots 'twixt the dangerous shores

Of will and judgement: how may I avoid,

Although my will dictate what I should, The wife I choose? there can be no evasion

To blench from this and to stand fast by honour:

Most disobedient and refractory.
 If Helen then be wife to Sparta's king,
 As it is known she is, these moral laws
 Of nature and of nations speak aloud
 To have her back return'd: thus to persist
 In doing wrong extenuates not wrong,
 But makes it much more heavy. Hector's opinion
 Is this in way of truth; yet ne'ertheless,
 My spritely brethren, I propend to you 190
 In resolution to keep Helen still,
 For 'tis a cause that hath no mean dependence
 Upon our joint and several dignities.

Tro. Why, there you touch'd the life of our design:

Were it not glory that we more affected
 Than the performance of our heaving spleens,
 I would not wish a drop of Trojan blood
 Spent more in her defence. But, worthy Hector,
 She is a theme of honour and renown,
 A spur to valiant and magnanimous deeds, 200
 Whose present courage may beat down our foes,
 And fame in time to come canonize us;
 For, I presume, brave Hector would not lose
 So rich advantage of a promised glory
 As smiles upon the forehead of this action
 For the wide world's revenue.

Hect. I am yours,
 You valiant offspring of great Priamus.
 I have a roisting challenge sent amongst
 The dull and fustions nobles of the Greeks
 Will strike amazement to their drowsy spirits:
 I was advertised their great general slept, 211
 Whilst emulation in the army crept:
 This, I presume, will wake him. [Exit.

SCENE III. The Grecian camp. Before Achilles' tent.

Enter THESSITES, solus.

Ther. How now, Thersites! what, lost in the labyrinth of thy fury! Shall the elephant Ajax carry it thus? he beats me, and I rail at him: O, worthy satisfaction! would it were otherwise; that I could beat him, whilst he railed at me. 'Sfoot, I'll learn to conjure and raise devils, but I'll see some issue of my spiteful execrations. Then there's Achilles, a rare engineer! If Troy be not taken till these two undermine it, the walls will stand till they fall of themselves. O thou great thunder-darter of Olympus, forget that thou art Jove, the king of gods, and Mercury, lose all the serpentine craft of thy caduceus, if ye take not that little little less than little wit from them that they have! which short-armed ignorance itself knows is so abundant scarce, it will not in circumvention deliver a fly from a spider, without drawing their many irons and cutting the web. After this, the vengeance on the whole camp! or rather, the louse-ache! for that methinks is the curse dependant on those that war for a placket. I have said my prayers and devil Envy say Amen. What ho! my Lord Achilles!

Enter PATROCLUS.

Patr. Who's there? Thersites! Good Thersites, come in and rail.

Ther. If I could have remembered a gilt counterfeits, thou wouldst not have slipped out of my contemplation: but it is no matter; thyself upon thyself! The common curse of mankind, folly and ignorance, be thine in great revenue! heaven bless thee from a tutor, and discipline come not near thee! Let thy blood be thy direction till thy death! then if she that lays thee out says thou art a fair corpse, I'll be sworn and sworn upon't she never shrouded any but lazars. Amen. Where's Achilles!

Patr. What, art thou devout? wast thou in prayer?

Ther. Ay: the heavens hear me! 40

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Who's there?

Patr. Thersites, my lord.

Achil. Where, where? Art thou come! why, my cheese, my digestion, why hast thou not served thyself in to my table so many meals? Come, what's Agamemnon?

Ther. Thy commander, Achilles. Then tell me, Patroclus, what's Achilles?

Patr. Thy lord, Thersites: then tell me, I pray thee, what's thyself? 50

Ther. Thy knower, Patroclus: then tell me, Patroclus, what art thou?

Patr. Thou mayst tell that knowest.

Achil. O, tell, tell.

Ther. I'll decline the whole question. Agamemnon commands Achilles; Achilles is my lord; I am Patroclus' knower, and Patroclus is a fool.

Patr. You rascal!

Ther. Peace, fool! I have not done. 60

Achil. He is a privileged man. Proceed, Thersites.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool; Achilles is a fool; Thersites is a fool, and, as aforesaid, Patroclus is a fool.

Achil. Derive this; come.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool to offer to command Achilles; Achilles is a fool to be commanded of Agamemnon; Thersites is a fool to serve such a fool, and Patroclus is a fool positive. 70

Patr. Why am I a fool?

Ther. Make that demand of the priest. It suffices me thou art. Look you, who comes here!

Achil. Patroclus, I'll speak with nobody. Come in with me, Thersites. [Exit.

Ther. Here is such patchery, such juggling and such knavery! all the argument is a cuckold and a whore; a good quarrel to draw curious factions and blood to death upon. Now, this dry serpio on the subject! and war and quarrel confound all!

Enter AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, NESTOR, DIOMEDES, and AJAX.

Agam. Where is Achilles?

Patr. Within his tent; but ill disposed, my lord.

Agam. Let it be known to him that we are here.

Ther. He shant our messages; and we'll say

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA

[ACT II

Our appointments, visiting of him :
Let him be told so ; lest perchance he think
We dare not move the question of our place,
Or know not what we are.

Patr. I shall say so to him. [Exit.]

Ulyss. We saw him at the opening of his tent :
He is not sick.

Ajax. Yes, lion-sick, sick of proud heart :
you may call it melancholy, if you will favour
the man ; but, by my head, his pride : but why, why ! let him show us the cause. A word, my lord. [Takes Agamemnon aside]

Nest. What moves Ajax thus to bay at him ?

Ulyss. Achilles hath inveigled his fool from
him.

Nest. Who, Thersites !

Ulyss. He.

Nest. Then will Ajax lack matter, if he have lost his argument.

Ulyss. No, you see, he is his argument that has his argument, Achilles.

Nest. All the better ; their faction is more our wish than their faction ; but it was a strong composure a fool could disunite.

Ulyss. The amity that wisdom knits not,
folly may easily untie. Here comes Patroclus.

Re-enter PATROCLUS.

Nest. No Achilles with him.

Ulyss. The elephant hath joints, but none for courtesy : his legs are legs for necessity, not for leisure.

Patr. Achilles bids me say, he is much
sorry,

If any thing more than your sport and pleasure
Did move your greatness and this noble state
To call upon him ; he hopes it is no other :
But for your health and your digestion sake,
An after-dinner's breath.

Agam. Hear you, Patroclus :
We are too well acquainted with these answers :
But his evasion, wing'd thus swift with scorn,
Cannot outfly our apprehensions.

Much attribute he hath, and much the reason
Why we ascribe it to him ; yet all his virtues,
Not virtuously on his own part beheld,
Do in our eyes begin to lose their gloss.
Yea, like fair fruit in an unwholesome dish,
Are like to rot untasted. Go and tell him, :
We come to speak with him ; and you shall not sin,

If you do say we think him over-proud
And under-honest, in self-assumption greater Than in the note of judgement ; and worthier than himself

Here tend the savage strangeness he puts on,
Disguise the holy strength of their command,
And underwrite in an observing kind
His humorous predominance ; yea, watch
His peevish humors, his ebbs, his flows, as if :
The passages and whole carriage of this action on his tide. Go tell him this, and add,

If he overhold his price so much,
None of him ; but let him, like an engine
Ereputable, lie under this report :
(action either, this cannot go to war :
; dare we do allowance give

Before a sleeping giant.' Tell him so.

Patr. I shall ; and bring his answer presently.

Agam. In second voice we'll not be satisfied ;
We come to speak with him. Ulysses, enter
you. [Exit Ulysses.]

Ajax. What is he more than another ? :
Agam. No more than what he thinks he is.

Ajax. Is he so much ? Do you not think he thinks himself a better man than I am ?

Agam. No question.

Ajax. Will you subscribe his thought, and say he is ?

Agam. No, noble Ajax ; you are as strong, as valiant, as wise, no less noble, much more gentle, and altogether more tractable.

Ajax. Why should a man be proud ? How doth pride grow ? I know not what pride is.

Agam. Your mind is the clearer, Ajax, and your virtues the fairer. He that is proud sets up himself ; pride is his own glam, his own trumpet, his own chronicle ; and whatever praises itself but in the deed, devours the deed in the praise.

Ajax. I do hate a proud man, as I hate the engendering of toads.

Nest. Yet he loves himself : is't not strange ?
[Aside.]

Re-enter ULYSSES.

Ulyss. Achilles will not to the field tomorrow.

Agam. What's his excuse ?

Ulyss. He doth rely on none,
But carries on the stream of his dispose Without observance or respect of any,
In will peculiar and in self-admission.

Agam. Why will he not upon our fair request

Untent his person and share the air with us ?

Ulyss. Things small as nothing, for request's sake only.

He makes important : possess'd he is with
greatness,

And speaks not to himself but with a pride
That quarrels at self-breath : imagined worth
Holds in his blood such swain and hot discourse
That 'twixt his mental and his active parts
Kingdom'd Achilles in commotion rages
And batters down himself : what should I say !
He is so plagu'd proud that the death-tokens
of it.

Cry 'No recovery.'

Agam. Let Ajax go to him.
Dear lord, go you and greet him in his tent :
'Tis said he holds you well, and will be led :
At your request a little from himself.

Ulyss. O Agamemnon, let it not be so !
We'll consecrate the steps that Ajax makes
When they go from Achilles : shall the proud
lord

That bastes his arrogance with his own scorn
And never suffers matter of the world
Enter his thoughts, save such as do revolve
And ruminate himself, shall be worshipp'd
Of that we hold an idol more than he !
No, this thrice worthy and right valiant lord
Must not so stale his palm, mockly acquired ;

Nor, by my will, asubjugate his merit,
As simply titled as Achilles is,
By going to Achilles:

That were to enlarge his fat already pride
And add more coals to Cancer when he burns
With entertaining great Hyperion.
This lord go to him! Jupiter forbid,
And say in thunder 'Achilles go to him.'

Nest. [Aside to Dio.] O, this is well; he rubs the vein of him.

Dio. [Aside to Nest.] And how his silence drinks up this applause!

Ajax. If I go to him, with my armed flat
I'll push him o'er the face.

Agam. O, no, you shall not go.

Ajax. An a' be proud with me, I'll pheeze his pride:

Let me go to him.

Ulyss. Not for the worth that hangs upon our quarrel.

Ajax. A paltry, insolent fellow!

Nest. How he describes himself!

Ajax. Can he not be sociable?

Ulyss. The raven chides blackness.

Ajax. I'll let his humours blood.

Agam. He will be the physician that should be the patient.

Ajax. An all men were o' my mind,—

Ulyss. Wit would be out of fashion.

Ajax. A' should not bear it so, a' should eat swords first: shall pride carry it?

Nest. An' would, you 'ld carry half.

Ulyss. A' would have ten shares.

Ajax. I will knead him; I'll make him supple.

Nest. He's not yet through warm: force him with praises: pour in, pour in; his ambition is dry.

Ulyss. [To Agam.] My lord, you feed too much on this dislike.

Nest. Our noble general, do not do so.

Dio. You must prepare to fight without Achilles.

Ulyss. Why, 'tis this naming of him does him harm.

Here is a man—but 'tis before his face;
I will be silent.

Nest. Wherefore should you so?

He is not emulous, as Achilles is.

Ulyss. Know the whole world, he is as valiant.

Ajax. A whoreson dog, that shall palter thus with us!

Would he were a Trojan!

Nest. What a vice were it in Ajax now,—

Ulyss. If he were proud,—

Dio. Or covetous of praise,—

Ulyss. Ay, or surly borne,—

Dio. Or strange, or self-affected!

Ulyss. Thank the heavens, lord, thou art of sweet composure;

Praise him that got thee, she that gave thee
suck:

Famed be thy tutor, and thy parts of nature
Thrice famed, beyond all erudition:

But he that disciplined thy arms to fight,
Let Mars divide eternity in twain,

And give him half: and, for thy vigour,

Bull-bearing Milo his addition yield
To sinewy Ajax. I will not praise thy wisdom,
Which, like a bourn, a pale, a shore, confines
Thy spacious and dilated parts: here's Nestor;
Instructed by the antiquary times,
He must, he is, he cannot but be wise:
But pardon, father Nestor, were your days
As green as Ajax' and your brain so temper'd,
You should not have the eminence of him,
But be as Ajax.

Shall I call you father!

Nest. Ay, my good son.

Dio. Be ruled by him, Lord Ajax.

Ulyss. There is no tarrying here; the hart
Achilles

Keeps thicket. Please it our great general
To call together all his state of war;

Fresh kings are come to Troy: to-morrow

We must with all our main of power stand fast:
And here's a lord,—come knights from east to

west,
And cull their flower, Ajax shall cope the best.

Agam. Go we to council. Let Achilles
sleep:

Light boats sail swift, though greater hulks
draw deep. [Exeunt.]

ACT III

SCENE I. Troy. Priam's palace.

Enter a Servant and PANDARUS.

Pan. Friend, you! pray you, a word: do not you follow the young Lord Paris!

Serv. Ay, sir, when he goes before me.

Pan. You depend upon him, I mean!

Serv. Sir, I do depend upon the lord.

Pan. You depend upon a noble gentleman;
I must needs praise him.

Serv. The lord be praised!

Pan. You know me, do you not?

Serv. Faith, sir, superficially.

Pan. Friend, know me better; I am the Lord Pandarus.

Serv. I hope I shall know your honour
better.

Pan. I do desire it.

Serv. You are in the state of grace.

Pan. Grace! not so, friend: home-lordship are my titles. [Music within.] music is this?

Serv. I do but partly know, sir: it is music in parts.

Pan. Know you the musicians?

Serv. Wholly, sir.

Pan. Who play they to?

Serv. To the hearers, sir.

Pan. At whose pleasure, friend?

Serv. At mine, sir, and theirs that love music.

Pan. Command, I mean, friend.

Serv. Who shall I command, sir?

Pan. Friend, we understand not one-another: I am too courtly and thou art too cunning. At whose request do these men play?

Serv. That's to't indeed, sir: marry, at the request of Paris my lord, who's a shameless person; with him, the moral Venus, the hateful blood of luxury, love's invisible god.

Pan. Who, my cousin Cressida?

Serv. No, sir, Helen: could you not find out that by her attributes?

Pan. It should seem, fellow, that thou hast not seen the Lady Cressida. I come to speak with Paris from the Prince Troilus: I will make a complimentary assault upon him, for my business saith so.

Serv. Sudden business! there's a stewed phrase indeed!

Enter PARIS and HELEN, attended.

Pan. Fair be to you, my lord, and to all this fair company! fair desires, in all fair measure, fairly guide them! especially to you, fair queen! fair thoughts be your fair pillow!

Helen. Dear lord, you are full of fair words.

Pan. You speak your fair pleasure, sweet queen. Fair prince, here is good broken music.

Par. You have broke it, cousin; and, by my life, you shall make it whole again; you shall piece it out with a piece of your performance. Well, he is full of harmony.

Pan. Truly, lady, no.

Helen. O, sir,—

Pan. Rude, in sooth; in good sooth, very rude.

Par. Well said, my lord! well, you say so in fits.

Pan. I have business to my lord, dear queen. My lord, will you vouchsafe me a word?

Helen. Nay, this shall not hedge us out: we'll hear you sing, certainly.

Pan. Well, sweet queen, you are pleasant with me. But, marry, thus, my lord: my dear lord and most esteemed friend, your brother Troilus,—

Helen. My Lord Pandarus; honey-sweet lord,—

Pan. Go to, sweet queen, go to:—commends himself most affectionately to you.—

Helen. You shall not bob us out of our melody: if you do, our melancholy upon your head!

Pan. Sweet queen, sweet queen! that's a sweet queen, I faith.

Helen. And to make a sweet lady sad is a sour offence.

Pan. Nay, that shall not serve your turn: that shall it not, in truth, la. Nay, I care not for such words; no, no. And, my lord, he desires you, that if the king call for him at supper, you will make his excuse.

Helen. My Lord Pandarus,—

Pan. What says my sweet queen, my very sweet queen?

Par. What exploit's in hand? where sups he to-night?

Helen. Nay, but, my lord,—

Pan. What says my sweet queen? My cousin will fall out with you. You must not know where he sups.

Par. I'll lay my life, with my disposer Cressida.

Pan. No, no, no such matter; you are wise: your disposer is sick.

Par. Well, I'll make excuse.

Pan. Ay, good my lord. Why should you not excuse? no, your poor disposer's sick.

Par. I lay.

Pan. You spy! what do you spy? Come, give me an instrument. Now, sweet queen.

Helen. Why, this is kindly done.

Pan. My niece is horribly in love with a thing you have, sweet queen.

Helen. She shall have it, my lord, if it be not my lord Paris.

Pan. He! no, she'll none of ; they two are twain.

Helen. Falling in, after fall out, may make them three.

Pan. Come, come, I'll hear more of this; I'll sing you a song now.

Helen. Ay, ay, prithes now. By my troth, sweet lord, thou hast a fine fo:

Pan. Ay, you may, you may.

Helen. Let thy song be love: this love will undo us all. O Cupid, Cupid, Cupid!

Pan. Love! ay, that it shall, I faith.

Par. Ay, good now, love, love, nothing but love.

Pan. In good troth, it begins so. [Sings.]

Love, love, nothing but love, still more!

For, O, love's a how

Shoots buck and doe:

The shaft confounds,

Not that it wounds,

But tickles still the sore.

These lovers cry Oh! oh! they die!

Yet that which seems the wound to kill,

Doth turn oh! oh! to ha! ha! he!

So dying love lives still:

Oh! oh! a while, but ha! ha! ha!

Oh! oh! grows out for ha! ha! ha!

Heigh-ho!

Helen. In love, I faith, to the very tip of the nose.

Par. He eats nothing but doves, love, and that breeds hot blood, and hot blood begets hot thoughts, and hot thoughts beget hot deeds, and hot deeds is love.

Pan. Is this the generation of love? ho blood, hot thoughts, and hot deeds? Why they are vipers: is love a generation of vipers? Sweet lord, who's a field-to-day!

armed to-day, but my men would not move so. How chance my brother Troilus went not?

Helen. He hangs the lip at something: you know all, Lord Pandarus.

Pan. Not I, honey-sweet queen. I long to hear how they sped to-day. You'll remember your brother's excuse?

Par. To a hair.

Pan. Farewell, sweet queen.

Helen. Commend me to your niece.

Pan. I will, sweet queen. [Exit.]

[A retreat sounded.]

Par. They're come from field: let us to Priam's hall,

To greet the warriors. Sweet Helen, I must woo you

To help unarm our Hector: his stubborn brother,

With these your white enchanting fingers

touch'd,

Shall more obey than to the edge of steel

Or force of Greekish sinews; you shall do more Than all the island kings,—disarm great Hector.

Helen. 'Twill make us proud to be his servant, Paris;

Yes, what he shall receive of us in duty
Gives us more palm in beauty than we have,
Yes, overwhelms himself.

Par. Sweet, above thought I love thee. 171
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. The same. Pandarus' orchard.

Enter PANDARUS and TROIUS' Boy, meeting.

Par. How now! where's thy master? at my cousin Cressida's?

Boy. No, sir; he stays for you to conduct him thither.

Par. O, here he comes.

Enter TROIUS.

How now, how now!

Tro. Sirrah, walk off. [Exit Boy.]

Par. Have you seen my cousin?

Tro. No, Pandarus: I stalk about her door,
Like a strange soul upon the Stygian banks
Staying for wassage. O, be thou my Charon,
And give me swift transporance to those fields
Where I may wallow in the lily-beds
Proposed for the deserver! O gentle Pandarus,
From Cupid's shoulder pluck his painted wings,
And fly with me to Cressid!

Par. Walk here 't the orchard, I'll bring her straight. [Exit.]

Tro. I am giddy; expectation whirls me round.

The imaginary relish is so sweet
That it enchants my sense: what will it be,
When that the watery palate tastes indeed
Love's thrice repured nectar? death, I fear me,
Swimming destruction, or some joy too fine,
Too subtle-potent, tuned too sharp in sweetness,
For the capacity of my ruder powers:
I fear it much; and I do fear besides,
That I shall lose distinction in my joys;
As doth a battle, when they charge on heaps
The enemy flying.

Re-enter PANDARUS.

Par. She's making her ready, she'll come straight: you must be witty now. She does so blush, and fetches her wind so short, as if she were frayed with a sprite: I'll fetch her. It is the prettiest villain: she fetches her breath as short as a new-taken sparrow. [Exit.]

Tro. Even such a passion doth embrace my bosom:

My heart beats thicker than a feverous pulse;
And all my powers do their bestowing lose,
Like vassalage at unawares encountering
The eye of majesty.

Re-enter PANDARUS with CRESSIDA.

Par. Come, come, what need you blush? shame's a baby. Here she is now: swear the oaths now to her that you have sworn to me. What are you gone again? you must be watched ere you be made tame, must you! Come your ways, come your ways! we'll put you 't the it speak to her? Come, draw this curtain, and let's see your picture. Alas the day, how loath you are to offend daylight! an 'twere dark, you'd close sooner. So, so; rub on, and kiss the mistress. How now! a kiss in fee-farm! build there, carpenter: the air is sweet. Nay, you shall fight your hearts out ere I part you. The falcon as the turtle, for all the ducks 't the river: go to, go to.

Tro. You have bereft me of all words, lady.

Par. Words pay no debts, give her deeds: but she'll bereave you o' the deeds too, if she call your activity in question. What, billing again? Here's 'In witness whereof the parties interchangeably'—Come in, come in: I'll get a fire. [Exit.]

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord?

Tro. O Cressida, how often have I wished me thus!

Cres. Wished, my lord! The gods grant,—O my lord!

Tro. What should they grant? what makes this pretty abrupton? What too curious dreg espies my sweet lady in the fountain of our love?

Cres. More dregs than water, if my fears have eyes.

Tro. Fears make devils of cherubins; they never see truly.

Cres. Blind fear, that seeing reason leads, finds safer footing than blind reason stumbling without fear: to fear the worst oft cures the worse.

Tro. O, let my lady apprehend no fear: in all Cupid's pagrant there is presented no monster.

Cres. Nor nothing monstrous neither!

Tro. Nothing, but our undertakings; when we vow to weep seas, live in fire, eat rocks, tame tigers; thinking it harder for our mistress to devise imposition enough than for us to undergo any difficulty imposed. This is the monstrously in love, lady, that the will is infinite and the execution confined, that the desire is boundless and the act a slave to limit.

Cres. They say all lovers swear more performance than they are able and yet reserve an ability that they never perform, vowing more than the perfection of ten and discharging less than the tenth part of one. They that have the voice of lions and the act of hares, are they not monsters?

Tro. Are there such? such are not we: praise us as we are tasted, allow us as we prove; our head shall go bare till merit crown it: no perfection in reversion shall have a pause in present: we will not name desert before his birth, and being born, his addition shall be humble. Few words to fair faith: Troilus shall be such to Cressid as what envy can say worst shall be a mock for his truth, and what truth can speak truest not truer than Troilus.

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord?

Re-enter PANDARUS.

Par. What, blushing still? have you not done talking yet?

Cres. Well, uncle, what folly I commit, I dedicate to you. 112

Pan. I thank you for that: if my lord get a boy of you, you'll give him me. Be true to my lord: if he flinch, chide me for it.

Tro. You know now your hostages; your uncle's word and my firm faith.

Pan. Nay, I'll give my word for her too: our kindred, though they be long ere they are wooed, they are constant being won: they are buns, I can tell you; they'll stick where they are thrown. 120

Cres. Boldness comes to me now, and brings me heart.

Prince Troilus, I have loved you night and day For many weary months.

Tro. Why was my Cressid then so hard to win!

Cres. Hard to seem won: but I was won, my lord,

With the first glance that ever—pardon me—

If I confess much, you will play the tyrant. I love you now; but not, till now, so much.

But I might master it: in faith, I lie; My thoughts were like unbridled children, grown Too headstrong for their mother. See, we fools!

Why have I blabb'd! who shall be true to us, When we are so unsecret to ourselves?

But, though I loved you well, I woo'd you not:

And yet, good faith, I wish'd myself a man, Or that we women had men's privilege

Of speaking first. Sweet, bid me hold my tongue,

For in this rapture I shall surely speak The thing I shall repent. See, see, your silence,

Cunning in dumbness, from my weakness draws 140

My very soul of counsel! stop my mouth.

Tro. And shall, albeit sweet music issues thence.

Pan. Pretty, I' faith.

Cres. My lord, I do beseech you, pardon me: 'Twas not my purpose, thus to beg a kiss:

I am ashamed. O heavens! what have I done? For this time will I take my leave, my lord.

Tro. Your leave, sweet Cressid!

Pan. Leave! an you take leave till to-morrow morning. 150

Cres. Pray you, content you.

Tro. What offends you, lady?

Cres. Sir, mine own company.

Tro. You cannot shun Yourself.

Cres. Let me go and try: I have a kind of self resides with you;

But an unkind self, that itself will leave, To be another's fool. I would be gone:

Where is my wit? I know not what I speak.

Tro. Well know they what they speak that speak so wisely.

Cres. Perchance, my lord, I show more craft than love;

And tell so roundly to a large confession, To make for your thoughts; but you are wise, Or else you love not, for to be wise and love

Exceeds man's might; that dwells with gods above.

Tro. O that I thought it could be in a woman—

As, if it can, I will presume in you—

To feed for aye her lamp and flames of love;

To keep her constancy in plight and youth,

Outliving beauty's outward, with a mind

That doth renew swifter than blood decays! 170

Or that persuasion could but thus convince me,

That my integrity and truth to you

Might be affronted with the match and weight

Of such a winnow'd purity in love;

How were I then uplifted! but, alas!

I am as true as truth's simplicity

And simpler than the infancy of truth.

Cres. In that I'll war with you.

Tro. O virtuous fight,

When right with right wars who shall be most right!

True swains in love shall in the world to come

Approve their truths by Troilus: when their rhymes, 181

Full of protest, of oath and big compare,

Want similes, truth tired with iteration,

As true as steel, as plantage to the moon,

As sun to day, as turtle to her mate,

As iron to adamant, as earth to the centre,

Yet, after all comparisons of truth,

As truth's authentic author to be cited,

'As true as Troilus' shall crown up the verse,

And sanctify the numbers.

Cres. Prophet may you be!

If I be false, or averse a hair from truth, 191

When time is old and hath forgot itself,

When waterdrops have worn the stones of Troy,

And blind oblivion swallow'd cities up,

And mighty states characterless are grated

To dusty nothing, yet let memory,

From false to false, among false maids in love,

Upbraid my falsehood! when they've said 'as false

As air, as water, wind, or sandy earth,

As fox to lamb, as wolf to heifer's calf, 200

Pard to the hind, or stepdame to her son,

'Yes,' let them say, to stick the heart of falsehood,

'As false as Cressid.'

Pan. Go to, a bargain made: seal it, seal it: I'll be the witness. Here I hold your hand, here my cousin's. If ever you prove false one to another, since I have taken such pains to bring you together, let all pitiful goers-between be called to the world's end and after my name:

call them all Pandars; let all constant men be

Troiluses, all false women Cressids, and all brokers-between Pandars! say, amen.

Tro. Amen.

Cres. Amen.

Pan. Amen. Whereupon I will show you a chamber with a bed; which bed, because it shall not speak of your pretty encounters, press

it to death: away!

And Cupid grant all tongue-tied maidens here

Bed, chamber, Pandar to provide this year!

Exeunt.

SCENE III. The Grecian camp. Before Achilles' tent.

Enter AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, DIOMEDES, NESTOR, AJAX, MENELAUS, and CALCHAS.

Cal. Now, princes, for the service I have done you,

The advantage of the time prompts me aloud
To call for recompense. Appear it to your mind!

† That, through the sight I bear in things to love.

I have abandon'd Troy, left my possession,
Incurr'd a traitor's name; exposed myself,
From certain and possess'd conveniences,
To doubtful fortunes; sequestering from me all
That time, acquaintance, custom and condition
Made tame and most familiar to my nature, 10
And here, to do you service, am become
As new into the world, strange, unacquainted:
I do beseech you, as in way of taste,
To give me now a little benefit,
Out of those many register'd in promise,
Which, you say, live to come in my behalf.

Agam. What wouldst thou of us, Trojan?
make demand.

Cal. You have a Trojan prisoner, call'd Antenor,

Yesterday took: Troy holds him very dear.
† Ift have you—often have you thanks therefore—
Desired my Cressid in right great exchange, 20
Whom Troy hath still denied: but this Antenor,
I know, is such a wrest in their affairs
That their negotiations all must slack,
Wanting his manage; and they will almost
Give us a prince of blood, a son of Priam,
In change of him: let him be sent, great
prince,

And he shall buy my daughter; and her
presence

Shall quite strike off all service I have done,
In most accepted pain.

Agam. Let Diomedes bear him, 30
And bring us Cressid hither: Calchas shall have
What he requests of us. Good Diomed,
Furnish you fairly for this interchange:
Withal bring word if Hector will to-morrow
Be answer'd in his challenge: Ajax is ready.

Dio. This shall I undertake; and 'tis a burden

Which I am proud to bear.

[Exeunt Diomedes and Calchas.]

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS, before their tent.

Ulys. Achilles stands 't the entrance of his
tent:

† Please it our general to pass strangely by him,
As if he were forgot; and, princes all, 40

Lay negligent and loose regard upon him:
I will come last. 'Tis like he'll question me

Why such uncomplaisive eyes are bent on him:
If so, I have derision medicinable,

To use between your strangeness and his pride,
Which his own will shall have desire to drink:

It may do good: pride hath no other glass
To show itself but pride, for supple knees

Feed arrogance and are the proud man's fees.

Agam. We'll execute your purpose, and put on

A form of strangeness as we pass along:
So do each lord, and either greet him not,

Or else disdainfully, which shall shake him
more

Than if not look'd on. I will lead the way.

Achil. What, comes the general to speak
with me?

You know my mind, I'll fight no more 'gainst
Troy.

Agam. What says Achilles? would he aught
with us?

Nest. Would you, my lord, aught with the general?

Achil. No.

Nest. Nothing, my lord.

Agam. The letter.

[Exeunt Agamemnon and Nestor.]

Achil. Good day, good day.

Men. How do you? how do you? [Exit.]

Achil. What, does the cuckold scorn me?

Ajax. How now, Patroclus!

Achil. Good morrow, Ajax.

Ajax. Ha?

Achil. Good morrow.

Ajax. Ay, and good next day too. [Exit.]

Achil. What mean these fellows? Know they not Achilles?

Patr. They pass by strangely: they were used to bend,

To send their smiles before them to Achilles;

To come as humbly as they used to creep

To holy altars.

Achil. What, am I poor of late?

'Tis certain, greatness, once fall'n out with fortune,

Must fall out with men too: what the declined is
He shall as soon read in the eyes of others

As feel in his own fall: for men, like butterflies,
Show not their mealy wings but to the summer,

And not a man, for being simply man, 30
Hath any honour, but honour for those honours

That are without him, as place, riches, favour,
Prizes of accident as oft as merit;

Which when they fall, as being slippery slanders,
The love that lean'd on them as slippery too,

Do one pluck down another and together
Die in the fall. But 'tis not so with me:

Fortune and I are friends: I do enjoy
At ample point all that I did possess,

Save these men's looks; who do, methinks,
find out

Something not worth in me such rich beholding
As they have often given. Here is Ulysses:

I'll interrupt his reading.

How now, Ulysses!

Ulys. Now, great Thetis' son!

Achil. What are you reading?

Ulys. A strange fellow here
Writes me: 'That man, how dearly ever parted,

How much in having, or without or in,
Cannot make boast to have that which he hath,

Nor feels not what he owns, but by mutation;
As when his virtues shining upon others

Heat them and they seek to heat again
To the first giver.'

Achil. This is not strange, Ulysses.
The beauty that is borne here in the face
The bearer knows not, but commends itself
To others' eyes; nor doth the eye itself,
That most pure spirit of sense, behold itself,
Not going from itself; but eye to eye opposed
Salutes each other with each other's form;
For speculation turns not to itself.
Till it hath travell'd and is mirror'd there 110
Where it may see itself. This is not strange at all.

Ulyss. I do not strain at the position.—
It is familiar,—but at the author's drift;
Who, in his circumstance, expressly proves
That no man is the lord of any thing,
Though in and of him there be much consisting,
Till he communicate his parts to others;
Nor doth he of himself know them for aught
Till he behold them form'd in the applause
Where they're extended; who, like an arch, reverberates 120

The voice again, or, like a gate of steel
Fronting the sun, receives and renders back His figure and his heat. I was much wrapt in
this;

And apprehended here immediately
The unknown Ajax.
Heavens, what a man is there! a very horse,
That has he knows not what. Nature, what things there are
Most object in regard and dear in use!
What things again most dear in the esteem
And poor in worth! Now shall we see tomorrow— 130

An act that very chance doth throw upon him—
Ajax renown'd. O heavens, what some men do,
While some men leave to do!
How some men creep in skittish fortune's hall,
While others play the idiots in her eyes!
How one man eats into another's pride,
While pride is fasting in his wantonness!
To see these Grecian lords!—why, even already
They clasp the lubber Ajax on the shoulder,
As if his foot were on brave Hector's breast 140
And great Troy shrieking.

Achil. I do believe it; for they pass'd by me
As misers do by beggars, neither gave to me
Good word nor look: what, are my deeds forgot?

Ulyss. Time hath, my lord, a wallet at his
back,

Wherein he puts aims for oblivion,
A great-sized monster of ingratitude:
Those scraps are good deeds past; which are forgotten 150

As fast as they are made, forgot as soon
As done: perseverance, dear my lord,
Keeps honour bright: to have done is to hang Quite out of fashion, like a rusty mail
In monumental mockery. Take the instant
way;

For honour travels in a strain so narrow,
Where one but goes ahead: keep then the path;

The multitude hath a thousand souls
That run by one passage: if you give way,
Others will come from the direct southward,
And so all enter'd tide, they all rush by.

And leave you hindmost:
Or, like a gallant horse fall'n in first rank,
Lie there for pavement to the abject rear,
O'er-run and trampled on: then what they do
in present,

Though less than yours in past, must o'er-top
yours;

For time is like a fashionable ha—
That slightly shakes his parting guest by the
hand,

And with his arms outstretch'd, as he would fly,
Grasps in the comer: welcome ever smiles,
And farewell goes out sighing. O, let not virtue seek

Remuneration for the thing it was; 170

For beauty, wit,
High birth, vigour of bone, desert in service,
Love, friendship, charity, are subjects all
To envious and calumniating time.
One touch of nature makes the whole world kin,
That all with one consent praise new-born
gawds,

Though they are made and moulded of things
past,

And give to dust that is a little gilt
More laud than gilt o'er-dusted.

The present eye praises the present object: 180
Then marvel not, thou great and complete man,
That all the Greeks begin to worship Ajax;
Since things in motion sooner catch the eye
Than what is not stirr'd. The cry went once on thee,
And still it might, and yet it may again,
If thou wouldst not entomb thyself alive
And case thy reputation in thy tent;
Whose glorious deeds, but in these fields of late,

Made emulous missions 'mongst the gods themselves

And drove great Mars to faction.

Achil. Of this my privacy 190
I have strong reasons.

Ulyss. But 'gainst your privacy
The reasons are more potent and heroic:
'Tis known, Achilles, that you are in love
With one of Priam's daughters.

Achil. Ha! known! 200

Ulyss. Is that a wonder?
The providence that's in a watchful state
Knows almost every grain of Plutus' gold,
Finds bottom in the uncomprehensive deeps, Keeps place with thought and almost, like the
gods,

Does thoughts unveil in their dumb cradles. 210
There is a mystery—with whom relation
Durst never meddle—in the soul of state;

Which hath an operation more divine
Than breath or pen can give expression to:
All the commerce that you have had with Troy
As perfectly is ours as yours, my lord;
And better would it be Achilles' much
To throw down Hector than Polyxenus:
But it must grieve young Pyrrhus now at home.
When fame shall in our islands sound her trump,

And all the Greekish girls shall trippling sing,
'Great Hector's sister and Achilles' win,
But our great Ajax heavily beat down him.
Farewell, my lord; I am your lover's speak.

The fool slides o'er the ice that you should break.

Patr. To this effect, Achilles, have I moved you:

A woman impudent and mannish grown
Is not more loathed than an effeminate man
In time of action. I stand condemn'd for this;
They think my little stomach to the war
And your great love to me restrains you thus:
Sweet, rouse yourself; and the weak wanton

Cupid

Shall from your neck unlodge his amorous fold,
And, like a dew-drop from the lion's mane,
Be shook to air.

Achil. Shall Ajax fight with Hector?

Patr. Ay, and perhaps receive much honour by him.

Achil. I see my reputation is at stake;
My fame is shrewdly gored.

Patr. O, then, beware;
Those wounds heal ill that men do give themselves:

Omission to do what is necessary
Seals a commission to a blank of danger;
And danger, like an ague, subtly taints
Even then when we sit idly in the sun.

Achil. Go call Thersites hither, sweet Patroclus:

I'll send the fool to Ajax and desire him
To invite the Trojan lords after the combat
To see us here unarm'd: I have a woman's longing,

An appetite that I am sick withal,
To see great Hector in his weeds of peace,
To talk with him and to behold his visage,
Even to my full of view.

Enter THERSITES.

A labour saved!

Ther. A wonder!

Achil. What?

Ther. Ajax goes up and down the field, asking for himself.

Achil. How so?

Ther. He must fight singly to-morrow with Hector, and is so prophetically proud of an heroical cudgelling that he raves in saying nothing.

Achil. How can that be?

Ther. Why, he stalks up and down like a peacock,—a stride and a stand; ruminates like an hostess that hath no arithmetic but her brain to set down her reckoning; bites his lip with a politic regard, as who should say 'There were wit in this head, an 'twould out;' and so there is, but it lies as coldly in him as fire in a flint, which will not show without knocking. The man's undone for ever; for if Hector break not his neck i' the combat, he'll break 't himself in vain-glory. He knows not me: I said 'Good morrow, Ajax;' and he replies
'Thanks, Agamemnon.' What think you of this man that takes me for the general? He's grown a very land-fish, languidness, a promoter.
A plague of opinion! a man may wear it on both sides, like a leather jerkin.

Achil. Thou must be my him, Thersites.

Ther. Who, I? why, he'll answer nobody;
he professes not answering; speaking is for beggars; he wears his tongue in 's arms. I will put on his presence; let Patroclus make demands to me, you shall see the pageant of Ajax.

Achil. To him, Patroclus: tell him I humbly desire the valiant Ajax to invite the most valorous Hector to come unarmed to my tent, and to procure safe-conduct for his person of the magnanimous and most illustrious six-or-seven-times-honoured captain-general of the Grecian army, Agamemnon, et cetera. Do
this.

Patr. Jove bless great Ajax!

Ther. Hum!

Patr. I come from the worthy Achilles,—

Ther. Ha!

Patr. Who most humbly desires you to invite Hector to his tent,—

Ther. Hum!

Patr. And to procure safe-conduct from Agamemnon.

Ther. Agamemnon!

Patr. Ay, my lord.

Ther. Ha!

Patr. What say you to 't?

Ther. God b' w' you, with all my heart.

Patr. Your answer, sir.

Ther. If to-morrow be a fair day, by eleven o'clock it will go one way or other: however, he shall pay for me ere he has me.

Patr. Your answer, sir.

Ther. Fare you well, with all my heart.

Achil. Why, but he is not in this tune, is he?

Ther. No, but he's out o' tune thus. What music will be in him when Hector has knocked out his brains, I know not; but, I am sure, none, unless the fiddler Apollo get his staves to make eatings on.

Achil. Come, thou shalt bear a letter to him
straight.

Ther. Let me hear another to his horse; for that's the more capable creature.

Achil. My mind is troubled, like a fountain
stirr'd:

And I myself see not the bottom of it.

[Exit Achilles and Patroclus.]
Ther. Would the fountain of your mind were clear again, that I might water an ass at it! I had rather be a tick in a sheep than such a valiant ignorance.

ACT IV.

SCENE I. Troy. A street.

Enter, from one side, HELEN, and from the other, PARIS, DI-PHOBUS, ANTEOR, DIOMEDES, and others, with torches.

Par. See, ho! who is that there?

Des. It is the Lord.

Ante. Is the prince there in person?
Had I so good occasion to lie long As you, Prince Paris, nothing but business.

Should rob my bed-mate of my company.

Dia. That's my mind too. Good morrow,
Lord Aeneas.

Par. A valiant Greek, Aeneas,—take his
hand,—

Witness the process of your speech, wherein
You told how Diomed, a whole week by days,
Did haunt you in the field.

Aeneas. Health to you, valiant sir, 10
Daring all question of the gentle truce;

But when I meet you arm'd, as black defiance
As heart can think or courage execute.

Dia. The one and other Diomed embraces.
Our bloods are now in calm; and, so long,
health!

But when contention and occasion meet,

By Jove, I'll play the hunter for thy life

With all my force, pursuit and policy.

Aeneas. And thou shalt hunt a lion, that will fly

With his face backward. In humane gentle-

—Welcome to Troy! now, by Anchises' life,

Welcome, indeed! By Venus' hand I swear,

No man alive can love in such a sort

The thing he means to kill more excellently.

Dia. We sympathise: Jove, let Aeneas live,

If to my sword his fate be not the glory,

A thousand complete courses of the sun!

But, in mine emulous honour, let him die.

With every joint a wound, and that to-morrow!

Aeneas. We know each other well. 30

Dia. We do; and long to know each other verse.

Par. This is the most spiteful gentle greeting.

The noblest hateful love, that e'er I heard of.

What business, lord, so early?

Aeneas. I was sent for to the king; but why,
I know not.

Par. His purpose meets you: 'twas to bring this Greek

To Calchas' house, and there to render him,

For the entf'red Antenor, the fair Cressid:

Let's have your company, or, if you please,

Haste there before us: I constantly do think—

Or rather, call my thought a certain knowledge— 41

My brother Troilus lodges there to-night:

Excuse him and give him note of our approach,

With the whole quality wherefore: I fear

We shall be much unwelcome.

Aeneas. That I assure you:

Troilus had rather Troy were borne to Greece

Than Cressid borne from Troy.

Par. There is no help;

The bitter disposition of the time

Will have it so. On, lord; we'll follow you.

Aeneas. Good morrow, all. 50

Par. And tell me, noble Diomed, faith, tell me true,

What in the soul of sound good-fellowship,

What in your thoughts, merits fair Helen best,

More or less?

Dia. Both alike:

He needs will to have her, that doth seek her,

Not making any scruple of her solace,

With such a hell of pain and world of charge,

And you as well to keep her, that defend her,

Not palating the taste of her dishonour,

With such a costly loss of wealth and friends:

He, like a puling cuckold, would drink up 61

The lees and dregs of a flat tainted piece;

You, like a lecher, out of whorish loins

Are pleased to breed out your inheritors:

Both merits poised, each weighs nor less nor
more;

But he as he, the heavier for a whore.

Par. You are too bitter to your country-
woman.

Dia. She's bitter to her country: hear me,
Paris:

For every false drop in her bawdy veins

A Grecian's life hath sunk; for every scruple

Of her contaminated carrion weight,

A Trojan hath been slain: since she could
speak,

She hath not given so many good words breath

As for her Greeks and Trojans suffer'd death.

Par. Fair Diomed, you do as chapmen do,

Dispraise the thing that you desire to buy:

But we in silence hold this virtue well,

We'll but commend what we intend to sell.

Here lies our way. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. The same. Court of Pandarus'
house.

Enter TROILUS and CRESSIDA.

Tro. Dear, trouble not yourself; the morn is cold.

Cres. Then, sweet my lord, I'll call mine uncle down;

He shall unbolt the gates.

Tro. Trouble him not;

To bed, to bed: sleep kill those pretty eyes,

And give as soft attachment to thy senses

As infants' empty of all thought!

Cres. Good morrow, then.

Tro. I prithee now, to bed.

Cres. Are you a-weary of me!

Tro. O Cressida; but that the busy day,

Waked by the lark, hath roused the ribald crows.

And dreaming night will hide our joys no longer. 10

I would not from thee.

Cres. Night hath been too brief.

Tro. Beshrew the witch! with venomous wights she stays

As tediously as hell, but flies the grapple of love

With wings more momentary-swift than
thought.

You will catch cold, and curse me.

Cres. Prithee, tarry:

You men will never tarry.

O foolish Cressid! I might have still held off,

And then you would have tarried. Hark!

there's one up.

Par. [Within] What's all the doers open
here?

Tro. It is your uncle.

Cres. A pestilence on him! now will he be mocking:

I shall have such a life!

Enter PANDARUS.

Pan. How now, how now! how go maiden-heads? Here, you maid! where's my cousin Cressid?

Cres. Go hang yourself, you naughty mocking uncle!

You bring me to do, and then you flout me too.

Pan. To do what? to do what? let her say what: what have I brought you to do?

Cres. Come, come, beshrew your heart! you'll ne'er be good, 30

Nor suffer others.

Pan. Ha, ha! Alas, poor wretch! ah, poor capocchia! hast not slept to-night? would he not, a naughty man, let it sleep? a bugbear take him!

Cres. Did not I tell you? Would he were knock'd! the head! [Knocking within.]

Who's that at door? good uncle, go and see.

My lord, come you again into my chamber:

You smile and mock me, as if I meant naughtily.

Tro. Ha, ha! 39

Cres. Come, you are deceived, I think of no such thing. [Knocking within.]

How earnestly they knock! Pray you, come in: I would not for half Troy have you seen here.

[Exeunt Troilus and Cressida.]

Pan. Who's there! what's the matter! will you beat down the door? How now! what's the matter!

Enter ÆNEAS.

Æne. Good morrow, lord, good morrow.

Pan. Who's there! my Lord Æneas! By my troth,

I knew you not: what news with you so early?

Æne. Is not Prince Troilus here?

Pan. Here! what should he do here! 50

Æne. Come, he is here, my lord; do not deny him;

It doth import him much to speak with me.

Pan. Is he here, say you? 'tis more than I know, I'll be sworn: for my own part, I came in late.

What should he do here?

Æne. Who!—nay, then: come, come, you'll do him wrong ere you're ware: you'll be so true to him, to be false to him: do not you know of him, but yet go fetch him hither; go.

Re-enter TROILUS.

Tro. How now! what's the matter! 60

Æne. My lord, I scarce have leisure to salute you,

My matter is so rash: there is at hand Paris your brother, and Diomedes, The Grecian Diomed, and our Antenor Deliver'd to us; and for him forthwith, Ere the first sacrifice, within this hour, We must give up to Diomedes' hand The Lady Cressida.

Tro. Is it so concluded?

Æne. By Priam and the general state of Troy:

They are at hand and ready to effect it.

Tro. How may achievements mock me! I will go meet them: and, my Lord Æneas,

We met by chance; you did not find me here.

Æne. Good, good, my lord; the secrets of nature

Have not more gift in taciturnity.

[Exeunt Troilus and Æneas.]

Pan. Is't possible! no sooner got but lost!

The devil take Antenor! the young prince will go mad: a plague upon Antenor! I would they had broke's neck!

Re-enter CRESSIDA.

Cres. How now! what's the matter? who was here! 81

Pan. Ah, ah!

Cres. Why sigh you so profoundly! where's my lord? gone! Tell me, sweet uncle, what's the matter!

Pan. Would I were as deep under the earth as I am above!

Cres. O the gods! what's the matter!

Pan. Prithce, get thee in: would thou hadst ne'er been born! I knew thou wouldst be his death.

O, poor gentleman! A plague upon Antenor!

Cres. Good uncle, I beseech you, on my knees I beseech you, what's the matter!

Pan. Thou must be gone, wench, thou must be gone; thou art changed for Antenor: thou must to thy father, and be gone from Troilus: 'twill be his death; 'twill be his bane; he cannot bear it.

Cres. O you immortal gods! I will not go.

Pan. Thou must. 101

Cres. I will not, uncle: I have forgot my father;

I know no touch of consanguinity;

No kin, no love, no blood, no soul so near me

As the sweet Troilus. O you gods divine!

Make Cressid's name the very crown of falsehood,

If ever she leave Troilus! Time, force, and death,

Do to this body what extremes you can;

But the strong base and building of my love

Is as the very centre of the earth, 110

Drawing all things to it. I'll go in and weep.

Pan. Do, do.

Cres. Tear my bright hair and scratch my prained cheeks,

Crack my clear voice with sobs and break my heart

With sounding Troilus. I will not go from Troy. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. The same. Street before Pandarus' house.

Enter PARIS, TROILUS, ÆNEAS, DIOMEDES, ANTENOR, and DIOMEDES.

Par. It is great morning, and the hour proffer'd

Of her delivery to this valiant Greek

Comes fast upon. Good my brother Troilus,

Tell you the lady what she is to do, And haste her to the purpose.

Tro. Walk into her house;

I'll bring her to the Grecian presently:
And to his hand when I deliver her,
Think it an altar, and thy brother Troilus
A priest there offering to it his own heart.

[Exit.

Par. I know what 'tis to love;
And would, as I shall pity, I could help!
Please you walk in, my lords. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. The same. Pandarus' house.

Enter PANDARUS and CRESSIDA.

Par. Be moderate, be moderate.

Cres. Why tell you me of moderation?
The grief is fine, full, perfect, that I taste,
And violenteth in a sense as strong
As that which causeth it: how can I moderate
It?

If I could temporise with my affection,
Or brew it to a weak and colder palate,
The like allayment could I give my grief:
My love admits no qualifying dross;
No more my grief, in such a precious loss.

Par. Here, here, here he comes.

Enter TROILUS.

Ah, sweet ducks!

Cres. O Troilus! Troilus! [Embracing him.

Par. What a pair of spectacles is here!
Let me embrace too. 'O heart,' as the goodly saying is,

—O heart, heavy heart,
Why sigh'st thou without breaking?

where he answers again,
'Because thou canst not ease thy smart
By friendship nor by speaking.'

There was never a truer rhyme. Let us cast away nothing, for we may live to have need of such a verse: we see it, we see it. How now, lamb!

Tro. Cressid, I love thee in so strain'd a purity,

That the bless'd gods, as angry with my fancy,
More bright in seal than the devotion which Cold lips blow to their deities, take thee from me.

Cres. Have the gods envy?

Par. Ay, ay, ay, ay; 'tis too plain a case.

Cres. And is it true that I must go from Troy?

Tro. A hateful truth.

Cres. What, and from Troilus too?

Tro. From Troy and Troilus.

Cres. Is it possible?

Tro. And suddenly; where injury of chance Puts back leave-taking, justles roughly by
All kind of pause, rudely beguiles our lips
Of all rejoinders, forcibly prevents

Our best and sweetest, strangles our dear vows
Even in the birth of our own labouring breath:
We two, that with so many thousand sighs

And sighs each other, must poorly sell ourselves
To a rude levity and discharge of one.

In such a time now with a robber's haste
Ourselves are driven away up, he knows not how:

As heavy fountains as he goes in heaven,
With such a sudden and strange d'stance to

He fumbles up into a loose adieu,
And scants us with a single furnish'd kiss,
Distasted with the salt of broken tears.

Ans. [Within.] My lord, is the lady ready?

Tro. Mark! you are call'd: some say the Genius so

Cries 'come' to him that instantly must die.
Bid them have patience; she shall come anon.

Par. Where are my tears? rain, to lay this wind, or my heart will be blown up by the root.

[Exit.

Cres. I must then to the Grecians?

Tro. No remedy.

Cres. A woful Cressid 'mongst the merry Greeks!

When shall we see again?

Tro. Hear me, my love: be thou but true
Of heart,—

Cres. I true! how now! what wicked deem is this?

Tro. Nay, we must use expostulation kindly,
For it is parting from us:

I speak not 'be thou true,' as fearing thee,
For I will throw my glove to Death himself.

That there's no maculation in thy heart:
But 'be thou true,' say I, to fashion in My sequent protestation: be thou true,

And I will ease thee.

Cres. O, you shall be exposed, my lord, to dangers

As infinite as imminent! but I'll be true.

Tro. And I'll grow friend with danger.

Wear this sleeve.

Cres. And you this glove. When shall I see you?

Tro. I will corrupt the Grecian sentinels,
To give thee nightly visitation.

But yet be true.

Cres. O heavens! 'be true' again!

Tro. Hear why I speak it, love:
The Grecian youths are full of quality;

They're loving, well composed with gifts of nature,

Flowing and swelling o'er with arts and exercise:

How novelty may move, and parts with person,
Alas, a kind of godly jealousy—

Which, I beseech you, call a virtuous sin—
Makes me afraid.

Cres. O heavens! you love me not.

Tro. Die I a villain, then!

In this I do not call your faith in question
So mainly as my merit: I cannot sing,

Nor heal the high levell, nor sweeten talk,
Nor play at subtle games; fair virtues all,

To which the Grecians are most prompt and pregnant:

But I can tell that in each grace of these
There lurks a still and dumb-discourte devil

That tempts most cunningly: but he not tempted.

Cres. Do you think I will?

Tro. No.

But something may be done that we will not:
And sometimes we are devils to ourselves,

When we will tempt the faculty of our power,
Presuming on their changeful potency.

Ans. [Within.] Alas, good my lord,

Tro. Come, kiss; and let us part. 300

Par. [Within] Brother Troilus!

Tro. Good brother, come you hither; And bring Æneas and the Grecian with you.

Cres. My lord, will you be true?

Tro. Who, I! alas, it is my vice, my fault: Whilst others flash with craft for great opinion,

I with great truth catch more simplicity; Whilst some with cunning gild their copper crowns,

With truth and plainness I do wear mine bare. Fear not my truth: the moral of my wit is 'plain and true'; there's all the reach of it.

Enter ÆNEAS, PARIS, ANTEOR, DEIPHOBUS, and DIOMEDES.

Welcome, Sir Diomed! here is the lady 111 Which for Antenor we deliver you;

At the port, lord, I'll give her to thy hand; And by the way possess thee what she is.

Entreat her fair; and, by my soul, fair Greek, If e'er thou stand at mercy of my sword,

Name Cressid, and thy life shall be as safe As Priam is in Ilium.

Dio. Fair Lady Cressid, So please you, save the thanks this prince expects:

The lustre in your eye, heaven in your cheek, Leads your fair usage; and to Diomed 117

You shall be mistress, and command him wholly.

Tro. Grecian, thou dost not use me courteously.

To shame the zeal of my petition to thee In praising her: I tell thee, lord of Greece,

She is as far high-scoring o'er thy praises As thou unworthy to be call'd her servant.

I charge thee use her well, even for my charge; For, by the dreadful Pluto, if thou dost not,

Though the great bulk Achilles be thy guard, I'll cut thy throat.

Dio. O, be not moved, Prince Troilus: Let me be privileged by my place and message,

To be a speaker free; when I am hence, I'll answer to my lust: and know you, lord,

I'll nothing do on charge: to her own worth She shall be prized; but that you say 'be't so,'

I'll speak it in my spirit and honour, 'no.'

Tro. Come, to the port. I'll tell thee, Diomed,

This brave shall oft make thee to hide thy head.

120 give me your hand, and, as we walk, 120 To our own selves bend we our needful talk.

Re-enter Troilus, Cressida, and Diomedes. [Trumpet within.]

Par. Hark! Hector's trumpet.

Æne. How have we spent this morning! The prince must think me tardy and remiss,

That swore to ride before him to the field.

Par. 'Tis Troilus' fault: come, come, to field with him.

Des. Let us make ready straight.

Æne. Yes, with a bridgman's fire. Let us address to lead on Hector's heels:

... glory of our Troy doth this day lie 125 On his fair worth and single chivalry. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. The Grecian camp. Lists set out.

Enter AJAX, armed; AGAMEMNON, ACHILLES, PATROCLUS, MENELAUS, ULYSSES, NESTOR, and others.

Agam. Here art thou in appointment fresh and fair,

Anticipating time with starting courage. Give with thy trumpet a loud note to Troy,

Thou dreadful Ajax; that the appalled air May pierce the head of the great combatant

And hale him hither.

Ajax. Thou, trumpet, there's my purse. Now crack thy lungs, and split thy brazen pipe:

Blow, villain, till thy spher'd bias cheek Outswell the colic of puff'd Aquilon:

Come, stretch thy chest, and let thy eyes spout blood;

Thou blow'st for Hector. [Trumpet sounds. 10]

Ulyss. No trumpet answers.

Achil. 'Tis but early day, Agam. Is not yond Diomed, with Calchas' daughter?

Ulyss. 'Tis he, I ken the manner of his gait; He rises on the toe: that spirit of his

In aspiration lifts him from the earth.

Enter DIOMEDES, with CRESSIDA.

Agam. Is this the Lady Cressid? Dio. Even she.

Agam. Most dearly welcome to the Greeks, sweet lady.

Nest. Our general doth salute you with a kiss.

Ulyss. Yet is the kindness but particular; 'Twere better she were kiss'd in general. 21

Nest. And very courtly counsel: I'll begin. So much for Nestor.

Achil. I'll take that winter from your lips, fair lady:

Achilles bids you welcome.

Men. I had good argument for kissing thee.

Patr. But that's no argument for kissing now;

For thus popp'd Paris in his handiment, And parted thus you and your argument.

Ulyss. O deadly gail, and theme of all our scorn! 30

For which we lose our heads to gild his horns.

Patr. The first was Mountebank him; this, mine;

Patroclus kisses you.

Men. O, this is trim! Patr. Paris and I kiss evenmore for him.

Men. I'll have my kiss, sir. Lady, by your leave,

Cres. In kissing, do you render or receive?

Patr. Both take and give.

Cres. I'll make my match to him. The kiss you take is better than you give:

Therefore no kiss. Men. I'll give you boot, I'll give you thanks for egg.

Cres. You're an odd man; give once, or give none.

Men. An odd man, lady! every man is odd.

Cres. No, Paris is not; for you know 'tis true,
That you are odd, and he is even with you.

Men. You fillip me o' the head.

Cres. No, I'll be sworn.

Ulyss. It were no match, your nail against

May I, sweet lady, beg a kiss of you?

Cres. You may.

Ulyss. I do desire it.

Cres. Why, beg, then.

Ulyss. Why then for Venus' sake, give me a kiss.

When Helen is a maid again, and his.

Cres. I am your debtor, claim it when 'tis due.

Ulyss. Never's my day, and then a kiss of you.

Dio. Lady, a word: I'll bring you to your father. [Exit with Cressida.]

Nest. A woman of quick sense.

Ulyss. Fie, fie upon her!
There's language in her eye, her cheek, her lip,
Nay, her foot speaks; her wanton spirits look out

At every joint and motive of her body.
O, these encounters, so glib of tongue,
That give accounting welcome ere it comes,
And wide unclasp the tables of their thoughts
To every ticklish reader! set them down
For suttish spoils of opportunity
And daughters of the game. [Trumpet within.]

All. The Trojans' trumpet.

Agam. Yonder comes the troop.

Enter HECTOR, armed; ÆNEAS, TROIILUS, and other Trojans, with Attendants.

Æne. Hail, all you state of Greece! what shall be done
To him that victory commands! or do you purpose

A victor shall be known! will you the knights
Shall to the edge of all extremity
Pursue each other, or shall be divided
By any voice or order of the field?
Hector bade ask.

Agam. Which way would Hector have it?

Æne. He cares not; he'll obey conditions.

Achil. 'Tis done like Hector; but securely done.

A Hele proudly, and great deal misprizing
The knight opposed.

Æne. If not Achilles, sir,

What is your name?

Achil. If not Achilles, nothing.

Æne. Therefore Achilles: but, whatever, know this:

In the extremity of great and little,
Valour and pride excel themselves in Hector;
The one almost as infinite as all,
The other blank as nothing. Weigh him well,
And that which looks like pride is courtesy.

This Ajax is half made of Hector's blood:
In love whereof, half Hector stays at home;

Half heart, half hand, half Hector comes to seek.

This blunder knight, half Trojan and half Greek.

Achil. A maiden battle, then! O, I perceive you.

Re-enter DIOMEDES.

Agam. Here is Sir Diomed. / Go, gentle knight,

Stand by our Ajax: as you and I, Æneas
Consent upon the order of their fight,
So be it; either to the uttermost,
Or else a breath: the combatants bring kin

Half stints their strife before it is stroken begin. [Ajax and Hector enter, the lists.]

Ulyss. They are opposed already.

Agam. What Trojan is that same that looks so heavy?

Ulyss. The youngest son of Priam, a true knight.

Not yet mature, yet matchless, firm of word,
Speaking in deeds and deedless in his tongue;
Not soon provoked nor being provoked soon calm'd:

His heart and hand both open and both free:
For what he has he gives, what thinks he he shows;

Yet gives he not till judgement guide his bounty,
Nor dignifies an impair thought with breath;

Manly as Hector, but more dangerous;
For Hector in his blaze of wrath subscribes

To tender objects, but he in heat of action
Is more vindictive than jealous love:

They call him Troilus, and on him erect
A second hope, as fairly built as Hector.

Thus says Æneas; one that knows the youth
Even to his inelms, and with private soul

Did in great Ilion thus translate him to me.

[Alarum. Hector and Ajax fight.]

Agam. They are in action.

Nest. Now, Ajax, hold thine own!

Tro. Hector, thou sleep'st!

Awake thee!
Agam. His blows are well disposed: there,

Ajax!

Dio. You must no more. [Trumpets cease.]

Æne. Princes, enough, so please you.

Ajax. I am not warri yet; let us fight again.

Dio. As Hector pleases.

Hect. Why, then will I no more:
Thou art, great lord, my father's sister's son,

A cousin-german to great Priam's seed; 121
The obligation of our blood forbids

A gory emulation 'twixt us twain:
Were thy commixtion Greek and Trojan so

That thou couldst say 'This hand is Grecian all,
And this is Trojan; the sinews of this leg

All Greek, and this all Troy; my mother's blood

Runs on the dexter cheek, and this sinister
Bounds in my father's; by Jove omnipotent,

Thou shouldst not bear from me a Greekish member 120

Wherein my sword had not impressure made
Of our rank feud: but the just gods gainsey

That any drop thou borrow'dst from thy mother,
My sacred aunt, should by my mortal sword

Be drain'd! Let me embrace thee, Ajax:
By him that thunders, thou hast tany arms;

Hector would have them fall upon him thus:

Cousin, all honour to thee!

Ajax. I thank thee, Hector: Thou art too gentle and too free a man: I came to kill thee, cousin, and bear hence 140 A great addition earned in thy death.

Hect. Not Neoptolemus so mirable, On whose bright crest Fame with her loud'st Oyes Cries 'This is he' could promise to himself A thought of added honour torn from Hector.

Ene. There is expectation here from both the sides,

What further you will do.

Hect. We'll answer it; The issue is embracement: Ajax, farewell.

Ajax. If I might in entreaties find success— As wold I have the chance—I would desire 150 My famous cousin to our Grecian tents.

Dio. 'Tis Agamemnon's wish, and great Achilles

Doth long to see unarm'd the valiant Hector.

Hect. Aeneas, call my brother Troilus to me, And signify this loving interview

To the expecters of our Trojan part; Desire them home. Give me thy hand, my cousin;

I will go eat with thee and see your knights.

Ajax. Great Agamemnon comes to meet us here.

Hect. The worthiest of them tell me name by name; 160

But for Achilles, mine own searching eyes Shall find him by his large and portly size.

Agas. Worthy of arms! as welcome as to one

That would be rid of such an enemy; But that's no welcome: understand more clear.

What's past and what's to come is strew'd with husks

And formless ruin of oblivion; But in this extant moment, faith and troth,

Strain'd purely from all hollow bias-drawing, Hids thee, with most divine integrity, 170

From heart of very heart, great Hector, welcome.

Hect. I thank thee, most imperious Agamemnon.

Agas. [To Troilus] My well-famed lord of Troy, no less to you.

Men. Let me confirm my princely brother's greeting:

You brace of warlike brothers, welcome hither.

Hect. Who must we answer?

Ene. The noble Menelaus.

Hect. O, you, my lord! by Mars his gauntlet, thanks!

Mock not, that I affect the untraded oath; Your quondam wife swears still by Venus' glove;

She's well, but bade me not commend her to you. 180

Men. Name her not now, sir; she's a deadly theme.

Hect. O, pardon; I offend.

Nest. I have, thou gallant Trojan, seen these oft

Labouring for destiny make cruel way Through ranks of Greekish youth, and I have seen thee,

As hot as Perseus, spur thy Phrygian steed, Despising many forfeits and subduements, When thou hast hung thy advanced sword f the air,

Not letting it decline on the declined, That I have said to some my standers by 190

'Lo, Jupiter is yonder, dealing life!' And I have seen thee pause and take thy breath,

When that a ring of Greeks have hemm'd thee in,

Like an Olympian wrestling: this have I seen; But this thy countenance, still lock'd in steel,

I never saw till now. I knew thy grandsire, And once fought with him: he was a soldier good;

But, by great Mars, the captain of us all, Never like thee. Let an old man embrace thee; And, worthy warrior, welcome to our tents. 200

Ene. 'Tis the old Nestor.

Hect. Let me embrace thee, good old chronicle,

That hast so long walk'd hand in hand with time:

Most reverend Nestor, I am glad to clasp thee.

Nest. I would my arms could match thee in contention,

As they contend with thee in courtesy.

Hect. I would they could.

Nest. Ha! By this white beard, I'd fight with thee to-morrow.

Well, welcome, welcome!—I have seen the time. 210

Ulyss. I wonder now how yonder city stands When we have here her base and pillar by us.

Hect. I know your favour, Lord Ulysses, well.

Ah, sir, there's many a Greek and Trojan dead, Since first I saw yourself and Diomed

In Ilion, on your Greekish embassy.

Ulyss. Sir, I foretold you then what would ensue:

My prophecy is but half his journey yet; For yonder walls, that perty front your town,

Yond towers, whose wanton tops do buss the clouds, 220

Must kiss their own feet.

Hect. I must not believe you: There they stand yet, and modestly I think,

The fall of every Phrygian stone will cost A drop of Grecian blood: the end crowns all,

And that old common arbitrator, Time, Will one day end it.

Ulyss. So to him we leave it. Most gentle and most valiant Hector, welcome:

After the general, I beseech you next To feast with me and see me at my tent.

Achil. I shall forestall thee, Lord Ulysses, thou! 230

Now, Hector, I have fed mine eyes on thee; I have with exact view perused thee, Hector,

And quoted joint by joint.

Hect. Is this Achilles?

Achil. I am Achilles.

Hect. Stand fast, I pray thee: let me look on thee.

Achil. Behold thy fill.

Hec. Nay, I have done already.
Achil. Thou art too brief: I will the second time.

As I would buy thee, view thee limb by limb.
Hec. O, like a book of sport thou'lt read me o'er;

But there's more in me than thou understand'st.

Why dost thou so oppress me with thine eye?
Achil. Tell me, you heavens, in which part of his body

Shall I destroy him? whether there, or there, or there!

That I may give the local wound a name
And make distinct the very breach whereout
Hector's great spirit flew: answer me, heavens!

Hec. It would discredit the blest gods,
proud man,

To answer such a question: stand again:
Think'st thou to catch my life so pleasantly
As to prenominate in nice conjecture
Where thou wilt hit me dead!

Achil. I tell thee, yea.
Hec. Wert thou an oracle to tell me so,
I'd not believe thee. Henceforth guard thee well;

For I'll not kill thee there, nor there, nor there;
But, by the forge that stithied Mars his helm,
I'll kill thee every where, yea, o'er and o'er.
You wisest Grecians, pardon me this brag:
His insolence draws folly from my lips;
But I'll endeavour deeds to match these words,
Or may I never—

Ajax. Do not chafe thee, cousin: 260
And you, Achilles, let these threats alone,
Till accident or purpose bring you to't:
You may have every day enough of Hector.
If you have stomach; the general state, I fear,
Can scarce entreat you to be odd with him.

Hec. I pray you, let us see you in the field:
We have had pelting wars, since you refused
The Grecians' cause.

Achil. Dost thou entreat me, Hector?
To-morrow do I meet thee, fell as death;
To-night all friends.

Hec. Thy hand upon that match. 270 Agam. First, all you peers of Greece, go to my tent;

There in the full convive we: afterwards,
As Hector's leisure and your bounties shall Concur together, severally entreat him.
Best load the labourers, let the trumpets blow,
That this great soldier may his welcome know.

[Exeunt all except Troilus and Ulysses.]
Tro. My Lord Ulysses, tell me, I beseech
you,

In what place of the field doth Calchas keep?
Ulys. At Menelaus' tent, most princely

There Diomed doth feast with him to-night; 280
Who pattering looks upon the heaven nor earth,
But gives all gaze and bent of amorous view
On the fair Cressida.

Tro. Shall I, sweet lord, be bound to you
so much,

As Agamemnon's tent,
I see thither?

You shall command me, sir.

As gentle tell me, of what honour was
This Cressida in Troy? Had she no lover there
That waits her absence?

Tro. O, sir, to such as boast show their scars

A mock is due. Will you walk my lord?
She was beloved, she loved; she
But still sweet love is food for fi and doth:
's tooth.

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I. The Grecian camp. Before Achilles' tent.

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.

Achil. I'll heat his blood with Greekish wine to-night,

Which with my scimitar I'll cool to-morrow.
Patroclus, let us feast him to the height.

Patr. Here comes Thersites.

Enter THERSITES.

Achil. How now, thou core of envy!
Thou crusty batch of nature, what's the news?

Ther. Why, thou picture of what thou seemest, and idol of idiot-worshippers, here's a letter for thee.

Achil. From whence, fragment?

Ther. Why, thou full dish of fool, from Troy.

Patr. Who keeps the tent now?

Ther. The surgeon's box, or the patient's wound.

Patr. Well said, adversity! and what need these tricks!

Ther. Prithce, be silent, boy; I profit not by thy talk: thou art thought to be Achilles' male varlet.

Patr. Male varlet, you rogue! what's that!

Ther. Why, his masculine whore. Now the rotten diseases of the south, the gut-gripping, ruptures, catarrhs, loads o' gravel i'
the back, lethargies, cold palsies, raw eyes, dirt-rotten livers, wheezing lungs, bladders full of imposthume, sciaticas, limekilns i' the palm, incurable bone-ache, and the rivelled fo-simple of the testis, take and take again such preposterous discoveries!

Patr. Why, thou damnable box of ear, thou, what meanest thou to curse thus?

Ther. Do I curse thee?

Patr. Why, no, you ruinous butt, you whore-son indistinguishable cur, no.

Ther. Not why art thou than exasperate, thou idle immaterial stein of sleeve-stick, thou green sarcenet flap for a sore eye, thou tassel of a prodigal's purse, thou? Ah, how the poor world is pestered with such waterlies, diminutives of nature!

Patr. Out, gall!

Ther. Finch-egg!

Achil. My sweet Patroclus, I am thwarted quite

From my great purpose in to-morrow's battle.
Here is a letter from Queen Hecuba,
A token from her daughter, my fair love.
Both taxing me and urging me to haste.
An oath that I have sworn, I will not break it!

Fall Greeks; fall fame; honour or go or stay;
My major vow lies here, this I'll obey.
Come, come, Therites, help to trim my tent:
This night in banqueting must all be spent. 5
Away, Patroclus!

[Exeunt Achilles and Patroclus.
Ther. With too much blood and too little brain, these two may run mad; but, if with too much brain and too little blood they do, I'll be a curer of madmen. Here's Agamemnon, an honest fellow enough, and one that loves quails; but he has not so much brain as ear-wax: and the goodly transformation of Jupiter there, his brother, the bull,—the primitive statue, and oblique memorial of cuckolds; a thrifty shoeing-horn in a chain, hanging at his brother's leg,—to what form but that he is, should wit harled with malice and malice forced with wit turn him to! To an ass, were nothing; he is both ass and ox; to an ox, were nothing; he is both ox and ass. To be a dog, a mule, a cat, a fitchew, a toad, a lizard, an owl, a puttock, or a herring without a roe, I would not care; but to be Menelaus! I would conspire against destiny. Ask me not what I would be, if I were not Therites; for I care not to be the louse of a Lazar, so I were not Menelaus. Hoy-day! spirits and fires!

Agam. We go wrong, we go wrong.

Ajax. No, yonder 'tis;
There, where we see the lights.

Hect. I trouble you.

Ajax. No, not a whit.

Ulys. Here comes himself to guide you.

[Re-enter Achilles.

Achil. Welcome, brave Hector; welcome, princes all.

Agam. So now, fair Prince of Troy, I bid good night.

Ajax commands the guard to tend on you.

Hect. Thanks and good night to the Greeks' general. 30

Nes. Good night, my lord.

Hect. Good night, sweet Lord Menelaus.

Ther. Sweet draught: 'sweet' quoth 'a'! sweet sink, sweet sewer.

Achil. Good night and welcome, both at once, to those

That go or tarry.

Agam. Good night.

[Exeunt Agamemnon and Menelaus.
Achil. Old Nestor tarries; and you too, Diomed,

Keep Hector company an hour or two.

Dio. I cannot, lord; I have important business.

The tide whereof is now. Good night, great Hector.

Hect. Give me your hand.

Ulys. [Aside to Troilus] Follow his torch; he goes to Calchas' tent:

I'll keep you company.

Tro.

Sweet sir, you honour me.

Hect. And so, good night.

[Exit Diomedes; Ulysses and Troilus following.

Achil. Come, come, enter my tent.

[Exeunt Achilles, Hector, Ajax, and Nestor.
Ther. That same Diomed is a false-hearted rogue, a most unjust knave; I will no more trust him when he leans than I will a serpent when he hisses: he will spend his mouth, and promise, like Brablier the hood; but when he performs, astronomers foretell it; it is prodigious, there will come some change; the sun borrows of the moon, when Diomed keeps his word. I will rather leave to see Hector, than not to dog him: they say he keeps a Trojan drah, and uses the traitor Calchas' tent: I'll after. Nothing but lechery! all innocent varlets! 40

SCENE II. The same. Before Calchas' tent.

Enter DIOMEDES.

Dio. What, are you up here, ho! speak.

Cal. [Within] Who calls?

Dio. Diomed. Calchas, I think. Where's your daughter?

Cal. [Within] She comes to you.

[Enter Troilus and Ulysses, at a distance; after them, Therites.

Ulys. Stand where the torch may not discover us.

Enter CRESSIDA.

Tro. Cressid comes forth to him.

Dio. How now, my charge!

Cres. Now, my sweet guardian! Hark, a word with you. 45

Tro. Yes, so familiar!

Ulys. She will sing any man at first sight.

Ther. And any man may sing her, if he can take her cliff; she's noted. 50

Dio. Will you remember?

Cres. Remember! yes.

Dio. Nay, but do, then;

And let your mind be coupled with your words.

Tro. What should she remember?

Ulys. List.

Cres. Sweet honey Greek, tempt me no more to folly.

Ther. Roguery!

Dio. Nay, then,—

Cres. I'll tell you what,—

Dio. Foh, foh! come, tell a pin: you are forsworn.

Cres. In faith, I cannot: what would you have me do?

Ther. A juggling trick,—to be secretly open.

Dio. What did you swear you would answer on me?

Cres. I prithce, do not hold me to mine oath;

Bid me do any thing but that, sweet Greek.

Dio. Good night.

Tro. Good, gentlemen!

Ulys. How now, Trojan!

Cres. Diomed,—

Dia. No, no, good night: I'll be your fool no more.

Tro. Thy better must.

Cres. Hark, one word in your ear.

Tro. O plague and madness!

Ulyss. You are moved, prince; let us depart, I pray you.

Let your displeasure should enlarge itself
To wrathful terms: this place is dangerous;
The time right deadly: I beseech you, go.

Tro. Behold, I pray you!

Ulyss. Nay, good my lord, go off:
You flow to great distraction; come, my lord. 41
Tro. I pray thee, stay.

Ulyss. You have not patience; come.
Tro. I pray you, stay; by hell and all hell's torments,

I will not speak a word!

Dia. And so, good night.

Cres. Nay, but you part in anger.
Tro. Doth that grieve thee?

O wither'd truth!

Ulyss. Why, how now, lord!

Tro. By Jove,

I will be patient.

Cres. Guardian!—why, Greek!

Dia. Foh, foh! adieu; you palter.

Cres. In faith, I do not: come hither once
again.

Ulyss. You shake, my lord, at something:
will you go! 50

You will break out.

Tro. She strokes his cheek!

Ulyss. Come, come.

Tro. Nay, stay; by Jove, I will not speak a
word!

There is between my will and all offences
A guard of patience: stay a little while.

Ther. How the devil Luxury, with his fat rump and potato-finger, tickles these together!
Fry, lechery, fry!

Dia. But will you, then?

Cres. In faith, I will, la; never trust me
else.

Dia. Give me some token for the surety
of it. 60

Cres. I'll fetch you one. [Exit.]

Ulyss. You have sworn patience.

Tro. Fear me not, sweet lord;

I will not be myself, nor have cognition
Of what I feel: I am all patience.

Re-enter CRESSIDA.

Ther. Now the pledge; now, now, now!

Cres. Here, Diomed, keep this sleeve.

Tro. O beauty! where is thy faith?

Ulyss. My lord,—

Tro. I will be patient; outwardly I will.

Cres. You look upon that sleeve; behold it
well.

He loved me—O false wench!—Give't me again.

Dia. Whose was't? 71

Cres. It is no matter, now I have't again.

I will not meet with you to-morrow night:

I promise, Diomed, visit me no more.

Ther. Now she sharpens: well said, whetstone!

Dia. I shall have it.

Cres. What, this?

Dia. Ay, that.

Cres. O, all you gods! O pretty, pretty pledge!

Thy master now lies thinking in bed
Of thee and me, and sighs, and my glove,

And gives memorial dainty ki- it, 80

As I kiss thee. Nay, do not m- it from me;

He that takes that doth take my t withal.

Dia. I had your heart before, thi follows it.

Tro. I did swear patience.

Cres. You shall not have it, Di ; faith,
you shall not;

I'll give you something else.

Dia. I will have this: whose was it?

Cres. It is no matter.

Dia. Come, tell me whose it was.

Cres. 'Twas one's that loved me better than
you will.

But, now you have it, take it.

Dia. Whose was it? 90

Cres. By all Diana's waiting-women yond,
And by herself, I will not tell you whose.

Dia. To-morrow will I wear it on my helm,
And grieve his spirit that dares not challenge it.

Tro. Wert thou the devil, and worst it on thy horn,

It should be challenged.

Cres. Well, well, 'tis done, 'tis past: and yet it is not;

I will not keep my word.

Dia. Why, then, farewell;
Thou never shalt mock Dioned again.

Cres. You shall not go: one cannot speak a
word, 100

But it straight starts you.

Dia. I do not like this fooling.

Ther. Nor I, by Pluto: but that that likes not you pleases me best.

Dia. What, shall I come? the hour?

Cres. Ay, come!—O Jove!—do come!—I shall be plagued.

Dia. Farewell till then.

Cres. Good night: I prithe, come.

[Exit Dionedea.]
Troilus, farewell! one eye yet looks on thee;
But with my heart the other eye doth see.

Ah, poor our sex! this fault in us I find,
The error of our eye directs our mind: 110
What error leads must err; O, then conclude Minds sway'd by eyes are full of turpitude.

[Exit.]
Ther. A proof of strength she could not publish more.

Unless she said 'My mind is now turn'd whore.'

Ulyss. All's done, my lord.

Tro. It is.

Ulyss. Why stay we, then?

Tro. To make a recordation to my soul
Of every syllable that here was spoke.

But if I tell how these two did co-act,
Shall I not lie in publishing a truth?

81th yet there is a credence in my heart,
An assurance so obstinately strong,
That doth invert the aspect of eyes and ears,
As if those organs had deceptions functions,
Created only to calumniate.

Was Cressida here?

Ulyss. I cannot conjure, Trojan.

Tro. She was not, sure.

Ulyss. Most sure she was.

Tro. Why, my negation hath no taste of madness.

Ulyss. Nor mine, my lord: Cressid was here but now.

Tro. Let it not be believed for womanhood! Think, we had mothers; do not give advantage To stubborn critics, apt, without a theme, 131

For deprecation, to square the general sex By Cressid's rule: rather think this not Cressid.

Ulyss. What hath she done, prince, that can soil our mothers?

Tro. Nothing at all, unless that this were she.

Ther. Will he swagger himself out on 's own eyes?

Tro. This she! no, this is Diomed's Cressida:

If beauty have a soul, this is not she;

If souls guide vows, if vows be sanctimonies, If sanctimony be the gods' delight, 140

If there be rule in unity itself, This is not she. O madness of discourse,

That cause sets up with and against itself! Bi-fold authority! where reason can revolt

Without perdition, and loss assume all reason Without revolt: this is, and is not, Cressid.

Within my soul there doth conduce a fight Of this strange nature that a thing insepable

Divides more wider than the sky and earth, And yet the spacious breadth of this division

Admits no orifice for a point as subtle 151 As Ariachne's broken woof to enter.

Instance, O instance! strong as Pluto's gates; Cressid is mine, tied with the bonds of heaven:

Instance, O instance! strong as heaven itself; The bonds of heaven are slipp'd, dissolved, and loosed;

And with another knot, five-finger-tied, The fractions of her faith, ors of her love,

The fragments, scraps, the bits and greasy relics 159

Of her o'er-eaten faith, are bound to Diomed.

Ulyss. May worthy Troilus be half attach'd With that which here his passion doth express?

Tro. Ay, Greek; and that shall be divulged well

In characters as red as Mars his heart Inflamed with Venus: never did young man fancy With so eternal and so fix'd a soul.

Hark, Greek: as much as I do Cressid love, So much by weight hate I her Diomed;

That sleeve is mine that he'll bear on his helm; Were it a casque compos'd by Vulcan's skill,

My sword should bite it: not the dreadful spout 171

Which shipmen do the hurricane call, Constring'd in mass by the almighty sun,

Shall dizzy with more clamour Neptune's ear In his descent than shall my prompted sword Falling on Diomed.

Ther. He'll tickle it for his conceits.

Tro. O Cressid! O false Cressid! false, false, false!

Let all untruths stand by thy stained name,

And they'll seem glorious.

Ulyss. O, contain yourself; 180 Your passion draws ears hither.

Enter AENEAS.

Aen. I have been seeking you this hour, my lord:

Hector, by this, is arming him in Troy; Ajax, your guard, stays to conduct you home.

Tro. Have with you, prince. My courteous lord, adieu.

Farewell, revolted fair! and, Diomed, Stand fast, and wear a castle on thy head!

Ulyss. I'll bring you to the gates.

Tro. Accept distracted thanks.

[Exeunt Troilus, Aeneas, and Ulysses.]

Ther. Would I could meet that rogue Diomed! I would croak like a raven; I would bode, I would bode. Patroclus will give me any thing for the intelligence of this whore:

the parrot will not do more for an almond than he for a commodious drab. Lechery, lechery;

still, wars and lechery; nothing else holds fashion: a burning devil take them! [Exit.]

SCENE III. Troy. Before Priam's palace.

Enter HECTOR and ANDROMACHE.

And. When was my lord so much ungently temper'd,

To stop his ears against admonishment? Unarm, unarm, and do not fight to-day.

Hect. You train me to offend you; get you in:

By all the everlasting gods, I'll go!

And. My dreams will, sure, prove ominous to the day.

Hect. No more, I say.

Enter CASSANDRA.

Cas. Where is my brother Hector?

And. Here, sister; arm'd, and bloody in intent.

Consort with me in loud and dear petition, Pursue we him on knees; for I have dream'd

Of bloody turbulence, and this whole night 11 Hath nothing been but shapes and forms of slaughter.

Cas. O, 'tis true.

Hect. Ho! bid my trumpet sound.

Cas. No notes of sally, for the heavens, sweet brother,

Hect. Be gone, I say: the gods have heard me swear.

Cas. The gods are deaf to hot and peevish vows:

They are polluted offerings, more abhor'd Than spotted livers in the sacrifice.

And. O, be persuaded! do not count it holy To hurt by being just: it is as lawful, 20

For we would give much, to use violent thefts, And rob in the behalf of charity.

Cas. It is the purpose that makes strong the vow;

But vows to every purpose must not hold: Unarm, sweet Hector.

Hect. Hold you still, I say: Mine honour keeps the weather of my fate.

Life every man holds dear; but the brave man
Holds honour far more precious-dear than life.

Enter TROILUS.

How now, young man! mean'st thou to fight
to-day?

And. Cassandra, call my father to persuade.

Hec. No, faith, young Troilus; doff thy harness, youth;

I am to-day the vein of chivalry:
Let grow thy sinews till their knots be strong,
And tempt not yet the brushes of the war.
Unarm thee, go, and doubt thou not, brave boy,
I'll stand to-day for thee and me and Troy.

Tro. Brother, you have a vice of mercy in
you,
Which better fits a lion than a man.

Hec. What vice is that, good Troilus? chide me for it.

Tro. When many times the captive Grecian falls,
Given in the fan and wind of your fair sword,
You bid them rise, and live.

Hec. O, 'tis fair play.

Tro. Fool's play, by heaven, Hector.

Hec. How now! how now!

Tro. For the love of all the gods,
Let's leave the hermit pity with our mothers,
And when we have our armour buckled on,
The venom'd vengeance ride upon our swords,
Bear them to ruthless work, rein them from ruth.

Hec. Fie, savage, fie!

Tro. Hector, then 'tis wars.

Hec. Troilus, I would not have you fight
to-day.

Tro. Who should withhold me?

Not fate, obedience, nor the hand of Mars
Beckoning with fiery truncheon my retire;
Not Priamus and Hecuba on knees,
Their eyes o'ergalled with recourse of tears;
Nor you, my brother, with your true sword
drawn,

Opposed to hinder me, should stop my way,
But by my ruin.

Re-enter CASSANDRA, with PRIAM.

Cas. Lay hold upon him, Priam, hold him
fast:

He is thy crutch; now if thou lose thy stay,
Thou on him leaning, and all Troy on thee,
Fall all together.

Pri. Come, Hector, come, go back:
Thy wife hath dream'd; thy mother hath had
visions;

Cassandra doth foresee; and I myself
Am like a prophet suddenly enrap't
To tell thee that this day is ominous:
Therefore, come back.

Hec. Aeneas is a-field;

I do stand engaged to many Greeks,
Given in the rank of valour, to appear
this morning to them.

Tro. Ay, but thou shalt not go.

Hec. I must not break my faith.
You know me doubtful; therefore, dear sir,
Let me not shame suspect; but give me leave

To take that course by your consent and voice
Which you do here forbid me, royal Priam.

Cas. O Priam, yield not to him!

And. Do not, dear father

Hec. Andromache, I am offended with you
Upon the love you bear me, get you in.

[Exit Andromache.]

Tro. This foolish, dreaming, superstitious girl
Makes all these bodements.

Cas. O, farewell! dear Hector!

Look, how thou diest! look, how thy eye turns pale!

Look, how thy wounds do bleed at many vents!
Hark, how Troy roars! how Hecuba cries out!

How poor Andromache shrills her dolours forth:
Behold, distraction, frenzy and amazement,
Like witless antics, one another meet.

And all cry, Hector! Hector's dead! O Hector!

Tro. Away! away!

Cas. Farewell! yet, soft! Hector, I take my
leave:

Thou dost thyself and all our Troy deceive.

Hec. You are amazed, my liege, at her exclaim:

Go in and cheer the town: we'll forth and fight,
Do deeds worth praise and tell you them:

night.

Pri. Farewell: the gods with safety stand about thee!

[Exeunt severally Priam and Hector.]

Tro. They are at it, hark! Proud Diomed, believe,

I come to lose my arm, or win my sleeve.

Enter PANDARUS.

Pan. Do you hear, my lord! do you hear!

Tro. What now?

Pan. Here's a letter come from yond poor girl.

Tro. Let me read.

Pan. A whoreson tisick, a whoreson rascally tisick so troubles me, and the foolish fortune this girl; and what one thing, what another, that I shall leave you one of these days: and I have a rheum in mine eyes too, and such an ache in my bones that, unless a man were cursed, I cannot tell what to think on't. What says she there?

Tro. Words, words, more words, no matter
from the heart;

The effect doth operate another way.

[Tearing the letter.]
Go, wind, to wind, there turn and change
together.

My love with words and errors still she feeds;
But edifies another with her deeds.

[Exeunt severally.]

SCENE IV. Plains between Troy and the Grecian camp.

Alarums; excursions. Enter THROTE.

Ther. Now they are clapper-clawing out another; I'll go look on. That dissembling abominable varlet, Diomed, has got that man

scurvy dotting foolish young knave's sleeve of Troy there in his helm: I would fain see them meet; that that same young Trojan ass, that loves the whore there, might send that Greekish whomasterly villain, with the sleeve, back to the dissembling luxurious drab, of a sleeveless errand. O the t'other side, the policy of those crafty swearing rascals, that stale old mouse-eaten dry cheese, Nestor, and that same dog-fox, Ulysses, is not proved worth a blackberry: they set me up, in policy, that mongrel cur, Ajax, against that dog of as bad a kind, Achilles: and now is the cur Ajax prouder than the cur Achilles, and will not arm to-day; whereupon the Grecians begin to proclaim barbarism, and policy grows into an ill opinion. Soft! here comes sleeve, and t'other.

Enter DIOMEDES, TROILUS following.

Tro. Fly not; for shouldst thou take the river Styx,

I would swim after.

Dia. Thou dost miscall retire: I do not fly, but advantageous care Withdrew me from the odds of multitude: Haste at thee!

Ther. Hold thy whore, Grecian!—now for thy whore, Trojan!—now the sleeve, now the sleeve!

[Exeunt Troilus and Diomedes, fighting.]

Enter HECTOR.

Hect. What art thou, Greek? art thou for Hector's match?

Art thou of blood and honour?

Ther. No, no, I am aascal; a scurvy railing knave; a very filthy rogue.

Hect. I do believe thee: live. [Exit.]

Ther. God-a-mercy, that thou wilt believe me; but a plague break thy neck for frightening me! What's become of the wenching rogues? I think they have swallowed one another: I would laugh at that miracle; yet, in a sort, lechery eats itself. I'll seek them. [Exit.]

SCENE V. Another part of the plains.

Enter DIOMEDES and a Servant.

Dia. Go, go, my servant, take thou Troilus' horse;

Present the fair steed to my lady Cressid:

Fellow, commend my service to her beauty;

Tell her I have chastised the amorous Trojan,

And am her knight by proof.

Serv.

I go, my lord. [Exit.]

Enter AGAMEMNON.

Agam. Renew, renew! The Serce Polydarnas

Hath beat down Menon: hastard Margarelon

Hath Doreus prisoner,

And stands colossus-wise, waving his beam,

Upon the pushed corpses of the kings

[Epistrophus and Oedus: Polyxenes is slain,

Antimachus and Thoon deadly hurt,

Polus taken or slain, and Palamedes hurt and bruised: the Greeks that fled peels our numbers: haste we, Diomed,

To reinforcement, or we perish all.

Enter NESTOR.

Nest. Go, bear Patroclus' body to Achilles; And bid the small-pated Ajax arm for shame.

There is a thousand Hectors in the field:

Now here he fights on Galathea his horse,

And there lacks work; anon he's there anon,

And there they fly or die, like soiled sculls.

Before the belching whale; then is he yonder,

And there the strawy Greeks, ripe for his edge,

Fall down before him, like the mower's swath:

Here, there, and every where, he leaves and takes,

Dexterity so obeying appetite

That what he will he does, and does so much

That proof is call'd impossibility.

Enter ULYSSES.

Ulys. O, courage, courage, princes! great

Achilles

Is arming, weeping, cursing, vowing vengeance:

Patroclus' wounds have roused his drowy

blood,

Together with his mangled Myrmidons,

That noseless, handless, hack'd and chipp'd,

come to him,

Crying on Hector. Ajax hath lost a friend

And foams at mouth, and he is arm'd and at it,

Roaring for Troilus, who hath done to-day

Mad and fantastic execution,

Engaging and redeeming of himself

With such a careless force and forceless care

As if that luck, in very spite of cunning,

Bade him win all.

Enter AJAX.

Ajax. Troilus! thou coward Troilus! [Exit.]

Dia. Ay, there, there.

Nest. So, so, we draw together.

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Where is this Hector?

Come, come, thou boy-queller, show thy face:

Know what it is to meet Achilles angry:

Hector! where's Hector? I will none but Hector.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. Another part of the plains.

Enter AJAX.

Ajax. Troilus, thou coward Troilus, show thy head!

Enter DIOMEDES.

Dia. Troilus, I say! where's Troilus?

Ajax. What wouldst thou?

Dia. I would correct him.

Ajax. Were I the general, thou shouldst have my office

Ere that correction. Troilus, I say! what,

Troilus!

Enter TROILUS.

Tro. O traitor Diomed! turn thy false face,

thou traitor,

And pay thy lies their earnest as they have!

Dia. He art thou false!

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA

[ACT V

Ajax. I'll fight with him alone: stand,
Diomed.

Dia. He is my prize; I will not look upon.
Tro. Come, both you cogging Greeks; have at you both! [Exeunt, fighting.]

Enter HECTOR.

Hect. Yea, Troilus! O, well fought, my youngest brother!

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Now do I see thee, ha! have at thee,
Hector!

Hect. Pause, if thou wilt.

Achil. I do disclaim thy courtesy, proud Trojan:

Be happy that my arms are out of use:
My rest and negligence befriends thee now,
But thou anon shalt hear of me again;
Till when, go seek thy fortune. [Exit.]

Hect. Fare thee well:
I would have been much more a freer man,
Had I expected thee. How now, my brother!

Re-enter TROILUS.

Tro. Ajax hath ta'en Æneas: shall it be?
No, by the flame of yonder glorious heaven,
He shall not carry him; I'll be ta'en too,
Or bring him off: fate, hear me what I say!
I reck not though I end my life to-day. [Exit.]

Enter one in sumptuous armour.

Hect. Stand, stand, thou Greek; thou art a goodly mark:
No! wilt thou not? I like thy armour well;
I'll crush it and unlock the rivets all,
But I'll be master of it: wilt thou not, beast, abide!

Why, then fly on, I'll hunt thee for thy hide. [Exit.]

SCENE VII. Another part of the plains.

Enter ACHILLES, with Myrmidons.

Achil. Come here about me, you my Myr-midons:
Mark what I say. Attend me where I wheel:
Strike not a stroke, but keep yourselves in breath:

When I have the bloody Hector found,
I'll smite him with your weapons round about;
At manner execute your aims:
I'll me, sirs, and my proceedings eye:
It is decreed Hector the great must die. [Exeunt.]

Enter MENELAUS and PARIS, fighting; then THERSITES.

Ther. The cuckold and the cuckold-maker are at it. Now, bull! now, dog! 'Loo, Paris,
'loo! now my double-henned sparrow! 'loo,
Paris, 'loo! The bull has the game: ware beams, ho! [Exeunt Paris and Menelaus.]

Enter MARGARELON.

Mar. Turn, slave, and fight.

Ther. What art thou?

Mar. A bastard son of Priam's.

Ther. I am a bastard too; I love bastards:

I am a bastard begot, bastard instructed, bastard in mind, bastard in valour, in every thing illegitimate. One bear will not bite another, and wherefore should one bastard? Take heed, the quarrel's most ominous to us: if the son of a whore fight for a whore, he's no judgement:
farewell, bastard! [Exit.]

Mar. The devil take thee, coward! [Exit.]

SCENE VIII. Another part of the plains.

Enter HECTOR.

Hect. Most putrefied core, so fair without,
Thy goodly armour thus hath cost thy life.

Now is my day's work done; I'll take good
breath:

Rest, sword; thou hast thy fill of blood and
death.

[Puts off his helmet and hangs his shield behind him.]

Enter ACHILLES and Myrmidons.

Achil. Look, Hector, how the sun begins to set;

How ugly night comes breathing at his heels:
Even with the veil and darkening of the sun,
To close the day up, Hector's life is done.

Hect. I am unarm'd; forego this vantage, Greek.

Achil. Strike, fellows, strike; this is the man I seek. [Hector falls.]

So, Ilium, fall thou next! now, Troy, sink down!
Here lies thy heart, thy sinews, and thy bone.
On, Myrmidons, and cry you all amain,
'Achilles hath the mighty Hector slain.' [A retreat sounded.]

Hark! a retire upon our Grecian part.
Myr. The Trojan trumpets sound the like,
my lord.

Achil. The dragon wing of night o'erspreads
the earth,

And, stickler-like, the armies separates.
My half-suppl'd sword, that frankly would have fed,

Pleased with this dainty bait, thus goes to bed.
[Sheathes his sword.]

Come, tie his body to my horse's tail; [Exit.]
Along the field I will the Trojan trail. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IX. Another part of the plains.

*Enter AGAMEMNON, AJAX, MENELAUS,
NESTOR, DIOMEDES, and others, marching.
Shouts within.*

Agam. Hark! hark! what about is that!
Nest. Peace, drums!

[Within.] Achilles! Achilles! Hector's slain!
Achilles!

Dia. The bruit is, Hector's slain, and by Achilles.

Ajax. If it be so, yet bragless let it be;
Great Hector was a man as good as he.

Agam. March patiently along: let one be sent

To pray Achilles see us at our tent,
If in his death the gods have us befriended.
Great Troy is ours, and our sharp wars are ended.

SCENE X. Another part of the plains.

Enter AENEAS and Trojans.

Ane. Stand, ho! yet are we masters of the field:
Never go home; here starve we out the night.

Enter TROILUS.

Tro. Hector is slain.

All. Hector! the gods forbid!

Tro. He's dead; and at the murderer's horse's tail,
In beastly sort, dragg'd through the shameful field.

Frown on, you heavens, effect your rage with speed!

Sit, gods, upon your thrones, and smile at Troy!
I say, at once let your brief plagues be mercy,
And linger not our sure destructions on!

Ane. My lord, you do discomfort all the host.

Tro. You understand me not that tell me so:
I do not speak of flight, of fear, of death,
But dare all imminence that gods and men
Address their dangers in. Hector is gone:
Who shall tell Priam so, or Hecuba?
Let him that will a screech-owl eye be call'd,
Go in to Troy, and say there, Hector's dead:
There is a word will Priam turn to stone;
Make wells and Niobes of the maids and wives,
Cold statues of the youth, and, in a word, so Scare Troy out of itself. But, march away:
Hector is dead; there is no more to say.
Stay yet. You vile abominable tents,
Thus proudly pight upon our Phrygian plains,
Let Titan rise as early as he dare.
I'll through and through you! and, thou great-sized coward,
No space of earth shall sunder our two hates:

I'll haunt thee like a wicked conscience still,
That mouldeth goblins swift as frenzy's thoughts.

Strike a free march to Troy! with comfort go:
Hope of revenge shall hide our inward woe. 31
[Exeunt Aeneas and Trojans.]

As TROILUS is going out, enter, from the other side, PANDARUS.

Pan. But hear you, hear you!

Tro. Hence, broker-lackey! ignominy and shame
Pursue thy life, and live aye with thy name!

[Exit.]
Pan. A goodly medicine for my aching bones! O world! world! world! thus is the poor agent despised! O traitors and bawds, how earnestly are you set a-work, and how ill requited! why should our endeavour be so loved and the performance so loathed! what verse for it! what instance for it! Let me see:

Full merrily the humble-bee doth sing,
Till he hath lost his honey and his sting;
And being once subdued in armed tail,
Sweet honey and sweet notes together fail.

Good traders in the flesh, set this in your painted cloths.

As many as be here of pandar's hall,
Your eyes, half out, weep out at Pandar's fall;
Or if you cannot weep, yet give some groans, so
Though not for me, yet for your aching bones.
Brethren and sisters of the hold-door trade,
Some two months hence my will shall here be made:

It should be now, but that my fear is this,
Some galled geese of Winchester would hiss:
Till then I'll sweat and seek about for cases,
And at that time bequeathe you my diseases.
[Exit.]

CORIOLANUS

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ

 Young MARCIUS, son to Coriolanus.
 A Roman Herald.
 TULLUS AUFIDIUS, general of the Volscians.
 Lieutenant to Aufidius.
 Conspirators with Aufidius.
 A Citizen of Antium.

Two Volscian Guards.

VOLUMNIA, mother to Coriolanus.
 VIRGILIA, wife to Coriolanus.
 VALERIA, friend to Virgilia.
 Gentlewoman, attending on Virgilia.

Roman and Volscian Senators, Patricians,
 Ediles, Lictors, Soldiers, Citizens, Messengers, Servants to Aufidius, and other Attendants.

SCENE: Rome and the neighbourhood; Coriand the neighbourhood; Antium.

ACT I.

SCENE I. Rome. A street.

Enter a company of mutinous Citizens, with slaves, clubs, and other weapons.

First Cit. Before we proceed any further, hear me speak.

All. Speak, speak.

First Cit. You are all resolved rather to die than to famish?

All. Resolved, resolved.

First Cit. First, you know Caius Marcius is chief enemy to the people.

All. We know't, we know't.

First Cit. Let us kill him, and we'll have corn at our own price. Is't a verdict?

All. No more talking on't; let it be done:
 away, away!

Sec. Cit. One word, good citizens.

First Cit. We are accounted poor citizens, the patricians good. What authority surfeits on would relieve us; if they would yield us but the superfluity, while it were wholesome, we might guess they relieved us humanely; but they think we are too dear: the leanness that afflicts us, the object of our misery, is as an inventory to particularize their abundance; our sufferance is a gain to them. Let us revenge this with our pikes, ere we become rakes: for the gods know I speak this in hunger for bread, not in thirst for revenge.

Sec. Cit. Would you proceed especially against Caius Marcius?

All. Against him first: he's a very dog to set the commonalty on.

Sec. Cit. Consider you what services he has done for his country?

First Cit. Very well; and could be content to give him good report for't, but that he pays himself with being proud.

Sec. Cit. Nay, but speak not maliciously.

First Cit. I say unto you, what he hath done famously, he did it to that end: though softconscienced men can be content to say it was for his country, he did it to please his mother, and to be partly proud; which he is, even to the altitude of his virtue.

Sec. Cit. What he cannot help in his nature, you account a vice in him. You must in no way say he is covetous.

First Cit. If I must not, I need not be barren of accusations; he hath faults, with surplus to tire in repetition. [Shouts within.] What shouts are these? The other side o' the city is risen:
 why stay we prating here? to the Capitol!

All. Come, come.

First Cit. Soft! who comes here?

Enter MENENIUS AGRIPPA.

Sec. Cit. Worthy Menenius Agrippa; one that hath always loved the people.

First Cit. He's one honest enough: would all the rest were so!

Men. What work's, my countrymen, in hand? where go you
 With hats and clubs? The matter? speak, I pray you.

First Cit. Our business is not unknown to the senate; they have had inkling this fortnight
 what we intend to do, which now we'll show
 'em in deeds. They say poor suitors have strong breaths: they shall know we have strong arms too.

Men. Why, masters, my good friends, mine honest neighbours,
 Will you undo yourselves?

First Cit. We cannot, sir, we are undone ready.

Men. I tell you, friends, most charitable care are the patricians of you. For your wants, our suffering in this dearth, you may as well strike at the heaven with your staves as lift them gainst the Roman state, whose course will on he way it takes, cracking ten thousand curbs of more strong link asunder than can ever appear in your impediment. For the dearth, he gods, not the patricians, make it, and our knees to them, not arms, must help.

Alack, you are transported by calamity hither where more attends you, and you slander the helms of the state, who care for you like fathers.

When you curse them as enemies.

First Cit. Care for us! True, indeed! They never cared for us yet: suffer us to famish, and their store-houses crammed with grain; make dicta for usury, to support usurers; repeal daily any wholesome act established against the rich, and provide more piercing statutes daily, to chain up and restrain the poor. If the wars set us not up, they will; and there's all the love they bear us.

Men. Either you must confess yourselves wondrous malicious, or be accused of folly. I shall tell you a pretty tale; it may be you have heard it; but, since it serves my purpose, I will venture to state it a little more.

First Cit. Well, I'll hear it, sir; yet you must not think to lob off our disgraces with a tale; but, an't please you, deliver.

Men. There was a time when all the body's members

Rebeld against the belly, thus accused it: too that only like a gulf it did remain in the midst of the body, idle and unactive, still cupboarding the viand, never bearing like labour with the rest, where the other instruments

Did see and hear, devise, instruct, walk, feel, and mutually participate, did minister unto the appetite and affection common to the whole body. The belly answer'd—

First Cit. Well, sir, what answer made the belly?

Men. Sir, I shall tell you. With a kind of smile, which ne'er came from the lungs, but even thus—or, look you, I may make the belly smile as well as speak—it tauntingly replied to the discontented members, the mutinous parts that envied his receipt; even so meetly as you malign our senators for that they are not such as you.

First Cit. Your belly's answer? What! the kingly-crowned head, the radiant eye, the counsellor heart, the arm our soldier, our steed the leg, the tongue our trumpet, with other members and parts, he let in this our labour, if that they—

Men. What then? For me, this fellow speaks! What then? what then?

First Cit. Should by the cormorant belly be restrain'd.

Who is the sink of the body,—

Men. Well, what then? First Cit. The former agents, if they did complain.

What could the belly answer?

Men. I will tell you: If you'll bestow a small—of what you have little—

Patience awhile, you'll hear the belly's answer. First Cit. Ye're long about it.

Men. Note me this, good friend: Your most grave belly was deliberate,

Not rash like his accusers, and thus answer'd: 'True is it, my incorporate friends,' quoth he,

'That I receive the general food at first, Which you do live upon; and fit it is,

Because I am the store-house and the shop Of the whole body: but, if you do remember,

I send it through the rivers of your blood, Even to the court, the heart, to the seat of the brain;

And, through the cranks and offices of man, The strongest nerves and small inferior veins

From me receive that natural competency Whereby they live: and though that all at once,

You, my good friends,—this says the belly, mark me,—

First Cit. Ay, sir; well, well.

Men. Though all at once cannot See what I do deliver out to each,

Yet I can make my audit up, that all From me do back receive the flour of all,

And leave me but the bran. What say you to't?

First Cit. It was an answer: how say you this?

Men. The senators of Rome are this good belly,

And you the mutinous members; for evermore Their counsels and their cares, digest things rightly Touching the weal of the common, you shall find

No public benefit which you receive But it proceeds or comes from them to you,

And no way from yourselves. What do you think,

You, the great toe of this assembly?

First Cit. I the great toe! why the great toe?

Men. For that, being one of the lowest, basest, poorest,

Of this most wise rebellion, thou go'st foremost; Thou rascal, that art worst in blood to Rome,

Lead'st first to win some vantage. But make you ready your stiff backs and joints,

For Rome and her rats are at the point of battle. The one side must have tails.

Enter CARUS MARCIUS.

Men. What's the news?

Car. The news is that the senators are gone.

Men. Thanks. What's the news?

Car. The news is that the senators are gone.

The Volscians have much corn; take these rats
thither

To gnaw their garners. Worshipful mutiners,
Your valour puts well forth: pray, follow.

[Citizens steal away. Exeunt all but Sicinius and Brutus.]

Sic. Was ever man so proud as is this
Marcus?

Br. He has no equal.

Sic. When we were chosen tribunes for the people—

Br. Mark'd you his lip and eyes?

Sic. Nay, but his taunts.

Br. Being moved, he will not spare to gird
the gods.

Sic. He mock the modest moon.

Br. The present wars devour him: he is grown

Too proud to be so valiant.

Sic. Such a nature,
Ticked with good success, disdains the shadow
Which he trends on at noon: but I do wonder
His insolence can brook to be commanded Under Cominius.

Br. Fame, at the which he aims,
In whom already he's well graced, can not Better be held nor more attain'd than by
A place below the first: for what miscarries
Shall be the general's fault, though he perform
To the utmost of a man, and giddy censure
Will then cry out of Marcus 'O, if he Had borne the business!'

Sic. Besides, if things go well,
Opinion that so sticks on Marcus shall
Of his demerits rob Cominius.

Br. Come:
Half all Cominius' honours are to Marcus.
Though Marcus earn'd them not, and all his faults

To Marcus shall be honours, though indeed
In aught he merit not.

Sic. Let's hence, and hear
How the dispatch is made, and in what fashion,
More than his singularity, he goes
Upon this present action.

Br. Let's along. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Corioli. The Senate-house.

Enter TULLUS AUFIDIUS and certain Senators.

First Sen. So, your opinion is, Aufidius,
That they of Rome are enter'd in our counsels
And know how we proceed.

Auf. Is it not yours?
What ever have been thought on in this state,
That could be brought to bodily act ere Rome
Had circumvention? 'Tis not four days gone
Since I heard thence; these are the words:

I think
I have the letter here; yes, here it is.
[Reads.] 'They have press'd a power, but it is not known

Whether for east or west: the dearth is great; so
The people mutinous; and it is rumour'd,
Cominius, Marcus your old enemy,
Who is of Rome worse hated than of you,
And Titus Lartius, a most valiant Roman,

These three lead on this preparation
Whither 'tis bent: most likely 'tis for you:
Consider of it.'

First Sen. Our army's in the field:
We never yet made doubt but Rome was ready
To answer us.

Auf. Nor did you think it folly
To keep your great pretences veil'd till when so They needs must show themselves; which in the hatching,

It seem'd, appear'd to Rome. By the discovery
We shall be shorten'd in our aim, which was
To take in many towns ere almost Rome
Should know we were afoot.

Sec. Sen. Noble Aufidius,
Take your commission; hie you to your hands:
Let us alone to guard Corioli:

If they set down before's, for the remove Bring up your army; but, I think, you'll find They've not prepared for us.

Auf. O, doubt not that; so

I speak from certainties. Nay, more,
Some parcels of their power are forth already,
And only hitherward. I leave your honours.

If we and Caius Marcus chance to meet,
Tis sworn between us we shall ever strike
Till one can do no more.

All. The gods assist you!

Auf. And keep your honours safe!

First Sen. Farewell.

Sec. Sen. Farewell.

All. Farewell. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Rome. A room in Marcus' house.

Enter VOLUNIA and VIRGILIA: they set them down on two low stools, and sew.

Vol. I pray you, daughter, sing; or express yourself in a more comfortable sort: if my son were my husband, I should freelier rejoice in that absence wherein he won honour than in the embracements of his bed where he would show most love. When yet he was but tender-bodied and the only son of my womb, when youth with comeliness plucked all gaze his way, when for a day of kings' entertain a mother should not sell him an hour from her beholding, I, considering how honour would become such a person, that it was no better than picture-like to hang by the wall, if removed made it not stir, was pleased to let him seek danger where he was like to find fame. To a cruel war I sent him; from whence he returned, his brows bound with oak. I tell thee, daughter, I sprang not more in joy at first hearing he was a man-child than now in first seeing he had proved himself a man.

Vir. But had he died in infancy, madam; how then?

Vol. Then his good report should have my son; I therein would have Hear me profess sincerely: had I a each in my love alike and none thine and my good Marcus, I even die nobly for their country voluptuously snail out of action.

Enter a Gentlewoman.

Gent. Madam, the Lady Valeria is come to visit you.

Vir. Beseech you, give me leave to retire myself.

Vol. Indeed, you shall not.

Met. Methinks I hear hither your husband's drum, See him pluck Aufidius down by the hair, As children from a bear, the Volscies shunning him:

Met. Methinks I see him stamp thus, and call thus: 'Come on, you cowards! you were got in fear, Though you were born in Rome:' his bloody brow

With his mail'd hand then wiping, forth he goes,

Like to a harvest-man that's task'd to mow Or all or lose his hire.

Vir. His bloody brow! O Jupiter, no blood!

Vol. Away, you fool! it more becomes a man

Than gilt his trophy: the breasts of Hecuba, When she did suckle Hector, look'd not lovelier Than Hector's forehead when it spit forth blood At Grecian sword, contemning. Tell Valeria, We are fit to bid her welcome. [Exit Gent.]

Vir. Heavens bless my lord from fell Aufidius!

Vol. He'll beat Aufidius' head below his knee

And tread upon his neck.

Enter VALERIA, with an Usher and Gentlewoman.

Val. My ladies both, good day to you.

Vol. Sweet madam.

Vir. I am glad to see your ladyship.

Val. How do you both? you are manifest house-keepers. What are you sewing here? A fine spot, in good faith. How does your little son?

Vir. I thank your ladyship; well, good madam.

Vol. He had rather see the swords, and hear a drum, than look upon his schoolmaster.

Val. O' my word, the father's son: I'll swear, 'tis a very pretty boy. O' my troth, I looked upon him o' Wednesday half an hour together: has such a confirmed countenance. I saw him run after a glided butterfly; and when he caught it, he let it go again; and after it again; and over and over he comes, and up again; catch'd it again; or whether his fall amused him, or how 'twas, he did so set his teeth and tear it; O, I warrant, how he maimed it!

Vol. Ours on his father's mounds.

Val. Indeed, 'tis a noble child.

Vir. A sweet madam.

Val. Come, lay aside your stitchery; I must have you play the little housewife with me this afternoon.

Vir. No, good madam; I will not out of doors.

Val. Not out of doors!

Vir. No, madam, she shall.

Vol. Indeed, no, by your patience; I'll not over the threshold till my lord return from the wars.

Val. Fie, you confine yourself most unreasonably: come, you must go visit the good lady that lies in.

Vir. I will wish her speedy strength, and visit her with my prayers; but I cannot go thither.

Vol. Why, I pray you?

Vir. 'Tis not to save labour, nor that I want love.

Val. You would be another Penelope: yet, they say, all the yarn she spun in Ulysses' absence did but fill Ithaca full of moths. Come; I would your cambric were sensible as your finger, that you might leave pricking it for pity. Come, you shall go with us.

Vir. No, good madam, pardon me; indeed, I will not forth.

Vol. In truth, la, go with me; and I'll tell you excellent news of your husband.

Vir. O, good madam, there can be none yet.

Val. Verily, I do not jest with you; there came news from him last night.

Vir. Indeed, madam?

Val. In earnest, 'tis true; I heard a senator speak it. Thus it is: the Volscies have an army forth; against whom Cominius the general is gone, with one part of our Roman power; your lord and Titus Lartius are set down before their city Corioli; they nothing doubt prevailing and to make it brief wars. This is true, on mine honour; and so, I pray, go with us.

Vir. Give me excuse, good madam; I will obey you in every thing hereafter.

Vol. Let her alone, lady: as she is now, she will but disease our better mirth.

Val. In truth, I think she would. Fare you well, then. Come, good sweet lady. Prithce, Virgilia, turn thy solemnness out o' door, and go along with us.

Vir. No, at a word, madam; indeed, I must not. I wish you much mirth.

Val. Well, then, farewell.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Before Corioli.

Enter, with drum and colours, MARCIUS, TITUS LARTIUS, Captains and Soldiers. To them a Messenger.

Mar. Yonder comes news. A wager they have met.

Lart. My horse to yours, no.

Mar. 'Tis done.

Lart. Agreed.

Mar. Say, has our general met the enemy?

Men. They lie in view; but have not spok-

as yet.

Lart. So, the good horse to mine.

Mar. I'll buy him of you.

Lart. No, I'll not sell nor give him: and you him I will!

For half a hundred years. Summon the town.

Mar. How far off lie these armies?

Men. Within this mile and half.

Mar. Then shall we hear their trumpet, and they come.

Now, Mars, I prithee, make us quick in work.

SCENE IV]

CORIOLANUS

That we with smoking swords may march from
hence,
To help our fielded friends! Come, blow thy blast.

They sound a parley. Enter two Senators with others on the walls.

Tullus Aufidius, is he within your walls?

First Sen. No, nor a man that fears you less than he.

That's lesser than a little. [Drums afar off.]

Hark! our drums
Are bringing forth our youth. We'll break our walls.

Rather than they shall pound us up: our gates,
Which yet seem shut, we have but pinn'd with rushes;

They'll open of themselves. [Alarum afar off.]

Hark you, far off!
There is Aufidius; list, what work he makes so
Amongst your cloven army.

Mar. O, they are at it!
Lark. Their noise be our instruction. Ladders, ho!

Enter the army of the Volsces.

Mar. They fear us not, but issue forth their city.

Now put your shields before your hearts, and
fight

With hearts more proof than shields. Advance, brave Titus:

They do disdain us much beyond our thoughts,
Which makes me sweat with wrath. Come on,
my fellows:

He that retires, I'll take him for a Volscian,
and he shall feel mine edge.

Alarum. The Romans are beat back to their trenches. Re-enter MARCIUS, cursing.

Mar. All the contagion of the south light on you,
You shames of Rome! you herd of—Boils and plagues

Plaster you o'er, that you may be abhor'd
Further than seen and one infect another
Against the wind a mile! You souls of geese,
That bear the shapes of men, how have you run

From slaves that apes would beat! Pluto and hell!

All hurt behind; backs red, and faces pale
With flight and agued fear! Mend and charge
home,

Or, by the fires of heaven, I'll leave the foe
And make my wars on you: look to't: come
on;

If you'll stand fast, we'll beat them to their wives,

As they us to our trenches followed.

Another alarum. The Volscians fly, and MARCIUS follows them to the gates.

So, now the gates are open: now prove good seconds:

Thus for the followers' fortunes widens them,
Not for the slier: thank me, and do the like.

[Opens the gates.]

First Sol. Boil-hardiness; not I.

Sec. Sol. Nor I.

[Marcus is shut in.]

First Sol. See, they have shut him in.

All. To the pot, I warrant him.
[Alarum continues]

Re-enter TITUS LARTIUS.

Lark. What is become of Marcus?

All. Slain, sir, doubtless.

First Sol. Following the fliers at the very
heels,

With them he enters; who, upon the sudden, so
'tapp'd to their gates: he is himself alone,
To answer all the city.

Lark. O noble fellow!
Who sensibly outdares his senseless sword,
And, when it bows, stands up. Thou art left,
Marcus:

A carbuncle entire, as big as thou art,
Were not so rich a jewel. Thou wast a soldier
Even to Cato's wish, not fierce and terrible
Only in strokes; but, with thy grim looks and
The thunder-like percussion of thy sounds, Thou madest thine enemies shake, as if the
world

Were feverous and did tremble.

Re-enter MARCIUS, bleeding, assaulted by the enemy.

First Sol. Look, sir.

Lark. O, 'tis Marcus!

Let's fetch him off, or make remain alike.
[They fight, and all enter the city.]

SCENE V. Corioli. A street.

Enter certain Romans, with spoils.

First Rom. This will I carry to Rome.

Sec. Rom. And I this.

Third Rom. A murrain on't! I took this for silver. [Alarum continues still afar off.]

Enter MARCIUS and TITUS LARTIUS with a trumpet.

Mar. See here these movers that do prize their hours

At a crack'd drachma! Cushions, leaden spoons, Irons of a doit, doublets that hangmen would Bury with those that wore them, these base slaves,

Ere yet the fight be done, pack up: down with
them!

And hark, what noise the general makes! To
him!

There is the man of my soul's hate, Aufidius,
Piercing our Romans; then, valiant Titus, take Convenient numbers to make good the city;

Whilst I, with those that have the spirit, will hunts

To help Cominius.

Lark. Worthy sir, thou bleed'st;

Thy exercise hath been too violent
For a second course of fight.

Mar. Sir, you're mistaken;
My work hath yet not warm'd me:—Enter you

well!
The least I drop is rather physical

Then dangerous to me: to Aufidius thus so
I will appear, and fight.

Lart. Now the fair goddess, Fortune,
Fall deep in love with thee; and her great charms

Misguide thy opposers' swords! Bold gentle-
man,

Prosperity be thy page!
Mar. Thy friend no less Than those she placeth highest! So, farewell.

Lart. Thou worthiest Marcius!
[Exit Marcius.]

Go sound thy trumpet in the market-place;
Call thither all the officers of the town,
Where they shall know our mind: away!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. Near the camp of Cominius.

Enter COMINIUS, as it were in retire, with soldiers.

Com. Breathe you, my friends: well fought;
we are come off

Like Romans, neither foolish in our stands,
Nor cowardly in retire: believe me, sirs,
We shall be charged again. Whiles we have struck,

By interims and conveying gusts we have heard
The charges of our friends. Ye Roman gods!
Lead their successes as we wish our own.

That both our powers, with smiling fronts
encountering,

May give you thankful sacrifice.

Enter a Messenger.

Thy news!
Mess. The citizens of Corioli have issued, so
And given to Lartius and to Marcius battle:
I saw our party to their trenches driven,
And then I came away.

Com. Though thou speak'st truth,
Methinks thou speak'st not well. How long is't since!

Mess. Above an hour, my lord.

Com. 'Tis not a mile; briefly we heard their
drums:

How couldst thou in a mile confound an hour,
And bring thy news so late!

Mess. Spies of the Volscians
Held me in chase, that I was forced to wheel
Three or four miles about, else had I, sir, so
Half an hour since brought my report.

Com. Who's yonder,
That does appear as he were slay'd? O gods!
He has the stamp of Marcius; and I have Before-time seen him thus.

Mar. [Within] Come I too late?

Com. The shepherd knows not thunder from a labor

More than I know the sound of Marcius' tongue
From every meaner man.

Enter MARCIUS.

Mar. Come I too late?

Com. Ay, if you come not in the blood of others,

But mangled in your own.
Mar. O, let me clip ye

In arms as sound as when I woo'd, in heart,
As merry as when our nuptial day was done,
And tapers burn'd to bedward!

Com. Flower of warriors,
How is't with Titus Lartius?

Mar. As with a man busied about decrees:
Condemning some to death, and some to exile;
Ransoming him, or pitying, threatening the
other;

Holding Corioli in the name of Rome,
Even like a fawning greyhound in the leash,
To let him slip at will.

Com. Where is that slave Which told me they had beat you to your trenches?

Where is he? call him hither.

Mar. Let him alone;
He did inform the truth: but for our gentle-
men,

The common file—a plague! tribunes for
them!—

The mouse ne'er shunn'd the cat as they did budge

From rascals worse than they.

Com. But how prevail'd you?
Mar. Will the time serve to tell? I do not think.

Where is the enemy? are you lords of the field?
If not, why cease you till you are so?

Com. Marcius,
We have at disadvantage fought and did
Retire to win our purpose.

Mar. How lies their battle? know you of which side

They have placed their men of trust?

Com. As I guess, Marcius,
Their bands 't the vaward are the Antiates,
Of their best trust; o'er them Aufidius,

Their very heart of hope.

Mar. I do beseech you,
By all the battles wherein we have fought,
By the blood we have shed together, by the vows

We have made to endure friends, that you directly

Set me against Aufidius and his Antiates;
And that you not delay the present, but, so

Filling the air with swords advanced and darts,
We prove this very hour.

Com. Though I could wish
You were conducted to a gentle bath
And balms applied to you, yet dare I never Deny your asking: take your choice of those

That best can aid your action.

Mar. Those are they
That most are willing. If any such be here—
As it were sin to doubt—that love this painting

Wherein you see me smirch'd; if any fear
Lower his person than an ill report;

If any think brave death outweighs bad life
And that his country's dearer than himself;

Let him alone, or so many so minded,
Wave thus, to express his disposition,

And follow Marcius.

[They all shout and wave their swords, take him up in their arms, and cut up their caps.]

O, me alone! make you a sword of me!
If these shows be not outward, which of you

But is four Voices! none of you but is Able to bear against the great Aufidius
A shield as hard as his. A certain number, so Though thanks to all, must I select from all:
the rest

Shall bear the business in some other fight,
As cause will be obey'd. Please you to march;
And four shall quickly draw out my command,
Which men are best inclined.

Com. March on, my fellows:
Make good this ostentation, and you shall Divide in all with us. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. The gates of Corioli.

TITUS LARTIUS, having set a guard upon Corioli, going with drum and trumpet toward COMINIUS and CAIUS MARCIUS, enters with a Lieutenant, other Soldiers, and a Scout.

Lart. So, let the ports be guarded: keep your duties,
As I have set them down. If I do send, dispatch

Those centuries to our aid: the rest will serve
For a short holding: if we lose the field,
We cannot keep the town.

Lien. Fear not our care, sir.
Lart. Hence, and shut your gates upon 'em.
Our guider, come; to the Roman camp conduct us. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VIII. A field of battle.

Alarm as in battle. Enter, from opposite sides, MARCIUS and AUFIDIUS.

Mar. I'll fight with none but thee; for I do
hate thee
Worse than a promise-breaker.

Auf. We hate alike:
Not Afric owns a serpent I abhor
More than thy fame and envy. Fix thy foot.

Mar. Let the first budger die the other's slave,
And the gods doom him after!

Auf. If I fly, Marcius,
Holla me like a hare.

Mar. Within these three hours, Tullus,
Alone I fought in your Corioli walls,
And made what work I pleased: 'tis not my
blood

Wherein thou seest me mask'd; for thy revenge
Wrench up thy power to the highest.

Auf. Wert thou the Hector
That was the whip of your bragg'd progeny,
Thou shouldst not scape me here.

[They fight, and certain Voices come in the aid of Aufidius. Marcius fights till they are driven in breathless.

Officious, and not valiant, you have shamed me
In your condemned seconds. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IX. The Roman camp.

*Flourish. Alarm. A retreat is sounded.
Flourish. Enter, from one side, COMINIUS with the Romans; from the other side,
MARCUS, with his arm in a scarf.*

Com. If I should tell thee o'er this thy day's work,
Thou'ldst not believe thy deeds: but I'll report it

Where senators shall mingle tears with smiles,
Where great patricians shall attend and shrug,
I'll the end admire, where ladies shall be frighted,
And, gladly quaked, hear more; where the dull
tribunes

That, with the fusty plebeians, hate thine
honours,

Shall say against their hearts 'We thank the
gods

Our Rome hath such a soldier.'
Yet camest thou to a morsel of this feast,
Having fully dined before.

Enter TITUS LARTIUS, with his power, from the pursuit.

Lart. O general,
Here is the steed, we the caparison:
Hadst thou beheld—

Mar. Pray now, no more: my mother,
Who has a charter to extol her blood,
When she does praise me grieves me. I have
done

As you have done; that's what I can; induced
As you have been; that's for my country:
He that has but effected his good will
Hath overta'en mine act.

Com. You shall not be
The grave of your deservings; Rome must know
The value of her own: twere a concealment
Worse than a theft, no less than a traducement,
To hide your doings; and to silence that

Which, to the spire and top of praises vouch'd,
Would seem but modest: therefore, I beseech
you—

In sign of what you are, not to reward
What you have done—before our army hear us.

Mar. I have some wounds upon me, and they smart

To hear themselves remember'd.

Com. Should they not,
Well might they fester 'gainst ingratitude,
And tent themselves with death. Of all the horses

Whereof we have ta'en good and good store,
of all

The treasure in this field achieved and city,
We render you the tenth, to be ta'en forth,
Before the common distribution, at
Your only choice.

Mar. I thank you, general;
But cannot make my heart consent to take
A bribe to pay my sword: I do refuse it;
And stand upon my common part with these
That have beheld the doing.

[*A long flourish. They all cry 'Marcus!
Marcus!' set up their caps and lances: Cominius and Lartius stand
back.*

Mar. May these same instruments, which you profess,
Never sound more! when drums and trumpets shall

I the field prove flatterers, let courts and cities be Made all of false-faced soothing!

When steel grows soft as the parasite's silk,
Let him be made a coverture for the wars!
No more, I say! For that I have not wash'd
My nose that bleed, or foil'd some debile wretch,— Which, without note, here's many else have
done,—

You shout me forth
In exclamations hyperbolic;
As if I loved my little should be dieted
In praises sauced with lies.

Com. Too modest are you;
More cruel to your good report than grateful
To us that give you truly: by your patience,
If 'gainst yourself you be incensed, we'll put
you,

Like one that means his proper harm, in manacles.
Then reason safely with you. Therefore, be it known,

As to us, to all the world, that Caius Marcius Wears this war's garland: in token of the which,
My noble steed, known to the camp, I give
him.

With all his trim belonging; and from this
time,

For what he did before Corioli, call him,
With all the applause and clamour of the host,
CAIUS MARCIUS CORIOLANUS! Bear
The addition nobly even!

[Flourish. Trumpets sound, and drums.
All. Caius Marcius Coriolanus!

Cor. I will go wash;
And when my face is fair, you shall perceive
Whether I blush or no: howbeit, I thank you.
I mean to strike your steed, and at all times
To undercrest your good addition
To the fairness of my power.

Com. So, to our tent;
Where, ere we do repose us, we will write
To Rome of our success. You, Titus Lartius, Must to Corioli back: send us to Rome
The best, with whom we may articulate,
For their own good and ours.

Lart. I shall, my lord.
Cor. The gods begin to mock me. I, that now
Bestow most princely gifts, am bound to beg
Of my lord general.

Com. Take't; 'tis yours. What is't? Is
Cor. I sometime lay here in Corioli

At a poor man's house; he used me kindly:
He cried to me; I saw him prisoner;
But then Antidius was within my view,
And which o'erwhelm'd my pity: I request you
To give my poor host freedom.

Com. O, well begg'd!
Were he the butcher of my son, he should Be set at liberty. I'll answer him, Titus.

Cor. I thank you, my lord.
Com. By Jupiter! forgot.

I was weary; yes, my memory is tired.
Where we do want horses.

Com. Go we to our tent:
The matter of your charge cries; 'tis time
It should be urg'd to come. [Exeunt.]

SCENE X. The camp of the Volsces.

A Flourish. Cornets. Enter TULLUS AUFIDIUS, bloody, with two or three Soldiers.

Auf. The town is taken!
First Sol. 'Twill be deliver'd back on good condition.

Auf. Condition!
I would I were a Roman; for I cannot,
Being a Volsc, be that I am. Condition!
What good condition can a treaty find
If the part that is at mercy? Five times, Marcius,

I have fought with thee; so often hast thou bea-tine,
And wouldst do so, I think, should we encounter

As often as we eat. By the elements,
If e'er again I meet him beard to beard,
He's mine, or I am his: mine emulation
Hath not that honour in't it had; for where
I thought to crush him in an equal force, True sword to sword, I'll potch at him some
way
Or wrath or craft may get him.

First Sol. He's the devil.
Auf. Bolder, though not so subtle. My valour's poison'd

With only suffering stain by him; for him
Shall fly out of itself: nor sleep nor sanctuary,
Being naked, sick, nor fane nor Capitol,
The prayers of priests nor times of sacrifice,
Embarquements all of fury, shall lift up
Their rotten privilege and custom 'gainst
My hate to Marcius: where I find him, were it
At home, upon my brother's guard, even there,
Against the hospitable canon, would I Wash my fierce hand in a heart. Go you to the city;

Learn how 'tis held; and what they are that must
Be hostages for Rome.

First Sol. Will not you go?
Auf. I am attended at the cypress grove: I
pray you—

'Tis south the city mills—bring me word thither
How the world goes, that to the pace of it
I may spur on my journey.

First Sol. I shall, sir. [Exeunt.]

ACT III

SCENE I. Rome. A public place.

Enter MENENIUS with the two Tribunes of the people, BRUTIUS and BAURUS.

Men. The augurer tells me we shall have news to-night.

Brut. Good or bad?

Men. Not according to the prayer of the people, for they love not Marcius.

Sic. Nature teaches beasts to know their
friends.

Men. Pray you, who does the wolf love?

Sic. The lamb.

Men. Ay, to devour him; so the angry plebeians would the noble Marcius.

Bro. He's a lamb indeed, that bears like a bear.

Men. He's a bear indeed, that lives like a lamb. You two are old men : tell me one thing that I shall ask you.

Both Well, sir.

Men. In what enormity is Marcius poor in, that you two have not in abundance?

Bru. He's poor in no one fault, but stored with all.

Sic. Especially in pride.

Bru. And topping all others in boasting.

Men. This is strange now : do you two know how you are censured here in the city, I mean of us o' the right-hand file ? do you ?

Both. Why, how are we censured?

Men. Because you talk of pride now,—will you not be angry?

Both. Well, well, sir, well.

Men. Why, 'tis no great matter; for a very little thief of occasion will rob you of a great deal of patience: give your dispositions the reins, and be angry at your pleasures; at the least, if you take it as a pleasure to you in being so. You blame Marcus for being proud

Bru. We do it not alone, sir.

Men. I know you can do very little alone for your helps are many, or else your actions would grow wondrous single; your abilities are too infant-like for doing much alone. You talk of pride: O that you could turn your eyes to and the napes of your necks, and make but an interior survey of your good selves! O that you could!

Bru. What then, sir?

Men. Why, then you should discover a brood of unmeriting, proud, violent, testy magistrates alias fools, as any in Rome.

Nic. Menenius, you are known well enough

Men. I am known to be a humorous patriot, and one that loves a cup of hot wine with not a drop of allaying Tiber in't; said to be something imperfect in favouring the first complaint; hasty and tender-like upon too trivial motion; one that converses more with the buttock of the night than with the forehead of the morning: what I think I utter, and speak my malice in my breath. Meeting two such weaklings as you are—I cannot call you Log-curruges—if the drink you give me touch me palpable adversely, I make a crooked face at it. Can't say your worship has delivered the matter well, when I find the sea in compound with the major part of your syllables: and though I must be content to hear with those that as you are revered grave men, yet that the dead think tell you you have good faces. If you as title in the map of my microcosm, follows.

I am known well enough too! what harm can your blazon comparisons glean out of the character, if I be known well enough too!

Br. enough. Come, sir, come, we know you we

Men. You know neither me, yourselves, nor any thing. You are ambitious for peer knave caps and logs; you wear out a good wholesome forenoon in hearing a court between an orange wife and a fomet-seller; and then rejoin the controversy of three pence to a second day of audience. When you are hearing a matter between party and party, if you chance to be pinched with the cold, you make faces like mummies; set up the bloody flag against all patience; and in roaring for a chamber-pot, disjoin the controversy bleeding, the more entangled by your hearing: all the pence you make in their cause is, calling both the parties knaves. You are a pair of strange ones.

Bru. Come, come, you are well understood to be a perfecter giber for the table than a necessary bencher in the Capitol.

Men. Our very priests must become mockers, if they shall encounter such ridiculous subjects as you are. When you speak best unto the purpose, it is not worth the wagging of your beards; and your words deserve not so honourable a grave as to stuff a butcher's cushion, or to be entombed in an ass's pack-saddle. Yet you must be saying, Marcus is proud: who, in a cheap estimation, is worth all your predecessors since Deucalion, though peradventure some of the best of 'em were hereditary hangmen. God-den to your worship: mine of your conversation would infect my brow, being the herblomen of the beastly plebeians: I will be bold to take my leave of you.

[Bruus and Sigrinus go outside.

Enter VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, and VALERIA.
How now, my as fair as noble ladies,—and the moon, were she earthly, no nobler,—whither do you follow your eyes so fast? 100

Vol. Honourable Menenius, my boy Marcius approaches: for the love of Juno, let's go.

Men. Ha! Marriage coming home!

Vol. Ay, worthy Menening; and with most prosperous approbation.

Men. Take my cap, Jupiter, and I thank thee. Hoo! Marsden coming home!

Vol. Fir. Nav. 111896.

Vol. Look, here's a letter from him: the state hath another, his wife another; and, I think, there's one at home for you.

Men. I will make my very house real to night: a letter for me!

Mr. Yes, certain, there's a letter for you; I

Mrs. A. letter for me!
of seven years' health; in which time I will make a lip at the physician: the most sovereign prescription in (Jalen is but symptomatic, and to this preservative, of no better report than a horse-drench. Is he not wounded? he was wont to come home wounded.

Kir. O. no. no. no.

Vol. O, he is wounded; I think the Men. So do I say, if it be not too much brings a victory in his pocket. The wound he come him.

Vol. On a heavy thing time hours with

Mon. Feb. 11

Men. And 'twas time for him too, I'll warrant him that: an he had stayed by him, I would not have been so fiddled for all the chests in Corioli, and the gold that's in them. Is the senate possessed of this?

Vol. Good ladies, let's go. Yea, yea, yea; the senate has letters from the general, wherein he gives my son the whole name of the war: he hath in this action outdone his former deeds doubly.

Vol. In troth, there's wondrous things spoke of him.

Men. Wondrous! ay, I warrant you, and not without his true purchasing.

Vir. The gods grant them true!

Vol. True! pow, wow.

Men. True! I'll be sworn they are true. Where is he wounded? [To the Tribunes] God save your good worships! Marcius is coming home: he has more cause to be proud. Where is he wounded?

Vol. I the shoulder and i' the left arm: there will be large cicatrices to show the people, when he shall stand for his place. He received in the repulse of Tarquin seven hurts i' the body.

Men. One i' the neck, and two i' the thigh, — there's nine that I know.

Vol. He had, before this last expedition, twenty-five wounds upon him.

Men. Now it's twenty-seven: every gash was an enemy's grave. [A shout and flourish.] Hark! the trumpets.

Vol. These are the ensigns of Marcius: before him he carries noise, and behind him he leaves tears: Death, that dark spirit, in's nery arm doth lie; Which, being advanced, declines, and then men die.

A sennet. Trumpets sound. Enter COMINIUS, the general, and TITUS LANTICH; between them, CORIOLANUS, crowned with an oak leaf garland; with Captains and Soldiers, and a Herald.

Her. Know, Rome, that all alone Marcius did fight

Within Corioli gates: where he hath won, 180
With fame, a name to Caius Marcius; these
In honour follow Coriolanus.
Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus!

All. Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus! [Flourish.]

Cor. No more of this; it does offend my heart:

Pray now, no more.

Com. Look, sir, your mother!

Cor. O,

You have, I know, petition'd all the gods
For my prosperity! [Kneels.]

Vol. Nay, my good soldier, up;

My gentle Marcius, worthy Caius, and
By some achieving honour newly named, — 190
What is it I — O, Marcius, must I call thee? —
Say, O, thy wife!

Cor. My gracious silence, hail!

Wouldst thou have laugh'd had I come coffin'd home,

That weep'd to see me triumph! Ah, my dear,
Such eyes the widows in Corioli wear,
And mothers that lack sons.

Men. Now, the gods crown thee!

Cor. And live you yet? [To Valeria] O my sweet lady, pardon.

Vol. I know not where to turn: O, welcome home:

And welcome, general, and ye're welcome all.

Men. A hundred thousand welcomes. I could weep

And I could laugh, I am light and heavy. 200
Welcome.

A curse begin at very root on's heart,
That is not glad to see thee! You are three
That Rome should dote on: yet, by the faith of men,

We have some old crab-trees here at home that will not

Be grafted to your relish. Yet welcome, warriors:

We call a nettle but a nettle and
The faults of fools but folly.

Com. Ever right.

Cor. Menenius ever, ever.

Herald. Give way there, and go on!

Cor. [To Valerius and Virgilia] Your hand, and yours: 210

Ere in our own house I do shade my head,
The good patricians must be visited;
From whom I have received not only greetings,
But with them change of honours.

Vol. I have lived

To see inherited my very wishes
And the buildings of my fancy: only

There's one thing wanting, which I doubt not but

Our Rome will cast upon thee.

Cor. Know, good mother,
I had rather be their servant in my way
Than away with them in theirs.

Com. On, to the Capitol!

[Flourish. Cornets. Excurs in state, as before. Brutus and Sicinius come forward.]

Bru. All tongues speak of him, and the bleared sights

Are spectacl'd to see him: your prattling nurse
Into a rapture lets her baby cry

While she chats him: the kitchen malkin pins
Her richest lockram 'bout her screechy neck.

Clambering the walls to eye him: stalls, bulls,
windows,

Are smother'd up, heads fill'd, and ridges hoed
With variable complexions, all agreeing

In earnestness to see him: mid-shorn farmers
Do press among the popular throngs and puff

To win a vulgar station: our vet' d dames Commit the war of white and red to
Their nicely-gawded cheeks to the wanton spoil

O Phœbus! burning knees: such a pother
As if that whatsoever god who lends him
Were still crapt into his human powers

And gave him graceful person. 220
So,

I warrant him cometh.

Bru. Then our office may,
tiring his power, go sleep.
Sic. He cannot temperately transport his honours
from where he should begin and end, but will lose those he hath won.

Bru. In that there's comfort.
Sic. Doubt not the commoners, for whom we stand, but they upon their ancient malice will forget with the least cause these his new honours,
which
that he will give them make I as little question as he is proud to do 't.

Bru. I heard him swear, were he to stand for consul, never would he appear in the market-place nor on him put the napless vesture of humility;
Nor, showing, as the manner is, his wounds
to the people, beg their stinking breaths.

Sic. 'Tis right.
Bru. It was his word: O, he would miss it rather than carry it but by the suit of the gentry
to him
And the desire of the nobles.

Sic. I wish no better Than have him hold that purpose and to put it in execution.

Bru. 'Tis most like he will.
Sic. It shall be to him then as our good wills,
A sure destruction.

Bru. So it must fall out
To him or our authorities. For an end, 260
We must suggest the people in what hatred
He still hath held them; that to 's power he would

Have made them mules, silenced their pleaders
and Disproportioned their freedoms, holding them,
In human action and capacity,
Of no more soul nor fitness for the world
Than camels in the war, who have their pro-pound

Only for bearing burdens, and sore blows
For sinking under them.

Sic. This, as you say, suggested
At some time when his soaring insolence 270 Shall touch the people—which time shall not want,

If he be put upon 't; and that's as easy
As to set dogs on sheep—will be his fire
To kindle their dry stubble; and their blaze
Shall darken him for ever.

Enter a Messenger.

Bru. What's the matter?
Mess. You are sent for to the Capitol. 'Tis
thought that Marcius shall be consul:
I have seen the dumb men throng to see him
and

The blind to hear him speak: matrons flung gloves,
dies and made their smocks and handkerchiefs,
upon him as he passed: the nobles bended
As to Jove's statue, and the common people

A shower and thunder with their caps and shouts:

I never saw the like.

Bru. Let's to the Capitol;
And carry with us ears and eyes for the time,
But hearts for the event.

Sic. Have with you. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. The same. The Capitol.

Enter two Officers, to lay cushions.

First Off. Come, come, they are almost here.
How many stand for consulships?

Sec. Off. Three, they say: but 'tis thought of every one Coriolanus will carry it.

First Off. That's a brave fellow; but he's vengeance proud, and loves not the common people.

Sec. Off. Faith, there have been many great men that have flattered the people, who never loved them; and there be many that they have loved, they know not wherefore: so that, if they love they know not why, they hate upon no better a ground: therefore, for Coriolanus
neither to care whether they love or hate him manifests the true knowledge he has in their disposition; and out of his noble carelessness lets them plainly see 't.

First Off. If he did not care whether he had their love or no, he waved indifferently 'twixt doing them neither good nor harm; but he seeks their hate with greater devotion than they can render it him; and leaves nothing undone that may fully discover him their opposite. Now, to seem to affect the malice and displeasure of the people is as bad as that which he dislikes, to flatter them for their love.

Sec. Off. He hath deserved worthily of his country: and his ascent is not by such easy degrees as those who, having been supple and courteous to the people, bonneted, without any further deed to have them at all into their estimation and report: but he hath so planted his honours in their eyes, and his actions in their hearts, that for their tongues to be silent, and not confess so much, were a kind of in-grateful injury: to report otherwise, were a malice, that, giving itself the lie, would pluck reproof and rebuke from every ear that heard it.

First Off. No more of him; he's a worthy man: make way, they are coming.

*A sennet. Enter, with Lictors before them,
COMINIUS the consul, MARCIUS, CORIO-
LANUS, Senators, SICINIUS and MENENIUS.
The Senators take their places; the Tribunes take their places by themselves. Corio-LANUS stands.*

Mess. Having determined of the Volscians
and

To send for Titus Lartius, it remains,
As the main point of this our after-sitting,
To gratify his noble service that Hath thus stood for his country; therefore,
please you

Most reverend and grave sirs, to desire
The praetor consul, and his council
In our well-found succours, to agree

A little of that worthy work perform'd
By Caius Marcius Coriolanus, whom
We met here both to thank and to remember
With honours like himself.

First Sen. Speak, good Cominius:
Leave nothing out for length, and make us
think

Rather our state's defective for requital
Than we to stretch it out. [To the Tribunes]

Masters o' the people,
We do request your kindest ears, and after,
Your loving motion toward the common body,
To yield what passes here.

Sic. We are convened
Upon a pleasing treaty, and have hearts
Inclined to honour and advance
The theme of our assembly.

Bru. Which the rather
We shall be blest to do, if he remember
A kinder value of the people than
He hath hereto prized them at.

Men. That's off, that's off;
I would you rather had been silent. Please
you

To hear Cominius speak?

Bru. Most willingly;
But yet my capion was more pertinent
Than the rebuke you give it.

Men. He loves your people;
But tie him not to be their beilfellow.
Worthy Cominius, speak. [Coriolanus offers to go away.] Nay, keep your place.

First Sen. Sit, Coriolanus; never shame to hear

What you have nobly done.
Cor. Your honours' pardon:
I had rather have my wounds to heal again
Than hear say how I got them.

Bru. Sir, I hope
My words disbench'd you not.

Cor. No, sir: yet oft,
When blows have made me stay, I fled from
words.

You soothed not, therefore hurt not: but your
people,
I love them as they weigh.

Men. Pray now, sit down.
Cor. I had rather have one scratch my head i' the sun

When the alarm were struck than idly sit
To hear my nothings monster'd. [Exit.]

Masters of the people,
Your multiplying spawn how can he flatter
His ears to one good one—when you

He rather venture all his limbs for honour
Than sit on 't to hear it? Proceed, Cominius.

I shall lack voice: the deeds of Coriolanus not be utter'd fully. It is held

That none in the children's virtue, and Most in the heavens: if it be,

Coriolanus a spark of justice in the world
As sixteen years
When he was a head for Rome, he

And the mark of honour: set them down,

Whom with all praise I point at, saw him fight,
When with his Amazonian chin he drove
The bristled lips before him: he bestrid
An o'er-press'd Roman and i' the consul's view

Slew three opposers: Tarquin's i' the met,
And struck him on his knee: that day's feats,

When he might act the woman in some scene,
He proved best man i' the field, and for his

meed
Was brow-bound with the oak. His pupil age
Man-enter'd thus, he waxed like a son,
And in the brunt of seventeen battles since He lurch'd all swords of the garland. For this last,

Before and in Corioli, let me say,
I cannot speak him home: he stopp'd the files;
And by his rare example made the coward

Turn terror into sport: as weeks before
A vessel under sail, so men obey'd
And fell below his stem: his sword, death,

stamp,
Where it did mark, it took; from face to foot
He was a thing of blood, whose every motion

Was timed with dying cries: alone he enter'd
The mortal gate of the city, which he painted
With shunless destiny: adieu came off,
And with a sudden re-inforcement struck

Corioli like a planet: now all's his:
When, by and by, the din of war gan pierce
His ready sense; then straight his doubled

spirit
Re-quick'n'd what in flesh was fatigued,
And to the battle came he; where he did Run reeking o'er the lives of men, as if

'Twere a perpetual spoil: and till we call'd
Both field and city ours, he never stoop'd
To ease his breast with panting.

Men. Worthy man!
First Sen. He cannot but with measure fit the honours

Which we devise him.
Com. Our spoils he rich'd at,
And look'd upon things precious as they were
The common muck of the world: he covets

less
Than misery itself would give; rewards
His deeds with doing them, and is content
To spend the time to end it.

Men. He's right noble:
Let him be call'd for.

First Sen. Call Coriolanus.
Off. He doth appear.

Re-enter CORIOLANUS.
Men. The senate, Coriolanus, are well pleased
To make thee consul.

Cor. I do owe them still
My life and services.

Men. It then remains
That you do speak to the people.

Cor. I do beseech you,
Let me o'erstep that custom, for I cannot
Put on the gown, stand naked, and entreat them,
For my wounds' sake, to give their suffrage:

please you
That I may pass this doing.

Sic. Sir, the people must have their voices; neither will they bate one jot of ceremony.

Men. Put them not to't: Pray you, go fit you to the custom and take to you, as your predecessors have, your honour with your form.

Cor. It is a part That I shall blush in acting, and might well be taken from the people.

Bru. Mark you that? 150
Cor. To brag unto them, thus I did, and thus;

Show them the unaching scars which I should hide.

As if I had received them for the hire of their breath only!

Men. Do not stand upon't. We recommend to you, tribunes of the people, our purpose to them; and to our noble consul wish we all joy and honour.

Senators. To Coriolanus come all joy and honour! [Flourish of cornets. Exit all but Sicinius and Brutus.]

Bru. You see how he intends to use the people.

Sic. May they perceive's intent! He will require them. 160

As if he did condemn what he requested should be in them to give.

Bru. Come, we'll inform them of our proceedings here: on the market-place, I know, they do attend us. [Exit all.]

SCENE III. The same. The Forum.

Enter seven or eight Citizens.

First Cit. Once, if he do require our voices, we ought not to deny him.

Sec. Cit. We may, sir, if we will.

Third Cit. We have power in ourselves to do it, but it is a power that we have no power to do; for if he show us his wounds and tell us his deeds, we are to put our tongues into those wounds and speak for them; so, if he tell us his noble deeds, we must also tell him our noble acceptance of them. Ingratitude is monstrous, and for the multitude to be ingrateful, were to make a monster of the multitude; of the which we being members, should bring ourselves to be monstrous members.

First Cit. And to make us no better thought of, a little help will serve; for once we stood up about the corn, he himself stuck not to call us the many-headed multitude.

Third Cit. We have been called so of many; not that our heads are some brown, some black, some Auburn, some bald, but that our wits are so diversely coloured: and truly I think if all our wits were to issue out of one skull, they would fly east, west, north, south, and their consent of one direct way should be at once to all the points of the compass.

Sec. Cit. Think you so? Which way do you judge my wit would fly?

Third Cit. Nay, your wit will not so soon out as another man's; it is stronger wedged up in a block-head, but if it were at liberty, 'twould, sure, southward.

Sec. Cit. Why that way?

Third Cit. To lose itself in a fog, where being three parts melted away with rotten dew, the fourth would return for conscience sake, to help to get thee a wife.

Sec. Cit. You are never without your tricks: you may, you may. 39

Third Cit. Are you all resolved to give your voices? But that's no matter, the greater part carries it. I say, if he would incline to the people, there was never a worthier man.

Enter CORIOLANUS in a gown of humility, with MENENIUS.

Here he comes, and in the gown of humility: mark his behaviour. We are not to stay all together, but to come by him where he stands, by ones, by twos, and by threes. He's to make his requests by particulars; whereas every one of us has a single honour, in giving him our own voices with our own tongues; therefore follow me, and I'll direct you how you shall go by him.

All. Content, content. [Exeunt citizens.]

Men. O sir, you are not right: have you not known

The worthiest men have done 't?

Cor. What must I say? 'I pray, sir,—Plague upon 't! I cannot bring My tongue to such a pace:—'Look, sir, my wounds!

I got them in my country's service, when Some certain of your brethren would'd run From the noise of our own drums.'

Men. O me, the gods! You must not speak of that: you must desire them. 64

To think upon you.

Cor. Think upon me! hang 'em! I would they would forget me, like the virtues Which our divines lose by 'em.

Men. You'll mar all: I'll leave you: pray you, speak to 'em, I pray you, in wholesome manner. [Exit.]

Cor. Bid them wash their faces And keep their teeth clean. [Re-enter two of the Citizens.] So, here comes a brace.

[Re-enter a third Citizen.] You know the cause, sir, of my standing here.

Third Cit. We do, sir; tell us what hath brought you to't. 70

Cor. Mine own desert.

Sec. Cit. Your own desert!

Cor. Ay, but not mine own desire.

Third Cit. How not your own desire?

Cor. No, sir, 'twas never my desire yet to trouble the poor with begging.

Third Cit. You must think, if we give you any thing, we hope to gain by you.

Cor. Well then, I pray, your price of the consulship!

First Cit. The price is to ask no price.

Cor. Gladly 'tis, I pray, I have wounds to show you, which shall be great privates. Your good voice, sir, was my price.

Sec. Cit. You shall ha't, worthy sir.

Cor. A match, sir. There's in all two worthy voices begged. I have your aims: adieu.

Third Cit. But this is something odd.

Sec. Cit. An 'twere to give again,—but 'tis no matter. [Exeunt the three Citizens. go]

Re-enter two other Citizens.

Cor. Pray you now, if it may stand with the tune of your voices that I may be consul, I have here the customary gown.

Fourth Cit. You have deserved nobly of your country, and you have not deserved nobly.

Cor. Your enigma!

Fourth Cit. You have been a scourge to her enemies, you have been a rod to her friends; you have not indeed loved the common people.

Cor. You should account me the more virtuous that I have not been common in my love. I will, sir, flatter my sworn brother, the people, to learn a dearer estimation of them; 'tis a condition they account gentle: and since the wisdom of their choice is rather to have my hat than my heart, I will practise the insinuating nod and be off to them most counterfeitedly; that is, sir, I will counterfeit the bewitchment of some popular man and give it bountifully to the desirers. Therefore, beseech you, I may be consul.

Fifth Cit. We hope to find you here friend; and therefore give you our voices heartily.

Fourth Cit. You have received many wounds for your country.

Cor. I will not seal your knowledge with showing them. I will make much of your voices, and so trouble you no further.

Both Cit. The gods give you joy, sir, heartily! [Exeunt.]

Cor. Most sweet voices!

Better it is to die, better to starve,¹²⁰
Than crave the hire which first we do deserve.
Why in this woolly tye should I stand here,
To beg of Hob and Dick, that do appear,
Their needless vouches? Custom calls me to't:
What custom wills, in all things should we do't.

The dust on antique time would lie unswept,
And mountainous error be too highly heap'd
For truth to o'er-peer. Rather than fool it so,
Let the high office and the honour go
To one that would do thus. I am half through:
The one part suffer'd, the other will I do. ¹²¹

Re-enter three Citizens more.

Here come more voices.

Your voices: for your voices I have fought;
Watch'd for your voices: for your voices bear
Of wounds two dozen odd; battles thrice six
I have seen and heard of; for your voices have Done many things, some less, some more:

your voices:

Indeed, I have done nobly, and cannot go without my honest man's voice. ¹²²

Second Cit. Therefore let him be consul:
It will give him joy, and make him good.

All Cit. Amen, amen. God save thee, noble consul! [Exeunt.]

Cor. Worthy voices!

Re-enter MENENIUS, with BRUTUS and SIOINIUS.

Men. You have stood your limitation and the tribunes

Endue you with the people's voice: remains
That, in the official marks invested, you
Anon do meet the senate.

Cor. Is this done?

Sic. The custom of request you have discharged: ¹⁹

The people do admit you, and are summon'd
To meet anon, upon your approbation.

Cor. Where? at the senate-house?

Sic. There, Coriolanus.

Cor. May I change these garments?

Sic. You may, sir.

Cor. That I'll straight do; and, knowing myself again,
Repair to the senate-house.

Men. I'll keep you company. Will you along?

Br. We stay here for the people.

Sic. Fare you well.

[Exeunt Coriolanus and Menenius.]

He has it now, and by his looks methinks
'Tis warm at's heart. ¹⁶⁰

Br. With a proud heart he wore his humble weeds.

Will you dismiss the people?

Re-enter Citizens.

Sic. How now, my masters! have you chose this man?

First Cit. He has our voices, sir.

Br. We pray the gods he may deserve your loves.

Sec. Cit. Amen, sir: to my poor unworthy notice.

He mock'd us when he begg'd our voices.

Third Cit. Certainly
He flouted us downright.

First Cit. No, 'tis his kind of speech: he did not mock us.

Sec. Cit. Not one amongst us, save yourself, but says ¹²⁰

He used us scornfully: he should have shew'd
us

His marks of merit, wounds received for's
country.

Sic. Why, so he did, I am sure.

Citizens. No, no; no man saw 'em.

Third Cit. He said he had wounds, which he could show in private;

And with his hat, thus waving it in scorn,
'I would be consul,' says he: 'aged custom,

But by your voices, will not so permit me:
Your voices therefore! When we granted that,

Here was 'I thank you for your voices: thank
you:

Your most sweet voices: now you have let
your voices

I have no further with you.' Was not this mockery?

Sic. Why either were you ignorant to see't,

Or, seeing it, of such childish friendliness
To yield your voices!

Bru. Could you not have told him
As you were lesson'd, when he had no power,
But was a petty servant to the state,
He was your enemy, ever spake against
Your liberties and the charters that you bear
I' the body of the weal; and now, arriving
A place of potency and sway o' the state, 290
If he should still malignantly remain
Fast foe to the piebail, your voices might Be curses to yourselves! You should have said

That as his worthy deeds did claim no less
Than what he stood for, so his gracious nature
Would think upon you for your voices and Translate his malice towards you into love,
Standing your friendly lord.

Sic. Thus to have said,
As you were fore-advised, had touch'd his
spirit 299
And tried his inclination: from him pluck'd Either his gracious promise, which you might,
As cause had call'd you up, have held him to;
Or else it would have gall'd his surly nature,
Which easily endures not article
Tying him to aught; so putting him to rage,
You should have ta'en the advantage of his choler

And pass'd him unelecd.

Bru. Did you perceive
He did sollicit you in free contempt
When he did need your loves, and do you think
That his contempt shall not be bruising to you,
When he hath power to crush? Why, had your bodies 311

No heart among you! or had you tongues to cry

Against the rectorship of judgement?

Sic. Have you
Ere now denied the asker! and now again
Of him that did not ask, but mock, bestow
Your sued-for tongues?

Third Cit. He's not confirm'd; we may deny him yet.

Sec. Cit. And will deny him:
I'll have five hundred voices of that sound.

First Cit. I twice five hundred and their friends to piece 'em. 320

Bru. Get you hence instantly, and tell those
friends,

They have chose a consul that will from them take

Their liberties: make them of no more voice
Than dogs that are as often beat for barking
As therefore kept to do so.

Sic. Let them assemble,
And on a safer judgement all revoke
Your ignorant election; enforce his pride,
And his old hate unto you; besides, forget not
With what contempt he wore the humble weed,
How in his suit he scorn'd you; but your loves,
Thinking upon his services, took from you 321
The

No impediment between, but that you must Cast your election on him.

Sic. Say, you chose him
More after our commandment than as guided By your own true affections, and that your minds,

Pre-occupied with what you rather must do Than what you should, made you against the grain 341

To voice him consul: lay the fault on us.

Bru. Ay, spare us not. Say we read lectures
to you,

How youngly he began to serve his country,
How long continued, and what stock he springs of,

The noble house o' the Marcians, from whence came

That Ancus Marcius, Numa's daughter's son,
Who, after great Hostilius, here was king:
Of the same house Publius and Quintus were,
That our best water brought by conduits hither;
And [Censorinus,] nobly named so, 351
Twice being [by the people chosen] censor,
Was his great ancestor.

Sic. One thus descended,
That hath beside well in his person wrought
To be set high in place, we did commend
To your remembrances: but you have found,
Scaling his present bearing with his past,
That he's your fixed enemy, and revoke
Your sudden approbation.

Bru. Say, you ne'er had done't—
Harp on that still—but by our putting on: 360
And presently, when you have drawn your number,

Repair to the Capitol.

All. We will go: almost all
Repent in their election. [Exeunt Citizens.

Bru. Let them go on;
This mutiny were better put in hazard,
Than stay, past doubt, for greater:
If, as his nature is, he fall in rage
With their refusal, both observe and answer
The vantage of his anger.

Sic. To the Capitol, come:
We will be there before the stream o' the people;
And this shall seem, as partly 'tis, their own,
Which we have goaded onward. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I. Rome. A street.

Cornelia. Enter CORIOLANUS, MENENIUS, all the Centry, COMINIUS, TITUS LARTIUS, and other Senators.

Cor. Tullus Aufidius then had made new head?

Lart. He had, my lord; and that it was which caused

Our swifter composition.

Cor. So then the Volscians stand but as at first,

Ready, when time shall prompt them, to make road

Upon 's again.

Com. They are worn, lead onward;
That we shall hardly in our signs see

Bru. Lay
A fault on us, your tribunes; that we labour'd,

Their banners wave again.

Cor. Saw you Aufidius?
Ant. On safe-guard he came to me; and

Ant. Against the Volscians, for they had so vilely Yielded the town: he is retired to Antium.

Cor. Spoke he of me?
Ant. He did, my lord.

Cor. How? what?
Ant. How often he had met you, sword to

sword;
That of all things upon the earth he hated

Your person most, that he would pawn his
fortunes

To hopeless restitution, so he might Be call'd your vanquisher.

Cor. At Antium lives he?
Ant. At Antium.

Cor. I wish I had a cause to seek him there,
To oppose his hatred fully. Welcome home. so

Enter SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

Behold, these are the tribunes of the people,
The tongues of the common mouth: I do

despise them;
For they do speak them in authority,

Against all noble sufferance.
Sic. Pass no further.

Cor. Ha! what is that?
Br. It will be dangerous to go on: no

further.
Cor. What makes this change?

Men. The matter!
Cor. Hath he not pass'd the noble and the common?

Br. Cominius, no.

Cor. Have I had children's voices? so First Sen. Tribunes, give way: he shall to the market-place.

Br. The people are incensed against him.

Sic. Stop,
Or all will fall in broil.

Cor. Are these your herd?
Must these have voices, that can yield them

now
And straight disclaim their tongues? What are your offices?

You being their mouths, why rule you not their teeth?

Have you not set them on?

Men. Be calm, be calm.
Cor. It is a purposed thing, and grows by plot

To curb the will of the nobility:
Suffer 't, and live with such as cannot rule so

Men
Nor ever will be ruled.
Br. Call't not a plot;

The people cry you mock'd them, and of late,
When corn was given them gratis, you repined;

Scandal'd the supplicants for the people, call'd
them

These plagues, flatterers, foes to nobleness.
Cor. What, this was known before.

Br. Not to them all.
Cor. Have you inform'd them of this?

Br. Now! I inform them:
Cor. You are like to

Br. Not unlike,
Each way, to better yours.

Cor. Why then should I be consul? By your clouds,

Let me deserve so ill as you, and make me
Your fellow tribune.

Sic. You show too much of that
For which the people stir: if you will pass

To where you are bound, you must inquire your way,

Which you are out of, with a gentler spirit,
(Or never be so noble as a consul,

Nor yoke with him for tribune.
Men. Let's be calm.

Cor. The people are abused; set on. This palt'ring

Revenues not Rome, nor has Coriolanus
Deserv'd this so dishonour'd rub, laid falsely to

I the plain way of his merit.
Cor. Tell me of corn!

This was my speech, and I will speak 't again—
Men. Not now, not now.

First Sen. Not in this heat, sir, now.
Cor. Now, as I live, I will. My nobler

friends,
I crave their pardons:

For the mutable, rank-scented many, let them
Beard me as I do not flatter, and Therein behold themselves: I say again,

In soothing them, we nourish 'gainst our senate

The cockle of rebellion, insolence, sedition, so
Which we ourselves have plough'd for, sow'd,

and scatter'd,
By mingling them with us, the honour'd

number,
Who lack not virtue, no, nor power, but that

Which they have given to beggars.
Men. Well, no more.

First Sen. No more words, we beseech you.
Cor. How! no more?

As for my country I have shed my blood,
Not fearing outward force, so shall my lungs

Coin words till their decay against those menaces,

Which we disdain should't utter us, yet sought
The very way to catch them.

Br. You speak of the people, &
As if you were a god to punish, not

A man of their infirmity.
Sic. These well

We let the people know 't.
Men. What, what? his chol'!

Cor. Chol'!
Were I as patient as the midnight sleep,

By Jove, 'twould be my undoing!
Sic. It is a said

That shall remain a poison where it is,
Not poison any further.

Cor. Shall remain!
Hear you this Tribun of the plebeians? mark

you
His absolute 'shall'?

Cor. 'Twas from the canon,
Men. 'Twas from the canon.

Cor. O good but most unwise patricians! why,
You grave but sickening sunsets, have you this

Given Hydra here to choose an officer,
That with his pestiferous speech, being but

The horn and noise o' the monster's, wants not spirit

To say he'll turn your current in a ditch,
 And make your channel his! If he have power,
 Then rail your ignorance; if none, awake
 Your dangerous lenity. If you are learn'd,
 Be not as common fools; if you are not, 100
 Let them have cushions by you. You are plebeians,

If they be senators: and they are no less,
 When, both your voices blended, the great'st
 taste

Most palates theirs. They choose their magistrate,

And such a one as he, who puts his 'shall,'
 His popular 'shall,' against a graver bench
 Than ever frown'd in Greece. By Jove himself!
 It makes the consuls base: and my soul aches
 To know, when two authorities are up,
 Neither supreme, how soon confusion 110
 May enter 'twixt the gap of both and take
 The one by the other.

Com. Well, on to the market-place.

Cor. Whoever gave that counsel, to give
 forth

The corn o' the storehouse gratis, as 'twas used
 Sometime in Greece.—

Men. Well, well, no more of that.

Cor. Though there the people had more absolute power,

I say, they nourish'd disobedience, fed
 The ruin of the state.

Bru. Why, shall the people give
 One that speaks thus their voice!

Cor. I'll give my reasons,
 More worthy than their voices. They know 120
 the corn

Was not our recompense, resting well assured
 They ne'er did service for't: being press'd to the war,

Even when the navel of the state was touch'd,
 They would not thread the gates. This kind of service

Did not deserve corn gratis. Being i' the war,
 Their mutinies and revolts, wherein they show'd
 Most valour, spoke not for them: the accusation
 Which they have often made against the senate,
 All cause unborn, could never be the motive
 Of our so frank donation. Well, what then?
 How shall this basest multitude digest 131
 The senate's courtesy? Let deeds express What's like to be their words: 'We did request
 it;

We are the greater poll, and in true fear
 They gave us our demands.' Thus we debate
 The nature of our seats and make the rabble
 Call our cause fears: which will in time
 Break ope the locks o' the senate and bring in
 The crows to peck the eagles.

Men. Come, enough.

Bru. Enough, with over-measure.

Cor. No, take more: 140

What may be sworn by, both divine and human,
 Seal what I end wish'd! This double worship,
 Where one part does disdain with cause, the
 other

Admits without all reason, where gravity, this,
 wisdom,

Cannot conclude but by the yea and no
 Of general ignorance.—It must omit
 Real necessities, and give way the while
 To unstable alightness: purpose so barr'd, it follows.

Nothing is done to purpose. Therefore, beseech
 you,—

You that will be less fearful than discreet, 150
 That love the fundamental part of state
 More than you doubt the change on't, that prefer

A noble life before a long, and wish
 To jump a body with a dangerous physic
 That's sure of death without it, at once pluck
 out

The multitudinous tongue; let them not lick
 The sweet which is their poison: your dis-
 honour

Mangles true judgement and bereaves the state
 Of that integrity which should become't,
 Not having the power to do the good it would,
 For the ill which doth control't.

Bru. Has said enough. 161

Sic. Has spoken like a traitor, and shall answer

As traitors do.

Cor. Thou wretch, despite o'erwhelm thee!
 What should the people do with these bald
 tribunes?

On whom depending, their obedience fails
 To the greater bench: in a rebellion,
 When what's not meet, but what must be,
 was law,

Then were they chosen: in a better hour,
 Let what is meet be said it must be meet, 170
 And throw their power i' the dust.

Bru. Manifest treason!

Sic. This a consul! no.

Bru. The ediles, ho!

Enter an Edile.

Let him be apprehended.

Sic. Go, call the people: [Exit Edile] in whose name myself

Attach thee as a traitorous innovator,
 A foe to the public weal: obey, I charge thee,
 And follow to thine answer.

Cor. Hence, old goat!

Senators, &c. We'll smite him.

Com. And sit, hands off.

Cor. Hence, rotten thing! or I shall shake thy bones

Out of thy garments.

Sic. Help, ye citizens! 180

Enter a rabble of Citizens (Plebeians), with the Ediles.

Men. On both sides more respect.

Sic. Here's he that would take from you all your power.

Bru. Seize him, ediles!

Citizens, &c. Down with him! down with him!
Senators, &c. Weapons, weapons, weapons!

Ediles. 'Tis he!

Coriolanus. 'Tis he!

Peace, peace, peace!

Men. What is about to be! I am out of breath;
Confusion's near; I cannot speak. You, tribunes
To the people! Coriolanus, patience!
Speak, good Sicinius.

Sic. Hear me, people; peace!
Citizens. Let's hear our tribunes: peace!
Speak, speak, speak.

Sic. You are at point to lose your liberties:
Marcus would have all from you; Marcius,
Whom late you have named for consul.

Men. Fie, fie, fie!
This is the way to kindle, not to quench.

First Sen. To unbuild the city and to lay all flat.

Sic. What is the city but the people?
Citizens. True,

The people are the city.

Brus. By the consent of all, we were estab-lish'd

The people's magistrates.

Citizens. You so remain.

Men. And so are like to do.

Com. That is the way to lay the city flat;
To bring the roof to the foundation,
And bury all, which yet distinctly ranges,
In heaps and piles of ruin.

Sic. This deserves death.

Brus. Or let us stand to our authority,
Or let us lose it. We do here pronounce,

Upon the part of the people, in whose power
We were elected theirs, Marcius is worthy
Of present death.

Sic. Therefore lay hold of him;
Bear him to the rock Tarpeian, and from thence
Into destruction cast him.

Brus. Ediles, seize him!

Citizens. Yield, Marcius, yield!

Men. Hear me one word;
Beseech you, tribunes, hear me but a word.

Ed. Peace, peace!

Men. [To Brutus] Be that you seem, truly your country's friend.

And temperately proceed to what you would Thus violently redress.

Brus. Sir, those cold ways,
That seem like prudent helps, are very poisonous Where the disease is violent. Lay hands upon
him,

And bear him to the rock.

Cor. No, I'll die here.

[Drawing his sword.]
There's some among you have beheld me
fighting:

Come, try upon yourselves what you have seen me.

Men. Down with that sword! Tribunes, withdraw awhile.

Brus. Lay hands upon him.

Men. Help Marcius, help,
You that be noble; help him, young and old!

Citizens. Down with him, down with him!
[In this meeting, the Tribunes, the Ediles, and the People, are beat in.]

Men. Go, get you to your houses; be gone, they!

All will be naught else.

Sec. Sen. Get you gone.
Com. Stand fast;

We have as many friends as enemies.

Men. Shall it be put to that?
First Sen. The gods forbid!

I prithee, noble friend, home to thy house;
Leave us to cure this cause.

Men. For 'tis a sore upon us,
You cannot tent yourself: be gone, beseech
you.

Com. Come, sir, along with us.

Cor. I would they were barbarians—as they are,

Though in Rome litter'd—not Romans—as they are not,

Though calv'd I the porch o' the Capitol—
Men. Be gone;

Put not your worthy rage into your tongue;
One time will owe another.

Cor. On fair ground
I could beat forty of them.

Men. I could myself
Take up a brace o' the best of them; yea, the two tribunes.

Com. But now 'tis odds beyond arithmetic;
And manhood is call'd foolery, when it stands
Against a falling fabric. Will you hence,

Before the tax return! whose rage doth rend
Like interrupted waters and o'erbear

What they are used to bear.

Men. Pray you, be gone:

I'll try whether my old wit be in request
With those that have but little: this must be patch'd

With cloth of any colour.

Com. Nay, come away.
[Exit Coriolanus, Cominius, and others.]

A Patrician. This man has marr'd his fortune.

Men. His nature is too noble for the world:
He would not flatter Neptune for his trident,

Or Jove for's power to thunder. His heart's his mouth:

What his breast forges, that his tongue must vent;

And, being angry, does forget that ever he heard the name of death. [A noise within.]

Here's goodly work!

Sec. Pat. I would they were a-bed!

Men. I would they were in Tiber! What the vengeance!

Could he not speak 'em fair!

Re-enter BAUTUS and SICINIUS, with the rabble.

Sic. Where is this viper
That would depopulate the city and
Be every man himself?

Men. You worthy tribunes,—

Sic. He shall be thrown down the Tarpeian rock

With rigorous hands: he hath restor'd law,
And therefore law shall scorn him further trial

Than the severity of the public power
Which he so sets at naught.

First Cit. He shall well know
The noble tribunes are the people's mouths,
And we their hands.

Citizens. He shall, sure on 't.
Men. Sir, sir,—
Sic. Peace!
Men. Do not cry havoc, where you should but hunt
 With modest warrant.
Sic. Sir, how comes 't that you
 Have help to make this rescue?
Men. Hear me speak:
 As I do know the consul's worthiness,
 So can I name his faults,—
Sic. Consul! what consul?
Men. The consul Coriolanus.
Bru. He consul! 280
Citizens. No, no, no, no, no.
Men. If, by the tribunes' leave, and yours,
 good people,
 I may be heard, I would crave a word or two;
 The which shall turn you to no further harm
 Than so much loss of time.
Sic. Speak briefly then;
 For we are peremptory to dispatch
 This viperous traitor: to eject him hence
 Were but one danger, and to keep him here
 Our certain death: therefore it is decreed
 He dies to-night.
Men. Now the good gods forbid 290
 That our renowned Rome, whose gratitude
 Towards her deserved children is enroll'd
 In Jove's own book, like an unnatural dam
 Should now eat up her own!
Sic. He's a disease that must be cut away.
Men. O, he's a limb that has but a disease;
 Mortal, to cut it off; to cure it, easy.
 What has he done to Rome that's worthy
 death?
 Killing our enemies, the blood he hath lost—
 Which, I dare vouch, is more than that he hath,
 By many an ounce—the dropp'd it for his country;
 And what is left, to lose it by his country,
 Were to us all, that do 't and suffer it,
 A brand to the end o' the world.
Sic. This is clean kam.
Bru. Merely awry: when he did love his country,
 It honour'd him.
Men. The service of the foot
 Being once gangrened, is not then respected
 For what before it was.
Bru. We'll hear no more.
 Pursue him to his house, and pluck him thence;
 Let his infection, being of catching nature, 310
 Spread further.
Men. One word more, one word.
 This tiger-footed rage, when it shall find
 The harm of unseason'd swiftness, will too late Tie leaden pounds to 's heels. Proceed by process:
 Let parties, as he is beloved, break out,
 And sack great Rome with Romans.
Bru. If it were so,—
Sic. What do ye talk?
 Have we not had a taste of his obedience?
 Our sediles smote! ourselves resisted! Come.
Men. Consider this: he has been bred i' the wars 320
 Since he could draw a sword, and is ill school'd

In bolted language; meal and bran together
 He throws without distinction. Give me leave,
 I'll go to him, and undertake to bring him
 Where he shall answer, by a lawful form,
 In peace, to his utmost peril.
First Sen. Noble tribunes,
 It is the humane way: the other course
 Will prove too bloody, and the end of it
 Unknown to the beginning.
Sic. Noble Menenius,
 Be you then as the people's officer. 330
 Masters, lay down your weapons.
Bru. Go not home.
Sic. Meet on the market-place. We'll attend you there:
 Where, if you bring not Marcius, we'll proceed
 In our first way.
Men. I'll bring him to you.
 [To the Senators] Let me desire your company:
 he must come,
 Or what is worst will follow.
First Sen. Pray you, let's to him.
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. A room in Coriolanus's house.

Enter CORIOLANUS with Patricians.

Cor. Let them pull all about mine ears, present me
 Death on the wheel or at wild horses' heels,
 Or pile ten hills on the Tarpeian rock,
 That the precipitation might down stretch
 Below the beam of sight, yet will I still
 Be thus to them.
A Patrician. You do the nobler.
Cor. I muse my mother
 Does not approve me further, who was wont
 To call them woollen vassals, things created 9
 To buy and sell with groats, to show bare heads
 In congregations, to yawn, be still and wonder,
 When one but of my ordinance stood up
 To speak of peace or war.

Enter VOLUMINIA.

I talk of you:
 Why did you wish me milder? would you have me
 False to my nature? Rather say I play
 The man I am.
Vol. O, sir, sir, sir,
 I would have had you put your power well on,
 Before you had worn it out.
Cor. Let go.
Vol. You might have been enough the
 you are.
 With striving less to be so: Lepidus had been
 The thwartings of your ———, if You had not show'd them ——— ye were dispos'd
 Ere they lack'd power to cross you.
Cor. Let them hang.
A Patrician. Ay, and burn too.
 Enter MENENIUS and Senators.
Men. Come, come, you have been too rough,
 something too rough;
 You must return and mend it.
First Sen. There's it:
 Unless, by not so doing, our good!

Observe in the midst, and perish.

Vol. Pray, be counsel'd:
I have a heart as little apt as yours,
But yet a brain that leads my use of anger
To better vantage.

Men. Well said, noble woman!
Before he should thus stoop to the herd, but
that

The violent fit o' the time craves it as physic
For the whole state, I would put mine armour on,
Which I can scarcely bear.

Cor. What must I do?

Men. Return to the tribunes.

Cor. Well, what then? what then?

Men. Repent what you have spoke.

Cor. For them! I cannot do it to the gods;
Must I then do't to them?

Vol. You are too absolute;
Though therein you can never be too noble, 40
But when extremities speak, I have heard
you say,
Honour and policy, like unsever'd friends,
F the war do grow together: grant that, and tell me,

In peace what each of them by the other lose,
That they combine not there.

Cor. Tush, tush!

Men. A good demand.

Vol. If it be honour in your wars to seem
The same you are not, which, for your best
ends,

You adopt your policy, how is it less or worse,
That it shall hold companionship in peace
With honour, as in war, since that to both 50
It stands in like request?

Cor. Why force you this?

Vol. Because that now it lies you on to
speak

To the people; not by your own instruction,
Nor by the matter which your heart prompts
you,

But with such words that are but rotes in
Your tongue, though but bastards and syllables
Of no allowance to your bosom's truth.

Now, this no more dishonours you at all
Than to take in a town with gentle words,
Which else would put you to your fortune and
The hazard of much blood. 60

I would dissemble with my nature where
My fortunes and my friends at stake required
I should do so in honour: I am in this,
Your wife, your son, these senators, the nobles;
And you will rather show our general louts
How you can frown than spend a fawn upon 'em,
For the inheritance of their loves and safeguard
Of what that want might ruin.

Men. Noble lady!
Come, go with us; speak fair: you may save us.
Not what is dangerous present, but the loss 70
Of what is past.

Vol. I prithee now, my son,
Go to them, with this hammer in thy hand;
And thus far having stretch'd it—here be with
them—

The knee basking the stones—for in such business

Admits in eloquence, and the eyes of the ignorant

More learned than the ears—waving thy head,
Which often, thus, correcting thy stout heart,
Now humble as the ripest mull
That will not beld the handling: or say to
them,

Thou art their soldier, and being bred in broils
Hast not the soft way which, thou dost confess,
Were fit for thee to use as they to
In asking their good loves, but thou wilt frame
Thyself, forsooth, hereafter theirs, so far
As thou hast power and person.

Men. This but done,
Even as she speaks, why, their hearts were
yours;

For they have pardons, being ask'd, as free
As words to little purpose.

Vol. Prithee now,
Go, and be ruled: although I know thou hadst
rather

Follow thine enemy in a fiery gulf
Than flatter him in a bowet. Here is Cominius.

Enter COMINIUS.

Com. I have been i' the market-place; and,
sir, tis fit

You make strong party, or defend yourself
By calmness or by absence: all's in anger.

Men. Only fair speech.

Com. I think 'twill serve, if he
Can thereto frame his spirit.

Vol. He must, and will.
I prithee now, say you will, and go about it.

Cor. Must I go show them my unbarbed scorn?

Must I with base tongue give my noble heart
A lie that it must bear? Well, I will do't: 80
Yet, were there but this single plot to lose,

This mould of Marcius, they to dust should grind it

And throw't against the wind. To the marketplace!

You have put me now to such a part which never

I shall discharge to the life.

Com. Come, come, we'll prompt you.

Vol. I prithee now, sweet son, as thou hast
said

My praises made thee first a soldier, so,
To have my praises for this, perform a part

Thou hast not done before.

Cor. Well, I must do't:
Away, my disposition, and possess me 90
None but a soldier's spirit! my throat of war be

turn'd,

Which quired with my drum, into a pipe
Small as an eunuch, or the virgin voice

That babies lull asleep! the smiles of knaves
Tent in my cheeks, and schoolboys' tears take up

The glasses of my sight! a beggar's tongue
Make motion through my lips, and my arm'd knees

Who bow'd but in my stirrup, bend like his
That hath received an aim! I will not do't, 100
Lest I surmount to honour mine own truth

And by my body's action teach my mind
A most inherent baseness.

Vol. At thy choice, then:
To beg of thee, it is my mood 4

Than thou of them. Come all to ruin; let Thy mother rather feel thy pride than fear
Thy dangerous stoutness, for I mock at death
With as big heart as thou. Do as thou list.
Thy valiantness was mine, thou suck'st it
from me,
But owe thy pride thyself.

Cor. Pray, be content: 130
Mother, I am going to the market-place; Chide me no more. I'll mountebank their
loves,
Cog their hearts from them, and come home
belov'd
Of all the trades in Rome. Look, I am going:
Commend me to my wife. I'll return consul;
or never trust to what my tongue can do
I the way of flattery further.

Vol. Do your will. [Exit.
Com. Away! the tribunes do attend you:
arm yourself
To answer mildly; for they are prepared
With accusations, as I hear, more strong 140
Than are upon you yet.

Cor. The word is 'mildly.' Pray you, let us go:
Let them accuse me by invention, I
Will answer in mine honour.

Men. Ay, but mildly.

Cor. Well, mildly be it then. Mildly!
[Exit.

SCENE III. The same. The Forum.

Enter SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

Br. In this point charge him home, that he affects
Trinickal power: if he evade us there,
Enforce him with his envy to the people,
And that the spoil got on the Antiates
Was never distributed.

Enter an Edile.

What, will he come?

Ed. He's coming.

Br. How accompanied?
Ed. With old Menenius, and those senators
That always favour'd him.

Sic. Have you a catalogue
Of all the voices that we have procur'd
Set down by the poll?

Ed. I have; 'tis ready. 10

Sic. Have you collected them by tribes?

Ed. I have.

Sic. Assemble presently the people hither;

And when they hear me say 'It shall be so

I the right and strength o' the commons,' be it either

For death, for fine, or banishment, then let
them,

If I say fine, cry 'Fine;' if death, cry 'Death.'

Insisting on the old prerogative

And power o' the truth o' the cause.

Ed. I shall inform them.

Br. And when such time they have begun to cry,

Let them not cease, but with a din confound us
Enforce the present execution.

Of what we chance to sentence.

Ed. Very well.

Sic. Make them be strong and ready for this hint,

When we shall hap to give 'em.

Br. Go about it. [Exit Edile.

Put him to choler straight; he hath been used

I ever to conquer, and to have his worth

Of contradiction: being once chafed, he cannot

Be rein'd again to temperance; then he speaks

What's in his heart; and that is those which

looks

With us to break his neck.

Sic. Well, here he comes. 30

Enter CORIOLANUS, MENENIUS, and COMI-

NIUS, with Senators and Patricians.

Men. Calmly, I do beseech you.

Cor. Ay, as an ostler, that for the poorest

piece

Will bear the knave by the volume. The honour'd gods

Keep Rome in safety, and the chairs of justice

Supplied with worthy men; plant love among 's!

Through our large temples with the shows of

peace,

And not our streets with war!

First Sen. Amen, amen.

Men. A noble wish.

Re-enter Edile, with Citizens.

Sic. Draw near, ye people.

Ed. List to your tribunes. Audience! peace,

I say! 40

Cor. First, hear me speak.

Both Tri. Well, say. Peace, ho!

Cor. Shall I be charged no further than this present?

Must all determine here?

Sic. I do demand,

If you subvert you to the people's voices,

Allow their officers and are content

To suffer lawful censure for such faults

As shall be proved upon you?

Cor. I am content.

Men. Lo, citizens, he says he is content;

The warlike service he has done, consider;

think 45

Upon the wounds his body bears, which show

Like graves the holy churchyard.

Cor. Scornful with scorn,

Scars to move laughter only.

Men. Consider further,

That when he speaks not like a citizen,

You find him like a soldier; do not take

His rougher accents for malicious sounds;

But, as I say, such as become a soldier.

Rather than envy you.

Com. Well, well, no more.

Cor. What is the matter?

That being pleas'd for consul with full votes,

I am so dishonour'd that the very voices

You take it off again?

Sic. Answer to me

or, then: 'tis true, I cannot change you, that you have

From Rome all senator's offices and to what

Youself into a power tyrannical;
For which you are a traitor to the people.

Cor. How! traitor!

Men. Nay, temperately; your promise.

Cor. The fires of the lowest hell fold-in the people!

Call me their traitor! Thou injurious tribune!
Within thine eyes sat twenty thousand deaths,
In thy hands clutch'd as many millions, in lying tongue both numbers, I would say

—'thou liest'—unto thee with a voice as free

As I do pray the gods.

Sic. Mark you this, people?

Citizens. To the rock, to the rock with him!

Sic. Peace!

We need not put new matter to his charge;

What you have seen him do and heard him
speak,

Beating your officers, cursing yourselves,

—ing laws with strokes and here defying whose great power must try him; even

this,

So criminal and in such capital kind,

Deserves the extremest death.

Bru. But since he hath

Served well for Rome.—

Cor. What do you prate of service?

Bru. I talk of that, that know it.

Cor. You!

Men. Is this the promise that you made your mother?

Com. Know, I pray you,—

Cor. I'll know no further:

Let them pronounce the steep Tarpeian death,

Vagabond exile, flogging, pent to linger

But with a grain a day, I would not buy

Their mercy at the price of one fair word;

Nor check my courage for what they can give,

To have't with saying 'Good morrow.'

Sic. For that he has,

As much as in him lies, from time to time

Envied against the people, seeking means

To pluck away their power, as now at last

Given hostile strokes, and that not in the presence

Of dreaded justice, but on the ministers

That do distribute it; in the name of the people

And in the power of us the tribunes, we,

Even from this instant, banish him our city,

In peril of precipitation

From off the rock Tarpeian never more

To enter our Rome gates: if the people's name,

I say it shall be so.

Citizens. It shall be so, it shall be so; let him away!

He's banish'd, and it shall be so.

Com. Hear me, my masters, and my common

friends,—

Sic. He's sentenced; no more hearing.

Com. Let me speak:

I have been consul, and can show for Rome

Her enemies' marks upon me. I do love

My country's good with a respect more tender,

More holy and profound, than mine own life,

My dear wife's estimate, her womb's increase,

And increase of my loins; then if I would

Speak that,—

—We know your drift; speak what!

Bru. There's no more to be said, but he is banish'd.

As enemy to the people and his country:

It shall be so.

Citizens. It shall be so, it shall be so.

Cor. Your common cry of curs' whose breath

I hate

As reek of the rotten fens, whose loves I prize

As the dead carcases of unburied men

That do corrupt my air, I banish!

And here remain with your uncertainty!

Let every feeble rumour shake your hearts!

Your enemies, with nodding of their plumes,

Fan you into despair! Have the power still

To banish your defenders; till at length

Your ignorance, which finds not till it feels,

Making not reservation of yourselves,

Still your own foes, deliver you as most

Abused captives to some nation

That won you without blows! Despising,

For you, the city, thus I turn my back:

There is a world elsewhere.

[Exeunt Coriolanus, Cominius, Menenius, Senators, and Patricians.]

Ed. The people's enemy is gone, is gone!

Citizens. Our enemy is banish'd! he is gone!

Hoo! hoo! [Shouting, and throwing up their caps.]

Sic. Go, see him out at gates, and follow

him,

As he hath follow'd you, with all despite;

Give him deserved vexation. Let a guard

Attend us through the city.

Citizens. Come, come; let's see him out at gates; come.

The gods preserve our noble tribunes! Come.

[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I. Rome. Before a gate of the city.

Enter CORIOLANUS, VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA,

MENENIUS, COMINIUS, with the young Nobility of Rome.

Cor. Come, leave your tears: a brief farewell: the beast

With many heads butts me away. Nay, mother,

Where is your ancient courage? you were used

To say extremity was the trier of spirits;

That common chances common men could bear;

That when the sea was calm all boats alike

Show'd mastership in floating; fortune's blows,

When most struck home, being gentle wounded,

craves

A noble cunning: you were used to load me

With precepts that would make invincible

The heart that could't them.

Vir. O heavens! O heavens!

Cor. Nay, I prithe thee, woman,—

Vol. Now the red pestilence strikes all trades

in Rome,

And occupations perish!

Cor. What, what, what!

I shall be loved when I am lack'd. Nay, mother,

Resume that spirit, when you were wont to say,

If you had been the wife of Hercules,

Six of his labours you'd have done, and saved

Your husband so much sweat. Cominius,

Droop not; adieu. Farewell, my wife, my mother: ²⁰

I'll do well yet. Thou old and true Menenius,
Thy tears are saltier than a younger man's,
And venomous to thine eyes. My sometime
general,

I have seen thee stern, and thou hast oft beheld Heart-hardening spectacles; tell these sad wo-

men
Tis fond to wail inevitable strokes,
As 'tis to laugh at 'em. My mother, you wot
well

My hazards still have been your solace: and
'Believe't not lightly—though I go alone,
Like to a lonely dragon, that his fen shakes fear'd and talk'd of more than seen—your
son

Will or exceed the common or be caught
With cautelous baits and practice.

Vol. My first son,
Whither wilt thou go? Take good Cominius
With thee awhile: determine on some course,
More than a wild exposure to each chance
That starts i' the way before thee.

Cor. O the gods!
Com. I'll follow thee a month, devise with
thee

Where thou shalt rest, that thou mayst hear
of us

And we of thee: so if the time thrust forth ⁴⁰
A cause for thy repeal, we shall not send O'er the vast world to seek a single man,
And lose advantage, which doth ever cool
I' the absence of the needer.

Cor. Fare ye well:
Thou hast years upon thee; and thou art too full

Of the wars' surfeits, to go rave with one
That's yet unbruised: bring me but out at gate.
Come, my sweet wife, my dearest mother, and
My friends of noble touch, when I am forth,
Bid me farewell, and smile. I pray you, come.
While I remain above the ground, you shall Hear from me still, and never of me aught
But what is like me formerly.

Men. That's worthily
As any ear can hear. Come, let's not weep.
If I could shake off but one seven years
From these old arms and legs, by the good gods,
I'd with thee every foot.

Cor. Give me thy hand:
Com. [Exit.]

SCENE II. The same. A street near the gate.

Enter SICIPIUS, BRUTUS, and an Edile.

Sic. Bid them all home; he's gone, and we'll no further.

The nobility are vex'd, whom we see have sided
In his behalf.

Br. Now we have shown our power,
Let us seem humbler after it is done
Than when it was a-doing.

Sic. Bid them home:
Say their great enemy is gone, and they Stand in their ancient strength.

Br. Dismiss them home. [Exit Edile.
Here comes his mother.

Sic. Let's not meet her.

Br. Why?

Sic. They say she's mad.

Br. They have taken note of us: keep on your way. ¹⁰

Enter VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, and MENENIUS.

Vol. O, ye're well met: the hoarded plague
o' the gods

Requite your love!

Men. Peace, peace; be not so loud.

Vol. If that I could for weeping, you should
hear,—

Nay, and you shall hear some. [To Brutus]

Will you be gone?

Vir. [To Sicipius] You shall stay too: I would I had the power

To say so to my husband.

Sic. Are you mankind?

Vol. Ay, fool; is that a shame! Note but this fool.

Was not a man my father? Hadst thou fellowship
To banish him that struck more blows for
Rome

Than thou hast spoken words?

Sic. O blessed heavens!

Vol. More noble blows than ever thou wis-words: ²⁰

And for Rome's good. I'll tell thee what;
yet go:

Nay, but thou shalt stay too: I would my son
Were in Arabia, and thy tribe before him,

His good sword in his hand.

Sic. What then?

Vir. What then!

He'd make an end of thy posterity.

Vol. Bastards and all.

Good man, the wounds that he does bear for
Rome!

Men. Come, come, peace.

Sic. I would he had continued to his country
As he began, and not unknit himself ³⁰

The noble knot he made.

Br. I would he had.

Vol. 'I would he had'! 'Twas you incensed
the rabble:

Cats, that can judge as fitly of his worth
As I can of those mysteries which heaven

Will not have earth to know.

Br. Pray, let us go.

Vol. Now, pray, sir, get you gone:
You have done a brave deed. Are you go, hear
this:—

As far as doth the Capitol exceed ³⁰

The meanest house in Rome, so far my son—

This lady's husband here, this, do you see!—

Whom you have banish'd, does exceed you all.

Br. Well, well, we'll leave you.

Sic. Why stay we to be balked
With one that wants her wife?

Vol. Take my prayers with you.
[Exit Sicipius, Brutus, and Menenius.]

I would the gods had nothing else to do
But to confirm my curse! Could I meet him

But once a-day, it would undo my heart
Of what lies heavy to't.

Men. You have told them hence;

And, by my troth, you have cause. You'll sup with me!

Vol. Anger's my meat; I sup upon myself, And so shall starve with feeding. Come, let's go:

Leave this faint puling and lament as I do, In anger, Juno-like. Come, come, come. Men. Fie, fie, fie! [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. A highway between Rome and Antium.

Enter a Roman and a Volsc, meeting.

Rom. I know you well, sir, and you know me: your name, I think, is Adrian.

Vol. It is so, sir: truly, I have forgot you.

Rom. I am a Roman; and my services are, as you are, against 'em: know you me yet?

Vol. Nicanor? no.

Rom. The same, sir.

Vol. You had more beard when I last saw you; but your favour is well approved by your tongue. What's the news in Rome? I have a note from the Volscian state, to find you out there: you have well saved me a day's journey.

Rom. There hath been in Rome strange insurrections; the people against the senators, patricians, and nobles.

Vol. Hath been! is it ended, then? Our state thinks not so: they are in a most warlike preparation, and hope to come upon them in the heat of their division. 19

Rom. The main blaze of it is past, but a small thing would make it flame again: for the nobles receive so to heart the banishment of that worthy Coriolanus, that they are in a ripe aptness to take all power from the people and to pluck from them their tribunes for ever. This lies glowing, I can tell you, and is almost mature for the violent breaking out.

Vol. Coriolanus banished!

Rom. Banished, sir.

Vol. You will be welcome with this intelligence, Nicanor. 31

Rom. The day serves well for them now. I have heard it said, the fittest time to corrupt a man's wife is when she's fallen out with her husband. Your noble Tullus Aufidius will appear well in these wars, his great opposer, Coriolanus, being now in no request of his country.

Vol. He cannot choose. I am most fortunate, thus accidentally to encounter you: you have ended my business, and I will merrily accompany you home.

Rom. I shall, between you and some things from Rome: attending to the good of their adversaries. Have you an answer ready, my you?

Vol. A most royal one: the centurions and their charges distinctly halleted, already in the entertainment, and to be on foot at an hour's warning. 50

Rom. I am joyful to hear of their readiness, and am the more, I think, that shall set them in present action. So, sir, heartily well met,

Vol. You take my part from me, sir; I have the most cause to be glad of yours.

Rom. Well, let us go together. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Antium. Before Aufidius's house.

Enter CORIOLANUS in mean apparel, disguised and.

Cor. A goodly city is this Antium. 'Tis I that made thy widows: me, an heir Of these fair edifices fore my wa- Have I heard groan and drop: then know me not, Lest that thy wives with spits and boys with stones In puny battle slay me.

Enter a Citizen.

Save you, sir.

Cit. And you.

Cor. Direct me, if it be your will, Where great Aufidius lies: is he in Antium?

Cit. He is, and feasts the nobles of the state At his house this night.

Cor. Which is his house, beseech you? 30

Cit. This, here before you.

Cor. Thank you, sir: farewell. Exit Citizen.

O world, thy slippery turn! Friends now fast sworn,

Whose double bosoms seem to wear one heart, Whose hours, whose bed, whose meal, and exercise,

Are still together, who twin, as 'twere, in love Unseparable, shall within this hour, On a dissolution of a doit, break out To bitterest enmity: so, felicitous, Whose passions and whose plots have broke their sleep

To take the one the other, by some chance, 30 Some trick not worth an egg, shall grow dear friends

And interjoin their issues. So with me: My birth-place hate I, and my love's upon This enemy town. I'll enter: if he slay me, He does fair justice; if he give me way, I'll do his country service. [Exit.]

SCENE V. The same. A hall in Aufidius's house.

Music within. Enter a Servingman.

First Serv. Wine, wine, wine! What service is here! I think our fellows are asleep. [Exit.]

Enter a second Servingman.

Sec. Serv. Where's Cotus! my master calls for him. Cotus! [Exit.]

Enter CORIOLANUS.

Cor. A goodly house: the feast smells well; but I Appear not like a guest.

Re-enter the first Servingman.

First Serv. What would you have, friend whence are you? There's no place for you pray, go to the door. [Exit.]

Cor. I have deserved no better entertainment,
In being Coriolanus.

Re-enter second Servingman.

Sec. Serv. Whence are you, sir? Has the porter his eyes in his head, that he gives entrance to such companions? Pray, get you out.

Cor. Away!

Sec. Serv. Away! get you away.

Cor. Now thou'rt troublesome.

Sec. Serv. Are you so brave? I'll have you talked with anon.

Enter a third Servingman. The first meets him.

Third Serv. What fellow's this?

First Serv. A strange one as ever I looked on: I cannot get him out o' the house; prithee, call my master to him.

Third Serv. What have you to do here, fellow? Pray you, avoid the house.

Cor. Let me but stand; I will not hurt your hearth.

Third Serv. What are you?

Cor. A gentleman.

Third Serv. A marvellous poor one.

Cor. True, so I am.

Third Serv. Pray you, poor gentleman, take up some other station; here's no place for you;
pray you, avoid: come.

Cor. Follow your function, go, and batten on cold bits.

Third Serv. What, you will not? Prithee, tell my master what a strange guest he has here.

Sec. Serv. And I shall.

Third Serv. Where dwellest thou?

Cor. Under the canopy.

Third Serv. Under the canopy!

Cor. Ay.

Third Serv. Where's that?

Cor. 'Tis the city of kites and crows.

Third Serv. 'Tis the city of kites and crows!
What an ass it is! Then thou dwellest with daws too!

Cor. No, I serve not thy master.

Third Serv. How, sir! do you meddle with my master?

Cor. Ay: 'tis an homester service than to meddle with thy mistress.

Thou pratest, and pratest; serve with thy trencher, hence!

[Beats him away. Exit third Servingman.]

Enter AUFIDIUS with the second Servingman.

Auf. Where is this fellow?

Sec. Serv. Here, sir: I'd have beaten him like a dog, but for disturbing the lords within.

Auf. Whence comest thou? what wouldst thou? thy name?

Why speak'st not? speak, man: what's thy
name?

Cor. If Tullus, [Unwillingly.]

Not yet thou knowest me, and, seeing me, dost not

Think me for the man I am, necessity
Commands me name myself.

Auf. What is thy name?

Cor. A name unmusical to the Volscians' ears,

And harsh in sound to thine.

Auf. Say, what's thy name?

Thou hast a grim appearance, and thy face
Bears a command in't; though thy tackle's torn,

Thou show'st a noble vessel: what's thy name?

Cor. Prepare thy brow to frown: know'st thou me yet?

Auf. I know thee not: thy name?

Cor. My name is Caius Marcius, who hath
done

To thee particularly and to all the Volscians
Great hurt and mischief; thereto witness may

My surname, Coriolanus: the painful service,

The extreme dangers and the drops of blood

Shed for my thankless country are requited

But with that surname; a good memory,

And witness of the malice and displeasure

Which thou shouldst bear me: only that name remains;

The cruelty and envy of the people,

Permitted by our dastard nobles, who

Have all forsook me, hath devour'd the rest;

And suffer'd me by the voice of slaves to be

Whoop'd out of Rome. Now this extremity

Hath brought me to thy hearth; not out of

hope—

Mistake me not—to save my life, for if

I had fear'd death, of all the men i' the world

I would have voided thee, but in mere spite,

To be full quit of those my banishers,

Stand I before thee here. Then if thou hast go

A heart of wreak in thee, that will revenge

Thine own particular wrongs and stop these mains

Of shame seen through thy country, speed thee

straight,

And make my misery serve thy turn: so use it

That my revengeful services may prove

As benefits to thee, for I will fight

Against my canker'd country with the spleen

Of all the under fiends. But if so be

Thou dar'st not this and that to prove mine

fortunes

Thou'rt tired, then, in a word, I also am.

Longer to live most weary, and present

My throat to thee and to thy ancient malice;

Which not to cut would show thee but a fool,

Since I have ever follow'd thee with heart

Drawn turns of blood out of thy country's—

And cannot live but to thy shame, unless

It be to do thee service.

Auf. O Marcius, Marcius!

Each word thou hast spoke hath weeded from

my heart

A root of ancient envy. If Jupiter

Should from yond cloud speak divine things,

And say 'Tis true, I'd not believe them more Than thou, all noble Marcius. Let me twine mine arms about that body, where against

My grained ash an hundred times hath broke,

And scar'd the moon with splendor: shall I clip

The anvil of my sword, and 241

Contend against thy valour. Know thou first, I loved the maid I married; never man 120
Sigh'd truer breath; but that I see thee here,
Thou noble thing! more dances my rapt heart
Than when I first my wedded mistress saw Beside my threshold. Why, thou Mars! I tell thee,

We have a power on foot; and I had purpose
Once more to hew thy target from thy brown,
Or lose mine arm for't: thou hast beat me out
Twelve several times, and I have nightly since Dreamt of encounters 'twixt thyself and me;
We have been down together in my sleep, 130
Unbuckling helms, fisting each other's throat,
And waked half dead with nothing. Worthy

Marcus,
Had we no quarrel else to Rome, but that Thou art thence banish'd, we would muster all
From twelve to seventy, and pouring war
Into the bowels of ungrateful Rome,
Like a bold flood o'er-bear. O, come, go in,
And take our friendly senators by the hands;
Who now are here, taking their leaves of me,
Who am prepared against your territories, 140
Though not for Rome itself.

Cor. You bless me, gods!
An'. Therefore, most absolute sir, if thou wilt have

The leading of thine own revenges, take
The one half of my commission; and set down—
As best thou art experienced, since thou know'st
Thy country's strength and weakness,—thine own ways;

Whether to knock against the gates of Rome,
Or rudely visit them in parts remote,
To fight them, ere destroy. But come in: 149
Let me commend thee first to those that shall Say yea to thy desires. A thousand welcomes!
And more a friend than e'er an enemy;
Yet, Marcus, that was much. Your hand:
most welcome!

[Exeunt Coriolanus and Aufidius. The two Servingsmen come forward.]

First Serv. Here's a strange alteration!
Sec. Serv. By my hand, I had thought to have stricken him with a cudgel; and yet my mind gave me his clothes made a false report of
him.

First Serv. What an arm he has! he turned me about with his finger and his thumb, as one would set up a top. 151

Sec. Serv. Nay, I knew by his face that there was something in him: he had, sir, a kind of face, methought,—I cannot tell how to term it.

First Serv. He had so; looking as it were—would I were hanged, but I thought there was more in him than I could think.

Sec. Serv. So did I, I'll be sworn: he is surely the meekest man I the world.

First Serv. I think he is: but a greater soldier than he, you wot one. 171

Sec. Serv. Who, my master!

First Serv. Nay, it's no matter for that.

Sec. Serv. Worth six on him.

First Serv. Nay, not so neither: but I take him to be the greater soldier.

Sec. Serv. Faith, look you, one cannot tell how to say that: for the defence of a town, our general is excellent.

First Serv. Ay, and for an assault too. 180

Re-enter third Servingman.

Third Serv. O slaves, I can tell you news,— news, you rascals!

First and Sec. Serv. What, what, what!
let's partake.

Third Serv. I would not be a Roman, of all nations; I had as lieve be a condemned man.

First and Sec. Serv. Wherefore? wherefore?

Third Serv. Why, here's he that was wont to thwack our general, Caius Marcius.

First Serv. Why do you say 'thwack our general'?

Third Serv. I do not say 'thwack our general'; but he was always good enough for him.

Sec. Serv. Cunn, we are fellows and friends:
he was ever too hard for him; I have heard him say so himself.

First Serv. He was too hard for him directly, to say the truth on't: before Coriolanus scotched him and notched him like a carbonado.

Sec. Serv. An he had been cannibally given,
he might have broiled and eaten him too. 202

First Serv. But, more of thy news?

Third Serv. Why, he is so made on here within, as if he were son and heir to Mars; set at upper end o' the table; no question ask'd him by any of the senators, but they stand bald before him; our general himself makes a mistress of him; sanctifies himself with a hand and turns up the white o' the eye to his discourse. But the bottom of the news is, our general is cut i' the middle and but one half of what he was yesterday; for the other has half,
by the entreaty and grant of the whole table.
He'll go, he says, and sow the porter of Rome gates by the ears: he will mow all down before him, and leave his passage polled.

Sec. Serv. And he's as like to do't as any man I can imagine.

Third Serv. Do't! he will do't; for, look you, sir, he has as many friends as enemies; which friends, sir, as it were, durst not, look you, sir, show themselves, as we term it, his friends whilst he's in directitude.

First Serv. Directitude! what's that?

Third Serv. But when they shall see, sir, his crest up again, and the man in blood, they will out of their burrows, like conies after rain, and revel all with him.

First Serv. But when goes this forward?

Third Serv. To-morrow: to-day, presently;
you shall have the drum struck up this afternoon: 'tis, as it were, a parcel of their feast, and to be executed ere they wipe their lips.

Sec. Serv. Why, then we shall have a stirring word again. This peace is nothing, but to rust iron, increase tailors, and breed ballad-makers.

First Serv. Let me have war, say I; it exceeds peace as far as day does night; it's spritely, waking, audible, and full of vent. Peace is a very apoplexy, lethargy; nullo, dead, sleepy, insensible; a getter of more bastard children than war's a destroyer of men. 241

Sec. Serv. 'Tis so: and as war, in some sort, may be said to be a ravisher, so it cannot be denied but peace is a great maker of cuckolds.
First Serv. Ay, and it makes men hate one another.

Third Serv. Reason; because they then less need one another. The wars for my money. I hope to see Romans as cheap as Volscians. They are rising, they are rising.
All. In, in, in, in! [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. Rome. A public place.

Enter SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

Sic. We hear not of him, neither need we fear him;

His remedies are tame i' the present peace
 And quietness of the people, which before
 Were in wild hurry. Here do we make his friends Blush that the world goes well, who rather had,
 Though they themselves did suffer by 't, behold
 Dissentious numbers pestering streets than see
 Our tradesmen singing in their shops and going
 About their functions friendly.

Bru. We stood to 't in good time. [Enter

Menenius.] Is this Menenius? 10

Sic. 'Tis he, 'tis he: O, he is grown most kind of late.

Both Tri. Hail, sir!

Men. Hail to you both!

Sic. Your Coriolanus

Is not much miss'd, but with his friends:
 The commonwealth doth stand, and so would do,
 Were he more angry at it.

Men. All 's well; and might have been much better. If

He could have temporized.

Sic. Where is he, hear you?

Men. Nay, I hear nothing: his mother and his wife

Hear nothing from him.

Enter three or four Citizens.

Citizens. The gods preserve you both!

Sic. God-den, our neighbours.

Bru. God-den to you all, god-den to you all.

First Cit. Ourselves, our wives, and children,

on our knees,

Are bound to pray for you both.

Sic. Live, and thrive!

Bru. Farewell, kind neighbours: we wish'd

Coriolanus

Had loved you as we did.

Citizens. Now the gods keep you!

Both Tri. Farewell, farewell.

[Exeunt Citizens.]

Sic. This is a happier and more comely

time

Than when these fellows ran about the streets,

Crying confusion.

Bru. Caius Marcius was

A worthy officer i' the war; but insolent, 30

Overcome with pride, ambitious past all thinking.

Sic. And affecting one sole throne,

Without assistance.

Men. I think not so.

Sic. We should by this, to all our lamentation,

If he had gone forth consul, found it so.

Bru. The gods have well prevented it, and

Rome

Sits safe and still without him.

Enter an Ædile.

Æd. Worthy tribunes,

There is a slave, whom we have put in prison,

Reports, the Volscies with two several powers

Are enter'd in the Roman territories, 40

And with the deepest malice of the war

Destroy what lies before 'em.

Men. 'Tis Aufidius,

Who, hearing of our Marcius' banishment,

Thrusts forth his horns again into the world;

Which were inshell'd when Marcius stood for

Rome,

And durst not once peep out.

Sic. Come, what talk you

Of Marcius?

Bru. Go see this rumourer whipp'd. It cannot be

The Volscies dare break with us.

Men. Cannot be!

We have record that very well it can,

And three examples of the like have been 50

Within my age. But reason with the fellow,

Before you punish him, where he heard this,

Lest you shall chance to whip your information

And heat the messenger who bids beware

Of what is to be dreaded.

Sic. Tell not me:

I know this cannot be.

Bru. Not possible.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The nobles in great earnestness are going

All to the senate-house: some news is come

That turns their countenances.

Sic. 'Tis this slave:—

Go whip him Yore the people's eyes:—his raising; 60

Nothing but his report.

Mess. Yes, worthy sir,

The slave's report is seconded; and more,

More fearful, is deliver'd.

Sic. What more fearful?

Mess. It is spoke freely out of many mouths—

How probable I do not know—that Marcius,

Join'd with Aufidius, leads a power 'gainst

Rome,

And vows revenge as spacious as between

The young'st and oldest thing.

Sic. This is most likely!

Bru. Raised only, that the weaker sort may wish

Good Marcius home again.

Sic. The very trick on 't. 70

Men. This is unlikely:

He and Aufidius can no more alone

Than violentest contrariety.

Enter a second Messenger.

Sec. Mess. You are sent for to the senate:

A fearful army, led by Caius Marcius

Associated with Aufidius, rages
Upon our territories; and have already Overborne their way, consumed with fire, and took
What lay before them.

Enter COMINIUS.

Com. O, you have made good work!

Men. What news! what news! so

Com. You have help to ravish your own daughters and

To melt the city leads upon your pates,
To see your wives dishonour'd to your noses,—

Men. What's the news? what's the news?

Com. Your temples burned in their cement,
and

Your franchises, whereon you stood, confined into an auger's bore.

Men. Pray now, your news!

You have made fair work, I fear me.—Pray,
your news!

If Marcius should be join'd with Volscians,—

Com. If!

He is their god: he leads them like a thing
Made by some other deity than nature,

That shapes man better; and they follow him,
Against us brats, with no less confidence

Than boys pursuing summer butterflies,
Or butchers killing flies.

Men. You have made good work,

You and your apron-men; you that stood so
much

Upon the voice of occupation and
The breath of garlic-eaters!

Com. He will shake

Your Rome about your ears.

Men. As Hercules

Did shake down mellow fruit. You have made fair work!

Br. But is this true, sir?

Com. Ay; and you'll look pale

Before you find it other. All the regions
Do smilingly revolt; and who resist

Are mock'd for valiant ignorance,
And perish constant fools. Who is't can blame
him?

Your enemies and his find something in him.

Men. We are all undone, unless

The noble man have mercy.

Com. Who shall ask it?

The tribunes cannot do't for shame; the people
Deserve such pity of him as the wolf

Does of the shepherds: for his best friends, if they

'Be good to Rome,' they charged him even

As those should do that had deserved his hate,
And therein show'd like enemies.

Men. 'Tis true:

If he were willing to my house the brand
That should consume it, I have not the face

To say 'Beseech you, cease.' You have made fair hands.

You and your crafts! you have crafted fair!

Com. You have brought

A swelling upon Rome, such as was never
so

Both Tri. Say not we brought it, so

Men. How! Was it we! we loved him;
but, like beasts

And cowardly nobles, gave way unto your clusters,

Who did hoot him out o' the city.

Com. But I fear

They'll roar him in again. Tullus Aufidius,
The second name of men, obeys his points

As if he were his officer: desperation
Is all the policy, strength and defence,

That Rome can make against them.

Enter a troop of Citizens.

Men. Here come the clusters.

And is Aufidius with him? You are they
That made the air unwholesome, when you cast

Your stinking greasy caps in hooting at Coriolanus' exile. Now he's coming;

And not a hair upon a soldier's head
Which will not prove a whip: as many cor-

combs

As you threw caps up will he tumble down,
And pay you for your voices. 'Tis no matter;

If he could burn us all into one coal;
We have deserved it.

Citizens. Faith, we hear fearful news.

First Cit. For mine own part,

When I said, banish him, I said, 'twas pity.

Sec. Cit. And so did I.

Third Cit. And so did I; and, to say the truth, so did very many of us: that we did, we did for the best; and though we willingly consented to his banishment, yet it was against our will.

Com. Ye're goodly things, you voices!

Men. You have made

Good work, you and your cry! Shall's to the Capitol?

Com. O, ay, what else?

Recount Cominius and Menenius.

Sic. Go, masters, get you home; be not dismay'd:

There are a side that would be glad to have
This true which they so seem to fear. Go home.

And show no sign of fear.

First Cit. The gods be good to us! Come, masters, let's home. I ever said we were if the wrong when we banished him.

Sec. Cit. So did we all. But, come, let's
home.

Br. I do not like this news.

Sic. Nor I.

Br. Let's to the Capitol. Would half my wealth

Would buy this for a lie!

Sic. Pray, let us go.

Recount.

SCENE VII. A camp, at a small distance
from Rome.

Enter AUFIDIUS and his Lieutenant.

1st. Do they still fly to the Roman?

Lien. I do not know what withereth in him, but

Your soldiers use him as the grace 'fore meat,
Their talk at table, and their thanks at end;
And you are darken'd in this action, sir,
Even by your own.

Auf. I cannot help it now;
Unless, by using means, I lame the foot
Of our design. He bears himself more proudlier, Even to my person, than I thought he would.
When first I did embrace him; yet his nature
In that's no changeling; and I must excuse
What cannot be amended.

Lien. Yet I wish, sir,—
I mean for your particular,—you had not Join'd in commission with him; but either
Had borne the action of yourself, or else
To him had left it solely.

Auf. I understand thee well; and be thou sure,
When he shall come to his account, he knows
not

What I can urge against him. Although it seems,

And so he thinks, and is no less apparent
To the vulgar eye, that he bears all things fairly,

And shows good husbandry for the Volscian
state,

Fights dragon-like, and does achieve as soon
As draw his sword; yet he hath left undone
That which shall break his neck or hazard mine,
Where'er we come to our account.

Lien. Sir, I beseech you, think you he'll carry Rome?

Auf. All places yield to him ere he sits
down;

And the nobility of Rome are his:
The senators and patricians love him too: 30

The tribunes are no soldiers; and their people
Will be as rash in the repeal, as hasty

To expel him thence. I think he'll be to Rome
As is the osprey to the fish, who takes it

By sovereignty of nature. First he was A noble servant to them; but he could not

Carry his honours even: whether 'twas pride,
Which out of daily fortune ever taints

The happy man; whether defect of judgement,
To fail in the disposing of those chances 40

Which he was lord of; or whether nature,
Not to be other than one thing, not moving

From the casque to the cushion, but coun-manding peace

Even with the same austerity and garb
As he controll'd the war; but one of these—

As he hath spices of them all, not all,
For I dare so far free him—made him fear'd,

So hated, and so banish'd: but he has a merit,
To choke it in the utterance. So our virtues

Lie in the interpretation of the time: 50
And power, unto itself most commendable,

Hath not a tomb so evident as a chair
To extol what it hath done.

One fire drives out one fire; one nail, one nail;

Rights by rights falter, strengths by strengths
do fall.

Come, let's away. When Ours, Rome is thine, Thou art poorer of all; then shortly art thou
mine.

ACT V.

SCENE I. Rome. A public place.

Enter MENENIUS, COMINIUS, SIGINIUS, BRUTUS, and others.

Men. No, I'll not go: you hear what he hath said

Which was sometime his general; who loved him
In a most dear particular. He call'd me father:
But what o' that? Go, you that banish'd him;
A mile before his tent fall down, and knee
The way into his mercy: nay, if he coy'd
To hear Cominius speak, I'll keep at home.

Com. He would not seem to know me.

Men. Do you hear?
Com. Yet one time he did call me by my
name:

I urged our old acquaintance, and the drops 20
That we have bled together. Coriolanus
He would not answer to; forbade all names;
He was a kind of nothing, titleless,
Till he had forged himself a name o' the fire
Of burning Rome.

Men. Why, so: you have made good work!
A pair of tribunes that have rack'd for Rome,
To make coals cheap,—a noble memory!

Com. I minded him how royal 'twas to
pardon

When it was less expected: he replied,
It was a bare petition of a state 30
To one whom they had punish'd.

Men. Very well:

Could he say less?

Com. I offer'd to awaken his regard For's private friends: his answer to me was,
He could not stay to pick them in a pile
Of noisome musty chaff: he said 'twas folly,
For one poor grain or two, to leave unbarn'd,
And still to nose the offence.

Men. For one poor grain or two!
I am one of those: his mother, wife, his child,
And this brave fellow too, we are the grains: 30
You are the musty chaff; and you are smelt
Above the moon: we must be burnt for you.

Sic. Nay, pray, be patient: if you refuse your aid

In this so never-needed help, yet do not Upbraid's with our distress. But, sure, if you Would be your country's plander, your good
tongue,

More than the instant army we can make,
Might stop our countryman.

Men. No, I'll not meddle.

Sic. Pray you, go to him.

Men. What should I do?

Brut. Only make trial what your love can do 40

For Rome, towards Marcius.

Men. Well, and say that Marcius
Return me, as Cominius is return'd,

Unheard; what then?

But as a discontented friend, grieve that
With his unkindness I say 's he so?

Sic. Yet your good will Must have that thanks from Rome, which she measures
As you intended well.

Men. I'll undertake 't:
I think he'll hear me. Yet, to bite his lip
And hum at good Cominius, much unhearts
me.

He was not taken well; he had not dined: 50
The veins unfill'd, our blood is cold, and then
We put upon the morning, are unapt
To give or to forgive; but when we have stuff'd
These pipes and these conveyances of our blood
With wine and feeling, we have suppler souls
Than in our priest-like fasts: therefore I'll watch
him

Till he be dieted to my request,
And then I'll set upon him.

Bru. You know the very road into his kind-
ness,

And cannot lose your way.

Men. Good faith, I'll prove him, 60
Speed how it will. I shall ere long have knowledge

Of my success. [Exit.]

Com. He'll never hear him. [Exit.]

Sen. Not?

Com. I tell you, he does sit in gold, his eye
Red as 'twould burn Rome; and his injury
The goaler to his pity. I kneel'd before him:
'Twas very faintly he said 'Rise;' dismiss'd me Thus, with his speechless hand: what he would
do,

He sent in writing after me; what he would
not,

Bound with an oath to yield to his conditions:
So that all hope is vain, 70

Unless his noble mother, and his wife;
Who, as I hear, mean to solicit him

For mercy to his country. Therefore, let's
hence,

And with our fair entreaties haste them on.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Entrance of the Volscian camp before Rome. Two Sentinels on guard.

Enter to them, MENENIUS.

First Sen. Stay: whence are you?

Sec. Sen. Stand, and go back.

Men. You guard like men; 'tis well: but, by your leave,

I am an officer of state, and come
To speak with Coriolanus.

First Sen. From whence?

Men. From Rome.

First Sen. You may not pass, you must return: our general

Will no more hear from thence.

Sec. Sen. You'll see your Rome embraced with fire before

You'll speak with Coriolanus.

Men. Good my friends,
If you have heard your general talk of Rome,
And of his friends there, it is lots to blanks, 80
My mine hath touch'd your ears: it is Menenius.

First Sen. Be it so; go back: the virtue of your name

Is not here payable.

Men. I tell thee, fellow,

The general is my lover: I have been

The book of his good acts, whence men have read
His fame unparallel'd, haply amplified;
For I have ever verified my friends,

Of whom he's chief, with all the size that verity
Would without lapsing suffer: nay, sometimes,
Like to a bowl upon a subtle ground, 20
I have tumbled past the throw; and in his praise

Have almost stamp'd the leasing: therefore,
fellow,

I must have leave to pass.

First Sen. Faith, sir, if you had told as many lies in his behalf as you have uttered words in your own, you should not pass here;
no, though it were as virtuous to lie as to live chastely. Therefore, go back.

Men. Prithee, fellow, remember my name is Menenius, always factionary on the party of your general. 31

Sec. Sen. Howsoever you have been his liar, as you say you have, I am one that, telling true under him, must say, you cannot pass. Therefore, go back.

Men. Has he dined, canst thou tell? for I would not speak with him till after dinner.

First Sen. You are a Roman, are you?

Men. I am, as thy general is. 40

First Sen. Then you should hate Rome, as he does. Can you, when you have pushed out your gates the very defender of them, and, in a violent popular ignorance, given your enemy your shield, think to front his revenges with the easy groans of old women, the virginal palms of your daughters, or with the pained intercession of such a decayed dotant as you seem to be? Can you think to blow out the intended fire your city is ready to flame in, with such weak breath as this? No, you are deceiv'd; therefore, back to Rome, and prepare for your execution: you are condemn'd, our general has sworn you out of reprieve and pardon.

Men. Sirrah, if thy captain knew I were here, he would use me with estimation.

First Sen. Come, my captain knows you
not.

Men. I mean, thy general.

First Sen. My general cares not for you.
Back, I say, go; lest I let forth your half-pint of blood; back,—that's the utmost of your having: back.

Men. Nay, but, fellow, fellow,—

Enter CORIOLANUS and AUDILIUS.

Cor. What's the matter?

Men. Now, your companion, I'll say an errand for you: you shall know now that I am in estimation; you shall perceive that a Jack guardant cannot office me from my son Coriolanus: guess, but by my entertainment with him, if thou standest not! 'The state of hanging,
or of some death more long in speculation,
and cruelier in suffering; behold now ————
and swoon for what's to come upon thee. [1.]

Cor. The glorious gods sit in hourly synod about thy particular prosperity, and love thee
no worse than thy old father Menenius does!
O my son, my son! thou art preparing sin for us; look thee, here's water to quench it. I was hardly moved to come to thee; but being assured none but myself could move thee, I have been blown out of your gates with sighs; and conjure thee to pardon Rome, and thy petitionary countrymen. The good gods assuage thy wrath, and turn the dregs of it upon this varlet here,—this, who, like a block, hath denied my access to thee.

Cor. Away!

Men. How! away!

Cor. Wife, mother, child, I know not. My affairs

Are servanted to others: though I owe My revenge properly, my remission lies 90 In Volscian breasts. That we have been familiar,

Ingrate forgetfulness shall poison, rather Than pity note how much. Therefore, be gone. Mine ears against your suits are stronger than Your gates against my force. Yet, for I loved thee,

Take this along; I writ it for thy sake, [Gives a letter.]

And would have sent it. Another word, Menenius,

I will not hear thee speak. This man, Aufidius, Was my beloved in Rome: yet thou beholdest! 100 Auf. You keep a constant temper.

[Exeunt Coriolanus and Aufidius.]

First Sen. Now, sir, is your name Menenius?

Sec. Sen. 'Tis a spell, you see, of much power: you know the way home again.

First Sen. Do you hear how we are absent for keeping your greatness back!

Sec. Sen. What cause, do you think, I have to swoon!

Men. I neither care for the world nor your general: for such things as you, I can scarce think there's any, ye're so slight. He that hath a will to die by himself fears it not from another: let your general do his worst. For you, be that you are, long; and your misery increase with your age! I say to you, as I was said to, Away! [Exit.]

First Sen. A noble fellow, I warrant him.

Sec. Sen. The worthy fellow is our general: he's the rock, the oak not to be wind-shaken. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. The tent of Coriolanus.

Enter CORIOLANUS, AUFIDIUS, and others.

Cor. We will before the walls of Rome to-morrow

Set down our host. My partner in this action, You must report to the Volscian lords, how plainly

I have borne this business.

Auf. Only their ends You have respected; stopp'd your ears against

The general suit of Rome; never admitted A private whisper, no, not with such friends

That thought them sure of you.

Cor. This last old man, Whom with a crack'd heart I have sent to Rome,

Loved me above the measure of a father; 20 Nay, godded me, indeed. Their latest refuge

Was to send him; for whose old love I have. Though I shoud sourly to him, once more offer'd

The first conditions, which they did refuse And cannot now accept; to grace him only That thought he could do more, a very little I have yielded to: fresh embassies and suits, Nor from the state nor private friends, here- after

Will I lend ear to. Ha! what shout is this? [Shout within.]

Shall I be tempted to infringe my vow 30 In the same time 'tis made? I will not.

Enter, in mourning habits, VIRGILIA, VOLUNIA, leading young MARCIUS, VALERIA, and Attendants.

My wife comes foremost; then the honour'd mould

Wherein this trunk was framed, and in her hand

The grandchild to her blood. But, out, affection!

All bond and privilege of nature, break! Let it be virtuous to be obstinate.

What is that curst'ay worth! or those doves' eyes,

Which can make gods forsworn! I melt, and am not

Of stronger earth than others. My mother bows;

As if Olympus to a molehill should 30 In supplication nod: and my young boy

Hath an aspect of intercession, which Great nature cries 'Deny not.' Let the Voices

Plough Rome, and harrow Italy: I'll never Be such a goaling to obey instinct, but stand,

As if a man were author of himself And knew no other kin.

Vir. My lord and husband!

Cor. These eyes are not the same I wore in Rome.

Vir. The sorrow that delivers us thus changed Makes you think so.

Cor. Like a dull actor now, 40 I have forgot my part, and I am out,

Even to a full disgrace. Best of my flesh, Forgive my tyranny; but do not say

For that 'Forgive our Romans.' O, a kiss Long as my exile, sweet as my revenge!

Now, by the jealous queen of heaven, that kiss I carried from thee, dear; and my true lip

Hath virgin'd it e'er since. You gods! I pray, And the most noble mother of the world

Leave unsaluted: sink, my knee, to the earth; [Kneels.]

(If thy deep duty more impression show 50 Than that of common sons.

Vol. O, stand up, kneel! Whilst, with no softer cushion than the flint,

I kneel before thee; and unpropertly Show duty, as mistaken all this while

Between the child and parent. [Kneels.]

Cor. What is this? our knees to me? to your corrupted sense?

Let the pebbles on the hungry beach, the stars; then let the mountains, which the proud cedars 'gainst the fiery sun; so

Murdering impossibility, to make
What cannot be, slight work.

Vol. Thou art my warrior;
I help to frame thee. Do you know this lady?

Cor. The noble sister of Publicola,
The moon of Rome, orbits as the icicle
That's curdled by the frost from purest snow
And hangs on Dian's temple: dear Valeria!

Vol. This is a poor epitome of yours,
Which by the interpretation of full time
May show like all yourself.

Cor. The god of soldiers, 70
With the consent of supreme Jove, inform Thy thoughts with nobleness; that thou mayst prove

To shame invulnerable, and stick if the wars
Like a great sea-mark, standing every flaw,
And saving those that eye thee!

Vol. Your knee, sirrah.

Cor. That's my brave boy!

Vol. Even he, your wife, this lady, and myself,

Are suitors to you.

Cor. I beseech you, peace:
Or, if you'd ask, remember this before:
The thing I have forsworn to grant may never
Be held by you denials. Do not bid me 80
Dismiss my soldiers, or capitulate
Again with Rome's mechanics: tell me not Wherein I seem unnatural: desire not
To allay my rages and revenges with Your colder reasons.

Vol. O, no more, no more!
You have said you will not grant us any thing;
For we have nothing else to ask, but that
Which you deny already: yet we will ask;
That, if you fail in our request, the blame 90
May hang upon your hardness: therefore hear
us.

Cor. Aufidius, and you Volscas, mark; for
we'll Hear nought from Rome in private. Your request?

Vol. Should we be silent and not speak, our rubbish

And state of bodies would bewray what life
We have led since thy exile. Think with thyself

How more unfortunate than all living women
Are we come hither: since that thy sight, which should

Make our eyes flow with joy, hearts dance with comforts,

Compels them weep and shake with fear and

Making the mother, wife and child to see
The son, the husband and the father tearing His country's bowels out. And to poor we Thine enemy's most capital: thou barr'st us
Our passage to the gods, which is a comfort
That all but we enjoy; for how can we,
Alas, how can we for our country pray,
Whence we are bound, together with thy

Whence we are bound? Alack, or we must lose

Our wish, which side should win: for either
thou

Must, as a foreign recreant, be
With manacles thorough our streets, or else
Triumphantly tread on thy country's ruin,
And bear the palm for having bravely shed Thy wife and children's blood. For myself,
son,

I purpose not to wait on fortune till
These wars determine: if I cannot persuade
thee 120

Rather to show a noble grace to both parts
Than seek the end of one, thou shalt no sooner
March to assault thy country than to tread—Trust to't, thou shalt not—on thy mother's womb,

That brought thee to this world.

Vir. Ay, and mine,
That brought you forth this boy, to keep your name

Living to time.

Young Mar. A' shall not tread on me;
I'll run away till I am bigger, but then I'll
fight.

Cor. Not of a woman's tenderness to be,
Requires nor child nor woman's face to see. 130
I have sat too long.

Vol. Nay, go not from us thus.
If it were so that our request did tend
To save the Romans, thereby to destroy The Volscas whom you serve, you might condemn us,

As poisonous of your honour: no; our suit
Is, that you reconcile them: while the Volscas
May say 'This mercy we have shew'd': the Romans,

'This we received:' and each in either side
Give the all-hail to thee, and cry 'Be blest
For making up this peace!' Thou know'st, great son, 140

The end of war's uncertain, but this certain,
That, if thou conquer Rome, the benefit
Which thou shalt thereby reap is such a name,
Whose repetition will be dogg'd with curses:
Whose chronicle thus writ: 'The man was noble,

But with his last attempt he wiped it out;
He destroy'd his country, and his name remains
To the ensuing age abhor'd.' Speak to me,
son:

Thou hast affected the fine strains of honour,
To imitate the graces of the gods;
To tear with thunder the wide cheeks of the air,
And yet to charge thy sulphur with a bolt
That should but rive an oak. Why dost not speak?

Think'st thou it honourable for a noble man
Still to remember wrongs? Daughter, speak
you:

He cares not for your weeping. Speak thou,
boy:

Perhaps thy childhood may move him more Than can our reasons. There's no man in the world

More bound to's mother; yet here he lets me
prate

Like one of the stock. They have never in thy Show'd thy dear mother any courtesy,

When she, poor hen, fond of no second brood,
Has chok'd thee to the wars and safely home,
Loaden with honour. Say my request's unjust,
And spurn me back: but if it be not so,
Thou art not honest; and the gods will plague
thee.

That thou restrain'st from me the duty which
To a mother's part belongs. He turns away:
Down, ladies; let us shame him with our knees.
To his surname Coriolanus' longs more pride
Than pity to our prayers. Down: an end; 171
This is the last: so we will home to Rome,
And die among our neighbours. Nay, behold's:
This boy, that cannot tell what he would have,
But kneels and holds up hands for fellowship,
Does reason our petition with more strength
Than thou hast to deny't. Come, let us go:
This fellow had a Volscian to his mother;
His wife is in Corioli and his child
Like him by chance. Yet give us our dispatch:
I am hush'd until our city be afire, 181
And then I'll speak a little. [He holds her by the hand, silent.]

Cor. O mother, mother!
What have you done? Behold, the heavens do ope.

The gods look down, and this unnatural scene
They laugh at. O my mother, mother! O!
You have won a happy victory to Rome;
But, for your son, — believe it, O, believe it,
Most dangerously you have with him prevail'd,
If not most mortal to him. But, let it come.
Audiens, though I cannot make true wars, 190
I'll find means convenient peace. Now, good Audiens,

Were you in my stead, would you have heard
A mother less? or granted less, Audiens?

Auf. I was moved withal.

Cor. I dare be sworn you were:
And, sir, it is no little thing to make
Mine eyes to sweat compassion. But, good sir, What peace you'll make, advise me: for my
part,

I'll not to Rome, I'll back with you; and pray
you,

Stand to me in this cause. O mother! wife!

Auf. [Aside.] I am glad thou hast not thy mercy and thy honour
At difference in thee: out of that I'll work
Myself a former fortune.

[The Ladies make signs to Coriolanus.]

Cor. Ay, by and by;

[To Volumentia, Porcia, &c.]
But we will drink together; and you shall bear
A better witness back than words, which we,
'In like conditions, will have counter-said.
Come, enter with us. Ladies, you deserve
To have a temple built you: all the swords
In Italy, and her confederate arms,
Could not have made this peace. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Rome. A public place.

Enter MENENIUS and SESTIUS.

Men. See you yond colon o' the Capitol,
yond corner-stone?

Sic. Why, what of that?

Men. If it be possible for you to displace it with your little finger, there is some hope the ladies of Rome, especially his mother, may prevail with him. But I say there is no hope in't: our throats are sentenced and stay upon execution.

Sic. Is't possible that so short a time can alter the condition of a man?

Men. There is difference between a grub and a butterfly; yet your butterfly was a grub.
This Marcius is grown from man to dragon:
he has wings; he's more than a creeping thing.

Sic. He loved his mother dearly.

Men. So did he me: and he no more remembers his mother now than an eight-year-old horse. The tartness of his face sours ripe grapes: when he walks, he moves like an engine, and the ground shrinks before his treading: he is able to pierce a corset with his eye; talks like a knell, and his hum is a battery.
He sits in his state, as a thing made for Alexander. What he bids be done is finished with his bidding. He wants nothing of a god but eternity and a heaven to throne in.

Sic. Yes, mercy, if you report him truly.

Men. I paint him in the character. Mark what mercy his mother shall bring from him:
there is no more mercy in him than there is milk in a male tiger; that shall our poor city find: and all this is long of you.

Sic. The gods be good unto us!

Men. No, in such a case the gods will not be good unto us. When we banished him, we respected not them; and, he returning to break our necks, they respect not us.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Sir, if you'd save your life, fly to your house:

The plebeians have got your fellow-tribune
And hale him up and down, all swearing, if 40
The Roman ladies bring not comfort home,
They'll give him death by inches.

Enter a second Messenger.

Sic. What's the news?
Sec. Mess. Good news, good news; the ladies have prevail'd.

The Volscians are dislodged, and Marcius gone:
A merrier day did never yet greet Rome,
No, not the expulsion of the Tarquins.

Sic. [Aside.] What's the news?
Art thou certain this is true? Is it most certain?

Sec. Mess. As certain as I know the sun is in fire:

Where have you lurk'd, that you make doubt
of it? 49
Ne'er through an arch so hurried the things tide.

As the recomforted through the gates. Why, hark you! [Trumpets; shouters; drums beat; all shouting.]

The trumpets, sackbuts, psalteries and fifes, Tabors and cymbals and the shouting! Make Make the sun dance. Hark you!

Men.

I will go meet the ladies. This Volscian

Is worth of consuls, senators, patricians,
A city full; of tribunes, such as you,
A sea and land full. You have pray'd well
to-day;

This morning for ten thousand of your throats I'd not have given a doit. Hark, how they joy! [Music still, with shouts.]

Sic. First, the gods bless you for your tidings; next,
Accept my thankfulness.

Sec. Mess. Sir, we have all
Great cause to give great thanks.

Sic. They are near the city?
Sec. Mess. Almost at point to enter.

Sic. We will meet them,
And help the joy. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. The same. A street near the gate.

Enter two Senators with VOLUMINIA, VIRGILLIA, VALERIA, &c. passing over the stage, followed by Patricians, and others.

First Sen. Behold our patroness, the life of
Rome!

Call all your tribes together, praise the gods,
And make triumphant fires; strew flowers before them:

Unshout the noise that banish'd Marcius,
Repeat him with the welcome of his mother;
Cry 'Welcome, ladies, welcome!'

All. Welcome, ladies,
Welcome! [A flourish with drums and trumpets. Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. Antium. A public place.

Enter TULLUS AUFIDIUS, with Attendants.

Auf. Go tell the lords o' the city I am here:
Deliver them this paper: having read it,
Bid them repair to the market-place; where I,
Even in theirs and in the commons' ears,
Will vouch the truth of it. Him I accuse
The city ports by this hath enter'd and Intends to appear before the people, hoping
To purge himself with words: dispatch.
[Exeunt Attendants.]

Enter three or four Conspirators of AUFIDIUS' faction.

Most welcome!

First Con. How is it with our general?
Auf. Even so. so
As with a man by his own alms empoison'd,
And with his charity slain.

Sec. Con. Most noble sir,
If you do hold the same intent wherein
You wish'd us parties, we'll deliver you
Of your great danger.

Auf. Sir, I cannot tell:
We must proceed as we do find the people.

Third Con. The people will remain uncertain whilst

'Twixt you there's difference; but the fall of either

Makes the survivor heir of all.
Auf. I know it;

And yet would strike at him admira so

A good construction. I raised him, and I paw'd

Mine honour for his truth: who being at heighten'd,

He water'd his new plants with dews of flattery,
Seducing so my friends; and, to this end,
He bow'd his nature, never known before
But to be rough, unswayable and free.

Third Con. Sir, his stoutness
When he did stand for consul, which he lost
By lack of stooping;

Auf. That I would have spoke of—
Being banish'd for't, he came unto my hearth;
Presented to my knife his throat: I took him;
Made him joint-servant with me; gave him
way

In all his own desires; nay, let him choose
Out of my files, his projects to accomplish,
My best and freest men; served his design-
ments

In mine own person: help to reap the fame
Which he did end all his; and took some pride
To do myself this wrong: till, at the last,
I seem'd his follower, not partner, and
He waged me with his countenance, as if I had been mercenary.

First Con. So he did, my lord:
The army marvell'd at it, and, in the last,
When he had carried Rome and that we look'd
For no less spoil than glory,—

Auf. There was it:
For which my sinews shall be stretch'd upon
him.

At a few drops of women's rheum, which are
As cheap as lies, he sold the blood and labour
Of our great action: therefore shall he die,
And I'll renew me in his fall. But, hark!

[Drums and trumpets sound, with great shouts of the People.]
First Con. Your native town you enter'd like a post,

And had no welcomes home; but he returns,
Splitting the air with noise.

Sec. Con. And patient fools,
Whose children he hath slain, their base throats
tear

With giving him glory.
Third Con. Therefore, at your vantage,

Fire he express himself, or move the people
With what he would say, let him feel your
sword,

Which we will second. When he lies along,
After your way his tale pronounced shall bury
His reasons with his body.

Auf. Say no more: 60
Here come the lords.

Enter the Lords of the city.

All the Lords. You are most welcome home.
Auf. I have not deserved it.

But, worthy lords, have you with heed perused
What I have written to you?

Lords. We have.

First Lord. And grieve to hear't.
What faults he made before the last, I think
Might have found easy fines; but there to end
Where he was to begin and give away
The benefit of our levies, answering us

With our own charge, making a treaty where
There was a yielding;—this admits no excuse.

Auf. He approaches: you shall hear him.

Enter CORIOLANUS, marching with drum and colours; Commonsers being with him.

Cor. Hail, lords! I am return'd your soldier,
No more infected with my country's love
Than when I parted hence, but still subsisting
Under your great command. You are to know That prosperously I have attempted and
With bloody passage led your wars even to The gates of Rome. Our spoils we have brought home.

Do more than counterpoise a full third part
The charges of the action. We have made
peace.

With no less honour to the Antiates 80
Than shame to the Romans: and we here
deliver,

Subscribed by the consuls and patricians,
Together with the seal o' the senate, what We have compounded on.

Auf. Read it not, noble lords;
But tell the traitor, in the highest degree
He hath abused your powers.

Cor. Traitor! how now!

Auf. Ay, traitor, Marcius!

Cor. Marcius!

Auf. Ay, Marcius, Caius Marcius: dost thou
think

I'll grace thee with that robbery, thy stol'n
name

Coriolanus in Corioli? 90

You lords and heads o' the state, perfidiously

He has betray'd your business, and given up,

For certain drops of salt, your city Rome;

I say 'your city,' to his wife and mother;

Breaking his oath and resolution like

A twist of rotten silk, never admitting

Counsel o' the war, but at his nurse's tears

He whined and wail'd away your victory,

That pages blush'd at him and men of heart

Look'd wondering each at other.

Cor. Hear'st thou, Mars! 100

Auf. Name not the god, thou boy of tears!

Cor. Ha!

Auf. No more.

Cor. Measureless liar, thou hast made my
heart

Too great for what contains it. Boy! O slave!

Pardon me, lords, 'tis the first time that ever

I was forced to scold. Your judgements, my grave lords,

Must give this cur the lie: and his own notion—

Who wears my stripes impress'd upon him;

that

Must hear my beating to his grave—shall join

To thrust the lie unto him. 110

First Lord. Peace, both, and hear me speak.

Cor. Cut me to pieces, Volscians; men and ladies,

Stain all your edges on me. Boy! false hound!

If you have writ your annals true, 'tis there,

That, like an eagle in a dove-cote, I

Flutter'd your Volscians in Corioli:

Alone I did it. Boy!

Auf. Why, noble lords,

Will you be put in mind of his blind fortune,

Which was your shame; by this unholy braggart,

'Fore your own eyes and ears?

All Consps. Let him die for't. 120

All the people. 'Tear him to pieces.' 'Do it presently.' 'He killed my son.' 'My daughter.'

'He killed my cousin Marcus.' 'He killed my

father.'

Sec. Lord. Peace, ho! no outrage: peace!

The man is noble and his fame folds in

This orb o' the earth. His last offences to us

Shall have judicious hearing. Stand, Aufidius,

And trouble not the peace.

Cor. O that I had him,

With six Aufidiuses, or more, his tribe, 130

To use my lawful sword!

Auf. Insolent villain!

All Consps. Kill, kill, kill, kill, kill him!

[The Conspirators draw, and kill Corio- lanus: Aufidius stands on his body.

Lords. Hold, hold, hold, hold!

Auf. My noble masters, hear me speak.

First Lord. O Tullus,

Sec. Lord. Thou hast done a deed whereat valour will weep.

Third Lord. Tread not upon him. Masters

all, be quiet;

Put up your swords.

Auf. My lords, when you shall know—as in this rage,

Provoked by him, you cannot—the great danger

Which this man's life did owe you, you'll rejoice

That he is thus cut off. Please it your honours

To call me to your senate, I'll deliver 140

Myself your loyal servant, or endure

Your heaviest censure.

First Lord. Bear from hence his body;

And mourn you for him: let him be regarded

As the most noble corpse that ever herald

Did follow to his urn.

Sec. Lord. His own impatience

Takes from Aufidius a great part of blame.

Let's make the best of it.

Auf. My rage is gone;

And I am struck with sorrow. Take him up.

Help, three o' the chiefest soldiers: I'll be one.

Beat thou the drum, that it speak mournfully:

Trail your steel pikes. Though in this city he Hath widow'd and unchilded many a one,

Which to this hour bewail the injury,

Yet he shall have a noble memory.

Assist. [Exeunt, bearing the body of Corio- lanus. A dead march sounded.]

TITUS ANDRONICUS

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ

SATURNINUS, son to the late Emperor of Rome, and afterwards declared Emperor.
BASSIANUS, brother to Saturninus; in love with Lavinia.

TITUS ANDRONICUS, a noble Roman, general against the Goths.

MARCUS ANDRONICUS, tribune of the people, and brother to Titus.

LUCIUS,
QUINTUS,
MARTIUS,
MUTIUS, } sons to Titus Andronicus.

YOUNG LUCIUS, a boy, son to Lucius.

PUBLIUS, son to Marcus the Tribune.

SEMPRONIUS,
CAIUS,
VALENTINE, } kinsmen to Titus.

ÆMILIUS, a noble Roman.

ALARBUS,
DEMETRIUS, } sons to Tamora.

CHIRON,
AARON, a Moor, beloved by Tamora.

A Captain, Tribune, Messenger, and Clown;
Romans.

Goths and Romans.

TAMORA, Queen of the Goths,
LAVINIA, daughter to Titus Andronicus.
A Nurse.

Senators, Tribunes, Officers, Soldiers, and Attendants.

SCENE: Rome, and the country near it.

ACT I.

SCENE I. Rome. Before the Capitol.

The Tomb of the ANDRONICIS appearing; the Tribunes and Senators aloft. Enter, below, from one side, SATURNINUS and his Followers; and, from the other side, BASSIANUS and his Followers; with drum and colours.

Sat. Noble patricians, patrons of my right,
Defend the justice of my cause with arms,
And, countrymen, my loving followers,
Plead my successive title with your swords:
I am his first-born son, that was the last
That wore the Imperial diadem of Rome;
Then let my father's honour live in me,
Nor wrong mine age with this indignity.

Bas. Romans, friends, followers, favourers of my right,

If ever Bassianus, Caesar's son,
Were gracious in the eyes of royal Rome,
Keep then this passage to the Capitol
And suffer not dishonour to approach
The Imperial seat, to virtue consecrate,
To justice, continence and nobility;
But let desert in pure election shine,
And, Romans, fight for freedom in your choice.

Enter MARCUS ANDRONICUS, aloft, with the Mars. Princes, that strive by factions and by schools

Ambitiously for rule and empire,

Know that the people of Rome, for whom we stand

A special party, have, by common voice,
In election for the Roman empery,
Chosen Andronicus, surnamed Pius
For many good and great deserts to Rome:
A nobler man, a braver warrior,
Lives not this day within the city walls:
He by the senate is accited home

From weary wars against the barbarous Goths;
That, with his sons, a terror to our foes,
Hath yoked a nation strong, train'd up in arms.
Ten years are spent since first he undertook
This cause of Rome and chastised with arms
Our enemies' pride: five times he hath return'd
Bleeding to Rome, bearing his valiant sons
In coffins from the field;

And now at last, laden with honour's spoils,
Returns the good Andronicus to Rome,
Renowned Titus, flourishing in arms.

Let us entreat, by honour of his name,
Whom worthily you would have now succeed,
And in the Capitol and senate's right,
Whom you pretend to honour and adore,
That you withdraw you and abate your strength:
Dismiss your followers and, as suitors should,
Plead your deserts in peace and humbleness.

Sat. How fair the tribune speaks to calm
my thoughts!

Bas. Marcus Andronicus, so I do avert
In thy uprightness and integrity,
And so I love and honour thee and thine,
Thy noble brother Titus and his sons,

And her to whom *(Gracious Lavinia, Rome's rich ornament,
 That I will here dismiss my loving friends,
 And to my fortunes and the people's favour Commit my cause in balance to be weigh'd.*

(Exit the Followers of Bassianus.)

Sat. Friends, that have been thus forward in my right,

I thank you all and here dismiss you all,
 And to the love and favour of my country
 Commit myself, my person and the cause.

(Exit the Followers of Saturninus.)

Rome, be as just and gracious unto me 60
 As I am confident and kind to thee.

Open the gates, and let me in.

Bas. Tribunes, and me, a poor competitor.

(Flourish. Saturninus and Bassianus go up into the Capitol.)

Enter a Captain.

Cap. Romans, make way: the good Andro-
 nicus,

Patron of virtue, Rome's best champion,
 Successful in the battles that he fights,
 With honour and with fortune is return'd
 From where he circumscrib'd with his sword,
 And brought to yoke, the enemies of Rome.

*Drums and trumpets sounded. Enter MAR-
 TUS and MUTIUS; after them, two Men bearing a coffin covered with black; then LUCIUS and QUINTUS. After them, TITUS
 ANDRONICUS; and then TAMORA, with ALARBUS, DEMETRIUS, CHRISON, AARON, and other Goths, prisoners; Soldiers and People following. The Deacons set down the coffin, and TITUS speaks.*

Tit. Hail, Rome, victorious in thy mourning weeds! 70

Lo, as the bark, that hath discharged her freight,
 Returns with precious lading to the bay
 From whence at first she weigh'd her anchorage,
 Cometh Andronicus, bound with laurel boughs,
 To re-salute his country with his tears,
 Tears of true joy for his return to Rome.
 Thou great defender of this Capitol,
 Stand gracious to the rites that we intend!
 Romans, of five and twenty valliant sons,
 Half of the number that King Priam had, 80
 Behold the poor remains, alive and dead!
 These that survive let Rome reward with love
 These that I bring unto their latest home,
 With burial amongst their ancestors:
 Here Goths have given me leave to sheathe my
 sword.

Titus, unkind and careless of thine own,
 Why suffer'st thou thy sons, unburi'd yet,
 To hover on the dreadful shore of Styx?
 Make way to lay them by their brethren.

(The tomb is opened.)

There greet in silence, as the dead are wont, 90
 And sleep in peace, slain in your country's wars!

O sacred receptacle of my Sweet cell of virtue and humanity,
 How many sons of mine hast thou in store,
 That thou wilt never render to me more!

Luc. Give us the prouddest prisoner of the Goths,

That we may hew his limbs, and on a pile
 Ad manes fratrum sacrifice his flesh,
 Before this earthy prison of their bones;
 That so the shadows be not unappeased, 100
 Nor we disturb'd with prodigies on earth.

Tit. I give him you, the noblest that survives,
 The eldest son of this distressed queen.

Tam. Stay, Roman brethren! Gracious conqueror,

Victorious Titus, rue the tears I shed,
 A mother's tears in passion for her son:

And if thy sons were ever dear to thee,
 O, think my son to be as dear to me!

Sufficeth not that we are brought to Rome,
 To beautify thy triumphs and return, 110
 Captive to thee and to thy Roman yoke,

But must my sons be slaughter'd in the streets,
 For valliant doings in their country's cause!

O, if to fight for king and commonweal
 Were plecty in thine, it is in these.

Victorious Titus, stain not thy tomb with blood:
 Wilt thou draw near the nature of the gods?

Draw near them then in being merciful:
 Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge:

Thrice noble Titus, spare my first-born son. 120

Tit. Patient yourself, madam, and pardon
 me.

These are their brethren, whom you Goths
 behead

Alive and dead, and for their brethren slain
 Religiously they ask a sacrifice:

To this your son is mark'd, and die he must,
 To appease their groaning shadows that are
 gone.

Luc. Away with him! and make a fire
 straight;

And with our swords, upon a pile of wood,
 Let's hew his limbs till they be clean consumed.

(Exit Lucius, Quintus, Martius, and Mutius, with Alarbus.)

Tam. O cruel, irreligious piety! 130

Chs. Was ever Scythia half so barbarous!

Dem. Oppose not Scythia to ambitious
 Rome.

Alarbus goes to rest; and we survive
 To tremble under Titus' threatening looks.

Then, madam, stand resolved, but hope withal
 The self-same gods that arm'd the Queen of Troy

With opportunity of sharp revenge
 Upon the Thracian tyrant in his tent.

May favour Tamora, the Queen of Goths—
 When Goths were Goths and Tamora was
 queen— 140

To quit the bloody wrongs upon her foes.

Re-enter LUCIUS, QUINTUS, MARTIUS, MUTIUS, with their swords bloody.

Luc. See, lord and father, how we have perform'd

Our Roman rites: Alarbus' limbs are hew'd,
 And entrails feed the sacrificing fire.

Whose smoke, like incense, doth perfume the
 sky.

Respectfully thought, but to labor
 And with loud hurrahs welcome them to!

Tit. Let it be so; and let Andronicus
Make this his latest farewell to their souls.
[Trumpets sounded, and the coffin laid in the tomb.]

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons;
Rome's readiest champions, repose you here in rest.
Secure from worldly chances and mishaps!
Here lurks no treason, here no envy swells,
Here grow no damned grudges; here are no storms,
No noise, but silence and eternal sleep:
In peace and honour rest you here, my sons!

Enter LAVINIA.

Lav. In peace and honour live Lord Titus long;
My noble lord and father, live in fame!
Lo, at this tomb my tributary tears
I render, for my brethren's obsequies; 160
And at thy feet I kneel, with tears of joy,
Shed on the earth, for thy return to Rome:
O, bless me here with thy victorious hand,
Whose fortunes Rome's best citizens applaud!
Tit. Kind Rome, that hath thus lovingly reserved
The cordial of mine age to glad my heart!
Lavinia, live; outlive thy father's days,
And fame's eternal date, for virtue's praise!

Enter, below, MARCUS ANDRONICUS and TRIBUNUS; re-enter SATURNINUS and BASILIANTUS, attended.

Marc. Long live Lord Titus, my beloved brother,
Gracious triumpher in the eyes of Rome! 170
Tit. Thanks, gentle tribune, noble brother Marcus.

Marc. And welcome, nephews, from successful wars,
You that survive, and you that sleep in fame!
Fair lords, your fortunes are alike in all,
That in your country's service drew your swords:

But order triumph is this funeral pomp,
That hath aspired to Solon's happiness
And triumphs over chance in honour's bed.
Titus Andronicus, the people of Rome 179
Whose friend in justice thou hast ever been,
Send thee by me, their tribune and their trust,
This pallament of white and spotless hue;
And name thee in election for the empire.
With these our late-deceased emperor's sons:
Be candidates then, and put it on,
And help to set a head on headless Rome.

Tit. A better head her glorious body fits
Than his that shines for age and foolishness:
What should I don this robe, and trouble you?
Be chosen with proclamations to-day, 190
To-morrow yield up rule, resign my life,
And set abroad new business for you all!
Rome, I have been thy soldier forty years,
And led my country's strength successfully,
And borne thee and twenty valiant sons,
In the service of their noble country:
Let honour for mine age,
Beget to control the world:

Upright he held it, lords, that held it last. see Marc. Titus, thou shalt obtain and ask the empire.

Sat. Proud and ambitious tribune, canst thou tell?

Tit. Patience, Prince Saturninus.

Sat. Romans, do me right
Patricians, draw your swords, and sheathe them
not

Till Saturninus be Rome's em-
Andronicus, would thou wert shipp'd to hell,
Rather than rob me of the people's hearts!

Luc. Proud Saturnine, interrupter of the good

That noble-minded Titus means to thee!
Tit. Content thee, prince; I will restore to
thee

The people's hearts, and wean them from their
selves. 210

Bas. Andronicus, I do not flatter thee,
But honour thee, and will do till I die:
My faction if thou strengthen with thy friends,
I will most thankful be; and thanks to men
Of noble minds is honourable need.

Tit. People of Rome, and people's tribunes
here,

I ask your voices and your suffrages:
Will you bestow them friendly on Andronicus?

Tribunes. To gratify the good Andronicus,
And gratulate his safe return to Rome, 211

The people will accept whom he admires.
Tit. Tribune, I thank you: and this suit
I make,

That you create your emperor's eldest son,
Lord Saturnine; whose virtues will, I hope,

Reflect on Rome as Titan's rays on earth,
And ripen justice in this commonweal:

Then, if you will elect by my advice,
Crown him, and say 'Long live our emperor!'

Marc. With voices and applause of every sort, 220

Patricians and plebeians, we create
Lord Saturninus Rome's great emperor,

And say 'Long live our Emperor Saturnine!'

[A long flourish till they come down.]
Sat. Titus Andronicus, for thy favours done
To us in our election this day,

I give thee thanks in part of thy deserts,
And will with deeds requite thy gentleness:

And, for an onset, Titus, to advance
Thy name and honourable family,

Lavinia will I make my empress, 240
Rome's royal mistress, mistress of my heart,
And in the sacred Pantheon her espouse:

Tell me, Andronicus, doth this motion please
thee?

Tit. Is doth, my worthy lord; and in this match

I hold me highly honour'd of your grace:
And here in sight of Rome to Saturnine,
King and commander of our commonweal,
The wide world's emperor, do I consecrate
My sword, my chariot and my prisoners:
Presents well worthy Rome's imperial lord: 250
Receive them then; the tribute that I owe,
Mine honour's homage humbled at thy feet.

Sat. Thou art mine uncle, father of my life!
How proud I am of thee and of thy gifts!

Rome shall record, and when I do forget
The least of these unspeakable deserts,
Romans, forget your fealty to me.

Tit. [To Tamora] Now, madam, are you preceptor to an emperor;
To him that, for your honour and your state,
Will use you nobly and your followers. 260

Sat. A goodly lady, trust me; of the hue
That I would choose, were I to choose anew.
Clear up, fair queen, that cloudy countenance:
Though chance of war hath wrought this change
Of cheer,

Thou comest not to be made a scorn in Rome:
Princely shall be thy usage every way.
Rest on my word, and let not discontent
Daunt all your hopes: madam, he comforts you
Can make you greater than the Queen of Goths.
Lavinia, you are not displeased with this? 270

Lav. Not I, my lord; with true nobility
Warrants these words in princely courtesy.

Sat. Thanks, sweet Lavinia. Romans, let us go:

Ransomless here we set our prisoners free:
Proclaim our honours, lords, with trumpet and drum.

[Flourish. Saturninus courts Tamora
in dumb show.

Bas. Lord Titus, by your leave, this maid is mine. [Seizing Lavinia.]

Tit. How, sir! are you in earnest then, my
lord?

Bas. Ay, noble Titus; and resolved withal
To do myself this reason and this right.

Marc. 'Suum cuique' is our Roman justice.
This prince in justice seizeth but his own. 281

Luc. And that he will, and shall, if Lucius
live.

Tit. Traitors, avaunt! Where is the emperor's guard?

Treason, my lord! Lavinia is surprised!

Sat. Surprised! by whom?

Bas. By him that justly may
Bear his betroth'd from all the world away.

Exeunt Bassianus and Marcus with Lavinia.

Mul. Brothers, help to convey her hence
away.

And with my sword I'll keep this door safe.

[Exeunt Lucius, Quintus, and Martius.

Tit. Follow, my lord, and I'll soon bring her back.

Mul. My lord, you pass not here.

Tit. What, villain boy!
Barra me my way in Rome!

[Slabbing Mutilus.
Help, Lucius, help! [Dies.]

[During the fray, Saturninus, Tamora, Demetrius, Chiron and Aaron go out and re-enter, above.

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. My lord, you are unjust, and, more than so,

In wrongful quarrel you have slain your son.

Tit. Nor thou, nor he, are any sons of
mine;

My sons would never so dishonour me:
Traitor, restore Lavinia to the emperor.

Luc. Dead, if you will; but not to be
his wife,

That is another's lawful promised love. [Exit.]

Sat. No, Titus, no; the emperor needs her
not.

Nor her, nor thee, nor any of thy stock: 300
I'll trust, by leisure, him that mocks me once;

Thee never, nor thy traitorous haughty sons,
Confederates all thus to dishonour me.

Was there none else in Rome to make a stale,
But Saturnine? Full well, Andronicus,

Agree these deeds with that proud brag of thine,
That said'st I begg'd the empire at thy hands.

Tit. O monstrous! what reproachful words are these?

Sat. But go thy ways; go, give that changing piece

To him that flourish'd for her with his sword:
A valiant son-in-law thou shalt enjoy; 311

One fit to bandy with thy lawless sons,
To ruffle in the commonwealth of Rome.

Tit. These words are razors to my wounded
heart.

Sat. And therefore, lovely Tamora, queen of Goths,

That like the stately Phoebe 'mongst her nymphs

Dost overshadow the gallant'st dames of Rome,
If thou be pleas'd with this my sudden choice,

Behold, I choose thee, Tamora, for my bride,
And will create thee empress of Rome. 320

Speak, Queen of Goths, dost thou applaud my choice?

And here I swear by all the Roman gods,
Sith priest and holy water are so near

And tapers burn so bright and every thing
In readiness for Hymeneus stand,

I will not re-salute the streets of Rome,
Or climb my palace, till from forth this place

I lead espoused my bride along with me.

Tam. And here, in sight of heaven, so Rome
I swear,

If Saturnine advance the Queen of Goths, 330
She will a handmaid be to his desires.

A loving nurse, a mother to his youth.

Sat. Ascend, fair queen, Pantheon. Lords, accompany

Your noble emperor and his lovely bride,
Sent by the heavens for Prince Saturnine,

Whose wisdom hath her fortune conquered:
There shall we consummate our espoused rites.

[Exeunt all but Titus.

Tit. I am not bid to wait upon this bride.

Titus, when wert thou wont to walk alone,
Dishonour'd thus, and challeng'd of wrong?

Re-enter MARCUS, LUCIUS, QUINTUS, and MARTIUS.

Marc. O Titus, son, O, see what thou hast
done! 341

In a bad quarrel slain a virtuous son.

Tit. No, foolish tribune, no; no son of mine,
Nor thou, nor these, confederates in the deed

That hath dishonour'd all our family:
Unworthy brother, and unworthy cousin

Luc. But let us give him justice, as he deserves:
Give justice hence with our weapons.

Tit. Traitors, away! he rests not in this tomb:

This monument five hundred years hath stood,
Which I have sumptuously re-edified: 351
Here none but soldiers and Rome's servitors
Repose in fame; none basely slain in brawls;
Bury him where you can; he comes not here.

Marc. My lord, this is impiety in you:
My nephew Mutius' deeds do plead for him;
He must be buried with his brethren.

Quin. And shall, or him we will accom-
Mart. pany.

Tit. And shall! what villain was it spake that word?

Quin. He that would vouch it in any place but here. 360

Tit. What, would you bury him in my
despite?

Marc. No, noble Titus, but entreat of thee
To pardon Mutius and to bury him.

Tit. Marcus, even thou hast struck upon my crest.

And, with these boys, mine honour thou hast
wounded:

My foes I do repute you every one;
So, trouble me no more, but get you gone.

Mart. He is not with himself; let us withdraw.

Quin. Not I, till Mutius' bones be buried.
[Marcus and the Sons of Titus kneel.]

Marc. Brother, for in that name doth nature plead. 370

Quin. Father, and in that name doth nature
speak. 370

Tit. Speak thou no more, if all the rest will speed.

Marc. Renowned Titus, more than half my soul. 370

Lac. Dear father, soul and substance of us all. 370

Marc. Suffer thy brother Marcus to inter
His noble nephew here in virtue's nest,
That died in honour and Lavinia's cause.

Thou art a Roman; be not barbarous:
The Greeks upon advice did bury Ajax

That slew himself; and wise Laertes' son 380
Did graciously plead for his funerals:

Let not young Mutius, then, that was thy joy,
Be barr'd his entrance here.

Tit. Rise, Marcus, rise.
The dismal'st day is this that e'er I saw.

To be dishonour'd by my sons in Rome!
Well, bury him, and bury me the next.

[Mutius is put into the tomb.]

Lac. There lie thy bones, sweet Mutius, with thy friends.

Till we with trophies do adorn thy tomb.

All. [Kneeling] No man shed tears for noble Mutius.

He lives in fame that died in virtue's cause. 390

Marc. My lord, to step out of these dreary dumps.

How comes it that the subtle Queen of Goths
Is of a sudden thus advanced in Rome?

Tit. I know not, Marcus; but I know it is.

Whether by device or no, the heavens can tell:
Is not that then beholding to the man

That brought this high good turn so far?
Yes, and will remunerate.

Flourish. Re-enter, from one side, SATURNI-NUS attended, TAMORA, DEMETRIUS, CHERON, and AABON; from the other, BASSIANUS,
LAVINIA, and others.

Sat. So, Bassianus, you have r'd your prize:

God give you joy, sir, of your gallant
Bas. And you of yours, my lord

more,
Nor wish no less; and so, I take my

Sat. Traitor, if Rome have law or we have
power,

Thou and thy faction shall repent this rape.

Bas. Rape, call you it, my lord, to seize my own.

My true-betrothed love and now my wife!
But let the laws of Rome determine all;

Meanwhile I am possess'd of that is mine.

Sat. 'Tis good, sir: you are very short with us;
But, if we live, we'll be as sharp with you. 410

Bas. My lord, what I have done, as best
I may,

Answer I must and shall do with my life.
Only thus much I give your grace to know:

By all the duties that I owe to Rome,
This noble gentleman, Lord Titus here,

Is in opinion and in honour wrong'd;
That in the rescue of Lavinia

With his own hand did slay his youngest son,
In zeal to you and highly moved to wrath

To be controul'd in that he frankly gave: 420
Receive him, then, to favour, Saturnine,

That hath express'd himself in all his deeds
A father and a friend to thee and Rome.

Tit. Prince Bassianus, leave to plead my
deeds:

'Tis thou and those that have dishonour'd me.
Rome and the righteous heavens be my judge,

How I have loved and honour'd Saturnine!

Tam. My worthy lord, if ever Tamora
Were gracious in those princely eyes of thine,

Then hear me speak indifferently for all; 430
And at my suit, sweet, pardon what is past.

Sat. What, madam! be dishonour'd openly;
And basely put it up without revenge!

Tam. Not so, my lord; the gods of Rome
forfend

I should be author to dishonour you!
But on mine honour dare I undertake

For good Lord Titus' innocence in all;
Whose fury not dissembled speaks his griefs:

Then, at my suit, look graciously on him;
Lose not so noble a friend on vain suppose. 440

Nor with sour looks afflict his gentle heart.
[Aside to Sat.] My lord, be ruled by me, be won at last;

Dissemble all your griefs and discontents:
You are but newly planted in your throne;

Least, then, the people, and patricians too,
Upon a just survey, take Titus' part,

And so supplant you for ingratitudes,
Which Rome reputes to be a heinous sin.

Yield at entreats; and then let me alone: 450
I'll find a day to massacre them all
And raze their faction and their fan

The cruel father and his traitorous sons,
To whom I sued for my dear son's life,
And make them know what 'tis to let a queen
Kneel in the streets and beg for grace in vain.

Come, come, sweet emperor; come, Andronicus;
Take up this good old man, and cheer the heart
That dies in tempest of thy angry frown.

Sat. Rise, Titus, rise; my empress hath prevail'd.

Tit. I thank your majesty, and her, my
lord:

These words, these looks, infuse new life in me.

Tam. Titus, I am incorporate in Rome,
A Roman now adopted happily,
And must advise the emperor for his good.
This day all quarrels die, Andronicus;
And let it be mine honour, good my lord,
That I have reconciled your friends and you.

For you, Prince Bassianus, I have pass'd
My word and promise to the emperor,
That you will be more mild and tractable. 470
And fear not, lords, and you, Lavinia;
By my advice, all humbled on your knees,
You shall ask pardon of his majesty.

Luc. We do, and vow to heaven and to his
highness,

That what we did was mildly as we might,
Tendering our sister's honour and our own.

Marc. That, on mine honour, here I do protest.

Sat. Away, and talk not; trouble us no more.

Tam. Nay, nay, sweet emperor, we must all
be friends: 479

The tribune and his nephews kneel for grace;
I will not be denied: sweet heart, look back.

Sat. Marcus, for thy sake and thy brother's
here,

And at my lovely Tamora's entreats,
I do remit these young men's heinous faults:
Stand up.

Lavinia, though you left me like a churl,
I found a friend, and sure as death I swore
I would not part a bachelor from the priest.

Come, if the emperor's court can feast two brides,

You are my guest, Lavinia, and your friends.
This day shall be a love-day, Tamora. 491

Tit. To-morrow, an it please your majesty
To hunt the panther and the hart with me,
With horn and bound we'll give your grace
bonjour.

Sat. De it so, Titus, and grammarcy too.

[Flourish. Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I. Rome. Before the palace.

Enter AARON.

Aar. Now climbeth Tamora Olympus' top,
Safe out of fortune's shot; and sits aloft,
Secure of thunder's crack or lightning flash;
Advanced above pale envy's threatening reach.
As when the golden sun salutes the morn,
And, having gilt the ocean with his beams,
Gallopeth the solstice in his glittering coach,
And overlooks the highest-peering hills;
So Tamora:

Upon her wit doth earthly honour wait, 20
And virtue stoops and trembles at her frown.
Then, Aaron, arm thy heart, and sit thy
thoughts,

To mount aloft with thy imperial mistress,
And mount her pitch, whom thou in triumph
long

Hast prisoner held, fetter'd in amorous chains
And faster bound to Aaron's charming eyes
Than is Prometheus tied to Caucasus.

Away with slavish weeds and servile thoughts!
I will be bright, and shine in pearl and gold,
To wait upon this new-made empress. 20

To wait, said I! to wanton with this queen,
This goddess, this Semiramis, this nymph,
This siren, that will charm Rome's Saturnine,
And see his shipwreck and his commonweal's.

Holla! what storm is this?

Enter DEMETRIUS and CHIRON, braving.

Dem. Chiron, thy years want wit, thy wit wants edge,

And manners, to intrude where I am graced;
And may, for aught thou know'st, affected be.

Chi. Demetrius, thou dost over-ween in all;
And so in this, to bear me down with braves. 30

'Tis not the difference of a year or two
Makes me less gracious or thee more fortunate.

I am as able and as fit as thou
To serve, and to deserve my mistress' grace;
And that my sword upon thee shall approve,
And plead my passions for Lavinia's love.

Aar. [Aside] Clubs, clubs! these lovers will not keep the peace.

Dem. Why, boy, although our mother, un-advised,

Gave you a dancing-rapier by your side,
Are you so desperate grown, to threat your
friends? 40

Go to; have your lath glued within your sheath
Till you know better how to handle it.

Chi. Meanwhile, sir, with the little skill
I have,

Full well shalt thou perceive how much I dare.

Dem. Ay, boy, grow ye so brave! [They draw.]

Aar. [Coming forward] Why, how now,
lords!

So near the emperor's palace dare you draw,
And maintain such a quarrel openly!

Full well I wot the ground of all this grudge:
I would not for a million of gold
The cause were known to them it most concerns; 50

Nor would your noble mother for much more
Be so dishonour'd in the court of Rome.

For shame, put up.

Dem. Not I, till I have sheathed
My rapier in his bosom and withal Thrust these reproachful speeches down his throat

That he hath breathed in my dishonour here.

Chi. For that I am prepared and full resolved.

Foul-spoken coward, that thunder'st with thy
tongue,

And with thy weapon nothing dar'st perform!

Aar. Away, I say!

Now, by the gods that warlike Goths adore, 60

This petty bubble will undo us all.
 Why, lords, and think you not how dangerous
 It is to jet upon a prince's right?
 What, in Lavinia then become so loose,
 Or Bassianus so degenerate,
 That for her love such quarrels may be broach'd
 Without controlment, justice, or revenge?
 Young lords, beware! an should the empress

That discord's ground, the music would not please.

Chi. I care not, I, knew she and all the
 world;

I love Lavinia more than all the world.
Dem. Youngling, learn thou to make some meaner choice:

Lavinia is thine elder brother's hope.

Aar. Why, are ye mad? or know ye not, in
 Rome

How furious and impatient they be,
 And cannot brook competitors in love?
 I tell you, lords, you do but plot your deaths
 By this device.

Chi. Aaron, a thousand deaths
 Would I propose to achieve her whom I love. So

Aar. To achieve her! how?

Dem. Why makest thou it so strange?
 She is a woman, therefore may be woo'd;
 She is a woman, therefore may be won;
 She is Lavinia, therefore must be loved.
 What, man! more water glideth by the mill
 Than wots the miller of; and easy it is
 Of a cut loaf to steal a shive, we know:
 Though Bassianus be the emperor's brother,
 Better than he have worn Vulcan's bodge.

Aar. [Aside] Ay, and as good as Saturninus
 may.

Dem. Then why should he despair that knows to court it

With words, fair looks and liberality?
 What, hast not thou full often struck a doe,
 And borne her cleanly by the keeper's nose?

Aar. Why, then, it seems, some certain snatch or so

Would serve your turns.

Chi. Ay, so the turn were served.
Dem. Aaron, thou hast hit it.

Aar. Would you had hit it too!
 Then should not we be tired with this ado.
 Why, hark ye, hark ye! and are you such fools
 To square for this? would it offend you, then,
 That both should speed?

Chi. Faith, not me.

Dem. Nor me, so I were one.

Aar. For shame, be friends, and join for that you jar:

'Tis policy and stratagem must do
 That you affect; and so must you resolve,
 That what you cannot as you would achieve,
 You must perfectly accomplish as you may.
 Take this of me: I carees was not more chaste
 Than this Lavinia, Bassianus' love.

A speaker. An lingering languishment
 Had in her power, and I have found the path.

My father, a solemn hunting is in hand;
 And with the lovely Roman ladies troop
 The huntsmen walk the wide and spacious;
 And many unthought plots there are

Fitted by kind for:
 Single you thither then this dainty
 And strike her home by force, if not by words:
 This way, or not at all, stand you in!
 Come, come, our empress, with her
 To villany and vengeance consecrate,
 Will we acquaint with all that we know
 And she shall file our engines with advice,
 That will not suffer you to square yourselves,
 But to your wishes' height advance you both.
 The emperor's court is like the house of Fame,
 The palace full of tongues, of eyes, and ears:
 The woods are ruthless, dreadful, deaf, and dull;

There speak, and strike, brave boys, and take your turns;

There serve your lusts, shadow'd from heaven's
 eye,

And revel in Lavinia's treasury.

Chi. Thy counsel, lad, smells of no cowardice,

Dem. Sit fast aut nefas, till I find the stream
 To cool this heat, a charm to calm these fits,
 Per Styga, per manes vehor.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. A forest near Rome. Horns and cry of hounds heard.

Enter TITUS ANDRONICUS, with Hunters, &c.,
 MARCUS, LUCIUS, QUINTUS, and MARTIUS.

Tit. The hunt is up, the morn is bright and grey,

The fields are fragrant and the woods are green:
 Uncouple here and let us make a bay

And wake the emperor and his lovely bride
 And rouse the prince and ring a hunter's peal,
 That all the court may echo with the noise.

Sons, let it be your charge, as it is ours,
 To attend the emperor's person carefully;

I have been troubled in my sleep this night,
 But dawning day new comfort hath inspired.

A cry of hounds, and horns winded in a peal.

Enter SATURNINUS, TAMORA, BASSIANUS, LAVINIA, DEMETRIUS, CHIRON, and Attendants.

Many good morrows to your majesty;
 Madam, to you as many and as good:

I promised your grace a hunter's peal.

Sat. And you have rung it lustily, my lord:
 Somewhat too early for new-married ladies.

Bas. Lavinia, how say you?

Lav. I say, no;

I have been broad awake two hours and more.

Sat. Come on, then; horse and chariots let us have,

And to our sport. [To Tamora] Madam, now shall ye see

Our Roman hunting.

Marc. I have done, my lord, so
 Will rouse the proppet panther in the chase,
 And climb the highest promontory top.

Tit. And I have horse will follow where the game

Makes way, and run like wildflowers on the plain.

Dem. Chiron, we have not, we, with horse
 nor hound,

But hope to pluck a dainty doe to ground.
(Exeunt.)

SCENE III. A lonely part of the forest.

Enter AARON, with a bag of gold.

Aar. He that had wit would think that I had none,
To bury so much gold under a tree,
And never after to inherit it.
Let him that thinks of me so abjectly
Know that this gold must coin a stratagem,
Which, cunningly effected, will begot
A very excellent piece of villany:
And so repose, sweet gold, for their unrest
That have their aims out of the empress' chest.
(Hides the gold.)

Enter TAMORA.

Tam. My lovely Aaron, wherefore look'st
thou sad,
When every thing doth make a gleeful boast?
The birds chant melody on every bush,
The snake lies rolled in the cheerful sun,
The green leaves quiver with the cooling wind
And make a chequer'd shadow on the ground:
Enter their sweet shade, Aaron, let us sit,
And, whilst the babbling echo mocks the hounds,
Replying shrilly to the well-tuned horns,
As if a double hunt were heard at once,
Let us sit down and mark their yelping noise;
And, after conflict such as was supposed,
The wandering prince and Dido once enjoy'd,
When with a happy storm they were surprised
And curtain'd with a counsel-keeping cave,
We may, each wreathed in the other's arms,
Our pastimes done, possess a golden slumber:
Whilst hounds and horns and sweet melodious birds
Be unto us as is a nurse's song
Of lullaby to bring her babe asleep.

Aar. Madam, though Venus govern your desires,

Saturn is dominator over mine:
It signifies my deadly-standing eye,
Silence and my cloudy melancholy,
A piece of woolly hair that now uncurls
Even as an adder when she doth unroll
To do some fatal execution!

No, madam, these are no venereal signs:
Vengeance is in my heart, death in my hand,
Blood and revenge are hammering in my head.
Hark, Tamora, the empress of my soul,
Which never hopes more heaven than rests in
thee.

This is the day of doom for Bassianus:
His Philomel must lose her tongue to-day,
Thy sons make pillage of her chastity
And wash their hands in Bassianus' blood.
Scot thou this letter! take it up, I pray thee,
And give the king this fatal-plotted scroll.
Now question me no more; we are suppl'd;
Here comes a parcel of our hopeful boots,
Which dreams not yet their lives' destruction.
Tam. Ah, my sweet Moor, sweetest to me than life!

Aar. No more, great empress; Bassianus
comes!
Be cross with him; and I'll go fetch thy shoes
To back thy quarrels, whate'er they be! (Exit.)

Enter BASSIANUS and LAVINIA.

Bas. Who have we here? Rome's royal
empress,
Unfurnish'd of her well-becoming troop!
Or is it Dian, habited like her,
Who hath abandoned her holy groves
To see the general hunting in this forest?

Tam. Saucy controller of our private steps!
Had I the power that some say Dian had,
Thy temples should be planted presently
With horns, as was Acton's; and the bounds
Should drive upon thy new-transformed limbs,
Unmannerly intruder as thou art!

Lav. Under your patience, gentle empress,
Tis thought you have a goodly gift in horning;
And to be doubted that your Moor and you
Are singled forth to try experiments:
Jove shield your husband from his bounds
to-day!

Tis pity they should take him for a stag.
Bas. Believe me, queen, your swarth Cimmerian

Doth make your honour of his body's hue,
Spotted, detestable, and abominable.
Why are you sequester'd from all your train,
Dismounted from your snow-white goodly steed,
And wander'd hither to an obscure plot,
Accompanied but with a barbarous Moor,
If foul desire had not conducted you?

Lav. And, being interrupted in your sport,
Great reason that my noble lord be rated
For sauciness. I pray you, let us hence,
And let her joy her raven-colour'd love:
This valley fits the purpose painting wall.

Bas. The king my brother shall have note of this.

Lav. Ay, for these slips have made him noted long:

Good king, to be so mightily abused!

Tam. Why have I patience to endure all
this?

Enter DEMETRIUS and CHIRON.

Dem. How now, dear sovereign, and our gracious mother!

Why doth your highness look so pale and wan?
Tam. Have I not reason, think you, to look
pale?

These two have 'tied me hither to this place:
A barren detested vale, you see it is;
The trees, though summer, yet autumn and bleak
Gorons with mists and hoar'd mistletoe
Here never shines the sun; here nothing breeds,
Unless the nighty owl or fatal raven;
And when they show'd me this detested place,
They told me here, at dead time of the night,
A thousand hands, a thousand hissing snakes,
Ten thousand swelling toads, an army of
Would make each mortal and a mortal man
As any mortal man
Should straight fall!

No sooner had they told this hellish tale,
But straight they told me they would blind me
here

Quoth the body of a dismal yew,
And leave me to this miserable death :
And then they call'd me foul adulterers,
Lecherious Goth, and all the bitterest terms :
That ever ear did hear to such effect :
And, had you not by wondrous fortune come,
This vengeance on me had they executed.
Revenge it, as you love your mother's life,
Or be ye not henceforth call'd my children.

Dem. This is a witness that I am thy son.

[Stabs Bassianus.

Chi. And this for me, struck home to show
my strength.

[Also stabs Bassianus, who dies.

Lav. Ay, come, Semiramis, nay, barbarous
Tamora,

For no name fits thy nature but thy own !

Tam. Give me thy poniard ; you shall know,
my boys,

Your mother's hand shall right your mother's
wrong.

Dem. Stay, madam ; here is more belongs to her ;

First thrash the corn, then after burn the straw :
This minion stood upon her chastity,
Upon her nuptial vow, her loyalty,
And with that painted hope braves your rightness :

And shall she carry this unto her grave !

Chi. An if she do, I would I were an eunuch.
Drag hence her husband to some secret hole,
And make his dead trunk pillow to our lust.

Tam. But when ye have the honey ye desire,
Let not this wasp outlive, us both to sting.

Chi. I warrant you, madam, we will make that sure.

Come, mistress, now perforce we will enjoy
That nice-preserved honesty of yours.

Lav. O Tamora ! thou bear'st a woman's face,—

Tam. I will not hear her speak ; away with her !

Lav. Sweet lords, entreat her hear me but a
word.

Dem. Listen, fair madam : let it be your glory

To see her tears ; but be your heart to them :
As unrelenting flint to drops of rain.

Lav. When did the tiger's young ones teach the dam ?

O, do not learn her wrath : she taught it thee ;
The milk thou suck'dst from her did turn to marble ;

Even as thy test thou hadst thy tyranny.

Yet every mother breeds not sons alike :

[To Chiron.] Do thou entreat her show a woman at. What, wouldst thou have me prove myself a bastard !

Lav. 'Tis true ; the raven doth not hatch a egg. I heard,—O, could I find it now !—so that I might have paid all away :

For my poor foster-foster children,

The whilst their own birds famish in their nests :

O, be to me, though thy hard heart say no,
Nothing so kind, but something pitiful !

Tam. I know not what it means away
with her !

Lav. O, let me teach thee ! for my father's sake,

That gave thee life, when well he might have slain thee,

Be not obdurate, open thy deaf ears.

Tam. Hadst thou in person ne'er offended
me,

Even for his sake am I pitiless.
Remember, boys, I pour'd forth tears in vain,
To save your brother from the sacrifice :

But fierce Andronicus would not relent :

Therefore, away with her, and use her as you
will,

The worse to her, the better loved of me.

Lav. O Tamora, be call'd a gentle queen,
And with thine own hands kill me in this place !

For 'tis not life that I have begg'd so long :
Poor I was slain when Bassianus died.

Tam. What begg'st thou, then ! fond woman,
let me go.

Lav. 'Tis present death I beg ; and one thing
more

That womanhood denies my tongue to tell :

O, keep me from their worse than killing lust,
And tumble me into some loathsome pit :

Where never man's eye may behold my body :

Do this, and be a charitable murderer.

Tam. So should I rob my sweet sons of their fec :

No, let them satisfy their lust on thee.

Dem. Away ! for thou hast stay'd us here too long.

Lav. No grace ! no womanhood ! Ah, heavily creature !

The blot and enemy to our general name !

Confusion fall—

Chi. Nay, then I'll stop your mouth. Bring thou her husband :

This is the hole where Aaron bid us hide him.

[Demetrius throws the body of Bassianus into the pit ; then exeunt Demetrius and Chiron, dragging off Lavinia.

Tam. Farewell, my sons : see that you make her sure.

Ne'er let my heart know merry cheer indeed,
Till all the Andronic be made away.

Now will I hence to seek my lovely Moor,
And let my spleenful sons this trull deflow.

[Exit.

Re-enter AARON, with QUINTUS and MARTIUS.

Aar. Come on, my lords, the better foot
before :

Straight will I bring you to the loathsome pit
Where I cypied the panther fast asleep.

Quin. My sight is very dull, what'er it bode.

Mart. And mine, I promise you ; were I not for shame,

Well could I leave our sport to sleep awhile.

Quin. What, art thou fall'n ? What white hole is this,

Whose mouth is cover'd with rude-growing
brims,
Upon whose leaves are drops of new-shed blood
As fresh as morning dew distill'd on flowers!
A very fatal place it seems to me.
Speak, brother, hast thou hurt thee with the fall?

Mart. O brother, with the dismall'st object hurt

That ever eye with sight made heart lament!

Aar. [Aside] Now will I fetch the king to find them here,

That he thereby may give a likely guess
How these were they that made away his
brother.

Mart. Why dost not comfort me, and help me out

From this unhallowed and blood-stained hole?

Quin. I am surpris'd with an uncouth fear:
A chilling sweat o'er-runs my trembling joints:
My heart suspects more than mine eye can see.

Mart. To prove thou hast a true-divining
heart,

Aaron and thou look down into this den,
And see a fearful sight of blood and death.

Quin. Aaron is gone; and my compassionate
heart

Will not permit mine eyes once to behold
The thing whereat it trembles by surmise:

(I tell me how it is; for ne'er till now
Was I a child to fear I know not what.

Mart. Lord Bassianus lies embrewed here,
All on a heap, like to a slaughter'd lamb,

In this detested, dark, blood-drinking pit.

Quin. If it be dark, how dost thou know
'tis he?

Mart. Upon his bloody finger he doth wear
A precious ring, that lightens all the hole,

Which, like a taper in some monument,
Doth shine upon the dead man's earthy cheeks,

And shows the ragged entrails of the pit: 230
So pale did shine the moon on Pyramus

When he by night lay bathed in maiden blood
O brother, help me with thy fainting hand—

If fear hath made thee faint, as me it hath—
Out of this fell devouring receptacle,

As hateful as Cocytus' misty mouth.

Quin. Reach me thy hand, that I may help thee out;

Or, wanting strength to do thee so much good,
I may be pluck'd into the swallowing womb

Of this deep pit, poor Bassianus' grave. 240
I have no strength to pluck thee to the brink.

Mart. Nor I no strength to climb without thy help.

Quin. Thy hand once more; I will not loose
again,

Till thou art here aloft, or I below:
Thou canst not come to me: I come to thee.

[Falls in.

Enter SATURNINUS with AARON.

Sat. Along with me: I'll see what hole is
here,

And what he is that now is leap'd into it.
Say, who art thou that lately didst descend

Into this gaping bottom of the earth?

Mart. The unhappy son of old Andronicus

Brought hither in a most unlucky hour, 251
To find thy brother Bassianus dead.

Sat. My brother dead! I know thou dost
but jest;

He and his lady both are at the lodge
Upon the north side of this pleasant chase;

'Tis not an hour since I left him there.

Mart. We know not where you left him all
alive;

But, out, alas! here have we found him dead.

Re-enter TAMORA, with Attendants; TITUS ANDRONICUS, and LUCIUS.

Tam. Where is my lord the king?

Sat. Here, Tamora, though grieved with killing grief. 260

Tam. Where is thy brother Bassianus?

Sat. Now to the bottom dost thou search
my wound:

Poor Bassianus here lies murdered.

Tam. Then all too late I bring this fatal
writ,

The plot of this timeless tragedy;
And wonder greatly that man's face can fold

In pleasing smiles such murderous tyranny.

[She giveth Saturnine a letter.

Sat. [Reads] 'An if we miss to meet him
handsomely—

Sweet huntsman, Bassianus 'tis we mean—
Do thou so much as dig the grave for him: 270

Thou know'st our meaning. Look for thy reward

Among the nettles at the elder-tree
Which overshades the mouth of that same pit

Where we decreed to bury Bassianus.
Do this, and purchase us thy lasting friends.'

O Tamora! was ever heard the like!
This is the pit, and this the elder-tree.

Look, sir, if you can find the huntsman out
That should have murder'd Bassianus here.

Aar. My gracious lord, here is the bag of
gold. 280

Sat. [To Titus] Two of thy whelps, fell ours
of bloody kind,

Have here bereft my brother of his life.
Sir, drag them from the pit unto the prison:

There let them bide until we have devis'd
Some never-heard-of torturing pain for them.

Tam. What, are they in this pit? O won-derous thing!

How easily murder is discovered!

Tit. High emperor, upon my feeble knee
I beg this boon, with tears not lightly shed,

That this fell fault of my accursed sons, 290
Accurs'd, if the fault be proved in them,—

Sat. If it be proved! you see it is apparent.
Who found this letter! Tamora, was it you?

Tam. Andronicus himself did take it up.

Tit. I did, my lord; yet let me be their bail:
For, by my father's reverend tomb, I vow

They shall be ready at your highness' will
To answer their suspicion with their lives.

Sat. Thou shalt not bail them: see thou follow me.

Some bring the murder'd body, some the murderers: 300

Let them not speak a word; the guilt is plain;

For, by my soul, were there worse end than death.

That and upon them should be executed.

Tam. Andronicus, I will entreat the king:

Fear not thy sons; they shall do well enough.

Tit. Come, Lucius, come; stay not to talk with them. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Another part of the forest.

Enter DEMETRIUS and CHIRON with LAVINIA, ravished; her hands cut off, and her tongue cut out.

Dem. So, now go tell, an if thy tongue can speak,

Who 'twas that cut thy tongue and ravish'd thee.

Chi. Write down thy mind, bewray thy meaning so,

An if thy stumps will let thee play the scribe.

Dem. See, how with signs and tokens she can scrawl.

Chi. Go home, call for sweet water, wash thy hands.

Dem. She hath no tongue to call, nor hands to wash;

And so let's leave her to her silent walks.

Chi. An 'twere my case, I should go hang myself.

Dem. If thou hadst hands to help thee knit the cord. [Exeunt Demetrius and Chiron.]

Enter MARCUS.

Mar. Who is this? my niece, that flies away so fast!

Cousin, a word; where is your husband?

If I do dream, would all my wealth would wake me!

If I do wake, some planet strike me down,

That I may slumber in eternal sleep!

Speak, gentle niece, what stern ungentle hands have lopp'd and hew'd and made thy body bare

Of her two branches, those sweet ornaments,

Whose circling shadows kings have sought to sleep in,

And might not gain so great a happiness

As have thy love? Why dost not speak to me?

Alas, a crimson river of warm blood,

Like to a bubbling fountain stirr'd with wind,

Doth rise and fall between thy rosed lips,

Coming and going with thy honey breath.

But, sure, some Tereus hath deflower'd thee,

And, lest thou shouldst detect him, cut thy tongue.

Alas, how thou turn'st away thy face for shame!

And, notwithstanding all this loss of blood,

As from a conduit with three issuing spouts, so

Yet do thy cheeks look red as Titan's face

Bleeding to be encounter'd with a cloud.

Shall I speak for thee? shall I say 'tis so?

O, that I knew thy heart; and knew the best,

That I might sell at him, to ease my mind!

Some scolding witch, like an oven,

Doth heat the heart to coals where it is.

Full of themselves, she but lost her tongue,

And is a tedious tumbler sow'd her mind;

For, by my soul, that man is cut from thee;

A scolding, meddling cousin, hast thou met, 41

he have better sow'd than Pholmel.

O, had the monster seen those lily hands

Tremble, like aspen-leaves, upon a lute,

And make the silken strings delight to kiss

them.

He would not then have touch'd them for his

life!

Or, had he heard the heavenly harmony

Which that sweet tongue hath made,

He would have dropp'd his knife, and fell

asleep. 50

As Cerberus at the Thracian poet's feet.

Come, let us go, and make thy father blind:

For such a sight will blind a father's eye:

One hour's storm will drown the fragrant meads;

What will whole months of tears thy father's

eyes!

Do not draw back, for we will mourn with thee:

O, could our mourning ease thy misery! [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I. Rome. A street.

Enter Judges, Senators and Tribunes, with MARTIUS and QUINTUS, bound, passing on to the place of execution; TITUS going before, pleading.

Tit. Hear me, grave fathers! noble tribunes, stay!

For pity of mine age, whose youth was spent in dangerous wars, whilst you securely slept;

For all my blood in Rome's great quarrel shed;

For all the frosty nights that I have watch'd;

And for these bitter tears, which now you see

Filling the aged wrinkles in my cheeks;

Be pitiful to my condemned sons,

Whose souls are not corrupted as 'tis thought.

For two and twenty sons I never wept, 10

Because they died in honour's lofty bed.

[Lies down; the Judges, &c. pass by him, and Exeunt.]

For these, these, tribunes, in the dust I write

My heart's deep languor and my soul's sad

tears:

Let my tears stanch the earth's dry appetite;

My sons' sweet blood will make it shame and blush.

O earth, I will befriend thee more with rain,

That shall distil from these two ancient urns:

Than youthful April shall with all his showers:

In summer's drought I'll drop upon thee still:

In winter with warm tears I'll melt the snow,

And keep eternal spring-time on thy face, 21

So thou refuse to drink my dear sons' blood.

Enter LUCIUS, with his sword drawn.

O reverend tribunes! O gentle, aged men!

Unbind my sons, reverse the doom of death:

And let me say, that never wept before,

My tears are now prevailing custom.

Luc. O noble father, you lament in vain!

The tribunes hear you not; no man is by:

And you recount your sorrows to a stone.

Tit. Alas, Lucius, for thy brothers let me

plead. 30

Grave tribunes, once more I entreat of you,--

Luc. My gracious lord, no tribune hears you speak.

Tit. Why, 'tis no matter, man: if they did hear,

They would not mark me, or if they did mark,

They would not pity me, yet plead I must;

And bootless unto them.

Therefore I tell my sorrows to the stones;

Who, though they cannot answer my distress,

Yet in some sort they are better than the tribunes,

For that they will not intercept my tale: 40

When I do weep, they humbly at my feet

Receive my tears and seem to weep with me;

And, were they but attired in grave weeds,

Rome could afford no tribune like to these.

A stone is soft as wax,—tribunes more hard

than stones;

A stone is silent, and offendeth not,

And tribunes with their tongues doom men to death. [Rises.]

But wherefore stand'st thou with thy weapon

drawn?

Luc. To rescue my two brothers from their death:

For which attempt the Judges have pronounced

My everlasting doom of banishment. 51

Tit. O happy man! they have befriended thee.

Why, foolish Lucius, dost thou not perceive

That Rome is but a wilderness of tigers?

Tigers must prey, and Rome affords no prey

but me and mine: how happy art thou, then,

From these devourers to be banished!

But who comes with our brother Marcus here?

Enter MARCUS and LAVINIA.

Marc. Titus, prepare thy aged eyes to weep:

Or, if not so, thy noble heart to break: 60

I bring consuming sorrow to thine age.

Tit. Will it consume me? let me see it,

then.

Marc. This was thy daughter.

Tit. Why, Marcus, so she is.

Luc. Ay me, this object kills me!

Tit. Faint-hearted boy, arise, and look upon her.

Speak, Lavinia, what accursed hand

Hath made thee handless in thy father's sight?

What fool hath added water to the sea,

Or brought a faggot to bright-burning Troy?

My grief was at the height before thou camest,

And now, like Nilus, it disdaineth bounds. 71

Give me a sword, I'll chop off my hands too:

For they have fought for Rome, and all, in vain;

And they have nursed this woe, in feeding life;

In bootless prayer have they been held up,

And they have served me to effectless use:

Now all the service I require of them is that the one will help to cut the other.

'Tis well, Lavinia, that thou hast no hands;

For hands, to do Rome service, are but vain. 80

Luc. Speak, gentle sister, who hath martyr'd thee?

Marc. O, that delightful engine of her

thoughts,

That blabb'd them with such pleasing eloquence,

Is torn from forth that pretty hollow cage,

Where, like a sweet melodious bird, it sung

Sweet varied notes, enchanting every ear!

Luc. O, say thou for her, who hath done

this deed?

Marc. O, thus I found her, straying in the park,

Seeking to hide herself, as doth the deer

That hath received some unrecuring wound. 90

Tit. It was my deer; and he that wounded her

Hath hurt me more than had he kill'd me

dead:

For now I stand as one upon a rock

Environ'd with a wilderness of seas,

Who marks the waxing tide grow wave by wave,

Expecting ever when some envious surge

Will in his brinish bowels swallow him.

This way to death my wretched sons are gone;

Here stands my other son, a banish'd man,

And here my brother, weeping at my woes: too

But that which gives my soul the greatest spurn,

Is dear Lavinia, dearer than my soul.

Had I but seen thy picture in this plight,

It would have maddened me; what shall I do

Now I behold thy lively body so?

Thou hast no hands, to wipe away thy tears,

Nor tongue, to tell me who hath martyr'd thee:

Thy husband he is dead; and for his death

Thy brothers are condemn'd, and dead by this.

Look, Marcus! ah, son Lucius, look on her! 110

When I did name her brothers, then fresh tears

stood on her cheeks, as doth the honey-dew

Upon a gather'd lily almost wither'd.

Marc. Perchance she weeps because they kill'd her husband;

Perchance because she knows them innocent.

Tit. If they did kill thy husband, then be joyful,

Because the law hath ta'en revenge on them.

No, no, they would not do so foul a deed;

Witness the sorrow that their sister makes.

Gentle Lavinia, let me kiss thy lips: 120

Or make some sign how I may do thee ease:

Shall thy good uncle, and thy brother Lucius,

And thou, and I, sit round about some fountain,

Looking all downwards, to behold our cheeks

How they are stain'd, as meadows, yet not dry,

With miry slime left on them by a flood?

And in the fountain shall we gaze so long

Till the fresh taste be taken from that clearness,

And made a brine-pit with our bitter tears?

Or shall we cut away our hands, like thine? 130

Or shall we bite our tongues, and in dumb shows

Pass the remainder of our hateful days?

What shall we do? let us, that have our tongues,

Plot some device of further misery.

To make us wonder'd at in time to come.

Luc. Sweet father, cease your tears; for, at

See how my wretched sister sobs and weeps.

Marc. Patience, dear niece. Good niece, dry these eyes.

Tit. Ah, Marcus, Marcus! brother, well I

Thy napkin cannot drink a tear of mine, 140
For thou, poor man, hast drown'd it with thine
own.

Luc. Ah, my Lavinia, I will wipe thy cheeks,
Tit. Mark, Marcus, mark! I understand her signs:

Had she a tongue to speak, now would she say
That to her brother which I said to thee:
His napkin, with his true tears all bewet,
Can do no service on her sorrowful cheeks.
O, what a sympathy of woe is this,
As far from help as Limbo is from bliss!

Enter AARON.

Aar. Titus Andronicus, my lord! the emperor Sends thee this word,—that, if thou love thy
sons, 151

Let Marcus, Lucius, or thyself, old Titus,
Or any one of you, chop off your hand,
And send it to the king: he for the same
Will send thee hither both thy sons alive;
And that shall be the ransom for their fault.

Tit. O gracious emperor! O gentle Aaron!
Did ever raven sing so like a lark,
That gives sweet tidings of the sun's uprise?
With all my heart, I'll send the emperor 160
My hand:

Good Aaron, wilt thou help to chop it off?

Luc. Stay, father! for that noble hand of thine.

That hath thrown down so many enemies,
Shall not be sent: my hand will serve the turn:

My youth can better spare my blood than you;
And therefore mine shall save my brothers'
lives.

Marc. Which of your hands hath not defended Rome.

And rear'd aloft the bloody battle-axe,
Writing destruction on the enemy's castle? 170

O, none of both but are of high desert:
My hand hath been but idle; let it serve
To ransom my two nephews from their death;
Then have I kept it to a worthy end.

Aar. Nay, come, agree whose hand shall go along.

For fear they die before their pardon come.

Marc. My hand shall go.

Luc. By heaven, it shall not go!
Tit. Sirs, strive no more: such wither'd herbs as these

Are meet for plucking up, and therefore mine.

Luc. Sweet father, if I shall be thought thy
son, 180

Let me redeem my brothers both from death.

Marc. And, for our father's sake and mother's care,

Now let me show a brother's love to thee.

Tit. Agree between you; I will spare my
hand.

Luc. Then I'll go fetch an axe.

Marc. But I will use the axe.

Exeunt Lucius and Marcus.
Tit. Come hither, Aaron; I'll deceive them
both:

Send me thy hand, and I will give thee mine.

Aar. [Aside.] If that be call'd deceit, I will be honest.

And never, whilst I live, deceive men so: 190
But I'll deceive you in another sort,
And that you'll say, ere half an hour pass.

[Cuts off Titus's hand.]

Re-enter LUCIUS and MARCUS.

Tit. Now stay your strife: what shall be is dispatch'd.

Good Aaron, give his majesty my hand
Tell him it was a hand that ward'd
From thousand dangers; bid him buy it;
More hath it merited; that let it have
As for my sons, say I account of thee.
As jewels purchased at an easy price;
And yet dear too, because I bought mine

Aar. I go, Andronicus: and for th
Look by and by to have thy sons with [Aside. Their heads, I mean. O, how this villany

Doth fat me with the very thoughts of it!
Let fools do good, and fair men call for grace,
Aaron will have his soul black like his face.

[Exit.]

Tit. O, here I lift this one hand up to heaven,
And bow this feeble ruin to the earth:

If any power pities wretched tears,
To that I call! [To Lav.] What, wilt thou kneel with me? 210

Do, then, dear heart; for heaven shall hear our prayers;

Or with our sighs we'll breathe the welkin dim,
And stain the sun with fog, as sometime clouds
When they do hug him in their melting
bosoms.

Marc. O brother, speak with possibilities,
And do not break into these deep extremes.

Tit. Is not my sorrow deep, having no bottom?

Then be my passions bottomless with them.

Marc. But yet let reason govern thy lament.

Tit. If there were reason for these miseries,
Then into limits could I bind my woes: 221
When heaven doth weep, doth not the earth o'erflow?

If the winds rage, doth not the sea wax mad,
Threatening the welkin with his big-swoln face?
And wilt thou have a reason for this coil?
I am the sea; hark, how her sighs do blow!

She is the weeping welkin, I the earth:
Then must my sea be moved with her sighs;
Then must my earth with her continual tears
Become a deluge, overflow'd and drown'd; 230

For why my bowels cannot hide her woes,
But like a drunkard must I vomit them.

Then give me leave, for losers will have leave
To ease their stomachs with their bitter tongues.

Enter a Messenger, with two heads and a hand.

Mess. Worthy Andronicus, ill art thou repaid

For that good hand thou sent'st the emperor.
Here are the heads of thy two noble sons;

And here's thy hand, in scorn to thee sent
back;

Thy griefs their sports, thy resolution mock'd;
That woe is me to think upon thy woes 240

More than remembrance of my father's death.

[Exit.]

Marc. Now let hot Alba cool in Sicily,
And be my heart an ever-burning hell!
These miseries are more than may be borne.
To weep with them that weep doth ease some
deal;

But sorrow flouted at is double death.

Luc. Ah, that this sight should make so deep a wound,
And yet detested life not shrink thereat!
That ever death should let life bear his name,
Where life hath no more interest but to breathe!

[Lavinia kisses Titus.]

Marc. Alas, poor heart, that kiss is com-fortless

As frozen water to a starved snake.

Tit. When will this fearful slumber have an end!

Marc. Now, farewell, slattery: die, Andro-
nicus;

Thou dost not slumber: see, thy two sons'
heads

Thy warlike hand, thy mangled daughter here;
Thy other banish'd son, with this dear sight
Struck pale and bloodless; and thy brother, I,
Even like a stony image, cold and numb.

Ah, now no more will I control thy griefs: 260
Send off thy silver hair, thy other hand
Gnawing with thy teeth; and be this dismal
sight

The closing up of our most wretched eyes:

Now is a time to storm; why art thou still?

Tit. Ha, ha, ha!

Marc. Why dost thou laugh! it fits not with this hour.

Tit. Why, I have not another tear to shed
Besides, this sorrow is an enemy,

And would usurp upon my watery eyes,
And make them blind with tributary tears: 270

Then which way shall I find Revenge's cave?

For these two heads do seem to speak to me,

And threat me I shall never come to bliss

Till all these mischiefs be return'd again

Even in their throats that have committed

them.

Come, let me see what task I have to do.

You heavy people, circle me about,

That I may turn me to each one of you,

And swear unto my soul to right your wrongs.

The vow is made. Come, brother, take a head!

And in this hand the other will I bear. 28

Lavinia, thou shalt be employ'd; these arms!

Bear thou my hand, sweet wench, between thy teeth.

As for thee, boy, go get thee from my sight;

Thou art an exile, and thou must not stay:

Hie to the Goths, and raise an army there:

And, if you love me, as I think you do,

Let's kiss and part, for we have much to do.

[Exeunt Titus, Marcus, and Lavinia.]

Luc. Farewell, Andronicus, my noble father,

The worst of all men that ever lived in Rome: 290

Farewell, proud Rome; till Lucius come again,

He leaves his pledges dearer than his life.

Farewell, Lavinia, my noble sister;

O, would thou wast as thou wert'st least than I!

But now nor Lucius nor Lavinia lives

But in oblivion and hateful griefs.

If Lucius live, he will requite your wrongs;

And make proud Saturnine and his empress

Reg at the gates, like Tarquin and his queen.

Now will I to the Goths, and raise a power, 300

To be revenged on Rome and Saturnine. [Exit.]

SCENE II. A room in Titus's house. banquet set out.

Enter TITUS, MARCUS, LAVINIA, and young LUCIUS, a Boy.

Tit. So, so; now sit: and look you eat no
more

Than will preserve just so much strength in us

As will revenge these bitter woes of ours.

Marcus, unknit that sorrow-wreathen knot:

Thy niece and I, poor creatures, want our

hands,

And cannot passionate our tenfold grief

With folded arms. This poor right hand of

mine

Is left to tyrannise upon my breast;

Who, when my heart, all mad with misery,

Beats in this hollow prison of my flesh, 30

Then thus I thump it down.

To Lavinia! Thou map of woe, that thus dost talk in signs!

When thy poor heart beats with outrageous beating,

Thou canst not strike it thus to make it still.

Wound it with sighing, girl, kill it with groans;

Or get some little knife between thy teeth,

And just against thy heart make thou a hole;

That all the tears that thy poor eyes let fall

May run into that sink, and soaking in

Drown the lamenting fool in sea-salt tears. 30

Marc. Fie, brother, fie! teach her not thus to lay

Such violent hands upon her tender life.

Tit. How now! has sorrow made these dots

already!

Why, Marcus, no man should be mad but I.

What violent hands can she lay on her life!

Ah, wherefore dost thou urge the name of

hands;

To bid Aeneas tell the tale twice o'er,

How Troy was burnt and he made miserable!

O, handle not the theme, to talk of hands!

Let us remember still that we have none. 30

Fie, fie, how frantically I square my talk.

As if we should forget we had no hands,

If Marcus did not name the word of hands!

Come, let's fall to; and, gentle girl, eat this:

Here is no drink! Hark, Marcus, what she says;

I can interpret all her martyr'd signs;

She says she drinks no other drink but

Bread with her sorrow, meat upon

cheeks;

Speechless complain, I will leave thy thoughts;

In thy dumb action will I be as patient. 30

As begging hermits in their holy prayers:

Thou shalt not sigh, nor hold thy stomach to

heaven,

Nor wink, nor nod, nor

But I of these will wreat on

And by silent gestures learn

Boy. Good grandsire, leave these bitter deep harsh words.

Makes my aunt merry with some pleasing tale.

Marc. Alas, the tender boy, in passion
moved,

Does want to see his grandsire's heaviness.

Tit. Peace, tender sapling; thou art made of tears.

And tears will quickly melt thy life away.

[Marcus strikes the dish with a knife.
What dost thou strike at, Marcus, with thy knife?

Marc. At that that I have kill'd, my lord;
a fly.

Tit. Out on thee, murderer! thou kill'st my
heart;

Mine eyes are cloy'd with view of tyranny:
A deed of death done on the innocent

Becomes not Titus' brother: get thee gone;
I see thou art not for my company.

Marc. Alas, my lord, I have but kill'd a fly.

Tit. But how, if that fly had a father and mother?

How would he hang his slender gilded wings,
And buzz lamenting doings in the air!

Poor harmless fly,
That, with his pretty buzzing melody,
Came here to make us merry! and thou hast
kill'd him.

Marc. Pardon me, sir; it was a black ill-favoured fly.

Like to the empress' Moor; therefore I kill'd
him.

Tit. O, O, O,
Then pardon me for reprehending thee,
For thou hast done a charitable deed.

Give me thy knife, I will insult on him;
Flattering myself, as if it were the Moor

Come hither purposely to poison me.—
There's for thyself, and that's for Tamora.

Ah, sirrah!
Yet, I think, we are not brought so low,
But that between us we can kill a fly

That comes in likeness of a coal-black Moor.

Marc. Alas, poor man! grief has so wrought
on him.

He takes false shadows for true substances.

Tit. Come, take away. Lavinia, go with
me.

I'll to thy closet; and go read with thee
Sad musings chanced in the times of old.

Come, boy, and go with me: thy sight is young,
And thou shalt read when mine begin to dazzle.

[Exeunt.

ACT IV.

Scene I. Rome. Titus's garden.

Enter young TITUS, and LAVINIA running after him, and the boy flies from her, with book under his arm. Then enter TITUS and MARCUS.

Young Luc. Help, grandsire, help! my aunt Lavinia

Is gone the way where I know not why:
Great uncle Marcus, see how swift she comes.

Alas, grandsire, I know not what you mean.

Marc. Stand by me, Lucius; do not fear thine aunt.

Tit. She loves thee, boy, too well to do thee
harm.

Young Luc. Ay, when my father was in Rome she did.

Marc. What means my niece Lavinia by these signs?

Tit. Fear her not, Lucius: somewhat doth she mean:

See, Lucius, see how much she makes of thee:
Somewhither would she have thee go with her.

Ah, boy, Cornelia never with more care
Read to her sons than she hath read to thee

Sweet poetry and Tully's Orator.

Marc. Canst thou not guess wherefore she plies thee thus?

Young Luc. My lord, I know not, I, nor can I guess.

Unless some fit or frenzy do possess her:
For I have heard my grandsire say full oft,

Extrinity of griefs would make men mad;
And I have read that Hecuba of Troy

Was mad for sorrow; that made me to fear;
Although, my lord, I know my noble aunt

Loves me as dear as e'er my mother did,
And would not, but in fury, fright my youth:

Which made me down to throw my books,
and fly,—

Causeless, perhaps. But pardon me, sweet aunt:

And, madam, if my uncle Marcus go,
I will most willingly attend your ladyship.

Marc. Lucius, I will.
[Lavinia turns over with her stumps the books which Lucius has let fall.

Tit. How now, Lavinia! Marcus, what means this?

Some book there is that she desires to see.
Which is it, girl, of these? Open them, boy.

But thou art deeper read, and better skill'd:
Come, and take choice of all my library,

And so beguile thy sorrow, till the heavens
Reveal the damn'd contriver of this deed.

Why lifts she up her arms in acquiescence thus?

Marc. I think she means that there was more than one

Confederate in the fact: ay, more there was;
Or else to heaven she heaves them for revenge.

Tit. Lucius, what book is that she toucheth?

Young Luc. Grandsire, 'tis Ovid's Metamorphoses;

My mother gave it me.

Marc. For love of her that's gone,
Perhaps she could find it from among the rest.

Tit. Soft! see how busily she turns the leaves! [Helping her.

What would she find? Lavinia, shall I read?
This is the tragic tale of Philopoe.

And treats of Tereus' treason and his rape;
And rape, I fear, was root of thine sorrow.

Marc. See, brother, see; note how she quotes the leaves.

Tit. Lavinia, wert thou thus surprised, sweet
girl,

Ravish'd and wrong'd, as Philopoe was,
Forced in the ruthless vast, and gloomy woods!

See, see!

Ay, such a place there is, where we did hunt—
O, had we never, never hunted there!—
Pattern'd by that the poet here describes,
By nature made for murders and for rapes.

Marc. O, why should nature build so foul
a den,

Unless the gods delight in tragedies! 60

Tit. Give signs, sweet girl, for here are none but friends.

What Roman lord it was durst do the deed:

(O sink not Saturnine, as Tarquin erst,

That left the camp to sin in Lucrece's bed!

Marc. Sit down, sweet niece: brother, sit down by me.

Apollo, Pallas, Jove, or Mercury,

Inspire me, that I may this treason find!

My lord, look here: look here, Lavinia:

This sandy plot is plain; guide, if thou canst,

This after me, when I have writ my name 70

Without the help of any hand at all.

[He writes his name with his staff, and guides it with feet and mouth.]

Cursed be that heart that forced us to this shift!

Write thou, good niece; and here display, at
last,

What God will have discover'd for revenge:

Heaven guide thy pen to print thy sorrows plain.

That we may know the traitors and the truth!

[She takes the staff in her mouth, and guides it with her stumps, and writes.]

Tit. O, do ye read, my lord, what she hath writ!

'Suprum. Chiron. Demetrius.'

Marc. What, what! the lustful sons of Tarnora

Performers of this heinous, bloody deed! 80

Tit. Magni Dominator poli,

Tam lentus audis socios! tam lentus vides!

Marc. O, calm thee, gentle lord; although

I know

There is enough written upon this earth

To stir a mutiny in the mildest thoughts

And arm the minds of infants to exclams.

My lord, kneel down with me; Lavinia, kneel,

And kneel, sweet boy, the Roman Hector's
hope;

And swear with me, as, with the woful fere

And father of that chaste dishonour'd dame, 90

Lord Junius Brutus swore for Lucrece's rape,

That we will prosecute by good advice

Mortal revenge upon these traitorous Goths.

And see their blood, or die with this reproach.

Tit. 'Tis sure enough, as you know how.

But if you hunt these bear-whelps, then be ware:

The dam will wake; and, if she wind you once,

She's with the lion deeply still in league,

And lulls him whilst she playeth on her back,

And when he sleeps will she do what she list.

Marc. You are a young huntsman, Marcus; let it
alone;

And, come, I will go get a leaf of brass,

And with a gad of steel will write these words,

And lay it by: the angry northern wind

Will blow these words, like Sibyl's leaves, abroad.

And where's your lesson, then! Boy, what say you!

Young Luc. I say, my lord, that if I were a
man,

Their mother's bed-chamber should not be safe or these bad bondmen to the yoke of Rome.

Marc. Ay, that's my boy! thy father hath full oft

'or his ungrateful country done the like.

Young Luc. And, uncle, so will I, as if I
live.

Tit. Come, go with me into mine armoury;
Lucius, I'll fit thee; and withal, my boy,

Shalt carry from me to the emperor's sons
Presents that I intend to send them both:

Come, come; thou'lt do thy message, wilt thou
not?

Young Luc. Ay, with my dagger in their bosoms, grandsire.

Tit. No, boy, not so; I'll teach thee another course.

Lavinia, come. Marcus, look to my house: 100
Lucius and I'll go brave it at the court;

Ay, marry, will we, sir; and we'll be waited on.

[Exeunt Titus, Lavinia, and Young Luc.]

Marc. O heavens, can you hear a good man groan.

And not relent, or not compassion him!

Marcus, attend him in his ecstasy.

That hath more scars of sorrow in his heart

Than foemen's marks upon his batter'd shield;

But yet so just that he will not revenge.

Revenge, ye heavens, for old Andronicus!

[Exit.]

SCENE II. The same. A room in the palace.

Enter, from one side, AARON, DEMETRIUS, and CHIRON; from the other side, young

LUCIUS, and an Attendant, with a bundle of weapons, and verses writ upon them.

Chi. Demetrius, here's the son of Lucius;

He hath some message to deliver us.

Aar. Ay, some mad message from his mad grandfather.

Young Luc. My lords, with all the humbleness I may,

I greet your honours from Andronicus.

[Aside.] And pray the Roman gods confound

you both!

Dem. Gramercy, lovely Lucius: what's the news?

Young Luc. [Aside.] That you are both decipher'd, that's the news.

For villains mark'd with rape.—May it please

you,

My grandsire, well advis'd, hath sent by me 10

The goodliest weapons of his armoury

To gratify your honourable youth.

The hope of Rome; for so he bade me say;

And so I do, and with his gifts present

Your lordships, that, whenever you have need,

You may be armed and appointed well:

And so I leave you both: [Aside.] Like bloody villains.

[Exeunt young Lucius and Attendant.]

Dem. What's here? A curse! and written round about!

Let's see:

[Aside] Integer vitæ, scelerisque purus, so
Non eget Mauri jaculis, nec arcu.

Chi. O, 'tis a verse in Horace; I know it well:
I read it in the grammar long ago.

Aar. Ay, just; a verse in Horace; right, you have it.

[Aside] Now, what a thing it is to be an ass!
Here's no sound jest! the old man hath found their guilt;

And sends them weapons wrapp'd about with lines,

That wound, beyond their feeling, to the quick.
But were our witty empress well afoot.
She would applaud Andronicus' conceit: 30
But let her rest in her unrest awhile.

And now, young lords, was't not a happy star
Led us to Rome, strangers, and more than so,
Captives, to be advanced to this height!
It did me good, before the palace gate
To leave the tribune in his brother's hearing.

Dem. But me more good, to see so great a
lord

Basely ingennate and send us gifts.

Aar. Had he not reason, Lord Demetrius?
Did you not use his daughter very friendly? 40

Dem. I would we had a thousand Roman dames

At such a bay, by turn to serve our lust.

Chi. A charitable wish and full of love.

Aar. Here lacks but your mother for to say
amen.

Chi. And that would she for twenty thousand more.

Dem. Come, let us go; and pray to all the
gods

For our beloved mother in her pains.

Aar. [Aside] Pray to the devils; the gods have given us over.

[Trumpets sound within.]
Dem. Why do the emperor's trumpets flourish thus? 40

Chi. Belike, for joy the emperor hath a son.

Dem. Soft! who comes here?

Enter a Nurse, with a blackamoor Child in her arms.

Nur. Good morrow, lords:
O, tell me, did you see Aaron the Moor?

Aar. Well, more or less, or ne'er a whit
at all,

Here Aaron is; and what with Aaron now?

Nur. O gentle Aaron, we are all undone!

Now help, or woe betide thee evermore!

Aar. Why, what a caterwauling dost thou keep!

What dost thou wrap and fumble in thine
arms?

Nur. O, that which I would hide from heaven's eye.

Our empress' shame, and stately Rome's dis-
grace!

She is deliver'd, lords; she is deliver'd. 60

Aar. To whom?

Nur. I mean, she is brought a-bed.
Now, God give her good rest! What hath she sent her!

Nur. A devil.

Aar. Why, then she is the devil's dam; a joyful issue.

Nur. A joyless, dismal, black, and sorrowful issue:

Here is the babe, as loathsome as a
Amongst the fairest breeders of our clime:
The empress sends it thee, thy stamp, thy seal,
And bids thee christen it with thy dagger's point.

Aar. 'Zounds, ye whore! is black so base a hue!

Sweet blowse, you are a beauteous blossom,
sure.

Dem. Villain, what hast thou done?

Aar. That which thou canst not un-

Chi. Thou hast undone our mother.

Aar. Villain, I have done thy mother.

Dem. And therein, hellish dog, thou hast undone.

Woe to her chance, and damn'd her loathe-
choice!

Accursed the offspring of so-foul a fiend!

Chi. It shall not live.

Aar. It shall not die.

Nur. Aaron, it must; the mother wills it so

Aar. What, must it, nurse? then let no man but I

Do execution on my flesh and blood.

Dem. I'll broach the tadpole on my rapier:
point!

Nurse, give it me; my sword shall soon dispatch it.

Aar. Sooner this sword shall plough thy bowels up.

[Takes the Child from the Nurse, and draws.

Stay, murderous villains! will you kill your
brother?

Now, by the burning tapers of the sky,
That shone so brightly when this boy was got.

He dies upon my scimitar's sharp point 50

That touches this my first-born son and heir!

I tell you, younglings, not Enceladus,
With all his threatening band of Typhon's
brood,

Nor great Alcides, nor the god of war,
Shall seize this prey out of his father's hands.

What, what, ye sanguine, shallow-hearted boys!
Ye white-lim'd walls! ye alehouse painted
signs!

Coal-black is better than another hue,
In that it seems to bear another hue; 60

For all the water in the ocean
Can never turn the swan's black legs to white.

Although she have them hourly in the flood,
Tell the empress from me, I am of age

To keep mine own, excuse it how she can.

Dem. Wilt thou betray thy noble mistress
thus?

Aar. My mistress is my mistress; this myself,
The vigour and the picture of my youth:

This before all the world do I prefer;
This manages all the world will I keep safe.

Or some of you shall amoke for it in Rome.

Dem. By this our mother is for ever shamed!

Chi. Rome will despise her for this escape.

Nur. The emperor, in his rage, will doom her death.

Chi. I blush to think upon this ignomy.

Aar. Why, there's the privilege your beauty bears;

Fie, treacherous hue, that will betray with blushing

The close enacts and counsels of the heart!

Here's a young lad framed of another leer:

Look, how the black slave smiles upon the father,

As who should say 'Old lad, I am thine own.'

He is your brother, lords, sensibly fed

Of that self-blood that first gave life to you,

And from that womb where you imprison'd were

He is enfranchised and come to light;

Nay, he is your brother by the surer side,

Although my seal be stamped in his face.

Nur. Aaron, what shall I say unto the empress?

Dem. Advise thee, Aaron, what is to be done,

And we will all subscribe to thy advice:

Save thou the child, so we may all be safe.

Aar. Then sit we down, and let us all consult.

My son and I will have the wind of you;

Keep there: now talk at pleasure of your safety.

Dem. How many women saw this child of his?

Aar. Why, so, brave lords! when we join in league, am a lamb: but if you brave the Moor,

he chafed hoar, the mountain lioness,

he ocean swells not so as Aaron storms.

I say, again, how many saw the child?

Nur. Cornelia the midwife and myself:

and no one else but the deliver'd empress.

Aar. The empress, the midwife, and yourself:

no may keep counsel when the third's away

to the empress, tell her this I said.

[He kills the nurse.]

Heke, weke! so cries a pig prepared to the spit.

Dem. What mean'st thou, Aaron! wherefore didst thou this?

Aar. O Lord, sir, 'tis a deed of policy:

ball she live to betray this guilt of ours,

long-tongued babbling gossip! no, lords, no

and now be it known to you my full intent.

man;

to bed;

to pack with him, and give the mother gold,

and tell them both the circumstance of all,

and how by this their child shall be advanced,

and be received for the emperor's heir,

and substituted in the place of mine,

to calm this tempest whirling in the court; and

and let the emperor dandle him for his own.

ye, lords; ye see I have given her physic,

[Pointing to the nurse.]

and you must needs bestow her funeral;

the fields are near, and you are gallant grooms

is done, see that you take no longer days,

it send the midwife presently to me.

The midwife and the nurse well made away,
Then let the ladies tattle what they please.

Chi. Aaron, I see thou wilt not trust the air
With secrets.

Dem. For this care of Tamora,

Herself and hers are highly bound to thee.

[Exeunt Dem. and Chi. bearing off the Nurse's body.]

Aar. Now to the Goths, as swift as swallow

flies;

There to dispose this treasure in mine arms,

And secretly to greet the empress' friends.

Come on, you thick-lipp'd slave, I'll bear you

hence;

For it is you that puts us to our shifts:

I'll make you feed on berries and on roots,

And feed on curds and whey, and suck the

And cabin in a cave, and bring you up

To be a warrior, and command a camp. [Exit.]

SCENE III. The same. A public place.

Enter TITUS, bearing arrows with letters at the ends of them; with him, MARCUS, young LUCIUS, PUBLIUS, SEMPRONIUS, CAIUS, and other Gentlemen, with bows.

Tit. Come, Marcus; come, kinsmen; this is the way.

Sir boy, now let me see your archery;

Look ye draw home enough, and 'tis there

straight.

Terras Astraea reliquit:

Be you remember'd, Marcus, she's gone, she's fled.

Sirs, take you to your tools. You, cousins,

shall

Go sound the ocean, and cast your nets;

Happily you may catch her in the sea;

Yet there's a little justice as at land:

No; Publius and Sempronius, you must do it;

'Tis you must dig with mattock and with spade,

And pierce the inmost centre of the earth:

when you come to Pluto's region,

you, deliver him this petition;

him: it is for justice and for aid.

And that it comes from old Andronicus,

Shaken with sorrows in ungrateful Rome.

Ah, Rome! Well, well; I made thee miserable

What time I threw the people's suffrages

On him that thus doth tyrannise o'er me.

Go, get you gone; and pray be careful all.

And leave you not a man-of-war unsearch'd:

This wicked emperor may have shipp'd her

hence;

And, kinsmen, then we may go pipe for justice.

Marc. O Publius, is not this a heavy case,

To see thy noble uncle thus distract?

Pub. Therefore, my lord, is highly us concerns

By day and night to attend him carefully,

And feed his humour kindly as we may,

Till time bestow some careful remedy.

Marc. Kinsmen, as our sorrow as our remedy,

Join with the Goths; and with unspiced war

Take wreak on Rome for this indignity,

And vengeance on the traitor Sempronius.

Tit. Publius, how now! how now, my masters!

What have you met with her?

Pub. No, my good lord; but Plato sends you word,

If you will have Revenge from hell, you shall:

Marry, for Justice, she is so employ'd.

He thinks, with Jove in heaven, or somewhere else,

So that perforce you must needs stay a time.

Tit. He doth me wrong to feed me with delays.

I'll dive into the burning lake below,

And pull her out of Acheron by the heels.

Marcus, we are but shrubs, no cedars we,

No big-boned men fram'd of the Cyclops' size

Yet metal, Marcus, steel to the very back.

But wrung with wrongs more than our backs can bear:

And, with there's no justice in earth nor hell,

We will solicit heaven and move the gods

To send down Justice for to wreak our wrongs.

Come, to this gear. You are a good archer,

Marcus; [He gives them the arrows.]

'Ad Jovem, that's for you: here, 'Ad Apollinem:'

'Ad Martem, that's for myself:

Here, boy, to Pallas: here, to Mercury:

To Saturn, Calus, not to Saturnine:

You were as good to shoot against the wind.

To it, boy! Marcus, loose when I bid.

O my word, I have written to effect;

There's not a god left unsolicited.

Marc. Kinamen, shoot all your shafts into

the court:

We will afflict the emperor in his pride.

Tit. Now, masters, draw. [They shoot.] O,

well said, Lucius!

Good boy, in Virgo's lap; give it Pallas.

Marc. My lord, I aim a mile beyond the moon;

Your letter is with Jupiter by this.

Tit. Ha, ha!

Publius, Publius, what hast thou done?

See, see, thou hast shot off one of Taurus'

horns.

Marc. This was the sport, my lord: when

Publius shot,

The Bull, being gall'd, gave Aries such a knock

That down fell both the Barn's horns in the court;

And who should find them but the empress'

villain!

His laugh'd, and told the Moor he should not oppose

But give them to his master for a present.

Tit. Why, these it goes: God give his lordship joy!

[Enter a Clown, with a basket, and two pigeons in it.]

News, news from heaven! Marcus, the post is

come.

Search what tidings! have you any letters?

What I have justice! what says Jupiter?

Clow. O, the gibbet-maker! he says that he has sent them down again, for the man must not be hang'd till the next week.

Tit. But what says Jupiter. I ask thee?

Clow. Alas, sir, I know not Jupiter; I never drank with him in all my life.

Tit. Why, villain, art not thou the carrier?

Clow. Ay, of my pigeons, sir; nothing else.

Tit. Why, dost thou not come from heaven?

Clow. From heaven! alas, sir, if never came there: God forbid I should be so bold to press to heaven in my young days. Why I am going with my pigeons to the tribunal place, to take up a matter of brawl betwixt my uncle and one of the imperial's men.

Marc. Why, sir, that is as fit as can be to serve for your oration; and let him deliver the pigeons to the emperor for you.

Tit. Tell me, can you deliver an oration to the emperor with a grace?

Clow. Nay, truly, sir, I could never say grace in all my life.

Tit. Sirrah, come hither: make no more ado,

But give your pigeons to the emperor:

By me thou shalt have justice at his hands.

Hold, hold; meanwhile here's money for thy charges.

Give me pen and ink. Sirrah, can you with a grace deliver a supplication?

Clow. Ay, sir.

Tit. Then here is a supplication for you.

And when you come to him, at the first approach you must kneel, then kiss his foot, then deliver up your pigeons, and then look for your reward. I'll be at hand, sir; see you do it bravely.

Clow. I warrant you, sir, let me alone.

Tit. Sirrah, hast thou a knife? come, let me see it.

Here, Marcus, fold it in the oration;

For thou hast made it like an humble suppliant.

And when thou hast given it the emperor,

Knock at my door, and tell me what he says.

Clow. God be with you, sir; I will.

Tit. Come, Marcus, let us go. Publius, follow me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. The same. Before the palace.

Enter SATURNINUS, TAMORA, DEMETRIUS,

CHIRON, Lords, and others. SATURNINUS with the arrows in his hand that TITUS shot.

Sat. Why, lords, what wrongs are these!

was ever seen

An emperor in Rome thus overborne.

Troubled, confronted thus; and, for the extent

Of equal justice, used in such contempt?

My lords, you know, as know the mighty

gods,

However these disturbers of our peace

Buz in the people's ears, there nought hath pass'd.

But even with law, against the wilful sons

Of old Andronicus. And what an if

His sorrows have so overweigh'd his wit,

Shall we be thus afflicted in his wrecks,

His fits, his frump, and his bitterness?

And now he writes to heaven for his redress:

See, here's to Jove, and this to Mercury!

This to Apollo; this to the god of war;

Sweet scrolls to fly about the streets of Rome! What's this but libelling against the senate, And blaspheming our injustices every where! A goodly humour, is it not, my lords? As who would say, in Rome no justice were. So But if I live, his reigned ecstasies Shall be no shelter to these outrages: But he and his shall know that justice lives In Saturninus' health, whom, if she sleep, He'll so awake as she in fury shall Cut out the proud conspirator that lives.

Tam. My gracious lord, my lovely Saturnine,

Lord of my life, commander of my thoughts, Calm thee, and bear the faults of Titus' age, The effects of sorrow for his valiant sons, Whose loss hath pierced him deep and scar'd his heart;

And rather comfort his distressed plight Than prosecute the meanest or the best For these contempta. [Aside] Why, thus it shall become High-witted Tamora to gloss with all: But, Titus, I have touch'd thee to the quick, Thy life-blood out. If Aaron now be wise, Then is all safe, the anchor's in the port.

Enter Clown.

How now, good fellow! wouldst thou speak with us?

Cl. Yea, forsooth, an your misterahip be imperial.

Tam. Express I am, but yonder sits the emperor.

Cl. 'Tis he, God and Saint Stephen give you good den: I have brought you a letter and a couple of pigeons here.

[Saturninus reads the letter.]

Sat. Go, take him away, and hang him presently.

Cl. How much money must I have?

Tam. Come, sirrah, you must be hanged.

Cl. Hanged! by'r lady, then I have brought up a neck to a fair end. [Exit, guarded.]

Sat. Despiteful and intolerable wrongs! So Shall I endure this monstrous villany?

I know from whence this same device proceeds: May this be borne?—as if his traitorous sons,

That died by law for murder of our brother, Have by my means been butcher'd wrongfully!

Go, drag the villain hither by the hair; Nor age nor honour shall shape privilege:

For this proud mock I'll be thy slaughter-man; I, thy frantic wretch, that helpst to make me great.

In hope thyself should govern Rome and me. So

Enter EMILIUS.

What news with thee, Emilius?

Emil. Arm, arm, my lord!—Rome never had more cause.

's Goths have gather'd head; and with a power

Of high-resolved men, bent to the spoil, They hither march again, under conduct

! Lucius, son to old Andronicus; Who threats, in course of this revenge, to do

As much as ever Cornelius did.

Sat. Is warlike Lucius, general of the Goths? These tidings nip me, and I hang the head. As flowers with frost or grass beat down with storms:

Ay, now begin our sorrows to approach: 'Tis he the common people love so much; Myself hath often overheard them say, When I have walked like a private man, That Lucius' banishment was wrongfully, And they have wish'd that Lucius were their emperor.

Tam. Why should you fear? is not your city strong?

Sat. Ay, but the citizens favour Lucius, And will revolt from me to succour him.

Tam. King, be thy thoughts imperious, like thy name.

Is the sun dimm'd, that gnats do fly in it? The eagle suffers little birds to sing,

And is not careful what they mean thereby, Knowing that with the shadow of his wings He can at pleasure stint their melody;

Even so mayst thou the giddy men of Rome. Then cheer thy spirit: for know, thou emperor, I will enchant the old Andronicus

With words more sweet, and yet more dangerous, Than baits to fish, or honey-stalks to sheep, or

When as the one is wounded with the bait, The other rotted with delicious feed.

Sat. But he will not entreat his son for us.

Tam. If Tamora entreat him, then he will: For I can smooth and fill his aged ear

With golden promises: that, were his heart Almost impregnable, his old ears deaf,

Yet should both ear and heart obey my tongue. [To Emilius] Go thou before, be our ambassador:

Say that the emperor requests a parley (Of warlike Lucius, and appoint the meeting Even at his father's house, the old Andronicus.)

Sat. Emilius, do this message honourably; And if he stand on hostage for his safety,

Bid him demand what pledge will please him best.

Emil. Your bidding shall I do effectually.

Tam. Now will I to that old Andronicus, and temper him with all the art I have, to pluck proud Lucius from the warlike Goths. And now, sweet emperor, be blithe again, and bury all thy fear in my devices.

Sat. Then go successfully, and plead to him.

[Exit.]

ACT V.

SCENE I. Plains near Rome.

Enter LUCIUS with an army of Goths, with drum and colours.

Luc. Approved warriors, and my chosen friends,

I have received letters from great Rome, Which signify what hate they bear their em-how dangerous of our sight they are. Therefore, great lords, be ye your duty in importance and importance of your names. And wherein Rome hath done you wrong,

Let him make treble satisfaction.

First Goth. Brave slip, sprung from the great Andronicus,
Whose name was once our terror, now our comfort;

Whose high exploits and honourable deeds
Ingrateful Rome requites with foul contempt;
Be bold in us: we'll follow where thou lead'st,
Like stinging bees in hottest summer's day
Led by their master to the flower'd fields,
And be avenged on cursed Tamora.

All the Goths. And as he saith, so say we all with him.

Luc. I humbly thank him, and I thank you all.

But who comes here, led by a lusty Goth?

Enter a Goth, leading AARON with his Child in his arms.

Sec. Goth. Renowned Lucius, from our troops I stray'd

To gaze upon a ruinous monastery;
And, as I earnestly did fix mine eye
Upon the wasted building, suddenly
I heard a child cry underneath a wall.

I made unto the noise; when soon I heard
The crying babe controll'd with this discourse:
'Peace, tawny slave, half me and half thy dam!

Did not thy hue lewray whose brat thou art,
Had nature lent thee but thy mother's look,

Villain, thou mightest have been an emperor;
But where the bull and cow are both milk-

white,
They never do beget a coal-black calf.

Peace, villain, peace!'—even thus he rates the babe,—

'For I must bear thee to a trusty Goth;
Who, when he knows thou art the empress'

babe,
Will hold thee dearly for thy mother's sake.'

With this, my weapon drawn, I rush'd upon him, Surprised him suddenly, and brought him

hither,
To use as you think needful of the man.

Luc. O worthy Goth, this is the incarnate devil

That robb'd Andronicus of his good hand;
This is the pearl that pleased your empress' eye,

And here's the base fruit of his burning lust.
Say, wall-eyed slave, whither wouldst thou convey

This growing image of thy fiend-like face?

Why dost not speak? what, deaf? not a word?
A halber, soldiers! hang him on this tree,

And by his side his fruit of bastardy.
Aar. Touch not the boy; he is of royal

blood.
Luc. Too like the sire for ever being good.

First hang the child, that he may see it sprawl;
A sight to vex the father's soul withal.

Get me a ladder.
[A ladder brought, which Aaron is made to ascend.]

Aar. Lucius, save the child,
And bear it from me to the empress.

How do this? I'll show thee wondrous things,
That shall much advantage thee to hear:

If thou wilt not, befall what may befall,
I'll speak no more but 'Vengeance rot you all!'

Luc. Say on: an if it please me which thou speak'st.

Thy child shall live, and I will see it nourish'd.
Aar. An if it please thee! why, assure thee,

Lucius,
'Twill vex thy soul to hear what I shall speak;

For I must talk of murders, rapes and massacres,
Acts of black night, abominable deeds.

Complots of mischief, treason, villanies
Ruthful to hear, yet piteously perform'd:

And this shall all be buried by my death,
Unless thou swear to me my child shall live.

Luc. Tell on thy mind; I say thy child shall live.
Aar. Swear that he shall, and then I will begin.

Luc. Who should I swear by? thou believest

no god:
That granted, how canst thou believe an oath?

Aar. What if I do not? as, indeed, I do not;
Yet, for I know thou art religious

And hast a thing within thee called conscience,
With twenty popish tricks and ceremonies,

Which I have seen thee careful to observe,
Therefore I urge thy oath: for that I know

An idiot holds his bauble for a god
And keeps the oath which by that god he swears.

To that I'll urge him: therefore thou shalt vow

By that same god, what god so'er it be,
That thou adorest and hast in reverence,

To save my boy, to nourish and bring him up;
Or else I will discover nought to thee.

Luc. Even by my god I swear to thee I will.
Aar. First know thou, I begot him on the empress.

Luc. O most insatiate and luxurious woman!

Aar. Tut, Lucius, this was but a deed of charity

To that which thou shalt hear of me anon.
'Twas her two sons that murder'd Bassianus;

They cut thy sister's tongue and ravish'd her
And cut her hands and trimm'd her as thou saw'st.

Luc. O detestable villain! call'st thou that trimming?

Aar. Why, she was wash'd and cut and trimm'd, and 'twas

Trim sport for them that had the doing of it.

Luc. O barbarous, beastly villains, like thyself!

Aar. Indeed, I was their tutor to instruct
them:

That coddling spirit had they from their mother,
As sure a card as ever won the set;

That bloody mind, I think, they learn'd of me,
As true a dog as ever fought at head.

Well, let my deeds be witness of my worth.
I train'd thy brethren to that guileful hole

Where the dead corpse of Bassianus lay:
I wrote the letter that thy father found

And hid the gold within the letter mention'd,
Confederate with the queen and her two sons.

And what not done, that thou hast cause to rue Wherein I had no stroke of—
I play'd the chamber for thy!

And, when I had it, drew myself apart
And almost broke my heart with extreme laughter:

I pry'd me through the crevice of a wall
When, for his hand, he had his two sons' heads;
Behold his tears, and laugh'd so heartily,
That both mine eyes were rainy like to his:
And when I told the empress of this sport,
She swoon'd almost at my pleasing tale,
And for my tidings gave me twenty kisses. 120

First Goth. What, canst thou say all this, and never blush?

Aar. Ay, like a black dog, as the saying is.
Luc. Art thou not sorry for these heinous deeds?

Aar. Ay, that I had not done a thousand
more.

Even now I curse the day—and yet, I think,
Few come within the compass of my curse—
Wherein I did not some notorious ill,
As kill a man, or else devise his death,
Ravish a maid, or plot the way to do it,
Accuse some innocent and forswear myself, 130
Set deadly enmity between two friends,
† Make poor men's cattle break their necks;
Set fire on barns and hay-stacks in the night,
And bid the owners quench them with their
tears.

Oft have I digg'd up dead men from their graves,
And set them upright at their dear friends'
doors,

Even when their sorrows almost were forgot;
And on their skins, as on the bark of trees,
Have with my knife carved in Roman letters,
'Let not your sorrow die, though I am dead.'
Tut, I have done a thousand dreadful things
As willingly as one would kill a fly,
And nothing grieves me heartily indeed
But that I cannot do ten thousand more.

Luc. Bring down the devil; for he must not
die

So sweet a death as hanging presently.
Aar. If there be devils, would I were a devil,

To live and burn in everlasting fire,
So I might have your company in hell,
But to torment you with my bitter tongue! 150

Luc. Sirs, stop his mouth, and let him speak
no more.

Enter a Goth.

Third Goth. My lord, there is a messenger
from Rome

Desires to be admitted to your presence.

Luc. Let him come near.

Enter ÆMILIUS.

Welcome, Æmilius: what's the news from
Rome?

Æmil. Lord Lucius, and you princes of the Goths,

The Roman emperor greets you all by me;
And, for he understands you are in arms,

He craves a parley at your father's house.
Willing you to demand your hostages

And that they shall be immediately deliver'd.

First Goth. What says our father?

Luc. Æmilius, let the emperor give his pledges

Unto my father and my uncle Marcus,
And we will come. March away. [Exit.]

SCENE II. Rome. Before Titus's house.

Enter TAMORA, DEMETRIUS, and CHIRON, disguised.

Tam. Thus, in this strange and sad habiliment,

I will encounter with Andronicus,
And say I am Revenge, sent from below
To join with him and right his heinous wrongs.
Knock at his study, where, they say, he keeps,
To ruminate strange plots of dire revenge;
Tell him Revenge is come to join with him,
And work confusion on his enemies.

[They knock.]

Enter TITUS, above.

Tit. Who doth molest my contemplation?
Is it your trick to make me open the door, 10
That so my sad decrees may fly away,
And all my study be to no effect?

You are deceived: for what I mean to do
See here in bloody lines I have set down;
And what is written shall be executed.

Tam. Titus, I am come to talk with thee.

Tit. No, not a word; how can I grace my talk,

Wanting a hand to give it action?

Thou hast the odds of me; therefore no more.

Tam. If thou didst know me, thou wouldst talk with me.

Tit. I am not mad; I know thee well
enough;

Witness this wretched stump, witness these crimson lines;

Witness these trenches made by grief and care;

Witness the tiring day and heavy night;

Witness all sorrow, that I know thee well

For our proud empress, mighty Tamora:

Is not thy coming for my other hand?

Tam. Know, thou sad man, I am not
Tamora;

She is thy enemy, and I thy friend:

I am Revenge: sent from the infernal kingdom,
To ease the gnawing vulture of thy mind, 30

By working wreakful vengeance on thy foes.
Come down, and welcome me to this world's

light;

Confer with me of murder and of death:

There's not a hollow save or lurking-place,

No vast obscurity or misty vale,

Where bloody murder or detested rape

Can couch for fear, but I will find them out;

And in their ears tell them my dreadful name,

Revenge, which makes the foul offender quake.

Tit. Art thou Revenge? and art thou sent
to me,

To be a torment to mine enemies?

Tam. I am; therefore come down, and welcome me.

Tit. Do me some service, ere I come to thee.

Go, by thy side where Rape and Murder dwell;
Now give some surer proof than words do bring;
Slab them; or tear them on thy sacred wounds.

And then I'll come and be thy waggoner,
And whirl along with thee about the globe.
Provide these two proper palfreys, black as jet,
To hale thy vengeful waggon swift away;
And find out murderers in their guilty caves:
And when thy car is loaden with their heads,
I will dismount, and by the waggon-wheel
Trot like a servile footman, all day long.
Even from Hyperion's rising in the east
Until his very downfall in the sea:
And day by day I'll do this heavy task,
So thou destroy Rapine and Murder there.

Tam. These are my ministers, and come
with me.

Tit. Are these thy ministers! what are they call'd?

Tam. Rapine and Murder; therefore called
so.

Cause they take vengeance of such kind of men.

Tit. Good Lord, how like the empress' sons they are!

And you, the empress! but we worldly men
Have miserable, mad, mistaking eyes.

O sweet Revenge, now do I come to thee;
And, if one arm's embracement will content
thee,

I will embrace thee in it by and by. [Exit above.]

Tam. This closing with him fits his lunacy:
Whatever I forge to feed his brain-sick fits,

Do you uphold and maintain in your speeches,
For now he firmly takes me for Revenge;

And, being credulous in this mad thought,
I'll make him send for Lucius his son;

And, whilst I at a banquet hold him sure,
I'll find some cunning practice out of hand,

To scatter and disperse the giddy Goths,
Or, at the least, make them his enemies.

See, here he comes, and I must ply my theme.

Enter Titus below.

Tit. Long have I been forlorn, and all for
thee:

Welcome, dread Fury, to my woful house:
Rapine and Murder, you are welcome too.

How like the empress and her sons you are!
Well are you fitted, had you but a Moor:

Could not all hell afford you such a devil?
For well I wot the empress never wags

But in her company there is a Moor;
And, would you represent our queen aright,

It were convenient you had such a devil:
But welcome, as you are. What shall we do?

Tam. What wouldst thou have us do, Andro-nicus!

Dem. Show me a murderer, I'll deal with
him.

Tit. Show me a villain that hath done a rape.

And I am sent to be revenged on him.

Tam. Show me a thousand that have done the wrong.

And I will be revenged on them all.

Tit. Walk round about the wicked streets of
Rome,

And when thou find'st a man that's like thy brother, kill him; he's a murderer.

Go thou with him; and when it is thy hap
To find another that is like to thee,

Good Rapine, stab him; he's a ravisher.
Go thou with them; and in the emperor's court

There is a queen, attended by a Moor
Well mayst thou know her by thy proportion.

For up and down she doth resemble!

I pray thee, do on them some violent death;
They have been violent to me and mine.

Tam. Well hast thou lesson'd us; I shall we do.

But would it please thee, good And
To send for Lucius, thy thrice-valiant son,

Who leads towards Rome a band of
Goths,

And bid him come and banquet at thy house;
When he is here, even at thy solemn feast,

I will bring in the empress and her sons,
The emperor himself and all thy foes:

And at thy mercy shall they stoop and kneel,
And on them shalt thou ease thy angry heart.

What says Andronicus to this device?

Tit. Marcus, my brother! 'tis sad Titus calls.

Enter MARCUS.

Go, gentle Marcus, to thy nephew Lucius;
Thou shalt inquire him out among the Goths;

Bid him repair to me, and bring with him
Some of the chiefest princes of the Goths;

Bid him encamp his soldiers where they are:
Tell him the emperor and the empress too

Feast at my house, and he shall feast with
them.

This do thou for my love; and so let him,
As he regards his aged father's life.

Marc. This will I do, and soon return again.
[Exit.]

Tam. Now will I hence about thy business,
And take my ministers along with me.

Tit. Nay, nay, let Rape and Murder stay
with me;

Or else I'll call my brother back again,
And cleave to no revenge but Lucius.

Tam. [Aside to her sons.] What say you,
boys! will you bide with him,

Whiles I go tell my lord the emperor
How I have govern'd our determined jest?

Yield to his humour, smooth and speak him
fair,

And tarry with him till I turn again.

Tit. [Aside.] I know them all, though they suppose me mad.

And will o'erreach them in their own devices:
A pair of cursed hell-hounds and their dam!

Dem. Madam, depart at pleasure; leave us
here.

Tam. Farewell, Andronicus: Revenge now
To lay a complot to betray thy foe.

Tit. I know thou dost;
farewell.

Tit. Tell us, old man, how shall we play it?

Tit. Yes, I have wrought another for you to do.
Publish, come killing, crying, and valour!

Enter PUBLIUS and others.

Pub. What is your will?

Tit. Know you these two?

Pub. The empress' sons, I take them, Chiron and Demetrius.

Tit. Phe, Publius, fie! thou art too much deceived;

It have you heard me wish for such an hour,
And now I find it; therefore bind them sure,
And stop their mouths, if they begin to cry.

*[Exit.
[Publius, &c. lay hold on Chiron and Demetrius.]*

Châ. Villains, forbear! we are the empress'
sons.

Pub. And therefore do we what we are commanded.

*[Stop close their mouths, let them not speak a
word.]*

Is he sure bound? look that you bind them
fast.

[Re-enter TITUS, with LAVINIA; he bearing a knife, and she a basin.]

Tit. Come, come, Lavinia; look, thy foes are bound.

Sirs, stop their mouths, let them not speak to
me;

But let them hear what fearful words I utter.
O villains, Chiron and Demetrius!

Here stands the spring whom you have stain'd with mud.

It is goodly summer with your winter mix'd.
You kill'd her husband, and for that vile fault

Two of her brothers were condemn'd to death,
My hand cut off and made a merry jest;

With her sweet hands, her tongue, and that more dear

An hands or tongue, her spotless chastity,
Inhuman traitors, you constrain'd and forced.

What would you say, if I should let you speak?
Villains, for shame you could not beg for grace.

Wretches! how I mean to martyr you.
This one hand yet is left to cut your throats,

Whilst that Lavinia 'tween her stumps doth hold

A basin that receives your guilty blood.
You know your mother means to feast with

me,
And calls herself Revenge, and thinks me
mad:

Dark, villains! I will grind your bones to dust with your blood and it I'll make a paste,

And of the paste a coffin I will rear;
I'll make two pasties of your shameful heads,

And bid that strumpet, your unhallow'd dam,
Sit to the earth swallow her own increase.

Is the feast that I have bid her to,
At this banquet she shall surfeit on;

Worse than Phaedra you and my daughter,
Worse than Phaedra I will be revenged:

Now prepare your banquet. Lavinia, come,
We eat their flesh.

Receive the blood: and when that they are
dead,

Let me go grind their bones to powder small
And with this hateful liquor temper it;

And in that paste let their vile heads be baked.
Come, come, be every one officious

To make this banquet; which I wish may prove

More stern and bloody than the Centaurs' feast.
So, now bring them in, for I'll play the cook;

And see them ready 'gainst their mother comes.
[Exeunt, bearing the dead bodies.]

SCENE III. Court of Titus's house. A banquet set out.

Enter LUCIUS, MARCUS, and Goths, with AARON prisoner.

Luc. Uncle Marcus, since it is my father's
mind

That I repair to Rome, I am content.

First Goth. And ours with thine, besail what fortune will.

Luc. Good uncle, take you in this barbarous Moor.

This ravenous tiger, this accursed devil;
Let him receive no sustenance, fester him,

Till he be brought unto the empress' face,
For testimony of her foul proceedings:

And see the ambush of our friends be strong;
I fear the emperor means no good to us.

Aar. Some devil whisper curses in mine
ear,

And prompt me, that my tongue may utter
forth

The venomous malice of my swelling heart!

Luc. Away, inhuman dog! unhallow'd slave!
Sirs, help our uncle to convey him in.

[Exeunt Goths, with Aaron. Flourish within.]

The trumpets show the emperor is at hand.

Enter SATURNINUS and TAMORA, with ÆMILIUS, Tribunes, Senators, and others.

Sat. What, hath the firmament more sons than one?

Luc. What boasts it thee to call thyself a
sun?

Marc. Rome's emperor, and nephew, break
the parle;

Those quarrels must be quietly debated.
The feast is ready, which the careful Titus

Hath ordain'd to an honourable end.
For peace, for love, for league, and good to

Rome:
Please you, therefore, draw nigh, and take your places.

Sat. Marcus, we will.
[Hautboys sound. The Company sit down at table.]

Enter TITUS dressed like a Cook. LAVINIA, veiled, young LUCIUS, and others. TITUS places the dishes on the table.

Tit. Welcome, my gracious lord; welcome,
dread queen;

Welcome, ye worthy Goths; welcome, Lucius;
And welcome all; although the feast be poor.

Twill fill your stomachs; please you eat of it.

Sat. Why art thou thus attired, Andronicus?

Tit. Because I would be sure to have all well.

To entertain your highness and your empress.

Tam. We are beholding to you, good Andronicus.

Tit. An if your highness knew my heart, you were.

My lord the emperor, resolve me this:

Was it well done of rash Virginius

To slay his daughter with his own right hand,

Because she was enforced, stain'd, and deflower'd?

Sat. It was, Andronicus.

Tit. Your reason, mighty lord!

Sat. Because the girl should not survive her

shame,

And by her presence still renew his sorrows.

Tit. A reason mighty, strong, and effectual;

A pattern, precedent, and lively warrant,

For me, most wretched, to perform the like.

Die, die, Lavinia, and thy shame with thee;

[Kills Lavinia.]

And, with thy shame, thy father's sorrow die!

Sat. What hast thou done, unnatural and unkind!

Tit. Kill'd her, for whom my tears have made me blind.

I am as woful as Virginius was,

And have a thousand times more cause than he

To do this outrage: and it now is done.

Sat. What, was she ravish'd? tell who did the deed.

Tit. Will't please you eat? I will't please your highness feed?

Tam. Why hast thou slain thine only daughter thus?

Tit. Not I; 'twas Chiron and Demetrius:

They ravish'd her, and cut away her tongue;

And they, 'twas they, that did her all this

wrong.

Sat. Go fetch them hither to us presently.

Tit. Why, there they are both, baked in that pie.

Whereof their mother daintily hath fed,

Feeding the flesh that she herself hath bred.

The true, 'tis true; witness my knife's sharp

point.

[Kills Tamora.]

Sat. Die, frantic wretch, for this accursed

deed!

[Kills Titus.]

Luc. Can the son's eye behold his father

bleed!

These's meed for meed, death for a deadly deed!

[Kills Saturninus. A great tumult.]

Lucius, Marcus, and others go up into the balcony.

Marc. You and-faced men, people and sons

of Rome,

Be woful, sorrow'd, like a flight of fowl

By winds and high tempestuous gusts,

I teach you how to knit again

Fractur'd corn into one mutual sheaf,

As broken limbs again into one body;

As Rome herself be knit into herself,

As the weak mighty kingdoms court us to,

As Rome's broken and desperate outway,

Shall be our way to our own ruin.

But if my frosty signs and chaps of age,

Grave witnesses of true experience,

Cannot induce you to attend my words,

[To Lucius] Speak, Rome's dear friend, as erst

our ancestor,

When with his solemn tongue he did discourse

To love-sick Dido's sad attending ear

The story of that baleful burning night

When subtle Greeks surprised King Priam's

Troy,

Tell us what Sinon hath bewitch'd our ears,

Or who hath brought the fatal engine in

That gives our Troy, our Rome, the devil wound.

My heart is not compact of flint nor steel;

Nor can I utter all our bitter grief.

But floods of tears will drown my oratory,

And break my utterance, even in the time

When it should move you to attend me most,

Lending your kind commiseration.

Here is a captain, let him tell the tale;

Your hearts will throb and weep to hear him

speak.

Luc. Then, noble auditory, be it known to

you,

That cursed Chiron and Demetrius

Were they that murdered our emperor's brother

And they it were that ravish'd our sister:

For their fell faults our brothers were beheld:

Our father's tears despaired, and basely coud'nd

Of that true hand that fought Rome's quarrel

out,

And sent her enemies unto the grave.

Lastly, myself unkindly banish'd,

The gates shut on me, and turn'd weeping out,

To beg relief among Rome's enemies;

Who drown'd their enmity in my true tears,

And oped their arms to embrace me as

friend.

I am the turned forth, be it known to you,

That have preserved her welfare in my blood,

And from her bosom took the enemy's point,

Sheathing the steel in my adventurous body.

Alas, you know I am no vaunter, I;

My scars can witness, dumb although they are,

That my report is just and full of truth.

But, soft! methinks I do digress too much,

Citing my worthless praise: O, pardon me!

For when no friends are by, men praise themselves.

Marc. Now is my turn to speak. Behold

this child:

[Pointing to the Child in the arms of an Attendant.]

Of this was Tamora delivered:

The issue of an irreligious Moor,

Chief architect and plotter of these woes:

The villain is alive in Titus' house,

And as he is, to witness this is true.

Now judge what cause had Titus to revenge

These wrongs, unthankable, past patience,

Or more than any living man could bear.

Now you have heard the truth, what say ye

Romans?

Have we done ought amiss,—show us where

And, from the place where you behold us no

The poor remainder of Andronicus!

Will, hand in hand, all headlong cast us down

And on the ragged stones beat forth our brains

And make a mutual closure of our house.
 Speak, Romans, speak; and if you say we
 shall,

Lo, hand in hand, Lucius and I will fall.
Emil. Come, come, thou reverend man of
 Rome,

And bring our emperor gently in thy hand,
 Lucius our emperor; for well I know
 The common voice do cry it shall be so. 140

All. Lucius, all hail, Rome's royal emperor!
Marc. Go, go into old Titus' sorrowful house.

[To Attendants.]

And hither hale that misbelieving Moor,
 To be adjudged some direful slaughtering death,
 As punishment for his most wicked life.

[Exeunt Attendants.]

LUCIUS, MARCUS, and the others descend.

All. Lucius, all hail, Rome's gracious governor!

Luc. Thanks, gentle Romans: may I govern
 so,

To heal Rome's harms, and wipe away her
 woe!

But, gentle people, give me aim awhile,
 For nature puts me to a heavy task: 150

Stand all aloof: but, uncle, draw you near,
 To shed obsequious tears upon this trunk.

O, take this warm kiss on thy pale cold lips,
 [Kissing Titus.]

These sorrowful drops upon thy blood-stain'd
 face,

The last true duties of thy noble son!
Marc. Tear for tear, and loving kiss for kiss,

Thy brother Marcus tenders on thy lips:
 O, were the sum of these that I should pay

Countless and infinite, yet would I pay them!
Luc. Come hither, boy; come, come, and learn of us 160

To melt in showers: thy grandsire loved thee
 well:

Many a time he danced thee on his knee,
 Sung thee asleep, his loving breast thy pillow;

Many a matter hath he told to thee,
 Meet and agreeing with thine infancy;

In that respect, thou, like a loving child,
 Shed yet some small drops from thy tender
 spring,

Because kind nature doth require it so:
 Friends should associate friends in grief and
 woe: 169

Bid him farewell; commit him to the grave!
 Do him that kindness, and take leave of him.

Young Luc. O grandsire, grandsire! even with all my heart

Would I were dead, so you did live again!
 O Lord, I cannot speak to him for weeping;

My tears will choke me, if I open my mouth.

Re-enter Attendants with AARON.

Em. You sad Andronici, have done with
 woe:

Give sentence on this execrable wretch,
 That hath been breeder of these dire events.

Luc. Set him breast-deep in earth, and famish him;

There let him stand, and rave, and cry for food: 180

If any one relieves or pities him,
 For the offence he dies. This is our doom:

Some stay to see him fasten'd in the earth.
Aar. O, why should wrath be mute, and fury dumb?

I am no baby, I, that with base prayers
 I should repent the evils I have done:

Ten thousand worse than ever yet I did
 Would I perform, if I might have my will:

If one good deed in all my life I did,
 I do repent it from my very soul. 190

Luc. Some loving friends convey the emperor hence,

And give him burial in his father's grave:
 My father and Lavinia shall forthwith

Be closed in our household's monument.
 As for that heinous tiger, Tamora,

No funeral rite, nor man in mourning weeds,
 No mournful bell shall ring her burial;

But throw her forth to beasts and birds of prey:

Her life was beast-like, and devoid of pity;
 And, being so, shall have like want of pity. 200

See justice done on Aaron, that damn'd Moor,
 By whom our heavy haps had their beginning:

Then, afterwards, to order well the state,
 That like events may ne'er it ruinate. [Exeunt.]

SCENE: Verona; Mantua.

PROLOGUE.

Two households, both alike in dignity,
In fair Verona, where we lay our scene,
From ancient grudge break to new mutiny,
Where civil blood makes civil hands unclean.
From forth the fatal loins of these two foes
A pair of star-cross'd lovers take their life;
Whose misadventured piteous overthrows
Do with their death bury their parents' strife.
The fearful passage of their death-mark'd love,
And the continuance of their parents' rage,
Which, but their children's end, nought could remove,
Is now the two hours' traffic of our stage;
The which if you with patient ears attend,
What here shall miss, our toil shall strive to mend.

ACT I

SCENE I. Verona. A public place.

Enter SAMPSON and GREGORY, of the house of Capulet, armed with swords and bucklers.

Sam. Gregory, o' my word, we'll not carry coals.

Gre. No, but then we should be colliers.

Sam. I know, an we be in choler, we'll draw.

Gre. Ay, while you live, draw your neck out o' the collar.

Sam. I draw quickly, being moved.

Gre. I draw not quickly moved to fight.

Sam. A dog of the house of Montague moves me.

Gre. To move is to stir; and to be valiant is to stand: therefore, if thou art moved, thou runn'st away.

Sam. A dog of that house shall move me to stand: I will take the wall of any man or maid of Montague's.

Gre. That shows thee a weak slave; for the weakest goes to the wall.

Sam. True; and therefore women, being the weaker vessels, are ever thrust to the wall: therefore I will push Montague's men from the wall, and thrust his maids to the wall.

Gre. The quarrel is between our masters and us their men.

Sam. 'Tis all one, I will show myself a tyrant: when I have fought with the men, I will be cruel with the maids, and cut off their heads.

Gre. The heads of the maids!

Sam. Ay, the heads of the maids, or their maidenheads; take it in what sense thou wilt.

Gre. They must take it in sense that feel it.

Sam. Me they shall feel while I am able to stand: and 'tis known I am a pretty piece of flesh.

Gre. 'Tis well thou art not fish: if thou hadst, thou hadst been poor John. Draw thy tool; here comes two of the house of the Montagues.

Sam. My naked weapon is out: quarrel, I will back thee.

Gre. How! turn thy back and run!

Sam. Fear me not.

Gre. No, marry; I fear thee!

Sam. Let us take the law of our sides; let them begin.

Gre. I will frown as I pass by, and let them take it as they list.

Sam. Nay, as they dare. I will bite my thumb at them; which is a disgrace to them, if they bear it.

Enter ABRAHAM and BALTHASAR.

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?

Sam. I do bite my thumb, sir.

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?

Sam. [Aside to Gre.] Is the law of our side, if I say ay?

Gre. No.

Sam. No, sir, I do not bite my thumb at you, sir, but I bite my thumb, sir.

Gre. Do you quarrel, sir?

Sam. Quarrel, sir! no, sir.

Sam. If you do, sir, I am for you: I serve as good a man as you.

Abr. No better.

Sam. Well, sir.

Gre. Say 'better': here comes one of my master's kinsmen.

Sam. Yes, better, sir.

Abr. You lie.

Sam. Draw, if you be men. Gregory, remember thy swashing blow. [They fight.]

Enter BENVOLIO.

Ben. Part, fools!
Put up your swords; you know not what you do.
[Beats down their swords.]

Enter TYBALT.

Tyb. What, art thou drawn among these heartless hinds?

Turn thee, Benvollio, look upon thy death.

Ben. I do but keep the peace: put up thy sword,

Or manage it to part these men with me.

Tyb. What, drawn, and talk of peace? I hate the word,

As I hate hell, all Montagues, and thee:
[They fight.]

Enter several of both houses, who join the fray; then enter Citizens, with clubs.

First Cit. Clubs, bills, and partisans! strike!
beat them down!
own with the Capulets! down with the Montagues!

Enter CAPULET in his gown, and LADY CAPULET.

Cap. What noise is this? Give me my long sword, ho!

La. Cap. A crutch, a crutch! why call you for a sword?

Cap. My sword, I say! Old Montague is come,
and flourishes his blade in spite of me.

Enter MONTAGUE and LADY MONTAGUE.

Mon. Thou villain Capulet—Hold me not,
let me go.

La. Mon. Thou shalt not stir a foot to seek a foe.

Enter PRINCE, with Attendants.

Prin. Rebellious subjects, enemies to peace,
Profaners of this neighbour-stained steel,—
Will they not hear? What, ho! you men, you beasts,

That quench the fire of your pernicious rage
With purple fountains issuing from your veins,
On pain of torture, from those bloody hands
Throw your mistemper'd weapons to the ground,
And hear the sentence of your moved prince.

Three civil brawls, bred of an airy word,
By thee, old Capulet, and Montague,
Have thrice disturb'd the quiet of our streets,
And made Verona's ancient citizens
Cast by their grave beseeching ornaments,
To wield old partisans, in hands as old,
Canker'd with peace, to part your canker'd
hate:

If ever you disturb our streets again,
Your lives shall pay the forfeit of the peace.

For this time, all the rest depart away:
You, Capulet, shall go along with me:

And, Montague, come you this afternoon,
To know our further pleasure in this case,
To old Free-town, our common judgement-
place:

Once more, on pain of death, all men depart.

[Exeunt all but Montague, Lady Montague, and Benvollio.]

Mon. Who set this ancient quarrel new abroach?

Speak, nephew, were you by when it began?

Ben. Here were the servants of your adversary,

And yours, close fighting ere I did approach:
I drew to part them; in the instant came
The fiery Tybalt, with his sword prepared,
Which, as he breathed defiance to my ears,
He swung about his head and cut the winds,
Who nothing hurt withal hiss'd him in scorn:
While we were marching throut and blows,
Came more and more and fought on part and
part,

Till the prince came, who parted either part.

La. Mon. O, where is Romeo? saw you him
to-day?

Right glad I am he was not at this fray.

Ben. Madam, an hour before the watch-dog's
sun

Poor'd forth the golden window of the east,
A troubled mind drove me to walk abroad;
Where, underneath the grove of trees,
That westward rooteth from the city's side,
So early walking did I see your son:

Towards him I made, but he was ware of me,
And stole into the covert of the wood.

He is that wayward, still he takes the path
Of sorrow's crook, and makes the other man's

Desires his road, unless he please, he turns
As soon as spring the first green buds, he turns
And treads the path of sorrow's crook, and makes the other man's

Mos. Many a morning hath he there been seen,

With tears augmenting the fresh morning's dew,
Adding to clouds more clouds with his deep

But all so soon as the all-cheering sun
Should in the furthest east begin to draw

The shady curtains from Aurora's bed,
Away from light steals home my heavy son,

And private in his chamber pens himself,
Shuts up his windows, locks fair daylight out

And makes himself an artificial night:
Black and portentous must this humour prove,

Unless good counsel may the cause remove.

Ben. My noble uncle, do you know the cause?

Mos. I neither know it nor can learn of
him.

Ben. Have you importuned him by any means?

Mos. Both by myself and many other
friends:

But he, his own affections' counsellor,
Is to himself—I will not say how true—

But to himself so secret and so close,
So far from sounding and discovery,

As is the bud bit with an envious worm,
Ere he can spread his sweet leaves to the air,

Or dedicate his beauty to the sun.
Could we but learn from whence his sorrows grow,

We would as willingly give cure as know.

Enter ROMEO.

Ben. See, where he comes: so please you,
step aside;

I'll know his grievance, or be much denied.

Mos. I would thou wert so happy by thy
stay,

To hear true shrift. Come, madam, let's away.
(Exeunt Montague and Lady.)

Ben. Good morrow, cousin.

Rom. Is the day so young?

Ben. But new struck nine.

Rom. Ay me! sad hours seem long.

Was that my father that went hence so fast?

Ben. It was. What sadness lengthens
Romeo's hours?

Rom. Not having that, which, having,
makes them short.

Ben. In love?

Rom. Out—

Ben. Of love?

Rom. Out of her favour, where I am in love.

Ben. Alas, that love, so gentle in his view,
Should be so tyrannous and rough in proof!

Rom. Alas, that love, whose view is muffled
still,

Should, without grey, see pathways to his will!
Where shall we dine? O me! What fray was

here?

Yet tell me not, for I have heard it all.

Here's much to do with hate, but more with
love.

Why then, O brawling love! O loving hate!
O chiding blissful, O luxurious o! O that some may change that wretched look of woe

To one of hope and cheer and smile like mine!

Feather of lead, bright smoke, cold fire, sick
health!

Still-walking sleep, that is not what it is!

This love feel I, that feel no love in this.

Dost thou not laugh?

Ben. No, coz, I

Rom. Good heart, at what?

Ben. At thy good heart's oppression.

Rom. Why, such is love's transgression.

Griefs of mine own lie heavy in my breast,
Which thou wilt propagate, to have it press

With more of thine: this love lieth thou hast shown

Doth add more grief to too much of mine own.

Love is a smoke raised with the fume of sighs;

Being purged, a fire sparkling in lovers' eyes;

Being vex'd, a sea nourish'd with lovers' tears:

What is it else? a madness most discreet,
A choking gall and a preserving sweet.

Ben. Farewell, my coz.

Rom. Soft! I will go along;

As if you leave me so, you do me wrong.

Rom. Tut, I have lost myself; I am not
here;

This is not Romeo, he's some other where.

Ben. Tell me in sadness, who is that you
love.

Rom. What, shall I groan and tell thee?

Ben. Groan! why, no:

But sadly tell me who.

Rom. Bid a sick man in sadness make his
will:

Ah, word ill urg'd to one that is so ill!

In sadness, cousin, I do love a woman.

Ben. I aim'd so near, when I supposed you loved.

Rom. A right good mark-man! And she's fair I love.

Ben. A right fair mark, fair coz, is soonest hit.

Rom. Well, in that hit you miss: she'll not be hit

With Cupid's arrow; she hath Dian's wit;

And, in strong proof of chastity well arm'd,
From love's weak childish bow she lives un-harm'd.

She will not stay the siege of loving terms,
Nor bide the encounter of assailing eyes,

Nor ope her lap to saint-seducing gold:

O, she is rich in beauty, only poor,
That when she dies with beauty dies her store.

Ben. Then she hath sworn that she will still live chaste?

Rom. She hath, and in that sparing makes huge waste,

For beauty starved with her severity
Cuts beauty off from all posterity.

She is too fair, too wise, wisely too fair,
To merit bliss by making me despair:

She hath forsworn to love, and in that vow
Do I live dead that live to tell it now.

Ben. Be ruled by me, forget to think of her.

Rom. O, teach me how I should forget to think.

Ben. By giving liberty unto thine eyes;

Examine other beauties.

Rom. 'Tis the way

To call here exquisite, in question move

These happy masks that kiss fair ladies' brows
Being black put us in mind they hide the fair;
He that is stricken blind cannot forget
The precious treasure of his eyesight lost:
Show me a mistress that is passing fair,
What doth her beauty serve, but as a note
Where I may read who pass'd that passing fair?
Farewell: thou canst not teach me to forget.
Ben. I'll pay that doctrine, or else die in debt.

hath here writ. I must to the learned.—In good time.

Enter BENVOLIO and ROMEO.

Ben. Tut, man, one fire burns out another's burning,
One pain is lessen'd by another's anguish:
Turn giddy, and be ho by backward turning:
One desperate grief cures with another's anguish:

Take thou some new infection to thy eye, so
And the rank poison of the old will die.

Rom. Your plaitain-leaf is excellent for
that.

Ben. For what, I pray thee?

Rom. For your broken shin.

Ben. Why, Romeo, art thou mad?

Rom. Not mad, but bound more than a madman is;

Shut up in prison, kept without my food,
Whipped and tormented and—God-den, good fellow.

Serv. God gi' god-den. I pray, sir, can you
read?

Rom. Ay, mine own fortune in my misery.
Serv. Perhaps you have learned it without book: but, I pray, can you read any thing you
see?

Rom. Ay, if I know the letters and the language.

Serv. Ye may honestly: rest you merry!

Rom. Stay, fellow; I can read. [Reads.]

'Signior Martino and his wife and daughters;
County Anselmo and his beautiful sisters;
the lady widow of Vitruvio; Signior Pincutio and his lovely nieces; Mercutio and his brother Valentine; mine uncle Capulet, his wife, and daughters; my fair niece Rosaline; Livia; Signior Valentio and his cousin Tybalt; Lucio and the lively Helena.'

A fair assembly: whither should they come?

Serv. Up.

Rom. Whither?

Serv. To supper; to our house.

Rom. Whose house?

Serv. My master's.

Rom. Indeed, I should have asked you that
before.

Serv. Now I'll tell you without asking: my master is the great rich Capulet; and if you be not of the house of Montagues, I pray, come and crush a cup of wine. Rest you merry!

[Exit.]
Ben. At this same ancient feast of Capulet's
Supper the fair Rosaline whom thou so lovest,
With all the admired beauties of Verona:
Go thither; and, with untainted eye, so
Compare her face with some that I shall show,
And I will make thee think thy swan a crow.

Rom. When the devout religion of mine eye Maintains such falsehood, then turn tears to
fire;

And those who often drown'd could never die,
Transparent heretics, be burnt for liars!

One false man's sun shows but a new one Nearer my heart's core than the old one would begin.

SCENE II. A street.

Enter CAPULET, PARIS, and Servant.

Cap. But Montague is bound as well as I,
In penalty alike; and 'tis not hard, I think,
For men so old as we to keep the peace.

Par. Of honourable reckoning are you both;
And pity 'tis you lived at odds so long.
But now, my lord, what say you to my suit?

Cap. But saying o'er what I have said
before:

My child is yet a stranger in the world;
He hath not seen the change of fourteen years;
At two more summers wither in their pride, so
And we may think her ripe to be a bride.

Par. Younger than she are happy mothers
made.

Cap. And too soon marr'd are those so early
made.

He hath swallow'd all my hopes but she,
She is the hopeful lady of my earth:

But woo her, gentle Paris, get her heart,
She will to her consent be but a part;

And she agree, within her scope of choice
I'll give my consent and fair accomod' voice.

This night I hold an old accustomed feast, so Whereof I have invited many a guest,

Such as I love; and you, among the store,
One more, most welcome, makes my number
more.

At my poor house look to behold this night
A thousand stars that make dark heaven
light:

And comfort as do lusty young men feel
When well-apparell'd April on the heel
Of limping winter treads, even such delight
Among fresh fennel buds shall you this night
Inherit at my house; hear all, all see, so
And like her most whose merit most shall be:

Which on more view, of many mine being one,
May stand in number, though in reckoning none.

Go, sirrah, trouble about rough fair Verona; find those persons out Whose names are written there, and to them
say,

and welcome on their pleasure stay.

[Exit Capulet and Paris.]

Serv. Find them out whose names are written here! It is written, that the shoemaker should meddle with his yard, and the tailor with his last, the fisher with his pencil, and the drummer with his scall; but I am sent to find those persons whose names are here writ, and to never find what names the writing person

Des. 'Tis, you saw her fair, none else being
by Herself posited with herself in either eye;
But in that crystal scales let there be weigh'd
Your lady's love against some other maid
That I will show you shining at this feast,
And she shall scant show well that now shows
best.

Des. I'll go along, no such sight to be shown,
But to rejoice in splendour of mine own.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. A room in Capulet's house.

Enter LADY CAPULET and Nurse.

La. Cap. Nurse, where's my daughter?
Call her forth to me.

Nurse. Now, by my maidenhead, at twelve year old,
I bade her come. What, lamb! what, lady-
bird!
God forbid! Where's this girl! What, Juliet!

Enter JULIET.

Jul. How now! who calls?

Nurse. Your mother.
Jul. Madam, I am here.

What is your will?

La. Cap. This is the matter:—Nurse, give leave awhile.
We must talk in secret:—nurse, come back
again;

I have remember'd me, thou'st hear our counsel.
Thou know'st my daughter's of a pretty age.

Nurse. Faith, I can tell her age unto an hour.

La. Cap. She's not fourteen.

Nurse. I'll lay fourteen of my teeth,—
And yet, to my teen be it spoken, I have but four,—

She is not fourteen. How long is it now
To Lammastide?

La. Cap. A fortnight and odd days.

Nurse. Even or odd, of all days in the year,
Come Lammastide at night shall she be fourteen.

Susan and she—God rest all Christian souls!—
Were of an age; well, Susan is with God;
She was too good for me; but, as I said,

On Lammastide at night shall she be fourteen;
She shall see, marry; I remember it well.

'Tis since the earthquake now eleven years;
And she was wean'd,—I never shall forget it,—
On all the days of the year, upon that day:

For I had then laid wormwood to my dug,
Sitting in the sun under the dove-house wall;
My lord and you were then at Mantua:—
Nay, I do keep a brain:—but, as I said,

When it did taste the wormwood on the nipple
Of my dug and felt it bitter, pretty fool,
To see it suckle in, and fall out with the dug!

'Tis such the dove-house: 'twas no need,
I tell you,

To bid her teaze;

And since that time it is eleven years;
For she shall stand alone; nay, by the

She could have run and waddled all about;
For even the day before, she broke her brow;
And then my husband—God be with his soul!
A' was a merry man—took up the child:
'Yes,' quoth he, 'dost thou fall upon thy face?
Thou wilt fall backward when thou hast more wit;

Wilt thou not, Juliet?' and, by my holidays,
The pretty wretch left crying and said 'Ay.'
To see, now, how a jest shall come about!
I warrant, an I should live a thousand years,
I never should forget it: 'Wilt thou not, Juliet?'
quoth he;

And, pretty fool, it stinted and said 'Ay.'
La. Cap. Enough of this; I pray thee, hold
thy peace.

Nurse. Yes, madam: yet I cannot choose but laugh.

To think it should leave crying and say 'Ay.'
And yet, I warrant, it had upon its brow
A bump as big as a young cockerel's stone;
A parlous knock; and it cried bitterly:

'Yea,' quoth my husband, 'fall't upon thy
face!

Thou wilt fall backward when thou comest to age;

Wilt thou not, Juliet?' it stinted and said 'Ay.'
Jul. And stint thou too, I pray thee, nurse, say I.

Nurse. Peace, I have done. God mark thee to his grace!

Thou wast the prettiest babe that e'er I nursed!
An I might live to see thee married once, I have my wish.

La. Cap. Marry, that 'marry' is the very theme

I came to talk of. Tell me, daughter Juliet,

How stands your disposition to be married?

Jul. It is an honour that I dream not of.

Nurse. An honour! were not I thine old nurse,

I would say thou hadst suck'd wisdom from thy teat.

La. Cap. Well, think of marriage now younger than you,

Here in Verona, ladies of esteem,
Are made already mothers: by my count,

I was your mother much upon these years

That you are now a maid. Thus then in brief

The valiant Paris seeks you for his love.

Nurse. A man, young lady! lady, such
man

As all the world—why, he's a man of wax.

La. Cap. Verona's summer hath not such flower.

Nurse. Nay, he's a flower; in faith, a very flower.

La. Cap. What say you? can you love the gentleman?

This night you shall behold him at our feast;
Read o'er the volume of young Paris' face

And find delight with that which beauty's page
Examine every married lineament:

And see how one another looks content;
And what obscured in this fair volume lies

First written in the signature of his eye:
This precious book of love, this ambrosial

To beautify him, only lacks a cover:

The fish lives in the sea, and 'tis guide
For fair without the fair within to muse: 50
That book in many's eyes doth share the glory.
That in gold stamps looks in the golden story;
So shall you share all that he doth possess,
By having him, making yourself no less.

Nurse. No less! nay, bigger; women grow by men.

La. Cap. Speak briefly, can you like of Paris' love?

Jul. I'll look to like, if looking liking move:

But no more deep will I endart mine eye
Than your consent gives strength to make it
fly.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Madam, the guests are come, supper serv'd up, you called, my young lady asked for,
the nurse curs'd in the pantry, and every thing extremity. I must hence to wait; I beseech you, follow straight.

La. Cap. We follow thee. [Exit Servant.]
Juliet. the county stays.

Nurse. Go, girl, seek happy nights to happy days. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. A street.

Enter ROMEO, MERCUTIO, BENVOLIO, with one or six Maskers, Torch-bearers, and others.

Rom. What, shall this speech be spoke for our excuse?

Mer. shall we on without apology?

Ben. The date is out of such profligacy:
e'll have no Cupid hoodwink'd with a scarf,
earing a Tartar's painted bow of lath,
aring the ladies like a crow-keeper;

or no without-book prologue, faintly spoke for the prompter, for our entrance:

let them measure us by what they will;
we'll measure them a measure, and be gone. 10

Rom. Give me a torch: I am not for this ambling;

being but heavy, I will bear the light.

Mer. Nay, gentle Romeo, we must have you dance.

Rom. Not I, believe me: you have dancing shoes

With nimble soles: I have a soul of lead
so stakes me to the ground I cannot move.

Mer. You are a lover; borrow Cupid's
wings,

and soar with them above a common bound.

Rom. I am too sore enpierced with his shaft to soar with his light feathers, and so bound, so cannot bound a pitch above dull woe:

under love's heavy burden do I sink.

Mer. And, to sink in it, should you burden
love;

so great oppression for a tender thing.

Rom. Is love a tender thing? It is too rough, too rude, too boisterous, and it pricks like thorn.

Mer. If love be rough with you, be rough with love;

Prick love for pricking, and you beat love
down.

Give me a case to put my visage in:
A visor for a visor! what case?

What curious eye doth quote deformities? 50
Here are the beetle brows shall blush for me.

Ben. Come, knock and enter; and no sooner
in,

But every man betake him to his legs.

Rom. A torch for me: let wanton light of
heart

Tickle the senseless rushes with their heels;
For I am proverb'd with a grandiose phrase;

I'll be a candle-holder, and look on.
The game was ne'er so fair, and I am done.

Mer. Tut, dun's the mouse, the constable's own word:

If thou art dun, we'll draw thee from the mire
Of this sir-reverence love, wherein thou stick'st
Up to the ears. Come, we burn daylight, ho!

Rom. Nay, that's not so.

Mer. I mean, sir, in delay
We waste our lights in vain, like lamps by day.

Take our good meaning, for our judgement sits
Five times in that ere once in our five wits.

Rom. And we mean well in going to this mask;

But 'tis no wit to go.

Mer. Why, may one ask?

Rom. I dream'd a dream to-night.

Mer. And so did I. 50

Rom. Well, what was yours?

Mer. That dreamers often lie.

Rom. In bed asleep, while they do dream things true.

Mer. O, then, I see Queen Mab hath been
with you.

She is the fairies' midwife, and she comes
In shape no bigger than an agate-stone
(In the forefinger of an alderman,
Drawn with a team of little atomies
Athwart men's noses as they lie asleep;

Her waggon-spokes made of long spinners' legs,
The cover of the wings of grasshoppers, 60
The traces of the smallest spider's web,
The collars of the moonshine's watery beams,
Her whip of cricket's bone, the lash of film,
Her waggoner a small grey-coated gnat,
Not half so big as a round little worm
Prick'd from the lazy finger of a maid;

Her chariot is an empty hazel-nut
Made by the joiner squirrel or old grub,
Time out o' mind the fairies' coachmakers.

And in this state she gallops night by night
Through lovers' brains, and then they dream of
love;

O'er courtiers' knees, that dream on courtiers' knees
straight,

O'er lawyers' fingers, who straight dream on fees,

O'er ladies' lips, who straight on kisses dream,
Which oft the angry Mab with bladders plagues;

Because their breaths with sweetest fumes
are:

Sometimes she gallops o'er a courtier's nose,
And then dreams he of smelling out a lover

And sometimes comes she with a little glass
Tilting a person's nose as 't' were a horse,

ROMEO AND JULIET

[ACT]

Then dreams he of another benefice :
 Sometime she driveth o'er a soldier's neck,
 And then dreams he of cutting foreign throats,
 Of breaches, ambuscadoes, Spanish blades,
 Of healths five-fathom deep ; and then anon
 Drums in his ear, at which he starts and wakes,
 And being thus frighted swears a prayer or two
 And sleeps again. This is that very Mab
 That plats the manes of horses in the night,
 And bakes the elf-locks in foul sluttish hairs, ⁵⁰
 Which once untangled much misfortune bodes :
 This is the hag, when maids lie on their backs,
 That presses them and learns them first to bear,
 Making them women of good carriage :
 This is she—

Rom. Peace, peace, Mercutio, peace !
 Thou talk'st of nothing.

Mer. True, I talk of dreams,
 Which are the children of an idle brain,
 Begot of nothing but vain fantasy,
 Which is as thin of substance as the air
 And more inconstant than the wind, who ¹⁰⁰ woos

Even now the frozen bosom of the north,
 And, being anger'd, puffs away from thence,
 Turning his face to the dew-dropping south.

Ben. This wind, you talk of, blows us from ourselves ;

Supper is done, and we shall come too late.

Rom. I fear, too early : for my mind mis-gives

Some consequence yet hanging in the stars
 Shall bitterly begin his fearful date
 With this night's revels and expire the term
 Of a despised life cloosed in my breast ¹¹⁰
 By some vile forfeit of untimely death.
 But he, that hath the steereage of my course,
 Direct my sail ! On, lusty gentlemen.

Ben. Strike, drum. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. A hall in Capulet's house.

Musicians waiting. Enter Servingmen, with napkins.

First Serv. Where's Potpan, that he helps not to take away ! He shift a trencher ! he scrape a trencher !

Sec. Serv. When good manners shall lie all in one or two men's hands and they unwashed too, 'tis a foul thing.

First Serv. Away with the joint-stools, remove the court-cupboard, look to the plate.
 Good thou, save me a piece of marchpane ; and,
 as thou lovest me, let the porter let in Susan Grindstone and Nell. Antony, and Potpan !

Sec. Serv. Ay, boy, ready.
First Serv. You are looked for and called for, asked for and sought for, in the great chamber.

Sec. Serv. We cannot be here and there too.
 Cheerly, boys ; be brisk awhile, and the longer
 'twixt us all.

Enter CAPULET, with JULIET and others of his house, meeting the Guests and Maskers.

Cap. Welcome, gentlemen ! Ladies that have thank tops

Unplagued with corns will have a bout with
 you.

Ah ha, my mistresses ! which of you all ²⁰
 Will now deny to dance ? she that makes dainty,

She, I'll swear, hath corns ; am I come near ye now !

Welcome, gentlemen ! I have seen the day
 That I have worn a visor and could tell
 A whispering tale in a fair lady's ear,
 Such as would please : 'tis gone, 'tis gone, 'tis
 gone :

You are welcome, gentlemen ! Come, musicians, play.

A hall, a hall ! give room ! and foot it, girls.

[Music plays, and they dance.]
 More light, you knaves ; and turn the tables up,
 And quench the fire, the room is grown too hot.
 Ah, sirrah, this unlook'd-for sport comes well.
 Nay, sit, nay, sit, good cousin Capulet ;
 For you and I are past our dancing days ;
 How long is 't now since last yourself and I
 Were in a mask !

Sec. Cap. By'r lady, thirty years.
Cap. What, man ! 'tis not so much, 'tis not
 so much :

'Tis since the nuptial of Lucentio,
 Come pentecost as quickly as it will,
 Some five and twenty years ; and then we mask'd.

Sec. Cap. 'Tis more, 'tis more : his son is elder, sir ;

His son is thirty.

Cap. Will you tell me that !

His son was but a ward two years ago.

Rom. [To a Servingman.] What lady is that,
 which doth enrich the hand
 Of yonder knight !

Serv. I know not, sir.
Rom. O, she doth teach the torches to burn
 bright !

It seems she hangs upon the cheek of night
 Like a rich jewel in an Ethiop's ear ;
 Beauty too rich for use, for earth too dear !
 So shows a snowy dove trooping with crows,
 As yonder lady o'er her fellows shows.
 The measure done, I'll watch her place of stand
 And, touching hers, make blessed my rude
 hand.

Did my heart love till now ? foreswear it, sight !
 For I ne'er saw true beauty till this night.

Tyb. This, by his voice, should be a Montague.

Fetch me my rapier, boy. What dares the slave

Come hither, cover'd with an antic face,
 To peer and scorn at our solemnity !
 Now, by the stock and honour of my kin,
 To strike him dead I hold it not a sin.

Cap. Why, how now, kinsman ! where's storm you so !

Tyb. Uncle, this is a Montague, our foe,
 A villain that is in here come in spite,
 To scorn at our solemnity this night.

Cap. Young Romeo is it !

Tyb. 'Tis he, that villain Romeo
Cap. Content thee, gentle coz, let him alone
 He bears him like a portly gentleman ;

And, to say truth, Verona brags of him
To be a virtuous and well govern'd youth :
I would not for the wealth of all the town
Here in my house do him disparagement :
Therefore be patient, take no note of him :
It is my will, the which if thou respect,
Show a fair presence and put off these frowns,
An ill-beseeming semblance for a feast.
Tyb. It fits, when such a villain is a guest :
I'll not endure him.

Cap. He shall be endured :
What, Goodman boy ! I say, he shall : go to ;
Am I the master here, or you ! go to.
You'll not endure him ! God shall mend my soul !

You'll make a mutiny among my guests !
You will set cock-a-hoop ! you'll be the man !
Tyb. Why, uncle, 'tis a shame.

Cap. Go to, go to ;
You are a saucy boy : is't so, indeed !
This trick may chance to scathe you, I know what :

You must contrary me ! marry, 'tis time.
Well said, my hearts ! You are a pryncex ; go :
Be quiet, or—More light, more light ! For shame !

I'll make you quiet. What, cheerly, my
hearts !

Tyb. Patience perforce with wilful choler meeting
Makes my flesh tremble in their different greeting.

I will withdraw : but this intrusion shall
Now seeming sweet convert to bitter gall. [Exit.]

Rom. [To Juliet] If I profane with my un-worthiest hand

This holy shrine, the gentle fine is this :
My lips, two blushing pilgrims, ready stand
To smooth that rough touch with a tender kiss.

Jul. Good pilgrim, you do wrong your hand too much,

Which mannerly devotion shows in this ;
For saints have hands that pilgrims' hands do touch,

And palm to palm is holy palmers' kiss.
Rom. Have not saints lips, and holy palmers'
too !

Jul. Ay, pilgrim, lips that they must use in prayer.

Rom. O, then, dear saint, let lips do what hands do ;

They pray, grant thou, lest faith turn to despair.

Jul. Saints do not move, though grant for prayers sake.

Rom. Then move not, while my prayer's effect
I take.

Thus from my lips, by yours, my sin is purged.

Jul. Then have my lips the sin that they have took.

Rom. Sin from my lips ! O trespass sweetly urged !

Give me my sin again.

Jul. You kiss by the book.

Nurse. Madam, your mother craves a word
with you.

Rom. What is her mother !
Nurse. Marry, bachelor,

Her mother is the lady
And a good lady, and a wise and virtuous :
I nursed her daughter, that you talk'd withal ;
I tell you, he that can lay hold of her
Shall have the chinks.

Rom. Is she a Capulet !
O dear account ! my life is my foe's debt.

Ben. Away, be gone ; the sport is at the best.

Rom. Ay, so I fear ; the more is my unrest.

Cap. Nay, gentlemen, prepare not to be
gone ;

We have a trifling foolish banquet towards.
Is it e'en so ? why, then, I thank you all ;

I thank you, honest gentlemen ; good night.
More torches here ! Come on then, let's to bed.
Ah, airah, by my fay, it waxes late :

I'll to my rest.

[Exeunt all but Juliet and Nurse.
Jul. Come hither, nurse. What is yond
gentleman !

Nurse. The son and heir of old Tiberio.

Jul. What's he that now is going out of door !

Nurse. Marry, that, I think, be young Petruccio.

Jul. What's he that follows there, that would not dance !

Nurse. I know not.

Jul. Go, ask his name : if he be married,
My grave is like to be my wedding bed.

Nurse. His name is Romeo, and a Montague ;
The only son of your great enemy.

Jul. My only love sprung from my only
hate !

Too early seen unknown, and known too late !
Prodigious birth of love it is to me,
That I must love a loathed enemy.

Nurse. What's this ? what's this ?
Jul. A rhyme I learn'd even now
Of one I danced withal. [One calls within, Juliet.]

Nurse. Anon, anon !
Come, let's away ; the strangers all are gone.

ACT II

PROLOGUE

Enter Chorus.

Chor. Now old desire doth in his death-bed lie,
And young affection gapes to be his heir ;
That fair for which love groan'd for and would
die,

With tender Juliet match'd, is now not fair.
Now Romeo is beloved and loves again,
Alike bewitched by the charm of looks,
But to his foe supposed he must complain,
And she steal love's sweet bait from fearful hooks :

Being held a foe, he may not have access
To breathe such vows as lovers use to swear ;
And she as much in love, her sworn hate
To meet her new-beloved may

But passion lends them power, time means, to meet,
Tempering extremities with extreme sweet.

[Exit.]

SCENE I. A lane by the wall of Capulet's orchard.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. Can I go forward when my heart is here?
Turn back, dull earth, and find thy centre out.
He climbs the wall, and leaps down within it.

Enter BENVOLIO and MERCUTIO.

Ben. Romeo! my cousin Romeo!

Merc. He is wise: He is wise:
And, on my life, hath stol'n him home to bed.

Ben. He ran this way, and leap'd this orchard wall:

Call good Mercutio.

Merc. Nay, I'll conjure too.

Rom. I humours! madman! passion! lover!

Appear thou in the likeness of a sigh!

Speak but one rhyme, and I am satisfied;

Cry but 'Ay me!' pronounce but 'love' and 'dove';

Speak to my gossip Venus one fair word,
One nick-name for her purblind son and heir,

Young Adam Cupid, he that shot so trim,
When King Cophetua loved the beggar-maid!

He heareth not, he stirreth not, he moveth not;
The ape is dead, and I must conjure him.

I conjure thee by Rosaline's bright eyes,
By her high forehead and her scarlet lip,

By her fine foot, straight leg and quivering thigh
And the demesnes that there adjacent lie,

That in thy likeness thou appear to us!

Ben. An if he hear thee, thou wilt anger him.

Merc. This cannot anger him: 'twould anger him

To raise a spirit in his mistress' circle
Of some strange nature, letting it there stand

Till she had laid it and conjured it down;
That were some spito: my invocation

Is fair and honest, and in his mistress' name
I conjure only but to raise up him.

Ben. Come, he hath hid himself among these trees,

To be consorted with the humorous night:
Blind is his love and best fits the dark.

Merc. If love be blind, love cannot hit the mark.

Now will he sit under a medlar tree,
And wish his mistress were that kind of fruit

As maids call medlars, when they laugh alone.
O, Romeo, that she were, O, that she were

An open case, then a poperin pear!
Romeo, good night: I'll to my truckle-bed;

This field-bed is too cold for me to sleep:
Come, shall we go?

Ben. Go, then; for 'tis in vain
To seek him here that means not to be found.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Capulet's orchard.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. He jests at scars that never felt a wound.

[A light appears above at a window.]

But, soft! what light through yonder window breaks?

It is the east, and Juliet is the sun.

Arise, fair sun, and kill the envious moon,

Who is already sick and pale with grief,

That thou her maid art far more fair than she:

Be not her maid, since she is en-

Her vestal livery is but sick and

And none but fools do wear it; cast it off.

It is my lady, O, it is my love!

O, that she knew she were!

She speaks, yet she says nothing: what of that?

Her eye discourses; I will answer it.

I am too bold, 'tis not to me she speaks.

Two of the fairest stars in all the heaven,

Having some business, do entreat her eyes

To twinkle in their spheres till they return.

What if her eyes were there, in her head?

The brightness of her cheek would shame those stars.

As daylight doth a lamp; her eyes in heaven

Would through the airy region stream so bright

That birds would sing and think it were not

night.

See, how she leans her cheek upon her hand!

O, that I were a glove upon that hand,

That I might touch that cheek!

Jul. Ay me!

Rom. She speaks

O, speak again, bright angel! for thou art

As glorious to this night, being o'er my head,

As is a winged messenger of heaven

Unto the white-upturned wondering eyes

Of mortals that fall back to gaze on him:

When he doth ride the lazy-paced clouds

And sails upon the bosom of the air.

Jul. O Romeo, Romeo! wherefore art thou

Romeo?

Deny thy father and refuse thy name;

Or, if thou wilt not, be but sworn my love,

And I'll no longer be a Capulet.

Rom. [Aside.] Shall I hear more, or shall I

Speak at this?

Jul. 'Tis but thy name that is my enemy;

Thou art thyself, though not a Montague.

What's Montague? it is nor hand, nor foot,

Nor arm, nor face, nor any other part

Belonging to a man. O, be some other name!

What's in a name? that which we call a rose

By any other name would smell as sweet;

So Romeo would, were he not Romeo call'd,

Retain that dear perfection which he owes

Without that title. Romeo, doff thy name,

And for that name which is no part of thee

Take all myself.

Rom. I take thee at thy word:

Call me but love, and I'll be new baptiz'd;

Henceforth I never will be Romeo.

Jul. What man art thou that thus beset screen'd in night

So stumblest on my counsel?

Rom. By a name

I know not how to tell thee who I am:

My name, dear saint, is hateful to myself,

Because it is an enemy to thee:

Had I it written, I would tear the word.

Jul. My ears have not yet drunk a new

word.

That tongue's utterance, yet I know the sound:

Art thou not Romeo and a Montague? 60

Rom. Neither, fair saint, if either thee dislike.

Jul. How cam'st thou hither, tell me, and whence?

The orchard walls are high and hard to climb,
And the place death, considering who thou art,
I any of my kinsmen find thee here.

Rom. With love's light wings did I o'er-perch these walls;

For stony limits cannot hold love out,
And what love can do that dares love attempt;
Therefore thy kinsmen are no let to me.

Jul. If they do see thee, they will murder thee. 70

Rom. Alack, there lies more peril in thine eye Than twenty of their swords: look thou but
sweet,

And I am proof against their enmity.

Jul. I would not for the world they saw this here.

Rom. I have night's cloak to hide me from their sight;

And but thou love me, let them find me here:
My life were better ended by their hate,
Than death prorogued, wanting of thy love.

Jul. By whose direction found'st thou out this place?

Rom. By love, who first did prompt me to inquire; 80

He lent me counsel and I lent him eyes.
I am no pilot; yet, wert thou as far

As that vast shore wash'd with the farthest sea,
I would adventure for such merchandise.

Jul. Thou know'st the mask of night is on my face,

Else would a maiden blush bepaint my cheek
For that which thou hast heard me speak tonight.

Fain would I dwell on form, fain, fain deny
What I have spoke: but farewell compliment!

Dost thou love me? I know thou wilt say
Ay, 90

And I will take thy word: yet, if thou swear'st,
Thou may'st prove false; at lovers' perjuries,
They say, Jove laughs. O gentle Romeo,

If thou dost love, pronounce it faithfully:
Or if thou think'st I am too quickly won,

I'll frown and be perverse and say thee nay,
So thou wilt woo; but else, not for the world.

In truth, fair Montague, I am too fond,
And therefore thou may'st think my haviour
light:

But trust me, gentleman, I'll prove more true than those that have more cunning to be strange.

Should have been more strange, I must confess,

but that thou overheard'st, as I was ware,
My true love's passion; therefore pardon me,
And not impose this yielding to light love,
Which the dark night hath so discovered.

Rom. Lady, by yonder blessed moon I swear—
That tips with silver all these fruit-tree tops—

Jul. O, swear not by the moon, the inconstant moon,

That mostly changes in her circled orb, 110

Lest that thy love prove likewise variable.

Rom. What shall I swear by?

Jul. Do not swear at all;
Or, if thou wilt, swear by thy gracious self,
Which is the god of my idolatry,
And I'll believe thee.

Rom. If my heart's dear love—
Jul. Well, do not swear: although I joy in
thee,
I have no joy of this contract to-night:
It is too rash, too unadvised, too sudden;
Too like the lightning, which doth cease to be Ere one can say 'It lightens.' Sweet, good
night! 120

This bud of love, by summer's ripening breath,
May prove a beauteous flower when next we meet.

Good night, good night! as sweet repose and
rest
Come to thy heart as that within my breast!

Rom. O, wilt thou leave me so unsatisfied?

Jul. What satisfaction canst thou have tonight?

Rom. The exchange of thy love's faithful vow for mine.

Jul. I gave thee mine before thou didst request it:

And yet I would it were to give again.

Rom. Wouldst thou withdraw it? for what purpose, love? 130

Jul. But to be frank, and give it thee again.
And yet I wish but for the thing I have:
My bounty is as boundless as the sea,
My love as deep; the more I give to thee,
The more I have, for both are infinite.

[Nurse calls within.]
I hear some noise within; dear love, adieu!
Anon, good nurse! Sweet Montague, be true.
Stay but a little, I will come again. [Exit, above.]
Rom. O blessed, blessed night! I am afear'd,
Being in night, all this is but a dream. 140
Too flattering-sweet to be substantial.

Re-enter JULIET, above.

Jul. Three words, dear Romeo, and good night indeed.

If that thy bent of love be honourable,
Thy purpose marriage, send me word to-morrow,
By one that I'll procure to come to thee,
Where and what time thou wilt perform the rite;

And all my fortunes at thy foot I'll lay
And follow thee my lord throughout the world.

Nurse. [Within] Madam!

Jul. I come, anon.—But if thou mean'st
not well, 150

I do beseech thee—
Nurse. [Within] Madam!

Jul. By and by, I come—
To come thy suit, and leave me to my grief;
To-morrow will I send.

Rom. So thrive my soul—
Jul. A thousand times good night! 160
[Exit, above.]
Rom. A thousand times the worse, to want thy light.

Love goes toward love, as schoolboys from their books,
But love from love, toward school with heavy looks. [Retiring.]

Re-enter JULIET, above.

Jul. Hist! Romeo, hist! O, for a falconer's
voice,
To lure this tassel-gentle back again! 160
Bondage is hoarse, and may not speak aloud;
Else would I tear the cave where Echo lies,
And make her airy tongue more hoarse than
mine.

With repetition of my Romeo's name.

Rom. It is my soul that calls upon my
name:

How silver-sweet sound lovers' tongues by
night,

Like softest music to attending ears!

Jul. Romeo!

Rom. My dear!

Jul. At what o'clock to-morrow
Shall I send to thee?

Rom. At the hour of nine.

Jul. I will not fail: 'tis twenty years till
then. 170

I have forgot why I did call thee back.

Rom. Let me stand here till thou remember
it.

Jul. I shall forget, to have thee still stand
there,

Remembering how I love thy company.

Rom. And I'll still stay, to have thee still forget,

Forgetting any other home but this.

Jul. 'Tis almost morning; I would have thee gone:

And yet no further than a wanton's bird;
Who lets it hop a little from her hand,

Like a poor prisoner in his twisted gyves, 180

And with a silk thread plucks it back again,

So loving-jenious of his liberty.

Rom. I would I were thy bird.

Jul. Sweet, so would I:
Yet I should kill thee with much cherishing.

Good night, good night! parting is such sweet
sorrow,

That I shall say good night till it be morrow.

[Exit above.]

Rom. Sleep dwell upon thine eyes, peace in thy breast!

Would I were sleep and peace, so sweet to rest!

Hence will I to my ghostly father's cell,

His help to crave, and my dear hap to tell. 190

[Exit.]

SCENE III. Friar Laurence's cell.

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE, with a basket.

Fri. L. The grey-eyed morn smiles on the frowning night,

Chattering the eastern clouds with streaks of
light,

And decked darkness like a drunkard reels
From forth day's path and Titan's fiery wheels:

Now, ere the sun advance his burning eye,

The day to cheer and night's dank dew to dry,
I must up-stair, this early morn, to our

With baleful weeds and precious-juice flowers.
The earth that's a nature's mother is a tomb;

What is her burying grave that is her womb;
And from her womb children of divers kind

We sucking on her natural bosom find,
Many for many virtues excellent.

None but for some and yet all different.
O, mickle is the powerful grace that lies

In herbs, plants, stones, and their true qualities:
For nought so vile that on the earth doth live

But to the earth some special good doth give,
Nor aught so good but strain'd from that fair

use
Revolts from true birth, stumbling on abuse:

Virtue itself turns vice, being misapplied; 21
And vice sometimes by action dignified.

Within the infant rind of this small flower
Poison hath residence and medicine power:

For this, being smelt, with that part cheers each
part;

Being tasted, slays all senses with the heart.
Two such opposed kings encamp them still

In man as well as herbs, grace and rude will;
And where the worse is predominant,

Full soon the canker death eats up that plant.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. Good morrow, father.

Fri. L. Benedicite! 31

What early tongue so sweet saluteth me!
Young son, it argues a distemper'd head

So soon to bid good morrow to thy bed;
Care keeps his watch in every old man's eye,

And where care lodges, sleep will never lie;
But where unbruised youth with unstuff'd brain

Doth couch his limbs, there golden sleep doth
reign;

Therefore thy earliness doth me assure
Thou art up-roused by some distemperature; 40

(Or if not so, then here I hit it right,
Our Romeo hath not been in bed to-night.

Rom. That last is true; the sweeter rest was
mine.

Fri. L. God pardon sin! wast thou with Rosaline?

Rom. With Rosaline, my ghostly father!
no;

I have forgot that name, and that name's woe.

Fri. L. That's my good son: but where hast thou been, then?

Rom. I'll tell thee, ere thou ask it me again.

I have been feasting with mine enemy,
Where on a sudden one hath wounded me, 50

That's by me wounded: both our remedies
Within thy help and holy physic lies:

I bear no hatred, blessed man, for, lo,
My intercession likewise stands my foe.

Fri. L. Be plain, good son, and homely in thy drift;

Riddling confession finds but riddling shrift.

Rom. Then plainly know my heart's dear love is set

On the fair daughter of rich Capulet:
As mine on hers, so hers is set on mine;

And all combined, save what thou must combine

By holy marriage: when and where and how
We met, we woo'd and made exchange of vows

'I'll tell thee as we pass; but this I pray,
That thou consent to marry us to-day.

Fri. L. Holy Saint Francis, what a change is here!

[Rosaline, whom thou didst love so dear,
So soon forsaken? young men's love then lies
Not truly in their hearts, but in their eyes.
Jesu Maria, what a deal of brine
Hath wash'd thy sorrow cheeks for Rosaline! 70
How much salt water thrown away in waste,
To season love, that of it doth not taste!
The sun not yet thy sighs from heaven clears,
Thy old groans ring yet in my ancient ears;
O, here upon thy cheek the stain doth sit
Of an old tear that is not wash'd off yet:
If e'er thou wast thyself and these woes thine,
And these woes were all for Rosaline:
I art thou changed! pronounce this sentence
then.

Women may fall, when there's no strength in
men. 80
Rom. Thou chid'st me off for loving Rosa-line.
Fri. L. For doting, not for loving, pupil
mine.
Rom. And bad'st me bury love.
Fri. L. Not in a grave,
To lay one in, another out to have.
Rom. I pray thee, chide not: she whom I love now
th grace for grace and love for love allow;
no other did not so.

Fri. L. O, she knew well
Thy love did read by rote and could not spell.
But come, young waverer, come, go with me,
In one respect I'll thy assistant be; 90
For this alliance may so happy prove,
To turn your households' rancour to pure love.
Rom. O, let us hence; I stand on sudden haste.
[Fri. L. Wisely and slow; they stumble that run fast. [Exit.

SCENE IV. A street.

Enter BENVOLIO AND MERCUTIO.

Mer. Where the devil should this Romeo be?
[He not home to-night?

Ben. Not to his father's; I spoke with his
man.

Mer. Ah, that same pale hard-hearted wench,
that Rosaline,

ments him so, that he will sure run mad.

Ben. Tybalt, the kinsman of old Capulet,
th sent a letter to his father's house.

Mer. A challenge, on my life.

Ben. Romeo will answer it.

Mer. Any man that can write may answer a letter. 10

Ben. Nay, he will answer the letter's master, if he dares, being dared.

Mer. Alas, poor Romeo! he is already dead;
bleed with a white wench's black eye; shot rough the ear with a love-song; the very pin his heart cleft with the blind bow-boy's button: and is he a man to encounter Tybalt?

Ben. Why, what is Tybalt?

Mer. More than prince of cats, I can tell
you. 15

Ben. O, he is the courageous captain of complements. He fights as you sing prick-song, keeps time, distance, and proportion; rests me his minim rest, one, two, and the third in your bosom: the very butcher of a silk button, a duellist, a duellist; a gentleman of the very first house, of the first and second cause: ah, the immortal passado! the punto reverso! the hai!

Ben. The what?

Mer. The pox of such antic, lisping, affecting fantasticoes; these new tuners of accents!
'By Jesu, a very good blade! a very tall man!
a very good whore!' Why, is not this a lamentable thing, grandsire, that we should be thus afflicted with these strange flies, these fashionmongers, these perdon-mis's, who stand so much on the new form, that they cannot sit at ease on the old bench? O, their bones, their bones!

Enter ROMEO.

Ben. Here comes Romeo, here comes Romeo.

Mer. Without his ree, like a dried herring:
O flesh, flesh, how art thou fishified! Now is he for the numbers that Petrarch flow'd in:
Laura to his lady was but a kitchen-wench;
marry, she had a better love to be-rhyme her;
Dido a dowdy; Cleopatra a gipsy; Helen and Hero hildings and harlots; Thisbe a grey eye or so, but not to the purpose. Signior Romeo, bon jour! there's a French salutation to your French slop. You gave us the counterfeit fairly last night.

Rom. Good morrow to you both. What counterfeit did I give you? 20

Mer. The slip, air, the slip; can you not conceive?

Rom. Pardon, good Mercutio, my business was great; and in such a case as mine a man may strain courtesy.

Mer. That's as much as to say, such a case as yours constrains a man to bow in the hams.

Rom. Meaning, to court'ry.

Mer. Thou hast most kindly hit it.

Rom. A most courteous exposition. 25

Mer. Nay, I am the very pink of courtesy.

Rom. Pink for flower.

Mer. Right.

Rom. Why, then is my pump well flowered.

Mer. Well said: follow me this jest now till thou hast worn out thy pump, that when the single sole of it is worn, the jest may remain after the wearing sole singular.

Rom. O single-soled jest, solely singular for the singleness! 30

Mer. Come between us, good Benvolio; my wits faint.

Rom. Switch and spurs, switch and spurs;
or I'll cry a match.

Mer. Nay, if thy wits run the wild-goose chase, I have done for thee hast more of the wild-goose in one of thy wits than, I am sure, I have in my whole five: was I with you these for the gooses?

Rom. Thou wast never with me for any thing when thou wast not there for the goose.

Mer. I will bite thee by the ear for that jest. 35

Rom.

Mer. Thy wit is a very bitter sweeting; it is a most sharp sauce.

Rom. And is it not well served in to a sweet goose?

Mer. O, here's a wit of chevill, that stretches from an inch narrow to an ell broad!

Rom. I stretch it out for that word 'broad,' which added to the goose, proves thee far and wide a broad goose.

Mer. Why, is not this better now than groaning for love? now art thou sociable, now art thou Romeo; now art thou what thou art, by art as well as by nature: for this drivelling love is like a great natural, that runs lolling up and down to hide his bauble in a hole.

Ben. Stop there, stop there.

Mer. Thou desirest me to stop in my tale against the hair.

Ben. Thou wouldst else have made thy tale large.

Mer. O, thou art deceived; I would have made it short: for I was come to the whole depth of my tale; and meant, indeed, to occlude the argument no longer.

Here's goodly gear!

Enter Nurse and Peter.

Mer. A sail, a sail!

Ben. Two, two; a shirt and a smock.

Nurse. Peter!

Peter. Anon!

Nurse. My fan, Peter.

Mer. Good Peter, to hide her face; for her fan's the fairer face.

Nurse. God ye good morrow, gentlemen.

Mer. God ye good den, fair gentlewoman.

Nurse. Is it good den?

Mer. 'Tis no less, I tell you, for the bawdy hand of the dial is now upon the prick of noon.

Nurse. Out upon you! what a man are you!

Rom. One, gentlewoman, that God hath made for himself to mar.

Nurse. By my troth, it is well said; 'for himself to mar, quoth a'! Gentlemen, can any of you tell me where I may find the young Romeo?

Rom. I can tell you; but young Romeo will be older when you have found him than he was when you sought him: I am the youngest of that name, for fault of a worse.

Nurse. You say well.

Mer. Yea, is the worst well? very well took, I faith; wisely, wisely.

Nurse. If you be he, sir, I desire some confidence with you.

Ben. She will indite him to some supper.

Mer. A bawd, a bawd, a bawd! So ho!

Rom. What hast thou found?

Mer. No hare, sir; unless a hare, sir, in a hawker's pie, that is something stale and hoar ere it is spent.

An old hare hoar,

And an old hare hoar,

Is very good meat in Lent;

But a hare that is hoar

Is too much for a score,

When it hoars ere it be spent.

Romeo, will you come to your father's? we'll to dinner, thither.

Rom. I will follow you.

Mer. Farewell, ancient lady; farewell, [singing] 'lady, lady, lady.'

[Exeunt Mercutio and Benvolio.]
Nurse. Marry, farewell! I pray you, sir, what saucy merchant was this, that was so full of his ropery?

Rom. A gentleman, nurse, that loves to hear himself talk, and will speak more in a minute than he will stand to in a month.

Nurse. An a' speak any thing against me, I'll take him down, an a' were lustier than he is, and twenty such Jacks; and if I cannot, I'll find those that shall. Scurvy knave! I am none of his flirt-gills; I am none of his skains-mates. And thou must stand by too, and suffer every knave to use me at his pleasure?

Peter. I saw no man use you at his pleasure; if I had, my weapon should quickly have been out, I warrant you: I dare draw as soon as any other man, if I see occasion in a good quarrel, and the law on my side.

Nurse. Now, afore God, I am so vexed, that every part about me quivers. Scurvy knave! Pray you, sir, a word: and as I told you, my young lady bade me inquire you out; what she bade me say, I will keep to myself: but first let me tell ye, if ye should lead her into a fool's paradise, as they say, it were a very gross kind of behaviour, as they say: for the gentleness of her is young; and, therefore, if you should deal double with her, truly it were an ill thing to be offered to any gentlewoman, and very wicked dealing.

Rom. Nurse, commend me to thy lady and mistress. I protest unto thee—

Nurse. Good heart, and, I faith, I will tell her as much: Lord, Lord, she will be a joyful woman.

Rom. What wilt thou tell her, nurse? thou dost not mark me.

Nurse. I will tell her, sir, that you do protest; which, as I take it, is a gentlemanlike offer.

Rom. Bid her devise Some means to come to shrift this afternoon: And there she shall at Friar Laurence's cell Be shrived and married. Here is for thy pains.

Nurse. No, truly, sir; not a penny.

Rom. Go to; I say you shall.

Nurse. This afternoon, sir? well, she shall be there.

Rom. And stay, good nurse, behind the abbey wall:

Within this hour my man shall be with thee And bring thee cords made like a tackled stair Which to the high top-gallant of my joy Must be my convoy in the secret night.

Farewell; be trusty, and I'll quit thy pains: Farewell; commend me to thy mistress.

Nurse. Now God in heaven bless thee! Hark you, sir.

Rom. What say'st thou, my dear nurse?

Nurse. Is your 'man' secret? Did you not hear say,

Two may keep counsel, putting one away!

Rom. I warrant thee, my man's as true
as steel.

Nurse. Well, sir; my mistress is the sweetest ady—Lord, Lord! when 'twas a little prating thing;—O, there is a nobleman in town, one Paris, that would fain lay knife aboard; but she, good soul, had as lief see a toad, a very toad, as see him. I anger her sometimes and tell her that Paris is the properer man; but,
I'll warrant you, when I say so, she looks as pale as any clout in the versal world. Doth not rosemary and Romeo begin both with a letter?

Rom. Ay, nurse; what of that? both with an R.

Nurse. Ah, mocker! that's the dog's name;
it is for the—No; I know it begins with some other letter;—and she hath the prettiest sententions of it, of you and rosemary, that it would do you good to hear it.

Rom. Commend me to thy lady.

Nurse. Ay, a thousand times. [Exit Romeo.]

Peter! 390

Pet. Anon!

Nurse. Peter, take my fan, and go before,
and space. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Capulet's orchard.

Enter JULIET.

Jul. The clock struck nine when I did send the nurse;
in half an hour she promised to return.
Perchance she cannot meet him: that's not so,
O, she is lame! love's heralds should be
thoughts,
Which ten times faster glide than the sun's beams,
Driving back shadows over louring hills:
Therefore do nimble-pinion'd doves draw love,
And therefore hath the wind-swift Cupid wings.
Now is the sun upon the highmost hill
Of this day's journey, and from nine till twelve
Is three long hours, yet she is not come.
Had she affections and warm youthful blood,
She would be as swift in motion as a ball;
My words would bandy her to my sweet love,
And his to me:
[But old folks, many feign as they were dead;
Unwieldy, slow, heavy and pale as lead.
O God, she comes!]

Enter Nurse and PETER.

O honey nurse, what news!
last thou met with him? Send thy man away.
Nurse. Peter, stay at the gate. [Exit Peter.]
Jul. Now, good sweet nurse,—O Lord, why look'st thou mad?
though news be sad, yet tell them merrily;
if good, thou shalt meet the music of sweet news
by playing it to me with so sour a face.
Nurse. I am a-weary, give me leave awhile:
he, how my bones ache! what a jaunt have
I had!
Jul. I would thou hadst my bones, and I
thy news.

Nay, come, I thee, speak; good, good nurse, speak.

Nurse. Jesu, what haste! can you not stay awhile?

Do you not see that I am out of breath?

Jul. How art thou out of breath, when thou hast breath?

To say to me that thou art out of breath?

The excuse that thou dost make in this delay

Is longer than the tale thou dost excuse.

Is thy news good, or bad? answer to that;

Say either, and I'll stay the circumstance:

Let me be satisfied, is't good or bad?

Nurse. Well, you have made a simple choice; you know not how to choose a man:
Romeo! no, not he; though his face be better than any man's, yet his leg excels all men's;
and for a hand, and a foot, and a body, though they be not to be talked on, yet they are past compare: he is not the flower of courtesy, but, I'll warrant him, as gentle as a lamb. Go thy ways, wench; serve God. What, have you dined at home?

Jul. No, no; but all this did I know before.

What says he of our marriage? what of that?

Nurse. Lord, how my head aches! what a head have I!

It beats as it would fall in twenty pieces.

My back o' t' other side,—O, my back, my
back!

Bealrew your heart for sending me about.

To catch my death with jaunting up and down!

Jul. I faith, I am sorry that thou art not
well.

Sweet, sweet, sweet nurse, tell me, what says
my love!

Nurse. Your love says, like an honest gentleman, and a courteous, and a kind, and a handsome, and, I warrant, a virtuous,—Where is your mother?

Jul. Where is my mother! why, she is within;

Where should she be? How oddly thou repliest!

'Your love says, like an honest gentleman,
Where is your mother?'

Nurse. O God's lady dear!

Are you so hot? marry, come up, I trow;
is this the position for my aching bones?

Henceforward do your messages yourself.

Jul. Here's such a coil! come, what says
Romeo?

Nurse. Have you got leave to go to shrift
to-day?

Jul. I have.

Nurse. Then hie you hence to Friar Laurence's cell;

There stays a husband to make you a wife.
Now comes the wanton blood up in your cheeks.

They'll be in scarlet straight at my news.
Hie you to church; I must another way.

To fetch a ladder, by the which your love
Must climb a bird's nest soon when it is dark:

I am the drudge and toil in your desires;
But you shall hear the burden soon of my news.

Go! I'll to dinner: he's yet to be seen.
Jul. He is high, very high! [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. Friar Laurence's cell.

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE and ROMEO.

Fri. L. So smile the heavens upon this holy act.

That after hours with sorrow chide us not!

Rom. Amen, amen! but come what sorrow can,

It cannot countervail the exchange of joy
That one short minute gives me in her sight:
Do thou but close our hands with holy words;
Then love-devouring death do what he dare;
It is enough I may but call her mine.

Fri. L. These violent delights have violent ends

And in their triumph die, like fire and powder,
Which as they kiss consume: the sweetest honey

Is loathsome in his own deliciousness
And in the taste confounds the appetite:
Therefore love moderately; long love doth so;
Too swift arrives as tardy as too slow.

Enter JULIET.

Here comes the lady: O, so light a foot
Will ne'er wear out the everlasting flint:

A lover may bestride the gossamer

That idles in the wanton summer air,

And yet not fall; so light is vanity.

Jul. Good even to my ghostly confessor.

Fri. L. Romeo shall thank thee, daughter,
for us both.

Jul. As much to him, else is his thanks too much.

Rom. Ah, Juliet, if the measure of thy joy
Be heap'd like mine and that thy skill be more
To blazon it, then sweeten with thy breath
This neighbour air, and let rich music's tongue
Unfold the imagined happiness that both
Receive in either by this dear encounter.

Jul. Conceit, more rich in matter than in words,

Brags of his substance, not of ornament:
They are but beggars that can count their
worth;

But my true love is grown to such excess
I cannot sum up sum of half my wealth.

Fri. L. Come, come with me, and we will make short work;

For, by your leaves, you shall not stay alone
Till holy church incorporate two in one.

(Exeunt.)

ACT III.

SCENE I. A public place.

Enter MERCUTIO, BENVOLIO, Page, and Servants.

Ben. I pray thee, good Mercutio, let's retire:
The day is hot, the Capulets abroad,
And, if we meet, we shall not scape a brawl;
For now, these hot days, is the mad blood

Mec. Thou art like one of those fellows that when he enters the confines of a tavern chaps me his sword upon the table and says 'God send me the need of thee!' and by the operation of the second cup draws it on the drawer, when indeed there is no need.

Ben. Am I like such a fellow?

Mec. Come, come, thou art as hot a Jack in thy mood as any in Italy, and as soon moved to be moody, and as soon moody to be moved.

Ben. And what to?

Mec. Nay, an there were two such, we should have none shortly, for one would kill the other. Thou! why, thou wilt quarrel with a man that hath a hair more, or a hair less, in his beard, than thou hast: thou wilt quarrel with a man for cracking nuts, having no other reason but because thou hast hazel eyes: what eye but such an eye would spy out such a quarrel? Thy head is as full of quarrels as an egg is full of meat, and yet thy head hath been beaten as assiduously as an egg for quarrelling: thou hast quarrelled with a man for coughing in the street, because he hath wakened thy dog that hath lain asleep in the sun: didst thou not fall out with a tailor for wearing his new doublet before Easter? with another, for tying his new shoes with old riband? and yet thou wilt tutor me from quarrelling!

Ben. An I were so apt to quarrel as thou art, any man should buy the fee-simple of my life for an hour and a quarter.

Mec. The fee-simple! O simple!

Ben. By my head, here come the Capulets.

Mec. By my heel, I care not.

Enter TYBALT and others.

Tyb. Follow me close, for I will speak to
them.

Gentlemen, good den: a word with one of you.

Mec. And but one word with one of us!
couple it with something; make it a word and a blow.

Tyb. You shall find me apt enough to that,
sir, an you will give me occasion.

Mec. Could you not take some occasion without giving?

Tyb. Mercutio, thou consort'st with Romeo.

Mec. Consort! what, dost thou make us minstrels! an thou make minstrels of us, look to hear nothing but discords: here's my fidel-stick; here's that shall make you dance.
'Zounds, consort!

Ben. We talk here in the public haunt of
men:

Either withdraw unto some private place,

And reason coolly of your grievances,

Or else depart; here all eyes gaze on us.

Mec. Men's eyes were made to look, and let them gaze;

I will not budge for no man's pleasure, I.

Enter ROMEO.

Tyb. Well, peace be with you, sir: here comes my man.

Mec. But I'll be hang'd, sir, if he wear your livery:

Marry, go before to field, he'll be your follower;

Your worship in that sense may call him 'man'.
Tyb. Romeo, the hate I bear thee can afford

No better term than this,—thou art a villain.

Rom. Tybalt, the reason that I have to love thee

Doth much excuse the appertaining rage
To such a greeting: villain art thou none;
Therefore farewell: I see thou know'st me not.

Tyb. Boy, this shall not excuse the injuries
That thou hast done me; therefore turn and
draw. 70

Rom. I do protest I never injured thee,
But love thee better than thou canst devise,
Till thou shalt know the reason of my love:
And so, good Capulet,—which name I tender
As dearly as my own,—be satisfied.

Mer. O calm, dishonourable, vile submission!
Alla stoccata carries it away.

[Draws.]
Tybalt, you rat-catcher, will you walk?

Tyb. What wouldst thou have with me? 79

Mer. Good king of cats, nothing but one of your nine lives; that I mean to make bold withal, and, as you shall use me hereafter, dry-beat the rest of the eight. Will you pluck your sword out of his pitcher by the ears? make haste, lest mine be about your ears ere it be out.

Tyb. I am for you. [Drawing.]

Rom. Gentle Mercutio, put thy rapier up.

Mer. Come, sir, your passado. [They fight.]

Rom. Draw, Benvolio; beat down their weapons.

Gentlemen, for shame, forbear this outrage!

Tybalt, Mercutio, the prince expressly hath 91

Forbidden bandying in Verona streets:

Hold, Tybalt! good Mercutio!

[Tybalt under Romeo's arm stabs Mercutio, and flies with his followers.]

Mer. I am hurt.

A plague o' both your houses! I am sped.

Is he gone, and hath nothing?

Ben. What, art thou hurt?

Mer. Ay, ay, a scratch, a scratch; marry,

'tis enough.

Where is my page? Go, villain, fetch a surgeon.

[Exit Page.]

Rom. Courage, man; the hurt cannot be much.

Mer. No, 'tis not so deep as a well, nor so wide as a church-door; but 'tis enough, 'twill run: ask for me to-morrow, and you shall find a grave man. I am peppered, I warrant, for this world. A plague o' both your houses!

Julius, a dog, a rat, a mouse, a cat, to scratch man to death! a braggart, a rogue, a villain, at fights by the book of arithmetic! Why the evil came you between us! I was hurt under our arm.

Rom. I thought all for the best. 109

Mer. Help me into some house, Benvolio.

I shall faint. A plague o' both your houses!

They have made worms' meat of me: I have it, and soundly too: your houses!

[Exeunt Mercutio and Benvolio.]

Rom. This gentleman, the prince's near ally,

My very friend, hath got his mortal hurt

In my behalf; my reputation stain'd

With Tybalt's slander,—Tybalt, that an hour

Hath been my kinsman! O sweet Juliet,

Thy beauty hath made me effeminate

And in my temper soft'n'd valour's steel! 120

Re-enter BENVOLIO.

Ben. O Romeo, Romeo, brave Mercutio's
dead!

That gallant spirit hath aspir'd the clouds.

Which too untimely here did scorn the earth.

Rom. This day's black fate on more days

doth depend:

This but begins the woe others must end.

Ben. Here comes the furious Tybalt back

again.

Rom. Alive, in triumph! and Mercutio

slain!

Away to heaven, respective lenity,

And fire-eyed fury be my conduct now!

Re-enter TYBALT.

Now, Tybalt, take the villain back again, 130

That late thou gavest me; for Mercutio's soul

Is but a little way above our heads,

Staying for thine to keep him company:

Either thou, or I, or both, must go with him.

Tyb. Thou, wretched boy, that didst consort him here,

Shalt with him hence.

Rom. This shall determine that.

[They fight; Tybalt falls.]

Ben. Romeo, away, be gone!

The citizens are up, and Tybalt slain.

Stand not amazed: the prince will doom thee

death.

If thou art taken: hence, be gone, away! 140

Rom. O, I am fortune's fool!

Ben. Why dost thou stay?

[Exit Romeo.]

Enter Citizens, &c.

First Cit. Which way ran he that kill'd

Mercutio?

Tybalt, that murderer, which way ran he?

Ben. There lies that Tybalt.

First Cit. Up, sir, go with me;

I charge thee in the prince's name, obey.

Enter Prince, attended; MONTAGUE, CAPULET, their Wives, and others.

Prin. Where are the vile beginnings of this tray?

Ben. O noble prince, I can discover all

The unlucky manage of this fatal brawl:

There lies the man, slain by young Romeo,

That slew thy kinsman, brave Mercutio. 150

Ld. Cap. Tybalt, my cousin! O my brother's

child!

O prince! O cousin! husband! O, the blood is spilt

Of my dear kinsman! Prince, as thou art true,

For blood of ours, shed blood of Montague.

O cousin, cousin!

Prin. Benvolio, who began this bloody fray?

Ben. Tybalt, here slain, whom Romeo's hand did slay;

Romeo that spoke him fair, bade him beguile:

How soon the quarrel was, and urgent wish'd

Your high displeasure: all this accused

With gentle breath, calm look, knee humbly

bow'd,

Could not take truce with the unruly spleen

Of Tybalt deaf to peace, but that he tilts
With piercing steel at bold Mercutio's breast,
Who, all as hot, turns deadly point to point,
And, with a martial scorn, with one hand beats
Cold death aside, and with the other sends
It back to Tybalt, whose dexterity
Restores it: Romeo he cries aloud,
'Hold, friends! friends, part!' and, swifter than

his tongue,
His agile arm beats down their fatal points,
And 'twixt them rushes; underneath whose arm

An envious thrust from Tybalt hit the life
Of stout Mercutio, and then Tybalt fled;
But by and by comes back to Romeo,
Who had but newly entertain'd revenge,
And to 't they go like lightning, for, ere I Could draw to part them, was stout Tybalt
slain.

And, as he fell, did Romeo turn and fly.
This is the truth, or let Benvolio die.

Enter Cap. He is a kinsman to the Montague;
Affection makes him false; he speaks not true:
Some twenty of them fought in this black strife,
And all those twenty could but kill one life.
I beg for justice, which thou, prince, must
give;

Romeo slew Tybalt, Romeo must not live.
Prin. Romeo slew him, he slew Mercutio;
Who now the price of his dear blood doth owe!
Mou. Not Romeo, prince, he was Mercutio's
friend;

His fault concludes but what the law should
and,
The life of Tybalt.

Prin. And for that offence
Immediately we do exile him hence:
I have an interest in your hate's proceeding,
My blood for your rude brawls doth lie a-bleeding;

But I'll amerce you with so strong a fine
That you shall all repent the loss of mine:
I will be deaf to pleading and excuses;
Nor tears nor prayers shall purchase out abuses;
Therefore use none: let Romeo hence in haste,
Else, when he's found, that hour is his last.
Bear hence this body and attend our will:
Mercy but murders, pardoning those that kill.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Capulet's orchard.

Enter JULIET.

Jul. Gallop space, you fiery-footed steeds,
Towards Phoebus' lodging: such a waggoner
As Phaeton would whip you to the west,
And bring in cloudy night immediately.
Spread thy close curtain, love-performing night,
That mine eyes may wink, and Romeo
Leap to these arms, untalk'd of and unseen.
Lovers can see to do their amorous rites
By their own hands: or, if love be blind,
It best agrees with night: Come, civil night,
Thou sober-souled mistress, all in black,
Teach me how to lose a winning match,
Play it like a pair of stainless maidens:
Teach me how to lose, sitting in my cheeks,

With my black mantle; till strange love, grown bold,

Think true love acted simple modesty.
Come, night; come, Romeo; come, thou day's
night;

For thou wilt lie upon the wings of night
Whiter than new snow on a raven's back.
Come, gentle night, come, loving, black-brow'd
night,

Give me my Romeo; and, when he shall die,
Take him and cut him out in little stars,

And he will make the face of heaven so fine
That all the world will be in love with night

And pay no worship to the garish sun.
O, I have bought the mansion of a love,

But not possess'd it, and, though I am sold,
Not yet enjoy'd: so tedious is this day

As is the night before some festival
To an impatient child that hath new robes

And may not wear them. O, here comes my
nurse,

And she brings news; and every tongue that speaks

But Romeo's name speaks heavenly eloquence.

Enter Nurse, with cords.

Now, nurse, what news? What hast thou there?
the cords

That Romeo bid thee fetch?
Nurse. Ay, ay, the cords.

[Throws them down.]
Jul. Ay me! what news! why dost thou wring thy hands?

Nurse. Ah, well-a-day! he's dead, he's dead,
he's dead!

We are undone, lady, we are undone!
Alack the day! he's gone, he's kill'd, he's dead!

Jul. Can heaven be so envious?
Nurse. Romeo can.

Though heaven cannot: O Romeo, Romeo!
Who ever would have thought it? Romeo!

Jul. What devil art thou, that dost torment me thus!

This torture should be roar'd in dismal hell.
Hath Romeo slain himself? say thou but 'I',

And that bare vowel 'I' shall poison more
Than the death-darting eye of cockatrice:

I am not I, if there be such an I;
Or those eyes shut, that make thee answer 'I'!

If he be slain, say 'I'; or if not, no:
Brief sounds determine of my woe or woe.

Nurse. I saw the wound, I saw it with mine
eyes,—

God save the mark!—here on his manly breast
A piteous core, a bloody piteous core;

Pale, pale as ashes, all bedaul'd in blood,
All in gore-blood; I swoonded at the sight.

Jul. O, break, my heart! poor bankrupt break at once!

To prison, eyes, ne'er look on liberty!
Vile earth, to earth resign; and motion here;

And thou and Romeo press one heavy tomb!
Nurse. O Tybalt, Tybalt, the best friend had!

O courteous Tybalt! honest gentleman!
That ever I should live to see thee dead!

Jul. What storm is this that blows so on my?

Romeo slaughter'd, and is Tybalt dead?
O dear-loved cousin, and my dearer lord!
Hear, dreadful trumpet, sound the general doom!

For who is living, if those two are gone?

Nurse. Tybalt is gone, and Romeo banished;
Romeo that kill'd him, he is banished.

Jul. O God! did Romeo's hand shed Tybalt's blood?

Nurse. It did, it did; alas the day, it did!

Jul. O serpent heart, hid with a flowering
face!

Did ever dragon keep so fair a cave?

Beautiful tyrant! fiend angelical!

Dove-feather'd raven! volkish-ravens lamb!

Impis'd substance of divinity show!

Just opposite to what thou justly seem'st,

A damned saint, an honourable villain!

O nature, what hadst thou to do in hell,

When thou didst bower the spirit of a fiend

In mortal paradise of such sweet flesh?

Was ever book containing such vile matter

So fairly bound? O, that deceit should dwell

In such a gorgeous palace!

Nurse. There's no trust,

No faith, no honesty in men; all perjured,

All forsworn, all naught, all dissemblers.

Ah, where's my man? Give me some aqua vitae:

These griefs, these woes, these sorrows make me old.

Shame come to Romeo!

Jul. Blister'd be thy tongue

For such a wish! he was not born to shame:

Upon his brow shame is ashamed to sit;

For 'tis a throne where honour may be crown'd

Old monarch of the universal earth.

What a beast was I to chide at him!

Nurse. Will you speak well of him that kill'd your cousin?

Jul. Shall I speak ill of him that is my husband?

Ah, poor my lord, what tongue shall smooth

thy name,

When I, thy three-hours wife, have mangled it?

Wherefore, villain, didst thou kill my cousin?

But villain cousin would have kill'd my husband:

Back, foolish tears, back to your native spring;

Your tributary drops belong to woe,

Which you, mistaking, offer up to joy.

My husband lives, that Tybalt would have

slain;

I Tybalt's dead, that would have slain my husband:

All this is comfort; wherefore weep I then?

One word there was, worse than Tybalt's

death,

That murder'd me: I would forget it fain;

But, O, it presses to my memory,

Like damned guilty deeds to sinners' minds:

Tybalt is dead, and Romeo—banished;

That banished, that one word—banished,

That slays ten thousand Tybalts. Tybalt's

death

Was woe enough, if it had ended there;

But woe was followed by woe, sorrow

And needily will be rank'd with other griefs,

Why follow'd not, when she said 'Tybalt's
dead'?

Thy father, or thy mother, nay, or both, are

Which modern lamentation might have moved!

But with a rearward following Tybalt's death,

'Romeo is banished,' to speak that word,

Is father, mother, Tybalt, Romeo, Juliet,

All slain, all dead. 'Romeo is banished'!

There is no end, no limit, measure, bound,

In that word's death; no words can that woe

sound.

Where is my father, and my mother, nurse?

Nurse. Weeping and wailing over Tybalt's corse:

Will you go to them? I will bring you thither.

Jul. Wash they his wounds with tears:

mine shall be spent,

When theirs are dry, for Romeo's banishment.

Take up those cords: poor ropes, you are beguiled,

Both you and I; for Romeo is exil'd:

He made you for a highway to my bed;

But I, a maid, die maiden-widowed.

Come, cords, come, nurse; I'll to my wedding-bed;

And death, not Romeo, take my maidenhead!

Nurse. Hie to your chamber: I'll find
Romeo

To comfort you: I wot well where he is.

Hark ye, your Romeo will be here at night: 140

I'll to him; he is hid at Laurence's cell.

Jul. O, find him! give this ring to my true knight,

And bid him come to take his last farewell.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Friar Laurence's cell.

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE.

Fri. L. Romeo, come forth; come forth,
thou fearful man;

Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts,
And thou art wedded to calamity.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. Father, what news? what is the prince's doom?

What sorrow craves acquaintance at my hand,
That I yet know not?

Fri. L. Too familiar

Is my dear son with such sour company:

I bring thee tidings of the prince's doom.

Rom. What less than doom's-day is the prince's doom?

Fri. L. A gentler judgement vanish'd from his lips,

Not body's death, but body's banishment.

Rom. Ha, banishment! be merciful, say
'death.'

For exile hath more terror in his look,
Much more than death: do not say 'banish-
ment.'

Fri. L. Hence from Verona see thou banished:

Be patient, for the world is broad and wide.

Rom. There is no world without Verona walls,
But purgatory, torment, hell itself.

Hence-banished is banish'd from the world,

And world's exile is death: then banished, so
In death mis-term'd: calling death banishment,
Thou cut'st my head off with a golden axe,
And smilest upon the stroke that murders me.

Fri. L. O deadly sin! O rude unthankful-
ness!

Thy fault our law calls death; but the kind
prince,

Taking thy part, hath rush'd aside the law,
And turn'd that black word death to banish-
ment:

This is dear mercy, and thou seest it not.

Rom. 'Tis torture, and not mercy: heaven
is here.

Where Juliet lives; and every cat and dog 30
And little mouse, every unworthy thing,
Live here in heaven and may look on her;

But Romeo may not: more validity,
More honourable state, more courtship lives

In carrion-fles than Romeo: they may seize
On the white wonder of dear Juliet's hand

And steal immortal blessing from her lips,
Who, even in pure and vestal modesty,

Still blush, as thinking their own kisses sin;
But Romeo may not; he is banished: 40

Filles may do this, but I from this must fly:
They are free men, but I am banish'd!

And say'st thou yet that exile is not death?
Hadst thou no poison mix'd, no sharp-ground

knife,

No sudden mean of death, though ne'er so mean,
But 'banish'd' to kill me?—'banish'd'!

O friar, the damned use that word in hell;
Howlings attend it: how hast thou the heart,

Being a divine, a ghostly confessor,
A sin-absolver, and my friend profess'd, 50

To mangle me with that word 'banish'd'?

Fri. L. Thou fond mad man, hear me but speak a word.

Rom. O, thou wilt speak again of banishment.

Fri. L. I'll give thee armour to keep off
that word:

Adversity's sweet milk, philosophy,
To comfort thee, though thou art banish'd.

Rom. Yet 'banish'd'! Hang up philosophy!
Unless philosophy can make a Juliet,

Displant a town, reverse a prince's doom,
It helps not, it prevails not: talk no more. 60

Fri. L. O, then I see that madmen have no ears.

Rom. How should they, when that wise men have no eyes?

Fri. L. Let me dispute with thee of thy
death.

Rom. Thou canst not speak of that thou dost not feel:

Wert thou as young as I, Juliet thy love,
An hour but married, Tybalt murdered,

Doting like me and like me banish'd,
Then might'st thou speak, then might'st thou
tear thy hair,

And fall upon the ground, as I do now,
Baking the measure of an unmade grave. 70

[Knocking within.]

Fri. L. Arise; one knocks; good Romeo, hide thyself.

Rom. I; unless the breath of heart-

Mist-like, unfold me from the search of eyes.

[Knocking.]

Fri. L. Hark, how they knock! Who's there? Romeo, arise;

Thou wilt be taken. Stay awhile

Run to my study. By and by! I come!

What simpleness is this! I

Who knocks so hard? whence come you?

what's your will?

Nurse. [Within] Let me come in, and you shall know my errand;

I come from Lady Juliet.

Fri. L. Welcome, then. 80

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. O holy friar, O, tell me, holy friar,

Where is my lady's lord, where's Romeo?

Fri. L. There on the ground, with his own tears made drunk.

Nurse. O, he is even in my mistress' case,
Just in her case! O woful sympathy!

Piteous predicament! Even so lies she,
Blubbering and weeping, weeping and blub-bering.

Stand up, stand up; stand, an you be a man:

For Juliet's sake, for her sake, rise and stand;

Why should you fall into so deep an O?

Rom. Nurse!

Nurse. Ah sir! ah sir! Well, death's the end of all.

Rom. Spakest thou of Juliet? how is it with
her?

Doth she not think me an old murderer,
Now I have stain'd the childhood of my joy

With blood removed but little from her own?
Where is she? and how doth she? and what says

My conceal'd lady to our cancell'd love?

Nurse. O, she says nothing, sir, but weep and weeps;

And now falls on her bed; and then starts up,
And Tybalt calls; and then on Romeo cries,
And then down falls again. 90

Rom. As if that name,
Shot from the deadly level of a gun,
Did murder her; as that name's cursed hand Murder'd her kinsman. O, tell me, friar, tell
me,

In what vile part of this anatomy
Doth my name lodge? tell me, that I may sack
The hateful mansion. [Drawing his sword.]

Fri. L. Hold thy desperate hand:

Art thou a man? thy form cries out thou art:

Thy tears are womanish; thy wild acts denote
The unreasonable fury of a beast: 100

Unseemly woman in a seeming man;
Or ill-beseeming beast in seeming both!

Thou hast amazed me: by my holy order,
I thought thy disposition better temper'd.

Hast thou slain Tybalt? wilt thou slay thyself
And slay thy lady too that lives in thee,
By doing damned hate upon thyself?

Why rail'st thou on thy birth, the heaven, an earth?

Since birth, and heaven, and earth, all three do meet

In thee at once; which thou at once wouldst lose. It were a grief, so brief to part with thee: Farewell. [Exit.]

Fie, fie, thou shamest thy shape, thy love, thy wit;

Which, like a usurer, abound'st in all,
And need'st none in that true use indeed
Which should bedeck thy shape, thy love, thy wit:

Thy noble shape is but a form of wax,
Digressing from the valour of a man;
Thy dear love sworn but hollow perjury,
Killing that love which thou hast vow'd to cherish;

Thy wit, that ornament to shape and love, 130
Mis-shapen in the conduct of them both,
Like powder in a skillless soldier's flask,
Is set a-fire by thine own ignorance,
And thou diamemb'd with thine own defence.
What, rouse thee, man! thy Juliet is alive,
For whose dear sake thou wast but lately dead;
There art thou happy: Tybalt would kill thee,
But thou slew'st Tybalt; there art thou happy too:

The law that threaten'd death becomes thy friend

And turns it to exile; there art thou happy: 140
A pack of blessings lights upon thy back;
Happiness courts thee in her best array;
But, like a misbehaved and sullen wench,
Thou pout'st upon thy fortune and thy love:
Take heed, take heed, for such die miserable.
Go, get thee to thy love, as was decreed,
Ascend her chamber, hence and comfort her:
But look thou stay not till the watch be set,
For then thou canst not pass to Mantua;
Where thou shalt live, till we can find a time: 150
To blame your marriage, reconcile your friends,
Beg pardon of the prince, and call thee back
With twenty hundred thousand times more joy

Than thou went'st forth in lamentation.
Go before, nurse: commend me to thy lady;
And bid her hasten all the house to bed,
Which heavy sorrow makes them apt unto:
Romeo is coming.

Nurse. O Lord, I could have stay'd here all the night
To hear good counsel: O, what learning is! 160
My lord, I'll tell my lady you will come.

Rom. Do so, and bid my sweet prepare to chide.

Nurse. Here, sir, a ring she bid me give you, sir;

Give you, make haste, for it grows very late. [Exit.]

Rom. How well my comfort is revived by this!

Fri. L. Go hence; good night; and here stands all your state:

Either be gone before the watch be set,
Or by the break of day disguised from hence:
Sojourn in Mantua; I'll find out your man,
And he shall signify from time to time 170
Every good hap to you that chances here:
Give me thy hand; 'tis late: farewell; good night.

Rom. But that a joy past joy calls out on me,

SCENE IV. A room in Capulet's house.

Enter CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, and PARIS.

Cap. Things have fall'n out, sir, so unluckily,
That we have had no time to move our daughter:
Look you, she loved her kinsman Tybalt dearly,
And so did I:—Well, we were born to die.
'Tis very late, she'll not come down to-night:
I promise you, but for your company,
I would have been a-bed an hour ago.

Par. These times of woe afford no time to woo.

Madam, good night: commend me to your daughter.

La. Cap. I will, and know her mind early to-morrow;

To-night she is mew'd up to her heaviness. 10

Cap. Sir Paris, I will make a desperate tender

Of my child's love: I think she will be ruled
In all respects by me; nay, more, I doubt it not.

Wife, go you to her ere you go to bed;
Acquaint her here of my son Paris' love;

And bid her, mark you me, on Wednesday next—

But, soft! what day is this?

Par. Monday, my lord.

Cap. Monday! ha, ha! Well, Wednesday is too soon,

O' Thursday let it be: o' Thursday, tell her, so
She shall be married to this noble earl.

Will you be ready? do you like this haste?

We'll keep no great ado,—a friend or two;

For, hark you, Tybalt being slain so late,
It may be thought we held him carelessly,

Being our kinsman, if we revel much;
Therefore we'll have some half a dozen friends,

And there an end. But what say you to Thursday?

Par. My lord, I would that Thursday were to-morrow.

Cap. Well, get you gone: o' Thursday be it, then. 30

Go you to Juliet ere you go to bed,
Prepare her, wife, against this wedding-day.

Farewell, my lord. Light to my chamber, ho!
Afore me! it is so very late.

That we may call it early by and by.
Good night. [Exit.]

SCENE V. Capulet's orchard.

Enter ROMEO and JULIET above, at the window.

Jul. Wilt thou be gone? it is not yet near day:

It was the nightingale, and not the lark,
That pierced the fearful hollow of thine ear;

Nightly she sings on yond pomegranate-tree;
Believe me, love, it was the nightingale.

Rom. It was the lark, the herald of the morn

No nightingale: look, love, what envious
stars

Do lace the severing clouds in yonder east:
Night's candles are burnt out, and jocund day
Stands tip-toe on the misty mountain tops. 10
I must be gone and live, or stay and die.

Jul. Yond light is not day-light, I know it: I:

It is some meteor that the sun exhales,
To be to thee this night a torch-bearer,
And light thee on thy way to Mantua:
Therefore stay yet; thou need'st not to be gone.

Rom. Let me be ta'en, let me be put to
death;

I am content, so thou wilt have it so.
I'll say yon grey is not the morning's eye,
Tis but the pale reflex of Cynthia's brow; 20
Nor that is not the lark, whose notes do beat
The vaulty heaven so high above our heads:
I have more care to stay than will to go:
Come, death, and welcome! Juliet wills it so.
How is't, my soul? let's talk; it is not day.

Jul. It is, it is; he hence, be gone, away!
It is the lark that sings so out of tune,
Straining harsh discords and unpleasing sharps.
Some say the lark makes sweet division;
This doth not so, for she divideth us: 30
Some say the lark and loathed toad change
eyes;

O, now I would they had changed voices too!
Since arm from arm that voice doth us asray,
Hunting thee hence with hunt's-up to the day.
O, now be gone; more light and light it grows.
Rom. More light and light; more dark and dark our woes!

Enter Nurse, to the chamber.

Nurse, Madam!

Jul. Nurse?

Nurse. Your lady mother is coming to your chamber:

The day is broke; be wary, look about. [Exit.]
Jul. Then, window, let day in, and let life
out.

Rom. Farewell, farewell! one kiss, and I'll descend. [He goeth down.]

Jul. Art thou gone so? love, lord, ay, husband, friend!

I must hear from thee every day in the hour,
For in a minute there are many days:
O, by this count I shall be more in years
Ere I again behold my Romeo!

Rom. Farewell!

I will omit no opportunity
That may convey my greetings, love, to thee. 50

Jul. O, think'st thou we shall ever meet
again?

Rom. I doubt it not; and all these woes shall serve

For sweet discourses in our time to come.

Jul. O God, I have an ill-divining soul!
Methinks I see thee, now thou art below,
As one dead in the bottom of a tomb;

Either my sight fails, or thou look'st pale.

Rom. And trust me, love, in my eye so do you:

Day, arrow drinks our blood. Adieu, adieu!

[Exit.]

Jul. O fortune, fortune! all men call thee fickle: 60

If thou art fickle, what dost thou with him
That is renown'd for faith? Be fickle, fortune;
For then, I hope, thou wilt not keep him long,
But send him back.

La. Cap. [Within] Ho, daughter! are you
up?

Jul. Who is't that calls? is it my lady
mother?

Is she not down so late, or up so early?
What unaccustom'd cause procures her hither?

Enter LADY CAPULET.

La. Cap. Why, how now, Juliet!

Jul. Madam, I am not well.

La. Cap. Evermore weeping for your cousin's
death? 70

What wilt thou wash him from his grave with
tears?

An if thou couldst, thou couldst not make him
live;

Therefore, have done: some grief shows much of love;

But much of grief shows still some want of wit.
Jul. Yet let me weep for such a feeling loss.

La. Cap. So shall you feel the loss, but not the friend

Which you weep for.

Jul. Feeling so the loss,
I cannot choose but ever weep the friend.

La. Cap. Well, girl, thou weep'st not so much for his death,

As that the villain lives which slaughter'd him.
Jul. What villain, madam?

La. Cap. That same villain, Romeo. 80

Jul. [Aside] Villain and he be many miles
asunder.—

God pardon him! I do, with all my heart;
And yet no man like he doth grieve my heart.

La. Cap. That is, because the traitor mur-derer lives.

Jul. Ay, madam, from the reach of these my hands:

Would none but I might vengeance my cousin's
death!

La. Cap. We will have vengeance for it, fear thou not:

Then weep no more. I'll send to one in Mantua,

Where that same banish'd rascal doth live,
Shall give him such an unaccustom'd drub, 90

That he shall soon keep Tybalt company:
And then, I hope, thou wilt be satisfied.

Jul. Indeed, I never shall be satisfied
With Romeo, till I behold him—dead—

Is my poor heart so for a kinsman vex'd:
Madam, if you could find out but a man

To bear a poison, I would temper it;
That Romeo should, upon receipt thereof, 95

heart above me to him,
named, and _____

To wreak the love I bore my cousin
Upon his body that hath slaughter'd him!

La. Cap. Find thou the means, and I'll
And such a man.

But now I'll tell thee joyful tidings, girl.

Jul. And joy comes well in such a needy time;

What are they, I beseech your ladyship?

La. Cap. Well, well, thou hast a careful father, child;

One who, to put thee from thy heaviness,
Hath sorted out a sudden day of joy.

"That thou expect'st not nor I look'd not for."
Jul. Madam, in happy time, what day is that?

La. Cap. Marry, my child, early next Thursday morn,

The gallant, young and noble gentleman,
The County Paris, at Saint Peter's Church,
Shall happily make thee there a joyful bride.

Jul. Now, by Saint Peter's Church and Peter too,

I shall not make me there a joyful bride.
I wonder at this haste: that I must wed

Ere he, that should be husband, comes to woo.
I pray you, tell my lord and father, madam, I will not marry yet; and, when I do, I swear,

It shall be Romeo, whom you know I hate,

Rather than Paris. These are news indeed!

La. Cap. Here comes your father; tell him so yourself,

And see how he will take it at your hands.

Enter CAPULET and Nurse.

Cap. When the sun sets, the air doth drizzle dew;

But for the sunset of my brother's son
It rains downright.

How now! a conduit, girl? what, still in tears?
Evermore showering? In one little body

Thou counterfeits't a bark, a sea, a wind;
For still thy eyes, which I may call the sea,

Do ebb and flow with tears; the bark thy body is,
Sailing in this salt flood; the winds, thy sighs;

Who, raging with thy tears, and they with them,
Without a sudden calm, will overset

Thy tempest-tossed body. How now, wife!
Have you deliver'd to her our decree?

La. Cap. Ay, sir; but she will none, she gives you thanks.

Cap. Would the fool were married to her grave!

Cap. Soft! take me with you, take me with you, wife.

Low! will she none? doth she not give us thanks?

Is she not proud? doth she not count her blest,
Nworthy as she is, that we have wrought

So worthy a gentleman to be her bridegroom?

Jul. Not proud, you have; but thankful, that you have;

And can I never be of what I hate;
And thankful even for hate, that is meant love.

Cap. How now, how now, chop-logic! What is this?

Proud, and 'I thank you,' and 'I thank you' not;

'I yet not proud;' mistress minion, you,
Thank me no thankings, nor proud me no

prouds,
but tell your fine joints 'gainst Thursday

next,

To go with Paris to Saint Peter's Church,
Or I will drag thee on a hurdle thither.

Out, you green-sickness carrion! out, you baggage!

You tallow-face!

La. Cap. Fie, fie! what, are you mad?

Jul. Good father, I beseech you on my knees,

Hear me with patience but to speak a word.

Cap. Hang thee, young baggage! disobedient wretch!

I tell thee what: get thee to church o' Thursday,
Or never after look me in the face;

Speak not, reply not, do not answer me;
My fingers itch. Wife, we scarce thought us

blest
That God had lent us but this only child;

But now I see this one is one too much,
And that we have a curse in having her:

Out on her, bidding!

Nurse. God in heaven bless her!

You are to blame, my lord, to rate her so.

Cap. And why, my lady wisdom? hold your tongue,

Good prudence; smatter with your gossip, go.

Nurse. I speak no treason.

Cap. O, God ye god-den.

Nurse. May not one speak?

Cap. Peace, you mazzling fool!

Utter your gravity o'er a gossip's bowl;
For here we need it not.

La. Cap. You are too hot.

Cap. 'Tis God's bread! It makes me mad:

† Day, night, hour, tide, time, work, play,
Alone, in company, still my care hath been

To have her match'd: and having now provided

A gentleman of noble parentage,
Of fair demesnes, youthful, and nobly train'd,

Stuff'd, as they say, with honourable parts,
Proportion'd as one's thought would wish a

man;
And then to have a wretched pining fool,

A whining manumet, in her fortune's tender,
To answer 'I'll not wed; I cannot love,

I am too young; I pray you, pardon me.'

But, an you will not wed, I'll pardon you:
Graze where you will, you shall not house with

me:
Look to't, think on't, I do not use to jest.

Thursday is near; lay hand on heart, advise:
An you be mine, I'll give you to my friend;

An you be not, hang, beg, starve, die in the streets,
For, by my soul, I'll ne'er acknowledge thee,
Nor what is mine shall never do thee good:
Trust to't, beshink you; I'll not be forewarn'd.

Jul. Is there no pity sitting in the clouds,
That sees into the bottom of my grief?

O, sweet my mother, cast me not away!
Delay this marriage for a month, a week;
Or, if you do not, make the bride bed
In that dim monument where Tybalt lies.

La. Cap. Talk not to me, for I'll not speak a word:
Do as thou wilt, for I have done with thee.

Jul. O God!—O nurse, how shall this be prevented?

My husband is on earth, my faith in heaven;
How shall that faith return again to earth,
Unless that husband send it me from heaven
By leaving earth? comfort me, counsel me.
Alack, alack, that heaven should practise stratagems!

Upon so soft a subject as myself!
What say'st thou? hast thou not a word of joy?
Some comfort, nurse.

Nurse. Faith, here it is.
Romeo is banish'd; and all the world to nothing,
That he dares ne'er come back to challenge you;

Or, if he do, it needs must be by stealth.
Then, since the case so stands as now it doth,
I think it best you married with the county.
O, he's a lovely gentleman!

Romeo's a dialsoul to him: an eagle, madam,
Hath not so green, so quick, so fair an eye
As Paris hath. Beshrew my very heart,
I think you are happy in this second match,
For it exceeds your first: or if it did not,
Your first is dead; or 'twere as good he were,
As living here and you no use of him.

Jul. Speakest thou from thy heart?
Nurse. And from my soul too;
Or else beshrew them both.

Jul. Amen!
Nurse. What!
Jul. Well, thou hast comforted me marvelous much.

Go in; and tell my lady I am gone,
Having displeased my father, to Laurence's cell,
To make confession and to be absolved.

Nurse. Marry, I will; and this is wisely done.

Jul. Ancient damnation! O most wicked fiend!

Is it more sin to wish me thus forsworn,
Or to dispraise my lord with that same tongue
Which she hath praised him with above compare
So many thousand times? Go, counsellor;
Thou and my bosom henceforth shall be twain.
I'll to the friar, to know his remedy;
If all else fail, myself have power to die. [Exit.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I. Friar Laurence's cell.

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE and PARIS.

Fri. L. On Thursday, sir? the time is very short.

Par. My father Capulet will have it so;
And I am nothing slow to slack his haste.

Fri. L. You say you do not know the lady's mind.

Unwoven is the course, I like it not.

Par. Immediately she weeps for Tybalt's death.

And therefore have I little talk'd of love;
For Venus smiles not in a house of tears.
Now, sir, my father counts it dangerous
That she doth give her sorrow so much sway,
So in his wisdom hastes our marriage,
To comfort her fondness.

Which, too much minded by herself alone,
May be put from her by society:

Now do you know the reason of this haste.

Fri. L. [Aside] I would I knew not why it should be slow'd.

Look, sir, here comes the lady towards my cell.

Enter JULIET.

Par. Happily met, my lady and my wife!

Jul. That may be, sir, when I may be a wife.

Par. That may be must be, love, on Thursday next.

Jul. What must be shall be.

Fri. L. That's a certain text.

Par. Come you to make confession to this father?

Jul. To answer that, I should confess to you.

Par. Do not deny to him that you love me.

Jul. I will confess to you that I love him.

Par. So will ye, I am sure, that you love me.

Jul. If I do so, it will be of more price,
Being spoke behind your back, than to your face.

Par. Poor soul, thy face is much abused with tears.

Jul. The tears have got small victory by that;

For it was had enough before their spite.

Par. Thou wrong'st it, more than tears with that report.

Jul. That is no slander, sir, which is a truth
And what I spake, I spake it to my face.

Par. Thy face is mine, and thou hast slander'd it.

Jul. It may be so, for it is not mine own.

Are you at leisure, holy father, now;
Or shall I come to you at evening mass?

Fri. L. My leisure serves me, pensive daughter, now.

My lord, we must entreat the time alone.

Par. God shield I should disturb devotion!
Juliet, on Thursday early will I rouse ye;

Till then, adieu; and keep this holy kiss. [Exit.]

Jul. O, shut the door! and when thou hast done so,

Come weep with me; past hope, past cure, past help!

Fri. L. Ah, Juliet, I already know thy grief;

It strains me past the compass of my wits:
I hear thou must, and nothing may prologue it,
On Thursday next be married to this county.

Jul. Tell me not, friar, that thou hear'st of this.

Unless thou tell me how I may prevent it:
If, in thy wisdom, thou canst give no help.

Do thou but call my resolution wise,
And with this knife I'll help it presently.

God join'd my heart and Romeo's, thou our hands;

And ere this hand, by thee to Romeo seal'd,
Shall be the label to another deed.

Or my true heart with treacherous revolt
Turn to another, this shall slay them both:

Therefore, out of thy long-experienced time,
Give me present counsel, or, behold,

'Twixt my extremes and me this bloody knife
Shall play the umpire, arbitrating that
Which the commission of thy years and art
Could to no issue of true honour bring.
Be not so long to speak; I long to die,
If what thou speak'st speak not of remedy.

Fri. L. Hold, daughter: I do spy a kind of hope,

Which craves as desperate an execution
As that is desperate which we would prevent.
If, rather than to marry County Paris,
Thou hast the strength of will to slay thyself,
Then is it likely thou wilt undertake
A thing like death to chide away this shame,
That exspect with death himself to scape from it;
And, if thou darest, I'll give thee remedy.

Jul. O, bid me leap, rather than marry Paris,

From off the battlements of yonder tower;
Or walk in thievish ways; or bid me lurk
Where serpents are; chain me with roaring
bears;

Or shut me nightly in a charnel-house,
O'er-cover'd quite with dead men's rattling
bones,

With rocky shanks and yellow chapless skulls;
Or bid me go into a new-made grave
And hide me with a dead man in his shroud;
Things that, to hear them told, have made me
tremble;

And I will do it without fear or doubt,
To live an unstain'd wife to my sweet love.

Fri. L. Hold, then; go home, be merry, give consent

To marry Paris: Wednesday is to-morrow: go
To-morrow night look that thou lie alone;
Let not thy nurse lie with thee in thy chamber:
Take thou this vial, being then in bed,
And this distilled liquor drink thou off;

When presently through all thy veins shall run
A cold and drowsy humour, for no pulse
Shall keep his native progress, but surcease:
No warmth, no breath, shall testify thou livest;
The roses in thy lips and cheeks shall fade
To pale ashes, thy eyes' windows fall,
Like death, when he shuts up the day of life;
Each part, deprived of supple government,
Shall, stiff and stark and cold, appear like
death:

And in this borrow'd likeness of shrunk death
Thou shalt continue two and forty hours,
And then awake as from a pleasant sleep.
Now, when the bridegroom in the morning
comes

To rouse thee from thy bed, there art thou
dead:

Then, as the manner of our country is,
In thy best robes uncover'd on the bier,
Thou shalt be borne to that same ancient vault
Where all the kindred of the Capulets lie.

In the mean time, against thou shalt awake,
Shall Romeo by my letters know our drift,
And hither shall he come; and he and I
Will watch thy waking, and that very night
Shall Romeo bear thee hence to Mantua.
And this shall free thee from this present
shame;

If no incontinent toy, nor womanish fear,

Abate thy valour in the acting it.

Jul. Give me, give me! O, tell not me of fear!

Fri. L. Hold; get you gone, be strong and prosperous

In this resolve: I'll send a friar with speed
To Mantua, with my letters to thy lord.

Jul. Love give me strength! and strength shall help afford.

Farewell, dear father! [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Hall in Capulet's house.

Enter CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, Nurse, and two Servingmen.

Cap. So many guests invite as here are writ.

[Exit First Servant.]

Sirrah, go hire me twenty cunning cooks.
Sec. Serv. You shall have none ill, sir; for I'll try if they can lick their fingers.

Cap. How canst thou try them so?

Sec. Serv. Marry, sir, 'tis an ill cook that cannot lick his own fingers: therefore he that cannot lick his fingers goes not with me.

Cap. Go, be gone. [Exit Sec. Servant.]

We shall be much unfurnish'd for this time. 10
What is my daughter gone to Friar Laurence?

Nurse. Ay, forsooth.

Cap. Well, he may chance to do some good on her:

A peevish self-will'd harlotry it is.

Nurse. See where she comes from shrift with merry look.

Enter JULIET.

Cap. How now, my headstrong! where have you been gadding?

Jul. Where I have learn'd me to repent the sin

Of disobedient opposition

To you and your behests, and am enjoin'd

By holy Laurence to fall prostrate here, 20

And beg your pardon: pardon, I beseech you!

Henceforward I am ever ruled by you.

Cap. Send for the county; go tell him of
this:

I'll have this knot knit up to-morrow morning.

Jul. I met the youthful lord at Laurence's cell;

And gave him what becometh love I might,

Not stopping o'er the bounds of modesty.

Cap. Why, I am glad on't; this is well:

stand up:

This is as't should be. Let me see the county;

Ay, marry, go, I say, and fetch him hither. 30

Now, afore God! this reverend holy friar,

All our whole city is much bound to him.

Jul. Nurse, will you go with me into my closet,

To help me sort such needful ornaments

As you think fit to furnish me to-morrow?

La. Cap. No, not till Thursday; there is time enough.

Cap. Go, nurse, go with her: we'll to church to-morrow. [Exeunt Juliet and Nurse.]

La. Cap. We shall be short in our vision:

It is now near night.

Cap. Tush, I will stir about,
And all things shall be well, I warrant thee,
wife: 40

Go thou to Juliet, help to deck up her;
I'll not go to bed to-night; let me alone;
I'll play the housewife for this once. What,
so!

They are all forth. Well, I will walk myself
To County Paris, to prepare him up Against to-morrow: my heart is wondrous
light,
Since this same wayward girl is so reclaim'd.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Juliet's chamber.

Enter JULIET and Nurse.

Jul. Ay, those attires are best: but, gentle
nurse,
I pray thee, leave me to myself to-night;
For I have need of many orisons
To move the heavens to smile upon my state,
Which, well thou know'st, is cross and full of sin.

Enter LADY CAPULET.

La. Cap. What, are you busy, ho need you my help?

Jul. No, madam; we have cull'd such necessaries

As are behoveful for our state to-morrow:
So please you, let me now be left alone,
And let the nurse this night sit up with you;
For, I am sure, you have your hands full all,
In this so sudden business.

La. Cap. Good night:
Get thee to bed, and rest; for thou hast need.
[Exeunt Lady Capulet and Nurse.]

Jul. Farewell! God knows when we shall meet again.

I have a faint cold fear thrills through my
veins,

That almost freezes up the heat of life:

I'll call them back again to comfort me:

Nurse! What should she do here?

My dismal scene I needs must act alone.

Come, vial.

What if this mixture do not work at all?

Shall I be married then to-morrow morning?

No, no: this shall forbid it: lie thou there.

[Laying down her dagger.]

What if it be a poison, which the friar
Subtly hath minister'd to have me dead,

Left in this marriage he should be dishonour'd,

Because he married me before to Romeo?

I fear it is: and yet, methinks, it should not,

For he hath still been tried a holy man.

How if, when I am laid into the tomb,

I wake before the time that Romeo
Comes to redeem me? there's a fearful point!

Shall I not, then, be stifled in the vault,

To whose foul mouth no healthsome air breathes

in?

And what if, struggling, on my Romeo comes?

O, it is not very like.

Thou wilt not see me:—being so dead, at night,

Thou wilt not look on the terror of this place,—

As in a vault, an ancient receptacle,
Where, for these many hundred years, the
bones

Of all my buried ancestors are pack'd:
Where bloody Tybalt, yet but green in earth, Lies festering in his shroud;—here, as they

say,
At some hours in the night spirits resort:—
Alack, alack, is it not like that I,
So early waking, what with loathsome smells,
And shrieks like mandrakes' torn out of the earth,

That living mortals, hearing them, run mad:—
(1) if I wake, shall I not be distraught,
Environed with all these hideous fears?

And madly play with my forefathers' joints?
And pluck the mangled Tybalt from his shroud
And, in this rage, with some great kinsman

bone,
As with a club, dash out my desperate brains?
O, look! methinks I see my cousin's ghost
Seeking out Romeo, that did spit his body
Upon a rapier's point: stay, Tybalt, stay!

Romeo, I come! this do I drink to thee.
[She falls upon her bed, within the curtains.]

SCENE IV. Hall in Capulet's house.

Enter LADY CAPULET and Nurse.

La. Cap. Hold, take these keys, and fetch more spices, nurse.

Nurse. They call for dates and quinces in the pastry.

Enter CAPULET.

Cap. Come, stir, stir, stir! the second cock hath crow'd.

The curfew-bell hath rung, 'tis three o'clock:

Look to the baked meats, good Angelica:

Spare not for cost.

Nurse. (Go, you cut-queen, go,
Get you to bed; faith, you'll be sick to-morrow
For this night's watching.

Cap. No, not a whit: what! I have watch'd ere now

All night for lesser cause, and ne'er been sick.

La. Cap. Ay, you have been a mouse-hunt
in your time:

But I will watch you from such watching now.

[Exeunt Lady Capulet and Nurse.]

Cap. A jealous-hood, a jealous-hood!

Enter three or four Servingmen, with spits, logs, and baskets.

Now, follow,

What's there?

First Serv. Things for the cook, sir; but I know not what.

Cap. Make haste, make haste. [*Exit First
Serv.*] Hush, fetch drier logs:

Call Peter, he will show thee where they are.

Sec. Serv. I have a head, sir, that will find out logs,

And never trouble Peter for the matter. [*Exit
Cap.*]

Cap. Mass, and well said; a merry whorson, ha!

Thou shalt be logger-head. Good faith, 'tis day:
The country will be here with milk.

For so he said he would: I hear him near.

Nurse! Wife! What, ho! What, nurse, I say!

Re-enter Nurse.

(Go waken Juliet, go and trim her up;
I'll go and chat with Paris: hie, make haste,
Make haste; the bridegroom he is come already:
Make haste, I say.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Juliet's chamber.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Mistress! what, mistress! Juliet!
fast, I warrant her, she:
Why, lambs! why, lady! lie, you slug-a-bed!
Why, love, I say! madam! sweet-heart! why, bride!
What, not a word! you take your pennyworths
now:
Sleep for a week; for the next night, I warrant,
The County Paris hath set up his rest,
That you shall rest but little. God forgive me,
Marry, and amen, how sound is she asleep!
I must needs wake her. Madam, madam,
madam!
Ay, let the county take you in your bed; so He'll fright you up, I faith. Will it not be!
[Undraws the curtains.
What, dress'd! and in your clothes! and down
again!
I must needs wake you: Lady! lady! lady!
Alas, alas! Help, help! my lady's dead!
O, well-a-day, that ever I was born!
Some aqua vitae, ho! My lord! my lady!

Enter LADY CAPULET.

La. Cap. What noise is here?
Nurse. O lamentable day!
La. Cap. What is the matter?
Nurse. Look, look! O heavy day!
La. Cap. O me, O me! My child, my only
life,
Revive, look up, or I will die with thee! so Help, help! Call help.

Enter CAPULET.

Cap. For shame, bring Juliet forth; her lord is come.
Nurse. She's dead, deceased, she's dead;
sleek the day!
La. Cap. Alack the day, she's dead, she's dead, she's dead!
Cap. Ha! let me see her: out, alas! she's
cold;
Her blood is freeze, and her joints are stiff;
Life and these lips have long been separated:
Death lies on her like an untimely frost
Upon the sweetest flower of all the field.
Nurse. O lamentable day!
La. Cap. O woful time! so Cap. Death, that hath taken her hence to make me wail,
Tie up my tongue, and will not let me speak.

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE and PARIS, with Musicians.

Fri. L. Come, is the bride ready to go to church?

Cap. Ready to go, but never to return.
O son! the night before thy wedding-day
Hath Death lain with thy wife. There she lies,
Flower as she was, deflowered by him.
Death is my son-in-law, Death is my heir;
My daughter he hath wedded: I will die,
And leave him all; life, living, all is Death's.

Par. Have I thought long to see this morn-ing's face,

And doth it give me such a sight as this!
La. Cap. Accursed, unhappy, wretched, hateful day!

Most miserable hour that e'er time saw
In lasting labour of his pilgrimage!
But one, poor one, one poor and loving child,
But one thing to rejoice and solace in,
And cruel death hath catch'd it from my sight!

Nurse. O woe! O woful, woful, woful day!
Most lamentable day, most woful day, so
That ever, ever, I did yet behold!
O day! O day! O day! O hateful day!
Never was seen so black a day as this:
O woful day, O woful day!

Par. Beguiled, divorced, wronged, spild,
slain!

Most detestable death, by thee beguiled,
By cruel thee quite overthrown!
O love! O life! not life, but love in death!

Cap. Despised, distressed, hated, martyr'd, kill'd!

Uncomfortable time, why earnest thou now? so
To murder, murder our solemnity!
O child! O child! my soul, and not my child!
Dead art thou! Alack! my child is dead;
And with my child my joys are buried.

Fri. L. Peace, ho, for shame! confessor's cure lives not

In these confusions. Heaven and yourself
Had part in this fair maid; now heaven hath kill'd,
And all the better is it for the maid:
Your part in her you could not keep from
death,

But heaven keeps his part in eternal life. so
The most you sought was her promotion:
For 'twas your heaven she should be advanced;
And weep ye now, seeing she is advanced
Above the clouds, as high as heaven itself!

O, in this love, you love your child so ill,
That you run mad, seeing that she is well;
She's not well married that lives married long;
But she's best married that dies married young.
Dry up your tears, and stick your fingers
In this fair corner; and, as this corner is, so
In all her best array, bear her to church:
For though fond nature bids us all lament,
Yet nature's tears are reason's memento.

Cap. All things that be ordained for sorrow,
Turn from their office to hunt merriment:
Our instruments to merriment make
Our wedding cheer to a sad burial feast;
Our solemn hymns to a sad burial song;
Our bridal flowers serve for a funeral casket;
And all things change them to the contrary: so

Fri. L. Sir, go you in; and, madam, go with him;

And go, Sir Paris; every one prepare To follow this fair corpse unto her grave: The heavens do lour upon you for some ill; Move them no more by crowning their high will. [Exeunt Capulet, Lady Capulet, Paris, and Friar.]

First Mus. Faith, we may put up our pipes, and be gone.

Nurse. Honest good fellows, ah, put up, put up;

For, well you know, this is a pitiful case. [Exit.]
First Mus. Ay, by my troth, the case may be amended. 101

Enter PETER.

Pet. Musicians, O, musicians, 'Heart's ease, Heart's ease:' O, an you will have me live, play 'Heart's ease'.

First Mus. Why 'Heart's ease'?

Pet. O, musicians, because my heart itself plays 'My heart is full of woe:' O, play me some merry dump, to comfort me.

First Mus. Not a dump we; 'tis no time to play now. 110

Pet. You will not, then?

First Mus. No.

Pet. I will then give it you soundly.

First Mus. What will you give us?

Pet. No money, on my faith, but the gleek; I will give you the minstrel.

First Mus. Then will I give you the serving-creature.

Pet. Then will I lay the serving-creature's dagger on your pate. I will carry no crochets: I'll re you, I'll re you; do you note me? 121

First Mus. An you re us and fa us, you note us.

Sec. Mus. Pray you, put up your dagger, and put out your wit.

Pet. Then have at you with my wit! I will dry-beat you with an iron wit, and put up my iron dagger. Answer me like men:

'When gripping grief the heart doth oppress,
And doleful dumps the mind oppress,
Then music with her silver sound'— 130

why 'silver sound'? why 'music with her silver sound'? What say you, Simon Catling?

First Mus. Marry, sir, because silver hath a sweet sound.

Pet. Pretty! What say you, Hugh Rebeck?

Sec. Mus. I say 'silver sound,' because musicians sound for silver.

Pet. Pretty too! What say you, James Soundpost?

Third Mus. Faith, I know not what to say.

Pet. O, I cry you mercy; you are the singer: I will say for you. It is 'music with her silver sound,' because musicians have no gold for sounding:

'Then music with her silver sound
Will speedy help doth lend redress.' [Exit.]

First Mus. What a pestilent knave is this same!

Sec. Mus. Hang him, Jack! Come, we'll in time to say for the mourners, and stay dinner. [Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I. Mantua. A street.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. If I may trust the flattering truth of sleep,

My dreams presage some joyful news at hand: My bosom's lord sits lightly in his throne;

And all this day an unaccustom'd spirit Lifts me above the ground with cheerful thoughts.

I dreamt my lady came and found me dead— Strange! dream, that gives a dead man leave to think!—

And breathed such life with kisses in my lips, That I revived, and was an emperor.

Ah me! how sweet is love itself possess'd, When but love's shadows are so rich in joy! 10

Enter BALTHASAR, bootied.

News from Verona!—How now, Balthasar! Dost thou not bring me letters from the friar?

How doth my lady? Is my father well? How fares my Juliet? that I ask again;

For nothing can be ill, if she be well.

Bal. Then she is well, and nothing can be ill:

Her body sleeps in Capels' monument, And her immortal part with angels lives.

I saw her laid low in her kindred's vault, And presently took post to tell it you:

O, pardon me for bringing these ill news, Since you did leave it for my office, sir.

Rom. Is it even so? then I defy you, stars! Thou know'st my lodging: get me ink and paper,

And hire post-horses; I will hence to-night.

Bal. I do beseech you, sir, have patience: Your looks are pale and wild, and do import Some misadventure.

Rom. Tush, thou art deceived: Leave me, and do the thing I bid thee do.

Hast thou no letters to me from the friar?

Bal. No, my good lord.

Rom. No matter: get thee gone, And hire those horses; I'll be with thee straight. [Exit Balthasar.]

Well, Juliet, I will lie with thee to-night. Let's see for means: O mischief, thou art swift To enter in the thoughts of desperate men!

I do remember an apothecary,— And hereabouts he dwells,—which late I noted In tatter'd weeds, with overwhelming brows,

Culling of simples; meagre were his looks, Sharp misery had worn him to the bones:

And in his needy shop a tortoise hung, An alligator stuff'd, and other skins

Of ill-shaped fishes; and about his shelves

Were thinly scatter'd, to make up a show. Noting this penury, to myself I said,

'An if a man did need a poison now, Whose sale is present death in Mantua,

Here lives a catiff wretch would sell it him. O, this same thought did but forewarn my past;

And this same needy man must sell it me.
As I remember, this should be the house.
Being holiday, the beggar's shop is shut.
What, ho! apothecary!

Enter Apothecary.

Ap. Who calls so loud?

Rom. Come hither, man. I see that thou art poor:
Iold, there is forty ducats: let me have
A dram of poison, such soon-speeding gear 60
As will dispatch itself through all the veins
That the life-weary taker may fall dead
And that the trunk may be discharged of breath
As violently as hasty powder fired
Doth hurry from the fatal cannon's womb.

Ap. Such mortal drugs I have; but Mantua's law
Is death to any he that utters them.

Rom. Art thou so bare and full of wretchedness,

And fear'st to die? famine is in thy cheeks,
Need and oppression starveth in thine eyes, 70
Contempt and beggary hangs upon thy back;
The world is not thy friend nor the world's law;
The world affords no law to make thee rich;
Then be not poor, but break it, and take this.

Ap. My poverty, but not my will, consents.

Rom. I pay thy poverty, and not thy will.

Ap. Put this in any liquid thing you will,
And drink it off; and, if you had the strength
Of twenty men, it would dispatch you straight.

Rom. There is thy gold, worse poison to men's souls,
Doing more murders in this loathsome world, 80
Than these poor compounds that thou mayst not sell.

sell thee poison; thou hast sold me none.
Farewell: buy food, and get thyself in flesh.
Come, cordial and not poison, go with me
To Juliet's grave; for there must I use thee.

[Exit.]

SCENE II. Friar Laurence's cell.

Enter FRIAR JOHN.

Fri. J. Holy Franciscan friar! brother, ho!

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE.

Fri. L. This same should be the voice of Friar John.

Welcome from Mantua: what says Romeo?
If his mind be writ, give me his letter.

Fri. J. Going to find a bare-foot brother out,
me of our order, to associate me,
here in this city visiting the sick,
and finding him, the searchers of the town,
suspecting that we both were in a house where the infectious pestilence did reign, 10
call'd up the doors, and would not let us forth;
so that my speed to Mantua there was stay'd.

Fri. L. Who bare my letter, then, to Romeo?

Fri. J. I could not send it,—here it is again,— for get a messenger to bring it thee,

so fearful were they of infection.

Fri. L. Unhappy fortune! by my brotherhood,

letter was not nice but full of charge

dear import, and the neglecting it

May do much danger. Friar John, go hence;
Get me an iron crow, and bring it straight
Unto my cell.

Fri. J. Brother, I'll go and bring it thee.

[Exit.]

Fri. L. Now must I to the monument alone;
Within this three hours will fair Juliet wake:
She will bestrew me much that Romeo
Hath had no notice of these accidents;
But I will write again to Mantua,
And keep her at my cell till Romeo come; 20
Poor living corse, closed in a dead man's tomb!

[Exit.]

SCENE III. A churchyard; in it a tomb belonging to the Capulets.

Enter PARIS, and his Page bearing flowers and a torch.

Par. Give me thy torch, boy: hence, and stand aloof:

Yet put it out, for I would not be seen.
Under yond yew-trees lay thee all along,
Holding thine ear close to the hollow ground;
So shall no foot upon the churchyard tread,
Being loose, unfirm, with digging up of graves,
But thou shalt hear it: whistle then to me,
As signal that thou hear'st something approach.
Give me those flowers. Do as I bid thee, go.

Page. [Aside] I am almost afraid to stand
alone
Here in the churchyard; yet I will adventure. 10

Par. Sweet flower, with flowers thy bridal bed I strew,—

O woe! thy canopy is dust and stones;—
Which with sweet water nightly I will dew,
Or, wanting that, with tears distill'd by moans:

The obsequies that I for thee will keep Nightly shall be to strew thy grave and weep.
[The Page whistles.]

The boy gives warning something doth approach.

What cursed foot wanders this way to-night,
To cross my obsequies and true love's rite? 20
What, with a torch! muffle me, night, awhile.
[Retires.]

Enter ROMEO and BALTHAZAR, with a torch, mattock, &c.

Rom. Give me that mattock and the wrenching iron.

Hold, take this letter; early in the morning
See thou deliver it to my lord and father.
(Give me the light: upon thy life, I charge thee,
Where'er thou hear'st or seest, stand all aloof,
And do not interrupt me in my course.)

Why I descend into this bed of death,
Is partly to behold my lady's face;
But chiefly to take thence from her dead finger
A precious ring, a ring that I must use 30
In dear employment; therefore hence, be gone:
But if thou, jealous, dost return to pry
In what I further shall intend to do,
By heaven, I will tear thee joint by joint
And strew this hungry churchyard with thy limbs:

The time and my intents are savage-wild,
More fierce and more inexorable far
Than empty tigers or the roaring sea.

Bal. I will be gone, sir, and not trouble you.

Rom. So shalt thou show me friendship.

Take thou that:

Live, and be prosperous: and farewell, good fellow.

Bal. [Aside] For all this same, I'll hide me
hereabout:

His looks I fear, and his intents I doubt.

[Retires.]

Rom. Thou detestable maw, thou womb of
death,

Gorged with the dearest morsel of the earth,

Thus I enforce thy rotten jaws to open,

And, in despite, I'll cram thee with more food!

[Opens the tomb.]

Par. This is that banish'd haughty Montague, That murder'd my love's cousin, with which

grief,

It is supposed, the fair creature died;

And here is come to do some villainous shame

To the dead bodies: I will apprehend him.

[Comes forward.]

Stop thy unhallow'd toil, vile Montague!

Oan vengeance be pursued further than death!

Condemned villain, I do apprehend thee:

Obeys, and go with me; for thou must die.

Rom. I must indeed; and therefore came I hither.

Good gentle youth, tempt not a desperate man;
Fly hence, and leave me: think upon these

gone;

Let them affright thee. I beseech thee, youth,

Put not another sin upon my head,

By crying me to fury: O, be gone!

By heaven, I love thee better than myself;

For I come hither arm'd against myself:

Say not, be gone; live, and hereafter say,

A madman's mercy bade thee run away.

Par. I do defy thy conjurations,

And apprehend thee for a felon here.

Rom. Wilt thou provoke me? then have at thee, boy! [They fight.]

Page. O Lord, they fight! I will go call the watch. [Exit.]

Par. O, I am slain! [Falls.] If thou be merciful,

Open the tomb, lay me with Juliet. [Dies.]

Rom. In faith, I will. Let me peruse this face.

Mercutio's kinsman, noble County Paris!

What said my man, when my betossed soul

Did not attend him as we rode? I think

He told me Paris should have married Juliet:

Said he not so? or did I dream it so?

Or am I mad, hearing him talk of Juliet, 80

To think it was so? O, give me thy hand,

One with me in some misfortune's look!

I'll bury thee in a triumphant grave;

A grave! O, no! a lantern, slaughter'd youth,

For here lies Juliet, and her beauty makes

This vault a feasting presence full of light.

Death, lie thou there, by a dead man interr'd.

[Laying Paris in the tomb.]

Now, when men are at the point of death,

Have they been merry! which their keepers call
A lightning before death: O, how may I
Call this a lightning! O my love! my wife!
Death, that hath suck'd the honey of thy
breath,

Hath had no power yet upon thy beauty:
Thou art not conquer'd; beauty's ensign yet
Is crimson in thy lips and in thy cheeks,
And death's pale flag is not advanced there.

Tybalt, liest thou there in thy bloody sheet!

O, what more favour can I do to thee,

Than with that hand that cut thy youth in twain

To sunder his that was thine enemy?

Forgive me, cousin! Ah, dear Juliet,

Why art thou yet so fair? shall I believe

That unsubstantial death is amorous?

And that the lean abhorred monster keeps

Thee here in dark to be his paramour?

For fear of that, I still will stay with thee;

And never from this palace of dim night

Depart again: here, here will I remain

With worms that are thy chamber-maids;

here

Will I set up my everlasting rest,

And shake the yoke of inauspicious stars

From this world-wearied flesh. Eyes, look you last!

Arms, take your last embrace! and, lips, O

you

The doors of breath, seal with a righteous kiss

A dateless bargain to engrossing death!

Come, bitter conduct, come, unsavoury guide

Thou desperate pilot, now at once run on

The dashing rocks thy sea-sick weary bark!

Here's to my love! [Drinks.] O true apothcary!

Thy drugs are quick. Thus with a kiss I die.

[Dies.]

Enter, at the other end of the churchyard

FRIBAR LAURENCE, with a lantern, cruci-and spade.

Fri. L. Saint Francis be my speed! how oft to-night

Have my old feet stumbled at graves! Who

there?

Bal. Here's one, a friend, and one that knows you well.

Fri. L. Bliss be upon you! Tell me, good

my friend,

What torch is yond, that vainly lends his light

To grubs and eyeless skulls? as I discern,

It burneth in the Capels' monument.

Bal. It doth so, holy sir; and there's my master,

One that you love.

Fri. L. Who is it?

Bal. Romeo.

Fri. L. How long hath he been there?

Bal. Full half an hour.

Fri. L. Go with me to the vault.

Bal. I dare not, sir:

My master knows not but I am gone hence;

His old manhood was with death,

comes upon me:

O, much I fear some ill-unlucky thing.

Bal. As I did sleep under this yew-tree here,
I dreamt my master and another fought,
And that my master slew him.

Fri. L.

Romeo!

Alack, alack, what blood is this, which stains
The stony entrance of this sepulchre!
What mean these masterless and gory swords
To lie discolour'd by this place of peace?

Romeo! O, pale! Who else? what, Paris too!
And steep'd in blood! Ah, what an unkind hour
Is guilty of this lamentable chance!

The lady stirs.

Jul. O comfortable friar! where is my lord?
I do remember well where I should be,
And there I am. Where is my Romeo?

Fri. L. I hear some noise. Lady, come from that nest

O death, contagion, and unnatural sleep:
A greater power than we can contradict
Hath thwarted our intents. Come, come away.
Thy husband in thy bosom there lies dead;
And Paris too. Come, I'll dispose of thee
Among a sisterhood of holy nuns:
Stay not to question, for the watch is coming;
Come, go, good Juliet. [Noise again], I dare
no longer stay.

Jul. Go, get thee hence, for I will not away.

What's here? a cup, clos'd in my true love's
hand!

Poison, I see, hath been his timeless end;
O churl! drunk all, and left no friendly drop
To help me after! I will kiss thy lips;
Haply some poison yet doth hang on them,
To make me die with a restorative. [Kisses him].
Thy lips are warm.

First Watch. [Within] Lead, boy: which
way!

Jul. Yea, noise! then I'll be brief. O happy dagger! [Snatching Romeo's dagger].
This is thy sheath [Stabs herself]; there rust,
and let me die.

[Falls on Romeo's body, and dies.]

Enter Watch, with the Page of PARIS.

Page. This is the place; there, where the torch doth burn.

First Watch. The ground is bloody; search about the churchyard:

Go, some of you, whoever you find attach.
Pitiful sight! here lies the county slain;
And Juliet bleeding, warm, and newly dead,
Who here hath lain these two days buried.
Go, tell the prince: run to the Capulets:
Raise up the Montagues: some others search:
We see the ground whereon these woes do lie;
But the true ground of all these piteous woes
We cannot without circumstance descry.

Re-enter some of the Watch, with BALTHAZAR.

Sec. Watch. Here's Romeo's man; we found him in the churchyard.

First Watch. Hold him in safety, till the prince come thither.

Re-enter others of the Watch, with FRIAR LAURENCE.

Third Watch. Here is a friar, that tumbles, sighs, and weeps:
We took this mattock and this spade from him,
As he was coming from this churchyard side.

First Watch. A great suspicion: stay the friar too.

Enter the PRINCE and Attendants.

Prince. What misadventure is so early up, that calls our person from our morning's rest?

Enter CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, and others.

Cap. What should it be, that they so shriek
abroad?

La. Cap. The people in the street cry Romeo,
some Juliet, and some Paris; and all run,
With open outcry, toward our monument.

Prince. What fear is this which startles in our ears?

First Watch. Sovereign, here lies the County
Paris slain;

And Romeo dead; and Juliet, dead before,
Warm and new kill'd.

Prince. Search, seek, and know how this foul murder comes.

First Watch. Here is a friar, and slaughter'd Romeo's man;

With instruments upon them, fit to open
These dead men's tombs.

Cap. O heavens! O wife, look how our daughter bleeds!

This dagger hath mista'en.—for, lo, his house
Is empty on the back of Montague.—

And it mis-sheathed in my daughter's bosom!

La. Cap. O me! this sight of death is as a bell,

That warns my old age to a sepulchre.

Enter MONTAGUE and others.

Prince. Come, Montague; for thou art early
up,

To see thy son and heir more early down.

Mon. Alas, my legs, my wife is dead to-
night;

Grief of my son's exile hath stopp'd her breath:
What further we conspire against mine age?

Prince. Look, and thou shalt see.

Mon. O thou untouch'd! what manners is in this,

To press before thy father to a grave!

Prince. Seal up the mouth of outrage for
a while,

Till we can clear these ambiguities,
And know their spring, their head, their true descent;

And then will I be general of your woes,
And lead you even to death: meantime for-
bear,

And let mischance be slave to patience.
Bring forth the parties of suspicion.

Fri. L. I am the greatest, able to do least,
Yet most suspected, as the time and place
Doth marks against me, of this dreadful murder:

And here I stand, both to impeach and purge and myself accused.

Prince. Then say at once what thou dost know in this.

Fri. L. I will be brief, for my short date of breath

Is not so long as is a tedious tale. ²³⁰
 Romeo, there dead, was husband to that Juliet;
 And she, there dead, that Romeo's faithful wife:

I married them; and their stol'n marriage-day
 Was Tybalt's dooms-day, whose untimely death
 Banish'd the new-made bridegroom from this city,

For whom, and not for Tybalt, Juliet pined.
 You, to remove that siege of grief from her,
 Betroth'd and would have married her perforce
 To County Paris: then comes she to me,
 And, with wild looks, bid me devise some mean
 To rid her from this second marriage, ²⁴¹
 Or in my cell there would she kill herself.

Then gave I her, so tutor'd by my art,
 A sleeping potion; which so took effect
 As I intended, for it wrought on her
 The form of death: meantime I writ to Romeo,
 That he should hither come as this dire night,
 To help to take her from her borrow'd grave,
 Being the time the potion's force should cease.
 But he which bore my letter, Friar John, ²⁵⁰
 Was stay'd by accident, and yesternight
 Return'd my letter back. Then all alone

At the prefixed hour of her waking,
 Came I to take her from her kindred's vault;
 Meaning to keep her closely at my cell,
 Till I conveniently could send to Romeo:
 But when I came, some minute ere the time
 Of her awaking, here untimely lay
 The noble Paris and true Romeo dead.

She wakes; and I entreated her come forth, ²⁶⁰
 And bear this work of heaven with patience:
 But then a noise did scare me from the tomb;
 And she, too desperate, would not go with me,
 But, as it seems, did violence on herself.
 All this I know; and to the marriage
 Her nurse is privy: and, if aught in this Miscarried by my fault, let my old life
 Be sacrificed, some hour before his time,
 Unto the rigour of severest law.

Prince. We still have known thee for a holy man. ²⁷⁰
 Where's Romeo's man? what can he say in this?

Bal. I brought my master news of Juliet's death;

And then in post he came from Mantua
 To this same place, to this same monument.
 This letter he early bid me give his father,
 And threaten'd me with death, going in the vault,

If I departed not and left him there.
Prince. Give me the letter; I will look on it.

Where is the county's page, that raised the watch?

Sirrah, what made your master in this place?
Page. He came with flowers to strew his lady's grave; ²⁸¹

And bid me stand aloof, and so I did:
 Anon comes one with light to ope the tomb;
 And by and by my master drew on him;
 And then I ran away to call the watch.

Prince. This letter doth make good the friar's words,

Their course of love, the tidings of her death:
 And here he writes that he did buy a poison
 Of a poor 'pothecary, and therewithal ²⁸⁹
 Came to this vault to die, and lie with Juliet.
 Where be these enemies? Capulet! Montague!
 See, what a scourge is laid upon your hate,
 That heaven finds means to kill your joys with love.

And I for winking at your discords too
 Have lost a brace of kinsmen: all are punish'd.

Cap. O brother Montague, give me thy hand:
 This is my daughter's jointure, for no more
 Can I demand.

Mon. But I can give thee more:
 For I will raise her statue in pure gold;
 That while Verona by that name is known, ³⁰⁰
 There shall no figure at such rate be set
 As that of true and faithful Juliet.

Cap. As rich shall Romeo's by his lady's lie:
 Poor sacrifices of our enmity!

Prince. A glooming peace this morning with it brings;

The sun, for sorrow, will not show his head:
 Go hence, to have more talk of these sad things;

Some shall be pardon'd, and some punished:
 For never was a story of more woe
 Than this of Juliet and her Romeo. ³¹⁰

[Exeunt.]

LUCILIUS,
SERVILIUS, } servants to Timon.

CAPHIS, PHILOTUS, TITUS,
LUCIUS,
HORTENSIVS, } servants to Timon's creditors.

And others,
A Page. A Fool. Three Strangers.

PHRYNIA,
TIMANDRA, } mistresses to Alcibiades.

Cupid and Amazons in the mask.

Other Lords, Senators, Officers, Soldiers, Banditti, and Attendants.

SCENE: Athens, and the neighbouring woods.

ACT I

SCENE I. Athens. A hall in Timon's house.

Enter Poet, Painter, Jeweller, Merchant, and others, at several doors.

Poet. Good day, sir.

Pain. I am glad you're well.

Poet. I have not seen you long: how goes the world?

Pain. It wears, sir, as it grows.

Poet. Ay, that's well known:

But what particular rarity! what strange,
Which manifold record not matches! See,
Magic of bounty! all these spirits thy power hath conjured to attend. I know the merchant.

Pain. I know them both; th' other's a jeweller.

Mer. O, 'tis a worthy lord.

Jew. Nay, that's most fix'd.

Mer. A most incomparable man, breathed,
as it were,

To an untirable and continue goodness: 10
He passes.

Jew. I have a jewel here—

Mer. O, pray, let's see't: for the Lord
Timon, sir!

Jew. If he will touch the estimate: but, for
that—

Poet. [Reciting to himself] 'When we for recompense have praised the vile,

It stains the glory in that happy verse
Which aptly sings the good.

Mer.

'Tis a good form.

[Looking at the jewel.]

Jew. And rich: here is a water, look ye.

Pain. You are rapt, sir, in some work, some dedication

To the great lord.

Poet. A thing allp'd idly from me. so
Our poetry is as a gum, which oozes
From whence 'tis nourish'd: the fire of the flint
Shows not till it be struck; our gentle flames
Provokes itself and like the current flies
Each bound it chafes. What have you there?

Pain. A picture, sir. When comes your book forth?

Poet. Upon the heels of my presentment, sir.
Let's see your piece.

Pain. 'Tis a good piece.

Poet. So 'tis: this comes off well and excellent.

Pain. Indifferent.

Poet. Admirable: how this grace so
Speaks his own standing! what a mental power
This eye shoots forth! how big imagination Moves in this lip! to the dumbness of the gesture

One might interpret.

Pain. It is a pretty mocking of the life.
Here is a touch; is't good?

Poet. I will say of it,
It tutors nature: artificial strife
Lives in those touches, livelier than life.

Enter certain Senators, and pass over.

Pain. How this lord is follow'd!

Poet. The senators of Athens: happy man!

Pain. Look, more!

Poet. You see this confidence, this great flood of visitors.

I have, in this rough work, shaped out a man,

Whom this beneath world doth embrace and hug

With amplest entertainment : my free drift
Halts not particularly, but moves itself
In a wide sea of wax : no levell'd malice
Infects one comma in the course I hold ;
But flies an eagle flight, bold and forth on,
Leaving no tract behind.

Post. How shall I understand you ?
Post. I will unbolt to you.

You see how all conditions, how all minds,
As well of glib and slippery creatures as
Of grave and austere quality, tender down
Their services to Lord Timon : his large fortune

flatterer
To Apemantus, that few things loves better
Than to abhor himself : even he drops down 60
The knees before him and returns in peace
Most rich in Timon's nod.

Pain. I saw them speak together.
Post. Sir, I have upon a high and pleasant hill

Feign'd Fortune to be throned : the base o' the mount

Is rank'd with all deserts, all kind of natures,
That labour on the bosom of this sphere
To propagate their states : amongst them all,
Whose eyes are on this sovereign lady fix'd,
One do I personate of Lord Timon's frame, Whom Fortune with her ivory hand waits to
her ;

Whose present grace to present slaves and
servants

Translates his rivals.
Pain. 'Tis conceived to scope.

This throne, this Fortune, and this hill, methinks,

With one man beckon'd from the rest below,
Bowing his head against the steepy mount
To climb his happiness, would be well express'd
In our condition.

Post. Nay, sir, but hear me on.
All those which were his fellows but of late,
Some better than his value, on the moment
Follow his strides, his lobbies fill with tendances,

1 sacrificial whisperings in his ear,
1 smac'd even his stirrup, and through him
k the fine air.

Pain. Ay, marry, what of these ?
Post. When Fortune in her shift and change of mood

Spurns down her late beloved, all his dependants
Which labour'd after him to the mountain's top
Even on their knees and hands, let him slip
down,

Not one accompanying his declining foot.
Pain. 'Tis common :

A thousand moral paintings I can show 90
That shall demonstrate these quick blows of Fortune's

More powerfully than words. Yet you do well
To show Lord Timon that mean eyes have 100 To see above the head.

Trumpets sound. Enter LORD TIMON, addressing himself courtiously to every suitor ;
a Messenger from VENTIDIUS talking with him ; LUCILIUS and other servants following.

Tim. Imprison'd is he, say you ?
Mess. Ay, my good lord : five talents is his debt.

His means most short, his creditors most strait
Your honourable letter he desires
To those have shut him up ; which failing,
Periods his comfort.

Tim. Noble Ventidius ! Well
I am not of that feather to shake of My friend when he must need me. I do kn
him

A gentleman that well deserves a help ;
Which he shall have : I'll pay the debt, and free him.

Mess. Your lordship ever binds him.
Tim. Commend me to him : I will send his ransom ;

And being enfranchis'd, bid him come to me.
'Tis not enough to help the feeble up,
But to support him after. Fare you well.

Mess. All happiness to your honour ! [Exit.

Enter an old Athenian.

Old Ath. Lord Timon, hear me speak.
Tim. Freely, good father. 120

Old Ath. Thou hast a servant named Lucilius.

Tim. I have so : what of him ?

Old Ath. Most noble Timon, call the man before thee.

Tim. Attends he here, or no ? Lucilius !
Luc. Here, at your lordship's service.

Old Ath. This fellow here, Lord Timon, this thy creature,

By night frequents my house. I am a man
That from my first have been inclined to thrift ;
And my estate deserves an heir more raised
Than one which holds a trencher.

Tim. Well ; what further ? 120
Old Ath. One only daughter have I, no kin
else,

On whom I may confer what I have got :
The maid is fair, o' the youngest for a bride,
And I have bred her at my dearest cost
In qualities of the best. This man of thine
Attempts her love : I prithee, noble lord,
Join with me to forbid him her resort ;
Myself have spoke in vain.

Tim. The man is honest.
Old Ath. Therefore he will be, Timon : 120
His honesty rewards him in itself ;
It must not bear my daughter.

Tim. Does she love him ?
Old Ath. She is young and apt :

Our own precedent passions do instruct us
What levity's in youth.

Tim. [To Lucilius] Love you the maid ?
Luc. Ay, my good lord, and she accepts of it

Old Ath. If in her marriage my consent be missing,

I call the gods to witness, I will choose
Mine heir from forth the beggars of the world
And dispossess her all.

Tim. How shall she be endow'd

[If she be mated with an equal husband? 150

Old Ath. Three talents on the present; in future, all.

Tim. This gentleman of mine hath agreed me long:

To build his fortune I will strain a little, For 'tis a bond in men. Give him thy daughter:

What you bestow, in him I'll counterpoise, And make him weigh with her.

Old Ath. Most noble lord, Pawn me to this your honour, she is his.

Tim. My hand to thee; mine honour on my promise.

Luc. Humbly I thank your lordship: never may

That state or fortune fall into my keeping, 150 Which is not owed to you!

[Exeunt Lucilius and Old Athenian.

Poet. Vouchsafe my labour, and long live your lordship!

Tim. I thank you; you shall hear from me anon:

Do not away. What have you there, my friend?

Pain. A piece of painting, which I do beseech

Your lordship to accept.

Tim. Painting is welcome. The painting is almost the natural man;

For since dishonour traffics with man's nature, He is but outside: these pencil'd figures are Even such as they give out. I like your work; And you shall find I like it: wait attendance: 161

Till you hear further from me.

Pain. The gods preserve ye!

Tim. Well fare you, gentleman: give me your hand;

We must needs dine together. Sir, your jewel hath suffer'd under praise.

Jew. What, my lord! dispraise?

Tim. A mere satiety of commendations. I should pay you for 't as 'tis extoll'd, I would unclew me quite.

Jew. My lord, 'tis rated

As those which sell would give: but you well know,

Things of like value differing in the owners 170 Are prized by their masters: believe't, dear lord,

On mead the jewel by the wearing it.

Tim. Well mock'd.

Mer. No, my good lord; he speaks the common tongue.

Which all men speak with him.

Tim. Look, who comes here: will you be child?

Enter APEMANTUS.

Jew. We'll bear, with your lordship.

Mer. He'll spare none.

Tim. Good morrow to thee, gentle Apemantus!

Apem. Till I be gentle, stay thou for thy good morrow;

Then thou art Timon's dog, and thou knowest honest.

Tim. Why dost thou call them knowest thou know'st them not.

Apem. Are they not Athenians?

Tim. Yes.

Apem. Then I repent not.

Jew. You know me, Apemantus!

Apem. Thou know'st I do: I call'd thee by thy name.

Tim. Thou art proud, Apemantus.

Apem. Of nothing so much as that I am not like Timon.

Tim. Whither art going? 190

Apem. To knock out an honest Athenian's brains.

Tim. That's a deed thou'lt die for.

Apem. Right, if doing nothing be death by the law.

Tim. How likest thou this picture, Apemantus?

Apem. The best, for the innocence.

Tim. Wrought he not well that painted it?

Apem. He wrought better that made the painter; and yet he's but a filthy piece of work.

Pain. You're a dog.

Apem. Thy mother's of my generation: what's she, if I be a dog?

Tim. Wilt dine with me, Apemantus?

Apem. No; I eat not lords.

Tim. An thou shouldst, thou'ldst anger ladies.

Apem. O, they eat lords; so they come by great bellies.

Tim. That's a lascivious apprehension.

Apem. So thou apprehendest it: take it for thy labour.

Tim. How dost thou like this jewel, Apemantus?

Apem. Not so well as plain-dealing, which will not cost a man a doit.

Tim. What dost thou think 'tis worth?

Apem. Not worth my thinking. How now, poet!

Poet. How now, philosopher!

Apem. Thou liest.

Poet. Art not one?

Apem. Yes.

Poet. Then I lie not.

Apem. Art not a poet?

Poet. Yes.

Apem. Then thou liest: look in thy last work, where thou hast feign'd him a worthy fellow.

Poet. That's not feign'd; he is so.

Apem. Yes, he is worthy of thee, and to pay thee for thy labour: he that loves to be flattered is worthy of the flatterer. Heaven, that I were a lord!

Tim. What wouldst do then, Apemantus?

Apem. Even as Apemantus does now; hate a lord with my heart.

Tim. What, thyself?

Apem. Ay.

Tim. Wherefore?

Apem. That I had no anger wit to be a lord. Art not thou a merchant?

Mer. Ay, Apemantus.

Apem. Traffic confound thee, if thou wilt not.

Mer. If traffic do it, the gods do it.

rest in one man's blood; and all the madness
he cheers them up too.
wonder men dare trust themselves with men:
[ethinks they should invite them without knives;

ood for their meat, and safer for their lives.
here's much example for't; the fellow that is next him now, parts bread with him, lends the breath of him in a divided draught, the readiest man to kill him; 't has been roved. If I were a huge map, I should fear drink at meals; 57
est they should spy my windpipe's dangerous notes;

reat men should drink with harness on their
throats.

Tim. My lord, in heart; and let the health go round.

Sec. Lord. Let it flow this way, my good
lord.

Apem. Flow this way! A brave fellow! he ceps his tides well. Those healths will make hee and thy state look ill, Timon. Here's that rich is too weak to be a sinner, honest water, which ne'er left man i' the mire: 60
his and my food are equals; there's no odds:
casts are too proud to give thanks to the gods.

Apemantus' grace.

Immortal gods, I crave no pelf;
I pray for no man but myself;
Grant I may never prove so fond,
To trust man on his oath or bond;
Or a harlot, for her weeping;
Or a dog, that seems a-sleeping;
Or a keeper with my freedom;
Or my friends, if I should need 'em. 70
Amen. So fall to't:
Rich men sin, and I eat root.

[Eats and drinks.]

Much good 't dich thy good heart, Apemantus!
Tim. Captain Alcibiades, your heart's in the field now.

Alcib. My heart is ever at your service, my
lord.

Tim. You had rather be at a breakfast of enemies than a dinner of friends. 79

Alcib. So they were bleeding-new, my lord, there's no meat like 'em: I could wish my best friend at such a feast.

Apem. Would all those flatterers were thine enemies then, that then thou mightest kill 'em and bid me to 'em!

First Lord. Might we but have that happiness, my lord, that you would once use our hearts, whereby we might express some part of our zeals, we should think ourselves for ever perfect. 80

Tim. O, no doubt, my good friends, but the gods themselves have provided that I shall have much help from you: how had you been my friends else? why have you that charitable title from thousands, did not you chiefly belong to my heart? I have told more of you to myself than can with modesty speak in your own praise; and thus far I confirm you. O you gods, think I, what need we have any friends, if we should ne'er have need of 'em? they were the most needless creatures living, should we ne'er have use for 'em, and would most resemble sweet instruments hung up in cases that keep their sounds to themselves. Why,

I have often wished myself poorer, that I might come nearer to you. We are born to do benefits: and what better or properer can we call our own than the riches of our friends? O, what a precious comfort 'tis, to have so many,
like brothers, commanding one another's fortunes! O joy, e'en made away ere't can be born! Mine eyes cannot hold out water, nee-thinks: to forget their faults, I drink to you.

Apem. Thou weepest to make them drink,
Timon.

Sec. Lord. Joy had the like conception in our eyes

And at that instant like a babe sprung up.

Apem. Ho, ho! I laugh to think that babe a bastard.

Third Lord. I promise you, my lord, you moved me much.

Apem. Much! [Tucket, within.]

Tim. What means that trumpet?

Enter a Servant.

How now!

Serv. Please you, my lord, there are certain ladies most desirous of admittance.

Tim. Ladies! what are their wills?

Serv. There comes with them a forerunner, my lord, which bears that office, to signify their
pleasures.

Tim. I pray, let them be admitted.

Enter CUPID.

Cup. Hail to thee, worthy Timon, and to all
That of his bounties taste! The five best senses Acknowledge thee their patron; and come freely 130

To gratulate thy plentiful bosom! th' eyes Taste, touch and smell, pleased from thy table
rise;

They only now come but to feast thine eyes.

Tim. They're welcome all; let 'em have kind admittance;

Music, make their welcome! [Exit Cupid.]

First Lord. You see, my lord, how ample you're beloved.

Music. Re-enter CUPID, with a mask of Ladies as Amazons, with lutes in their hands, dancing and playing.

Apem. Hoy-day, what a sweep of vanity comes this way!

They dance! they are mad women.
Like madness is the glory of this life.

As this pomp shows to a little oil and root. 140
We make ourselves fools, to desert ourselves;
And spend our flatteries, to drink those men
Upon whose age we void it up again,
With poisonous spite and envy.

Who lives that's not depraved or depraved?
Who dies, that bears not one spear to their graves

Of their friends' gift?

I should fear those that dance before me now.

Would one day stamp upon me: 't has been done;

Men shut their doors against a setting sun. 150

The Lords rise from table, with much adorning of TIMON; and to show their loves, each singles out an Amazon, and all dance, men with women, a lofty strain or two to the hautboys, and cease.

Tim. You have done our pleasures much grace, fair ladies,

Set a fair fashion on our entertainment, Which was not half so beautiful and kind; You have added worth unto 't and lustre, And entertain'd me with mine own device; I am to thank you for 't.

First Lady. My lord, you take us even at the best.

Apem. Faith, for the worst is filthy; and would not hold taking, I doubt me.

Tim. Ladies, there is an idle banquet attends you: 160

Please you to dispose yourselves.

All Ladies. Most thankfully, my lord. [Exeunt Cupid and Ladies.]

Tim. Flavius.

Flav. My lord!

Tim. The little casket bring me hither. Flav. Yes, my lord. More jewels yet! [Aside.] There is no crossing him in 's humour; Else I should tell him,—well, I' faith, I should, When all 's spent, he 'd be cross'd then, an he could.

'Tis pity bounty had not eyes behind, That man might ne'er be wretched for his mind. [Exit.]

First Lord. Where be our men? 171

Serv. Here, my lord, in readiness.

Sec. Lord. Our horses!

Re-enter FLAVIUS, with the casket.

Tim. O my friends, I have one word to say to you: look you, my good lord, I must entreat you, honour me so much As to advance this jewel; accept it and wear it, Kind my lord.

First Lord. I am so far already in your are we all.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord, there are certain nobles of the senate 180

Newly alighted, and come to visit you.

Tim. They are fairly welcome.

Flav. I beseech your honour, Vouchsafe me a word; 't does concern you near.

Tim. Hear! why then, another time I'll hear thee:

I promise, let 's be provided to show them entertainment.

Flav. [Aside.] I scarce know how.

Enter a second Servant.

Sec. Serv. May it please your honour, Lord 185

Out of his great love, hath presented to you

Four milk-white horses, trapp'd in silver.

Tim. I shall accept them fairly; let the presents

Be worthily entertain'd. 190

Enter a third!

How now! what news?

Third Serv. Please you, my lord, that honourable gentleman, Lord Lucullus, entreates your company to-morrow to hunt with him, and has sent your honour two brace of greyhounds.

Tim. I'll hunt with him; and let them be received,

Not without fair reward.

Flav. [Aside.] What will this come to? He commands us to provide, and give great gifts,

And all out of an empty coffer: Nor will he know his purse, or yield me this,

To show him what a beggar his heart is, 200

Being of no power to make his wishes good: His promises fly so beyond his state

That what he speaks is all in debt; he owes For every word: he is so kind that he now

Pays interest for 't; his land's put to their books.

Well, would I were gently put out of office Before I were forced out!

Happier is he that has no friend to feed Than such that do 'em enemies exceed.

I bleed inwardly for my lord. [Exit.]

Tim. You do yourselves Much wrong, you hate too much of your own merits:

Here, my lord, a trifle of our love.

Sec. Lord. With more than common thanks I will receive it.

Third Lord. O, he's the very soul of bounty! Tim. And now I remember, my lord, you gave Good words the other day of a bay courser I rode on: it is yours, because you liked it.

Sec. Lord. O, I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, in that.

Tim. You may take my word, my lord: I know, no man 210

Can justly praise but what he does affect: I weigh my friend's affection with mine own;

I'll tell you true. I'll call to you. All Lords. O, none so welcome.

Tim. I take all and your several visitations So kind to heart, 'tis not enough to give;

Nor think, I could deal kingdoms to my friends, And ne'er be weary. Alcibiades.

Thou art a soldier, therefore seldom rich; It comes in charity to thee: for all thy living

Is 'mongst the dead, and all the lands thou hast Lie in a pitch'd field.

Alcib. Ay, daff'd I!

First Lord. We are so virtuously! 220

Tim. And so am I to you.

Sec. Lord. So infinitely undescrib'd!

Tim. All to you. Lucullus, comes forth.

First Lord. The best of men! Honour and fortunes, keep with you, Timon!

Tim. Ready for his friends.

[Exeunt all but Apemantus and Timon.]

Apem. What a coil's here!
Serving of becks and jutting-out of bums!
I doubt whether their legs be worth the sums
That are given for 'em. Friendship's full of dregs:

Methinks, false hearts should never have sound legs.

Thus honest fools lay out their wealth on court'sies.

Tim. Now, Apemantus, if thou wert not sullen,

I would be good to thee.

Apem. No, I'll nothing: for if I should be bribed too, there would be none left to rail upon thee, and then thou wouldst sin the faster.
Thou givest so long, Timon, I fear me thou wilt give away thyself in paper shortly: what need these feasts, pomps and vain-glories! 249

Tim. Nay, an you begin to rail on society once, I am sworn not to give regard to you.
Farewell; and come with better music. [Exit.]

Apem. So:
Thou wilt not hear me now; thou shalt not
then:

I'll lock thy heaven from thee.

O, that men's ears should be

To counsel deaf, but not to flattery! [Exit.]

ACT II

SCENE I. A Senator's house.

Enter Senator, with papers in his hand.

Sen. And late, five thousand: to Varro and to Isidore

He owes nine thousand; besides my former sum,

Which makes it five and twenty. Still in motion

Of raging waste! It cannot hold; it will not.

If I want gold, steal but a beggar's dog,

And give it Timon, why, the dog coins gold.

If I would sell my horse, and buy twenty more

Better than he, why, give my horse to Timon.

Ask nothing, give it him, it foals me, straight,

And able horses. No porter at his gate, 10

But rather one that smiles and still invites

All that pass by. It cannot hold; no reason

Can found his state in safety. Caphis, ho!

Caphis, I say!

Enter CAPHIS.

Caph. Here, sir: what is your pleasure?

Sen. Get on your cloak, and haste you to

Lord Timon:

Importune him for my moneys: he not ceased

With alight denial, nor then silenced when—

Commend me to your master—and the cap

Plays in the right hand, thus: but tell him,

My uses cry to me, I must serve my turn 20

Out of mine own; his days and times are past

And my reliances on his fracted dates

Have smit my credits: I love and honour him,

But must not break my back to heal his finger;

Immediate are my needs, and my relief

Must not be tond and turn'd to me in words,

But find supply immediate. Get you gone:

Put on a most importunate aspect,

A visage of demand; for, I do fear,

When every feather sticks in his own wing, 30

Lord Timon will be left a naked gull,

Which flashes now a phoenix. Get you gone.

Caph. I go, sir.

Sen. 'I go, sir!'—Take the bonds along

with you,

And have the dates in compt.

Caph. I will, sir.

Sen. Go. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. The same. A hall in Timon's house.

Enter FLAVIUS, with many bills in his hand.

Flavius. No care, no stop! so senseless of expense,

That he will neither know how to maintain it,

Nor cease his flow of riot: takes no account

How things go from him, nor resumes no care

Of what is to continue: never mind.

Was to be so unwise, to be so kind.

What shall be done? he will not hear, till feel:

I must be round with him, now he comes from hunting.

Fie, fie, fie, fie!

Enter CAPHIS, and the Servants of ISIDORE and VARRO.

Caph. Good even, Varro: what,
You come for money?

Var. Serv. Is't not your business too? 20

Caph. It is: and yours too, Isidore?

Isid. Serv. It is so.

Caph. Would we were all discharged!

Var. Serv. I fear it.

Caph. Here comes the lord.

Enter TIMON, ALICIBIADES, and Lords, &c.

Tim. So soon as dinner's done, we'll forth

again,

My Alcibiades. With me! what is your will?

Caph. My lord, here is a note of certain dues.

Tim. Dues! Whence are you?

Caph. Of Athens here, my lord.

Tim. Go to my steward.

Caph. Please it your lordship, he hath put me off

To the succession of new days this month: so

My master is awaked by great occasion

To call upon his own, and humbly prays you

That with your other noble parts you'll suit

In giving him his right.

Tim. Mine honest friend,

I prithee, but repair to me next morning.

Caph. Nay, good my lord,—

Tim. Contain thyself, good friend.

Var. Serv. One Varro's servant, my good

lord,—

Isid. Serv. From Isidore;

He humbly prays your speedy payment.

Caph. If you did know, my lord, my master's waste—

Var. Serv. 'Twas due on forfeiture, my lord,

six weeks

And meet.

Isid. Serv. Your steward puts me off, my lord;

And I am sent expressly to your lordship.

Tim. Give me breath.

I do beseech you, good my lords, keep on;

I'll wait upon you instantly.

[Exeunt Alcibiades and Lords.]

[To Flav.] Come hither: pray you, How goes the world, that I am thus encounter'd With clamorous demands of date-broke bonds, And the detention of long-since-due debts, Against my honour!

Flav. Please you, gentlemen, 40

The time is unagreeable to this business:

Your importunity cease till after dinner;

That I may make his lordship understand

Wherefore you are not paid.

Tim. Do so, my friends. See them well entertain'd. [Exit.]

Flav. Pray, draw near.

Enter APEMANTUS and Fool.

Caph. Stay, stay, here comes the fool with Apemantus: let's ha' some sport with 'em.

Var. Serv. Hang him, he'll abuse us.

Isid. Serv. A plague upon him, dog! 50

Var. Serv. How dost, fool!

Apem. Dost dialogue with thy shadow?

Var. Serv. I speak not to thee.

Apem. No, 'tis to thyself. [To the Fool] Come away.

Isid. Serv. There's the fool hangs on your back already.

Apem. No, thou stand'st single, thou'rt not on him yet.

Caph. Where's the fool now? 59

Apem. He last asked the question. Poor rogues, and usurers' men! lawds between gold and want!

All Serv. What are we, Apemantus?

Apem. Asses.

All Serv. Why?

Apem. That you ask me what you are, and do not know yourselves. Speak to 'em, fool.

Fool. How do you, gentlemen?

All Serv. Gramercy, good fool: how does your mistress? 70

Fool. She's e'en sitting on water to scald such thickens as you are. Would we could see you of Corinth!

Apem. Good! gramercy.

Enter Page.

Fool. Look you, here comes my mistress' page.

Page. [To the Fool.] Why, how now, captain! what do you in this wise company? How dost thou, Apemantus?

Apem. Would I had a rod in my mouth, that I might answer thee profitably. 80

Page. Prithas, Apemantus, read me the subscription of these letters: I know not which is which.

Apem. Cannot read!

Page. No.

Apem. There will little learning do thee. [To the Fool.] You art hang'd. This is to Lord

Timon; this to Alcibiades. Go; thou wast born a bastard, and then't die a hawd. 85

Page. Thou wast whelp'd a dog, and thou shalt furnish a dog's death. Answer not; I am gone. [Exit.]

Apem. Ben so thou outrunnes grace. Fool, I will go with you to Lord Timon.

Fool. Will you leave me there?

Apem. If Timon stay at home, 90 You three serve three usurers!

All Serv. Ay; would they served us!

Apem. So would I,—as good a trick as ever hangman served thief. 100

Fool. Are you three usurers' men?

All Serv. Ay, fool.

Fool. I think no usurer but has a fool to his servant: my mistress is one, and I am her fool. When men come to borrow of your masters, they approach sadly, and go away merry; but they enter my mistress' house merrily, and go away sadly: the reason of this!

Var. Serv. I could render one. 105

Apem. Do it then, that we may account thee a whoremaster and a knave; which notwithstanding, thou shalt be no less esteemed.

Var. Serv. What is a whoremaster, fool?

Fool. A fool in good clothes, and something like thee. 'Tis a spirit: sometime't appears like a lord; sometime like a lawyer; sometime like a philosopher, with two stones more than's artificial one: he is very often like a knight; and, generally, in all shapes that man goes up and down in from fourscore to thirteen, this spirit walks in. 115

Var. Serv. Thou art not altogether a fool.

Fool. Nor thou altogether a wise man: as much foolery as I have, so much wit thou lackest.

Apem. That answer might have become Apemantus.

All Serv. Aside, aside; here comes Lord Timon.

Re-enter TIMON and FLAVIUS.

Apem. Come with me, fool, come.

Fool. I do not always follow lover, older brother and woman; sometime the philosopher. [Exeunt Apemantus and Fool.]

Flav. Pray you, walk near: I'll speak with you anon. [Exeunt Servants.]

Tim. You make me marvel: wherefore are this time

Had you not fully laid my state before me, That I might so have rated my expense, As I had leave of means?

Flav. You would not hear me.

At many leisure I proposed.

Tim. Go to:

Perchance some single vanities you took, When my indisposition put you back; And that unaptness made your fainter. 120 Thus to excuse yourself.

Flav. O my good lord,

At many times I brought in my accounts, Laid them before you; you would throw them off.

And say, you found them to mine honesty.

When, for some trifling present, you have bid me Return so much, I have shook my head and
wept;

Yes, against the authority of manners, pray'd
you

To hold your hand scarce close: I did endure
Not seldom, nor no slight checks, when I have Prompted you in the ebb of your estate 350
And your great flow of debts. My loved lord, Though you hear now, too late—yet now's a
time—

The greatest of your having lacks a half
To pay your present debts.

Tim. Let all my land be sold.

Flav. 'Tis all engaged, some forfeited and
gone;

And what remains will hardly stop the mouth
Of present dues: the future comes apace:

What shall defend the interim? and at length
How goes our reckoning?

Tim. To Lacedæmon did my land extend.

Flav. O my good lord, the world is but a
word: 361

Were it all yours to give it in a breath,
How quickly woe it goes!

Tim. You tell me true.

Flav. If you suspect my husbandry or false-
hood,

Call me before the exactest auditors
And set me on the proof. So the gods bless me,
When all our offices have been oppress'd

With riotous feeders, when our vaults have
wept

With drunken spiths of wine, when every room
Hath blaz'd with lights and bray'd with minstrelsy, 370

I have retired me to a wasteful cock,
And set mine eyes at flow.

Tim. Prithee, no more.

Flav. Heavens, have I said, the bounty of this lord!

How many prodigal hits have slaves and peasants

This night engulfed! Who is not Timon's?
What heart, head, sword, force, means, but is Lord Timon's?

Great Timon, noble, worthy, royal Timon!
Ah, when the means are gone that buy this
praise

The breath is gone whereof this praise is made:
Feast-won, fast-lost; one cloud of winter
showers, 380

These flies are couch'd.

Tim. O come, sermon me no further:
No villanous bounty yet hath rais'd my heart;
Unwisely, not ignobly, have I given.

Why dost thou weep? Canst thou the conscience lack,

To think I shall lack friends? Secure thy heart:
If I would breach the vessels of my love,

And try the argument of hearts by borrowing,
Men and men's fortunes could I frankly use

As I can bid thee speak.

Flav. Assurance bless your thoughts!

Tim. And, in some sort, these worms of mine are crowd'd, 390

That I account them blessings; for by these

Shall I try friends: you shall perceive how you Mistake my fortunes; I am wealthy in my
friends.

Within there! Flaminius! Servilius!

Enter FLAMINIUS, SERVILIUS, and other Servants.

Servants. My lord! my lord!

Tim. I will dispatch you severally; you to Lord Lucius; to Lord Lucullus you: I hunted with his honour to-day: you, to Sempronius:
commend me to their loves, and, I am proud,
say, that my occasions have found time to use
'em toward a supply of money: let the request be fifty talents.

Flam. As you have said, my lord.

Flav. [Aside] Lord Lucius and Lucullus
hura!

Tim. Go you, sir, to the senators—
Of whom, even to the state's best health, I have Deserved this hearing—bid 'em send o' the instant

A thousand talents to me.

Flav. I have been bold—
For that I knew it the most general way—
To them to use your signs and your name;
But they do shake their heads, and I am here
No richer in return.

Tim. Is't true? can't be!

Flav. They answer, in a joint and corporate
voice,

That now they are at fall, want treasure, cannot Do what they would; are sorry—you are honourable,—

But yet they could have wish'd—they know
not—

Something hath been amiss—a noble nature
May catch a wrench—would all were well—his pity!—

And so, intending other serious matters, are
After distasteful looks and these hard frowns,
With certain half-eyes and cold-mooring nods
They freeze me into silence.

Tim. You gods, reward them!

Prithee, man, look cheerly. These old fellows
Have their ingratitude in them hereditary:

Their blood is cabed, is cold, it seldom flows:
Tis lack of kindly warmth they are not kind;

And nature, as it grows again toward earth,
Is fash'd for the journey, dull and heavy:

[To a Serv.] Go to Ventidius. [To Flav.]
Prithee, be not sad,

Thou art true and honest; ingeniously I speak,
No blame belongs to thee. [To Serv.] Ventidius hath

Buried his father; by whose death he's dispos'd
Into a great estate: when he was poor,

Imprison'd and in anxiety of friends,
I clear'd him with five talents: great his thanks

are;

Said him a piece some good Touches his i— which

ber'd

With these five talents [Exit Serv.] [To Flav.]
That had, give't these fellows.

To whom 'tis instant due. If he speak, or
think,

That Timon's fortunes 'mong his friends can sink.

Flav. I would I could not think it: that thought is bounty's foe; Being free itself, it thinks all others so.

[Exeunt.]

ACT III

SCENE I. A room in Lucullus' house.

FLAMINIUS waiting. Enter a Servant to him.

Serv. I have told my lord of you; he is coming down to you.

Flam. I thank you, sir.

Enter LUCULLUS.

Serv. Here's my lord.

Lucul. [Aside.] One of Lord Timon's men? a gift, I warrant. Why, this hits right: I dreamt of a silver basin and ewer to-night. Flaminius, honest Flaminius; you are very respectively welcome, sir. Fill me some wine. [Exit Servant.] And how does that honourable, complete, free-hearted gentleman of Athens, thy very bountiful good lord and master?

Flam. His health is well, sir.

Lucul. I am right glad that his health is well, sir; and what hast thou there under thy cloak, pretty Flaminius?

Flam. Faith, nothing but an empty box, sir; which, in my lord's behalf, I come to entreat your honour to supply; who, having great and instant occasion to use fifty talents, hath sent to your lordship to furnish him, nothing doubting your present assistance therein.

Lucul. Ia, la, la, la! 'nothing doubting,' says he! Alas, good lord! a noble gentleman 'tis, if he would not keep so good a house. Many a time and often I ha' dined with him, and told him on 't, and come again to supper to him, of purpose to have him spend less, and yet he would embrace no counsel, take no warning by my coming. Every man has his fault, and honesty is his: I ha' told him on 't, but I could ne'er get him from 't.

Re-enter Servant, with wine.

Serv. Please your lordship, here is the wine.

Lucul. Flaminius, I have noted thee always well. Here's to thee.

Flam. Your lordship speaks your pleasure.

Lucul. I have observed thee always for a towardly prompt spirit—give thee thy due—and one that knows what belongs to reason; and canst use the time well, if the time use thee well: good parts in thee. [To Serv.] Get you gone, sirrah [Exit Serv.]. Draw nearer, honest Flaminius. Thy lord's a bountiful gentleman; but thou art wise; and thou knowest well enough, although thou comest to me, that this is no time to lend money, especially upon bare friendship, without security. Here's a three solid denar for thee: good boy, wink at me, and say thou sawest me not. Fare thee well.

Flam. Is't possible the world should so much differ.

And we also that lived? Fly, damned base-

To him that worships thee!

Lucul. Ha! now I see thou art a fool, and fit for thy master.

Flam. May these add to thy number that may scald thee!

Let molten coin be thy damnation—Thou disease of a friend, and not himself! Has friendship such a faint and milky heart, it turns in less than two nights? O you gods, I feel my master's passion! this slave, Unto his honour, has my lord's meat in him: Why should it thrive and turn to nutriment, When he is turn'd to poison? O, may diseases only work upon 't! And, when he's led to death, let not that part of nature

Which my lord paid for, be of any power To expel sickness, but prolong his hour! [Exit.]

SCENE II. A public place.

Enter LUCIUS, with three Strangers.

Luc. Who, the Lord Timon? he is my very good friend, and an honourable gentleman.

First Stran. We know him for no less, though we are but strangers to him. But I can tell you one thing, my lord, and which I hear from common rumours: now Lord Timon's happy hours are done and past, and his estate shrinks from him.

Luc. Fie, no, do not believe it; he cannot want for money.

Sec. Stran. But believe you this, my lord, that, not long ago, one of his men was with the Lord Lucullus to borrow so many talents, nay, urged extremely for 't and showed what necessity belonged to 't, and yet was denied.

Luc. How!

Sec. Stran. I tell you, denied, my lord. Luc. What a strange case was that! now, before the gods, I am ashamed on 't. Denied that honourable man! there was very little honour showed in 't. For my own part, I must needs confess, I have received some small kindnesses from him, as money, plate, jewels and such-like trifles, nothing comparing to his; yet, had he mistook him and sent to me, I should ne'er have denied his occasion so many talents.

Enter SERVILIUS.

Serv. See, by good hap, yonder's my lord; I have sweat to see his honour. My honoured lord,—

Luc. Servilius! you are kindly met, sir. Fare thee well: commend me to thy honourable virtuous lord, my very exquisite friend.

Serv. May it please your honour, my lord hath sent—

Luc. Ha! what has he sent? I am so much endeared to that lord; he's ever sending: how shall I thank him, thinkest thou? And what has he sent now?

Serv. Has only sent his present occasion now, my lord; requesting your lordship to supply his instant use with so many talents.

Luc. I know his lordship is but merry with me;

†He cannot want fifty five hundred talents.

Ser. But in the mean time he wants less, my lord.

If his occasion were not virtuous,
I should not urge it half so faithfully.

Luc. Dost thou speak seriously, Servilius?

Ser. Upon my soul 'tis true, sir.

Luc. What a wicked beast was I to disfigure myself against such a good time, when I might have shown myself honourable! how unluckily it happened, that I should purchase the day before for a little part, and undo a great deal of honour! Servilius, now, before the gods, I am not able to do,—the more beast, I say:—I was sending to use Lord Timon myself, these gentlemen can witness; but I would not, for the wealth of Athens, I had done't now. Commend me bountifully to his good lordship; and I hope his honour will conceive the fairest of me, because I have no power to be kind: and tell him this from me, I count it one of my greatest afflictions, say, that I cannot pleasure such an honourable gentleman. Good Servilius, will you befriend me so far, as to use mine own words to him?

Ser. Yes, sir, I shall.

Luc. I'll look you out a good turn, Servilius.

[Exit Servilius.]

As you said, Timon is shrunk indeed; and he that's once denied will hardly speed.

[Exit.]

First Stran. Do you observe this, Hostilius?

Sec. Stran. Ay, too well. 70

First Stran. Why, this is the world's soul; and just of the same piece every flatterer's spirit. Who can call him his friend that dips in the same dish? for, in knowing, Timon has been this lord's father, and kept his credit with his purse, supported his estate; nay, Timon's money has paid his men their wages: he ne'er drinks,

But Timon's silver treads upon his lip; And yet—O, see the monstrousness of man

When he looks out in an ungrateful shape!— He does deny him, in respect of his,

What charitable men afford to beggars. 81

Third Stran. Religion groans at it.

First Stran. For mine own part, I never tasted Timon in my life,

Nor came any of his bounties over me, To mark me for his friend: yet, I protest,

For his right noble mind, illustrious virtue And honourable carriage,

Had his necessity made use of me, I would have put my wealth into donation, 80

And the best half should have return'd to him, So much I love his heart: but, I perceive,

Men must learn now with pity to dispense; For policy sits above conscience. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. A room in Sempronius' house.

Enter SEMPRONIUS, and a Servant of TIMON'S.

Sem. Must he needs trouble me in't,—hum! —bove all others?

He might have tried Lord Lucius or Lucullus; And now Ventidius is wealthy too,

Whom he redeem'd from prison: all these

Owe their estates unto him.

Serv.

They have all been touch'd and found base metal, for

They have all denied him.

Sem. How! have they denied him?

Has Ventidius and Lucullus denied him?

And does he send to me? Three! hum!

†shows but little love or judgement in him:

Must I be his last refuge? His friends, like physicians,

†Thrive, give him over: must I take the cure

upon me?

Has much disgrac'd me in't; I'm angry at

him,

That might have known my place: I see no sense for't.

But his occasions might have woo'd me first;

For, in my conscience, I was the first man

That e'er received gift from him:

And does he think so backwardly of me now,

That I'll requite it last? No:

So it may prove an argument of laughter 80

To the rest, and amongst lords I be thought a fool.

I'd rather than the worth of thrice the sum,

Had sent to me first, but for my mind's sake;

I'd such a courage to do him good. But now return,

And with their faint reply this answer join;

Who hates mine honour shall not know my coin. [Exit.]

Serv. Excellent! Your lordship's a goodly villain. The devil knew not what he did when he made man politic; he crossed himself by't;

and I cannot think but, in the end, the villanies of man will set him clear. How fairly this lord strives to appear foul! takes virtuous copies to be wicked, like those that under hot ardent zeal would set whole realms on fire:

Of such a nature is his politic love.

This was my lord's best hope; now all are fled,

Save only the gods: now his friends are dead,

Doors, that were ne'er acquainted with their wards

Many a bounteous year, must be employ'd

Now to guard sure their master. 80

And this is all a liberal course allows;

Who cannot keep his wealth must keep his house. [Exit.]

SCENE IV. The same. A hall in Timon's house.

Enter two Servants of VARRO, and the Servant of LUCIUS, meeting TRUS, HORTENSIVUS, and other Servants of TIMON'S creditors, waiting his coming out.

First Var. Serv. Well met; good morn'g, Titus and Hortensius.

Tit. The like to you, kind Varro.

Hor. [Looks at Luc. Serv.]

What, do we meet together?

Luc. Serv. Ay, and I think

One business does command us all: for mine is money.

Is theirs and ours.

Enter PHILOTUS.

Luc. Serv. And Sir Philotas too!

Phi. Good day at once.

Luc. Serv. Welcome, good brother. What do you think the hour?

Phi. Labouring for nine.

Luc. Serv. So much!

Phi. Is not my lord seen yet?

Luc. Serv. Not yet.

Phi. I wonder on't; he was wont to stime at seven.

Luc. Serv. Ay, but the days are wax'd shorter with him:

You must consider that a prodigal course is like the sun's; but not, like his, recoverable. I fear 'tis deepest winter in Lord Timon's purse; that is, one may reach deep enough, and yet find little.

Phi. I am of your fear for that.

Tim. I'll show you how to observe a strange event.

Your lord sends now for money.

Hor. Most true, he does.

Tim. And he wears jewels now of Timon's gift.

For which I wait for money.

Hor. It is against my heart.

Luc. Serv. Mark, how strange it shows, Timon in this should pay more than he owes: And, et cetera as if your lord should wear rich [send for money for 'em.

Hor. I'm weary of this charge, the gods can witness:

I know my lord hath spent of Timon's wealth, And now ingratitude makes it worse than stealth.

First Var. Serv. Yes, mine's three thousand crowns: what's yours?

Luc. Serv. Five thousand mine.

First Var. Serv. 'Tis much deep: and it should seem by the sun, Your master's confidence was above mine; 30 Else, surely, his had equal'd.

Enter FLAMINIUS.

Tim. One of Lord Timon's men.

Luc. Serv. Flaminius! Sir, a word: pray, is my lord ready to come forth?

Flam. No, indeed, he is not.

Tim. We attend his lordship: pray, signify so much.

Flam. I need not tell him that; he knows you are too diligent. [Exit. 40

Enter FLAVIUS in a cloak, muffled.

Luc. Serv. Ha! is not that his steward muffled so?

He goes away in a cloud: call him, call him.

Tim. Do you hear, sir?

Luc. Serv. By your leave, sir—

Tim. What do ye ask of me, my friend?

Flav. We wait for certain money here, sir.

Tim. Money were as certain as your waiting, were ours enough. 45

Why then prefer'd you not your sums and bills,

When your false masters eat of my lord's meat? Then they could smile and fawn upon his debt And take down the interest into their glutton out maws. You do yourselves but wrong to stir me up; Let me pass quietly:

Believe't, my lord and I have made an end; I have no more to reckon, he to spend.

Luc. Serv. Ay, but this answer will not serve.

Flav. If 'twill not serve, 'tis not so base as you;

For you serve knaves. [Exit.

First Var. Serv. How! what does his cashier'd worship mutter!

Sec. Var. Serv. No matter what; he's poor, and that's revenge enough. Who can speak broader than he that has no house to put his head in! such may rail against great buildings.

Enter SERVILIUS.

Tim. O, here's Servilius; now we shall know some answer.

Ser. If I might beseech you, gentlemen, to repair some other hour, I should derive much from't; for, take't of my soul, my lord leaves wondrously to discontent; his comfortable temper has forsook him; he's much out of health, and keeps his chamber.

Luc. Serv. Many do keep their chamber as not sick:

And, if it be so far beyond his health, Methinks he should the sooner pay his debts, And make a clear way to the gods.

Ser. Good gods!

Tim. We cannot take this for an answer, sir.

Flam. [Within] Servilius, help! My lord! my lord!

Enter TIMON, in a rage; FLAMINIUS following.

Tim. What are my debts opposed against my passages! 50

Have I been ever free, and must my house be my retentive enemy, my goal!

The place which I have feasted, does it now, Like all mankind, show me an iron heart!

Luc. Serv. Put in now, Titus.

Tim. My lord, here is my bill.

Luc. Serv. Here's mine.

Hor. And mine, my lord.

Both Var. Serv. And ours, my lord.

Phi. All our bills.

Tim. Knock me down with 'em: chafe me to the girdle.

Luc. Serv. Alas, my lord,—

Tim. Cut my heart to sues.

Tim. Mine, fifty talents.

Tim. Tell out my blood.

Luc. Serv. Five thousand crowns, my lord.

Tim. Five thousand drops pays that. What yours!—and yours!

First Var. Serv. My lord,—

Sec. Var. Serv. My lord,—

Tim. Tear me, take me, and the gods tell upon you! [Exit. 55

Hor. Faith, I perceive our masters may throw their caps at their money: these debts may well be called desperate ones, for a mad-man owes 'em. [Exit.

Re-enter TIMON and FLAVIUS.

Tim. They have e'en put my breath from me, the slaves.
Creditors! devils!

Flav. My dear lord,—

Tim. What if it should be so!

Flav. My lord,—

Tim. I'll have it so. My steward!

Flav. Here, my lord.

Tim. So fitly! Go, bid all my friends again,
Lucius, Lucullus, and Sempronius:

Alc. sirrah, all:

I'll once more feast the rascals.

Flav. O my lord,
You only speak from your distracted soul;
There is not so much left, to furnish out
A moderate table.

Tim. Be't not in thy care; go,
I charge thee, invite them all: let in the tide
Of knives once more; my cook and I'll provide. [Kneels.

He's truly valiant that can wisely suffer
The worst that man can breathe, and make his wrongs

His outades, to wear them like his raiment, carelessly,

And ne'er prefer his injuries to his heart,
To bring it into danger.

If wrongs be evils and enforce us kill,
What folly 'tis to hazard life for ill!

Alcib. My lord,—

First Sen. You cannot make gross sins look clear;

To revenge is no valour, but to bear.

Alcib. My lords, then, under favour, pardon
me, 40

If I speak like a captain.

Why do fond men expose themselves to battle,
And not endure all threats! sleep upon't,

And let the foes quietly cut their throats,

Without repugnance! If there be Such valour in the bearing, what make we

Ahead! why then, women are more valiant

That stay at home, if bearing carry it,
And the sea more captain than the lion, the felon

Loaden with irona wiser than the judge, 50

If wisdom be in suffering. O my lords,

As you are great, be pitifully good:

Who cannot condemn rashness in cold blood!

To kill, I grant, is sin's extremest gust;

But, in defence, by mercy, 'tis most just.

To be in anger is impety;

But who is man that is not angry?

Weigh but the crime with this.

Sec. Sen. You breathe his vain.

Alcib. In vain! his service done

At Lacedaemon and Byzantium 60

Were a sufficient bribe for his life.

First Sen. What's that?

Alcib. I say, my lords, he has done fair service,

And stain in fight many of your enemies:

How full of valour did he bear himself!

In the last conflict, and made plentiful wounds!

Sec. Sen. He has made too much plenty with
'em;

He's a sworn rioter: he has a sin that often

Drowns him, and takes his valour prisoner:

If there were no foes, that were enough 70

To overcome him: in that beastly fury

He has been known to commit outrages,

And cherish factions: 'tis infer'd to us

His days are foul and his drink dangerous.

First Sen. He dies.

Alcib. Had fatal he might have died in war.

My lords, if not for any parts in him—

Though his right arm might purchase his own

time

And be in debt to none—yet, more to serve

you,

Take my deserts to him, and join 'em both:

And, for I know your necessities are great

Security, I'll pawn my victories, all

My honours to you, upon his good nature.

If by this crime he owes the law his life,

—let the war reserve't in valour!

For law is strict, and war is nothing.

SCENE V. The same. The senate-house.

The Senate sitting.

First Sen. My lord, you have my voice to it;
the fault's

Bloody; 'tis necessary he should die:

Nothing emboldens us so much as mercy.

Sec. Sen. Most true; the law shall bruise
him.

Enter ALCIBADES, with Attendants.

Alcib. Honour, health, and compassion to the senate!

First Sen. Now, captain?

Alcib. I am an humble suitor to your virtues;
For pity is the virtue of the law,

And none but tyrants use it cruelly.

It pleases time and fortune to lie heavy 20

Upon a friend of mine, who, in hot blood,

Hath stepp'd into the law, which is past depth

To those that, without head, do plunge into't.

He is a man, setting his fate aside,

Of comely virtues:

Nor did he soil the fact with cowardice—

An honour in him which buys out his fault—

But with a noble fury and fair spirit,

Being his reputation touch'd to death,

He did oppose his foe: 30

And with such sober and unnoted passion

He did behave his anger, ere 'twas spent,

As if he had but proved an argument.

First Sen. You undergo too strict a paradox,

Striving to make an ugly deed look fair:

Your words have took such pains as if they la-bour'd

To bring manslaughter into form and set quar-

relling

Upon the head of valour; which indeed

Is valour mistook and came into the world

When sects and factions were newly born: 30

First Sen. We are for law: he dies; urge it no more.
On height of our displeasure: friend or brother,
He forfeits his own blood that spills another.

Alci. Must it be so? it must not be. My lords,

I do beseech you, know me. 90

Sec. Sen. How!

Alci. Call me to your remembrances.

Third Sen. What!

Alci. I cannot think but your age has forgot me;

It could not else be, I should prove so base,
To sue, and be denied such common grace:
My wounds ache at you.

First Sen. Do you dare our anger?
'Tis in few words, but spacious in effect;
We banish thee for ever.

Alci. Banish me!

Banish your dotage; banish usury,
That makes the senate ugly. 100

First Sen. If, after two days' shine, Athens contain thee,

Attend our weightier judgement. And, not to swell our spirit,

He shall be executed presently.

[Exeunt Senators.]

Alci. Now the gods keep you old enough; that you may live

Only in bone, that none may look on you!
I'm worse than mad: I have kept back their foes,

While they have told their money and let out
Their coin upon large interest, I myself

Rich only in large hurts. All those for this?
Is this the balsam that the usuring senate 110

Pours into captains' wounds? Banishment!
It comes not ill; I hate not to be banish'd;

It is a cause worthy my spleen and fury,
That I may strike at Athens. I'll cheer up

My discontented troops, and lay for hearts.
'Tis honour with most lands to be at odds;

Soldiers should brook as little wrongs as gods.
[Erit.]

SCENE VI. The same. A banqueting-room in Timon's house.

Mus. Tables set out: Servants attending.
Enter divers Lords, Senators and others, at several doors.

First Lord. The good time of day to you, sir.

Sec. Lord. I also wish it to you. I think this honourable lord did but try us this other day.

First Lord. Upon that were my thoughts trifling, when we encountered: I hope it is not so low with him as he made it seem in the trial of his several friends.

Sec. Lord. It should not be, by the persuasion of his new feasting. 9

First Lord. I should think so: he hath sent me an earnest inviting, which many my near occasions did urge me to put off; but he hath conjured me beyond them, and I must needs —Sec. Lord. In like manner was I in debt to my superfluous business, but he would not hear my excuse. I am sorry, when he sent to borrow of me, that my provision was out.

First Lord. I am sick of that grief too, as I understand how all things go. 20

Sec. Lord. Every man here's so. What would he have borrowed of you?

First Lord. A thousand pieces.

Sec. Lord. A thousand pieces!

First Lord. What of you?

Sec. Lord. He sent to me, sir. Here he comes.

[Enter TIMON and Attendants.]

Tim. With all my heart, gentlemen both; and how fare you?

First Lord. Ever at the best, hearing well of your lordship. 30

Sec. Lord. The swallow follows not summer more willingly than we your lordship.

Tim. [Aside] Nor more willingly leaves winter; such summer-birds are men. Gentlemen, our dinner will not recompense this long stay: feast your ears with the music awhile, if they will fare so harshly o' the trumpet's sound; we shall to't presently.

First Lord. I hope it remains not unkindly with your lordship that I returned, you an empty messenger. 41

Tim. O, sir, let it not trouble you.

Sec. Lord. My noble lord,—

Tim. Ah, my good friend, what cheer?

Sec. Lord. My most honourable lord, I am e'en sick of shame, that, when your lordship this other day sent to me, I was so unfortunate a beggar.

Tim. Think not on't, sir.

Sec. Lord. If you had sent but two hours before,— 51

Tim. Let it not cumber your better remembrance. [The banquet brought in.] Come, bring in all together.

Sec. Lord. All covered dishes!

First Lord. Royal cheer, I warrant you.

Third Lord. Doubt not that, if money and the season can yield it.

First Lord. How do you? What's the news?

Third Lord. Alcibiades is banished: hear you of it!

First and Sec. Lord. Alcibiades banished! 61

Third Lord. 'Tis so, be sure of it.

First Lord. How! how!

Sec. Lord. I pray you, upon what?

Tim. My worthy friends, will you draw near?

Third Lord. I'll tell you more anon. Here's a noble feast toward.

Sec. Lord. This is the old man still.

Third Lord. Will't hold? will't hold? 70

Sec. Lord. It does: but time will—and so—

Third Lord. I do conceive.

Tim. Each man to his stool, with that spur as he would to the lip of his mistress: your due shall be in all places alike. Make not a city feast of it, to let the meat cool ere we can agree upon the first place: sit, sit. The gods require our thanks.

You great benefactors, sprinkle our society with thankfulness. For your own gifts, make yourselves praised: but reserve still to give, lest your duties be despised. Lend to each man enough, that one need not lend to another; for, were your godheads to borrow of men, men would forsake the gods. Make the meat be beloved more than the man that gives it. Let no assembly of twenty be without a score of villains: if there sit twelve women at the table, let a dozen of them be—as they are. † The rest of your fees, O gods—the senators of Athens, together with the common lag of people—what is amiss in them, you gods, make suitable for destruction. For these my present friends, as they are to me nothing, so in nothing bless them, and to nothing are they welcome.

Uncover, dogs, and lap.

[The dishes are uncovered and seen to be full of warm water.]

Some speak. What does his lordship mean?

Some other. I know not.

Tim. May you a better feast never behold, you knot of mouth-friends! smoke and luke-warm water is your perfection. This is Timon's last; †

Who, stuck and spangled with your flatteries,
Washes it off, and sprinkles in your faces
Your reeking villany.

[Throwing the water in their faces.]

Most smiling, smooth, detested parasites,
Courteous destroyers, affable wolves, meek
bears,

You fools of fortune, trencher-friends, time's
flies,

Cap and knee slaves, vapours, and minute-jacks!

Of man and beast the infinite malady
Trust you quite o'er! What, dost thou go!

Soft! take thy physic first—thou too—and
thou;—

Stay, I will lend thee money, borrow none.

[Throws the dishes at them, and drives them out.]

What, all in motion? Henceforth be no feast,
Whereat a villain's not a welcome guest.

Burn, house! sink, Athens! henceforth hated
be

Of Timon man and all humanity! [Exit.]

Re-enter the Lords, Senators, &c.

First Lord. How now, my lords!

Sec. Lord. Know you the quality of Lord
Timon's fury?

Third Lord. Push! did you see my cap!

Fourth Lord. I have lost my gown. †

First Lord. He's but a mad lord, and nought but humour sways him. He gave me a jewel the other day, and now he has beat it out of my hat: did you see my jewel?

Third Lord. Did you see my cap!

Sec. Lord. Here 'tis.

Fourth Lord. Here lies my gown.

First Lord. Let's make no stay.

Sec. Lord. Lord Timon's mad.

Third Lord. I feel't upon my bones.

Fourth Lord. One day he gives us diamonds, next day stones. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I. Without the walls of Athens.

Enter TIMON.

Tim. Let me look back upon thee. O thou wall,
That girdlest in those wolves, dive in the earth,
And fence not Athens! Matrons, turn incontinent!

Obedience fall in children! slaves and fools, Pluck the grave wrinkled senate from the bench,

And minister in their steads! to general filths
'convert o' the instant, green virginity, Do't in your parents' eyes! bankrupts, hold
fast;

Rather than render back, out with your knives,
And cut your trusters' throats! bound servants,
steal!

Large-handed robbers your grave masters are,
And pill by law. Maid, to thy master's bed;
Thy mistress is o' the brothel! Son of sixteen, Pluck the lined crutch from thy old limping
sire,

With it beat out his brains! Piety, and fear,
Religion to the gods, peace, justice, truth,
Domestic awe, night-rest, and neighbourhood,
Instruction, manners, mysteries, and trades,
Degrees, observances, customs, and laws,
Decline to your confounding contraries, †
And let confusion live! Plagues, incident to
men,

Your potent and infectious fevers heap
On Athens, ripe for stroke! Thou cold ascetic,
Cripple our senators, that their limbs may halt
As lamely as their manners! Lust and liberty
Creep in the minds and marrows of our youth,
That 'gainst the stream of virtue they may strive,

And drown themselves in riot! Itches, blains,
Sow all the Athenian bosoms; and their crop
Be general leprosy! Breath infect breath, †
That their society, as their friendship, may Be merely poison! Nothing I'll bear from
thee,

But nakedness, thou detestable town!
Take thou that too, with multiplying bans!
Timon will to the woods: where he shall find
The unkindest beast more kinder than mankind.

The gods confound—hear me, you good gods
all—

The Athenians both within and out that wall!
And grant, as Timon grows, his hate may grow
To the whole race of mankind, high and low!
Amen. [Exit.]

SCENE II. Athens. A room in Timon's house.

Enter FLAVIUS, with two or three Servants.

First Serv. Hear you, master steward, where's our master?

Are we undone? I cast off! nothing remaining!

Flav. Alack, my fellows, what should I say to you?
Let me be recorded by the righteous gods,
I am as poor as you.

First Serv. Such a house broke!
So noble a master fall'n! All gone! and not
One friend to take his fortune by the arm,
And go along with him!

Sec. Serv. As we do turn our backs
From our companion thrown into his grave,
So his familiars to his buried fortunes
Slink all away, leave their false vows with him,
Like empty purses pick'd; and his poor self,
A dedicated beggar to the air,
With his disease of all-shunn'd poverty, Walks, like contempt, alone. More of our fellows.

Enter other Servants.

Flav. All broken implements of a ruin'd house.

Third Serv. Yet do our hearts wear Timon's livery;

That see I by our faces; we are fellows still,
Serving alike in sorrow: leak'd is our bark,
And we, poor mates, stand on the dying deck,
Hearing the surges threat: we must all part
Into this sea of air.

Flav. Good fellows all,
The latest of my wealth I'll share amongst
you.

Wherever we shall meet, for Timon's sake,
Let's yet be fellows; let's shake our heads,
and say,

As 'twere a knell unto our master's fortunes,
'We have seen better days.' Let each take some;

Nay, put out all your hands. Not one word
more:

Thus part we rich in sorrow, parting poor. so
[Servants embrace, and part several ways.]

O, the fierce wretchedness that glory brings us!
Who would not wish to be from wealth exempt,
Since riches point to misery and contempt?
Who would be so mock'd with glory? or to live
But in a dream of friendship?

To have his pomp and all what state compounds
But only painted, like his varnish'd friends?
Poor honest lord, brought low by his own

by goodness! Strange, unusual blood,
When man's worst sin is, he does too much
good!

Who, then, dares to be half so kind again?
For bounty, that makes gods, does still mar
men.

My dearest lord, bless'd, to be most accursed,
Rich, only to be wretched, thy great fortunes
Are made thy chief afflictions. Alas, kind
lord!

He's sunk in rage from this ingrateful scout
Of monstrous friends, nor has he with him to seek his life, or that which can command it.
And inquire him out:

or give his mind with my best will:
I have gold, I'll be his steward still. so

[Exit.]

SCENE III. Woods and cave, near the sea-shore.

Enter TIMON, from the cave.

Tim. O blessed breeding sun, draw fro
the earth

Rotten humidity; below thy sister's orb
Infect the air! Timon's brothers of one woman Whose procreation, residence, and birth,
Scarcely is dividant, touch ^{and} with sever
fortunes;

The greater scorns the lesser: not nature,
To whom all sorcs lay siege, can bear gre
fortune,

But by contempt of nature.
Raise me this beggar, and deny't that lord;
The senator shall bear contempt hereditary,
The beggar native honour.

It is the pasture lards the rother's sides,
The want that makes him lean. Who dar who dares,

In purity of manhood stand upright,
And say 'This man's a flatterer' if one be,
So are they all; for every grise of fortune
Is smooch'd by that below; the learned pate
Ducks to the golden fool: all is oblique;
There's nothing level in our cursed natures,
But direct villany. Therefore, be abhor'd:
All feasts, societies, and throngs of men!
His semblable, yea, himself, Timon designs:
Destruction fang mankind! Earth, yield n roots! [Digging]

Who seeks for better of thee, sauces his palate
With thy most operant poison! What is here
Gold! yellow, glittering, precious gold! No
gods,

I am no idle votarist: roots, you clear heaven
Thus much of this will make black white, for fair,

Wrong right, base noble, old young, coward
valiant.

Ha, you gods! why this? what this, you gods?
Why, this

Will lug your priests and servants from you
sides,

Pluck stout men's pillows from below the heads:

This yellow slave
Will knit and break religions, bless the ac cursed,

Make the hoar leprosy adored, place thieves
And give them title, knce and approbation
With senators on the bench: this is it
That makes the wappen'd widow wed again;

She, whom the spiral-house and ulcerous war
Would cast the gorge at, this embalms and spices

To the April day again. Come, damned earth!
Thou common whore of mankind, that put'st odds

Among the rout of nations, I will make thee
Do thy right nature. [March afar off.] Ha a drum? Then 't's quick.

But yet I'll bury thee; thou shalt go, strong ti
When goodly keepers of thee cannot stand.
Nay, stay thou out for earnest.

[Knocking some gold]

Enter ALCEBIADES, with drum and staff, in warlike manner; PHRYNIA and TIMANDRA.

Alcib. What art thou there? speak.

Tim. A beast, as thou art. The canker gnaw thy heart.

For showing me again the eyes of man! 50

Alcib. What is thy name? Is man so hateful to thee?

That art thyself a man?

Tim. I am Misanthropos, and hate mankind. For thy part, I do wish thou wert a dog.

That I might love thee something.

Alcib. I know thee well; But in thy fortunes am unlearn'd and strange.

Tim. I know thee too; and more than that I know thee.

I not desire to know. Follow thy drum; With man's blood paint the ground, gules, gules:

Religious canons, civil laws are cruel; 60

Then what should war be? This fell whore of thine

Hath in her more destruction than thy sword, For all her cherubin look.

Phry. Thy lips rot off! Tim. I will not kiss thee; then the rot returns

To thine own lips again.

Alcib. How came the noble Timon to this change?

Tim. As the moon does, by wanting light to give:

But then renew I could not, like the moon; There were no suns to borrow of.

Alcib. Noble Timon, What friendship may I do thee?

Tim. None, but to 70 Maintain my opinion.

Alcib. What is it, Timon?

Tim. Promise me friendship, but perform none: if thou wilt not promise, the gods plague thee, for thou art a man! If thou dost perform, confound thee, for thou art a man!

Alcib. I have heard in some sort of thy miseries.

Tim. Thou saw'st them, when I had prosperity.

Alcib. I see them now; then was a blessed time.

Tim. As thine is now, held with a brace of harlots.

Timan. Is this the Athenian ruin, whom the world 80

Voiced so regardfully?

Tim. Art thou Timandra?

Timan. Yes.

Tim. Be a whore still: they love thee not that use thee;

Give them diseases, leaving with thee their lust. Make use of thy suit hours: season the claves

For tubs and baths; bring down reas-checked youth

To the tubs and the dice.

Alcib. Pardon him, sweet Timandra; for his wife

Are drown'd and lost in his calamities.

I have but little gold of late, brave Timon, 90

The want whereof doth daily make revolt In my penurious band: I have heard, and

grieved,

How cursed Athens, mindless of thy worth, Forgetting thy great deeds, whom neighbour

But for thy sword and fortune, trod upon the Tim.

Alcib. I am thy friend, and pity thee, dear Timon.

Tim. How dost thou pity him whom thou dost trouble?

I had rather be alone.

Alcib. Why, fare thee well: Here is some gold for thee.

Tim. Keep it, I cannot eat it. 100

Alcib. When I have laid proud Athens on a heap—

Tim. War'st thou 'gainst Athens?

Alcib. Ay, Timon, and have cause.

Tim. The gods confound them all in thy conquest;

And thee after, when thou hast conquer'd!

Alcib. Why me, Timon?

Tim. That, by killing of villains, Thou wast born to conquer my country.

Put up thy gold: go on,—here's gold,—go on; Be as a planetary plague, when Jove

Will o'er some high-voiced city hang his poison In the sick air: let not thy sword skip one: 110

Pity not honour'd age for his white beard; He is an usurer: strike me the commonest matron;

It is her habit only that is honest, Herself 's a bawd: let not the virgin's cheek

Make soft thy trenchant sword; for those milk-paps,

That through the window-haze bees at men's eyes,

Are not within the leaf of pity writ, But set them down horrible traitors: spare not the babe,

Whose dimpled smiles from souls exhort their mercy:

Think it a bastard, whom the oracle 120

Hath doubtfully pronounced thy threat shall cut,

And mince it sans remorse: swear against objects;

Put armour on thine ears and on thine eyes; Whose proof, nor yells of mothers, maids, nor

babes,

Nor sight of prints in holy vestments bleeding, Shall pierce a jot. There's gold to pay thy soldeers:

Make large confusion; and, thy fury spent, Confounded be thyself! Spent not, be gone.

Alcib. Hast thou gold yet? I'll take the gold thou givest me,

Not all thy counsel. 130

Tim. Dost thou, or dost thou not, Timon's curse upon thee!

Phr. and Timan. Give us some gold, great Timon: hast thou more?

Tim. Enough to make a whore forswear her trade,
And to make whores, a bawd. Hold up, you sluts,
Your aprons mountant: you are not oathable,—
Although, I know, you'll swear, terribly swear
Into strong shudders and to heavenly agues
The immortal gods that hear you,—spare your oaths,
I'll trust to your conditions: be whores still;
And he whose pious breath seeks to convert you,
Be strong in whore, allure him, burn him up;
Let your close fire predominate his smoke,
And be no turncoats: yet may your pains, six months,
Be quite contrary: and thatch your poor thin roofs
With burthens of the dead;—some that were hang'd,
No matter,—wear them, betray with them: whose still;
Paint till a horse may mire upon your face:
A pox of wrinkles!

Phr. and Timan. Well, more gold: what then?

Believe't, that we'll do any thing for gold. 150

Tim. Consumptions sow

In hollow bones of man; strike their sharp shins,
And mar men's spurring. Crack the lawyer's voice,

That he may never more false title plead,
Nor sound his quillies shrilly: hear the flamen,
That scolds against the quality of fish,
And not believes himself: down with the nose,
Down with it flat; take the bridge quite away
Of him that, his particular to foresee,
Smells from the general weal: make cur'd-pate ruffians bald; 160

And let the unscar'd braggarts of the war
Derive some pain from you: plague all;
That your activity may defeat and quell
The source of all erection. There's more gold:
Do you damn others, and let this damn you,
And ditches grave you all!

Phr. and Timan. More counsel with more money, bounteous Timon.

Tim. More whore, more mischief first; I have given you earnest.

Alci. Strike up the drum towards Athens!
Farewell, Timon!

If I thrive well, I'll visit thee again. 170

Tim. If I hope well, I'll never see thee more.

Alci. I never did thee harm.

Tim. Yes, thou spok'st well of me.

Alci. Call't thou that harm?

Tim. Men daily find it. Get thee away, and take Thy beggars with thee.

Alci. We but offend him. Strike!

[Drum beats. Exit Alciades, Phrynia, and Timandra.

Tim. That nature, being sick of man's un-

Should not be hungry! Common mother, thou,

[Digging.

Whose womb unmeasurable, and infinite breast,
Teems, and feeds all; whose self-same mettle,
Whereof thy proud child, arrogant man, is puff'd, 180

Engenders the black toad and adder blue,
The gilded newt and eyeless venom'd worm,

With all the abhorred birth below crisp heaven
Whereon Hyperion's quickening fire doth shine;

Yield him, who all thy human sons doth hate,
From forth thy plenteous bosom, one poor root!

Ensear thy fertile and conceptious womb,
Let it no more bring out ingrateful man!

Go great with tigers, dragons, wolves, and bears;

Teem with new monsters, whom thy upward face 190

Hath to the marbled mansion all above
Never presented!—(), a root,—dear thanks!

Dry up thy marrows, vines, and plough-tom leas;

Whereof ingrateful man, with liquorish draughts
And morsels unctuous, greases his pure mind,

That from it all consideration slips!

Enter APEMANTUS.

More man? plague, plague!

Apem. I was directed hither: men report
Thou dost affect my manners, and dost use them.

Tim. 'Tis, then, because thou dost not keep a dog, 200

Whom I would imitate: consumption catch thee!

Apem. This is in thee a nature but infected;
A poor unmanly melancholy sprung
From change of fortune. Why this spade? this place?

This slave-like habit? and these looks of care!
Thy flatterers yet wear silk, drink wine, lie soft;

Hug their diseased perfumes, and have forgot
That ever Timon was: Shame not these woods,
By putting on the cunning of a carper.

Be thou a flatterer now, and seek to thrive 210
By that which has undone thee: hinge thy knee,

And let his very breath, whom thou'lt observe,
Blow off thy cap: praise his most vicious strain,
And call it excellent: thou wast told thus:

Thou gavest thine ears like tapsters that bid welcome

To knaves and all approachers: 'tis most just
That thou turn rascal: hadst thou wealth again,
Rascals should have't. Do not assume my likeness.

Tim. Were I like thee, I'd throw away myself.

Apem. Thou hast cast away thyself, being like thyself; 220

A madman so long, now a fool. What, think'st
That the bleak air, thy boisterous chinbeak,
Will put thy shirt on warm? wilt these spind
trees,

That have outlived the eagle, rage thy back,
And skip where thou point'st out? wilt the cold brook,

Candled with ice, candle thy morning task.

To cure thy o'er-night's surfeit! Call the creatures

Whose naked natures live in all the spite
Of wretched heaven, whose bare unboused trunks

To the conflicting elements exposed, ²³⁰
Answer mere nature; bid them flatter thee;
O, thou shalt find—

Tim. A fool of thee: depart.
Apem. I love thee better now than e'er I did.

Tim. I hate thee worse.

Apem. Why?

Tim. Thou flatter'st misery.

Apem. I flatter not; but say thou art a cattiff.

Tim. Why dost thou seek me out?

Apem. To vex thee.

Tim. Always a villain's office or a fool's.
Dost please thyself in't?

Apem. Ay.

Tim. What! a knave too?
Apem. If thou didst put this sour-colour'd habit on ²³⁹

To castigate thy pride, 'twere well; but thou
Dost it enforcedly; thou'ldst courtier be again,

Wert thou not beggar. Willing misery
Outlives uncertain pomp, is crown'd before:

The one is filling still, never complete;
The other, at high wish: best state, contentless,

Hath a distracted and most wretched being,
Worse than the worst, content.

Thou shouldst desire to die, being miserable.

Tim. Not by his breath that is more miserable.

Thou art a slave, whom Fortune's tender arm
With favour never clasp'd; but bred a dog, ²⁴⁵

Hadst thou, like us from our first swath, proceeded

The sweet degrees that this brief world affords
To such as may the passive drugs of it

Freely command, thou wouldst have plunged
thyself

In general riot; melted down thy youth
In different beds of lust; and never learn'd

The icy precepts of respect, but follow'd
The sugar'd game before thee. But myself,

Who had the world as my confectionary, ²⁵⁰
The mouths, the tongues, the eyes and hearts of
men

At duty, more than I could frame employment,
That numberless upon me stuck as leaves

Do on the oak, have with one winter's brush
Fell from their boughs and left me open, bare

For every storm that blows: I, to bear this,
That never knew but better, is some burden:

Thy nature did commence in sufferance, time
Hath made thee hard in't. Why shouldst thou hate men?

They never flatter'd thee: what hast thou given? ²⁷⁰

If thou wilt curse, thy father, that poor rag,
Must be thy subject, who in spite put stuff

To some she beggar and compounded thee
Poor rogue hereditary. Hence, be gone!

If thou hadst not been born the worst of men,
Thou hadst been a knave and flatterer.

Apem. Art thou proud yet?

Tim. Ay, that I am not thee.

Apem.

I, that I was

No prodigal.

Tim. I, that I am one now:

Were all the wealth I have shut up in thee,
I'd give thee leave to hang it. Get thee gone.

That the whole life of Athens were in this! ²⁸⁵
Thus would I eat it. [Eating a roof.

Apem. Here; I will mend thy feast.
[Offering him a roof.

Tim. First mend my company, take away
thyself.

Apem. So I shall mend mine own, by the lack of thine.

Tim. 'Tis not well mended so, it is but botch'd;

If not, I would it were.

Apem. What wouldst thou have to Athens?
Tim. These thither in a whirlwind. If thou wilt,

Tell them there I have gold; look, so I have.
Apem. Here is no use for gold.

Tim. The best and truest; ²⁹⁰
For here it sleeps, and does no hired harm.

Apem. Where liest o' nights, Timon?

Tim. Under that's above me.
Where feed'st thou o' days, Apemantus?

Apem. Where my stomach finds meat; or,
rather, where I eat it.

Tim. Would poison were obedient and knew
my mind!

Apem. Where wouldst thou send it?

Tim. To sauce thy dishes. ²⁹⁹

Apem. The middle of humanity thou never knewest, but the extremity of both ends: when thou wast in thy gilt and thy perfume, they mocked thee for too much curiosity; in thy rags thou knowest none, but art despised for the contrary. There's a mediator for thee, eat it.

Tim. On what I hate I feed not.

Apem. Dost hate a mediator?

Tim. Ay, though it look like thee.

Apem. An thou hadst hated meddlers sooner, thou shouldst have loved thyself better now.

What man didst thou ever know unthrift that was beloved after his means?

Tim. Who, without those means thou talkest of, didst thou ever know beloved?

Apem. Myself.

Tim. I understand thee; thou hadst some means to keep a dog.

Apem. What things in the world canst thou nearest compare to thy flatterers? ³¹⁹

Tim. Women nearest; but men, men are the things themselves. What wouldst thou do with the world, Apemantus, if it lay in thy
power?

Apem. Give it the beasts, to be rid of the
men.

Tim. Wouldst thou have thyself fall in the confusion of men, and remain a beast with the beasts?

Apem. Ay, Timon.

Tim. A beastly ambition, which the gods grant thee't attain to! If thou wert the lion, the fox would beguile thee: if thou wert the lamb, the fox would eat thee: if thou wert the fox, the lion would suspect thee, and adventure thou wert accused by the ass!

were the ass, thy dulness would torment thee, and still thou livest but as a breakfast to the wolf: if thou wert the wolf, thy greediness would afflict thee, and oft thou shouldst hamper thy life for thy dinner: wert thou the unicorn, pride and wrath would confound thee and make thine own self the conquest of thy fury: wert thou a bear, thou wouldst be killed by the house: wert thou a horse, thou wouldst be seized by the leopard: wert thou a leopard, thou wert german to the lion and the spots of thy kindred were jurors on thy life: all thy safety were remoteness and thy defence absence. What beast couldst thou be, that were not subject to a beast? and what a beast art thou already, that seest not thy loss in transformation!

Apem. If thou couldst please me with speaking to me, thou mightst have hit upon it here: the commonwealth of Athens is become a forest of beasts.

Tim. How has the ass broke the wall, that thou art out of the city?

Apem. Yonder comes a poet and a painter: the plague of company light upon thee! I will fear to catch it and give way: when I know not what else to do, I'll see thee again.

Tim. When there is nothing living but thee, thou shalt be welcome. I had rather be a beggar's dog than Apemantus.

Apem. Thou art the cap of all the fools alive.

Tim. Would thou wert clean enough to spit upon!

Apem. A plague on thee! thou art too bad to curse.

Tim. All villains that do stand by thee are pure.

Apem. There is no leprosy but what thou speak'st.

Tim. If I name thee.

I'll beat thee, but I should infect my hands.

Apem. I would my tongue could rot them off!

Tim. Away, thou issue of a mangy dog! Choler does kill me that thou art alive; I would to see thee.

Apem. Would thou wouldst burst!

Tim. Away. Thou tedious rogue! I am sorry I shall lose a stone by thee.

Apem. Beasts!

Tim. Slaves!

Apem. Tond!

Tim. Rogue, rogue, rogue!

I am sick of this false world, and will love more necessities upon't.

Myself prepare thy grave:

Right soon of the sea may beat grave-stone daily: make thine epitaph,

if death in me at others' lives may laugh.

[To the gods.] O thou sweet king-killer, and son and slave! thou bright defiler of sweet bad! thou valiant Mars!

now young, fresh, loved and delicate

Whose blush doth thaw the consecrated snow
That lies on Dian's lap! thou visible god,
That seld'st at close impossibilities,
And makest them kiss! that speak'st with every tongue.

To every purpose! O thou touch of hearts!
Think, thy slave man rebels, and by thy virtue
Set them into confounding odds, that beasts
May have the world in empire!

Apem. Would 'twere so!

But not till I am dead. I'll say thou'rt gold-
Thou wilt be throng'd to shortly.

Tim. Throng'd to!

Apem. Ay.

Tim. Thy back, I prithee.

Apem. Live, and love thy misery.

Tim. Long live so, and so die. [Exit Apemantus.] I am quit.

More things like men! Eat, Timon, and abhor
them.

Enter Dapditti.

First Ban. Where should he have this gold?
It is some poor fragment, some slender sort of his remainder: the mere want of gold, and the falling-from of his friends, drove him into this melancholy.

Sec. Ban. It is noised he hath a mass of treasure.

Third Ban. Let us make the assay upon him: if he care not for't, he will supply us easily; if he covetously reserve it, how shall'st get it!

Sec. Ban. True; for he bears it not about him, 'tis hid.

First Ban. Is not this he?

Banditti. Where?

Sec. Ban. 'Tis his description.

Third Ban. He; I know him.

Banditti. Save thee, Timon.

Tim. Now thieves?

Banditti. Soldiers, not thieves.

Tim. Both too; and women's sons.

Banditti. We are not thieves, but men that much do want.

Tim. Your greatest want is, you want much of meat.

Why should you want? Behold, the earth hath roots;

Within this mile break forth a hundred springs;
The oaks bear mast, the briars scarlet hips;
The bounteous housewife, nature, on each bush Lays her full acres before you. Want! why want?

First Ban. We cannot live on grass, on berries, water,

As beasts and birds and fishes.

Tim. Nor on the beasts themselves, the birds, and fishes!

You must eat men. Yet thanks I must you That you are thieves profess'd, and your work not in holier shapes: for there is something that in limited proportions, cannot thieves.

Here's gold. Go, seek the subtle blood of the grape.

Till the high fever soaks your blood to death,
And so escape hanging: trust not the physician;
His antidotes are poison, and he sleeps.

Is he than you rob: take wealth and lives to 450

no villainy, do, since you protest to do't, like workmen. I'll example you with this very:
 the sun's a thief, and with his great attraction takes the rent on us: the moon's an arrant thief, and her pale fire she snatches from the sun:
 the sea's a thief, whose liquid surge resolves
 the moon into salt tears: the earth's a thief, [hat feeds and breeds by a composture stolen from general excrement: each thing's a thief:
 the laws, your curb and whip, in their rough
 power

Have uncheck'd theft. Love not yourselves:
 away,

Rob one another. There's more gold. Cut
 throats:

All that you meet are thieves: to Athens go,
 Break open shops; nothing can you steal, 450
 But thieves do lose it: steal no less for this
 I give you; and gold confound you howe'er!
 Amen.

Third Ban. Has almost charmed me from my profession, by persuading me to it.

First Ban. 'Tis in the malice of mankind that he thus advises us; not to have us thrive in our mystery.

Sec. Ban. I'll believe him as an enemy, and give over my trade. 460

First Ban. Let us first see peace in Athens:
 there is no time so miserable but a man may be
 so. [Exeunt Banditti.]

Enter FLAVIUS.

Flav. O you gods!
 you'd despised and ruinous man my lord!
 all of decay and failing! O monument and wonder of good deeds evilly bestow'd!
 that an alteration of honour
 as desperate want made! 469 that viler thing upon the earth than friends who can bring noblest minds to basest ends!
 how rarely does it meet with this time's guile,
 when man was wish'd to love his enemies!
 rant I may ever love, and rather woo those that would mischief me than those that do!

has caught me in his eye: I will present
 my honest grief unto him; and, as my lord, till serve him with my life. My dearest
 master!

Tim. Away! what art thou?

Flav. Have you forgot me, sir?

Tim. Why dost ask that? I have forgot all
 men; 480

then, if thou grant'st thou'rt a man, I have forgot thee.

Flav. An honest poor servant of yours.

Tim. Then I know thee not:
 never had honest man about me, I; all kept were knaves, to serve in meat to villains.

Flav. The gods are witnesses,
 he's did poor steward wear a true grief
 For his undone lord than mine eyes for you.

Tim. What, dost thou weep? Come nearer.
 Then I love thee.

Because thou set'st a woman, and dost think'st 490 my mankind; whose eyes do never give

But thorough instinct and laughter. Pity's sleeping:
 Strange times, that weep with laughing, not with weeping!

Flav. I beg of you to know me, good my
 lord,
 To accept my grief and whilst this poor wealth

To entertain me as your steward still.

Tim. Had I a steward
 So true, so just, and now so comfortable!
 It almost turns my dangerous nature mild.
 Let me behold thy face. Surely, this man 500
 Was born of woman.

Forgive my general and exceptionless rashness,
 You perpetual-sober gods! I do proclaim
 One honest man—mistake me not—but one;
 No more, I pray,—and he's a steward.
 How fain would I have hated all mankind!
 And thou redeem'st thyself: but all, save thee,
 I fell with curses.

Methinks thou art more honest now than wise;
 For, by oppressing and betraying me, 510
 Thou might'st have sooner got another service:
 For many so arrive at second masters,
 Upon their first lord's neck. But tell me true—
 For I must ever doubt, though ne'er so sure—
 Is not thy kindness subtle, covetous,
 If not a usuring kindness, and, as rich men deal
 gifts,

Expecting in return twenty for one?

Flav. No, my most worthy master; in whose breast

Doubt and suspect, alas, are placed too late:
 You should have fear'd false times when you did feast: 520

Suspect still comes where an estate is lost.
 That which I show, heaven knows, is merely
 love.

Duty and zeal to your unmatched mind,
 Care of your food and living; and, believe it,
 My most honour'd lord,
 For any benefit that points to me,
 Either in hope or present, I'd exchange
 For this one wish, that you had power and wealth

To requite me, by making rich yourself.

Tim. Look thee, 'tis so! Thou singly honest
 man, 530

Here, take: the gods out of my misery
 Have sent thee treasure. Go, live rich and happy;

But thus condition'd: thou shalt build down
 men;

Hate all, curse all, show charity to none,
 But let the famish'd flesh slide from the bone,
 Ere thou relieve the beggar; give so dogs
 What thou deny'st to man; let prisons swallow
 'em.

Debauch wither 'em to nothing; be men like blasted woods,
 And may diseases lick up their false blood:
 And so farewell and thrive. 540

Flav. O, let me stay,
 And comfort you, my master.

Tim. If thou hast
 Stay not; for, whilst thou art here, and is

Timon retiring to his cave.

ACT V.

SCENE I. The woods. Before Timon's cave.Enter Poet and Painter; TIMON watching them from his cave.Pain. As I took note of the place, it cannot be far where he abides.Poet. What's to be thought of him? does the rumour hold for true, that he's so full of gold?Pain. Certain: Alcibiades reports it: Phrynia and Timandra had gold of him: he likewise enriched poor straggling soldiers with great quantity: 'tis said he gave unto his steward a mighty sum.Poet. Then this breaking of his has been but a try for his friends.Pain. Nothing else: you shall see him a palm in Athens again, and flourish with the highest. Therefore 'tis not amiss we tender our loves to him, in this supposed distress of his: it will show honestly in us; and is very likely to load our purposes with what they travail for, if it be a just and true report that goes of his having.Poet. What have you now to present unto him?Pain. Nothing at this time but my visitation: only I will promise him an excellent piece.Poet. I must serve him so too, tell him of an intent that's coming toward him.Pain. Good as the best. Promising is the very air o' the time: it opens the eyes of expectation: performance is ever the duller for his act; and, but in the plainer and simpler kind of people, the deed of saying is quite out of use. To promise is most courtly and fashionable: performance is a kind of will or testament which argues a great sickness in his judgement that makes it.[Timon comes from his cave, behind.]*
Tim. [Aside] Excellent workman! thou canst not paint a man so bad as is thyself.Poet. I am thinking what I shall say I have provided for him: it must be a personating of himself; a satire against the softness of prosperity, with a discovery of the infinite flatteries that follow youth and opulency.Tim. [Aside] Must thou needs stand for a villain in thine own work? wilt thou whip thine own faults in other men? Do so, I have gold for thee.Poet. Nay, let's seek him: Then do we sin against our own estate, When we may profit meet, and come too late.Pain. True;
When the day serves, before black-corner'd night,
Find what thou want'st by free and offer'd light.
*Come.Tim. [Aside] I'll meet you at the turn.*What a god's gold,
That he is worshipp'd in a baser temple
Than where swine feed!The plow that rigs at the bark and ploughs at the cave.Settlest admired reverence in a slave:
To thee be worship! and thy saints for aye
Be crown'd with plagues that thee alone obey
Fit I meet them.* *[Coming forward]Poet. Hail, worthy Timon!Pain. Our late noble master
Tim. Have I once lived to see two honest men?Poet. Sir,Having often of your open bounty tasted, Hearing you were retired, your friends fall'n on Whose thankless natures—O abhorred spirits!
Not all the whips of heaven are large enough
What! to you,

Whose star-like nobleness gave life and influence

To their whole being! I am rapt and cannot cover

The monstrous bulk of this ingratitude
With any size of words.Tim. Let it go naked, men may see't the better:You that are honest, by being what you are,
Make them best seen and known.Pain. He and myself
Have travail'd in the great shower of your gifts
And sweetly felt it.Tim. Ay, you are honest men.Pain. We are hither come to offer you our service.Tim. Most honest men! Why, how shall requite you?

Can you eat roots, and drink cold water? no.

Both. What we can do, we'll do, to do you service.Tim. Ye're honest men: ye've heard that I have gold;

I am sure you have: speak truth; ye're honest men.

Pain. So it is said, my noble lord; therefore

Came not my friend nor I.

Tim. Good honest men! Thou draw'st counterfeits

Best in all Athens: thou'rt, indeed, the best; Thou counterfeit'st most lively.

Pain. So, so, my lord.Tim. E'en so, sir, as I say. And, for thy fiction,

Why, thy verse swells with stuff so fine and smooth

That thou art even natural in thine art.

But, for all this, my honest-natured friends, I must needs say you have a little fault:

Marry, 'tis not monstrous in you, neither wish I You take much pains to mend.

Both. Beseech your honour To make it known to us.Tim. You'll take it ill.Both. Most thankfully, my lord.Tim. Will you, indeed?Both. Doubt it not, worthy lord.Tim. There's never a one of you but trusts a knave.That mightily deceives you. Do we, my lord!
Both. Ay, and you hear him cog, see him dissemble,

Know his gross patchery, love him, feed him,
Keep in your bosom : yet remain assured 100
That he's a made-up villain.

Pauc. I know none such, my lord.

Tim. Look you, I love you well; I'll give you gold, Nor I.

Rid me these villains from your companies :
Hang them or stab them, drown them in a draught,

Confound them by some course, and come to me, I'll give you gold enough.

Both. Name them, my lord, let's know

them.

Tim. You that way and you this, but two in company;

Each man apart, all single and alone, 110
Yet an arch-villain keeps him company.

If where thou art two villains shall not be,
'Come not near him. If thou wouldst not reside

But where one villain is, then him abandon.

Hence, pack! there's gold; you came for gold,
ye slaves:

[To Painter.] You have work'd for me; there's payment for you: hence!

[To Poet.] You are an alchemist; make gold of

that.

But, rascal dogs! [Beats them out, and then retires to his cave.

Enter FLAVIUS and two Senators.

Flav. It is in vain that you would speak with Timon:

For he is set so only to himself 120

That nothing but himself which looks like man
Is friendly with him.

First Sen. Bring us to his cave:

It is our part and promise to the Athenians

To speak with Timon.

Sec. Sen. At all times alike

Men are not still the same: 'twas time and griefs

That framed him thus: time, with his fairer

hand,

Offering the fortunes of his former days,

The former man may make him. Bring us to

him,

And chance it as it may.

Flav. Here is his cave.

Peace and content be here! Lord Timon

Timon! 130

Look out, and speak to friends: the Athenians,

By two of their most reverend senate, greet

thee:

Speak to them, noble Timon.

TIMON comes from his cave.

Tim. Thou sun, that comfort'st, burn! Speak, and be hang'd:

For each true word, a blister! and each false

Be as a cauterizing to the root o' the tongue,

Consuming it with speaking!

First Sen. Worthy Timon,—

Tim. Of none but such as you, and you of Timon.

First Sen. The senators of Athens greet thee, Timon.

Tim. I thank them; and would send them back the plague, 140

Could I but catch it for them.

First Sen. O, forget

What we are sorry for ourselves in thee.

The senators with one consent of love

Entreat thee back to Athens; who have

thought

On special dignities, which vacant lie

For thy best use and wearing.

Sec. Sen. They confess

Toward thee forgetfulness too general, gross:

Which now the public body, which doth seldom

Play the recanter, feeling in itself

A lack of Timon's aid, hath sense withal 150

Of it own fail, restraining aid to Timon;

And send forth us, to make their sorrow'd render,

Together with a recompense more fruitful

Than their offence can weigh down by the

dram;

Ay, even such heaps and sums of love and

wealth

As shall to thee blot out what wrongs were theirs

And write in thee the figures of their love,

Ever to read them thine.

Tim. You witch me in it;

Surprise me to the very brink of tears:

Lend me a fool's heart and a woman's eyes,

And I'll bewep these comforts, worthy sena- 161

tors.

First Sen. Therefore, so please thee to return

with us

And of our Athens, thine and ours, to take

The captainship, thou shalt be met with thanks,

Allow'd with absolute power and thy good

name

Live with authority: so soon we shall drive

back

Of Alcibiades the approaches wild,

Who, like a boar too savage, doth root up

His country's peace.

Sec. Sen. And shakes his threatening sword

Against the walls of Athens.

First Sen. Therefore, Timon,—

Tim. Well, sir, I will; therefore, I will, sir: 171

thus:

If Alcibiades kill my countrymen,

Let Alcibiades know this of Timon,

That Timon cares not. But if he sack fair

Athens,

And take our goodly aged men by the beards,

Giving our holy virgins to the stain

Of contumelious, beastly, mad-brain'd war

Then let him know, and tell him Timon speaks

it,

In pity of our aged and our youth,

I cannot choose but tell him, that I care not.

And let him take't at worst; for their knives care not, 180

While you have throats to answer: for myself,

There's not a whit in the unruly camp

But I do prize it at my love before

The reversed at throat in Athens. So I leave

you

To the protection of the prosperous gods,
As thieves to keepers.

Flav. Stay not, all's in vain.

Tim. Why, I was writing of my epitaph;
It will be seen to-morrow: my long sickness
Of health and living now begins to mend, 100
And nothing brings me all things. Go, live
still;

Be Alcibiades your plague, you his,
And last so long enough!

First Sen. We speak in vain.

Tim. But yet I love my country, and am
not

One that rejoices in the common wreck,
As common bruit doth put it.

First Sen. That's well spoke.

Tim. Commend me to my loving country-
men—

First Sen. These words become your lips as they pass through them.

Sec. Sen. And enter in our ears like great triumphs 100

In their applauding gates.

Tim. Commend me to them,
And tell them that, to ease them of their griefs,
Their fears of hostile strokes, their aches,

Their gangs of love, with other incident throes
That nature's fragile vessel doth sustain
In life's uncertain voyage, I will some kindness
do them:

I'll teach them to prevent wild Alcibiades'
wrath.

First Sen. I like this well; he will return
again.

Tim. I have a tree, which grows here in my close,

That mine own use invites me to cut down,
And shortly must I fell it: tell my friends, 110
Tell Athens, in the sequence of degrees,
From high to low throughout, that whose

place

To stop affliction, let him take his haste,
Come hither, ere my tree hath felt the axe,

And hang himself. I pray you, do my greeting.

Flav. Trouble him no further; thus you still shall find him.

Tim. Come not to me again: but say to Athens,

Timon hath made his everlasting mansion
Upon the beached verge of the salt flood;

Who once a day with his embossed froth 120
The turbulent surge shall cover: thither come,
And let my grave-stone be your oracle.

Let, let your words go by and language end:
What is a plague and infection mend!

Graves only be men's works and death their goal!

Sun, hide thy beams! Timon hath done his reign. [Retires to his cave.]

First Sen. His discontent is unmoveable

—led to nature.

Sec. Sen. Our hope in him is dead: let us return.

And strain what other means is left unto us
in our dear path.

First Sen. It requires swift foot. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Before the walls of Athens.

Enter two Senators and a Messenger.

First Sen. Thou hast painfully discover'd:
are his files

As full as thy report?

Mes. I have spoke the best:
Besides, his expedition promises
Present approach.

Sec. Sen. We stand much hazard, if they bring not Timon.

Mes. I met a courier, one mine ancient
friend;

Whom, though in general part we were oppos'd,
† Yet our old love made a particular force,

And made us speak like friends: this man was riding

From Alcibiades to Timon's cave, 10
With letters of entreaty, which import'd

His fellowship † the cause against your city,
In part for his sake moved.

First Sen. Here come our brothers.

Enter the Senators from TIMON.

Third Sen. No talk of Timon, nothing of him expect.

The enemies' drum is heard, and fearful scouring

Doth choke the air with dust: in, and prepare:
Ours is the fall, I fear; our foes the square.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. The woods. Timon's cave, and a rude tomb seen.

Enter a Soldier, seeking TIMON.

Sold. By all description this should be the place.

Who's here? speak, ho! No answer! What is this?

Timon is dead, who hath outstretch'd his span:
Some beast rear'd this; these does not live a

man.

Dead, sure; and this his grave. What's on this tomb

I cannot read: the character I'll take with wax:
Our captain hath in every figure skill.

An aged interpreter, though young in days:
Before proud Athens he's not down by this,

Whose fall the mark of his ambition is. [Exit.] 10

SCENE IV. Before the walls of Athens.

Trumpets sound. Enter ALCEBIADES with his powers.

Alcib. Sound to this coward and lascivious
town

Our terrible approach. [A parley sounded.]

Enter Senators on the walls.

Till now you have gone on and still the time
With all licentious excuse, making your wills

The scope of justice; till now speak and such
As slept within the shadow of your power

Have wander'd with our travell'd arms and breathed

Our sufferance vainly: now the time is shewn,

When crouching marrow in the bearer strong:
Cries of itself 'No more:' now breathless wrong
Shall sit and pant in your great chairs of ease,
And purvy insolence shall break his wind
With fear and horrid flight.

First Sen. Noble and young,
When thy first griefs were but a mere conceit,
I've thou hadst power or we had cause of fear,
We sent to thee, to give thy rages balm,
To wipe out our ingratitude with loves
Above their quantity.

Sec. Sen. So did we woo
Transformed Timon to our city's love
By humble message and by promised means:
We were not all unkind, nor all deserve
The common stroke of war.

First Sen. These walls of ours
Were not erected by their hands from whom You have received your griefs; nor are they such

That these great towers, trophies and schools should fall

For private faults in them.

Sec. Sen. Nor are they living
Who were the motives that you first went out;
Shame that they wanted cunning, in excess
Hath broke their hearts. March, noble lord,
Into our city with thy banners spread:
By declination, and a tithed death—
If thy revenges hunger for that food
Which nature loathes—take thou the destined tenth.

And by the hazard of the spotted die
Let die the spotted.

First Sen. All have not offended;
For those that were, it is not square to take
On those that are, revenges: crimes, like lands,
Are not inherited. Then, dear countryman,
Bring in thy ranks, but leave without thy rage:
Spare thy Athenian cradle and those kin
Which in the bluster of thy wrath must fall
With those that have offended: like a shepherd,
Approach the fold and cull the infected forth,
But kill not all together.

Sec. Sen. What thou wilt,
Thou rather shalt enforce it with thy smile
Than hew to't with thy sword.

First Sen. Set but thy foot
Against our rampired gates, and they shall open:
So thou wilt send thy gentle heart before,

To say thou 't enter friendly.

Sec. Sen. Throw thy glove,
Or any token of thine honour else,
That thou wilt use the wars as thy redress
And not as our confusion, all thy powers Shall make their harbour in our town, till we Have seal'd thy full desire.

Alcib. Then there's my glove;
Descend, and open your uncharged ports:
Those enemies of Timon's and mine own
Whom you yourselves shall set out for reproof
Fall and no more; and, to atone your fears
With my more noble meaning, not a man
Shall pass his quarter, or offend the stream
Of regular justice in your city's bounds,
But shall be render'd to your public laws
At heaviest answer.

Both. 'Tis most nobly spoken.

Alcib. Descend, and keep your words.
[The Senators descend, and open the gates.]

Enter Soldier.

Sold. My noble general, Timon is dead;
Entomb'd upon the very hem o' the sea;
And on his grave-stone this inscription, which
With wax I brought away, whose soft impression

Interprets for my poor ignorance.

Alcib. [Reads the epitaph] 'Here lies a wretched corpse, of wretched soul bereft:
Seek not my name; a plague consume you wicked catiffs left!

Here lie I, Timon; who, alive, all living men
did hate:
Pass by and curse thy fill, but pass and stay not here thy gait.'

These well express in thee thy latter spirits;
Though thou abhor'd'st in us our human griefs,
Scorn'dst our brain's flow and those our droplets
which

From niggard nature fall, yet rich conceit
Taught thee to make vast Neptune weep for aye
On thy low grave, on faults forgiven. Dead is noble Timon: of whose memory
Hereafter more. Bring me into your city.
And I will use the olive with my sword,
Make war breed peace, make peace stint war,
make each

Prescribe to other as each other's leech.
Let our drums strike. [Exeunt.]

SCENE: *Rome: the neighbourhood of Sardis:
 the neighbourhood of Philippi.*

ACT I.

SCENE I. Rome. A street.

Enter FLAVIUS, MARULLUS, and certain Commoners.

Flav. Hence! home, you idle creatures, get you home:

Is this a holiday? what! know you not, Being mechanical, you ought not walk Upon a labouring day without the sign Of your profession? Speak, what trade art thou?

First Com. Why, sir, a carpenter.

Mar. Where is thy leather apron and thy rule?

What dost thou with thy best apparel on?

You, sir, what trade are you?

Sec. Com. Truly, sir, in respect of a fine workman, I am but, as you would say, a cobbler.

Mar. But what trade art thou? answer me directly.

Ans. Com. A trade, sir, that, I hope, I may not with a safe conscience; which is, indeed, single mender of bad soles.

Mar. What trade, thou knave? thou naughty knave, what trade?

Sec. Com. Nay, I beseech you, sir, be not out with me: yet, if you be out, sir, I can mend you.

Mar. What meanest thou by that? mend me, thou naughty fellow!

Ans. Com. Why, sir, cobble you.

Flav. Thou art a cobbler, art thou?

Sec. Com. Truly, sir, all that I live by is with the awl: I meddle with no tradesman's matters, nor women's matters, but with awl. I am, indeed, sir, a surgeon to old shoes; when they are in great danger, I recover them. As proper men as ever trod upon neat's leather have gone upon my handiwork.

Flav. But wherefore art not in thy shop to-day?

Why dost thou lead these men about the streets?

Sec. Com. Truly, sir, to wear out their shoes, to get myself into more work. But, indeed, sir, we make holiday, to see Cæsar and to rejoice in his triumph.

Mar. Wherefore rejoice? What conquest brings he home?

What tributaries follow him to Rome, To grace in captive bonds his chariot-wheels? You blocks, you stones, you worse than senseless things!

O you hard hearts, you cruel men of Rome, Knew you not Pompey? Many a time and oft Have you climb'd up to walls and battlements, To towers and windows, yea, to chimney-tops, Your infants in your arms, and there have sat The live-long day, with patient expectation, To see great Pompey pass the streets of Rome: And when you saw his chariot but appear, Have you not made an universal shout, That Tiber trembled underneath her banks, To hear the replication of your sounds

Made in her concave shores!
And do you now put on your best attire?
And do you now cull out a holiday!
And do you now strew flowers in his way
That comes in triumph over Pompey's blood?
Be gone!

Run to your houses, fall upon your knees,
Pray to the gods to intermit the plague
That needs must light on this iniquity. 60 Flav. Go, go, good countrymen, and, for this fault,

Assemble all the poor men of your sort;
Draw them to Tiber banks, and weep your tears
Into the channel, till the lowest stream
Do kiss the most exalted shores of all.

[Exeunt all the Commoners.]

See, whether their basest metal be not moved;
They vanish tongue-tied in their guiltiness.
Go you down that way towards the Capitol;
This way will I: disrobe the images,
If you do find them deck'd with ceremonies. 70

Mar. May we do so?

You know it is the feast of Lupercal.
Flav. It is no matter; let no images
Be hung with Caesar's trophies. I'll about,
And drive away the vulgar from the streets:
So do you too, where you perceive them thick.
These growing feathers pluck'd from Caesar's wing

Will make him fly an ordinary pitch,
Who else would soar above the view of men 70
And keep us all in servile fearfulness. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. A public place.

Flourish. Enter CÆSAR; ANTONY, for the course; CALPURNIA, PORTIA, DECIVS, CI-CERO, BRUTUS, CASSIUS, and CASCIA; a great crowd following, among them a Soothsayer.

Cæs. Calpurnia!

Casca. Peace, ho! Cæsar speaks.

Cæs. Calpurnia!

Cal. Here, my lord.

Cæs. Stand you directly in Antonius' way,
When he doth run his course. Antonius!

Ant. Cæsar, my lord!

Cæs. Forget not, in your speed, Antonius,
To touch Calpurnia; for our elders say,
The barren, touch'd in this holy chase,
Shake off their sterile curse.

Ant. I shall remember:
When Cæsar says 'do this,' it is perform'd. 10

Cæs. Set on; and leave no ceremony out.
[Flourish.]

Sooth. Cæsar!

Cæs. Ha! who calls!

Casca. Bid every noise be still: peace yet
again!

Cæs. Who is it in the press that calls on me?
I hear a tongue, shriller than all the music,
Cry 'Cæsar!' Speak; Cæsar is turn'd to hear.

Sooth. Beware the Ides of March.

Cæs. What man is that?

Brus. A soothsayer bids you beware the Ides of March.

Cæs. Set him before me; let me see his
face.

Cæs. Fellow, come from the throng; look upon Cæsar.

Cæs. What say'st thou to me now? speak
once again.

Sooth. Beware the Ides of March.

Cæs. He is a dreamer; let us leave him:
pass. [Sennet. Exeunt all except Brutus and Cassius.]

Cæs. Will you go see the order of the course?

Brus. Not I.

Cæs. I pray you, do.

Brus. I am not gamester: I do lack some
part

Of that quick spirit that is in Antony.
Let me not hinder, Cassius, your desires; 30
I'll leave you.

Cæs. Brutus, I do observe you now of late:
I have not from your eyes that gentleness
And show of love as I was wont to have:
You bear too stubborn and too strange a hand
Over your friend that loves you.

Brus. Cassius,
Be not deceived: if I have veil'd my look,
I turn the trouble of my countenance
Merely upon myself. Vexed I am
Of late with passions of some difference, 40
Conceptions only proper to myself,
Which give some soil perhaps to my behaviour;
But let not therefore my good friends be grieved—

Among which number, Cassius, be you one—
Nor construe any further my neglect,
Than that poor Brutus, with himself at war,
Forgets the shows of love to other men.

Cæs. Then, Brutus, I have much mistook your passion;

By means whereof this breast of mine hath buried

Thoughts of great value, worthy cogitations. 50
Tell me, good Brutus, can you see your face?

Brus. No, Cassius; for the eye sees not itself,

But by reflection, by some other things.

Cæs. 'Tis just:

And it is very much lamented, Brutus,
That you have no such mirrors as will turn
Your hidden worthiness into your eye,
That you might see your shadow. I have heard,

Where many of the best respect in Rome,
Except immortal Cæsar, speaking of Brutus 60
And groaning underneath this age's yoke,
Have wish'd that noble Brutus had his eyes.

Brus. Into what dangers would you lead me,
Cassius,

That you would have me seek into myself
For that which is not in me?

Cæs. Therefore, good Brutus, be prepared to
hear:

And since you know you cannot see yourself
So well as by reflection, I, your glass,
Will modestly discover to yourself
That of yourself which you yet know not of. 70

And be not jealous on me, gentle Brutus:

Were I a common laugh, or did use

To stale with ordinary oaths my love

To every new protester; if you know

That I do fawn on men and hug them hard

And after several others, as if you know
That I profess myself in banqueting
To all the rest, then hold me dangerous.

Flourish, and shout.
Bru. What means this shouting? I do fear,
the people
Choose Caesar for their king.

Caes. Ay, do you fear it? So
Then must I think you would not have it so.

Bru. I would not, Cassius; yet I love him
well.

But wherefore do you hold me here so long?

What is it that you would impart to me?

If it be sought toward the general good,

Set honour in one eye and death in the other,

And I will look on both indifferently:

For let the gods so speed me as I love

The name of honour more than I fear death.

Caes. I know that virtue to be in you,

Brutus.

As well as I do know your outward favour.

Well, honour is the subject of my story.

I cannot tell what you and other men

Think of this life; but, for my single self,

I had as lief not be as live to be

In awe of such a thing as I myself.

I was born free as Caesar; so were you:

We both have fed as well, and we can both

Endure the winter's cold as well as he:

For once, upon a raw and gusty day,

The troubled Tiber chafing with her shores,

Caesar said to me 'Darest thou, Cassius, now

Leap in with me into this angry flood,

And swim to yonder point?' Upon the word,

Accented as I was, I plunged in

And bade him follow; so indeed he did.

The current roar'd, and we did buffet it

With lucky sinews, throwing it aside

And stemming it with hearts of controversy;

But ere we could arrive the point propos'd,

Caesar cried 'Help me, Cassius, or I sink!'

I, as Aeneas, our great ancestor,

Did from the flames of Troy upon his shoulder

The old Anchises bear, so from the waves of

Tiber

Did I the tired Caesar. And this man

Is now become a god, and Cassius is

A wretched creature and must bend his body

To Caesar's will; he has a fever upon him.

He has a fever when he was in Spain,

And when the fit was on him, I did mark

How he did shake: 'tis true, this god did shake:

His coward lips did from their colour fly,

And that same eye whose beard doth awe the

world

Did see his lustre: I did hear him groan:

Ay, and that tongue of his that bade the mark him and write his speeches in their books,

Alexander, 'Give me some drink, Titinius,'

As a sick girl. Ye gods, it doth amaze me

A man of such a feeble temper should

Be so the master of the majestic world:

And here the palm alone. Shout. Flourish.

Bru. Another general shout!

I do believe that these applauses are

For some new honours that are heap'd on

Caesar.

Caes. Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow
world

Like a Colossus, and we petty men

Walk under his huge legs and peep about

To find ourselves dishonourable graves.

Men at some time are masters of their fate:

The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars,

But in ourselves, that we are underlings.

Brutus and Caesar: what should be in that

Caesar?

Why should that name be sounded more than

yours?

Write them together, yours is as fair a name;

Sound them, it doth become the mouth as well;

Weigh them, it is as heavy; conjure with 'em,

Brutus will start a spirit as soon as Caesar.

Now, in the names of all the gods at once,

Upon what meat doth this our Caesar feed,

That he is grown so great? Age, thou art shamed!

Rome, thou hast lost the breed of noble bloods!

When went there by an age, since the great flood,

But it was famed with more than with one

man?

When could they say till now, that talk'd of

Rome,

That her wide walls encompass'd but one man?

Now is it Rome indeed and room enough,

When there is in it but one only man.

O, you and I have heard our fathers say,

There was a Brutus once that would have brook'd

The eternal devil to keep his state in Rome

As easily as a king.

Bru. That you do love me, I am nothing

jealous;

What you would work me to, I have some aim.

How I have thought of this and of these times,

I shall recount hereafter; for this present,

I would not, so with love I might entreat you,

Be any further moved. What you have said

I will consider; what you have to say

I will with patience hear, and find a time

Both meet to hear and answer such high

things.

Till then, my noble friend, chew upon this:

Brutus had rather be a villager

Than to repute himself a son of Rome

Under these hard conditions as this time

Is like to lay upon us.

Caes. I am glad that my weak words

Have struck but thus much show of fire from

Brutus.

Bru. The games are done and Caesar is returning.

Caes. As they pass by, pluck Cicerus by the

ear;

And he will, after his sour fashion, tell you

What hath proceeded worthy note to-day.

Re-enter CASSIUS and his Friends.

Bru. I will do so. But look you, Cicerus,

The angry spot doth glow on Caesar's brow,

And all the rest look like a chafed train

Calpurnia's cheek is pale; and Cleopatra

Looks with such sad and sullen eyes

As we have seen him in the Capitol,

Being even'd in conference by some senators.

Caes. Caesar will tell us what the matter is.

Caes. Antonius!

Ant. Caesar!

Caes. Let me have men about me that are fat;

Stout-hearted men and such as sleep o' nights;

Yond Cassius has a lean and hungry look;

He thinks too much: such men are dangerous.

Ant. Fear him not, Caesar; he's not dangerous;

He is a noble Roman and well given.

Caes. Would he were fatter! But I fear him not:

Yet if my name were noble to fear, I do not know the man I should avoid

So soon as that spare Cassius. He reads much;

He is a great observer and he looks

Quite through the deeds of men; he loves no

As thou dost, Antony; he hears no music;

Seldom he smiles, and smiles in such a sort

As if he mock'd himself and scorn'd his spirit

That could be moved to smile at any thing.

Such men as he be never at heart's ease

Whilst they behold a greater than themselves,

And therefore are they very dangerous.

I rather tell thee what is to be fear'd

Than what I fear; for always I am Caesar.

Come on my right hand, for this ear is deaf,

And tell me truly what thou think'st of him.

[Senates. Escort Caesar and all his Train, but Casca.

Casca. You pul'd me by the cloak; would you speak with me?

Bru. Ay, Casca; tell us what hath chanced

to-day.

That Caesar looks so sad.

Casca. Why, you were with him, were you

not?

Bru. I should not then ask Casca what had chanced.

Casca. Why, there was a crown offer'd him; and being offer'd him, he put it by with the back of his hand, thus; and then the people fell a-shouting.

Bru. What was the second noise for?

Casca. Why, for that too.

Caes. They shouted thrice: what was the last cry for?

Casca. Why, for that too.

Bru. Was the crown offer'd him thrice?

Caes. Ay, marry, was't, and he put it by thrice, every time gentler than other, and at every putting-by mine honest neighbours shouted.

Caes. Who offer'd him the crown?

Casca. Why, Antony.

Bru. Tell us the manner of it, gentle Casca.

Caes. I can as well be hang'd as tell the manner of it: it was mere foolery; I did not mark it. I saw Mark Antony offer him a crown;—but 'twas not a crown neither, 'twas one of those coronets;—and, as I told you, he put it by once; but, for all that, some of he would have had it. Then he offer'd to him again; then he put it by again; but, to my thinking, he was very loath to lay his fingers off it. And then he offer'd it the third time; he put it the third time by: and still as he refused it, the noblemen hooted and clapped their chopped hands and threw up their twenty night-caps and uttered such a deal of stinking breath because Caesar refused them, even that it had almost choked Caesar; for he swooned and fell down at it; and for mine own part, I durst not laugh, for fear of opening my lips and receiving the bad air.

Caes. But, soft, I pray you: what, did Caesar swoon?

Casca. He fell down in the market-place, and foam'd at mouth, and was speechless.

Bru. 'Tis very like: he hath the falling sickness.

Caes. No, Caesar hath it not; but you and I

And honest Casca, we have the falling sickness.

Casca. I know not what you mean by that;

but, I am sure, Caesar fell down. If the rag people did not clap him and hiss him, according

as he pleased and displeased them, as they use to do the players in the theatre, I am no true

man.

Bru. What said he when he came unto himself?

Casca. Marry, before he fell down, when he perceived the common herd was glad he refused the crown, he plucked me ope his doublet and offer'd them his throat to cut. An I had been a man of any occupation, if I would not have taken him at a word, I would I might go to hell among the rogues. And so he fell. When he came to himself again, he said, If he had good soul! and forgave him with all their hearts: but there's no heed to be taken of them; if Caesar had stabbed their mothers,

they would have done no less.

Bru. And after that, he came, thus sad, away!

Casca. Ay.

Caes. Did Cicero say any thing?

Casca. Ay, he spoke Greek.

Caes. To what effect?

Casca. Nay, sir I tell you that, I'll never look you in the face again: but these that understood him smiled at one another and shook their heads; but, for mine own part, it was Greek to me. I could tell you more news too: Marullus and Flavius, for pulling down off Caesar's images, are put to silence. Have you well. There was more foolery yet, if I could remember it.

Caes. Will you sup with me to-night, Casca?

Casca. No, I am promised forth.

Caes. Will you dine with me to-morrow?

Casca. Ay, if I be alive and your mind hold and your dinner worth the eating.

Caes. Good! I will expect you.

Casca. Do so. Farewell, both.

Bru. What a blunt fellow is this grown to be!

He was quick mottle when he went to school.

Caes. He is now in company.

Of any bold or noble enterprise.

However he puts on this tardy form.
This rudeness is a sauce to his good wit,
Which gives men stomach to digest his words
With better appetite.

Brut. And so it is. For this time I will leave you:

To-morrow, if you please to speak with me,
I will come home to you; or, if you will,
Come home to me, and I will wait for you. 310

Cas. I will do so: till then, think of the world. [Exit Brutus.]

Well, Brutus, thou art noble; yet, I see,
Thy honourable metal may be wrought
From that it is disposed: therefore it is meet
That noble minds keep ever with their likes;
For who so firm that cannot be seduced?
Cæsar doth bear me hard; but he loves Brutus:
If I were Brutus now and he were Cassius,
He should not humour me. I will this night,
In several hands, in at his windows throw, 320
As if they came from several citizens,
Writings all tending to the great opinion
That Rome holds of his name; wherein obscurely Cæsar's ambition shall be glanced at:
And after this let Cæsar seat him sure;
For we will shake him, or worse days endure.

[Exit.]

SCENE III. The same. A street.

Thunder and lightning. Enter, from opposite sides, CÆSAR, with his sword drawn, and CICERO.

Cic. Good even, Cæsar: brought you Cæsar home?

Why are you breathless? and why stare you so?
Cas. Are not you moved, when all the way of earth

Shakes like a thing unfirm? O Cicero,
I have seen tempests, when the scolding winds
Have rived the knotty oaks, and I have seen
The ambitious ocean swell and rage and foam,
To be exalted with the threatening clouds:
But never till to-night, never till now,
Did I go through a tempest dropping fire. 330
Either there is a civil strife in heaven,
Or else the world, too saucy with the gods,
Incenses them to send destruction.

Cic. Why, saw you anything more wonderful?
Cas. A common slave—you know him well by sight—

Held up his left hand, which did flame and burn

Like twenty torches join'd, and yet his hand,
Not sensible of fire, remain'd unscorch'd.
Besides—I ha' not since put up my sword—

Against the Capitol I met a lion, 340
Who glared upon me, and went surly by,
Without annoying me: and there were drawn
Upon a heap a hundred ghastly women, Transformed with their fear; who swore they saw

Mæc all in fire walk up and down the streets.
And yesterday the bird of night did sit
Even at noon-day upon the market-place,
Hooting and shrieking. When these prodigies
Do so conjointly meet, let not men say

'These are their reasons; they are natural;' 30
For, I believe, they are portentous things
Unto the climate that they point upon.

Cic. Indeed, it is a strange-disposed time;
But men may construe things after their fashion,

Clean from the purpose of the things themselves.

Comes Cæsar to the Capitol to-morrow?

Cas. He doth; for he did bid Antonius
Send word to you he would be there to-morrow.

Cic. Good night then, Cæsar: 31
I am disturbed
sky

Is not to walk in.

Cas. Farewell, Cicero. [Exit Cicero. 40

Enter CASSIUS.

Cas. Who's there?

Cas. A Roman.

Cas. Cæsar, by your voice.

Cas. Your ear is good. Cassius, what night
is this?

Cas. A very pleasing night to honest men.

Cas. Who ever knew the heavens menace
so?

Cas. Those that have known the earth so full of faults.

For my part, I have walk'd about the streets,
Submitting me unto the perilous night,
And, thus unbraced, Cæsar, as you see,
I have bared my bosom to the thunder-stone;
And when the cross blue lightning seem'd to
open 50

The breast of heaven, I did present myself
Even in the aim and very flash of it.

Cas. But wherefore did you so much tempt the heavens?

It is the part of men to fear and tremble,
When the most mighty gods by tokens send
Such dreadful heralds to astonish us.

Cas. You are dull, Cæsar, and those sparks of life

That should be in a Roman you do want,
Or else you use not. You look pale and gaze

And put on fear and cast yourself in wonder, 60
To see the strange impatience of the heavens:
But if you would consider the true cause

Why all these fires, why all these gliding ghosts,
Why birds and beasts from quality and kind,

Why old men fool and children calculate,
Why all these things change from their ordinance

Their natures and preformed faculties
To monstrous quality,—why, you shall find

That heaven hath infused them with these spirits,

To make them instruments of fear and warning
Unto some monstrous state. 71

Now could I, Cæsar, name to thee a man
Most like this dreadful night,

That thunders, lightning, opens graves, and roars
As doth the lion in the Capitol.

A man no mightier than thyself or me
In personal action, yet prodigious grown

And fearful, as these strange eruptions are.

Cas. 'Tis Cæsar that you mean; is it not,
Cassius?

Cas. Let it be who it is: for Romans now 80

Have thews and limbs like to their ancestors ;
But, woe the while ! our fathers' minds are dead,
And we are govern'd with our mothers' spirits ;
Our yoke and suzerance show us womanish.

Casca. Indeed, they say the senators to-morrow

Mean to establish Caesar as a king ;
And he shall wear his crown by sea and land,
In every place, save here in Italy.

Cas. I know where I will wear this dagger then ;
Cassius from bondage will deliver Cassius :
Therein, ye gods, you make the weak most strong ;

Therein, ye gods, you tyrants do defeat :
Nor stony tower, nor walls of beaten brass,
Nor airless dungeon, nor strong links of iron,
Can be retentive to the strength of spirit ;
But life, being weary of these worldly bars,
Never lacks power to dismiss itself.
If I know this, know all the world besides,
That part of tyranny that I do bear
I can shake off at pleasure. [Thunder still.

Casca. So can I :
So every bondman in his own hand bears
The power to cancel his captivity.

Cas. And why should Caesar be a tyrant then ?

Poor man ! I know he would not be a wolf,
But that he sees the Romans are but sheep :
He were no lion, were not Romans hinds.
Those that with haste will make a mighty fire
Begin it with weak straws : what trash is Rome,
What rubbish and what offal, when it serves
For the base matter to illuminate

So vile a thing as Caesar ! But, — Where hast thou led me ? I perhaps speak this Before a willing bondman ; then I know
My answer must be made. But I am arm'd,
And dangers are to me indifferent.

Casca. You speak to Casca, and to such a man

That is no fltering tell-tale. Hold, my hand :
Be factious for redress of all these griefs,
And I will set this foot of mine as far
As who goes farthest.

Cas. There's a bargain made. 120
Now know you, Casca, I have moved already
Some certain of the noblest-minded Romans
To undergo with me an enterprise
Of honourable-dangerous consequence ;
And I do know, by this, they stay for me
In Pompey's porch : for now, this fearful night,
There is no stir or walking in the streets ;
And the complexion of the element
In favour's like the work we have in hand,
Most bloody, fiery, and most terrible. 130

Casca. Stand close awhile, for here comes one in haste.

Cas. 'Tis Cinna ; I do know him by his gait ;
He is a friend.

Enter CINNA.

Cinna, where haste you so ?
Cin. To find out you. Who's that ? Me-telius Cimber !
Cas. No, it is Casca ; one incorporate

To our attempts. Am I not stay'd for, Cinna ?
Cin. I am glad on't. What a fearful night
is this !

There's two or three of us have seen strange sights.

Cas. Am I not stay'd for ? tell me.

Cin. Yes, you are.
O Cassius, if you could

But win the noble Brutus to our party —
Cas. Be you content : good Cinna, take this paper,

And look you lay it in the praetor's chair,
Where Brutus may but find it ; and throw this in at his window ; set this up with wax
Upon old Brutus' statue : all this done, Repair to Pompey's porch, where you shall find us.

Is Decius Brutus and Trebonius there ?

Cin. All but Metellus Cimber ; and he's gone

To seek you at your house. Well, I will hie, 130
And so bestow these papers as you bade me.

Cas. That done, repair to Pompey's theatre.
[Exit Cinna.

Come, Casca, you and I will yet ere day
See Brutus at his house : three parts of him
Is ours already, and the man entire
Upon the next encounter yields him ours.

Casca. O, he sits high in all the people's
hearts :

And that which would appear offence in us,
His countenance, like richest alchemy,
Will change to virtue and to worthiness. 140

Cas. Him and his worth and our great need of him

You have right well conceited. Let us go,
For it is after midnight ; and ere day
We will awake him and be sure of him.

[Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I. Rome. Brutus's orchard.

Enter BRUTUS.

Brus. What, Lucius, ho !
I cannot, by the progress of the stars,
Give guess how near to day. Lucius, I say !
I would it were my fault to sleep so soundly.
When, Lucius, when ? awake, I say ! what,
Lucius !

Enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Call'd you you, my lord !
Brus. Get me a taper in my study, Lucius :
When it is lighted, come and call me here.
Luc. I will, my lord. [Exit.
Brus. It must be by his death ; and for my
part,

I know no personal cause to spurn at him,
But for the general. He would be crown'd :
How that might change his nature, there's the question.

It is the bright day that brings forth the adder ;
And that craves wary walking. Crown him ! —
that ! —

And then, I grant, we put a sting in him,
That at his will he may do danger with.

The abuse of greatness is, when it disjoins
Honours from power: and, to speak truth of Caesar,

I have not known when his affections sway'd so
More than his reason. But 'tis a common proof,
That lowliness is young ambition's ladder,
Whereto the climber-upward turns his face;
But when he once attains the upmost round,
He then unto the ladder turns his back,
Looks in the clouds, scornful the base degrees
By which he did ascend. So Caesar may.
Then, lest he may, prevent. And, since the quarrel

Will bear no colour for the thing he is,
Fashion it thus; that what he is, augmented, so
Would run to these and these extremities:
And therefore think him as a serpent's egg
Which, hatch'd, would, as his kind, grow mischievous,
And kill him in the shell.

Re-enter LUCIUS.

This paper, thus seal'd up; and, I am sure
It did not lie there when I went to bed.

[Gives him the letter.]

Bru. Get you to bed again; it is not day.
Is not to-morrow, boy, the ides of March? 40

Luc. I know not, sir.

Bru. Look in the calendar, and bring me
word.

Luc. I will, sir.

[Exit.]

Bru. The exhalations whizzing in the air
Give so much light that I may read by them.

[Opens the letter and reads.]

'Brutus, thou sleep'st: awake, and see thyself.
Shall Rome, &c. Speak, strike, redress!
Brutus, thou sleep'st: awake!
Such instigations have been often dropp'd
Where I have took them up. 50
'Shall Rome, &c.' Thus must I piece it out:
Shall Rome stand under one man's awe? What,
Rome!

My ancestors did from the streets of Rome
The Tarquin drive, when he was call'd a king.
'Speak, strike, redress!' Am I entreated
To speak and strike? O Rome, I make thee promise;

If the redress will follow, thou receivest
Thy full petition at the hand of Brutus!

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Sir, March is wasted fourteen days.

[Knocking within.]

Bru. 'Tis good. Go to the gate; somebody knocks.

[Exit Lucius.]

Since Caesar first did what me against Caesar,

I have not slept.

Between the setting of a dreadful thing
And the first motion, all the interim is Like a phantasma, or a hideous dream:
I have seen the mortal instruments
On them in council; and the state of man,
Like to a little kingdom, suffers then
The nature of an insurrection.

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Sir, 'tis your brother Cato at the door.
Who doth desire to see you. 70

Bru. Is he alone?

Luc. No, sir, there are more with him.

Bru. Do you know them?

Luc. No, sir; their hats are pluck'd about their ears,

And half their faces buried in their cloaks,
That by no means I may discover them
By any mark of favour.

Bru. Let 'em enter. [Exit Lucius.]
They are the faction. O conspiracy,

Shamest thou to show thy dangerous brow by
night,

When evils are most free? O, then by day
Where wilt thou find a cavern dark enough
To mask thy monstrous visage? Seek none, conspiracy;

Hide it in smiles and affability:

For if thou path, thy native semblance on,
Not Erebus itself were dim enough
To hide thee from prevention.

Enter the conspirators, CASSIUS, CASCAS, DECIVS, CINNA, METELLUS CIMBER, and TREBONIUS.

Cas. I think we are too bold upon your rest:
Good morrow, Brutus; do we trouble you?

Bru. I have been up this hour, awake all
night.

Know I these men that come along with you?
Cas. Yes, every man of them, and no man
here 90

But honours you; and every one doth wish
You had but that opinion of yourself
Which every noble Roman bears of you.

This is Trebonius.

Bru. He is welcome hither.

Cas. This, Decius Brutus.

Bru. He is welcome too.

Cas. This, Cinna; this, Cinna; and this,
Metellus Cimber.

Bru. They are all welcome.

What watchful cares do interpose themselves
Betwixt your eyes and night?

Cas. Shall I entreat a word?

[Brutus and Cassius whisper.]

Dec. Here lies the east: doth not the day break here?

Cas. No.

Cin. O, pardon, sir, it doth; and yon gray
lines

That fret the clouds are messengers of day.
Cas. You shall confess that you are both deceived.

Here, as I point my sword, the sun arises,
Which is a great way growing on the south,
Weighing the youthful season of the year.

Some two months hence up higher toward north

He first presents his fire; and the high east
Stands, as the Capitol, directly here.

Bru. Give me your hands all over, one by one.

Cas. And let us swear our resolution.

Bru. No, not an oath: if not the face of men.

The substance of our souls, the time's abuse,—
If these be motives weak, break off betimes,
And every man hence to his idle bed;
So let high-sighted tyranny range on,
Till each man drop by lottery. But if these,
As I am sure they do, bear fire enough 120
To kindle cowards and to steel with valour
The melting spirits of women, then, country-

men,
What need we any spur but our own cause,
To prick us to redress? what other bond
Than secret Romans, that have spoke the word,
And will not palter? and what other oath
Than honesty to honesty engaged,
That this shall be, or we will fall for it?
Swear priests and cowards and men cautelous,
Old feeble carrions and such suffering souls: 130
That welcome wrongs; unto bad causes swear
Such creatures as men doubt; but do not stain
The even virtue of our enterprise,
Nor the impressive mettle of our spirits,
To think that our cause or our performance
Did need an oath; when every drop of blood
That every Roman hears, and nobly bears,
Is guilty of a several bastardy,
If he do break the smallest particle
Of any promise that hath pass'd from him. 140

Ca. But what of Cicero? shall we sound him?

I think he will stand very strong with us.

Cicero. Let us not leave him out.

Cin. No, by no means.

Met. O, let us have him, for his silver hairs
Will purchase us a good opinion
And buy men's voices to commend our deeds:
It shall be said, his judgement ruled our hands;
Our youths and wildness shall no whit appear,
But all be beard in his gravity.

Bru. O, name him not: let us not break
with him; 150

For he will never follow any thing
That other men begin.

Ca. Then leave him out.

Cicero. Indeed he is not fit.

Dec. Shall no man else be touch'd but only
Caesar?

Ca. Decius, well urged: I think it is not

Mark Antony, so well beloved of Caesar,
Should entice Caesar: we shall find of him
A shrewd contriver; and, you know, his means,
If he improve them, may well stretch as far
As to annoy us all: which to prevent, 160
Let Antony and Caesar fall together.

Bru. Our course will seem too bloody, Caius
Cassius,

To cut the head off and then hack the limbs,
Like wrath in death and envy afterwards;
For Antony is but a limb of Caesar:

Let us be sacrificers, but not butchers, Caius.
We all stand up against the spirit of Caesar;
And in the spirit of men there is no blood;
O, that we them could come by Caesar's spirit,
And not dishonour Caesar! But, alas, 170
Caesar must bleed for it! And, gentle friends,
Let's kill him boldly, not with wilfulness;

Let's carve him as a dish fit for the gods,
Not hew him as a carcass fit for hounds:
And let our hearts, as subtle masters do,
Steer up their servants to an act of rage,
And after seem to chide 'em. This shall make
Our purpose necessary and not envious:
Which so appearing to the common eyes,
We shall be call'd purgers, not murderers. 180
And for Mark Antony, think not of him;
For he can do no more than Caesar's arm
When Caesar's head is off.

Ca. Yet I fear him;
For in the ingrafted love he bears to Caesar—Bru. Alas, good Cassius, do not think of
him:

If he love Caesar, all that he can do
Is to himself, take thought and die for Caesar;
And that were much he should; for he is given

To sports, to wildness and much company.

Treb. There is no fear in him; let him not die; 190

For he will live, and laugh at this hereafter.
[Clock strikes.]

Bru. Peace! count the clock.

Ca. The clock hath stricken three.

Treb. 'Tis time to part.

Ca. But it is doubtful yet,

Whether Caesar will come forth to-day, or no;

For he is superstitious grown of late.

Quite from the main opinion he held once

Of fantasy, of dreams and ceremonies:

It may be, these apparent prodigies,

The unaccount'd terrors of this night,

And the persuasion of his augurers, 200

May hold him from the Capitol to-day.

Dec. Never fear that: if he be so resolved,

I can o'erway him; for he loves to hear

That unicorns may be betray'd with trees,

And bears with glances, elephants with noises,

Lions with toils and men with flatterers;

But when I tell him he hates flatterers,

He says he does, being then most flatter'd.

Let me work;

For I can give his humour the true bent, 210

And I will bring him to the Capitol.

Ca. Nay, we will all of us be there to fetch
him.

Bru. By the eighth hour: is that the utter-most?

Cin. Be that the uttermost, and fail not
then.

Met. Caius Ligarius doth hear Caesar hard,
Who rated him for speaking well of Pompey:

I wonder none of you have thought of him.

Bru. Now, good Metellus, go along by him:

He loves me well, and I have given him reasons;

Send him but hither, and I'll fashion him. 220

Ca. The morning comes upon 's: we'll leave you, Brutus.

And, friends, dispense yourselves; but all remember

What you have said, and show yourselves true
Romans.

Bru. Good gentlemen, look fresh and
merry;

Let not our looks put on our graves;

But bear it as our Romans do—do.

With untired spirits and formal constancy :
And so good-morrow to you every one.

[Exeunt all but Brutus.]

Boy! Lucius! Fast asleep? It is no matter;
Enjoy the honey-heavy dew of slumber: 230
Thou hast no figures nor no fantasies,
Which busy care draws in the brains of men;
Therefore thou sleepest so sound.

Enter PORTIA.

Por. Brutus, my lord!
Bru. Portia, what mean you? wherefore rise
you now?

It is not for your health thus to commit
Your weak condition to the raw cold morning.

Por. Nor for yours neither. You've un-gently, Brutus,

Stole from my bed: and yesternight, at supper,
You suddenly arose, and walk'd about,
Musing and sighing, with your arms across, 240
And when I ask'd you what the matter was,
You stared upon me with ungentle looks;
I urg'd you further; then you scratch'd your
head,

And too impatiently stamp'd with your foot;
Yet I insist'd, yet you answer'd not,
But, with an angry wafture of your hand,
Gave sign for me to leave you: so I did;

Fearing to strengthen that impatience
Which seem'd too much enkindled, and withal
Hoping it was but an effect of humour, 250

Which sometime hath his hour with every man.
It will not let you eat, nor talk, nor sleep,
And could it work so much upon your shape
As it hath much prevail'd on your condition,
I should not know you, Brutus. Dear my lord,
Make me acquainted with your cause of grief.

Bru. I am not well in health, and that is all.

Por. Brutus is wise, and, were he not in health,

He would embrace the means to come by it.

Bru. Why, so I do. Good Portia, go to bed.

Por. Is Brutus sick? and is it physical? 261
To walk unbraced and suck up the humours
Of the dank morning? What, is Brutus sick,
And will he steal out of his wholesome bed,
To dare the vile contagion of the night
And tempt the rheumy and unpurg'd air
To add unto his sickness? No, my Brutus;
You have some sick offence within your mind,
Which, by the right and virtue of my place,
I ought to know of: and, upon my knees, 270
I charm you, by my once-commended beauty,
By all your vows of love and that great vow
Which did incorporate and make us one,
That you unfold to me, yourself, your half,
Why you are heavy, and what men to-night
Have had resort to you: for here have been
Some six or seven, who did hide their faces
Even from darkness.

Bru. Kneel not, gentle Portia.

Por. I should not need, if you were gentle
Brutus.

Within the bond of marriage, tell me, Brutus,
If it be hid, I should know no secrets pertain to you! Am I yourself 281
If we, in sort or limitation,
With you at meals, comfort your bed,

And talk to you sometimes? Dwell I but in the suburbs

Of your good pleasure? If it be no more,
Portia is Brutus' harlot, not his wife.

Bru. You are my true and honourable wife,
As dear to me as are the ruddy drops
That visit my sad heart. 290

Por. If this were true, then should I know this secret.

I grant I am a woman; but withal
A woman that Lord Brutus took to wife:

I grant I am a woman; but withal
A woman well-reputed, Cato's daughter.

Think you I am no stronger than my sex,
Being so father'd and so husbanded?

Tell me your counsels, I will not disclose 'em:
I have made strong proof of my constancy,

Giving myself a voluntary wound 300
Here, in the thigh: can I bear that with patience,

And not my husband's secrets?

Bru. O ye gods,
Render me worthy of this noble wife!

[Knocking within.]
Hark, hark! one knocks: Portia, go in awhile;

And by and by thy bosom shall partake
The secrets of my heart.

All my engagements I will construe to thee,
All the charactery of my sad brows:

Leave me with haste. [Exit Portia.] Lucius, who's that knocks?

Re-enter LUCIUS with LIGARIUS.

Luc. Here is a sick man that would speak
with you.

Bru. Caius Ligarius, that Metellus spake of 310 Boy, stand aside. Caius Ligarius! how?

Lig. Vouchsafe good-morrow from a feeble
tongue.

Bru. O, what a time have you chose out,
brave Caius,

To wear a kerchief! Would you were not sick!

Lig. I am not sick, if Brutus have in hand
Any exploit worthy the name of honour.

Bru. Such an exploit have I in hand,
Ligarius,

Had you a healthful ear to hear of it.

Lig. By all the gods that Romans bow
before, 320

I here discard my sickness! Soul of Rome!
Brave son, derived from honourable loins!

Thou, like an exorcist, hast conjured up
My mortified spirit. Now bid me run,

And I will strive with things impossible;
Yea, get the better of them. What's to do?

Bru. A piece of work that will make sick men whole.

Lig. But are not some whole that we must make sick?

Bru. That must we also. What it is, my
Caius,

I shall unfold to thee, as we are going 330
To whom it must be done.

Lig. Set on your foot,
And with a heart new-fired I follow you:
To do I know not what: but it sufficeth
That Brutus leads me on.

Bru. Follow me, then. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Caesar's house.

Thunder and lightning. Enter CAESAR, in his night-gown.

Caes. Nor heaven nor earth have been at peace to-night:
Thrice hath Calpurnia in her sleep cried out,
'Help, ho! they murder Caesar!' Who's within?

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord!

Caes. Go bid the priests do present sacrifice
And bring me their opinions of success.

Serv. I will, my lord. [Exit.]

Enter CALPURNIA.

Cal. What mean you, Caesar? think you to walk forth!
You shall not stir out of your house to-day.

Caes. Caesar shall forth: the things that threaten'd me
Ne'er look'd but on my back; when they shall see

The face of Caesar, they are vanished.

Cal. Caesar, I never stood on ceremonies, Yet now they fright me. There is one within,
Besides the things that we have heard and seen,
Recounts most horrid sights seen by the watch.
A lioness hath whelped in the streets;
And graves have yawn'd, and yielded up their dead;

Fierce fiery warriors fought upon the clouds,
In ranks and squadrons and right form of war,
Which drizzled blood upon the Capitol;
The noise of battle hurl'd in the air,
Horses did neigh, and dying men did groan,
And ghosts did shriek and squeal about the streets.

O Caesar! these things are beyond all use,
And I do fear them.

Caes. What can be avoided
Whose end is purposed by the mighty gods?
Yet Caesar shall go forth; for these predictions
Are to the world in general as to Caesar.

Cal. When beggars die, there are no comets
seen;
The heavens themselves blaze forth the death of princes.

Caes. Cowards die many times before their deaths;

The valiant never taste of death but once.
Of all the wonders that I yet have heard,
It seems to me most strange that men should
fear;

Seeing that death, a necessary end,
Will come when it will come.

Re-enter Servant.

What say the augurers

Serv. They would not have you to stir forth
to-day.

Plucking the entrails of an offering forth,
They could not find a heart within the beast.

Caes. The gods do this in shame of cowardice.
Caesar should be a beast without a heart,
If he should stay at home to-day for fear.

No, Caesar shall not: danger knows full well

That Caesar is more dangerous than he:
We are two lions litter'd in one day,
And I the elder and more terrible;
And Caesar shall go forth.

Cal. Alas, my lord,
Your wisdom is consumed in confidence.
Do not go forth to-day: call it my fear
That keeps you in the house, and not your own.
We'll send Mark Antony to the senate—
And he shall say you are not well to-day:
Let me, upon my knee, prevail in this.
Caes. Mark Antony shall say I am not well;
And, for thy humour, I will stay at home.

Enter DECURIUS.

Here's Decius Brutus, he shall tell them so.

Dec. Caesar, all hail! good morrow, worthy
Caesar;

I come to fetch you to the senate-house.

Caes. And you are come in very happy time,
To bear my greeting to the senators.
And tell them that I will not come to-day:
Cannot, is false, and that I dare not, false:
I will not come to-day: tell them so, Decius.

Cal. Say he is sick.

Caes. Shall Caesar send a lie?
Have I in conquest stretch'd mine arm so far,
To be afraid to tell graybeards the truth?
Decius, go tell them Caesar will not come.

Dec. Most mighty Caesar, let me know some
cause,

Lest I be laugh'd at when I tell them so.

Caes. The cause is in my will: I will not
come;

That is enough to satisfy the senate.

But for your private satisfaction,
Because I love you, I will tell you know:
Calpurnia here, my wife, stays me at home:
She dreamt to-night she saw my statue,
Which, like a fountain with an hundred spouts,
Did run pure blood; and many lusty Romans
Came smiling, and did bathe their hands in it;
And these does she apply for warnings, and portents,

And evils imminent; and on her knee
Hath begg'd that I will stay at home to-day.

Dec. This dream is all amiss interpreted;

It was a vision fair and fortunate:

Your statue spouting blood in many pipes,
In which so many smiling Romans bathed,
Signifies that from you great Rome shall suck
Reviving blood, and that great men shall press
For tinctures, stains, relics and cognizance.
This by Calpurnia's dream is signified.

Caes. And this way have you well expounded
it.

Dec. I have, when you have heard what I can say:

And know it now: the senate have concluded
To give this day a crown to mighty Caesar.

If you shall send them word you will not come,
Their minds may change. Besides, it were a mock

Apt to be render'd, for some one to say

'Break up the senate till another time,
When Caesar's wife shall meet with better dreams.'

If Caesar hide himself, shall they not whisper

'Lo, Caesar is afraid!'

Pardon me, Caesar; for my dear dear love
To your proceeding bids me tell you this;
And reason to my love is liable.

Ces. How foolish do your fears seem now,
Calpurnia!

I am ashamed I did yield to them.
Give me my robe, for I will go.

Enter PUBLIUS, BRUTUS, LIGARIUS, METELLUS, CASCA, TREBONIUS, and CINNA.

And look where Publius is come to fetch me.

Pub. Good morrow, Caesar.

Ces. Welcome, Publius.
What, Brutus, are you stir'd so early too? 110
Good morrow, Casca. Caius Ligarius,
Caesar was ne'er so much your enemy
As that same augur which has made you lean.
What is't o'clock?

Bras. Caesar, 'tis strucken eight.

Ces. I thank you for your pains and courtesy.

Enter ANTONY.

See! Antony, that revels long o' nights,
Is notwithstanding up. Good morrow, Antony.

Ant. So to most noble Caesar.

Ces. Bid them prepare within:

I am to blame to be thus waited for.
Now, Cinna: now, Metellus: what, Trebonius!
I have an hour's talk in store for you; 121
Remember that you call on me to-day:
Be near me, that I may remember you.

Treb. Caesar, I will: [Aside] and so near will I be,

That your best friends shall wish I had been further.

Ces. Good friends, go in, and taste some wine with me;

And we, like friends, will straightway go together.

Bras. [Aside] That every like is not the same, O Caesar,

The heart of Brutus yearns to think upon!
[Exit.

SCENE III. A street near the Capitol.

Enter ARTEMIDORUS, reading a paper.

Ant. 'Caesar, beware of Brutus; take heed of Cassius; come not near Casca; have an eye to Cinna; trust not Trebonius; mark well Metellus Cicerus; Decius Brutus loves thee not; thou hast wronged Caius Ligarius. There is but one mind in all these men, and it is bent on Caesar. If thou beest not immortal, look on you; security gives way to conspiracy.
O mighty gods, defend this! Thy lover,

'ARTEMIDORUS.'

How will I stand till Caesar pass along,
And as a suitor will I give him this. 131

My heart laments that virtues cannot live
Out of the touch of emulation.

If there be such a thing, O Caesar, thou mayst live;
If not, fare thee well with traitors do contrive.

[Exit.

SCENE IV. Another part of the same street, before the house of Brutus.

Enter POMPEIA and LUCIUS.

Por. I prithee, boy, run to the senate-house;
Stay not to answer me, but get thee gone:
Why dost thou stay?

Luc. To know my errand, madam.
Por. I would have had thee there, and here
again,

Ere I can tell thee what thou shouldst do there.
O constancy, be strong upon my side!
Set a huge mountain 'tween my heart and
tongue!

I have a man's mind, but a woman's might.
How hard it is for women to keep counsel!
Art thou here yet?

Luc. Madam, what should I do? 10
Run to the Capitol, and nothing else?
And so return to you, and nothing else?

Por. Yes, being the word, boy, if thy lord
look well,

For he went mickly forth: and take good note
What Caesar doth, what suitors press to him.
Hark, boy! what noise is that?

Luc. I hear none, madam.

Por. Prithce, listen well;
I heard a bustling rumour, like a fray,
And the wind brings it from the Capitol.

Luc. Sooth, madam, I hear nothing. 11

Enter the Soothsayer.

Por. Come hither, fellow: which way hast thou been?

Sooth. At mine own house, good lady.

Por. What is't o'clock?

Sooth. About the ninth hour, lady.

Por. Is Caesar yet gone to the Capitol?

Sooth. Madam, not yet: I go to take my stand.

To see him pass on to the Capitol.

Por. Thou hast some suit to Caesar, hast
thou not?

Sooth. That I have, lady: if it will please
Caesar

To be so good to Caesar as to hear me,
I shall beseech him to befriend himself. 39

Por. Why, know'st thou any harm's intended towards him?

Sooth. None that I know will be, sauch that I fear may chance.

Good morrow to you. Here the street is narrow:

The throng that follows Caesar at the heels,
Of senators, of pretors, common suitors,
Will crowd a feeble man almost to death:
I'll get me to a place more void, and there
Spoken to great Caesar as he comes along. [Exit.

Por. I must go in. Ay me, how weak a thing

The heart of woman is! O Brutus,

The heavens speed thee in thine enterprise!
Sure, the boy heard me: Brutus hath a suit

That Caesar will not grant. O, I grow faint.
Run, Lucius, and command me to my lord;

Say I am merry: come to me again,
And bring me word what he does say to thee.

[Exit, secretly.

ACT III.

SCENE I. Rome. Before the Capitol; the Senate sitting above.

A crowd of people; among them ANTEPONTUS and the Soothsayer. Flourish. Enter CAESAR, BRUTUS, CASSIUS, CASCA, DECIOUS, METELLUS, TREBONIUS, CINNA, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, POPILIUS, PUBLIUS, and others.

Caes. [To the Soothsayer] The ides of March are come.

Sooth. Ay, Caesar; but not gone.

Ant. Hail, Caesar! read this schedule.

Dec. Trebonius doth desire you to o'er-read, At your best leisure, this his humble suit.

Ant. O Caesar, read mine first; for mine's a suit

That touches Caesar nearer: read it, great Caesar.

Caes. What touches us ourself shall be last served.

Ant. Delay not, Caesar; read it instantly.

Caes. What, is the fellow mad?

Pub. Sirrah, give place.

Caes. What, urge you your petitions in the street?

Ant. Come to the Capitol.

CAESAR goes up to the Senate-House, the rest following.

Pop. I wish your enterprise to-day may thrive.

Caes. What enterprise, Popilius?

Pop. Fare you well. [Advances to Caesar.]

Brut. What said Popilius Lena?

Caes. He wish'd to-day our enterprise might thrive.

Ant. Our purpose is discovered.

Brut. Look, how he makes to Caesar: mark him.

Caes. Casca, be sudden, for we fear prevention.

Brutus. What shall be done? If this be known,

Cassius or Caesar never shall turn back,

or I will slay myself.

Brut. Cassius, be constant:

Popilius Lena speaks not of our purposes;

or, look, he smiles, and Caesar doth not change.

Caes. Trebonius knows his time; for, look you, Brutus,

He draws Mark Antony out of the way.

[Antony, Antony and Trebonius.]

Dec. Where is Metellus Cimber? Let him go, and presently prefer his suit to Caesar.

Brut. He is address'd: press near and second him.

Cin. Casca, you are the first that rears your hand.

Caes. Are we all ready? What is now afoot?

That Caesar and his senate must redress?

Met. Most high, most mighty, and most potent Caesar,

Metellus Cimber throws before thy seat

An humble heart.

[Antony.]

Caes. I must prevent thee, Cimber.

These couchings and these low courtesies

Might fire the blood of ordinary men,

And turn pre-ordenance and first decree
Into the law of children. Be not fond,
To think that Caesar bears such rebel blood
That will be thaw'd from the true quality
With that which melteth fools; I mean, sweet
words,

Low-crooked court'sies and base spaniel-fawn-
ing.

Thy brother by decree is banished:

If thou dost bend and pray and fawn for him,
I spurn thee like a cur out of my way.

Know, Caesar doth not wrong, nor without cause

Will he be satisfied.

Met. Is there no voice more worthy than my own,

To sound more sweetly in great Caesar's ear

For the repealing of my banish'd brother?

Brut. I kiss thy hand, but not in flattery,

Caesar;

Desiring thee that Publius Cimber may

Have an immediate freedom of repeal.

Caes. What, Brutus?

Cin. Pardon, Caesar; Caesar, pardon:

As low as to thy foot doth Cassius fall,

To beg enfranchisement for Publius Cimber.

Caes. I could be well moved, if I were as you;

If I could pray to move, prayers would move

me:

But I am constant as the northern star,

Of whose true-fix'd and resting quality

There is no fellow in the firmament.

The skies are painted with unnumber'd sparks;

They are all fire and every one doth shine;

But there's but one in all doth hold his place:

So in the world; 'tis furnish'd well with men,

And men are flesh and blood, and apprehensive;

Yet in the number I do know but one

That unswayable holds on his rank,

Unshak'd of motion: and that I am he,

Let me a little show it, even in this:

That I was constant Cimber should be banish'd,

And constant do remain to keep him so.

Cin. O Caesar,—

Caes. Hence! wilt thou lift up Olympus?

Dec. Great Caesar,—

Caes. Doth not Brutus bootless kneel?

Casca. Speak, hands, for me!

[Casca first, then the other Conspirators and

Marcus Brutus stab Caesar.]

Caes. Et tu, Brute! Then fall, Caesar!

Cin. Liberty! Freedom! Tyranny is dead!

Run hence, ye slaves; cry 'Tyranny is dead!'

Caes. Some to the common pulpit, and cry

out

'Liberty, freedom, and enfranchisement!'

Brut. People and senators, be not affrighted;

Flay not; stand still: ambition's debt is paid.

Casca. Go to the pulpit, Brutus.

Dec. And Cassius too.

Brut. Where's Publius?

Cin. Here, quite confounded with this mutiny.

Met. Stand fast together, lest some friend of Caesar's

Should chance—

Brut. Talk not of standing. Publius, good cheer;

There is no harm intended to your person. 90
Nor to no Roman else: so tell them, Publius.

Cas. And leave us, Publius; lest that the hanging on us, should do your age some mischief.

Bru. Do so: and let no man abide this deed,
But we the doers.

Re-enter TREBONIUS.

Cas. Where is Antony?

Tre. Fled to his house amazed:
Men, wives and children stare, cry out and run
As it were doomsday.

Bru. Fates, we will know your pleasures:
That we shall die, we know: 'tis but the time
And drawing days out, that men stand upon.

Cas. Why, he that cuts off twenty years of
life 101

Cuts off so many years of fearing death.

Bru. Grant that, and then is death a benefit:
So are we Cæsar's friends, that have abridged
His time of fearing death. Stoop, Romans, stoop,

And let us bathe our hands in Cæsar's blood
Up to the elbows, and besmear our swords:
Then walk we forth, even to the market-place,
And, waving our red weapons o'er our heads,
Let's all cry 'Peace, freedom and liberty!' 110

Cas. Stoop, then, and wash. How many ages hence

Shall this our lofty scene be acted over
In states unborn and accents yet unknown!

Bru. How many times shall Cæsar bleed in sport,

That now on Pompey's basis lies along
No worthier than the dust!

Cas. So oft as that shall be,
So often shall the knot of us be call'd
The men that gave their country liberty.

Dec. What, shall we forth?

Cas. Ay, every man away:
Brutus shall lead; and we will grace his heels
With the most bolddest and best hearts of Rome.

Enter a Servant.

Bru. Soft! who comes here! A friend of Antony's.

Serv. Thus, Brutus, did my master bid me
kneel:

Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall down;
And, being prostrate, thus he bade me say:
Brutus is noble, wise, valiant, and honest;
Cæsar was mighty, bold, royal, and loving:
Say I love Brutus, and I honour him;
Say I fear'd Cæsar, honour'd him and loved
him.

If Brutus will vouchsafe that Antony
May safely come to him, and be resolved
How Cæsar hath deserved to lie in death,
Mark Antony shall not love Cæsar dead
So well as Brutus living; but will follow
Fortunes and affairs of noble Brutus
In the hazards of this untrod state
With true faith. So says my master Antony.
130

My master is a wise and valiant Roman;
I thought him worthy.

I'll please him come unto this place,

He shall be satisfied; and, by my honour, 141
Depart untouch'd.

Serv.

I'll fetch him presently. [Exit.]

Bru. I know that we shall have him well to friend.

Cas. I wish we may: but yet have I a mind
That fears him much; and my misgiving still Falls shrewdly to the purpose.

Bru. But here comes Antony.

Re-enter ANTONY.

Welcome, Mark Antony.

Ant. O mighty Cæsar! dost thou lie so low?
Are all thy conquests, glories, triumphs, spoils,
Shrunk to this little measure? Fate thee well.

I know not, gentlemen, what you intend, 151
Who else must be let blood, who else is rank:

If I myself, there is no hour so fit
As Cæsar's death's hour, nor no instrument
Of half that worth as those your swords, made rich

With the most noble blood of all this world.
I do beseech ye, if you bear me hard,

Now, whilst your purpled hands do reek and smoke,

Fulfil your pleasure. Live a thousand years,
I shall not find myself so apt to die: 160

No place will please me so, no mean of death,
As here by Cæsar, and by you cut off,
The choice and master spirits of this age.

Bru. O Antony, beg not your death of us.
Though now we must appear bloody and cruel,

As, by our hands and this our present act,
You see we do, yet see you but our hands
And this the bleeding business they have done:

Our hearts you see not; they are pitiful;
And pity to the general wrong of Rome— 170
As fire drives out fire, so pity pity—Hath done this deed on Cæsar. For your
part,

To you our swords have leaden points, Mark
Antony:

Our arms, in strength of malice, and our
hearts

Of brothers' temper, do receive you in
With all kind love, good thoughts, and reverence.

Cas. Your voice shall be as strong as any man's

In the disposing of new dignities.

Bru. Only be patient till we have appeas'd
The multitude, beside themselves with fear, 180
And then we will deliver you the cause,
Why I, that did love Cæsar when I struck him,
Have thus proceeded.

Ant. I doubt not of your wisdom.
Let each man render me his bloody hand:
First, Marcus Brutus, will I shake with you;

Next, Caius Cassius, do I take your hand;
Now, Decius Brutus, yours; now yours, Me-
tellus;

Yours, Cinna; and, my valiant Cæsar, yours;
Though last, not least in love, yours, good Trebinius.

Gentlemen all,—also, what shall I say? 190
My credit now stands on such slippery ground,
That one of two bad ways you must consent me,
Either a coward or a flatterer.

That I did love thee, Cæsar, O, 'tis true:
 If then thy spirit look upon us now,
 Shall it not grieve thee dearer than thy death,
 To see thy Antony making his peace,
 Shaking the bloody fingers of thy foes,
 Most noble! in the presence of thy corse?
 Had I as many eyes as thou hast wounds, 300
 Weeping as fast as they stream forth thy blood,
 It would become me better than to close
 In terms of friendship with thine enemies.
 Pardon me, Julius! Here wast thou bay'd, brave hart;
 Here didst thou fall; and here thy hunters
 stand,
 Sign'd in thy spoil, and crimson'd in thy lethe.
 O world, thou wast the forest to this hart;
 And this, indeed, O world, the heart of thee.
 How like a deer, stricken by many princes,
 Doest thou here lie! 210

Cas. Mark Antony.—

Ant. Pardon me, Calus Cassius:
 The enemies of Cæsar shall say this;
 Then, in a friend, it is cold modesty.

Cas. I blame you not for praising Cæsar so;
 But what compact mean you to have with us?
 Will you be prick'd in number of our friends;
 Or shall we on, and not depend on you?

Ant. Therefore I took your hands, but was,
 indeed,
 Sway'd from the point, by looking down on Cæsar.

Friends am I with you all and love you all, 220
 Upon this hope, that you shall give me reasons
 Why and wherein Cæsar was dangerous.

Bru. Or else were this a savage spectacle:
 Our reasons are so full of good regard
 That were you, Antony, the son of Cæsar, 230
 You should be satisfied.

Ant. That's all I seek:
 And am moreover suitor that I may Produce his body to the market-place;
 And in the pulpit, as becomes a friend,
 Speak in the order of his funeral. 230

Bru. You shall, Mark Antony.

Cas. Brutus, a word with you.
 [Aside to Bru.] You know not what you do do not consent

That Antony speak in his funeral:
 Know you how much the people may be moved
 By that which he will utter?

Bru. By your pardon;
 I will myself into the pulpit first,
 And show the reason of our Cæsar's death:
 What Antony shall speak, I will protest
 He speaks by leave and by permission,
 And that we are contented Cæsar shall 240
 Have all true rites and lawful ceremonies.
 It shall advantage more than do us wrong.

Cas. I know not what may fall; I like it
 not.

Bru. Mark Antony, here, take you Cæsar's
 body.
 You shall not in your funeral speech blame us,

And say you do't by our permission;
 Else shall you not have any hand at all
 About his funeral; and you shall speak
 In the same pulpit whereto I am going.

After my speech is ended.

Ant. Be it so;

do desire no more.

Bru. Prepare the body then, and follow us.

[Exeunt all but Antony.]

Ant. O, pardon me, thou bleeding piece of earth,

That I am meek and gentle with these butchers!
 Thou art the ruins of the noblest man
 That ever lived in the tide of times.

I've to the hand that shed this costly blood!
 Over thy wounds now do I prophesy,— 250

Which, like dumb mouths, do ope their ruby lips,
 To beg the voice and utterance of my tongue—
 A curse shall light upon the limbs of men;
 Domestic fury and fierce civil strife
 Shall cumber all the parts of Italy;
 Blood and destruction shall be so in use
 And dreadful objects so familiar
 That mothers shall but smile when they behold
 Their infants quarter'd with the hands of war;
 All pity choked with custom of fell deeds:
 And Cæsar's spirit, ranging for revenge, 270
 With Ate by his side come hot from hell,
 Shall in these confines with a monarch's voice
 Cry 'Havoc,' and let slip the dogs of war,
 That this foul deed shall smell above the earth
 With carrion men, groaning for burial.

Enter a Servant.

You serve Octavius Cæsar, do you not?

Serv. I do, Mark Antony.

Ant. Cæsar did write for him to come to
 Rome.

Serv. He did receive his letters, and is coming;

And bid me say to you by word of mouth— 280
 O Cæsar!— [Seeing the body,

Ant. Thy heart is big, get thee apart and weep.

Passion, I see, is catching; for mine eyes,
 Seeing those beads of sorrow stand in thine,
 Began to water. Is thy master coming?

Serv. He lies to-night within seven leagues
 of Rome.

Ant. Post back with speed, and tell him
 what hath chanced:

Here is a mourning Rome, a dangerous Rome,
 No Rome of safety for Octavius yet; 290

Hie hence, and tell him so. Yet, stay awhile;
 Thou shalt not back till I have borne this come into the market-place: there shall I try,

In my oration, how the people take
 The cruel issue of these bloody men;

According to the which, thou shalt discourse
 To young Octavius of the state of things.

Lend me your hand. [*Exeunt with Cæsar's
 body.*]

SCENE II. The Forum.

Enter BRUTUS and CASSIUS, and a throng of Citizens.

Citizens. We will be satisfied; let us be satisfied.

Bru. Then follow me, and give me audience,
 friends.

300 | Cassius, go you into the other street,

JULIUS CAESAR

[ACT III]

And part the numbers.
Those that will hear me speak, let 'em stay here;
Those that will follow Cassius, go with him;
And public reasons shall be rendered
Of Caesar's death.

First Cit. I will hear Brutus speak.

Sec. Cit. I will hear Cassius; and compare their reasons,
When severally we hear them rendered.

[Exit Cassius, with some of the Citizens.]

Brutus goes into the pulpit.

Third Cit. The noble Brutus is ascended:
silence!

Brut. Be patient till the last.

Romans, countrymen, and lovers! hear me for my cause, and be silent, that you may hear:
believe me for mine honour, and have respect to mine honour, that you may believe: venerate me in your wisdom, and awake your senses, that you may the better judge. If there be any in this assembly, any dear friend of Caesar's, to him I say, that Brutus' love to Caesar was no less than his. If then that friend demand why Brutus rose against Caesar, this is my answer:—
Not that I loved Caesar less, but that I loved Rome more. Had you rather Caesar were living, and the all slaves, than that Caesar were dead, to live all free men? As Caesar loved me, I weep for him; as he was fortunate, I rejoice at it; as he was valiant, I honour him; but, as he was ambitious, I slew him. There is tears for his love; joy for his fortune; honour for his valour; and death for his ambition. Who is here so base that would be a landman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so rude that would not be a Roman? If any,
speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so vile that will not love his country? If any, speak; for him have I offended. I pause for a reply.

All. None, Brutus, none.

Brut. Then none have I offended. I have done no more to Caesar than you shall do to Brutus. The question of his death is enrolled in the Capitol; his glory not extenuated, wherein he was worthy, nor his offences enforced, for which he suffered death.

Enter ANTONY and others, with CAESAR'S body.
Here comes his body, mourned by Mark Antony: who, though he had no hand in his death, shall receive the benefit of his dying, a place in the commonwealth; as which of you shall not? With this I depart.—that, as I slew my best lover for the good of Rome, I have the same danger for myself, when it shall please my country to need my death.

All. Live, Brutus! live, live!

First Cit. Bring him with triumph home unto his house.

Sec. Cit. Give him a statue with his costors.

Third Cit. Let him be Caesar.

Fourth Cit. Caesar's better parts shall be crown'd in Brutus.

First Cit. We'll bring him to his house
With shouts and clamours.

Brut. My countrymen,—

Sec. Cit. Peace, silence! Brutus speaks.

First Cit. Peace, ho!

Brut. Good countrymen, let me depart alone,
And, for my sake, stay here with Antony: or do grace to Caesar's corpse, and grace his speech

Tending to Caesar's glories; which Mark Antony,

By our permission, is allow'd to;
I do entreat you, not a man do

Save I alone, till Antony have te. [Exit.]

First Cit. Stay, ho! and let hear Mark
Antony.

Third Cit. Let him go up into the public chair;

We'll hear him. Noble Antony, up. 69
Ant. For Brutus' sake, I am beholding to you. [Goes into the pulpit.]

Fourth Cit. What does he say of Brutus?

Third Cit. He says, for Brutus' sake,
He finds himself beholding to us all.

Fourth Cit. Were best he speak no harm of Brutus here.

First Cit. This Caesar was a tyrant.

Third Cit. Nay, that's certain:

We are blest that Rome is rid of him.

Sec. Cit. Peace! let us hear what Antony
can say.

Ant. You gentle Romans,—

Citizens. Peace, ho! let us hear him.

Ant. Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears;

I come to bury Caesar, not to praise him.
The evil that men do lives after them; 80

The good is oft interred with their bones;
So let it be with Caesar. The noble Brutus

Hath told you Caesar was ambitious:
If it were so, it was a grievous fault,

And grievously hath Caesar answer'd it.
Here, under leave of Brutus and the rest—

For Brutus is an honourable man;
So are they all, all honourable men—

(Come I to speak in Caesar's funeral.
He was my friend, faithful and just to me: 90

But Brutus says he was ambitious;
And Brutus is an honourable man.

He hath brought many captives home to Rome,
Whose ransoms did the general coffers fill:
Did this in Caesar seem ambitious?

When that the poor have cried, Caesar hath
wept:

Ambition should be made of sterner stuff:
Yet Brutus says he was ambitious;

And Brutus is an honourable man.
You all did see that on the Lupercal

I thrice presented him a kingly crown,
Which he did thrice refuse: was this ambition?

Yet Brutus says he was ambitious;
And, sure, he is an honourable man.

I speak not to disprove what Brutus spoke,
But here I am to speak what I do know.

You all did love him once, not without cause:
What cause withholds you then, to mourn for
him?

O judgement! thou art fled to brutish beasts,
And men have lost their reason. Bear with
me;

My heart is in the coffin there with Caesar,

And I must pause till it come back to me.

First Cit. Methinks there is much reason in his saying.

Sec. Cit. If thou consider rightly of the matter, Caesar has had great wrong.

Third Cit. Has he, masters? I fear there will be worse come in his place.

Fourth Cit. Mark'd ye his words? He would not take the crown;

Therefore 'tis certain he was not ambitious.

First Cit. If it be found so, some will dear abide it.

Sec. Cit. Poor soul! his eyes are red as fire with weeping.

Third Cit. There's not a nobler man in Rome than Antony.

Fourth Cit. Now mark him, he begins again to speak.

Ant. But yesterday the word of Caesar might have stood against the world; now lies he there,

And none so poor to do him reverence.

O masters, if I were disposed to stir your hearts and minds to mutiny and rage,

I should do Brutus wrong, and Cassius wrong, who, you all know, are honourable men:

I will not do them wrong; I rather choose to wrong the dead, to wrong myself and you,

Than I will wrong such honourable men.

But here's a parchment with the seal of Caesar; I found it in his closet, 'tis his will:

Let but the commons hear this testament—Which, pardon me, I do not mean to read—

And they would go and kiss dead Caesar's wounds

And dig their naphkins in his sacred blood, Yea, beg a hair of him for memory,

And, dying, mention it within their wills, Bequeathing it as a rich legacy

Unto their issue.

Fourth Cit. We'll hear the will: read it, Mark Antony.

All. The will, the will! we will hear Caesar's will.

Ant. Have patience, gentle friends, I must not read it;

It is not meet you know how Caesar loved you. You are not wood, you are not stones, but men;

And, being men, hearing the will of Caesar, it will inflame you, it will make you mad;

'Tis good you know not that you are his heirs; For, if you should, O, what would come of it!

Fourth Cit. Read the will; we'll hear it, Antony;

You shall read us the will, Caesar's will.

Ant. Will you be patient? will you stay awhile?

I have o'erheard myself to tell you of it: I fear I wrong the honourable men Whose daggers have stab'd Caesar; I do fear it.

Fourth Cit. They were traitors: honourable men!

All. The will! the testament!

Sec. Cit. They were villains, murderers: the will! read the will.

Ant. You will compel me, then, to read the will!

Then make a ring about the corpse of Caesar, And let me show you him that made the will. Shall I descend? and will you give me leave?

Several Cit. Come down.

Sec. Cit. Descend.

Third Cit. You shall have leave.

[Antony comes down.]

Fourth Cit. A ring; stand round.

First Cit. Stand from the house, stand from the body.

Sec. Cit. Room for Antony, most noble Antony.

Ant. Nay, press not so upon me; stand far off.

Several Cit. Stand back; room; hear him.

Ant. If you have tears, prepare to shed them now.

You all do know this mantle: I remember The first time ever Caesar put it on;

'Twas on a summer's evening, in his tent, That day he overcame the Nervii.

Look, in this place ran Cassius' dagger through: See what a rent the envious Caesar made:

Through this the well-beloved Brutus stab'd; And as he pluck'd this cursed steel away,

Mark how the blood of Caesar follow'd it, As rushing out of doors, to be revolved

If Brutus so unkindly knock'd, or no; For Brutus, as you know, was Caesar's angel:

Judge, O you gods, how dearly Caesar loved him! This was the most unkindest cut of all;

For when the noble Caesar saw him stab, Ingratitude, more strong than traitors' arms,

Quite vanquish'd him: then burst his mighty heart;

And, in his mantle muffling up his face, Even at the base of Pompey's statue,

Which all the while man blood great Caesar fell, O, what a fall was there, my countrymen!

Then I, and you, and all of us fell down, Whilst bloody treason flourish'd over us.

O, now you weep; and, I perceive, you feel

Kind souls, what, weep you when you but behold

Our Caesar's venture wounded? Look you here, Here is himself, murther'd, as you see, with traitors.

First Cit. O pitiful spectacle!

Sec. Cit. O noble Caesar!

Third Cit. O woful day!

Fourth Cit. O traitors, villains!

First Cit. O most bloody sight!

Sec. Cit. We will be revenged.

All. Revenge! About! Seek! Run! Fire! Kill! Slay! Let not a traitor live!

Ant. Stay, countrymen.

First Cit. Peace there! hear the noble

Antony.

Sec. Cit. We'll hear him, we'll follow him, we'll die with him.

Ant. Good friends, sweet friends, let me not stir you up

To such a sudden flood of mutiny. They that have done this deed are honourable:

What private griefs they have, alas, I know not, That made them do so: they are wise men, and

And will, no doubt, with reasons answer you.
I come not, friends, to steal away your hearts :
I am no orator, as Brutus is ;
But, as you know me all, a plain blunt man
That love my friend ; and that they know full well

That gave me public leave to speak of him :
For I have neither wit, nor words, nor worth,
Action, nor utterance, nor the power of speech,
To stir men's blood : I only speak right on ;
I tell you that which you yourselves do know ;
Show you sweet Cæsar's wounds, poor poor
dumb mouths,

And bid them speak for me : but were I Brutus,
And Brutus Antony, there were an Antony
Would ruffle up your spirits and put a tongue
In every wound of Cæsar that should move
The stones of Rome to rise and mutiny.

All. We'll mutiny.

First Cit. We'll burn the house of Brutus.

Third Cit. Away, then ! come, seek the conspirators.

Ant. Yet hear me, countrymen ; yet hear me speak.

All. Peace, ho ! Hear Antony. Most noble Antony !

Ant. Why, friends, you go to do you know not what :

Wherein hath Cæsar thus deserved your loves ?
Alas, you know not : I must tell you, then :
You have forgot the will I told you of.

All. Most true. The will ! Let's stay and hear the will.

Ant. Here is the will, and under Cæsar's seal.

To every Roman citizen he gives,
To every several man, seventy five drachmas.

Sec. Cit. Most noble Cæsar ! We'll revenge his death.

Third Cit. O royal Cæsar !

Ant. Hear me with patience.

All. Peace, ho !

Ant. Moreover, he hath left you all his walks,

His private arbours and new-planted orchards,
On this side Tiber ; he hath left them you,
And to your heirs for ever, common pleasures,
To walk abroad, and recreate yourselves.
Here was a Cæsar ! when comes such another ?

First Cit. Never, never. Come, away, away !

We'll burn his body in the holy place,
And with the brands fire the traitors' houses.
Take up the body.

Sec. Cit. Go fetch fire.

Third Cit. Pluck down benches.

Fourth Cit. Pluck down forms, windows, anything. [Exeunt Citizens with the body.]

Ant. Now let it work. Mischief, thou art at it,

Take thou what course thou wilt !

Enter a Servant.

How now, fellow !

Serv. Sir, Octavius is already come to Rome.

Ant. Where is he ?

Serv. He and Lepidus are at Cæsar's house.

Ant. And thither will I straight to visit him :
He comes upon a wish. Fortune is merry, and
And in this mood will give us any thing.

Serv. I heard him say, Brutus and Cassius
Are rid like madmen through the gates of Rome.

Ant. Belike they had some notice of the people,
How I had moved them. Bring me to Octavius.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. A str

Enter CINNA the 1

Cin. I dreamt to-night that I did feast with Cæsar,

And things unluckily charge my fantasy :
I have no will to wander forth of doors,
Yet something leads me forth.

Enter Citizens.

First Cit. What is your name ?

Sec. Cit. Whither are you going ?

Third Cit. Where do you dwell ?

Fourth Cit. Are you a married man or a bachelor ?

Sec. Cit. Answer every man directly.

First Cit. Ay, and briefly.

Fourth Cit. Ay, and wisely.

Third Cit. Ay, and truly, you were best.

Cin. What is my name ? Whither am I going ? Where do I dwell ? Am I a married man or a bachelor ? Then, to answer every man directly and briefly, wisely and truly : wisely I say, I am a bachelor.

Sec. Cit. That's as much as to say, they are fools that marry : you'll bear me a bang for that, I fear. Proceed ; directly.

Cin. Directly, I am going to Cæsar's funeral.

First Cit. As a friend or an enemy ?

Cin. As a friend.

Sec. Cit. That matter is answered directly.

Fourth Cit. For your dwelling,—briefly.

Cin. Briefly, I dwell by the Capitol.

Third Cit. Your name, sir, truly.

Cin. Truly, my name is Cinna.

First Cit. Tear him to pieces ; he's a conspirator.

Cin. I am Cinna the poet, I am Cinna the poet.

Fourth Cit. Tear him for his bad verses, tear him for his bad verses.

Cin. I am not Cinna the conspirator.

Fourth Cit. It is no matter, his name's Cinna ; pluck but his name out of his heart, and turn him going.

Third Cit. Tear him, tear him ! Come, brands, ho ! fire-brands, to Brutus', to Cassius' ; burn all : some to Decius' house, and some to Casca's ; some to Ligarius' : away, go !

[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I. A house in Rome.

ANTONY, OCTAVIUS, and LEPIDUS, seated at a table.

Ant. These many, then, shall die ; their names are prick'd.

Oct. Your brother too must die; consent you, Lepidus!

Lep. I do consent.—

Oct. Prick him down, Antony.

Lep. Upon condition Publius shall not live, Who is your sister's son, Mark Antony.

Ant. He shall not live; look, with a spot I damn him.

But, Lepidus, go you to Cæsar's house; Fetch the will hither, and we shall determine How to cut off some charge in legacies.

Lep. What, shall I find you here? 10

Oct. Or here, or at the Capitol.

[Exit Lepidus.]

Ant. This is a slight unmeritable man, Meet to be sent on errands: is it fit, The three-fold world divided, he should stand One of the three to share it?

Oct. So you thought him; And took his voice who should be prick'd to die, In our black sentence and proscription.

Ant. Octavius, I have seen more days than you:

And though we lay these honours on this man, To ease ourselves of divers slanderous loads, 20 He shall but bear them as the ass bears gold, To groan and sweat under the business, Either led or driven, as we point the way; And having brought our treasure where we will, Then take we down his load, and turn him off, Like to the empty ass, to shake his ears, And graze in commons.

Oct. You may do your will; But he's a tried and valiant soldier.

Ant. So is my horse, Octavius; and for that I do appoint him store of provender: 30

It is a creature that I teach to fight, To wind, to stop, to run directly on, His corporal motion govern'd by my spirit.

And, in some taste, is Lepidus but so; He must be taught and train'd and bid go forth; A barren-spirited fellow; one that feeds

On subjects, ors and imitations, Which, out of use and staled by other men,

Begin his fashion: do not talk of him, But as a property. And now, Octavius, 40

Listen great things:—Brutus and Cassius Are levying powers: we must straight make head: Therefore let our alliance be combined,

Our best friends made, our means stretch'd; And let us presently go sit in council,

How covert matters may be best disclosed, And open perils surest answered.

Oct. Let us do so: for we are at the stake, And bay'd about with many enemies;

And some that smile have in their hearts, I fear, 50

Millions of mischiefs. [Exit.]

SCENE II. Camp near Sardis. Before Brutus's tent.

Drum. Enter BRUTUS, LUCILIUS, LUCIUS, and Soldiers; TITINIUS and PINDARUS meeting them.

Br. Stand, ho!

Lucil. Give the word, ho! and stand.

Br. What now, Lucilius! is Cassius near?

Lucil. He is at hand; and Pindarus is come To do you salutation from his master.

Br. He greets me well. Your master, Pindarus,

In his own change, or by ill officers, Hath given me some worthy cause to wish

Things done, undone: but, if he be at hand, I shall be satisfied.

Pin. I do not doubt 20

But that my noble master will appear Such as he is, full of regard and honour.

Br. He is not doubted. A word, Lucilius; How he received you, let me be resolved.

Lucil. With courtesy and with respect enough;

But not with such familiar instances, Nor with such free and friendly conference,

As he hath used of old.

Br. Thou hast described A hot friend cooling: ever note, Lucilius,

When love begins to sicken and decay, 30

It useth an enforced ceremony. There are no tricks in plain and simple faith;

But hollow men, like horses hot at hand, Make gallant show and promise of their mettle;

But when they should endure the bloody spur, They fall their crests, and, like deceitful jades,

Sink in the trial. Comes his army on?

Lucil. They mean this night in Sardis to be quarter'd;

The greater part, the horse in general, Are come with Cassius.

Br. Hark! he is arrived. 30 [Low march within.]

March gently on to meet him.

Enter CASSIUS and his powers.

Cas. Stand, ho!

Br. Stand, ho! Speak the word along.

First Sol. Stand!

Sec. Sol. Stand!

Third Sol. Stand!

Cas. Most noble brother, you have done me wrong.

Br. Judge me, you gods! wrong I mine enemies!

And, if not so, how should I wrong a brother?

Cas. Brutus, this sober form of yours hides wrongs; 40

And when you do them—

Br. Cassius, be content; Speak your griefs softly: I do know you well.

Before the eyes of both our armies here, Which should perceive nothing but love from us,

Let us not wrangle: bid them move away; Then in my tent, Cassius, enlarge your griefs,

And I will give you audience.

Cas. Pindarus, Bid our commanders lead their charges off A little from this ground.

Br. Lucilius, do you the like; and let no man 50

Come to our tent till we have done our conference.

Let Lucius and Titinius guard our door. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Brutus's tent.

Enter BRUTUS and CASSIUS.

Cas. That you have wrong'd me doth appear in this:

You have condemn'd and noted Lucius Pella For taking bribes here of the Sardians; Wherein my letters, praying on his side, Because I knew the man, were slighted off.

Bru. You wrong'd yourself to write in such a case.

Cas. In such a time as this it is not meet That every nice offence should bear his comment.

Bru. Let me tell you, Cassius, you yourself Are much condemn'd to have an itching palm; To sell and mart your offices for gold To underserve.

Cas. I an itching palm! You know that you are Brutus that speak this, Or, by the gods, this speech were else your last.

Bru. The name of Cassius honours this corruption, And chastisement doth therefore hide his head.

Cas. Chastisement!

Bru. Remember March, the ides of March remember:

Did not great Julius bleed for justice's sake? What villain touch'd his body, that did stab, And not for justice! What, shall one of us, That struck the foremost man of all this world But for supporting robbers, shall we now Contaminate our fingers with base bribes, And sell the mighty space of our large honours For so much trash as may be grasped thus? I had rather be a dog, and bay the moon, Than such a Roman.

Cas. Brutus, bay not me; I'll not endure it; you forget yourself, To hedge me in; I am a soldier, I, Older in practice, abler than yourself To make conditions.

Bru. Go to; you are not, Cassius.

Cas. I am.

Bru. I say you are not.

Cas. Urge me no more, I shall forget myself; Have mind upon your health, tempt me no farther.

Bru. Away, slight man!

Cas. Is't possible!

Bru. Hear me, for I will speak. Must I give way and room to your rash choler? Shall I be fought when a madman staps? 40

Cas. O ye gods, ye gods! must I endure all this!

Bru. All this? ay, more: fret till your proud heart break;

Go show your slaves how choleric you are, And make your bondmen tremble. Must I bode!

Must I observe you? must I stand and crouch Under your testy humour? By the gods, You shall about the necks of your spleen, Though it do split you; for, from this day forth, I'll use you for my walking gait, for my humour's sake, When you are wretched.

Cas. Is it come to this! 50

Bru. You say you are a better soldier: Let it appear so; make your vomiting true; And it shall please me well: for mine own part, I shall be glad to learn of noble men.

Cas. Yes, wrong me every way; you wrong me, Brutus;

I said, an elder soldier, not a better:

Did I say 'better'?

Bru. If you did, I care not.

Cas. When Caesar lived, he durst not thus have moved me.

Bru. Peace, peace! you durst not so have tempted him.

Cas. I durst not!

Bru. No.

Cas. What, durst not tempt him!

Bru. For your life you durst not.

Cas. Do not presume too much upon my love;

I may do that I shall be sorry for.

Bru. You have done that you should be sorry for.

There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats,

For I am arm'd so strong in honesty

That they pass by me as the idle wind,

Which I respect not. I did send to you

For certain sums of gold, which you denied me:

For I can raise no money by vile means: 71

By heaven, I had rather coin my heart,

And drop my blood for drachmas, than to wring

From the hard hands of peasants their vile trash

By any indirection: I did send

To you for gold to pay my legions,

Which you denied me: was that done like

Cassius?

Should I have answer'd Caius Cassius so?

When Marcus Brutus grows so covetous,

To lock such rascal counters from his friends, to

Be ready, gods, with all your thunderbolts;

Dash him to pieces!

Cas. I denied you not.

Bru. You did.

Cas. I did not: he was but a fool that brought

My answer back. Brutus hath riv'd my heart:

A friend should bear his friend's infirmities,

But Brutus makes mine greater than they are.

Bru. I do not, till you practise them on me.

Cas. You love me not.

Bru. I do not like your faults.

Cas. A friendly eye could never see such faults. 90

Bru. A flatterer's would not, though they do appear

As huge as high Olympus.

Cas. Come, Antony, and young Octavius, come,

Revenge yourselves alone on Cassius,

For Cassius is a enemy of the world;

Hated by one he loves; braved by his brother;

Check'd like a bondman; all his faults observed,

Set in a note-book, learn'd, and count'd by rote,

To cast into my teeth. O, I could weep

My spirit from mine eyes! There is my danger.

And here my naked breast; within, a heart not Dearer than Plutus' mine, richer than gold:
If that thou be'st a Roman, take it forth;
I, that denied thee gold, will give my heart:
Strike, as thou didst at Caesar; for, I know,
When thou didst hate him worst, thou lovedst him better.

Than ever thou lovedst Cassius.

Bru. Bludge the your dagger:
Be angry when you will, it shall have scope;
Do what you will, dishonour shall be honour.
O Cassius, you are yoked with a lamb 120
That carries anger as the flint bears fire;
Who, much enforc'd, shows a hasty spark,
And straight is cold again.

Cas. Hath Cassius lived
To be but mirth and laughter to his Brutus,
When grief, and blood ill-temper'd, vexeth
him?

Bru. When I spoke that, I was ill-temper'd
too.

Cas. Do you confess so much? Give me your hand.

Bru. And my heart too.

Cas. O Brutus!

Bru. What's the matter?
Cas. Have not you love enough to bear with mine?

When that rash humour which my mother gave me 120
Makes me forgetful!

Bru. Yes, Cassius; and, from henceforth,
When you are over-came with your Brutus,
He'll think your mother chides, and leave
you so.

Poet. [Within] Let me go in to see the generals:

There is some grudge between 'em, 'tis not meet

They be alone.

Luci. [Within] You shall not come to
them.

Poet. [Within] Nothing but death shall stay me.

Enter Poet, followed by LUCILIUS, TITINIUS, and LUCIUS.

Cas. How now! what's the matter?

Poet. For shame, you generals! what do you mean? 120

Love, and be friends, as two such men should
be;

For I have seen more years, I'm sure, than ye.

Cas. Ha, ha! how wisely doth this cynic rhyme!

Bru. Get you hence, sirrah; saucy fellow,
hence!

Cas. Bear with him, Brutus; 'tis his fashion.

Bru. I'll know his humour, when he knows his time:

What should the wars do with these jiggling
fools?

Companion, hence!

Cas. Away, away, be gone! 120
[Exit Poet.]

Bru. Lucilius and Titinius, bid the commanders
Prepare to lodge their companies to-night. 120

Cas. And come yourselves, and bring Mes-sala with you
Immediately to us.

[Exeunt Lucilius and Titinius.
Bru. Lucius, a bowl of wine! [Mark Lucius.

Cas. I did not think you could have been so angry.

Bru. O Cassius, I am sick of many griefs.

Cas. Of your philosophy you make no use,
If you give place to accidental evils.

Bru. No man bears sorrow better: Portia is dead.

Cas. Ha! Portia!

Bru. She is dead.

Cas. How escap'd I killing when I cross'd
you so! 120

O insupportable and touching loss!
Upon what sickness?

Bru. Impatient of my absence,
And grief that young Octavius with Mark
Antony

Have made themselves so strong:—for with her
death

That tidings came;—with this she fell distract,

And, her attendants absent, swallow'd fire.

Cas. And died so?

Bru. Even so.

Cas. How immortal gods!
O ye immortal gods!

Re-enter LUCIUS, with wine and taper.

Bru. Speak no more of her. Give me a bowl of wine.

In this I bury all unkindness, Cassius.

Cas. My heart is thirsty for that noble
pledge. 120

Fill, Lucius, till the wine o'erswell the cup;
I cannot drink too much of Brutus' love.

Bru. Come in, Titinius! [Exit Lucius.

Re-enter TITINIUS, with MESSALA.

Welcome, good!

Now sit we close about this taper here,
And call in question our necessities.

Cas. Portia, art thou gone?

Bru. No more, I pray you.

Messala, I have here received letters,
That young Octavius and Mark Antony

Come down upon us with a mighty power,
Bending their expedition toward Philippi. 120

Mes. Myself have letters of the selfsame tenour.

Bru. With what addition?

Mes. That by prescription and bills of outlawry,

Octavius, Antony, and Lepidus,
Have put to death an hundred senators.

Bru. Therin our letters do not well as Mine speak of seventy senators that died
By their proscriptions, Cicero being one.

Cas. Cicero one?

Mes. Cicero is dead.

And by that order of proscription.

Had you your letters from your wife, my lady?

Bru. No, Messala.

Mes. Nor nothing in your letters writ of her?

Bru. Nothing, Messala.

Mes. That, methinks, is strange.

Bru. Why ask you? hear you aught of her in yours?

Mes. No, my lord.

Bru. Now, as you are a Roman, tell me true.

Mes. Then like a Roman bear the truth I tell:

For certain she is dead, and by strange manner.

Bru. Why, farewell, Portia. We must die,

Messala: 190

With meditating that she must die once,

I have the patience to endure it now.

Mes. Even so great men great losses should endure.

Cas. I have as much of this in art as you, But yet my nature could not bear it so.

Bru. Well, to our work alive. What do you think

Of marching to Philippi presently?

Cas. I do not think it good.

Bru. Your reason?

Cas. This it is:

'Tis better that the enemy seek us: 199

So shall he waste his means, weary his soldiers,

Doing himself offence; whilst we, lying still,

Are full of rest, defence, and nimbleness.

Bru. Good reasons must, of force, give place to better.

The people 'twixt Philippi and this ground

Do stand but in a forced affection;

For they have grudged us contribution:

The enemy, marching along by them,

By them shall make a fuller number up,

Come on refresh'd, new-added, and encouraged;

From which advantage shall we cut him off, 210

If at Philippi we do face him there,

These people at our back.

Cas. Hear me, good brother.

Bru. Under your pardon. You must note beside,

That we have tried the utmost of our friends,

Our legions are brim-full, our cause is ripe:

The enemy increaseth every day;

We, at the height, are ready to decline.

There is a tide in the affairs of men,

Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune;

Omitted, all the voyage of their life 220

Is bound in shallows and in miseries.

On such a full sea are we now afloat;

And we must take the current when it serves,

Or lose our ventures.

Cas. Then, with your will, go on;

We'll along ourselves, and meet them at Philippi.

Bru. The deep of night is crept upon our

talk,

And nature must obey necessity;

Which we will niggard with a little rest.

There is no more to say?

Cas. No more. Good night:

Early to-morrow will we rise, and hence. 230

Bru. Lucius! [Enter Lucius.] My gown.

[Exit Lucius.] Farewell, good Messala:

Good night, Titinius. Noble, noble Cassius,

Good night, and good repose.

Cas. O my dear brother!

This was an ill beginning of the night:

Never come such division 'tween our souls!

Let it not, Brutus.

Bru. Every thing is well.

Cas. Good night, my lord.

Bru. Good night, good brother.

Tit. Mes. Good night, Lord Brutus.

Bru. Farewell, every one.

[Exeunt all but Brutus.]

Re-enter LUCIUS, with the gown.

Give me the gown. Where is thy instrument?

Luc. Here in the tent.

Bru. What, thou speak'st drowsily? 240

Poor knave, I blame thee not; thou art o'erwatch'd.

Call Claudius and some other of my men;

I'll have them sleep on cushions in my tent.

Luc. Varro and Claudius!

Enter VARRO and CLAUDIUS.

Var. Calls my lord?

Bru. I pray you, sirs, lie in my tent and

sleep;

It may be I shall raise you by and by.

On business to my brother Cassius.

Var. So please you, we will stand and watch your pleasure.

Bru. I will not have it so: lie down, good sirs; 25

It may be I shall otherwise bethink me.

Look, Lucius, here's the book I sought for so

I put it in the pocket of my gown.

[Var. and Clau. lie down.]

Luc. I was sure your lordship did not give it me.

Bru. Bear with me, good boy, I am much forgetful.

Canst thou hold up thy heavy eyes awhile,

And touch thy instrument a strain or two?

Luc. Ay, my lord, an't please you.

Bru. It does, my boy

I trouble thee too much, but thou art willing.

Luc. It is my duty, sir. 260

Bru. I should not urge thy duty past thy might;

I know young bloods look for a time of rest.

Luc. I have slept, my lord, already.

Bru. It was well done; and thou shalt sleep

again;

I will not hold thee long: if I do live,

I will be good to thee. [Musical, and a song.]

This is a sleepy tune. O murderous slumber,

Lay'st thou thy leaden mace upon my boy,

That plays thee music? Gentle knave, good

night; 269

I will not do thee so much wrong to wake thee:

If thou dost nod, thou break'st thy instrument;

I'll take it from thee; and, good boy, good

night.

Let me see, let me see; is not the leaf turn'd

down

Where I left reading? Here it is, I think.

Enter the Ghost of CÆSAR.

How ill this taper burns! Ha! who comes

here?

I think it is the weakness of mine eyes

That shapes this monstrous apparition.

It comes upon me. Art thou any thing?

Art thou some god, some angel, or some devil?

That maketh my blood cold and my hair to stare?
Speak to me what thou art. 281

Ghost. Thy evil spirit, Brutus.

Bru. Why comest thou?

Ghost. To tell thee thou shalt see me at Philippi.

Bru. Well; then I shall see thee again?

Ghost. Ay, at Philippi.

Bru. Why, I will see thee at Philippi, then. [Exit Ghost.]

Now I have taken heart thou vanishest:

Ill spirit, I would hold more talk with thee.

Boy, Lucius! Varro! Claudius! Sirs, awake! Claudius! 291

Luc. The strings, my lord, are false.

Bru. He thinks he still is at his instrument.

Lucius, awake!

Luc. My lord!

Bru. Didst thou dream, Lucius, that thou so criest out?

Luc. My lord, I do not know that I did cry.

Bru. Yes, that thou didst: didst thou see any thing?

Luc. Nothing, my lord.

Bru. Sleep again, Lucius. Sirrah Claudius!

[To Var.] Fellow thou, awake! 301

Var. My lord!

Claud. My lord!

Bru. Why did you so cry out, sirs, in your sleep?

Var. Claud. Did we, my lord?

Bru. Ay: saw you any thing?

Var. No, my lord, I saw nothing.

Claud. Nor I, my lord.

Bru. Go and commend me to my brother Cassius;

bid him set on his powers betimes before,

And we will follow.

Var. Claud. It shall be done, my lord. 309 [Exit]

ACT V.

SCENE I. The plains of Philippi.

Enter OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, and their army.

Oct. Now, Antony, our hopes are answered
You said the enemy would not come down,
But keep the hills and upper regions;
It proves not so: their battles are at hand;
They mean to warn us at Philippi here,
Answering before we do demand of them.

Ant. Tut, I am in their bosoms, and I know
Wherefore they do it: they could be content
To visit other places; and come down
With fearful bravery, thinking by this face
To fasten in our thoughts that they have courage;
But 'tis not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Prepare you, generals:
The enemy comes on in gallant show;
Their bloody sign of battle is hung out,
And something to be done immediately.

Ant. Octavius, lead your battle softly on,
Upon the left hand of the even field.

Oct. Upon the right hand I; keep thou the left.

Ant. Why do you cross me in this exigent?

Oct. I do not cross you; but I will do so. 30
[March.]

Drum. Enter BRUTUS, CASSIUS, and their Army; LUCILIUS, TITINIUS, MESSALA, and
others.

Bru. They stand, and would have parley.

Oct. Stand fast, Titinius: we must out and talk.

Oct. Mark Antony, shall we give sign of battle?

Ant. No, Caesar, we will answer on their charge.

Make forth; the generals would have some
words.

Oct. Stir not until the signal.

Bru. Words before blows: is it so, country-
men?

Oct. Not that we love words better, as you do.

Bru. Good words are better than bad strokes,
Octavius.

Ant. In your bad strokes, Brutus, you give good words:

Witness the hole you made in Caesar's heart,
Crying 'Long live! hail, Caesar!'

Oct. Antony,

The posture of your blows are yet unknown;
But for your words, they rob the Hybla bees,
And leave them honeyless.

Ant. Not stinging too.

Bru. O, yes, and soundless too;

For you have stol'n their buzzing, Antony,
And very wisely threat before you sting.

Ant. Villains, you did not so, when your ville daggers

Hack'd one another in the sides of Caesar: 40
You should've your teeth like apes, and fawn'd
like hounds,

And bow'd like bondmen, kissing Caesar's feet;
Whilst damned Casca, like a cur, behind

Struck Caesar on the neck. O you flatterers!

Cas. Flatterers! Now, Brutus, thank yourself:

This tongue had not offended so to-day,
If Cassius might have ruled.

Oct. Come, come, the cause: if arguing make us sweat.

The proof of it will turn to redder drops.

Look; 50

I draw a sword against conspirators;

When think you that the sword goes up again?

Never, till Caesar's three and thirty wounds

Be well avenged; or till another Caesar

Have added slaughter to the sword of traitors.

Bru. Caesar, thou canst not die by traitors';
hands,

Unless thou bring'st them with thee.

Oct. So I hope;

I was not born to die on Brutus' sword.

Bru. O, if thou wert the noblest of thy strain,
Young man, thou couldst not die more honourable. 60

Cas. A peevish schoolboy, worthless of such honour.

Join'd with a masker and a reveller!

Ant. Old Cassius still!

Oct. Come, Antony, away!

Defiance, treason, hurt we in your teeth;
If you dare fight to-day, come to the field;
If not, when you have stomachs.

[Enter Octavius, Antony, and their army.]

Cas. Why, now, blow wind, swell billow and swim back!

The storm is up, and all is on the hazard.

Bru. Ha, Lucilius! hark, a word with you.

Lucil. [Standing forth] My lord?

[Brutus and Lucilius converse apart.]

Cas. Messala!

Mes. [Standing forth] What says my general?

Cas. Messala, 71

This is my birth-day; as this very day
Was Cassius born. Give me thy hand, Messala:
Be thou my witness that against my will
As Pompey was, am I compell'd to set Upon one battle all our liberties.

You know that I held Epicurus strong
And his opinion: now I change my mind,
And partly credit things that do presage.

Coming from Sardis, on our former ensign 80
Two mighty eagles fell, and there they perch'd,
Gorging and feeding from our soldiers' hands;
Who to Philippi here consorted us:

This morning are they fled away and gone;
And in their steads do ravens, crows and kites,
Fly o'er our heads and downward look on us,
As we were sickly prey: their shadows seem
A canopy most fatal, under which
Our army lies, ready to give up the ghost.

Mes. Believe not so.

Cas. I but believe it partly; 90

For I am flesh of spirit and resolved
To meet all perils with a constant eye.

Bru. Even so, Lucilius.

Cas. New, most noble Brutus,

The gods to-day stand friendly, that we may,
Lovers in peace, lead on our days to age!

But since the affairs of men rest still uncertain,
Let's reason with the worst that may befall.
If we do lose this battle, then is this
The very last time we shall speak together:

What are you then determined to do? 100

Bru. Even by the rule of that philosophy
By which I did blame Cato for the death
Which he did give himself, I know not how,
But I do find it cowardly and vile,
For fear of what might fall, so to prevent
The time of life: arming myself with patience
To stay the providence of some high powers
That govern us below.

Cas. Then, if we lose this battle,

You are contented to be led in triumph
Through the streets of Rome?

Bru. No, Cassius, no: think not, thou noble Roman,

That ever Brutus will go bound to Rome;
He bears too great a mind. But this same day
Must end that work the ides of March begun;
And whether we shall meet again I know not.
Therefore our everlasting farewell take:
For ever, and for ever, farewell, Cassius!
If we do meet again, why, we shall smile;
If not, why then, this parting was well made.

Cas. For ever, and for ever, farewell, Brutus!

If we do meet again, we'll smile indeed;
If not, 'tis true, this parting was well made.

Bru. Why, then, lead on. O, that a might know

The end of this day's business ere it come!

But it sufficeth that the day will end.

And then the end is known. Come, ho! away! 110

SCENE II. The same. The field of battle.

Alarums. Enter BRUTUS and MESSALA.

Bru. Ride, ride, Messala, ride, and give these hills

Unto the legions on the other side.

[Long Alarums.]

Let them set on at once; for I perceive
But cold demeanour in Octavius' wing.

And sudden push gives them the overthrow.

Ride, ride, Messala: let them all come down.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Another part of the field.

Alarums. Enter CASSIUS and TITINIUS.

Cas. O, look, Titinius, look, the villains fly!
Myself have to mine own turp'd enemy:

This ensign here of mine was turning back;

I slew the coward, and did take it from him.

Tit. O Cassius, Brutus gave the word too early;

Who, having some advantage on Octavius,

Took it too eagerly: his soldiers fell to spoil,

Whilst we by Antony are all enclosed.

Enter PINDARUS.

Pin. Fly further off, my lord, fly further off;

Mark Antony is in your tents, my lord: 10

Fly, therefore, noble Cassius, fly far off.

Cas. This hill is far enough. Look, look,

Titinius;

Are those my tents where I perceive the fire?

Tit. They are, my lord.

Cas. Titinius, if thou lovest me,

Mount thou my horse, and hide thy spurs in
him,

Till he have brought thee up to yonder troops,

And here again; that I may rest assured

Whether yond troops are friend or enemy.

Tit. I will be here again, even with a thought.

[Exit.]

Cas. Go, Pindarus, get higher on that hill;

My sight was ever thick; regard Titinius, 21

And tell me what thou noisiest about the field.

[Pindarus ascends the hill.]

This day I breathed first: time is come round,

And where I did begin, there shall I end;

My life is run his compass. Sirrah, what news?

Pin. [Above] O my lord!

Cas. What news?

Pin. [Above] Titinius is enclosed round about

With horsemen, that make to him on the spur;

Yet he spurs on. Now they are almost on him.

Now, Titinius! Now some light. O, he lights

too. 31

He's ta'en. [Shout.] And, hark! they shout

for joy.

Cas. Come down, behold no more.

O, coward that I am, to live so long,

To see my best friend ta'en before my face!

PINDARUS descends.

Come hither, sirrah;
In Parthia did I take thee prisoner;
And then I swore thee, saving of thy life,
That whatsoever I did bid thee do, Thou shouldst attempt it. Come now, keep thine oath;
Now be a freeman: and with this good sword,
That ran through Caesar's bowels, search this bosom.

Stand not to answer: here, take thou the hilt;
And, when my face is cover'd, as 'tis now,
Guide thou the sword. [Pindarus stabs him.]

Caesar, thou art revenged,
Even with the sword that kill'd thee. [Dies.]

Pin. So, I am free; yet would not so have been.
Durst I have done my will. O Cassius,
Far from this country Pindarus shall run,
Where never Roman shall take note of him. So
[Exit.]

Re-enter TITINIUS with MESSALA.

Mes. It is but change, Titinius; for Octavius is overthrown by noble Brutus' power,
As Cassius' legions are by Antony.

Tit. These tidings will well comfort Cassius.

Mes. Where did you leave him?

Tit. All disconsolate,
With Pindarus his bondman, on this hill.

Mes. Is not that he that lies upon the ground?

Tit. He lies not like the living. O my heart!

Mes. Is not that he?

Tit. No, this was he, Messala.

But Cassius is no more. O setting sun,
As in thy red rays thou dost sink to night,
So in his red blood Cassius' day is set;
The sun of Rome is set! Our day is gone;
Clouds, dews, and dangers come; our deeds are
done!

Mistrust of my success hath done this deed.

Mes. Mistrust of good success hath done
this deed.

O hateful error, melancholy's child,
Why dost thou show to the apt thoughts of
men

The things that are not? O error, soon conceived,

Thou never comest unto a happy birth,
But kill'st the mother that engender'd thee! So

Tit. What, Pindarus! where art thou, Pindarus?

Mes. Seek him, Titinius, whilst I go to meet
The noble Brutus, thrusting this report into his ears; I may say, thrusting it;
For piercing steel and darts envenomed shall be as welcome to the ears of Brutus
As tidings of this sight.

Tit. He is here, Messala,
And I will seek for Pindarus the while. So
[Exit Messala.]

Why didst thou send me forth, brave Cassius?
Did I not meet thy friends? and did not they Put on my brows this wreath of victory,
And bid me give it thee? Didst thou not hear their shouts?

Alas, thou hast misconstrued every thing!

But, hold thee, take this garland on thy brow;
Thy Brutus bid me give it thee, and I
Will do his bidding. Brutus, come hither,
And see how I regarded Calpurnius.
By your leave, gods:—this is a Roman's part:
Come, Cassius' sword, and find Titinius' heart.
[Kills himself.]

Alarm. Re-enter MESSALA, with BRUTUS, young CATO, STRATO, VOLUMINIUS, and LUCILIUS.

Bru. Where, where, Messala, doth his body lie?

Mes. Lo, yonder, and Titinius mourning it.

Bru. Titinius' face is upward.

Cato. He is slain.

Bru. O Julius Caesar, thou art mighty yet!
Thy spirit walks abroad, and turns our swords
In our own proper entrails. [Low alarm.]

Cato. Brave Titinius!

Look, whether he have not crown'd dead Cas-sius!

Bru. Are yet two Romans living such as these?

The last of all the Romans, fare thee well!
It is impossible that ever Rome

Should breed thy fellow. Friends, I owe more
tears

To this dead man than you shall see me pay.
I shall find time, Cassius, I shall find time.

Come, therefore, and to Thasos send his body:
His funerals shall not be in our camp,

Lest it discomfort us. Lucilius, come;
And come, young Cato; let us to the field.

Laebus and Flavius, set our battles on:
'Tis three o'clock; and, Romans, yet are night

We shall try fortune in a second light. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Another part of the field.

Alarm. Enter fighting, Soldiers of both armies; then BRUTUS, young CATO, LU-CILIUS, and others.

Bru. Yet, countrymen, O, yet hold up your heads!

Cato. What bastard doth not! Who will go
with me!

I will proclaim my name about the field:
I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!

A foe to tyrants, and my country's friend;
I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!

Bru. And I am Brutus, Marcus Brutus, I; Brutus, my country's friend; know me for Brutus!

Lucil. O young and noble Cato, art thou
down?

Why, now thou diest as bravely as Titinius;
And mayst be honour'd, being Cato's son.

First Sold. Yield, or thou diest.

Lucil. Only I yield to thee:
There is so much that thou wilt kill me straight;

[Offering stones.]
Kill Brutus, and be honour'd in his death.

First Sold. We must not. A noble prisoner!

Sec. Sold. Room, ho! Tell Antony, Brutus is taken.

First Sold. I'll tell the news. Here comes the general.

Enter ANTONY.

Brutus is ta'en, Brutus is ta'en, my lord.

Ant. Where is he?

Lucil. Safe, Antony; Brutus is safe enough:

I dare assure thee that no enemy

Shall ever take alive the noble Brutus:

The gods defend him from so great a shame!

When you do find him, or alive or dead,

He will be found like Brutus, like himself.

Ant. This is not Brutus, friend; but, I assure you,

A prize no less in worth: keep this man safe;

Give him all kindness: I had rather have Such men my friends than enemies. Go on,

And see whether Brutus be alive or dead;

And bring us word unto Octavius' tent;

How every thing is chanced. [Exit.

SCENE V. Another part of the field.

Enter BRUTUS, DARDANIUS, CLITUS, STRATO, and VOLUMNIUS.

Bru. Come, poor remains of friends, rest on this rock.

Cl. Statilius show'd the torch-light, but, my lord,

He came not back; he is or ta'en or slain.

Bru. Sit thee down, Clitus: slaying is the word;

It is a deed in fashion. Hark thee, Clitus.

Cl. What, I, my lord? No, not for all the world.

Bru. Peace then! no words.

Cl. I'll rather kill myself.

Bru. Hark thee, Dardanius. [Whispers.

Dar. Shall I do such a deed?

Cl. O Dardanius!

Dar. O Clitus!

Cl. What ill request did Brutus make to thee?

Dar. To kill him, Clitus. Look, he meditates.

Cl. Now is that noble vessel full of grief, That it runs over even at his eyes.

Bru. Come hither, good Volumnius; list a word.

Vol. What says my lord?

Bru. Why, this, Volumnius: The ghost of Cæsar hath appear'd to me Two several times by night; at Sardis once, And, this last night, here in Philippi fields: I know my hour is come.

Vol. Not so, my lord.

Bru. Nay, I am sure it is, Volumnius. Thou seest the world, Volumnius, how it goes; Our enemies have beat us to the pit:

[Low alarums.] It is more worthy to leap in ourselves, Than tarry till they push us. Good Volumnius, Thou know'st that we two went to school together:

Even for that our love of old, I prithee, Hold thou my sword-hilt, whilst I run on it.

Vol. That's not an office for a friend, my lord.

Cl. Fly, fly, my lord; there is no tarrying here.

Bru. Farewell to you; and you; and you, Volumnius.

Strato, thou hast been all this while asleep;

Farewell to thee too, Strato. Countrymen,

My heart doth joy that yet in all my life

I found no man but he was true to me.

I shall have glory by this losing

More than Octavius and Mark.

By this vile conquest shall attain unto.

So fare you well at once: for Brutus' tongue

Hath almost ended his life's history.

Night hangs upon mine eyes; my

That have but labour'd to attain this hour.

[Alarum. Cry within, 'Fly, fly, fly!']

Cl. Fly, my lord, fly.

Bru. Hence! I will follow.

[Exit Clitus, Dardanius, and Volumnius.]

I prithee, Strato, stay thou by thy lord:

Thou art a fellow of a good respect;

Thy life hath had some smatch of honour in it:

Hold then my sword, and turn away thy face, While I do run upon it. Wilt thou, Strato?

Str. Give me your hand first. Fare you well, my lord.

Bru. Farewell, good Strato. [Runs on his sword.] Cæsar, now be still:

I kill'd not thee with half so good a will. [Dies.]

Alarum. Retreat. Enter OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, MESSALA, LUCILIUS, and the army.

Oct. What man is that?

Mes. My master's man. Strato, where is thy master?

Str. Free from the bondage you are in, Messala:

The conquerors can but make a fire of him; For Brutus only overcame himself,

And no man else hath honour by his death.

Lucil. So Brutus should be found. I thank thee, Brutus,

That thou hast proved Lucilius' saying true.

Oct. All that served Brutus, I will entertain them.

Fellow, wilt thou bestow thy time with me?

Str. Ay, if Messala will prefer me to you.

Oct. Do so, good Messala.

Mes. How died my master, Strato?

Str. I held the sword, and he did run on it.

Mes. Octavius, then take him to follow thee.

That did the latest service to my master.

Ant. This was the noblest Roman of them all:

All the conspirators save only he Did that they did in envy of great Cæsar;

He only, in a general honest thought

And common good to all, made one of them.

His life was gentle, and the elements

So mix'd in him that Nature might stand up

And say to all the world 'This was a man!'

Oct. According to his virtue let us use him,

With all respect and rites of burial.

Within my tent his bones to-night shall lie,

Most like a soldier, order'd honourably.

So call the field to rest; and let's away.

To part the glories of this happy day. [Exeunt.]

SCENE I. A desert place.

thunder and lightning. Enter three Witches.

First Witch. When shall we three meet again thunder, lightning, or in rain?

Sec. Witch. When the hurlyburly's done,
 when the battle's lost and won.

Third Witch. That will be ere the set of sun.

First Witch. Where the place?

Sec. Witch. Upon the heath.

Third Witch. There to meet with Macbeth.

First Witch. I come, Graymalkin!

Sec. Witch. Paddock calls.

Third Witch. Anon.

All. Fair is foul, and foul is fair:
 over through the fog and filthy air. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. A camp near Forres.

larum within. Enter DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DONALBAIN, LENNOX, with Attendants, meeting a bleeding Sergeant.

Dun. What bloody man is that? He can report,
 as seemeth by his plight, of the revolt
 of the newest state.

Mal. This is the sergeant against my captivity. Hail, brave friend!

 say to the king the knowledge of the broil
 as thou didst leave it.

Ser. Doubtful it stood;

As two spent swimmers, that do cling together
 And choke their art. The merciless Macdon-wald—

Worthy to be a rebel, for to that 20
 The multiplying villanies of nature
 Do swarm upon him—from the western isles
 Of kerns and gallowglasses is supplied;
 And fortune, on his damned quarrel smiling,
 Show'd like a rebel's whore: but all's too weak:
 For brave Macbeth—well he deserves that
 name—

Disdaining fortune, with his brandish'd steel,
 Which smok'd with bloody execution,
 Like valour's minion carved out his passage
 Till he faced the slave;
 † Which ne'er shook hands, nor bade farewell to
 him,

Till he unseam'd him from the nave to the chaps,

And fix'd his head upon our battlements.

Dun. O valiant cousin! worthy gentleman!
 Ser. As whence the sun 'gins his reflection Shipwrecking storms and direful thunders
 break,

So from that spring whence comfort seem'd to
 come

Discomfort swells. Mark, king of Scotland, mark:

No sooner justice had with valour arm'd Compell'd these skipping kerns to trust their
 heels,

But the Norwegian lord surveying vantage,
 With furbish'd arms and new supplies of men
 Began a fresh assault.

Dun. Dismay'd not this
 Our captains, Macbeth and Banquo?

Ser. Yes;
As sparrows eagles, or the hare the lion.
If I say sooth, I must report they were
As cannons overcharged with double cracks, so
they
Doubly redoubled strokes upon the foe:
Except they meant to bathe in reeking wounds,
Or memorize another Golgotha, 40
I cannot tell.
But I am faint, my gashes cry for help.
Dun. So well thy words become thee as thy wounds;
They smack of honour both. Go get him surgeons. [Exit Sergeant, attended.]
Who comes here?

Enter Ross.

Mal. The worthythane of Ross.
Len. What a haste looks through his eyes!
So should he look
That seems to speak things strange.
Ross. God save the king!
Dun. Whence camest thou, worthythane?
Ross. From Fife, great king:
Where the Norweyan banners flout the sky
And fan our people cold. Norway himself, 50
With terrible numbers,
Assisted by that most disloyal traitor
Thethane of Cawdor, began a dismal conflict;
Till that Bellona's bridegroom, lapp'd in proof,
Confronted him with self-comparisons,
Point against point rebellious, arm 'gainst arm,
Carving his lavish split: and, to conclude,
The victory fell on us.
Dun. Great happiness!
Ross. That now
Sveno, the Norweyan king, craves composition;
Nor would we deign him burial of his men 60
Till he disbursed at Saint Colme's inch
! thousand dollars to our general use.
No more thatthane of Cawdor shall
live
Our bosom interest: go pronounce his present
death,
And with his former title greet Macbeth.
Ross. I'll see it done.
Dun. What he hath lost noble Macbeth hath won. [Exit.]

SCENE III. A heath near Forres.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

First Witch. Where hast thou been, sister?

Sec. Witch. Killing swine.

Third Witch. Sister, where thou?

First Witch. A sallow's wife had chestnuts in her lap

And munch'd, and munch'd, and munch'd:—
Give me, quoth I:

"Assist thee, witch!" the mump-sid renyan.

And her husband's to Aleppo gone, master o' the troop:

"I'll be a witch," I then said.

"I'll be a witch without a tail,"

And I did so, and I did so.

Sec. Witch. I'll give thee a wind. 70

First Witch. Thou'rt kind.
Third Witch. And I another.
First Witch. I myself have all the other,
And the very ports they blow,
All the quarters that they know
I' the shipman's card.
I will dash him dry as hay:
Sleep shall neither night nor day
Hang upon his pent-house lid;
He shall live a man forbid:
Weary se'nnights nine times nine
Shall he dwindle, peak and pine:
Though his bark cannot be lost,
Yet it shall be tempest-tost.
Look what I have.

Sec. Witch. Show me, show me.
First Witch. Here I have a pilot's thumb, Wreck'd as homeward he did come. [Drum within.]

Third Witch. A drum, a drum! 30
Macbeth doth come.

All. The weird sisters, hand in hand,
Posters of the sea and land,
Thus do go about, about:
Thrice to thine and thrice to mine
And thrice again, to make up nine.
Peace! the charm's wound up.

Enter MACBETH and BANQUO.

Macb. So foul and fair a day I have not seen.

Ban. How far is't call'd to Forres? What are these

So wither'd and so wild in their attire, 40
That look not like the inhabitants o' the earth,
And yet are on't? Live you? or are you aught That man may question? You seem to understand me.

By each at once her choppy finger laying
Upon her skinny lips: you should be women,
And yet your beards forbid me to interpret
That you are so.

Macb. Speak, if you can: what are you?
First Witch. All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee,
thane of Glamis!

Sec. Witch. All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee,
thane of Cawdor!

Third Witch. All hail, Macbeth, that shalt be king hereafter! 50

Ban. Good sir, why do you start; and seem to fear

Things that do sound so fair? 'T' the name of truth,

Are ye fantastical, or that indeed
Which outwardly ye show? My noble partner
You greet with present grace and great prediction

Of noble having and of royal hope,
That he seems rapt withal; to me you speak not.
If you can look into the seeds of time,
And say which grain will grow and which will
not,

Speak then to me, who neither beg nor fear 60
Your favours nor your hate.

First Witch. Hail!

Sec. Witch. Hail!

Third Witch. Hail!

First Witch. Lesser than Macbeth, and greater.

Sec. Witch. Not so happy, yet much happier.

Third Witch. Thou shalt get kings, though thou be none:

So all hail, Macbeth and Banquo!

First Witch. Banquo and Macbeth, all hail!

Macb. Stay, you imperfect speakers, tell me more:

By Sinel's death I know I am thane of Glamis; But how of Cawdor? the thane of Cawdor lives,

A prosperous gentleman; and to be king Stands not within the prospect of belief, No more than to be Cawdor. Say from whence

You owe this strange intelligence? or why Upon this blasted heath you stop our way

With such prophetic greeting? Speak, I charge you.

Ban. The earth hath bubbles, as the water has,

And these are of them. Whither are they vanish'd?

Macb. Into the air; and what seem'd corporal melted

As breath into the wind. Would they had stay'd!

Ban. Were such things here as we do speak about?

Or have we eaten on the insane root That takes the reason prisoner?

Macb. Your children shall be kings.

Ban. You shall be king.

Macb. And thane of Cawdor too: went it not so?

Ban. 'Tis to the selfsame tune and words. Who's here?

Enter ROSS and ANGUS.

Ross. The king hath happily received, Macbeth,

The news of thy success; and when he reads go Thy personal venture in the rebels' fight,

His wonders and his praises do contend Which should be thine or his: silenced with

that,

In viewing o'er the rest o' the selfsame day, He finds thee in the stout Norwegian ranks,

Noting a sword of what thyself didst make, Strange images of death. As thick as hail

Came post with post; and every one did bear Thy praises in his kingdom's great defence,

And pour'd them down before him.

Ang. We are sent to give thee from our royal master thanks;

Only to herald thee into his sight, Not pay thee.

Ross. And, for an earnest of a greater honour,

He bade me, from him, call thee thane of Cawdor;

In which addition, hail, most worthy thane! For it is thine.

Ban. What can the devil speak true?

Macb. The thane of Cawdor lives: why do you dress me

In borrow'd robes?

Ang. Who was the thane lives yet; But under heavy judgement bears that life

Which he deserves to lose. Whither he was combined

With those of Norway, or did fine the rebel With hidden help and vantage, or that with

both

He labour'd in this country's wreck, I know not; But treasons capital, confess'd and proved,

Have overthrown him.

Macb. [Aside] Glamis, and thane of Cawdor! The greatest is behind. [To Ross and Angus]

Thanks for your pains.

To Ban.] Do you not hope your children shall be kings,

When these that gave the thane of Cawdor to me

Promised no less to them?

Ban. That trusted house

Might yet enkindle you unto the crown, Besides the thane of Cawdor. But 'tis strange:

And oftentimes, to win us to our harm, The instruments of darkness tell us truths,

Win us with honest trifles, to betray 's In deepest consequence.

Cousins, a word, I pray you.

Macb. [Aside] Two truths are told, As happy prologues to the swelling act

Of the imperial theme.—I thank you, gentlemen. [Aside] This supernatural soliciting

Cannot be ill, cannot be good: if ill, Why hath it given me earnest of success,

Commencing in a truth? I am thane of Cawdor: If good, why do I yield to that suggestion

Whose horrid image doth unfix my hair And make my seated heart knock at my ribs,

Against the use of nature? Present fears Are less than horrible imaginings:

My thought, whose murder yet is but fantastical, Shakes so my single state of man that function

Is smother'd in surmise, and nothing is But what is not.

Ban. Look, how our partner's eapt.

Macb. [Aside] If chance will have my king, why, chance may crown me,

Without my stir.

Ban. New honours come upon him, Like our strange garments, cleave not to their mould But with the aid of use.

Macb. [Aside] Come what come may, Time and the hour runs through the roughest

day.

Ban. Worthy Macbeth, we stay upon your leisure.

Macb. Give me your favour: my dull brain was wrought

With things forgotten. Kind gentlemen, your pains

Are requit'd where every day I turn. The best is to avoid them. Let us toward the king.

Think upon what I shall command, and, at more times,

The interim having weigh'd it, let us speak. Our free hearts each to other.

Ban. Vouchsafe.

Macb. Till then, enough. Come. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Forres. The palace.

Flourish. Enter DUNGAN, MALCOLM, DONALBAIN, LENNOX, and Attendants.

Dun. Is execution done on Cawdor? Are not
Those in commission yet return'd?

Mal. My liege,
They are not yet come back. But I have spoke
With one that saw him die: who did report
That very frankly he confess'd his treasons,
Implored your highness' pardon and set forth
A deep repentance: nothing in his life
Became him like the leaving it; he died
As one that had been studied in his death
To throw away the dearest thing he owed,
As 'twere a careless trifle.

Dun. There's no art
To find the mind's construction in the face:
He was a gentleman on whom I built
An absolute trust.

Enter MACBETH, BANQUO, ROSS, and ANGUS.

O worthiest cousin!

The sin of my ingratitude even now
Was heavy on me: thou art so far before
That swiftest wing of recompense is slow
To overtake thee. Would thou hadst less deserved,

That the proportion both of thanks and payment

Might have been mine! only I have left to say,
More is thy due than more than all can pay.

Macb. The service and the loyalty I owe,
In doing it, pays itself. Your highness' part
Is to receive our duties; and our duties
Are to your throne and state children and
servants,
Which do but what they should, by doing every thing

Safe toward your love and honour.

Dun. Welcome hither:
I have begun to plant thee, and will labour
To make thee full of growing. Noble Banquo,
That hast no less deserved, nor must be known
No less to have done so, let me infold thee
And hold thee to my heart.

Ban. There if I grow,
The harvest is your own.

Dun. My plenteous joys,
Wanton in fulness, seek to hide themselves
In drops of sorrow. Sons, kinsmen, thanes,
And you whose places are the nearest, know
We will establish our estate upon
Our eldest, Malcolm, whom we name hereafter
The Prince of Cumberland; which honour

must
Not unaccompanied invest him only, 40
But signs of nobleness, like stars, shall shine
On all deservars. From hence to Inverness,
And bind us further to you.

Macb. The rest is labour, which is not used for you:

I'll be myself the harbinger and make joyful
The hearing of my wife with your approach;
So humbly bring my love.

Dun. My worthy Cawdor!

Macb. [Aside] The Prince of Cumberland!
that is a step

On which I must fall down, or else o'erleap,
For in my way it lies. Stars, hide your fires; so
Let not light see my black and deep desires:
The eye wink at the hand; yet let that be,
Which the eye fears, when it is seen, to see.

Dun. True, worthy Banquo; is full so
valiant,
And in his commendations I am
It is a banquet to me. Let's after it,
Whose care is gone before to bid us welcome:
It is a peerless kinsman. [Flourish. Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Inverness. Macbeth's castle.

Enter LADY MACBETH, reading a letter.

Lady M. 'They met me in the day of success; and I have learned by the perfectest report, they have more in them than mortal knowledge. When I burned in desire to question them further, they made themselves air, into which they vanished. Whiles I stood rapt in the wonder of it, came missives from the king, who all-hailed me "Thane of Cawdor;"
by which title, before, these weird sisters saluted me, and referred me to the coming on of time, with "Hail, king that shalt be!" This have I thought good to deliver thee, my dearest partner of greatness, that thou mightst not lose the dues of rejoicing, by being ignorant of what greatness is promised thee. Lay it to thy heart, and farewell.'

Glamis thou art, and Cawdor; and shalt be What thou art promised: yet do I fear thy
nature;

It is too full o' the milk of human kindness
To catch the nearest way: thou wouldst be great;

Art not without ambition, but without
The illness should attend it: what thou wouldst highly,

That wouldst thou holily; wouldst not play
false,

And yet wouldst wrongly win: thou 'dst have,
great Glamis,

That which cries "Thus thou must do, if thou have it;

And that which rather thou dost fear to do Than wishest should be undone." Hie thee
hither,

That I may pour my spirits in thine ear;
And chastise with the valour of my tongue
All that impedes thee from the golden round,
Which fate and metaphysical aid doth seem
To have thee crown'd withal.

Enter a Messenger.

What is your tidings!

Mess. The king comes here to-night.
Lady M. Thou'rt mad to say it:
Is not thy master with him? who, were't so,
Would have inform'd for preparation.

Mess. So please you, it is true: our thane is coming.

One of my fellows had the speed of him,

Who, almost dead for breath, had scarcely more
Than would make up his message.

Lady M. Give him tending;
He brings great news. [Exit Messenger.]

The raven himself is hoarse
That croaks the fatal entrance of Duncan
Under my battlements. Come, you spirits
That tend on mortal thoughts, unsex me here,
And fill me from the crown to the toe top-full (O direst cruelty! make thick my blood;
Stop up the access and passage to remorse,
That no compunctious visitings of nature
Shake my fell purpose, nor keep peace between
The effect and it! Come to my woman's breasts,
And take my milk for gall, you murdering ministers,

Wherever in your sightless substances
You wait on nature's mischief! Come, thick
night,

And pall thee in the dunnest smoke of hell,
That my keen knife see not the wound it makes,
Nor heaven peep through the blanket of the dark,
To cry 'Hold, hold!'

Enter MACBETH.

Great Glamis! worthy Cawdor!
Greater than both, by the all-hail hereafter!
Thy letters have transported me beyond
This ignorant present, and I feel now
The future in the instant.

Macb. My dearest love, 55
Duncan comes here to-night.

Lady M. And when goes hence?
Macb. To-morrow, as he purposes.

Lady M. O, never Shall sun that morrow see!
Your face, my thane, is as a book where men
May read strange matters. To beguile the time,
Look like the time; bear welcome in your eye,
Your hand, your tongue: look like the innocent
flower,

But be the serpent under 't. He that's coming Must be provided for; and you shall put
This night's great business into my dispatch;
Which shall to all our nights and days to come
Give solely sovereign sway and masterdom. 72

Macb. We will speak further.
Lady M. Only look up clear;
To alter favour ever is to fear:
Leave all the rest to me. [Exit Macb.]

SCENE VI. Before Macbeth's castle.

Hautboys and torches. Enter DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DONALBAIN, BANQUO, LENNOX, MACDUFF, ROSS, ANGUS, and Attendants.

Dun. This castle hath a pleasant seat; the air
Nimble and sweetly recommends itself
Unto our gentle senses.

Ban. This guest of summer,
The temple-haunting martlet, does approve,
By his loved mansionry, that the heaven's
breath
Smells wooingly here: no jutty, frieze,

Buttress, nor coign of vantage, but this bird
Hath made his pendent bed and procurant cradle:

Where they most breed and haunt, I have observed,
The air is delicate.

Enter LADY MACBETH.

Dun. See, see, our honour'd hostess! so
The love that follows us sometimes is our trouble,
Which still we thank as love. Herein I teach you
How you shall bid God 'ild us for your pains,
And thank us for your trouble.

Lady M. All our service
In every point twice done and then done double

Were poor and single business to contend Against those honours deep and broad wherewith

Your majesty loads our house: for those of old,
And the late dignities heap'd up to them,
We rest your hermits.

Dun. Where's the thane of Cawdor? so
We coursed him at the heels, and had a purpose
To be his purveyor: but he rides well;
And his great love, sharp as his spur, hath hold
him

To his home before us. Fair and noble hostess,
We are your guest to-night.

Lady M. Your servants ever Have their, themselves and what is theirs, in command,

To make their audit at your highness' pleasure,
Still to return your own.

Dun. Give me your hand:
Conduct me to mine host: we love him highly.
And shall continue our graces towards him. 30
By your leave, hostess. [Exit Macb.]

SCENE VII. Macbeth's castle.

Hautboys and torches. Enter a Sewer, and divers Servants with dishes and services, and pass over the stage. Then enter MACBETH.

Macb. If it were done when 'tis done, then
'twere well

It were done quickly: if the assassination
Could trammel up the consequence, and catch
With his surcease success; that but this blow
Might be the be-all and the end-all here,
But here, upon this bank and shoal of time,
We'd jump the life to come. But in these

We still have judgement here; that we but teach

Bloody instructions, which, being taught, return

To plague the inventor: this even-handed justice

Commends the ingredients of our poison'd chalice

To our own lips. He's here in double trust:
First, as I am his kinsman and his subject,

Strong both against the deed; then, as his host,
Who should against his murderer shut the door,
Not bear the knife myself. Enter LADY MACBETH.

Duncan

In seeking to augment it, but still keep
My bosom franchis'd and allegiance clear,
I shall be counsell'd.

Macb. Good repose the while!

Ban. Thanks, sir: the like to you! 30
[Exeunt Banquo and Fleance.]

Macb. Go bid thy mistress, when my drink is ready,
She strike upon the bell. Get thee to bed.

[Exit Servant.]

Is this a dagger which I see before me,
The handle toward my hand? Come, let me clutch thee.

I have thee not, and yet I see thee still.
Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible
To feeling as to sight? or art thou but
A dagger of the mind, a false creation,
Proceeding from the heat-oppressed brain?
I see thee yet, in form as palpable 40
As this which now I draw.
Thou marshall'st me the way that I was going;
And such an instrument I was to use.
Mine eyes are made the fools o' the other senses,

Or else worth all the rest; I see thee still,
And on thy blade and dudgeon gouts of blood,
Which was not so before. There's no such thing;

It is the bloody business which informs Thus to mine eyes. Now o'er the one half-
world

Nature seems dead, and wicked dreams abuse
The curtain'd sleep; witchcraft celebrates 51
Pale Hecate's offerings, and wither'd murder,
Alarm'd by his sentinel, the wolf,
Whose howl's his watch, thus with his stealthy
pace,

With Tarquin's ravishing strides, towards his design

Moves like a ghost. Thou sure and firm-set
earth,

Hear not my steps, which way they walk, for
fear

Thy very stones prate of my wharabout,
And take the present horror from the time,
Which now suits with it. Whiles I threat, he lives: 60

Words to the heat of deeds too cold breath gives. [A bell rings.]

I go, and it is done; the bell invites me.
Hear it not, Duncan; for it is a knell
That summons thee to heaven or to hell. [Exit.]

SCENE II. The same.

Enter LADY MACBETH.

Lady M. That which hath made them drunk hath made me bold;

What hath quenched them hath given me fire.
Hark! Peace!

It was the owl that shriek'd, the fatal bellman,
Which gives the stern'st good-night. He is about it;

The doors are open; and the surfeited grooms
Do mock their charge with snores: I have drugg'd their senses,

That death and nature do contend about them;

Whether they live or die.

Macb. [Within] Who's there? what, ho!
Lady M. Alack, I am afraid they have awaken'd,

And 'tis not done. The attempt and not the deed

Confounds us. Hark! I laid their daggers
ready;

He could not miss 'em. Had he not resembled
My father as he slept, I had done 't.

Enter MACBETH.

Macb. I have done the deed. My husband!
not hear a noise!

Lady M. I heard the owl scream and the crickets cry.

Did not you speak?

Macb. When?

Lady M. Now.

Macb. As I descended!

Lady M. Ay.

Macb. Hark!

Who lies i' the second chamber? 20
Lady M. Donalbain.

Macb. This is a sorry sight.

[Looking on his hands.]
Lady M. A foolish thought, to say a sorry sight.

Macb. There's one did laugh in's sleep, and one cried 'Murder!'

That they did wake each other: I stood and heard them;
But they did say their prayers, and address'd
them

Again to sleep.

Lady M. There are two lodged together.

Macb. One cried 'God bless us!' and 'Amen' the other;
As they had seen me with these hangman's
hands.

Listening their fear, I could not say 'Amen,'
When they did say 'God bless us!'

Lady M. Consider it not so deeply. 30
Macb. But wherefore could not I pronounce
'Amen'?

I had most need of blessing, and 'Amen'
Stuck in my throat.

Lady M. These deeds must not be thought
After these ways; so, it will make us mad.

Macb. Methought I heard a voice cry 'Sleep
no more!'

Macbeth does murder sleep, the innocent sleep,
Sleep that knits up the ravell'd sleeve of care,
The death of each day's life, sore labour's bath,
Balm of hurt minds, great nature's second
course,

Chief nourisher in life's feast:—

Lady M. What do you mean?

Macb. Still it cried 'Sleep no more!' in all the houses:

'Glamis hath murder'd sleep, and therefore Cawdor

Shall sleep no more; Macbeth shall sleep no
more.'

Lady M. Who was it that thus cried? Why,
murder's shadows,

Now do unband your noble strength, to sleep

So brainlessly of things. Go get some water,
And wash this filthy witness from your hand.
Why did you bring these daggers from the
place?

They must lie there: go carry them; and sneak

The sleepy grooms with blood.

Macb. I'll go no more: so
I am afraid to think what I have done;
Look on't again I dare not.

Lady M. Infirm of purpose!
Give me the daggers: the sleeping and the
dead

Are but as pictures: 'tis the eye of childhood
That fears a painted devil. If he do bleed,
I'll gild the faces of the grooms withal;
For it must seem their guilt.

[Exit. Knocking within.]
Macb. Whence is that knocking?
How is it with me, when every noise appals me?
What hands are here? ha! they pluck out mine
eyes.

Will all great Neptune's ocean wash this blood Clean from my hand? No, this my hand will rather
The multitudinous seas incarnadine,
Making the green one red.

Re-enter LADY MACBETH.

Lady M. My hands are of your colour; but I shame

To wear a heart so white. [Knocking within.]
I hear a knocking

At the south entry: retire we to our chamber:
A little water clears us of this deed:
How easy is it, then! Your constancy Hath left you unattended. [Knocking within.]

Hark! more knocking.
Get on your nightgown, lest occasion call us, so
And show us to be watchers. Be not lost
So poorly in your thoughts.

Macb. To know my deed, 'twere best not know myself. [Knocking within.] Wake Duncan with thy knocking! I would thou couldst! [Exit.]

SCENE III. The same.

Knocking within. Enter a Porter.

Porter. Here's a knocking indeed! If a man were porter of hell-gate, he should have old turning the key. [Knocking within.] Knock, knock, knock! Who's there, i' the name of Beelzebub? Here's a farmer, that hanged himself on the expectation of plenty:
come in time; have napkins enow about you;
here you'll sweat for't. [Knocking within.]
Knock, knock! Who's there, in the other devil's name? Faith, here's an equivocator, that could swear in both the scales against either scale; who committed treason enough for God's sake, yet could not equivocate to heaven: O, come in, equivocator. [Knocking within.] Knock, knock, knock! Who's there?
Faith, here's an English tailor come hither, for working out of a French hose: come in, tailor; here you may roast your goose. [Knocking within.] Knock, knock; never at quiet!

What are you? But this place is too cold for hell. I'll devil-porter it no further: I had thought to have let in some of all professions that go the primrose way to the everlasting bonfire. [Knocking within.] Anon, anon! I pray you, remember the porter.

[Opens the gate.]

Enter MACDUFF and LENNOX.

Macd. Was it so late, friend, ere you went to bed?

Port. Faith, sir, we were carousing till the second cock: and drink, sir, is a great provoker of three things.

Macd. What three things does drink especially provoke?

Port. Marry, sir, nose-painting, sleep, and urine. Lechery, sir, it provokes, and unprovokes; it provokes the desire, but it takes away the performance: therefore, much drink may be said to be an equivocator with lechery:
it makes him, and it mars him; it sets him on,
and it takes him off; it persuades him, and disheartens him; makes him stand to, and not stand to; in conclusion, equivocates him in a sleep, and, giving him the lie, leaves him.

Macd. I believe drink gave thee the lie last
night.

Port. That it did, sir, i' the very throat on me: but I requited him for his lie; and, I think, being too strong for him, though he took up my legs sometime, yet I made a shift to cast him.

Macd. Is thy master stirring?

Enter MACBETH.

Our knocking has awaked him; here he comes.

Len. Good morrow, noble sir.

Macb. Good morrow, both.

Murd. Is the king stirring, worthy thane?

Macb. Not yet.

Macd. He did command me to call timely
on him:

I have almost slipp'd the hour.

Macb. I'll bring you to him.

Macd. I know this is a joyful trouble to
you;

But yet 'tis one.

Macb. The labour we delight in physics pain.

This is the door.

Macd. I'll make so bold to call.

For 'tis my limited service. [Exit.]

Len. Goes the king hence to-day?

Macb. He does: he did appoint so.

Len. The night has been unruly: where we lay,
Our chimneys were blown down; and, as they
say,
Lamentings heard i' the air; strange screams
of death,
And prophesying with accents terrible
Of dire combustion and confused events
New hatch'd to the woeful time: the obscure
bird
Clamour'd the livelong night: some say, the earth

Was feverous and did shake.

Macb. 'Twas a rough night.
Len. My young remembrance cannot parallel
A fellow to it.

Re-enter MACDUFF.

Macd. O horror, horror, horror! Tongue nor heart
Cannot conceive nor name thee!

Macb. } What's the matter?
Len. }

Macd. Confusion now hath made his masterpiece!

Most sacrilegious murder hath broke ope
The Lord's anointed temple, and stole thence
The life o' the building!

Macb. What is't you say? the life?
Len. Mean you his majesty?

Macd. Approach the chamber, and destroy your sight

With a new Gorgon: do not bid me speak;
See, and then speak yourselves.

[Exeunt Macbeth and Lennox.

Awake, awake!
Ring the alarm-bell. Murder and treason!
Banquo and Donalbain! Malcolm! awake! So
Shake off this downy sleep, death's counterfeit,
And look on death itself! up, up, and see
The great doom's image! Malcolm! Banquo!
As from your graves rise up, and walk like sprites,

To countenance this horror! Ring the bell.
[Bell rings.

Enter LADY MACBETH.

Lady M. What's the business,
That such a hideous trumpet calls to parley
The sleepers of the house? speak, speak!

Macd. O gentle lady,
This not for you to hear what I can speak:
The repetition, in a woman's ear,
Would murder as it fell.

Enter BANQUO.

O Banquo, Banquo,
Our royal master's murder'd!

Lady M. Woe, alas!
What, in our house?

Ban. Too cruel any where.
Dear Duff, I prithee, contradict thyself,
And say it is not so.

Re-enter MACBETH and LENNOX, with ROSS.

Macb. Had I but died an hour before this chance,
I had lived a blessed time; for, from this
instant,

There's nothing serious in mortality:
All is but toys: renown and grace is dead;
The wine of life is drawn, and the mere lees
Is left this vault to brag of.

Enter MALCOLM and DONALBAIN.

Don. What is a misis?

Macb. You are, and do not know't.
The spring, the head, the fountain of your
blood
Is stopp'd; the very source of it is stopp'd.
Macd. Your royal father's murdered.

Mal. O, by whom!

Len. Those of his chamber, as it seem'd, had done't:
Their hands and faces were all badged with
blood;

So were their daggers, which unwiped we found
Upon their pillows:

They stared, and were distracted; no man's
life

Was to be trusted with them.

Macb. O, yet I do repent me of my fury,
That I did kill them.

Macd. Wherefore did you so?
Macb. Who can be wise, amazed, temperate and furious,

Loyal and neutral, in a moment? No man:
The expedition of my violent love

Outrun the pauser, reason. Here lay Duncan,
His silver skin laced with his golden blood;

And his ghast'd stabs look'd like a breach in nature

For ruin's wasteful entrance: there, the murderers,

Steep'd in the colours of their trade, their daggers

Unmannerly breech'd with gore: who could refrain,

That had a heart to love, and in that heart
Courage to make 's love known!

Lady M. Help me hence, ho!

Macd. Look to the lady.
Mal. [Aside to Don.] Why do we hold our
tongues,

That most may claim this argument for ours?
Don. [Aside to Mal.] What should be spoken
here, where our fate,

Hid in an auger-hole, may rush, and seize us!
Let's away:

Our tears are not yet brew'd.

Mal. [Aside to Don.] Nor our strong sorrow
Upon the foot of motion.

Ban. Look to the lady: 33
[Lady Macbeth is carried out.

And when we have our naked frailties hid,
That suffer in exposure, let us meet,

And question this most bloody piece of work,
To know it further. Fears and scruples shake

us:
In the great hand of God I stand; and thence Against the undivulged pretence I fight

Of treasonous malice.

Macd. And so do I.

All. So all.

Macb. Let's briefly put on manly readiness,
And meet i' the hall together.

All. Well contented.
[Exeunt all but Malcolm and Donalbain.

Mal. What will you do? Let's not consort with them: 34

To show an unfeilt sorrow is an office
Which the false man does easy. I'll to England.

Don. To Ireland, I: our separated fortunes Shall keep us both the safer: where we are,

There's daggers in men's smiles: the near in
blood,

The nearer bloody.

Mal. This murderous shaft that's shot
Hath not yet lighted, and our safest way

Is to avoid the aim. Therefore, to horse;
And let us not be dainty of leave-taking. 30
But shift away: there's warrant in that theft
Which steals itself, when there's no mercy left.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Outside Macbeth's castle.

Enter ROSS and an old Man.

Old M. Threescore and ten I can remember
well:
Within the volume of which time I have seen Hours dreadful and things strange; but this sore night
Hath trifled former knowings.

Ross. Ah, good father,
Thou seest, the heavens, as troubled with man's
act,
Threaten his bloody stage: by the clock, 'tis
day,
And yet dark night strangles the travelling lamp;
Is't night's predominance, or the day's shame,
That darkness does the face of earth entomb,
When living light should kiss it?

Old M. 'Tis unnatural, 10
Even like the deed that's done. On Tuesday
last,
A falcon, towering in her pride of place,
Was by a mousing owl hawk'd at and kill'd.

Ross. And Duncan's horses—a thing most strange and certain—
Beauteous and swift, the minions of their race, Turn'd wild in nature, broke their stalls, flung
out,
Contending 'gainst obedience, as they would make
War with mankind.

Old M. 'Tis said they eat each other.
Ross. They did so, to the amazement of mine eyes
That look'd upon't. Here comes the good Macduff. 20

Enter MACDUFF.

How goes the world, sir, now?

Macd. Why, see you not?
Ross. Is't known who did this more than bloody deed?

Macd. Those that Macbeth hath slain.
Ross. Alas, the day!
What good could they pretend?

Macd. They were suborn'd:
Macbeth and Donalbain, the king's two sons,
Are stol'n away and fled; which puts upon
them
Suspicion of the deed.

Ross. 'Gainst nature still!
Treasonous ambition, that will ravin untamed life's means! Then 'tis most like
The sovereignty will fall upon Macbeth. 30
Macd. He is already mangled, and gone to Dunmowrie.

Ross. Where is Duncan's body?
Macd. Carried to Colmekill,
Thenceforth to be interred;
And gentlemen of their houses.

Ross. Will you to Secon?
Macd. No, cousin, I'll to Fife.

Ross. Well, I will thither.
Macd. Well, may you see things well done
there: adieu!

Let our old robes sit easier than our new!
Ross. Farewell, father.

Old M. God's benison go with you; and with those
That would make good of bad, and friends of foes! [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I. Forres. The palace.

Enter BANQUO.

Ban. Thou hast it now: king, Cawdor, (Glamis, all,
As the weird women promised, and, I fear, Thou play'st most foully for't: yet it was
said

It should not stand in thy posterity,
But that myself should be the root and father
Of many kings. If there come truth from
them—

As upon thee, Macbeth, their speeches shine—
Why, by the verities on thee made good,
May they not be my oracles as well,
And set me up in hope? But hush! no more. 10

Sennet sounded. Enter MACBETH, as king,
LADY MACBETH, as queen, LENNOX, ROSS,
Lords, Ladies, and Attendants.

Macb. Here's our chief guest.
Lady M. If he had been forgotten,
It had been as a gap in our great feast,
And all thing unbecoming.

Macb. To-night we hold a solemn supper,
sir,
And I'll request your presence.

Ban. Let your highness
Command upon me; to the which my duties
Are with a most indissoluble tie
For ever knit.

Macb. Bide you this afternoon!
Ban. Ay, my good lord.
Macb. We should have else desired your good advice.

Which still hath been both grave and prosperous
In this day's council; but we'll take to-morrow.
Is't far you ride?

Ban. As far, my lord, as will fill up the
time
'Twixt this and supper: go not my horse the
better,

I must become a borrower of the night
For a dark hour or twain.

Macb. Fail not our feast.
Ban. My lord, I will not.

Macb. We hear, our bloody cousins are bestow'd 30

In England and in Ireland, not confessing
Their cruel parricide, filling their hearers
With strange invention: but of that to-morrow.
When thereunto we shall have cause of state
Craving us jointly. Hie you to horse: adieu.

Till you return at night. Goad Fleance with you!

Ban. Ay, my good lord: our time does call upon 't.

Macb. I wish your horses swift and sure of foot;

And so I do commend you to their backs. Farewell.

[Exit Banquo. 40
Let every man be master of his time
Till seven at night: to make society
The sweeter welcome, we will keep ourself Till supper-time alone: while then, God be
with you!

[Exit all but Macbeth, and an attendant.
Sirrah, a word with you: attend those men
Our pleasure?

Atten. They are, my lord, without the palace gate.

Macb. Bring them before us.

[Exit Attendant.
To be thus is nothing;

But to be safely thus.—Our fears in Banquo
Stick deep; and in his royalty of nature
Reigns that which would be fear'd: 'tis much he dares;

And, to that dauntless temper of his mind,
He hath a wisdom that doth guide his valour
To act in safety. There is none but he Whose being I do fear: and, under him,
My Genius is rebuked; as, it is said, Mark Antony's was by Cæsar. He chid the sisters

When first they put the name of king upon me,
And bade them speak to him: then prophet-
like

They hail'd him father to a line of kings: 60
Upon my head they placed a fruitless crown,
And put a barren sceptre in my gripe,
Thence to be wrench'd with an unlineal hand,
No son of mine succeeding. If 't be so,
For Banquo's issue have I filed my mind;
For them the gracious Duncan have I murder'd;
Put rancours in the vessel of my peace
Only for them; and mine eternal jewel
Given to the common enemy of man,
To make them kings, the seed of Banquo
kings! 70

Rather than so, come fate into the list,
And champion me to the utterance! Who's there!

Re-enter Attendant, with two Murderers.
Now go to the door, and stay there till we call.

[Exit Attendant.
Was it not yesterday we spoke together!

First Mur. It was, so please your highness.

Macb. Well then, now
Have you consider'd of my speeches? Know
That it was he in the times past which held you
So under fortune, which you thought had been
Our innocent self: this I made good to you
In our last conference, pass'd in probation with
you, 80

How you were borne in hand, how cross'd, the instruments,

Who wrought with them, and all things else
That might

To half a soul and to a notion crazed

Say 'Thus did Banquo.'

First Mur. You made it known to us.

Macb. I did so, and went further, which is now

Our point of second meeting. Do you find
Your patience so predominant in your nature
That you can let this go? Are you so gospell'd
To pray for this good man and for his issue,
Whose heavy hand hath bow'd you to the grave
And beggar'd yours for ever?

First Mur. We are men, my liege. 90

Macb. Ay, in the catalogue ye go for men;
As hounds and greyhounds, mongrels, spaniels,
curs,

Shoughs, water-rugs and demi-wolves are clept
All by the name of dogs: the valued file
Distinguishes the swift, the slow, the subtle,
The housekeeper, the hunter, every one
According to the gift which bounteous nature
Hath in him closed, whereby he does receive Particular addition from the hill 100

That writes them all alike; and so of men.
Now, if you have a station in the file,
Not 't the worst rank of manhood, say 't;

And I will put that business in your bosoms,
Whose execution takes your enemy off,
Grapples you to the heart and love of us,
Who wear our health but sickly in his life,
Which in his death were perfect.

Sec. Mur. I am one, my liege.

Whom the vile blows and buffets of the world
Have so incensed that I am reckless what 110
I do to spite the world.

First Mur. And I another
So weary with disasters, tugg'd with fortune,
That I would set my life on any chance,
To mend it, or be rid on 't.

Macb. Both of you
Know Banquo was your enemy.

Both Mur. True, my lord.

Macb. So is he mine; and in such bloody distance,

That every minute of his being thrusts
Against my near'st of life: and though I could With baseness power sweep him from any sight

And bid my will avouch it, yet I must not, 120
For certain friends that are both his and mine,
Whose loves I may not drop, but wail his fall
Who I myself struck down; and thence it is,
That I to your assistance do make love,
Masking the business from the common eye.
For sundry weighty reasons.

Sec. Mur. We shall, my lord.

Perform what you command us.

First Mur. Though our lives—

Macb. Your spirits shine through you.

Within this hour at most

I will advise you where to plant yourselves;
Acquaint you with the perfect 'r of this time,
The moment on 't; for 't must be done to-night.
And something from the palace; always
thought

That I require a clearness; and with him
To leave no rub nor botch in the work—
Fleance his son, that keeps him company,
Whose absence is no less material to me
Than in his father's, must embrace the fate

Of that dark hour. Resolve yourselves apart:
I'll come to you anon.

Both Mur. We are resolved, my lord.

Macb. I'll call upon you straight: abide within. [Exit Murderers. 140

It is concluded. Banquo, thy soul's flight,
If it find heaven, must find it out to-night.

[Exit.]

SCENE II. The palace.

Enter LADY MACBETH and a Servant.

Lady M. Is Banquo gone from court?

Serv. Ay, madam, but returns again to-
night.

Lady M. Say to the king, I would attend his leisure

For a few words.

Serv. Madam, I will. [Exit.]

Lady M. Nought's had, all's spent,

Where our desire is got without content:

This safer to be that which we destroy

Than by destruction dwell in doubtful joy.

Enter MACBETH.

How now, my lord! why do you keep alone,
Of sorriest fancies your companions making,
Using those thoughts which should indeed have died

With them they think on? Things without all remedy

Should be without regard: what's done is
done.

Macb. We have scotch'd the snake, not kill'd it:

She'll close and be herself, whilst our poor
malice

Remains in danger of her former tooth.

But let the frame of things disjoint, both the worlds suffer,

Ere we will eat our meal in fear and sleep

In the affliction of these terrible dreams

That shake us nightly: better be with the
dead,

Whom we, to gain our peace, have sent to
peace. 20

Than on the torture of the mind to lie

In restless ecstasy. Duncan is in his grave;

After life's fitful fever he sleeps well;

Treason has done his worst: nor steel, nor

poison,

Malice domestic, foreign levy, nothing,

Can touch him further.

Lady M. Come on;

Gentle my lord, sleek o'er your rugged looks;

Be bright and jovial among your guests to-
night.

Macb. So shall I, love; and so, I pray, be
you:

Let your remembrance apply to Banquo;

Present him eminence, both with eye and
tongue:

† Unsafe the while, that we Must leave our honours in these flattering circumstances,

I make our faces vizards to our hearts,

What they are.

You must leave this.

Macb. O, full of scorpions is my mind,
dear wife!

Thou know'st that Banquo, and his Fleance,
lives.

Lady M. But in them nature's copy's not eternae.

Macb. There's comfort yet; they are ansail-
able;

Then be thou jocund: ere the bat hath flown
His cloister'd flight, ere to black Fleecate's summons

The shard-borne beetle with his drowsy hums 41
Hath rung night's yawning peal, there shall be
done

A deed of dreadful note.

Lady M. What's to be done?

Macb. Be innocent of the knowledge, dearest
chuck,

Till thou applaud the deed. Come, seeling
night,

Scarf up the tender eye of pitiful day;

And with thy bloody and invisible hand
Cancel and tear to pieces that great bond

Which keeps me pale! Light thickens; and the crow 5

Makes wing to the rooky wood:

Good things of day begin to droop and drowse
Whilst night's black agents to their preys do rouse.

Thou marvell'st at my words: but hold thee
still:

Things had begun make strong themselves by ill
So, prithee, go with me. [Exit.]

SCENE III. A park near the palace.

Enter three Murderers.

First Mur. But who did bid thee join with us?

Third Mur. Macbeth.

Sec. Mur. He needs not our mistrust, since he delivers

Our offices and what we have to do
To the direction just.

First Mur. Then stand with us.

The west yet glimmers with some streaks of
day:

Now spurs the late traveller apace
To gain the timely inn; and near approaches

The subject of our watch.

Third Mur. Hark! I hear horses.

Ban. [Within.] Give us a light there, ho!

Sec. Mur. Then 'tis he: the rest
Already are 't the court.

First Mur. His horses go about.

Third Mur. Almost a mile: but he does usually,

So all men do, from hence to the palace gate
Make it their walk.

Sec. Mur. A light, a light!

Enter BANQUO, and FLEANCE with a torch.

Third Mur. 'Tis he.

Ban. It will be rain to-night.

First Mur. Let it come down.
[They set upon Banquo.]

Ban. O, treachery! Fly, good Fleance, fly, fly, fly!
Thou mayst revenge. O slave!

[Dies. Fleance escapes.]

Third Mur. Who did strike out the light?

First Mur. Was't not the way?

Third Mur. There's but one down; the son is fled.

Sec. Mur. We have lost
Best half of our affair.

First Mur. Well, let's away, and say how much is done. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. The same. Hall in the palace.

A banquet prepared. Enter MACBETH, LADY MACBETH, ROSS, LENNOX, Lords, and Attendants.

Macb. You know your own degrees; sit down; at first
And last the hearty welcome.

Lords. Thanks to your majesty.

Macb. Ourselves will mingle with society,
And play the humble host.

Our hostess keeps her state, but in best time
We will require her welcome.

Lady M. Pronounce it for me, sir, to all our friends;

For my heart speaks they are welcome.

First Murderer appears at the door.

Macb. See, they encounter thee with their hearts' thanks.

Both sides are even: here I'll sit i' the midst:
Be large in mirth; anon we'll drink a measure

The table round. [Approaching the door.]
There's blood upon thy face.

Mur. 'Tis Banquo's then.

Macb. 'Tis better thee without than he within.

Is he dispatch'd?

Mur. My lord, his throat is cut; that I did
for him.

Macb. Thou art the best o' the cut-throats yet he's good

That did the like for Fleance: if thou didst it,
Thou art the nonpareil.

Mur. Most royal sir,
Fleance is 'scaped.

Macb. Then comes my fit again: I had else been perfect,

Whole as the marble, founded as the rock,
As broad and general as the casing air:

But now I am cabin'd, cribb'd, confined,
bound in

To saucy doubts and fears. But Banquo's safe!

Mur. Ay, my good lord: safe in a ditch he
dies,

With twenty trenched gashes on his head;
The least a death to nature.

Macb. Thanks for that There the grown serpent lies; the worm that's fled

Hath nature that in time will venom breed,
No teeth for the present. Get thee gone: tomorrow

We'll hear, ourselves, again. [Exit Murderer.]

Lady M. My royal lord,
You do not give the cheer: the feast is sold

That is not often vouch'd, while 'tis a-making,
'Tis given with welcome: to feed were best at

home;
From thence the sauce to meat is ceremony;
Meeting were bare without it.

Macb. Sweet remembrance!
Now, good digestion wait on appetite,
And health on both!

Len. May't please your highness sit.

[The Ghost of Banquo enters, and sits in Macbeth's place.]

Macb. Here had we now our country's honour roof'd,

Were the grac'd person of our Banquo present;
Who may I rather challenge for unkindness
Than pity for mischance!

Ross. His absence, sir,

Lays blame upon his promise. Please't your highness

To grace us with your royal company.

Macb. The table's full.

Len. Here is a place reserved, sir.

Macb. Where?

Len. Here, my good lord. What is't that moves your highness?

Macb. Which of you have done this?

Lords. What, my good lord?

Macb. Thou canst not say I did it: never shake

Thy gory locks at me.

Ross. Gentlemen rise; his highness is not
well.

Lady M. Sit, worthy friends: my lord is often thus,

And hath been from his youth: pray you, keep
seat;

The fit is momentary; upon a thought
He will again be well: if much you note him,

You shall offend him and extend his passion:
Feed, and regard him not. Are you a man?

Macb. Ay, and a bold one, that dare look on
that

Which might appal the devil.

Lady M. O proper stuff! 60
This is the very painting of your fear:

This is the air-drawn dagger which, you said,
Led you to Duncan. O, these faws and starts,

Impostors to true fear, would well become
A woman's story at a winter's fire,

Authorised by her grandam. Shame itself!
Why do you make such faces? When all's

done,
You look but on a stool.

Macb. Prithee, see there! behold! look! lo!
how say you!

Why, what care I! If thou canst nod, speak
too.

If charnel-houses and our graves must send
Those that we bury back, our monuments

Shall be the maws of kites. [Ghost vanishes.]

Lady M. What, quite unmann'd in folly?

Macb. If I stand here, I saw him.

Lady M. Fie, for shame!

Macb. Blood hath been shed ere now, f' the olden time,

Ere humane statute purged the gentle weal;

Ay, and since too, murders have been performed
 Too terrible for the ear: the time has been,
 That, when the brains were out, the man would
 die,
 And these men end; but now they rise again, so
 With twenty mortal murders on their crowns,
 And push us from our stools: this is more

Than such a murder is.
Lady M. My worthy lord,
 Your noble friends do lack you.

*Do not muse at me, my most worthy friends;
I have a strange infirmity, which is nothing
To those that know me. Come, love and health
to all:*

Then I'll sit down. Give me some wine; fill full.

I drink to the general joy o' the whole table,
And to our dear friend Banquo, whom we miss: go

Would he were here! to all, and him, we thirst,
And all to all.

Lords. Our duties, and the pledge.

Re-enter Ghost.

Mach. Awaunt! and quit my sight! let the earth hide thee!

Thy bones are marrowless, thy blood is cold ;
Thou hast no speculation in those eyes
Which thou dost glare with !

Lady M. Think of this, good peers,
But as a thing of custom: 'tis no other;
Only it smoothes the pleasure of the time.

Mech. What man dare, I dare: 99

Approach thou like the rugged Russian bear,
The arm'd rhinoceros, or the Hyrcan tiger;
Take any shape but that, and my firm nerves
Shall never tremble; or be alive again,

And dare me to the desert with thy sword ;
 † If trembling I inhabit then, protest me
 The baby of a girl. Hence, horrible shadow !
 Unreal mockery, hence ! [Ghost vanishes.]

Why, so: being gone,
I am a man again. Pray you, sit still.

Lady M. You have displaced the mirth,
 Make the good meeting,
 With most admired disorder.

And everyone as like a summer's cloud,
Without our special wonder! You make me
strange

Even to the disposition that I owe,
When now I think you can behold such sights
And keep the natural ruby of your cheeks,
When mine is blanch'd with fear.

What sights, my lord

Lady M. I pray you, speak not; he grows worse and worse:

Question narrows him. At once, good night:
Standing upon the order of your going.

But go at once.

Adieu, his majesty! A kind good night to all!

Shall draw him on to his confusion:
He shall spurn fate, scorn death, and bear
His hopes 'bove wisdom, grace and fear:
And you all know, security
Is mortal's chiefest enemy.

[Music and a song within: 'Come away,
come away,' &c.]

Hark! I can tell'd; my little spirit, see,
Sits in a foggy cloud, and stays for me. [Exit.
First Witch. Come, let's make haste; she'll soon be back again. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI. Ferres. The palace.

Enter LENNOX and another Lord.

Len. My former speeches have but hit your
thoughts,
Which can interpret further: only, I say,
Things have been strangely borne. The gracious
Duncan

Was piked of Macbeth: marry, he was dead:
And the right-valiant Banquo walk'd too late;
Whom, you may say, if't please you, Fleance
kill'd.

For Fleance fled: men must not walk too late.
Who cannot want the thought how monstrous
It was for Malcolm and for Donalbain
To kill their gracious father! damned fact! 10
How it did grieve Macbeth! did he not straight
In pious rage the two delinquents tear,
That were the slaves of drink and thralls of
sleep?

Was not that nobly done? Ay, and wisely too;
For 'twould have anger'd any heart alive
To hear the men deny't. So that, I say,
He has borne all things well: and I do think
That had he Duncan's sons under his key—As, an't please heaven, he shall not—they should find

What 'twere to kill a father; so should Fleance.
But, peace! for from broad words and 'cause he faid 21

His presence at the tyrant's feast, I hear
Macduff lives in disgrace: sir, can you tell
Where he bestows himself?

Lord. The son of Duncan,
From whom this tyrant holds the due of birth,
Lives in the English court, and is received
Of the most pious Edward with such grace
That the malevolence of fortune nothing
Takes from his high respect: thither Macduff
Is gone to pray the holy king, upon his aid 30
To wake Northumberland and warlike Siward:
That, by the help of these—with him above
To ratify the work—we may again
Give to our tables meat, sleep to our nights,
Free from our feasts and banquets bloody
knives.

Do faithful homage and receive free honours:
All which we pine for now: and this report
Hath so exasperate the king that he Prepares for some attempt of war.

Len. Sent he to Macduff?
Lord. He did: and with an absolute 'Sir, not I' 40

The cloudy messenger turns me his back,
And hums, as who should say 'You'll rue the
time

That clogs me with this answer.'

Len. And that well might Advise him to a caution, to hold what distance
His wisdom can provide. Some holy angel
Fly to the court of England and unfold
His message ere he come, that a swift blessing
May soon return to this our suffering country
Under a hand accursed!

Lord. I'll send my prayers with him.
[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I. A cavern. In the middle, a boiling cauldron.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

First Witch. Thrice the brinded cat hath
mew'd.

Sec. Witch. Thrice and once the hedge-pig whined.

Third Witch. Harpier cries 'Tis time, 'tis
time.

First Witch. Round about the cauldron go;

In the poison'd entrails throw.

† Toad, that under cold stone

Days and nights has thirty one

Swelter'd venom sleeping got,

Boil thou first! 't the charmed pot.

All. Double, double toil and trouble; 10

Fire burn, and cauldron bubble.

Sec. Witch. Fillet of a fenny snake,

In the cauldron boil and bake;

Eye of newt and toe of frog,

Wool of bat and tongue of dog,

Adder's fork and blind-worm's sting,

Lizard's leg and howlet's wing,

For a charm of powerful trouble,

Like a hell-broth boil and bubble.

All. Double, double toil and trouble; 20

Fire burn and cauldron bubble.

Third Witch. Scale of dragon, tooth of

wolf,

Witches' mummy, maw and gulf

Of the ravin'd salt-sea shark,

Root of hemlock dig'd i' the dark,

Liver of blaspheming Jew,

Gall of goat, and slips of yew

Silver'd in the moon's celline,

Nose of Turk and Tartar's lips,

Finger of birth-strangled babe

Disch-deliver'd by a dumb 30

Make the gruel thick and slab:

Add thereto a tiger's chandron,

For the ingredients of our cauldron.

All. Double, double toil and trouble;

Fire burn and cauldron bubble.

Sec. Witch. Cool it with a baboon's blood,

Then the charm is firm and good.

Enter HECATE to the other three Witches.

Sec. O, well done! I commend your labours;

And every one shall share i' the pains:

And now about the cauldron stir

These elves and fairies in a ring.

Enchanting all that you put in.

[Music and a song: 'Black spirits,' &c.

[Hecate retires.

Sec. Witch. By the pricking of my thumbs,
Something wicked this way comes.

Open, locks,
Whoever knocks!

Enter MACBETH.

Macb. How now, you secret, black, and midnight hags!
What is't you do?

All. A deed without a name.

Macb. I conjure you, by that which you profess, 50

Howe'er you come to know it, answer me:
Though you untie the winds and let them fight Against the churches; though the yeast waves
Confound and swallow navigation up;
Though bladed corn be lodged and trees blown
down;
Though castles topple on their warders' heads;
Though palaces and pyramids do slope
Their heads to their foundations; though the treasure

Of nature's germens tumble all together,
Even till destruction sicken; answer me 60
To what I ask you.

First Witch. Speak.

Sec. Witch. Demand.

Third Witch. We'll answer.

First Witch. Say, if thou'dst rather hear it from our mouths,
Or from our masters?

Macb. Call 'em; let me see 'em.

First Witch. Pour in sow's blood, that hath eaten

Her nine farrow; grease that's sweeten
From the murderer's gibbet throw
Into the flame.

All. Come, high or low;
Thyself and office dost show!

Thunder. First Apparition: an armed Head.

Macb. Tell me, thou unknown power,—

First Witch. He knows thy thought:
Hear his speech, but say thou nought. 70

First App. Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth!
beware Macduff:

Beware the thane of Fife. Dismiss me. Enough.

Macb. What'e'r thou art, for thy good caution, thanks;

Thou hast harp'd my fear aright: but one word
more,—

First Witch. He will not be commanded:
here's another,
More potent than the first.

Thunder. Second Apparition: a bloody Child.

Sec. App. Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth!

Macb. Had I three ears, I'd hear thee.

Sec. App. Be bloody, bold, and resolute;
laugh to scorn

The power of man, for none of woman born
Shall harm Macbeth. [Descends.

Macb. Then live, Macduff: what need I fear of thee!

But yet I'll make assurance double sure,
And take a bond of fate: thou shalt not live;
That I may tell pale-hearted fear it lies,
And sleep in spite of thunder.

Thunder. Third Apparition: a Child crowned, with a tree in his hand.

What is this
That rises like the issue of a king,
And wears upon his baby-brow the round
And top of sovereignty?

All. Listen, but speak not to't.
Third App. Be lion-mettled, proud; and take no care 90

Who chafes, who frets, or where conspirers are:
Macbeth shall never vanquish'd be until Great Birnam wood to high Dunsinane hill
Shall come against him. [Descends.

Macb. That will never be:
Who can impress the forest, bid the tree
Unfix his earth-bound root? Sweet bodements!
good!

Rebellion's head, rise never till the wood
Of Birnam rise, and our high-placed Macbeth
Shall live the lease of nature, pay his breath
To time and mortal custom. Yet my heart too
Throbs to know one thing: tell me, if your art
Can tell so much: shall Banquo's issue ever Reign in this kingdom?

All. Seek to know no more.

Macb. I will be satisfied: deny me this,
And an eternal curse fall on you! Let me
know.

Why sinks that cauldron? and what noise is this? [Hautboys.

First Witch. Show!

Sec. Witch. Show!

Third Witch. Show!

All. Show his eyes, and grieve his heart;
Come like shadows, so depart! 111

A show of Eight Kings, the last with a glass in his hand; Banquo's Ghost following.

Macb. Thou art too like the spirit of Banquo:
down!

Thy crown does scar mine eye-balls. And thy hair,

Thou other gold-bound brow, is like the first.
A third is like the former. Filthy hags!

Why do you show me this? A fourth! Start,
eyes!

What, will the line stretch out to the crack of
doom?

Another yet! A seventh! I'll see no more:
And yet the eighth appears, who bears a glass
Which shows me many more; and some I see
That two-fold balls and treble sceptres carry:
Horrible sight! Now, I see, 'tis true:
For the blood-bolter'd Banquo smiles upon me,
And points at them for his. [Apparitions vanish.] What, is this so?

First Witch. Ay, sir, all this is so: but why Stands Macbeth thus amazedly?

Come, sisters, cheer we up his spirits,
And show the best of our delights:
I'll charm the air to give a sound,
While you perform your antic round;
That this great king may kindly say, 130

Our duties did his welcome pay.

[Music. The Witches dance, and then vanish, with Hecate.]

Macb. Where are they! Gone! Let this pernicious hour Stand aye accursed in the calendar! Come in, without there!

Enter LENNOX.

Len. What's your grace's will?

Macb. Saw you the weird sisters?

Len. No, my lord.

Macb. Came they not by you?

Len. No, indeed, my lord.

Macb. Infected be the air wherewith they ride; And damn'd all those that trust them! I did hear

The galloping of horse: who was't came by?

Len. 'Tis two or three, my lord, that bring you word

Macduff is fled to England.

Macb. Fled to England!

Len. Ay, my good lord.

Macb. Time, thou anticipatest my dread exploits:

The flighty purpose never is o'ertook Unless the deed go with it: from this moment The very firstlings of my heart shall be The firstlings of my hand. And even now, To crown my thoughts with acts, be it thought and done:

The castle of Macduff I will surprise; 130 Seize upon Fife; give to the edge o' the sword His wife, his babes, and all unfortunate souls That trace him in his line. No boasting like a fool:

This deed I'll do before this purpose cool. But no more sights!—Where are these gentlemen?

Come, bring me where they are. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Fife. Macduff's castle.

Enter LADY MACDUFF, her Son, and ROSS.

L. Macd. What had he done, to make him fly the land?

Ross. You must have patience, madam.

L. Macd. He had none:

His flight was madness: when our actions do not, Our fears do make us traitors.

Ross. You know not Whether it was his wisdom or his fear.

L. Macd. Wisdom! to leave his wife, to leave his babes,

His mansion and his titles in a place From whence himself does fly! He loves us

not;

He wants the natural touch: for the poor wren,

The most diminutive of birds, will fight,

Her young ones in her nest, against the owl.

All is the fear and nothing is the love;

As little is the wisdom, where the flight

So runs against all reason.

Ross. My dearest coz,

I pray you, school yourself: but for your husband,

He is noble, wise, judicious, and best knows

The fits o' the season. I dare not speak much further;

But cruel are the times, when we are traitors And do not know ourselves, when we hold rumour

From what we fear, yet know not what we fear,

But float upon a wild and violent sea

Each way and move. I take my leave of you:

Shall not be long but I'll be here again:

Things at the worst will cease, or else climb

upward

To what they were before. My pretty cousin,

Blessing upon you!

L. Macd. Father'd he is, and yet he's fatherless.

Ross. I am so much a fool, should I stay longer.

It would be my disgrace and your discomfort:

I take my leave at once. [Exit.]

L. Macd. Sirrah, your father's dead:

And what will you do now? How will you

live?

Son. As birds do, mother.

L. Macd. What, with worms and flies?

Son. With what I get, I mean; and so do they.

L. Macd. Poor bird! thou'ldst never fear

the net nor lime,

The pitfall nor the gin.

Son. Why should I, mother? Poor birds

they are not set for.

My father is not dead, for all your saying.

L. Macd. Yes, he is dead: how wilt thou do for a father?

Son. Nay, how will you do for a husband?

L. Macd. Why, I can buy me twenty at any market.

Son. Then you'll buy 'em to sell again.

L. Macd. Thou speak'st with all thy wit;

and yet, I' faith,

With wit enough for thee.

Son. Was my father a traitor, mother?

L. Macd. Ay, that he was.

Son. What is a traitor?

L. Macd. Why, one that swears and lies.

Son. And be all traitors that do so?

L. Macd. Every one that does so is a traitor, and must be hanged.

Son. And must they all be hanged that swear and lie?

L. Macd. Every one.

Son. Who must hang them?

L. Macd. Why, the honest men.

Son. Then the liars and swearers are fools, for there are liars and swearers enow to beat the honest men and hang up them.

L. Macd. Now, God help thee, poor monkey!

But how wilt thou do for a father?

Son. If he were dead, you'd weep for him;

if you would not, it were a good sign that I should quickly have a new father.

L. Macd. Poor prattler, how thou talk'st!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Bless you, fair dame! I am not to you known,

some danger does approach you nearly;

If you will take a homely man's advice,
Be not found here; hence, with your little ones.
To fight you thus, methinks, I am too savage;
To do worse to you were fell cruelty,
Which is too nigh your person. Heaven preserve you!

I dare abide no longer. [Exit.
L. Macd. Whither should I fly?
I have done no harm. But I remember now
I am in this earthly world; where to do harm
Is often laudable, to do good sometime
Accounted dangerous folly: why then, alas,
Do I put up that womanly defence,
To say I have done no harm?

Enter Murderers.

What are these faces?

First Mur. Where is your husband? So
L. Macd. I hope, in no place so unsanctified
Where such as thou mayst find him.

First Mur. He's a traitor.
Son. Thou liest, thou shag-hair'd villain!

First Mur. What, you egg?
[Stabbing him.

Young fry of treachery!
Son. He has kill'd me, mother:

Run away, I pray you! [Dies.
[Exit Lady Macduff, crying 'Murder!'

Exit Murderers, following her.

SCENE III. England. Before the King's palace.

Enter MALCOLM and MACDUFF.

Mal. Let us seek out some desolate shade,
And there

Will. Let us rather

Hold fast the mortal sword, and like good men Bestride our down-fall'n birthdom: each new morn

New widows howl, new orphans cry, new sorrows

Strike heaven on the face, that it remounds
As if it felt with Scotland and yell'd out
Like syllable of doleour.

Mal. What I believe I'll wail,
What know believe, and what I can redress,

As I shall find the time to friend, I will. 10
What you have spoke, it may be so perchance.

This tyrant, whose sole name blisters our
tongues,

Was once thought honest: you have loved him
well;

He hath not touch'd you yet. I am young; but

You may of him through me, and

To suffer up a weak poor innocent lamb
To appease an angry god.

Mal. I am not treacherous.

But Macbeth is.
A good and virtuous nature may recoil
From imputed charge. But I shall crave your

What you are my thoughts cannot trans-

Angels are bright still, though the brightest fell;

Though all things foul would wear the brows of
grace,

Yet grace must still look so.
Macd. I have lost my hopes.

Mal. Perchance even there will I did find my doubts.

Why in that rawness left you wife and child,
Those precious natives, those long knots of
love,

Without leave-taking? I pray you,
Let not my jealousies be your dishonours,

But mine own safeties. You may be rightly just,

Whatever I shall think.
Macd. Bleed, bleed, poor country!

Great tyranny! lay thou thy basis sure,
For goodness dare not check thee: wear thou
thy wrongs;

The title is affeer'd! Fare thee well, lord:
I would not be the villain that thou think'st

For the whole space that's in the tyrant's grasp,
And the rich East to boot.

Mal. Be not offended:
I speak not as in absolute fear of you.

I think our country sinks beneath the yoke;
It weeps, it bleeds; and each new day a gash is added to her wounds: I think withal

There would be hands uplifted in my right;

And here from gracious England have I offer
(if goodly thousands: but, for all this,
When I shall tread upon the tyrant's head,

Or wear it on my sword, yet my poor country shall have more vices than it had before,

More suffer and more sundry ways than ever,
By him that shall succeed.

Macd. What should he be?
Mal. It is myself I mean: in whom I know

All the particulars of vice so grafted
That, when they shall be open'd, black Macbeth

Will seem as pure as snow, and the poor state Esteem him as a lamb, being compared

With my countless harms.

Macd. Not in the legions
Of horrid hell can come a devil more damn'd

In evils to top Macbeth.

Mal. I grant him bloody,
Luxurious, avaricious, false, deceitful,

Sudden, malicious, smacking of every sin
That has a name: but there's no bottom, none.

In my voluptuousness: your wives, your daughters,

Your matrons and your maids, could not fill up
The cistern of my lust, and my desire

All continent impediments would o'erbear
That did oppose my will: better Macbeth

Than such an one to reign.

Macd. Broadfield intemperance
In nature is a tyranny; it hath been

The untimely emptying of the happy throne
And fall of many kings. But fear not yet

To take upon you what is yours: you may Convey your pleasures in a spacious plenty,

And yet seem cold, the time you may so hoodwink.

We have willing dames enough: there cannot

That vulture in you, to devour so many
As will to greatness dedicate themselves,
Finding it so inclined.

Mal. With this there grows
In my heart ill-composed affection such
A stanchless avarice that, were I king,
I should cut off the nobles for their lands;
Desire his jewels and this other's house;
And my more-having would be as a vance
To make me hunger more; that I should forge
Quarrels unjust against the good and loyal,
Destroying them for wealth.

Macd. This avarice
Sicks deeper, grows with more pernicious root
Than summer-seeming lust, and it hath been
The sword of our slain kings: yet do not fear;
Scotland hath fountains to fill up your will,
Of your mere own: all these are portable,
With other graces weigh'd.

Mal. But I have none: the king-becoming
graces,
As justice, verity, temperance, stabilities,
Bounty, perseverance, mercy, lowliness,
Devotion, patience, courage, fortitude,
I have no-relish of them, but abound
In the division of each several crime, Acting in many ways. Nay, had I power, I should

Pour the sweet milk of concord into hell,
Upbraid the universal peace, confound
All unity on earth.

Macd. O Scotland, Scotland! 100
Mal. If such a one be fit to govern, speak:
I am as full a blown.

Macd. Fit to govern!
No, not to live. O nation miserable,
With an untitled tyrant bloody-scepter'd,
When shalt thou see thy wholesome days again,
Since that the truest issue of thy throne
By his own interdiction stands accurs'd,
And does blasphemy husband I Thy royal father
Was a most sainted king: the queen that bore

thee,
Oftenere upon her knees than on her feet, 110
Died every day she lived. Fare thee well!
These evils thou repeat'st upon thyself
Have banish'd me from Scotland. O my breast,
Thy hope ends here!

Mal. Macduff, this noble passion,
Child of integrity, hath from my soul Wiped the black scruples, reconciled my thoughts

To thy good truth and honour. Devilish
Macbeth

By many of these trains hath sought to win me
Into his power, and modest wisdom plucks me
From over-credulous haste: but God above 120
Deal between thee and me! for even now
I put myself to thy direction, and Unspoke mine own detraction, here abjure
The taints and blames I laid upon myself,
For strangers to my nature. I am yet
Unknown to woman, never was forewarn'd,
Scarcely have I heard what was mine own,
At no time broke my faith, would not betray
The devil to his fellow and delight
No less in truth than life: my first false
speaking 130

Was this upon myself: what I am truly,
Is thine and my poor country's to command:
Whither indeed, before thy here-approach,
Old Siward, with ten thousand warlike men,
Already at a point, was setting forth.
Now we'll together; and the chance of good-
ness

Be like our warranted quarrel! Why are you silent!

Macd. Such welcome and unwelcome things
at once
Tis hard to reconcile.

Enter a Doctor.

Mal. Well; more anon.—Comes the king forth, I pray you? 140

Doct. Ay, sir; there are a crew of wretched
souls

That stay his cure: their malady convinces
The great assay of art; but at his touch—
Such sanctity hath heaven given his hand—
They presently amend.

Mal. I thank you, doctor. [Exit Doctor.]

Macd. What's the disease he means?

Mal. 'Tis call'd the evil:
A most miraculous work in this good king;
Which often, since my here-remain in England,
I have seen him do. How he solicits heaven,
Himself best knows: but strangely-visited
people, 150

All swoll'n and ulcerous, pitiful to the eye,
The mere despair of surgery, he cures,
Hanging a golden stamp about their necks,
Put on with holy prayers; and 'tis spoken,
To the succeeding royalty he leaves
The healing benediction. With this strange virtue,
He hath a heavenly gift of prophecy,
And sundry blessings hung about his throne,
That speak him full of grace.

Enter Ross.

Macd. See, who comes here!

Mal. My countryman; but yet I know him
not. 160

Macd. My ever gentle cousin, welcome hither.

Mal. I know him now. Good God, 'twixt times
remove

The means that makes us strangers!

Ross. Sir, amen.

Macd. Stands Scotland where it did?

Ross. Ah, poor country!

Almost afraid to know itself. It cannot Be call'd our mother, but our grave; where
nothing,

But who knows nothing, is once seen to suffer:
Where sighs and groans and shrieks that rend
the air
Are made, not mark'd; where violent sorrow
seems

A modern outcry: the dead man's knock 170
Is there scarce ask'd for who; and good men's lives

Expire before the flowers in their caps,
Dying or ere they sicken.

Macd. O, relation

Too late, and yet too true!

Mal. What's the newest grief?

Ross. That of an hour's age doth hiss the speaker:
Each minute teems a new one.

Macd. How does my wife?

Ross. Why, well.

Macd. And all my children?

Ross. Well too.

Macd. The tyrant has not batter'd at their peace?

Ross. No; they were well at peace when I did leave 'em.

Macd. Be not a niggard of your speech:
how goes 't?

Ross. When I came hither to transport the tidings,

Which I have heavily borne, there ran a rumour
Of many worthy fellows that were out;
Which was by my belief witness'd the rather,
For that I saw the tyrant's power a-foot:
Now is the time of help; your eye in Scotland
Would create soldiers, make our women fight,
To doff their dire distresses.

Macd. Be 't their comfort
We are coming thither: gracious England hath Lent us good Siward and ten thousand men;
An older and a better soldier none
That Christendom gives out.

Ross. Would I could answer
This comfort with the like! But I have words
That would be howl'd out in the desert air,
Where hearing should not latch them.

Macd. What concern they?
The general cause? or is it a fee-grief
Due to some single breast?

Ross. No mind that's honest
But in it shares some woe; though the main part Pertains to you alone.

Macd. If it be mine,
Keep it not from me, quickly let me have it.

Ross. Let not your ears despise my tongue for ever,
Which shall possess them with the heaviest sound

That ever yet they heard.

Macd. Hush! I guess at it.

Ross. Your castle is surprised; your wife and babes
Savagely slaughter'd: to relate the manner,
Were, on the quarry of these murder'd deer,
To add the death of you.

Macd. Merciful heaven!
What, man! ne'er pull your hat upon your brows;

Give sorrow words: the grief that does not
speak

Whispers the o'er-fraught heart and bids it break.

Macd. My children too?

Ross. Wife, children, servants, all
That could be found.

Macd. And I must be from thence!
My wife kill'd too?

Ross. I have said.

Macd. Be comforted:
Let's make us medicines of our great revenge,
To cure this deadly grief.

Macd. He has no children. All my pretty s!

Did you say all! O hell-kite! All!
What, all my pretty chickens and their dam
At one fell swoop?

Macd. Dispute it like a man.

Macd. I shall do so; and
But I must also feel it as a man:
I cannot but remember such things were,
That were most precious to me. Did heaven look on,

And would not take their part? Sinful Macduff,
They were all struck for thee! Naught that I am,

Not for their own demerits, but for mine,
Fell slaughter on their souls. Heaven rest them now!

Macd. Be this the whetstone of your sword:
let grief

Convert to anger: blunt not the heart, enrage it.

Macd. O, I could play the woman with mine eyes

And braggart with my tongue! But, gentle heavens,

Cut short all intermission; front to front
Bring thou this fiend of Scotland and myself;
Within my sword's length set him; if he escape,
Heaven forgive him too!

Macd. This tune goes manly.
Come, go we to the king; our power is ready;
Our lack is nothing but our leave: Macbeth
Is ripe for shaking, and the powers above Put on their instruments. Receive what cheer you may:

The night is long that never finds the day.

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I. Dunsinane. Ante-room in the castle.

Enter a Doctor of Physic and a Waiting-Gentlewoman.

Doct. I have two nights watched with you, but can perceive no truth in your report. When was it she last walk'd?

Gent. Since his majesty went into the field,
I have seen her rise from her bed, throw her nightgown upon her, unlock her closet, take forth paper, fold it, write upon 't, read it, afterwards seal it, and again return to bed; yet all this while in a most fast sleep.

Doct. A great perturbation in nature, to receive at once the benefit of sleep, and do the effects of watching! In this slumbery agitation, besides her walking and other actual performances, what, at any time, have you heard her
say?

Gent. That, air, which I will not report after
her.

Doct. You may to me: and 'tis most meet you should.

Gent. Neither to you nor any one; having no witness to confirm my speech.

Enter LADY MACBETH, with a taper.

Lo you, here she comes! This is her very gains; and, upon my life, fast asleep. Observe her; stand close.

Doct. How came she by that light?

Gent. Why, it stood by her: she has light by her continually; 'tis her command.

Doct. You see, her eyes are open.

Gent. Ay, but their sense is shut.

Doct. What is it she does now? Look, how she rubs her hands.

Gent. It is an accustomed action with her, to seem thus washing her hands: I have known her continue in this a quarter of an hour.

Lady M. Yet here's a spot.

Doct. Hark! she speaks: I will set down what comes from her, to satisfy my remembrance the more strongly.

Lady M. Out, damned spot! out, I say!—One: two: why, then 'tis time to do't.—Hell is murky!—Fie, my lord, fie! a soldier, and afeard! What need we fear who knows it, when none can call our power to account?—Yet who would have thought the old man to have had so much blood in him.

Doct. Do you mark that?

Lady M. The thane of Fife had a wife: where is she now?—What, will these hands never be clean?—No more o' that, my lord, no more o' that: you mar all with this starting.

Doct. Go to, go to; you have known what you should not.

Gent. She has spoke what she should not, I am sure of that: heaven knows what she has known.

Lady M. Here's the smell of the blood still: I the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand. Oh, oh, oh!

Doct. What a sigh is there! The heart is sorely charged.

Gent. I would not have such a heart in my own for the dignity of the whole body.

Doct. Well, well, well,—

Gent. Pray God it be, sir.

Doct. This disease is beyond my practice: it I have known those which have walked in their sleep who have died holily in their beds.

Lady M. Wash your hands, put on your nightgown; look not so pale.—I tell you yet gain, Banquo's buried; he cannot come out u' his grave.

Doct. Even so!

Lady M. To bed, to bed! there's knocking at the gate: come, come, come, come, give me my hand. What's done cannot be undone.—

To bed, to bed, to bed! [Exit.]

Doct. Will she go now to bed?

Gent. Directly.

Doct. Foul whisperings are abroad: unnatural deeds do breed unnatural troubles; infected minds so to their deaf pillows will discharge their secrets more needs she the divine than the physician. So, God forgive us all! Look after her;

remove from her the means of all annoyance, and still keep eyes upon her. So, good night. My mind she has mated, and amazed my sight.

I think, but dare not speak.

Gent. Good night, good doctor.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. The country near Dunsinane.

Drum and colours. Enter MENTEITH, CAITHNESS, ANGUS, LENOX, and Soldiers.

Ment. The English power is near, led on by Malcolm.

His uncle Siward and the good Macduff: Revengeers burn in them; for their dear causes Would to the bleeding and the grim alarm Excite the mortified man.

Ang. Near Birnam wood Shall we well meet them; that way are they coming.

Caith. Who knows if Donalbain be with his brother?

Len. For certain, sir, he is not: I have a file

Of all the gentry: there is Siward's son, And many unrough youths that even now Protest their first of manhood.

Ment. What does the tyrant?

Caith. Great Dunsinane he strongly fortifies: Some say he's mad: others that lesser hate him

Do call it valiant fury: but, for certain, He cannot buckle his distemper'd cause Within the belt of rule.

Ang. Now does he feel His secret murders sticking on his hands; Now minutely revolts upbraid his faith-breach;

Those he commands move only in command, Nothing in love: now does he feel his title Hang loose about him, like a giant's robe Upon a dwarfish thief.

Ment. Who then shall blame His pester'd senses to recoil and start, When all that is within him does condemn Itself for being there?

Caith. Well, march we on, To give obedience where 'tis truly owed: Meet we the medicine of the sickly weal, And with him pour we in our country's purge Each drop of us.

Len. Or so much as it needs, To dew the sovereign flower and drown the weeds.

Make we our march towards Birnam.

[Exeunt, marching.]

SCENE III. Dunsinane. A room in the castle.

Enter MACBETH, Doctor, and Attendants.

Macb. Bring me no more reports; let them fly all:

Till Birnam wood remove to Dunsinane, I cannot taint with fear. What's the boy Malcolm?

Was he not born of woman? The spirits that know All mortal consequences have pronounced me thus:

'Fear not, Macbeth; no man that's born of woman Shall e'er have power upon thee.' Then the false thanes

And mingle with the English

The mind I sway by and the heart!

Shall never sag with doubt nor shake with fear.

Enter a Servant.

The devil damn thee black, thou cream-faced loon!

Where got'st thou that goose look!

Serv. There is ten thousand—

Macb. Geese, villain!

Serv. Soldiers, sir.

Macb. Go, prick thy face, and over-red thy

face!

Thou lily-liver'd boy. What soldiers, patch! Death of thy soul! those linen cheeks of thine Are counsellors to fear. What soldiers, whey-

Serv. The English force, so please you.

Macb. Take thy face hence. [Exit Servant.]

Seyton!—I am sick at heart.

When I behold—Seyton, I say!—This push

Will cheer me ever, or discolor me now.

I have lived long enough: my way of life

Is fall'n into the sear, the yellow leaf;

And that which should accompany old age,

As honour, love, obedience, troops of friends,

I must not look to have; but, in their stead,

Curses, not loud but deep, mouth-honour,

breath,

Which the poor heart would fain deny, and dare not.

Seyton!

Enter SEYTON.

Sey. What is your gracious pleasure?

Macb. What news more! 30

Sey. All is confirm'd, my lord, which was reported.

Macb. I'll fight till from my bones my flesh be hack'd.

Give me my armour.

Sey. 'Tis not needed yet.

Macb. I'll put it on.

Send out more horses; skirr the country round;

Hang those that talk of fear. Give me mine

armour.

How does your patient, doctor?

Doct. Not so sick, my lord,

As she is troubled with thick-coming fancies,

That keep her from her rest.

Macb. Cure her of that.

Canst thou not minister to a mind diseased, 40

Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow,

Raze out the written troubles of the brain

And with some sweet oblivious antidote

Cleanse the stuff'd bosom of that perilous stuff

Which weighs upon the heart!

Doct. Therein the patient

Must minister to himself.

Macb. Throw physic to the dogs; I'll none

of it.

Come, put mine armour on; give me my staff.

Seyton, send out. Doctor, the thanes fly from

me.

Come, sir, dispatch. If thou couldst, doctor, 50

cast

The water of my land, find her disease,

And purge it to a sound and pristine health,

I would applaud thee to the very echo,

That should applaud again.—Full't off, I say.—

What rhubarb, senna, or what purgative drug,
Would scour these English hence? Hearst thou of them?

Doct. Ay, my good lord; your royal preparation

Makes us hear something.

Macb. Bring it after me.

I will not be afraid of death and bane,

Till Birnam forest come to Dunsinane. 60

Doct. [Aside] Were I from Dunsinane away

and clear,

Profit again should hardly draw me here.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Country near Birnam wood.

Drum and colours. Enter MALCOLM, old

STEWART and his Son, MACDOFF, MEN-

TEITH, CAITHNESS, ANGUS, LENNOX, ROSS,

and Soldiers, marching.

Mal. Cousins, I hope the days are near at

hand

That chambers will be safe.

Ment. We doubt it nothing.

Siv. What wood is this before us?

Ment. The wood of Birnam.

Mal. Let every soldier hew him down a bough

And bear't before him: thereby shall we

shadow

The numbers of our host and make discovery

Err in report of us.

Soldiers. It shall be done.

Siv. We learn no other but the confident tyrant

Keeps still in Dunsinane, and will endure

Our setting down before t.

Mal. 'Tis his main hope: 10

For where there is advantage to be given,

Both more and less have given him the revolt,

And none serve with him but constrained

things

Whose hearts are absent too.

Macd. Let our just censures

Attend the true event, and put we on Industrious soldierhip.

Siv. The time approaches

That will with due decision make us know

What we shall say we have and what we owe.

Thoughts speculative their unsure hopes relate,

But certain issue strokes must arbitrate: 20

Towards which advance the war.

[Exeunt, marching.]

SCENE V. Dunsinane. Within the castle.

Enter MACBETH, SEYTON, and Soldiers, with drum and colours.

Macb. Hang out our banners on the outward walls;

The cry is still 'They come!' our castle's

strength

Will laugh a siege to scorn: here let them lie

Till famine and the ague eat them up:

Were they not forced with those that should be have met them daring, beard to

And beat them backward home.

[A cry of women within.

What is that noise!

Sey. It is the cry of women, my good lord.

[Exit.

Macb. I have almost forgot the taste of fears:

The time has been, my senses would have cool'd

To hear a night-shriek; and my fell of hair
Would at a dismal treatise rouse and stir
As life were in't: I have supp'd full with horrors;

Direness, familiar to my slaughterous thoughts,
Cannot once start me.

Re-enter SETTON.

Wherefore was that cry?

Sey. The queen, my lord, is dead.

Macb. She should have died hereafter;
There would have been a time for such a word.
To-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-morrow,
Creeps in this petty pace from day to day
To the last syllable of recorded time,
And all our yesterdays have lighted fools
The way to dusty death. Out, out, brief candle!
Life's but a walking shadow, a poor player
That struts and frets his hour upon the stage
And then is heard no more: it is a tale
Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, Signifying nothing.

Enter a Messenger.

Thou comest to use thy tongue; thy story quickly.

Mess. Gracious my lord, 30
I should report that which I say I saw,
But know not how to do it.

Macb. Well, say, sir.

Mess. As I did stand my watch upon the
hill,
I look'd toward Birnam, and anon, methought,
The wood began to move.

Macb. Liar and slave!

Mess. Let me endure your wrath, if 't be not so:
Within this three mile may you see it coming;
I say, a moving grove.

Macb. If thou speak'st false,
Upon the next tree shalt thou hang alive,
Till famine cling thee: if thy speech be sooth,
I care not if thou dost for me as much. 40

I pull in resolution, and begin
To doubt the equivocation of the fiend
That lies like truth: 'Fear not, till Birnam wood

Do come to Dunsinane:' and now a wood
Comes toward Dunsinane. Arm, arm, and out!
If this which he avouches does appear,
There is nor flying hence nor tarrying here.

I 'gin to be aweary of the sun,
And wish the estate of the world were now un-
done. 50

Ring the alarum-bell! Blow, wind! come, wrack!

At least we'll die with harness on our back. [Exit.

SCENE VI. Dunsinane. Before the castle.

Drum and colours. Enter MALCOLM, old SIWARD, MACDUFF, and their Army, with boughs.

Mal. Now near enough: your leavy screens throw down,
And show like those you are. You, worthy
uncle,

Shall, with my cousin, your right-noble son,
Lead our first battle: worthy Macduff and we Shall take upon 's what else remains to do,
According to our order.

Siw. Fare you well.

Do we but find the tyrant's power to-night,
Let us be beaten, if we cannot fight.

Macb. Make all our trumpets speak; give them all breath. 9

Those clamorous harbingers of blood and death. [Exit.

SCENE VII. Another part of the field.

Alarums. Enter MACBETH.

Macb. They have tied me to a stake; I cannot fly,

But, bear-like, I must fight the course. What's he

That was not born of woman! Such a one
Am I to fear, or none.

Enter young SIWARD.

Yo. Siw. What is thy name?

Macb. Thou 'lt be afraid to hear it.

Yo. Siw. No; though thou call'st thyself a hotter name

Than any is in hell.

Macb. My name's Macbeth.

Yo. Siw. The devil himself could not pronounce a title

More hateful to mine ear.

Macb. No, nor more fearful.

Yo. Siw. Thou liest, abhorred tyrant; with my sword 20

I'll prove the lie thou speak'st.
[They fight and young Siward is slain.

Macb. Thou wast born of woman.
But swords I smile at, weapons laugh to scorn,
Brandish'd by man that's of a woman born. [Exit.

Alarums. Enter MACDUFF.

Macb. That way the noise is. Tyrant, show thy face!

If thou be'st slain and with no stroke of mine,
My wife and children's ghosts will haunt me
still.

I cannot strike at wretched kerns, whose arms
Are hired to bear their staves: either thou,

Macbeth,

Or else my sword with an unbatter'd edge
I sheathe again undeeded. There thou shouldst
be; 30

By this great clatter, one of greatest note
Seems bruised. Let me find him, fortune!

And more I beg not. [Exit. Alarums.

Enter MALCOLM and old SIWARD.

Sis. This way, my lord; the castle's gently rendered:
The tyrant's people on both sides do fight;
The noble thanes do bravely in the war;
The day almost itself professes yours,
And little is to do.

Mal. We have met with foes
That strike beside us.

Sis. Enter, sir, the castle. 29
[Exeunt. Alarums.]

SCENE VIII. Another part of the field.

Enter MACBETH.

Macb. Why should I play the Roman fool,
and die
On mine own sword! whiles I see lives, the gashes
Do better upon them.

Enter MACDUFF.

Macd. Turn, hell-hound, turn!
Macb. Of all men else I have avoided thee:
But get thee back; my soul is too much charged
With blood of thine already.

Macd. I have no words;
My voice is in my sword: thou bloodier villain
Than terms can give thee out! [They fight.]

Macb. Thou lostest labour:
As easy mayest thou the intrenchant air
With thy keen sword impress as make me
bleed: 10

Let fall thy blade on vulnerable crests;
I bear a charmed life, which must not yield
To one of woman born.

Macd. Despair thy charm;
And let the angel whom thou still hast served
Tell thee, Macduff was from his mother's womb
Untimely ripp'd.

Macb. Accurs'd be that tongue that tells me so,
For it hath cow'd my better part of man!
And be these juggling fiends no more believed,
That palter with us in a double sense; 20
That keep the word of promise to our ear,
And break it to our hope. I'll not fight with
thee.

Macd. Then yield thee, coward,
And live to be the show and gaze o' the time:
We'll have thee, as our rarer monsters are,
Painted upon a pole, and underwrit,
'Here may you see the tyrant.'

Macb. I will not yield,
To kiss the ground before young Malcolm's feet.

And to be baited with the rabble's curse. 29
Though Birnam wood be come to Dunsinane,
And thou opposed, being of no woman born,
Yet I will try the last. Before my body
I lay my warlike shield. Lay on, Macduff,
And damn'd be him that first cries 'Hold,
enough!' [Exeunt, fighting. Alarums.]

Retreat. Flourish. Enter, with drums and colours, MALCOLM, old SIWARD, ROSS, the other Thanes, and Soldiers.

Mal. I would the friends we miss were safe arrived.

Sis. Some must go off: and yet, by these

So great a day as this is cheaply bought.

Mal. Macduff is missing, and your noble
son.

Ross. Your son, my lord, has paid a soldier's debt:

He only lived but till he was a man. 40
The which no sooner had his prowess confirm'd
In the unshrinking station where he fought,
But like a man he died.

Sis. Then he is dead!

Ross. Ay, and brought off the field: your cause of sorrow
Must not be measured by his worth, for then
It hath no end.

Sis. Had he his hurts before?

Ross. Ay, on the front.

Sis. Why then, God's soldier be he!
Had I as many sons as I have hairs,
I would not wish them to a fairer death:
And so, his knell is knoll'd.

Mal. He's worth more sorrow, 50
And that I'll spend for him.

Sis. He's worth no more:
They say he parted well, and paid his score:
And so, God be with him! Here comes newer
comfort.

Re-enter MACDUFF, with MACBETH's head.

Macd. Hail, king! for so thou art: behold, where stands
The usurper's cursed head: the time is free:
I see thee compass'd with thy kingdom's pearl,
That speak my salutation in their minds;
Whose voices I desire aloud with mine:
Hail, King of Scotland!

All. Hail, King of Scotland! [Flourish.]
Mal. We shall not spend a large expense of
time 60

Before we reckon with your several loves,
And make us even with you. My thanes and kinsmen,

Henceforth be earls, the first that ever Scotland
In such an honour nam'd. What's more to do,
Which would be plant'd newly with the time,
As calling home our exiled friends abroad
That fled the snares of watchful tyranny;
Producing forth the cruel ministers

Of this dead butcher and his fiend-like queen,
Who, as 'tis thought, by self and violent hands
Took off her life; this, and what needful else
That calls upon us, by the grace of Grace,
We will perform in measure, time and place:
So, thanks to all at once and to each one,
Whom we invite to see us crown'd at Scone.

[Flourish. Exeunt.]

ACT I

SCENE I. Elsinore. A platform before the castle.

FRANCISCO at his post. Enter to him
 BERNARDO.

Ber. Who's there?

Fran. Nay, answer me: stand, and unfold yourself.

Ber. Long live the king!

Fran. Bernardo?

Ber. He.

Fran. You come most carefully upon your hour.

Ber. 'Tis now struck twelve; get thee to bed, Francisco.

Fran. For this relief much thanks: 'tis bitter cold,

And I am sick at heart.

Ber. Have you had quiet guard?

Fran. Not a mouse stirring. go

Ber. Well, good night.

If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus,

The rivals of my watch, bid them make haste.

Fran. I think I hear them. Stand, ho!
 Who's there?

Enter HORATIO and MARCELLUS.

Hor. Friends to this ground.

Mar. And liegemen to the Dane.

Fran. Give you good night.

Mar. O, farewell, honest soldier:

Who hath relieved you?

Fran. Bernardo has my place.

Give you good night. [Exit.

Mar. Holla! Bernardo! Say,

Ber.

What, is Horatio there?

Hor.

A piece of him.

Ber. Welcome, Horatio: welcome, good

Marcellus.

Mar. What, has this thing appear'd again

to-night?

Ber. I have seen nothing.

Mar. Horatio says 'tis but our fantasy,

And will not let belief take hold of him

Touching this dreaded sight, twice seen of us:

Therefore I have entreated him along

With us to watch the minutes of this night;

That if again this apparition come,

He may approve our eyes and speak to it.

Hor. Tush, tush, 'twill not appear.

Ber. Sit down awhile; go

And let us once again assail your ears,

That are so fortified against our story

What we have two nights seen.

Hor. Well, sit we down,

And let us hear Bernardo speak of this.

Ber. Last night of all,

When yond same star that's westward from the pole

Had made his course to illumine that part of

heaven

Where now it burns, Marcellus and myself,

The bell then beating one,—

Enter Ghost.

Mar. Peace, break thee off; look, where it comes again!

Ber. In the same figure, like the king that's dead.

Mar. Thou art a scholar; speak to it, Horatio.

Ber. Looks it not like the king? mark it, Horatio.

Hor. Most like: it harrows me with fear and wonder.

Ber. It would be spoke to.

Mar. Question it, Horatio.

Hor. What art thou that usurp'st this time of night,

Together with that fair and warlike form
In which the majesty of buried Denmark

Did sometimes march? by heaven I charge thee, speak!

Mar. It is offended.

Ber. See, it stalks away!

Hor. Stay! speak, speak! I charge thee, speak! [Exit Ghost.]

Mar. 'Tis gone, and will not answer.

Ber. How now, Horatio! you tremble and look pale:

Is not this something more than fantasy?

What think you on't?

Hor. Before my God, I might not this believe

Without the sensible and true avouch

Of mine own eyes.

Mar. Is it not like the king?

Hor. As thou art to thyself:

Such was the very armour he had on 60

When he the ambitious Norway combated;

So frown'd he once, when, in an angry parle,

He smote the sledged Polacks on the ice.

'Tis strange.

Mar. Thus twice before, and jump at this dead hour,

With martial stalk hath he gone by our watch.

Hor. In what particular thought to work I know not;

But in the gross and scope of my opinion,

This bodes some strange eruption to our state.

Mar. Good now, sit down, and tell me, he that knows, 70

Why this same strict and most observant watch

So nightly toils the subject of the land,

And why such daily cast of brazen cannon,

And foreign mart for implements of war;

Why such impress of shipwrights, whose sore task

Does not divide the Sunday from the week;

What might be toward, that this sweaty haste

Doth make the night joint-labourer with the day;

Who is't that can inform me?

Hor. That can I; As least, the whisper goes so. Our last king, 80

Whose image even but now appear'd to us,

Was, as you know, by Fortinbras of Norway,

Thereto prick'd on by a most emulate pride,

Dur'd to the combat; in which our valiant

Hamlet—
For so this side of our known world esteem'd him—

Did slay this Fortinbras; who, by a seal'd compact,

Well ratified by law and heraldry,

Did forfeit, with his life, all those his lands
Which he stood seized of, to the conqueror:

Against the which, a moiety competent 90

Was gaged by our king; which had return'd

To the inheritance of Fortinbras,
Had he been vanquisher; as, by the same covenant,

And carriage of the article design'd,
His fell to Hamlet. Now, sir, young Fortinbras,

Of unimproved mettle hot and full,

Hath in the skirts of Norway here and there

Shark'd up a list of lawless resolute

For food and diet, to some enterprise

That hath a stomach in't; which is no other—

As it doth well appear unto our state— 101

But to recover of us, by strong hand

And terms compulsory, those foresaid lands
So by his father lost: and this, I take it,

Is the main motive of our preparations,
The source of this our watch and the chief head

Of this post-haste and romage in the land.

Ber. I think it be no other but e'en so:

Well may it sort that this portentous figure
Comes armed through our watch; so like the king 110

That was and is the question of these wars.

Hor. A mote it is to trouble the mind's eye.

In the most high and palmy state of Rome,

A little ere the mightiest Julius fell,

The graves stood tenantless and the sheeted dead

Did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets:

† As stars with trains of fire and dews of blood,

Disasters in the sun; and the moist star

Upon whose influence Neptune's empire stands

Was sick almost to doomsday with eclipse: 120

And even the like precure of fierce events,

As harbingers preceding still the fates

And prologue to the omen coming on,

Have heaven and earth together demonstrated

Unto our climatures and countrymen.—

But soft, behold! lo, where it comes again!

Re-enter Ghost.

I'll cross it, though it blast me. Stay, illusion!

If thou hast any sound, or use of voice,

Speak to me:

If there be any good thing to be done, 130

That may to thee do ease and grace to me,

Speak to me: [Cock crows.]

If thou art privy to thy country's fate,

Which, happily, foreknowing may avoid,

O, speak!

Or if thou hast uphoarded in thy life

Extorted treasure in the womb of earth,

For which, they say, you spirits oft walk in

death,

Speak of it; stay, and speak! Stop it, Marcellus.

Mar. Shall I strike at it with my partisan?

Hor. Do, if it will not stand.

Ber. 'Tis here!

Hor. 'Tis here! [Exit Ghost.]

Mar. 'Tis gone!

We do it wrong, being so majestic,

To offer it the show of violence;

For it is, as the air, invulnerable,

And our vain blows malicious mockery.

Ger. It was about to speak, when the cock crew.

Hor. And then it started like a guilty thing Upon a fearful summons. I have heard, The cock, that is the trumpet to the morn, 150 Dosh with his lofty and shrill-sounding throat Awake the god of day; and, at his warning, Whether in sea or fire, in earth or air, The extravagant and erring spirit hies To his confine: and of the truth herein This present object made probation.

Mar. It faded on the crowing of the cock. Some say that ever 'gainst that season comes Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated, The bird of dawning singeth all night long: 160 And then, they say, no spirit dare stir abroad; The nights are wholesome; then no planets strike.

No fairy takes, nor witch hath power to charm, So hallow'd and so gracious is the time.

Hor. So have I heard and do in part believe it.

But, look, the morn, in russet mantle clad, Walks o'er the dew of yon high eastward hill: Break we our watch up; and by my advice, Let us impart what we have seen to-night Unto young Hamlet; for, upon my life, 170 'Tis spirit, dumb to us, will speak to him. Do you consent we shall acquaint him with it, As needful in our loves, fitting our duty?

Mar. Let's do't, I pray; and I this morning know

Where we shall find him most conveniently.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. A room of state in the castle.

Enter the KING, QUEEN, HAMLET, POLONIUS, LAERTES, VOLTIMAND, CORNELIUS, Lords, and Attendants.

King. Though yet of Hamlet our dear brother's death

The memory be green, and that it us befitted To bear our hearts in grief and our whole kingdom

To be contracted in one brow of woe, Yet so far hath discretion fought with nature

That we with wisest sorrow think on him, Together with remembrance of ourselves.

Therefore our sometime sister, now our queen, The imperial jointress to this warlike state,

Have we, as 'twere with a defeated joy,— With an auspicious and a dropping eye,

With mirth in funeral and with dirge in marriage,

In equal scale weighing delight and dole,—

Taken to wife: nor have we herein barr'd Your better wisdoms, which have freely gone

With this affair along. For all, our thanks. Now follows, that you know, young Fortinbras,

Holding a weak supposal of our worth, Or thinking by our late dear brother's death

Our state to be disjoint and out of frame, Colleague'd with the dream of his advantage,

He hath not fail'd to pester us with message, Importing the surrender of those lands

Lost by his father, with all bonds of law,

To our most valiant brother. So much for him. Now for ourself and for this time of meeting: Thus much the business is: we have here writ To Norway, uncle of young Fortinbras,— Who, impotent and bed-rick, scarcely bears Of this his nephew's purpose,—to suppress 30 His further gait herein; in that the levies, The lists and full proportions, are all made Out of his subject: and we here dispatch 'You, good Cornelius, and you, Voltimand, or bearers of this greeting to old Norway; Giving to you no further personal power To business with the king, more than the scope Of these delated articles allow. Farewell, and let your haste commend your duty.

Cor. In that and all things will we show
Vol. our duty. 40

King. We doubt it nothing: heartily farewell. [Exeunt Voltimand and Cornelius.]

And now, Laertes, what's the news with you? You told us of some suit; what is't, Laertes?

You cannot speak of reason to the Dane, And lose your voice: what wouldst thou beg, Laertes, That shall not be my offer, not thy asking? The head is not more native to the heart,

The hand more instrumental to the month, Than is the throne of Denmark to thy father.

What wouldst thou have, Laertes?

Laer. My dread lord, 50 Your leave and favour to return to France;

From whence though willingly I came to Denmark,

To show my duty in your coronation, Yet now, I must confess, that duty done,

My thoughts and wishes bend again toward France

And bow them to your gracious leave and pardon.

King. Have you your father's leave? What says Polonius?

Pol. He hath, my lord, wrung from me my slow leave

By laboursome petition, and at last Upon his will I seal'd my hard consent: 60 do beseech you, give him leave to go.

King. Take thy fair hour, Laertes; time be thine,

And thy best graces spend it at thy will!

But now, my cousin Hamlet, and my son,—

Ham. [Aside] A little more than kin, and less than kind.

King. How is it that the clouds still hang on you?

Ham. Not so, my lord; I am too much 't the sun.

Queen. Good Hamlet, cast thy nighted colour off,

And let thine eye look like a friend on Denmark. Do not for ever with thy valled lids 70

Seek for thy noble father in the dust: Thou know'st 'tis common; all that lives must die, Passing through nature to eternity.

Ham. Ay, madam, it is common. 80

Queen. If it be, seems it so particular with thee?

Ham. Seems, madam! nay, it is; I know not 'seems.'

'Tis not alone my inkly cloak, good mother,
Nor customary suits of solemn black,
Nor windy suspiration of forced breath,
No, nor the fruitful river in the eye, 80
Nor the dejected 'haviour of the visage,
Together with all forms, moods, shapes of grief,
That can denote me truly: these indeed seem,
For they are actions that a man might play:
But I have that within which passeth show;
These but the trappings and the suits of woe.

King. 'Tis sweet and commendable in your nature, Hamlet,

To give these mourning duties to your father:
But, you must know, your father lost a father;
That father lost, lost his, and the survivor bound
In filial obligation for some term 91

To do obsequious sorrow: but to persevere
In obstinate condolement is a course
Of insipid stubbornness: 'tis unmanly grief;
It shows a will most incorrect to heaven,
A heart unforfeited, a mind impatient,
An understanding simple and unschool'd:

For what we know must be and is as common
As any the most vulgar thing to sense,
Why should we in our peevish opposition 100
Take it to heart? Fie! 'tis a fault to heaven,
A fault against the dead, a fault to nature,
To reason most absurd; whose common theme
Is death of fathers, and who still hath cried,
From the first corse till he that died to-day,
'This must be so.' We pray you, throw to earth

This unprevailing woe, and think of us
As of a father: for let the world take note,
You are the most immediate to our throne;
And with no less nobility of love 110
Than that which dearest father bears his son,
Do I impart toward you. For your intent
In going back to school in Wittenberg,
It is most retrograde to our desire:
And we beseech you, bend you to remain
Here, in the cheer and comfort of our eye,
Our chiefest courtier, cousin, and our son.

Queen. Let not thy mother lose her prayers,
Hamlet:

I pray thee, stay with us: go not to Wittenberg.

Ham. I shall in all my best obey you,
madam. 120

King. Why, 'tis a loving and a fair reply:
Be as yourself in Denmark. Madam, come;
This gentle and enforced accord of Hamlet
Sets smiling to my heart: in grace whereof,
No second health that Denmark drinks to-day,
But the great cannon to the clouds shall tell,
And the king's rouse the heavens shall bruit
again.

Re-speaking earthly thunder. Come away.
[Exeunt all but Hamlet.]

Ham. O, that this too too solid flesh would melt,

And resolve itself into a dew!
Or that the Everlasting had not fix'd
His canon 'gainst self-slaughter! O God! God!
How weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable,
Seem to me all the uses of this world!
Fie on't! ah fie! 'tis an unweeded garden,

That grows to seed; things rank and gross in nature

Possess it merely. That it should come to this!
But two months dead: nay, not so much, not two:

So excellent a king; that was, to this, 130
Hyperion to a satyr; so loving to my mother
That he might not betwixt the winds of heaven
Visit her face too roughly. Ham.—O and earth!
Must I remember? why, she would hang on him,
As if increase of appetite had grown
By what it fed on: and yet, within a month—
Let me not think on't—frailty, thy name is
woman!—

A little month, or ere those shoes were old
With which she follow'd my poor father's body,
Like Niobe, all tears:—why she, even she—
(O God!) a beast, that wants discourse of reason,
Would have mourn'd longer—married with my
uncle, 151

My father's brother, but no more like my father
Than I to Hercules: within a month:
Ere yet the salt of most unrighteous tears
Had left the flushing in her galled eyes,
She married. O, most wicked speed, to post
With such dexterity to incestuous sheets!
It is not nor it cannot come to good:
But break, my heart; for I must hold my
tongue.

Enter HORATIO, MARCELLUS, and BERNARDO.

Hor. Hail to your lordship!

Ham. I am glad to see you well: 160
Horatio,—or I do forget myself.

Hor. The same, my lord, and your poor servant ever.

Ham. Sir, my good friend; I'll change that name with you:

And what make you from Wittenberg, Horatio?
Marcellus!

Mar. My good lord—

Ham. I am very glad to see you. Good even, sir.

But what, in faith, make you from Wittenberg?

Hor. A truant disposition, good my lord.

Ham. I would not hear your enemy say so,
Nor shall you do mine ear that violence, 171
To make it trustor of your own report
Against yourself: I know you are no truant.
But what is your affair in Elsinore?

We'll teach you to drink deep ere you depart.

Hor. My lord, I came to see your father's funeral.

Ham. I pray thee, do not mock me, fellow-student;

I think it was to see my mother's wedding.

Hor. Indeed, my lord, it follow'd hard upon.

Ham. Thrift, thrift, Horatio! the funeral baked meats 180

Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables.
Would I had met my dearest foe in heaven
Or ever I had seen that day, Horatio!

My father!—methinks I see my father.

Hor. Where, my lord?

Ham. In my mind's eye, Horatio.

Hor. I saw him once; he was a goodly king.

Ham. He was a man, take him for all in all,
I shall not look upon his like again.

Hor. My lord, I think I saw him yesternight.

Ham. Saw? who? 150

Hor. My lord, the king your father.

Ham. The king my father?

Hor. Season your admiration for a while
With an attent ear, till I may deliver,
Upon the witness of these gentlemen,
This marvel to you.

Ham. For God's love, let me hear.

Hor. Two nights together had these gentlemen,
Marcellus and Bernardo, on their watch,
In the dead vast and middle of the night,
Been thus encounter'd. A figure like your father,

Armed at point exactly, cap-a-pe, 200
Appears before them, and with solemn march
Goes slow and stately by them: thence he walk'd
By their oppress'd and fear-surprised eyes, Within his truncheon's length; whilst they,
distill'd

Almost to jelly with the act of fear,
Stand dumb and speak not to him. This to me
In dreadful secrecy impart they did;
And I with them the third night kept the watch:

Where, as they had deliver'd, both in time,
Form of the thing, each word made true and
good, 210

The apparition comes: I knew your father;
These hands are not more like.

Ham. But where was this?

Mar. My lord, upon the platform where we watch'd.

Ham. Did you not speak to it?

Hor. My lord, I did:
But answer made it none: yet once methought
It lifted up its head and did address
Itself to motion, like as it would speak;
But even then the morning cock crew loud,
And at the sound it shrunk in haste away,
And vanish'd from our sight.

Ham. 'Tis very strange. 220

Hor. As I do live, my honour'd lord, 'tis
true;
And we did think it writ down in our duty
To let you know of it.

Ham. Indeed, indeed, sirs, but this troubles
me.

Hold you the watch to-night?

Mar. We do, my lord.

Ham. Arm'd, say you?

Mar. Arm'd, my lord.

Ham. From top to toe?

Mar. My lord, from head to foot.

Ham. Then saw you not his face?

Hor. O, yes, my lord; he wore his beaver up.

Ham. What, look'd he frowningly? 231

Hor. A countenance more in sorrow than in anger.

Ham. Pale or red?

Hor. Nay, very pale.

Ham. And fix'd his eyes upon you?

Hor. Most constantly.

Ham. I would I had been there.

Hor. It would have much amazed you.

Ham. Very like, very like. Stay'd it long?

Hor. While one with moderate haste might tell a hundred.

Mar. Longer, longer.

Hor. Not when I saw't.

Ham. His beard was grizzled—no? 240

Hor. It was, as I have seen it in his life,
A sable silver'd.

Ham. I will watch to-night;
Perchance 'twill walk again.

Hor. I warrant it will.

Ham. If it assume my noble father's person,
I'll speak to it, though hell itself should gape
And bid me hold my peace. I pray you all,
If you have hitherto conceal'd this sight,
Let it be tenable in your silence still:
And whate'er else shall hap to-night,
Give it an understanding, but no tongue: 250
I will requite your loves. So, fare you well:
Upon the platform, 'twixt eleven and twelve,
I'll visit you.

All. Our duty to your honour.

Ham. Your loves, as mine to you: farewell.

[Exeunt all but Hamlet.]

My father's spirit in arms! all is not well;
I doubt some foul play: would the night were
come!
Till then sit still, my soul: foul deeds will rise, Though all the earth o'erwhelm them, to men's eyes. [Exit.]

SCENE III. A room in Polonius' house.

Enter LAERTES and OPHELIA.

Laer. My necessities are embark'd: fare-
well:

And, sister, as the winds give benefit
And convoy is assistant, do not sleep,
But let me hear from you.

Oph. Do you doubt that?

Laer. For Hamlet and the trifling of his favour,

Hold it a fashion and a toy in blood,
A violet in the youth of primy nature,
Forward, not permanent, sweet, not lasting,
The perfume and suppliance of a minute;
No more.

Oph. No more but so?

Laer. Think it no more: no
For nature, crescent, does not grow alone
In thews and bulk, but, as this temple waxes,
The inward service of the mind and soul
Grows wide withal. Perhaps he loves you now,
And now no soil nor cautel doth besmear
The virtue of his will: but you must fear,
His greatness weigh'd, his will is not his own;
For he himself is subject to his birth:
He may not, as unrivalled person do,
Carve for himself; for on his choice depends so
The safety and health of this whole state;
And therefore must his choice be circumstanced
Unto the voice and yielding of that body Whereof he is the head. Then if he says he loves you,
It fits your wisdom as far to believe it
As his in his particular act and place

HAMLET

[ACT I

May give his saying deed; which is no further
Than the main voice of Denmark goes withal.
Then weigh what loss your honour may sustain,
If with too credent ear you list his songs, 30
Or lose your heart, or your chaste treasure open
To his unmaster'd importunity.

Fear it, Ophelia, fear it, my dear sister,
And keep you in the rear of your affection,
Out of the shot and danger of desire.
The chariest maid is prodigal enough,
If she unmask her beauty to the moon:
Virtue itself escapes not calumnious strokes:
The canker galls the infants of the spring,
Too oft before their buttons be disclosed, 40
And in the morn and liquid dew of youth
Contagious blastments are most imminent.
Be wary then; best safety lies in fear:
Youth to itself rebels, though none else near.

Oph. I shall the effect of this good lesson
keep,
As watchman to my heart. But, good my
brother,

Do not, as some ungracious pastors do,
Show me the steep and thorny way to heaven;
Whilst, like a puff'd and reckless libertine,
Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads,
And recks not his own rede.

Laer. O, fear me not. 51
I stay too long; but here my father comes.

Enter POLONIUS.

A double blessing is a double grace;
Occasion smiles upon a second leave.

Pol. Yet here, Laertes! aboard, aboard, for shame!

The wind sits in the shoulder of your sail,
And you are stay'd for. There; my blessing
with thee!

And these few precepts in thy memory
See thou character. Give thy thoughts no
tongue,

Nor any unproportion'd thought his act. 60
Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar.
Those friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,

Grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel;
But do not dull thy palm with entertainment
Of each new-hatch'd, unfledged comrade. Beware

Of entrance to a quarrel, but being in,
Bear't that the opposed may beware of thee.
Give every man thy ear, but few thy voice;
Take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgement.

Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy, 70
But not express'd in fancy; rich, not gaudy;
For the apparel oft proclaims the man.
And they in France of the best rank and station
Are of a most select and generous chief in that.

Neither a borrower nor a lender be;
For loan oft loses both itself and friend,
And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry.
This above all: to thine own self be true,
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou shalt not then be false to any man. 80

Pol. Well: my blessing season this in thee!
Laer. Most humbly do I take my leave, my
lord.

Pol. The time invites you; go; your servants tend.

Laer. Farewell, Ophelia; and remember
well

What I have said to you.

Oph. 'Tis in my memory lock'd,
And you yourself shall keep the key of it.

Laer. Farewell. [Exit.]

Pol. What is't, Ophelia, he hath said to you?
Oph. So please you, something touching the Lord Hamlet.

Pol. Marry, well bethought: 90
'Tis told me, he hath very oft of late

Given private time to you; and you yourself
Have of your audience been most free and bounteous:

If it be so, as so 'tis put on me,
And that in way of caution, I must tell you,
You do not understand yourself so clearly
As it behoves my daughter and your honour.
What is between you? give me up the truth.

Oph. He hath, my lord, of late made many tenders

Of his affection to me. 100

Pol. Affection! pooh! you speak like a green
girl,

Unsuited in such perilous circumstance.
Do you believe his tenders, as you call them?

Oph. I do not know, my lord, what I should think.

Pol. Marry, I'll teach you: think yourself a baby;

That you have ta'en these tenders for true pay,
Which are not sterling. Tender yourself more dearly;

Or—not to crack the wind of the poor phrase,
Running it thus—you'll tender me a fool.

Oph. My lord, he hath importuned me with
love 110

In honourable fashion.

Pol. Ay, fashion you may call it; go to,
go to.

Oph. And hath given countenance to his speech, my lord,

With almost all the holy vows of heaven.

Pol. Ay, springes to catch woodcocks. I do
know,

When the blood burns, how prodigal the soul
Lends the tongue vows: these blazes, daughter,
Giving more light than heat, extinct in both,
Even in their promise, as it is a-making, 119
You must not take for fire. From this time
Be somewhat scancer of your maiden presence;

Set your entreatments at a higher rate
Than a command to parley. For Lord Hamlet,

Believe so much in him, that he is young,
And with a larger tether may he walk

Than may be given you: in few, Ophelia,
Do not believe his vows; for they are brokers,

Not of that dye which their investments show,
But mere implorators of unholy suits,

Breathing like sanctified and pious hawks, 130
The better to beguile. This is for all:

I would not, in plain terms, from this time forth,
Have you so slander any moment leisure,

As to give words or talk with the Lord Hamlet.
Look to't, I charge you: come your ways.

Oph. I shall obey, my lord.

SCENE IV. The platform.Enter HAMLET, HORATIO, and MARCELLUS.Ham. The air bites shrewdly; it is very cold.Hor. It is a nipping and an eager air.Ham. What hour now?Hor. I think it lacks of twelve.Mar. No, it is struck.Hor. Indeed? I heard it not: then it draws near the season

Wherein the spirit held his wont to walk.

[A flourish of trumpets, and ordnance shot off, within.]

What does this mean, my lord?

Ham. The king doth wake to-night and takes his rouse,

Keeps wassail, and the swaggering up-spring reels;

And, as he drains his draughts of Rhenish down,
The kettle-drum and trumpet thus bray out:
The triumph of his pledge.Hor. Is it a custom?Ham. Ay, marry, is't:But to my mind, though I am native here
And to the manner born, it is a custom
More honour'd in the breach than the observance.This heavy-headed revel east and west
Makes us traduced and tax'd of other nations:
They clepe us drunkards, and with swinish phraseSoil our addition; and indeed it takes From our achievements, though perform'd at the height,The pith and marrow of our attribute.
So, oft it chances in particular men,
That for some vicious mole of nature in them,
As, in their birth—wherein they are not guilty,
Since nature cannot choose his origin—By the o'ergrowth of some complexion,
Oft breaking down the pales and forts of reason,
Or by some habit that too much o'er-leavens
The form of plausive manners, that these men,Carrying, I say, the stamp of one defect,
Being nature's livery, or fortune's star,—
Their virtues else—be they as pure as grace,
As infinite as man may undergo—Shall in the general censure take corruption
From that particular fault: the dram of scale
Doth all the noble substance of a doubt
To his own scandal.Hor. Look, my lord, it comes!Enter Ghost.Ham. Angels and ministers of grace defend us!Be thou a spirit of health or goblin damn'd, Bring with thee airs from heaven or blasts from
hell,

Be thy intents wicked or charitable,

Thou comest in such a questionable shape

That I will speak to thee: I'll call thee Hamlet,

King, father, royal Dane: O, answer me!

Let me not burst in ignorance; but tell

Why thy canonized bones, hearsed in death,

Have burst their cerements; why the sepulchre,

Wherein we saw thee quietly inurn'd,

Hath oped his ponderous and marble jaws,
To cast thee up again. What may this mean,That thou, dead corpse, again in complete steel
Revisit'st thus the glimpses of the moon,Making night hideous; and we fools of nature
So horribly to shake our dispositionWith thoughts beyond the reaches of our souls?
Say, why is this? wherefore? what should we do?

[Ghost beckons Hamlet.]Hor. It beckons you to go away with it,

As if it some impartment did desire

To you alone.

Mar. Look, with what courteous action

It waves you to a more removed ground:

But do not go with it.

Hor. No, by no means.Ham. It will not speak; then I will follow

it.

Hor. Do not, my lord.Ham. Why, what should be the fear?

I do not set my life at a pin's fee;

And for my soul, what can it do to that,

Being a thing immortal as itself?

It waves me forth again: I'll follow it.

Hor. What if it tempt you toward the flood,

my lord,

Or to the dreadful summit of the cliff

That heetles o'er his base into the sea,

And there assume some other horrible form,

Which might deprive your sovereignty of reason

And draw you into madness? think of it:

The very place puts toys of desperation,

Without more motive, into every brain

That looks so many fathoms to the sea

And hears it roar beneath.

Ham. It waves me still.

Go on; I'll follow thee.

Mar. You shall not go, my lord.Ham. Hold off your hands.Hor. Be ruled; you shall not go.Ham. My fate cries out,

And makes each petty artery in this body

As hardy as the Nemean lion's nerve.

Still am I call'd. Unhand me, gentlemen.

By heaven, I'll make a ghost of him that lets

me!

I say, away! Go on; I'll follow thee.

[Exeunt Ghost and Hamlet.]Hor. He waxes desperate with imagination.Mar. Let's follow; 'tis not fit thus to obey

him.

Hor. Have after. To what issue will this

come?

Mar. Something is rotten in the state of

Denmark.

Hor. Heaven will direct it.Mar. Nay, let's follow him. *[Exeunt.]*SCENE V. Another part of the platform.Enter GHOST and HAMLET.Ham. Where wilt thou lead me? speak;

I'll go no further.

Ghost. Mark me.Ham. I will.Ghost. My hour is almost come,

When I to sulphurous and tormenting flames

Must render up myself.

Ham. Alas, poor
Ghost. Pity me not, but serious hearing

To what I shall unfold.

Ham. Speak; I am bound to hear.

Ghost. So art thou to revenge, when thou shalt hear.

Ham. What?

Ghost. I am thy father's spirit,
Down'd for a certain term to walk the night, 20
And for the day confined to fast in fires,
Till the foul crimes done in my days of nature
Are burnt and purged away. But that I am forbid

To tell the secrets of my prison-house,
I could a tale unfold whose lightest word
Would harrow up thy soul, freeze thy young
blood,

Make thy two eyes, like stars, start from their

Thy knotted and combined locks to part
And each particular hair to stand an end,
Like quills upon the fretful porpentine: 30
But this eternal blazon must not be
To ears of flesh and blood. List, list, O, list!
If thou didst ever thy dear father love—

Ham. O God!

Ghost. Revenge his foul and most unnatural murder.

Ham. Murder!

Ghost. Murder most foul, as in the best it is;
But this most foul, strange and unnatural.

Ham. Haste me to know't, that I, with wings as swift
As meditation or the thoughts of love, 30
May sweep to my revenge.

Ghost. I find thee apt;
And duller shouldst thou be than the fat weed
That roots itself in ease on Lethæan wharf, Wouldst thou not stir in this. Now, Hamlet,
hear:

'Tis given out that, sleeping in my orchard,
A serpent stung me; so the whole ear of
Denmark

Is by a forged process of my death
Rankly abused: but know, thou noble youth,
The serpent that did sting thy father's life
Now wears his crown.

Ham. O my prophetic soul! 40

Ghost. Ay, that incestuous, that adulterate beast,
With witchcraft of his wit, with traitorous
gifts—

O wicked wit and gifts, that have the power
So to seduce!—won to his shameful lust
The will of my most seeming-virtuous queen:
O Hamlet, what a falling-off was there!
From me, whose love was of that dignity
That it went hand in hand even with the vow
I made to her in marriage, and to decline 50
Upon a wretch whose natural gifts were poor
To those of mine!

But virtue, as it never will be moved,
Though lewdness court it in a shape of heaven,
So just, though to a radiant angel link'd,
Will pass me by in a celestial bed,
And prey on garbage.

But, soft! methinks I scent the morning air;
Brief let me be. Sleeping within my orchard,
My custom always of the afternoon, 60
Upon my secure hour thy uncle stole,

With juice of cursed hemlock in a vial,
And in the porches of my ears did pour
The leperous distillment; whose effect
Holds such an enmity with blood of man
That swift as quicksilver it courses through
The natural gates and alleys of the body,
And with a sudden vigour it doth posset
And curd, like eager droppings into milk,
The thin and wholesome blood: so did it 70
mine;

And a most instant tetter bark'd about,
Most Lazar-like, with vile and loathsome crust,
All my smooth body.

Thus was I, sleeping, by a brother's hand
Of life, of crown, of queen, at once dispatch'd:
Cut off even in the blossoms of my sin,
Unhous'd, disappointed, unanel'd,
No reckoning made, but sent to my account 80
With all my imperfections on my head:

O, horrible! O, horrible! most horrible!
If thou hast nature in thee, bear it not;
Let not the royal bed of Denmark be
A couch for luxury and damned incest.

But, howsoever thou pursuest this act,
Taint not thy mind, nor let thy soul contrive
Against thy mother aught: leave her to heaven
And to those thorns that in her bosom lodge,
To prick and sting her. Fare thee well at once!
The glow-worm shows the matin to be near,
And 'gins to pale his unfeetual fire: 90

Adieu, adieu! Hamlet, remember me. [Exit
Ham. O all you host of heaven! O earth!
what else!
And shall I couple hell! O, fie! Hold, hold,
my heart;

And you, my sinews, grow not instant old,
But bear me stiffly up. Remember thee!

Ay, thou poor ghost, while memory holds a
seat

In this distracted globe. Remember thee!

Yea, from the table of my memory
I'll wipe away all trivial fond records,
All saws of books, all forms, all pressures past
That youth and observation copied there: 100
And thy commandment all alone shall live
Within the book and volume of my brain,
Unmix'd with baser matter: yea, by heaven!
O most pernicious woman!

O villain, villain, smiling, damned villain!
My tables,—meet it is I set it down,
That one may smile, and smile, and be a
villain;

At least I'm sure it may be so in Denmark: 110

So, uncle, there you are. Now to my word;
It is 'Adieu, adieu! remember me.' 111
I have sworn't.

Mar. } [Within] My lord, my lord,—

Hor. } [Within] Lord Hamlet,—

Hor. } [Within] Heaven secure him!

Ham. So be it!

Hor. [Within] Hillo, ho, ho, my lord!

Ham. Hillo, ho, ho, boy! come, bird, come

Enter HORATIO and MARCELLUS.

Mar. How is't, my noble lord?

Hor. What news, my lord?

Ham. O, wonderful!

Hor. Good my lord, tell it.

Ham. No; you'll reveal it.

Hor. Not I, my lord, by heaven.

Mar. Nor I, my lord. 120

Ham. How say you, then; would heart of man once think it?

But you'll be secret?

Hor. } Ay, by heaven, my lord.

Ham. There's ne'er a villain dwelling in all Denmark

But he's an arrant knave.

Hor. There needs no ghost, my lord, come from the grave

To tell us this.

Ham. Why, right; you are i' the right; And so, without more circumstance at all, I hold it fit that we shake hands and part:

You, as your business and desire shall point you;

For every man has business and desire, 130

Such as it is; and for mine own poor part,

Look you, I'll go pray.

Hor. These are but wild and whirling words, my lord.

Ham. I'm sorry they offend you, heartily; Yes, faith, heartily.

Hor. There's no offence, my lord.

Ham. Yes, by Saint Patrick, but there is, Horatio,

And much offence too. Touching this vision here,

It is an honest ghost, that let me tell you:

For your desire to know what is between us, O'ermaster't as you may. And now, good friends,

As you are friends, scholars and soldiers, 140

Give me one poor request.

Hor. What is't, my lord? we will.

Ham. Never make known what you have seen to-night.

Hor. } My lord, we will not.

Mar. }

Ham. } Nay, but swear't.

Hor. } In faith,

My lord, not I.

Mar. } Nor I, my lord, in faith.

Ham. Upon my sword.

Mar. } We have sworn, my lord, already.

Ham. Indeed, upon my sword, indeed.

Ghost. [Beneath] Swear.

Ham. Ah, ha, boy! say'st thou so? art thou there, truepenny! 150

Come on—you hear this fellow in the cellarage—Consent to swear.

Hor. } Propose the oath, my lord.

Ham. } Never to speak of this that you have seen,

Swear by my sword.

Ghost. [Beneath] Swear.

Ham. } His et ubique! then we'll shift our ground.

Come hither, gentlemen,

And lay your hands again upon my sword:

Never to speak of this that you have heard, 160

Swear by my sword.

Ghost. [Beneath] Swear.

Ham. Well said, old mole! canst work i' the earth so fast?

A worthy pioneer! Once more remove, good friends.

Hor. O day and night, but this is wondrous strange!

Ham. And therefore as a stranger give it welcome.

There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio,

Than are dreamt of in your philosophy.

But come;

Here, as before, never, so help you mercy,

How strange or odd so'er I bear myself, 170

As I perchance hereafter shall think meet

To put an antic disposition on,

That you, at such times seeing me, never shall, With arms encumber'd thus, or this head-

shake,

Or by pronouncing of some doubtful phrase, As 'Well, well, we know,' or 'We could, an if we would,'

Or 'If we list to speak,' or 'There be, an if they might,'

Or such ambiguous giving out, to note

That you know ought of me: this not to do, So grace and mercy at your most need help you, 180

Swear.

Ghost. [Beneath] Swear.

Ham. Rest, rest, perturbed spirit! [They swear.] So, gentlemen,

With all my love I do commend me to you: And what so poor a man as Hamlet is

May do, to express his love and friending to you,

God willing, shall not lack. Let us go in together;

And still your fingers on your lips, I pray. The time is out of joint: O cursed spite,

That ever I was born to set it right! 190

Nay, come, let's go together. [Exeunt.]

ACT II

SCENE I. A room in Polonius' house.

Enter POLONIUS and REYNALDO.

Pol. Give him this money and these notes, Reynaldo.

Rey. I will, my lord.

Pol. You shall do marvellous wisely, good Reynaldo,

Before you visit him, to make inquire Of his behaviour.

Rey. My lord, I did intend it.

Pol. Marry, well said; very well said. Look you, sir,

Inquire me first what Danes are in Paris; And how, and who, what means, and where they keep,

What company, at what expense; and finding By this encampment and drift of question to

That they do know my son, come you more nearer

Than your particular demands will touch it :
Take you, as 'twere, some distant knowledge of
him ;

As thus, 'I know his father and his friends,
And in part him : ' do you mark this, Rey-naldo !

Rey. Ay, very well, my lord.

Pol. 'And in part him ; but ' you may say
'not well :

But, if't be he I mean, he's very wild ;
Addicted so and so : ' and there put on him
What forgeries you please ; marry, none so rank

As may dishonour him ; take heed of that ;
But, sir, such wanton, wild and usual slips
As are companions noted and most known
To youth and liberty.

Rey. As gaming, my lord.

Pol. Ay, or drinking, fencing, swearing, quarrelling,

Drabbing : you may go so far.

Rey. My lord, that would dishonour him.

Pol. 'Faith, no ; as you may season it in the charge.

You must not put another scandal on him,
That he is open to incontinency ;
That's not my meaning : but breathe his faults
so quaintly

That they may seem the taints of liberty,
The flash and outbreak of a fiery mind,
A savageness in unclaimed blood,
Of general assault.

But, my good lord,—

Wherefore should you do this ?

Rey. Ay, my lord,

I would know that.

Pol. Marry, sir, here's my drift ;

And, I believe, it is a fetch of wit :

You laying these slight sullies on my son,
As 'twere a thing a little soil'd i' the working,
Mark you,

Your party in converse, him you would sound,
Having ever seen in the prenominate crimes
The youth you breathe of guilty, be assured
He closes with you in this consequence ;
'Good sir, or so, or 'friend, or 'gentleman,'
According to the phrase or the addition
Of man and country.

Rey. Very good, my lord.

Pol. And then, sir, does he this—he does—what was I about to say ! By the mass, I was about to say something : where did I leave ?

Rey. At 'closes in the consequence,' at 'friend or so,' and 'gentleman.'

Pol. At 'closes in the consequence,' ay, marry ;

He closes thus : 'I know the gentleman ;
I saw him yesterday, or t' other day,
Or then, or then ; with such, or such ; and, as
you say,

There was a gaming ; there o'ertook in 's rouse ;
There falling out at tennis : ' or perchance,
'I saw him enter such a house of sale,'
Videlicet, a brothel, or so forth.

See you now ;

Your bait of falsehood takes this carp of truth :

And thus do we of wisdom and of reach,
With windlasses and with assays of bias,
By indirections find directions out :
So by my former lecture and advice,
Shall you my son. You have me, have you
not ?

Rey. My lord, I have.

Pol. God be wi' you ; fare you well.

Rey. Good my lord !

Pol. Observe his inclination in yourself.

Rey. I shall, my lord.

Pol. And let him ply his music.

Rey. Well, my lord.

Pol. Farewell ! [Exit Reynaldo.

Enter OPHELIA.

How now, Ophelia ! what's the matter ?

Oph. O, my lord, my lord, I have been so affrighted !

Pol. With what, i' the name of God ?

Oph. My lord, as I was sewing in my closet,
Lord Hamlet, with his doublet all unbraced ;
No hat upon his head ; his stockings foul'd,
Ungarter'd, and down-gyved to his ankle ; 80
Pale as his shirt ; his knees knocking each
other ;

And with a look so piteous in purport
As if he had been loosed out of hell
To speak of horrors,—he comes before me.

Pol. Mad for thy love ?

Oph. My lord, I do not know ;
But truly, I do fear it.

Pol. What said he ?

Oph. He took me by the wrist and held me hard ;

Then goes he to the length of all his arm ;
And, with his other hand thus o'er his brow,
He falls to such perusal of my face 90
As he would draw it. Long stay'd he so ;
At last, a little shaking of mine arm
And thrice his head thus waving up and down,
He raised a sigh so piteous and profound
As it did seem to shatter all his bulk
And end his being : that done, he lets me go :
And, with his head over his shoulder turn'd,
He seem'd to find his way without his eyes ;
For out o' doors he went without their help,
And, to the last, bended their light on me. 100

Pol. Come, go with me : I will go seek the
king.

This is the very ecstasy of love,
Whose violent property fordoes itself
And leads the will to desperate undertakings
As oft as any passion under heaven
That does afflict our natures. I am sorry.
What, have you given him any hard words of
late ?

Oph. No, my good lord, but, as you did
command,

I did repel his letters and denied
His access to me.

Pol. That hath made him mad. 110

I am sorry that with better heed and judgment

I had not quoted him : I fear'd he did but trifle,
And meant to wreck thee ; but, bearrew my jealousy !

By heaven, it is as proper to our age

To cast beyond ourselves in our opinions
As it is common for the younger sort
To lack discretion. Come, go we to the king :
This must be known ; which, being kept close,
might move
More grief to hide than hate to utter love.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. A room in the castle.

Enter KING, QUEEN, ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN, and Attendants.

King. Welcome, dear Rosencrantz and Guildenstern !

Moreover that we much did long to see you,
The need we have to use you did provoke
Our hasty sending. Something have you heard
Of Hamlet's transformation ; so call it,
Sith nor the exterior nor the inward man
Remembers that it was. What it should be,
More than his father's death, that thus hath put him
So much from the understanding of himself,
I cannot dream of : I entreat you both, 10
That, being of so young days brought up with
him,

And sith so neighbour'd to his youth and haviour,
That you vouchsafe your rest here in our court
Some little time : so by your companies
To draw him on to pleasures, and to gather,
So much as from occasion you may glean,
Whether aught, to us unknown, afflicts him
thus,

That, open'd, lies within our remedy.

Queen. Good gentlemen, he hath much talk'd of you ;
And sure I am two men there are not living 20
To whom he more adheres. If it will please
you

To show us so much gentry and good will
As to expend your time with us awhile,
For the supply and profit of our hope,
Your visitation shall receive such thanks
As fits a king's remembrance.

Ros. Both your majesties
Might, by the sovereign power you have of us,
Put your dread pleasures more into command
Than to entreaty.

Guil. But we both obey,
And here give up ourselves, in the full bent 30
To lay our service freely at your feet,
To be commanded.

King. Thanks, Rosencrantz and gentle Guildenstern.

Queen. Thanks, Guildenstern and gentle Rosencrantz :

And I beseech you instantly to visit
My too much changed son. (Go, some of you,
And bring these gentlemen where Hamlet is.)

Guil. Heavens make our presence and our practices

Pleasant and helpful to him !

Queen. Ay, amen !

[Exeunt Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, and some Attendants.]

Enter POLONIUS.

Pol. The ambassadors from Norway, my good lord,
Are joyfully return'd.

King. Thou still hast been the father of good news.

Pol. Have I, my lord ! I assure my good
liege,

I hold my duty, as I hold my soul,
Both to my God and to my gracious king :
And I do think, or else this brain of mine
Hunts not the trail of policy so sure
As it hath used to do, that I have found
The very cause of Hamlet's lunacy.

King. O, speak of that ; that do I long to hear.

Pol. Give first admittance to the ambassadors ;

My news shall be the fruit to that great feast.
King. Thyself do grace to them, and bring them in. [Exit Polonius.]

He tells me, my dear Gertrude, he hath found
The head and source of all your son's distemper.

Queen. I doubt it is no other but the main ;
His father's death, and our o'erhasty marriage.

King. Well, we shall sift him.

Re-enter POLONIUS, with VOLTIMAND and CORNELIUS.

Welcome, my good friends !
Say, Voltimand, what from our brother Norway ?
Volt. Most fair return of greetings and
desires. 60

Upon our first, he sent out to suppress
His nephew's levies ; which to him appear'd
To be a preparation 'gainst the Polack ;
But, better look'd into, he truly found
It was against your highness : whereat griev'd,
That so his sickness, age and impotence
Was falsely borne in hand, sends out arrests
On Fortinbras ; which he, in brief, obeys ;
Receives rebuke from Norway, and in fine
Makes vow before his uncle never more 70
To give the assay of arms against your majesty.
Whereon old Norway, overcome with joy,
Gives him three thousand crowns in annual fee,
And his commission to employ those soldiers,
So levied as before, against the Polack :
With an entreaty, herein further shown,

[Giving a paper.]
That it might please you to give quiet pass
Through your dominions for this enterprise,
On such regards of safety and allowance
As therein are set down.

King. It likes us well ; 80
And at our more consider'd time we'll read,
Answer, and think upon this business.
Meantime we thank you for your well-took
labour :

Go to your rest ; at night we'll feast together :
Most welcome home !

[Exeunt Voltimand and Cornelius.]
Pol. This business is well ended.
My liege, and madam, to expostulate
What majesty should be, what duty is,

Why day is day, night night, and time is

But to waste night, day and time.
since brevity is the soul of wit, 90
And tediousness the limbs and outward flourishes.

I will be brief: your noble son is mad:
Mad call I it; for, to define true madness,
What is't but to be nothing else but mad?
But let that go.

Queen. More matter, with less art.
Pol. Madam, I swear I use no art at all.
That he is mad, 'tis true: 'tis true 'tis pity;
And pity 'tis 'tis true: a foolish figure;
But farewell it, for I will use no art.
Mad let us grant him, then: and now remains
That we find out the cause of this effect, 101
Or rather say, the cause of this defect,
For this effect defective comes by cause:
Thus it remains, and the remainder thus.

Perpend,
I have a daughter—have while she is mine—
Who, in her duty and obedience, mark,
Hath given me this: now gather, and surmise.

[Reads.]
'To the celestial and my soul's idol, the most beautified Ophelia,'— 110
That's an ill phrase, a vile phrase; 'beautified' is a vile phrase: but you shall hear. Thus:

[Reads.]
'In her excellent white bosom, these, &c.'

Queen. Came this from Hamlet to her?
Pol. Good madam, stay awhile; I will be faithful. [Reads.]

'Doubt thou the stars are fire;
Doubt that the sun doth move;
Doubts truth to be a liar;
But never doubt I love. 119

'O dear Ophelia, I am ill at these numbers: I have not art to reckon my groans: but that I love thee best, O most best, believe it. Adieu.

'Thine evermore, most dear lady, whilst this machine is to him, HAMLET.'
This, in obedience, hath my daughter shown
me,

And more above, hath his solicitings,
As they fell out by time, by means and place,
All given to mine ear.

Queen. But how hath she Received his love?

Pol. What do you think of me?

King. As of a man faithful and honourable.

Pol. I would fain prove so. But what might you think, 121

When I had seen this hot love on the wing—
As I perceived it, I must tell you that,
Before my daughter told me—what might you,
Or my dear majesty your queen here, think,
If I had play'd the desk or table-book,
Or given my heart a winking, mute and dumb,
Or look'd upon this love with idle sight;
What might you think? No, I went round to work,

And my young mistress thus I did bespeak:
'Lord Hamlet is a prince, out of thy star: 123
This must not be:' and then I precepts gave
her,
That she should lock herself from his resort,

Admit no messengers, receive no tokens.
Which done, she took the fruits of my advice;
And he, repulsed—a short tale to make—
Fell into a sadness, then into a fast,
Thence to a watch, thence into a weakness,
Thence to a lightness, and, by this declension,
Into the madness wherein now he raves, 19
And all we mourn for.

King. Do you think 'tis this?

Queen. It may be, very likely.

Pol. Hath there been such a time—I'd fain know that—

That I have positively said 'Tis so,'
When it proved otherwise?

King. Not that I know,

Pol. [Pointing to his head and shoulder] Not that I know,

Take this from this, if this be otherwise:

If circumstances lead me, I will find

Where truth is hid, though it were hid indeed

Within the centre.

King. How may we try it further?

Pol. You know, sometimes he walks four hours together 126

Here in the lobby.

Queen. So he does indeed.

Pol. At such a time I'll loose my daughter
to him:

Be you and I behind an arras then;

Mark the encounter: if he love her not

And be not from his reason fall'n thereon,

Let me be no assistant for a state,

But keep a farm and carters.

King. We will try it.

Queen. But, look, where sadly the poor wretch comes reading.

Pol. Away, I do beseech you, both away:

I'll board him presently.

[Exit King, Queen, and Attendants.]

Enter HAMLET, reading.

O, give me leave: 130

How does my good Lord Hamlet?

Ham. Well, God-a-mercy.

Pol. Do you know me, my lord?

Ham. Excellent well; you are a fishmonger.

Pol. Not I, my lord.

Ham. Then I would you were so honest a
man.

Pol. Honest, my lord!

Ham. Ay, sir; to be honest, as this world goes, is to be one man picked out of ten thousand.

Pol. That's very true, my lord. 136

Ham. For if the sun breed maggots in a dead dog, being a god kissing carrion,—Have you a daughter?

Pol. I have, my lord.

Ham. Let her not walk i' the sun: conception is a blessing: but not as your daughter may conceive. Friend, look to't.

Pol. [Aside] How say you by that? Still harping on my daughter; yet he knew me not at first; he said I was a fishmonger; he is far gone, far gone: and truly in my youth I suffered much extremity for love; very near this. I'll speak to him again. What do you read, my lord?

Ham. Words, words, words.

Pol. What is the matter, my lord?

Ham. Between who?

Pol. I mean, the matter that you read, my lord.

Ham. Slanders, sir: for the satirical rogue says here that old men have grey beards, that their faces are wrinkled, their eyes purging thick amber and plum-tree gum and that they have a plentiful lack of wit, together with most weak hams: all which, sir, though I most powerfully and potentially believe, yet I hold it not honesty to have it thus set down, for yourself, sir, should be old as I am, if like a crab you could go backward.

Pol. [Aside] Though this be madness, yet there is method in 't. Will you walk out of the air, my lord?

Ham. Into my grave.

Pol. Indeed, that is out o' the air. [Aside] How pregnant sometimes his replies are! a happiness that often madness hits on, which reason and sanity could not so prosperously be delivered of. I will leave him, and suddenly contrive the means of meeting between him and my daughter.—My honourable lord, I will most humbly take my leave of you.

Ham. You cannot, sir, take from me any thing that I will more willingly part withal: except my life, except my life, except my life.

Pol. Fare you well, my lord.

Ham. These tedious old fools!

Enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Pol. You go to seek the Lord Hamlet: there he is.

Ros. [To Polonius] God save you, sir!

[Exit Polonius.]

Guil. My honoured lord!

Ros. My most dear lord!

Ham. My excellent good friends! How dost thou, Guildenstern? Ah, Rosencrantz! Good lads, how do ye both?

Ros. As the indifferent children of the earth.

Guil. Happy, in that we are not over-happy; On fortune's cap we are not the very button.

Ham. Nor the sales of her shoe?

Ros. Neither, my lord.

Ham. Then you live about her waist, or in the middle of her favours?

Guil. Faith, her privates we.

Ham. In the secret parts of fortune? O, most true; she is a strumpet. What 's the news?

Ros. None, my lord, but that the world's grown honest.

Ham. Then is doomsday near: but your news is not true. Let me question more in particular: what have you, my good friends, deserved at the hands of fortune, that she sends you to prison hither?

Guil. Prison, my lord!

Ham. Denmark 's a prison.

Ros. Then is the world one.

Ham. A goodly one; in which there are many confines, wards and dungeons, Denmark being one o' the worst.

Ros. We think not so, my lord.

Ham. Why, then, 's none to you; for there is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so: to me it is a prison.

Ros. Why then, your ambition makes it one: 'tis too narrow for your mind.

Ham. O God, I could be bounded in a nutshell and count myself a king of infinite space, were it not that I have bad dreams.

Guil. Which dreams indeed are ambition, for the very substance of the ambitious is merely the shadow of a dream.

Ham. A dream itself is but a shadow.

Ros. Truly, and I hold ambition of no airy and light a quality that it is but a shadow's shadow.

Ham. Then are our beggars bodies, and our monarchs and outstretched heroes the beggars' shadows. Shall we to the court? for, by my fay, I cannot reason.

Ros. We'll wait upon you.

Guil. No such matter: I will not sort you with the rest of my servants, for, to speak to you like an honest man, I am most dreadfully attended. But, in the beaten way of friendship, what make you at Elsinore?

Ros. To visit you, my lord; no other occasion.

Ham. Beggar that I am, I am even poor in thanks; but I thank you; and sure, dear friends, my thanks are too dear a halfpenny. Were you not sent for? Is it your own inclining? Is it a free visitation? Come, deal justly with me: come, come; nay, speak.

Guil. What should we say, my lord?

Ham. Why, any thing, but to the purpose. You were sent for; and there is a kind of confession in your looks which your modesties have not craft enough to colour: I know the good king and queen have sent for you.

Ros. To what end, my lord?

Ham. That you must teach me. But let me conjure you, by the rights of our fellowship, by the consonancy of our youth, by the obligation of our ever-preserved love, and by what more dear a better proposer could charge you without, be even and direct with me, whether you were sent for, or no!

Ros. [Aside to Guil.] What say you? no.

Ham. [Aside] Nay, then, I have an eye of you.—If you love me, hold not off.

Guil. My lord, we were sent for.

Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the king and queen mock no farther. I have of late—but wherefore I know not—lost all my mirth, forgone all custom of exercise; and indeed it goes so heavily with my disposition that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory, this most excellent canopy, the air, look you, this brave o'ershooting firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fire, why, it appears no other thing to me than a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is a man! how noble in reason! how infinite in faculties! in form and moving how like an angel! in action how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! And yet to me, what is this quintessence of dust? man delights not me; no, nor woman neither, though by your smiling you seem to say so.

Ros. My lord, there was no such stuff in my thoughts.

Ham. Why did you laugh then, when I said 'man delights not me'?

Ros. To think, my lord, if you delight not in man, what lenten entertainment the players shall receive from you: we coted them on the way; and hither are they coming, to offer you service.

Ham. He that plays the king shall be welcome; his majesty shall have tribute of me; the adventurous knight shall use his foil and target; the lover shall not sigh gratis; the humorous man shall end his part in peace; the clown shall make those laugh whose lungs are tickle o' the sere; and the lady shall say her mind freely, or the blank verse shall halt for't. What players are they? 340

Ros. Even those you were wont to take delight in, the tragedians of the city.

Ham. How chances it they travel? their residence, both in reputation and profit, was better both ways.

Ros. I think their inhibition comes by the means of the late innovation.

Ham. Do they hold the same estimation they did when I was in the city? are they so followed? 350

Ros. No, indeed, are they not.

Ham. How comes it? do they grow rusty?

Ros. Nay, their endeavour keeps in the wonted pace: but there is, sir, an airy of children, little eyases, that cry out on the top of question, and are most tyrannically clapped for't: these are now the fashion, and so berattle the common stages—so they call them—that many wearing rapiers are afraid of goose-quills and dare scarce come thither. 360

Ham. What are they children? who maintains 'em? how are they escoted? Will they pursue the quality no longer than they can sing? will they not say afterwards, if they should grow themselves to common players—as it is most like, if their means are no better—their writers do them wrong, to make them exclaim against their own succession?

Ros. Faith, there has been much to do on both sides; and the nation holds it no sin to tarre them to controversy: there was, for a while, no money bid for argument, unless the poet and the player went to cuffs in the question.

Ham. Is't possible?

Guil. O, there has been much throwing about of brains.

Ham. Do the boys carry it away?

Ros. Ay, that they do, my lord; Hercules and his load too. 370

Ham. It is not very strange; for mine uncle is king of Denmark; and those that would make mows at him while my father lived, give twenty, forty, fifty, an hundred ducats a-piece for his picture in little. 'Sblood, there is something in this more than natural, if philosophy could find it out. [Flourish of trumpets within.]

Guil. There are the players.

Ham. Gentlemen, you are welcome to Elsinore. Your hands, come then: the apartment of welcome is fashion and ceremony: let me comply with you in this garb, lest my extent to the players, which, I tell you, must show fairly outward, should more appear like entertainment than yours. You are welcome: but my uncle-father and aunt-mother are deceived.

Guil. In what, my dear lord?

Ham. I am but mad north-north-west: when the wind is southerly I know a hawk from a handsaw.

Re-enter POLONIUS.

Pol. Well be with you, gentlemen

Ham. Hark you, Guildenstern; and you too: at each ear a hearer: that great baby you see there is not yet out of his swaddling-clouts.

Ros. Happily he's the second time come to them; for they say an old man is twice a child.

Ham. I will prophesy he comes to tell me of the players; mark it. You say right, sir: 'Monday morning;' 'twas so indeed.

Pol. My lord, I have news to tell you.

Ham. My lord, I have news to tell you. When Boecius was an actor in Rome,— 410

Pol. The actors are come hither, my lord.

Ham. Buz, buz!

Pol. Upon mine honour,—

Ham. Then came each actor on his ass,—

Pol. The best actors in the world, either for tragedy, comedy, history, pastoral, pastoral-comical, historical-pastoral, tragical-historical, tragical-comical-historical-pastoral, scene indivisible, or poem unlimited: Seneca cannot be too heavy, nor Plautus too light. For the law of writ and the liberty, these are the only men. 421

Ham. O Jephthah, judge of Israel, what a treasure hadst thou!

Pol. What a treasure had he, my lord?

Ham. Why,

'One fair daughter, and no more,
The which he loved passing well.'

Pol. [Aside] Still on my daughter.

Ham. Am I not i' the right, old Jephthah?

Pol. If you call me Jephthah, my lord, I have a daughter that I love passing well. 431

Ham. Nay, that follows not.

Pol. What follows, then, my lord?

Ham. Why,

'As by lot, God wot,'

and then, you know,

'It came to pass, as most like it was,— the first row of the pious chanson will show you more; for look, where my abridgement comes. 439

Enter four or five Players.

You are welcome, masters; welcome, all. I am glad to see thee well. Welcome, good friends. O, my old friend! thy face is valanced since I saw thee last: comest thou to hear me in Denmark? What, my young lady and mistress! By'r lady, your ladyship is nearer to heaven than when I saw you last, by the altitude of a chopine. Pray God, your voice, like a piece of uncurrent gold, be not cracked within the ring.

Masters, you are all welcome. We'll e'en to't like French falconers, fly at any thing we see:
we'll have a speech straight: come, give us a taste of your quality; come, a passionate speech.

First Play. What speech, my lord?

Ham. I heard thee speak me a speech once, but it was never acted; or, if it was, not above once; for the play, I remember, pleased not the million; 'twas caviare to the general; but it was —as I received it, and others, whose judgements in such matters cried in the top of mine—an excellent play, well digested in the scenes, set down with as much modesty as cunning. I remember, one said there were noallets in the lines to make the matter savoury, nor no matter in the phrase that might indict the author of affectation; but called it an honest method, as wholesome as sweet, and by very much more handsome than fine. One speech in it I chiefly loved: 'twas Aeneas' tale to Dido; and there-about of it especially, where he speaks of Priam's slaughter: if it live in your memory, begin at this line: let me see, let me see— 471

'The rugged Pyrrhus, like the Hyrcanian
beast,—

it is not so:—it begins with Pyrrhus:—

'The rugged Pyrrhus, he whose sable arms,
Black as his purpose, did the night resemble
When he lay couched in the ominous horse,
Hath now this dread and black complexion
smear'd

With heraldry more dismal; head to foot

Now is he total gules; horribly trick'd

With blood of fathers, mothers, daughters,

sons, 480

Baked and impasted with the parching streets,

That lend a tyrannous and damned light

To their lord's murder: roasted in wrath and

fire,

And thus o'er-sized with coagulate gore,

With eyes like carbuncles, the hellish Pyrrhus

Old grandsire Priam seeks.'

So, proceed you.

Pol. 'Fore God, my lord, well spoken, with good accent and good discretion.

First Play. 'Anon he finds him

Striking too short at Greeks; his antique

sword, 49

Rebellious to his arm, lies where it falls,

Repugnant to command: unequal match'd,

Pyrrhus at Priam drives; in rage strikes wide;

But with the whiff and wind of his fell sword

The unnerv'd father falls. Then senseless lump,

Seeming to feel this blow, with flaming top

Stoops to his base, and with a hideous crash

Takes prisoner Pyrrhus' ear: for, lo! his

sword,

Which was declining on the milky head 500

Of reverend Priam, seem'd i' the air to stick:

So, as a painted tyrant, Pyrrhus stood,

And like a neutral to his will and matter,

Did nothing.

But, as we often see, against some storm,

A silence in the heavens, the rack stand still,

The bold winds speechless and the orb below

As hush as death, anon the dreadful thunder

Breaks from the vaulted sky, even so, 510

And never did the Cyclops' hammers fall

On Mars' armour forged for proof eternal

With less remorse than Pyrrhus' bleeding

sword

Now falls on Priam.

Out, out, thou strumpet, Fortune! All you

gods,

In general synod, take away her power;

Break all the spokes and felloes from her

wheel,

And bow the round nave down the hill of

heaven,

As low as to the fiends!'

Pol. This is too long. 520

Ham. It shall to the barber's, with your beard. Prithee, say on: he's for a jig or a tale of bawdry, or he sleeps: say on: come to Hecuba.

First Play. 'But who, O, who had seen the mobled queen—'

Ham. 'The mobled queen'

Pol. That's good; 'mobled queen' is good.

First Play. 'Run barefoot up and down,

threatening the flames

With bisson rheum; a clout upon that head

Where late the diadem stood, and for a robe,

About her lank and all o'er-teemed joints, 531

A blanket, in the alarm of fear caught up;

Who this had seen, with tongue in venom

'steep'd,

'Gainst Fortune's state would treason have pronounced;

But if the gods themselves did see her then

When she saw Pyrrhus make malicious sport

In mincing with his sword her husband's

limbs,

The instant burst of clamour that she made,

Unless things mortal move them not at all,

Would have made milch the burning eyes

of heaven, 540

And passion in the gods.'

Pol. Look, whether he has not turned his colour and has tears in's eyes. Pray you, no

more.

Ham. 'Tis well; I'll have thee speak out the rest soon. Good my lord, will you see the players well bestowed? Do you hear, let them be well used; for they are the abstract and brief chronicles of the time: after your death

you were better have a bad epitaph than their ill report while you live. 551

Pol. My lord, I will use them according to their desert.

Ham. God's bodykins, man, much better:

use every man after his desert, and who should

'scape whipping? Use them after your own honour and dignity: the less they deserve, the more merit is in your bounty. Take them in.

Pol. Come, sir. 559

Ham. Follow him, friends: we'll hear a play to-morrow. [Exit Polonius with all the Players but the First.] Dost thou hear me, old friend; can you play the Murder of Gon-sago?

First Play. Ay, my lord.

Ham. We'll ha't to-morrow night. You could, for a need, study a speech of some dozen or sixteen lines, which I would set down and insert in't, could you not?

First Player. Ay, my lord. 560

Ham. Very well. Follow that lord; and look you mock him not. [Exit First Player.] My good friends, I'll leave you till night: you are welcome to Kishore.

Ros. Good my lord!

Ham. Ay, so, God be wi' ye; [Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.] Now I am alone.

O, what a rogue and peasant slave am I! Is it not monstrous that this player here, But in a fiction, in a dream of passion, Could force his soul so to his own conceit That from her working all his visage wann'd, Tears in his eyes, distraction in 's aspect, 581 A broken voice, and his whole function suiting With forms to his conceit? and all for nothing! For Hecuba!

What's Hecuba to him, or he to Hecuba, That he should weep for her? What would he do, Had he the motive and the cue for passion That I have? He would drown the stage with tears

And cleave the general ear with horrid speech, Make mad the guilty and appal the free, 590 Confound the ignorant, and amaze indeed The very faculties of eyes and ears.

Yet I,

A dull and muddy-mettled rascal, peak, Like John-a-dreams, unpregnant of my cause, And can say nothing; no, not for a king, Upon whose property and most dear life A damn'd defeat was made. Am I a coward? Who calls me villain? breaks my pate across? Plucks off my beard, and blows it in my face? Tweaks me by the nose? gives me the lie i' the throat, 601

As deep as to the lungs? who does me this? Ha!

'Swounds, I should take it: for it cannot be But I am pigeon-liver'd and lack gall To make oppression bitter, or ere this I should have fatted all the region kites With this slave's offal: bloody, bawdy villain! 610 Restorless, treacherous, lecherous, kindless villain!

O, vengeance!

Why, what an ass am I! This is most brave, That I, the son of a dear father murder'd, Prompted to my revenge by heaven and hell, Must, like a whore, unpack my heart with words, 620 And fall a-cursing, like a very drab, A scullion!

He upon't! foh! About my brain! I have

That guil / creatures sitting at a play Have by a very cunning of the scene 630 Brought / so to the soul that presently They proclaim'd their malefactions; For / though it have no tongue, will

With most miscrepious organ. I'll have these players

Play something like the murder of my father: Before mine uncle: I'll observe his looks; I'll tent him to the quick: if he but blench, I know my course. The spirit that I have seen May be the devil: and the devil hath power To assume a pleasing shape; yea, and perhaps Out of my weakness and my melancholy, 630 As he is very potent with such spirits' Abuses me to damn me: I'll have More relative than this: the play's the thing, Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the king. [Exit.]

ACT III

SCENE I. A room in the

Enter KING, QUEEN, POLONIUS, OPHELIA, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN

King. And can you, by no drift of circumstance, 640 Get from him why he puts on this confusion, (Grating so harshly all his days of quiet With turbulent and dangerous lenacy?

Ros. He does confess he feels himself distracted: But from what cause he will by no means speak. 650 Guil. Nor do we find him forward to be sounded,

But, with a crafty madness, keeps aloof, When we would bring him on to some confession Of his true state.

Queen. Did he receive you well? 10 Ros. Most like a gentleman.

Guil. But with much forcing of his disposition.

Ros. Niggard of question; but, of our demands, Most free in his reply.

Queen. Did you assay him To any pastime?

Ros. Madam, it so fell out, that certain players We o'er-raught on the way: of these we told him: 660

And there did seem in him a kind of joy To hear of it: they are about the court, And, as I think, they have already order 670 This night to play before him.

Pol. 'Tis most true: And he beseech'd me to entreat your majesties To hear and see the matter.

King. With all my heart; and it doth much content me

To hear him so inclined. Good gentlemen, give him a further edge, And drive his purpose on to these delights.

Ros. We shall, my lord.

[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.]

King. Sweet Gertrude, leave us too; For we have closely sent for Hamlet hither, That he, as 'twere by accident, may here 680 Affront Ophelia:

Her father and myself, lawful espials, Will so bestow ourselves that, seeing, unseen, We may of their encounter frankly judge, And gather by him, as he is behav'd, 690 If 't be the affliction of his love or no

That thus he suffers for.
Queen. I shall obey you.
 And for your part, Ophelia, I do wish
 That your good beauties be the happy cause Of Hamlet's wiliness: so shall I hope your virtues
 Will bring him to his wonted way again,
 To both your honours.
Oph. Madam, I wish it may. [Exit Queen.]
Pol. Ophelia, walk you here. Gracious, so
 please you,
 We will bestow ourselves. [To Ophelia] Read
 on this book;
 That show of such an exercise may colour
 Your loneliness. We are oft to blame in this,— 'Tis too much proved—that with devotion's visage
 And pious
 The devil himself.
King. [Aside] O, 'tis too true!
 How smart a lash that speech doth give my conscience!
 The harlot's cheek, beautied with plastering art,
 Is not more ugly to the thing that helps it
 Than is my deed to my most painted word:
 O heavy burthen!

Pol. I hear him coming: let's withdraw, my
 lord.
 [Exit King and Polonius.]

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. To be, or not to be: that is the question:
 Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer
 The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune,
 Or to take arms against a sea of troubles,
 And by opposing end them? To die: to sleep;
 No more; and by a sleep to say we end
 The heart-ache and the thousand natural shocks
 That flesh is heir to, 'tis a consummation
 Devoutly to be wish'd. To die, to sleep;
 To sleep: perchance to dream: ay, there's the rub;
 For in that sleep of death what dreams may come
 When we have shuffled off this mortal coil,
 Must give us pause: there's the respect
 That makes calamity of so long life;
 For who would bear the whips and scorns of
 time,
 The oppressor's wrong, the proud man's con-
 tumely,
 The pangs of despised love, the law's delay,
 The insolence of office and the spurns
 That patient merit of the unworthy takes,
 When he himself might his quietus make
 With a bare bodkin? who would fardels bear,
 To grunt and sweat under a weary life,
 But that the dread of something after death,
 The undiscover'd country from whose bourn
 No traveller returns, puzzles the will
 And makes us rather bear those ills we have Than fly to others that we know not of?
 Thus conscience does make cowards of us all;
 And thus the native hue of resolution
 Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought,
 And enterprises of great pitch and moment
 With this regard their currents turn awry,
 And lose the name of action.—Soft you now!
 The fair Ophelia! Nymph, in thy orisons

Be all my sins remember'd.
Oph. Good my lord, so
 How does your honour for this many a day?
Ham. A humbly thank you; well, well.
Oph. My lord, I have rememb'red
 yours.
 That I have longed long to re-deliver;
 I pray you, now receive them.
Ham. No, not I;
 I never gave you aught.
Oph. My honour'd lord, you know right well you did;
 And, with them, words of so sweet breath composed
 As made the things more rich: their perfume
 lost.
 Take these again; for to the noble mind
 Rich gifts wax poor when givers prove unkind.
 There, my lord.
Ham. Ha, ha! are you honest?
Oph. My lord!
Ham. Are you fair?
Oph. What means your lordship?
Ham. That if you be honest and fair, your honesty should admit no discourse to your beauty.
Oph. Could beauty, my lord, have better commerce than with honesty?
Ham. Ay, truly; for the power of beauty will sooner transform honesty from what it is to a bawd than the force of honesty can translate beauty into his likeness: this was sometime a paradox, but now the time gives it proof. I did love you once.
Oph. Indeed, my lord, you made me believe so.
Ham. You should not have believed me;
 for virtue cannot so inoculate our old stock
 but we shall relish of it: I loved you not.
Oph. I was the more deceived.
Ham. Get thee to a nunnery: why wouldst thou be a breeder of sinners? I am myself indifferent honest; but yet I could accuse me of such things that are better my mother had not borne me: I am very proud, revengeful, ambitious, with more offences at my beck than I have thoughts to put them in, imagination to give them shape, or time to act them in. What should such fellows as I do crawling between earth and heaven? We are arrant knaves, all; believe none of us. Go thy ways to a nunnery. Where's your father?
Oph. At home, my lord.
Ham. Let the doors be shut upon him, that he may play the fool no where but in his own house. Farewell.
Oph. O, help him, you sweet heavens!
Ham. If thou dost marry, I'll give thee this plague for thy dowry: be thou as chaste as ice,
 as pure as snow, thou shalt not escape calumny.
 Get thee to a nunnery, go: farewell. Or, if thou wilt needs marry, marry a fool; for wise men know well enough what monsters you make of them. To a nunnery, go, and quickly too. Farewell.
Oph. O heavenly powers, restore him!
Ham. I have heard of your paintings too, well enough; God has given you one face, and you make yourselves another: you see you amble, and you lisp, and nick-nazne God's creatures, and make your wantonness your ignorance. Go to, I'll no more on't; it hath made me mad. I say, we will have no more marriages: those that are married already, all but one, shall live; the rest shall keep as they are. To a nunnery, go. [Exit.]

Opk. O, what a noble mind is here o'er-thrown!

The courtier's, soldier's, scholar's, eye, tongue, sword;

The expectancy and rose of the fair state, x60

The glass of fashion and the mould of form,

The observed of all observers, quite, quite down!

And I, of ladies most deject and wretched,

That suck'd the honey of his music vows,

Now see that noble and most sovereign reason,

Like sweet bells jangled, out of tune and harsh;

That unmatch'd form and feature of blown youth

Blasted with ecstasy: O, woe is me,

To have seen what I have seen, see what I see!

Re-enter KING and POLONIUS.

King. Love! his affections do not that way tend;

Nor what he sape, though it lack'd form a little, x70

Was not like madness. There's something in his soul,

O'er which his melancholy sits on brood;

And I do doubt the hatch and the disclose

Will be some danger: which for to prevent,

I have in quick determination

Thus set it down: he shall with speed to

England,

For the demand of our neglected tribute:

Haply the seas and countries different x80

With variable objects shall expel

This something-settled matter in his heart,

Whereon his brains still beating puts him thus

From fashion of himself. What think you on't?

Pol. It shall do well: but yet do I believe

The origin and commencement of his grief

Spring from neglected love. How now,

Ophebia!

You need not tell us what Lord Hamlet said;

We heard it all. My lord, do as you please;

But, if you hold it fit, after the play

Let his queen mother all alone entreat him x90

To show his grief: let her be round with him;

And I'll be placed, so please you, in the ear

Of all their conference. If she find him not,

To England send him, or confine him where

Your wisdom best shall think.

King. It shall be so:

Madness in great ones must not unwatch'd go. [Exit.]

SCENE II. A hall in the castle.

Enter HAMLET and Players.

Ham. Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounced it to you, trippingly on the tongue: but if you mouth it, as many of your players do, I had as lief the town-crier spoke my lines.

Nor do not saw the air too much with your hand, thus, but use all gently: for in the very torrent, tempest, and, as I may say, the whirlwind of passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance that may give it smoothness. O, it offends me to the soul to hear a robustious periwig-pated fellow tear a passion to tatters, to very rags, to split the ears of the groundlings, who for the most part are capable of nothing but inexplicable dumb-shows and noise: I would have such a fellow whipped for o'er-doing Termagant; it out-herods Herod: pray you, avoid it.

First Play. I warrant your honour.

Ham. Be not too tame neither, but let your own discretion be your tutor: suit the action to the word, the word to the action; with this special observance, that you o'erstep not the modesty of nature: for any thing so overdone is from the purpose of playing, whose end, both at the first and now, was and is, to hold, as 'twere, the mirror up to nature; to show virtue her own feature, scorn her own image, and the very age and body of the time his form and pressure. Now this overdone, or come tardy off, though it make the unskilful laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve; the censure of the which one must in your allowance o'erweigh a whole theatre of others. O, there be players that I have seen play, and heard others praise, and that highly, not to speak it profanely, that, neither having the accent of Christians nor the gait of Christian, pagan, nor man, have so strutted and bellowed that I have thought some of nature's journeymen had made men and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably.

First Play. I hope we have reformed that indifferently with us, sir. x1

Ham. O, reform it altogether. And let those that play your clowns speak no more than is set down for them; for there be of them that will themselves laugh, to set on some quantity of barren spectators to laugh too; though, in the mean time, some necessary question of the play be then to be considered: that's villainous, and shows a most pitiful ambition in the fool that uses it. Go, make you ready.

[Exit Players.]

Enter POLONIUS, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

How now, my lord! will the king hear this piece of work?

Pol. And the queen too, and that presently.

Ham. Bid the players make haste. [Exit]

Polonius. Will you two help to hasten them?

Ros. } We will, my lord.

Guil. }

[Exit Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.]

Ham. What ho! Horatio!

Enter HORATIO.

Hor. Here, sweet lord, at your service.

Ham. Horatio, thou art e'en as just a man

As e'er my conversation coped withal. x60

Hor. O, my dear lord,—

Ham. Nay, do not think I flatter.

... ..ld the poor
be flatter'd!

No, let the candied tongue lick absurd pomp,
And crook the pregnant hinges of the knee
Where thrift may follow fawning. Dost thou
hear?

Since my dear soul was mistress of her choice
And could of men distinguish, her election
Hath seal'd thee for herself; for thou hast been
As one, in suffering all, that suffers nothing,
A man that fortune's buffets and rewards
Hast ta'en with equal thanks: and blest are those Whose blood and judgement are so well com-mingled,

That they are not a pipe for fortune's finger
To sound what stop she please. Give me that
man

That is not passion's slave, and I will wear him
In my heart's core, ay, in my heart of heart,
As I do thee.—Something too much of this—
There is a play to-night before the king;

So
One scene of it comes near the circumstance
Which I have told thee of my father's death
I prithee, when thou seest that act afoot,
Even with the very comment of thy soul
Observe mine uncle: if his occulted guilt
Do not itself unkennel in one speech,
It is a damned ghost that we have seen,
And my imaginations are as foul
As Vulcan's stithy. Give him heedful note
For I mine eyes will rivet to his face,
And after we will both our judgements join
In censure of his seeming.

Hor. Well, my lord;
If he steal aught the whilst this play is playing,
And 'scape detecting, I will pay the theft.

Ham. They are coming to the play; I must be idle:

Get you a place.

Danish march. *A flourish. Enter KING,
QUEEN, POLONIUS, OPHELIA, ROSEN-CRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN, and others.*

King. How fares our cousin Hamlet?

Ham. Excellent, i' faith; of the chameleon's dish: I eat the air, promise-crammed you cannot feed capons so.

King. I have nothing with this answer,
Hamlet; these words are not mine.

Ham. No, nor mine now. [To Polonius]
My lord, you played once i' the university, you
say?

Pol. That did I, my lord; and was accounted a good actor.

Ham. What did you enact?

Pol. I did enact Julius Cæsar: I was killed
i' the Capitol; Brutus killed me.

Ham. It was a brute part of him to kill so capital a calf there. Be the players ready?

Pol. Ay, my lord; they stay upon your patience.

Queen. Come hither, my dear Hamlet, sit
by me.

Ham. No, good mother, here's metal more attractive.

Pol. [To the King] O, ho! do you mark
that!

Ham. Lady, shall I lie in your lap?

[Lying down at Ophelia's feet.]

Oph. No, my lord.

Ham. I mean, my head upon your lap!

Oph. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Do you think I meant country matters?

Oph. I think nothing, my lord.

Ham. That's a fair thought to lie between maids' legs.

Oph. What is, my lord?

Ham. Nothing.

Oph. You are merry, my lord.

Ham. Who, I?

Oph. Ay, my lord.

Ham. O God, your only jig-maker. What should a man do but be merry? for, look you, how cheerfully my mother looks, and my father died within these two hours.

Oph. Nay, 'tis twice two months, my lord.

Ham. So long? Nay then, let the devil wear black, for I'll have a suit of sables. O heavens! die two months ago, and not forgotten yet? Then there's hope a great man's memory may outlive his life half a year: but, by'r lady, he must build churches, then; or else shall he suffer not thinking on, with the hobby-horse, whose epitaph is 'For, O, for, O, the hobby-horse is forgot.'

Hautboys play. The dumb-show enters.

Enter a King and a Queen very lovingly; the Queen embracing him, and he her. She kneels, and makes show of protestation unto him. He takes her up, and declines his head upon her neck: lays him down upon a bank of flowers: she, seeing him asleep, leaves him. A clown comes in a fellow, takes off his crown, kisses it, and pours poison in the King's ears, and exit. The Queen returns; finds the King dead, and makes passionate action. The Poisoner, with some two or three Mutes, comes in again, seeming to lament with her. The dead body is carried away. The Poisoner wooes the Queen with gifts: she seems loath and unwilling awhile, but in the end accepts his love. [Exeunt.]

Oph. What means this, my lord?

Ham. Marry, this is mitching mallecho; it means mischief.

Oph. Belike this show imports the argument of the play.

Enter Prologue.

Ham. We shall know by this fellow: the players cannot keep counsel; they'll tell all.

Oph. Will he tell us what this show meant?

Ham. Ay, or any show that you'll show him: be not you ashamed to show, he'll not shame to tell you what it means.

Oph. You are naught, you are naught: I'll mark the play.

Pro. For us, and for our tragedy,
Here stooping to your clemency,

We beg your hearing patiently. [Exit.]

Ham. Is this a prologue, or the pory of a ring?

Oph. 'Tis brief, my lord.

Ham. As woman's love.

Enter two Players, King and Queen.

P. King. Full thirty times hath Phoebus' cart gone round Neptune's salt wash and Tellus' orbed ground, And thirty dozen moons with borrow'd sheen About the world have times twelve thirties been, Since love our hearts and Hymen did our hands

Unite commutual in most sacred bands. 170

P. Queen. So many journeys may the sun and moon

Make us again count o'er ere love be done!

But, woe is me, you are so sick of late, So far from cheer and from your former state, That I distrust you. Yet, though I distrust, Discomfort you, my lord, it nothing must: For women's fear and love holds quantity; In neither ought, or in extremity;

Now, what my love is, proof hath made you know;

And as my love is sized, my fear is so: 180 Where love is great, the littlest doubts are fear;

Where little fears grow great, great love grows there.

P. King. Faith, I must leave thee, love, and shortly too;

My operant powers their functions leave to do: And thou shalt live in this fair world behind, Honour'd, beloved; and haply one as kind For husband shalt thou—

P. Queen. O, confound the rest! Such love must needs be treason in my breast: In second husband let me be accurst! 185 None wed the second but who kill'd the first.

Ham. [Aside] Wormwood, wormwood.

P. Queen. The instances that second marriage move

Are base respects of thrift, but none of love: A second time I kill my husband dead,

When second husband kisses me in bed.

P. King. I do believe you think what now you speak;

But what we do determine oft we break. Purpose is but the slave to memory,

Of violent birth, but poor validity: Which now, like fruit unripe, sticks on the tree; 200

But fall, unshaken, when they mellow be. Most necessary 'tis that we forget

To pay ourselves what to ourselves is debt:

What to ourselves in passion we propose,

The passion ending, doth the purpose lose.

The violence of either grief or joy

Their own enactors with themselves destroy:

Where joy most revels, grief doth most lament;

Grief joys, joy grieves, on slender accident.

This world is not for aye, nor 'tis not strange

That even our loves should with our fortunes

For this a question left us yet to prove,

Whether love lead fortune, or else fortune love.

The great man down, you mark his favourite flies;

The poor advanced makes friends of enemies.

And hitherto doth love on fortune tend;

For who not needs shall never lack a friend,

And who in want a hollow friend doth try,

Directly seasons him his enemy!

But, orderly to end where I began, 220

Our wills and fates do so contrary run

That our devices still are overthrow'n;

Our thoughts are ours, their ends none of our own:

So think thou wilt no second husband wed;

But die thy thoughts when thy first lord is dead.

P. Queen. Nor earth to me give food, nor heaven light!

Sport and repose lock from me day and night!

To desperation turn my trust and hope!

An anchor's cheer in prison be my scope!

Each opposite that blanks the face of joy 230

Meet what I would have well and it destroy!

Both here and hence pursue me lasting strife,

If, once a widow, ever I be wife!

Ham. If she should break it now!

P. King. 'Tis deeply sworn. Sweet, leave me here awhile;

My spirits grow dull, and fain I would beguile

The tedious day with sleep. [Sleeps.]

P. Queen. Sleep rock thy brain;

And never come mischance between us twain! [Exit.]

Ham. Madam, how like you this play?

Queen. The lady doth protest too much, methinks. 240

Ham. O, but she'll keep her word.

King. Have you heard the argument? Is there no offence in't?

Ham. No, no, they do but jest, poison in jest; no offence in't the world.

King. What do you call the play?

Ham. The Mouse-trap. Marry, how? Tropically. This play is the image of a murder done in Vienna: Gonzago is the duke's name;

his wife, Baptista: you shall see anon; 'tis a knavish piece of work; but what o' that? your majesty and we that have free souls, it touches us not: let the galled jade wince, our withers are unwrung.

Enter LUCIANUS.

This is one Lucianus, nephew to the king.

Oph. You are as good as a chorus, my lord.

Ham. I could interpret between you and your love, if I could see the puppets dallying.

Oph. You are keen, my lord, you are keen.

Ham. It would cost you a groaning to take off my edge.

Oph. Still better, and worse.

Ham. So you must take your husbands. Begin, murderer; pox, leave thy damnable faces, and begin. Come: 'the croaking raven doth bellow for revenge.'

Luc. Thoughts Black, hands apt, drugs fit, and time agreeing;

Confederate season, else no creature seeing;
Those mixture rank, of midnight woods collected.

With Hecate's ban thrice blasted, thrice infected,

Thy natural magic and dice property, 270
On wholesome life usurp immediately.

[Pours the poison into the sleeper's ears.]

Ham. He poisons him i' the garden for's estate. His name's Gonzago; the story is extant, and writ in choice Italian: you shall see anon how the murderer gets the love of Gonzago's wife.

Oph. The king rises.

Ham. What, frighted with false fire!

Queen. How fares my lord?

Pol. Give o'er the play.

King. Give me some light: away! 280

All. Lights, lights, lights!

[Exeunt all but Hamlet and Horatio.]

Ham. Why, let the stricken deer go weep,
The hart ungalled play;

For some must watch, while some must sleep;

So runs the world away.

Would not this, sir, and a forest of feathers—if the rest of my fortunes turn Turk with me—with two Provincial roses on my razed shoes, get me a fellowship in a cry of players, sir?

Hor. Hail a share. 29

Ham. A whole one, I.

For thou dost know, O Damon dear,

This realm dismantled was

Of Jove himself; and now reigns here

A very, very—pajock.

Hor. You might have rhymed.

Ham. O good Horatio, I'll take the ghost's word for a thousand pound. Didst perceive?

Hor. Very well, my lord.

Ham. Upon the talk of the poisoning! 300

Hor. I did very well note him.

Ham. Ah, ha! Come, some music! come, the recorders!

For if the king like not the comedy,

Why then, belike, he likes it not, perdy.

Come, some music!

Re-enter ROSENCRANZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Guil. Good my lord, vouchsafe me a word with you.

Ham. Sir, a whole history.

Guil. The king, sir,— 310

Ham. Ay, sir, what of him?

Guil. Is in his retirement marvellous discontented.

Ham. With drink, sir?

Guil. No, my lord, rather with choler.

Ham. Your wisdom should show itself more richer to signify this to his doctor; for, for me to put him to his purgation would perhaps plunge him into far more choler. 319

Guil. Good my lord, put your discourse into some frame and start not so wildly from my affair.

Ham. I am tame, sir: pronounce.

Guil. The queen, your mother, in most great affliction of spirit, hath sent me to you.

Ham. You are welcome.

Guil. Nay, good my lord, this courtesy is not of the right breed. If it shall please you to make me a wholesome answer, I will do your mother's commandment: if not, your pardon and my return shall be the end of my business.

Ham. Sir, I cannot. 331

Guil. What, my lord?

Ham. Make you a wholesome answer; my wit's diseased; but, sir, such answer as I can make, you shall command; or, rather, as you say, my mother: therefore no more, but to the matter: my mother, you say,—

Ros. Then thus she says; your behaviour hath struck her into amazement and admiration. 339

Ham. O wonderful son, that can so astonish a mother! But is there no sequel at the heels of this mother's admiration? Impart.

Ros. She desires to speak with you in her closet, ere you go to bed.

Ham. We shall obey, were she ten times our mother. Have you any farther trade with us?

Ros. My lord, you once did love me.

Ham. So I do still, by these pickers and stealers. 349

Ros. Good my lord, what is your cause of distemper? you do, surely, bar the door upon your own liberty, if you deny your griefs to your friend.

Ham. Sir, I lack advancement.

Ros. How can that be, when you have the voice of the king himself for your succession in Denmark?

Ham. Ay, sir, but 'While the grass grows,'—the proverb is something ranky. 359

Re-enter Players with recorders.

O, the recorders! let me see one. To withdraw with you:—why do you go about to recover the wind of me, as if you would drive me into a toll?

Guil. O, my lord, if my duty be too bold, my love is too unmannerly.

Ham. I do not well understand that. Will you play upon this pipe?

Guil. My lord, I cannot.

Ham. I pray you.

Guil. Believe me, I cannot. 370

Ham. I do beseech you.

Guil. I know no touch of it, my lord.

Ham. 'Tis as easy as lying: govern these ventages with your fingers and thumb, give it breath with your mouth, and it will discourse most eloquent music. Look you, these are the stops.

Guil. But these cannot I commend to my utterance of harmony; I have not the skill.

Ham. Why, look you now, how unworthy a thing you make of me! You would play upon me; you would seem to know my stops; you would pluck out the heart of my mystery; you would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass; and there is much music, excellent voice, in this little organ; yet cannot you make it speak. 'Blood, do you think I am easier to be played on than a pipe? Call me what instrument you will, though you can fret me, yet you cannot play upon me.

Enter POLONIUS.

God bless you, sir!

Pol. My lord, the queen would speak with you, and presently.

Ham. Do you see yonder cloud that's almost in shape of a camel?

Pol. By the mass, and 'tis like a camel, indeed.

Ham. Methinks it is like a weasel.

Pol. It is backed like a weasel.

Ham. Or like a whale?

Pol. Very like a whale.

Ham. Then I will come to my mother by and by. They fool me to the top of my bent. I will come by and by.

Pol. I will say so.

Ham. By and by is easily said. [Exit Polonius.] Leave me, friends.

[Excunt all but Hamlet.]

'Tis now the very witching time of night,
When churchyards yawn and hell itself breathes out

Contagion to this world: now could I drink hot blood,

And do such bitter business as the day
Would quake to look on. Soft! now to my mother

O heart, lose not thy nature: let not ever
The soul of Nero enter this firm bosom:

Let me be cruel, not unnatural:

I will speak daggers to her, but use none;

My tongue and soul in this be hypocrites;

How in my words sheever she be shent,

To give them seals never, my soul, consent!

[Exit.]

SCENE III. A room in the castle.

Enter KING, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

King. I like him not, nor stands it safe
with us

To let his madness range. Therefore prepare
you;

I your commission will forthwith dispatch,
And he to England shall along with you:

The terms of our estate may not endure

Hazard so near us as doth hourly grow

Out of his lunacies.

Guild. We will ourselves provide:

Most holy and religious fear it is

To keep those many many bodies safe

That live and feed upon your majesty.

Ros. The single and peculiar life is bound,

With all the strength and armour of the mind,

To keep itself from noyance; but much more

That spirit upon whose weal depend and rest

The lives of many. The cease of majesty

Dies not alone; but, like a gulf, doth draw

What's near it with it: it is a massy wheel,

Fixed on the summit of the highest mount,

Whose huge spokes ten thousand lesser

Things

Are mortised and adjoin'd; which, when it

falls,

Each small apartment, petty consequence,

Attends the boisterous ruin. Never alone
Did the king sigh, but with a general groan.

King. Arm you, I pray you, to this speedy voyage;

For we will fetters put upon this fear,

Which now goes too free-footed.

Ros.

Guild.

We will haste us.

[Excunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.]

Enter POLONIUS.

Pol. My lord, he's going to his mother's closet:

Behind the arras I'll convey myself
To hear the process: I'll warrant she'll tax him home:

And, as you said, and wisely was it said,
'Tis meet that some more audience than a
mother,

Since nature makes them partial, should o'er-
hear

The speech, of vantage. Fare you well, my
liege:

I'll call upon you ere you go to bed,
And tell you what I know:

King. Thanks, dear my lord.

[Exit Polonius.]

O, my offence is rank, it smells to heaven;
It hath the primal eldest curse upon 't,

A brother's murder. Pray can I not;

Though inclination be as sharp as will:

My stronger guilt defeats my strong intent;

And, like a man to double business bound,

I stand in pause where I shall first begin,

And both neglect. What if this cursed hand

Were thicker than itself with brother's blood,

Is there not rain enough in the sweet heavens

To wash it white as snow? Whereto serves

mercy

But to confront the visage of offence?

And what's in prayer but this two-fold force,

To be forestalled ere we come to fall,

Or pardon'd being down? Then I'll look up;

My fault is past. But, O, what form of prayer

Can serve my turn? Forgive me my foul murder!

That cannot be: since I am still possess'd

(Of those effects for which I did the murder,

My crown, mine own ambition and my queen.

May one be pardon'd and retain the offence?

In the corrupted currents of this world

(Offence's gilded hand may shove by justice,

And oft 'tis seen the wicked prize itself

Buy out the law: but 'tis not so above;

There is no shuffling, there the action lies

In his true nature; and we ourselves compell'd,

Even to the teeth and forehead of our faults,

To give in evidence. What then? what rests?

Try what repentance can: what can it not?

Yet what can it when one can not repent?

O wretched state! O bosom black as death!

O limed soul, that, struggling to be free,

Art more engaged! Help, angels! Make assay!

Bow, stubborn knees; and, heart with strings of steel,

Be soft as sinews of the new-born babe!

All may be well.

[Retires and kneels.]

SCENE III]

HAMLET

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. Now might I do it pat, now he is

And now I'll do it. And so he goes to heaven;
And so am I revenged. That would be scann'd:
A villain kills my father; and for that,
I, his sole son, do this same villain send
To heaven.

O, this is hire and salary, not revenge.
He took my father grossly, full of bread; 80
With all his crimes broad blown, as flush as
May;

And how his audit stands who knows save
heaven!

But in our circumstance and course of thought,
Tis heavy with him: and am I then revenged,
To take him in the purging of his soul,
When he is fit and season'd for his passage?
No!

Up, sword; and know thou a more horrid hent:
When he is drunk asleep, or in his rage,
Or in the incestuous pleasure of his bed; 90
At gaming, swearing, or about some act
That has no relish of salvation in't;
Then trip him, that his heels may kick at
heaven,

And that his soul may be as damn'd and black
As hell, whereto it goes. My mother stays:
This physic but prolongs thy sickly days. Exit.

King. [Rising] My words fly up, my thoughts remain below:

Words without thoughts never to heaven go.
[Exit.]

SCENE IV. The Queen's closet.

Enter QUEEN and POLONIUS.

Pol. He will come straight. Look you lay home to him:

Tell him his pranks have been too broad to bear with,

And that your grace hath screen'd and stood between

Much heat and him. I'll sounce me even here.
Pray you, be round with him.

Ham. [Within] Mother, mother, mother!

Queen. I'll warrant you,
Fear me not; withdraw, I hear him coming.

[Polonius hides behind the arras.]

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. Now, mother, what's the matter?

Queen. Hamlet, thou hast thy father much offended.

Ham. Mother, you have my father much
offended.

Queen. Come, come, you answer with an idle tongue.

Ham. Go, go, you question with a wicked
tongue.

Queen. Why, how now, Hamlet!

Ham. What's the matter now?

Queen. Have you forgot me?

Ham. No, by the rood, not so:
You are the queen, your husband's brother's
wife;

And—would it were not so!—you are my
mother.

Queen. Nay, then, I'll set those to you that can speak.

Ham. Come, come, and sit you down; you shall not budge;

You go not till I set you up a glass
Where you may see the inmost part of you. 20

Queen. What wilt thou do? thou wilt not murder me!

Help, help, ho!

Pol. [Behind] What, ho! help, help, help!

Ham. [Drawing] How now! a rat! Dead, for a ducat, dead!

[Makes a pass through the arras.]
Pol. [Behind] O, I am slain!

Queen. O me, what hast thou done?
Ham. Nay, I know not:

Is it the king?

Queen. O, what a rash and bloody deed is
this!

Ham. A bloody deed! almost as bad, good
mother,

As kill a king, and marry with his brother.
Queen. As kill a king!

Ham. Ay, lady, 'twas my word. 30
[Lifts up the arras and discovers Polonius.]

Thou wretched, rash, intruding fool, farewell!
I took thee for thy better: take thy fortune;

Thou find'st to be too busy is some danger.
Leave wringing of your hands: peace! sit you
down,

And let me wring your heart; for so I shall,
If it be made of penetrable stuff.

If damned custom have not brass'd it so
That it be proof and bulwark against sense.

Queen. What have I done, that thou dar'st wag thy tongue

In noise so rude against me?
Ham. Such an act 40

That blurs the grace and blush of modesty,
Calls virtue hypocrite, takes off the rose

From the fair forehead of an innocent love
And sets a blister there, makes marriage-vows

As false as dicers' oaths: O, such a deed
As from the body of contraction plucks

The very soul, and sweet religion makes
A rhapsody of words: heaven's face doth glow;

Yea, this solidity and compound mass,
With tristful visage, as against the doom, 50

Is thought-sick at the act.
Queen. Ay me, what act,

That roars so loud, and thunders in the index?

Ham. Look here, upon this picture, and on
this,

The counterfeit presentment of two brothers.
See, what a grace was seated on this brow:

Hyperion's curls; the front of Jove himself;
An eye like Mars, to threaten and command;

A station like the herald Mercury
New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill;

A combination and a form indeed,
Where every god did seem to set his seal,

To give the world assurance of a man:
This was your husband. Look you now, what follows:

Here is your husband; like a mildew'd ear,

Blasting his wholesome brother. Have you eyes?

Could you on this fair mountain leave to feed,
And batten on this moor? Ha! have you eyes?
You cannot call it love; for at your age
The hey-day in the blood is tame, it's humble,
And waits upon the judgement: and what judgement?

Would step from this to this? Sense, sure, you have,

Else could you not have motion; but sure, that sense

Is appext'd; for madness would not err,
Nor sense to ecstasy was ne'er so thrall'd
But is reserved some quantity of choice,
To serve in such a difference. What devil was't

That thus hath cozen'd you at hoodman-blind?
Eyes without feeling, feeling without sight,
Ears without hands or eyes, smelling sans all,
Or but a sickly part of one true sense

Could not so mope.
O shame! where is thy blush? Rebellious hell,
If thou canst mutine in a matron's bones,
To flaming youth let virtue be as wax,
And melt in her own fire: proclaim no shame
When the compulsive ardour gives the charge,
Since frost itself as actively doth burn
And reason pandars will.

Queen. O Hamlet, speak no more:
Thou turn'st mine eyes into my very soul;
And there I see such black and grained spots
As will not leave their tinct.

Ham. Nay, but to live
In the rank sweat of an enseamed bed,
Stew'd in corruption, honeying and making
love

Over the nasty sty,—
Queen. O, speak to me no more;
These words, like daggers, enter in mine ears;
No more, sweet Hamlet!

Ham. A murderer and a villain;
A slave that is not twentieth part the tithe
Of your precedent lord; a vice of kings;
A cutpurse of the empire and the rule,
That from a shelf the precious diadem stole,
And put it in his pocket!

Queen. No more!
Ham. A king of shreds and patches,—

Enter Ghost.

Save me, and hover o'er me with your wings,
You heavenly guards! What would your gracious figure?

Queen. Alas, he's mad!
Ham. Do you not come your tardy son to chide,

That, lap'd in time and passion, lets go by
The important acting of your dread command?
O, say!

Ghost. Do not forget: this visitation
Is but to what thy almost blunted purpose.
But, look, amazement on thy mother sits:
O, step between her and her fighting soul:
Concent in weakest bodies strongest works:
Speak to her, Hamlet.

Ham. How is it with you, lady?
Queen. Alas, how is't with you,

That you do bend your eye on vacancy
And with the incorporal air do hold discourse?
Forth at your eyes your spirits wildly peep;
And, as the sleeping soldiers in the alarm,
